three ells long. When he draws his sword from its sheath, he does not put it back empty; he strikes down everything he encounters, and each person among the people carries his lance in his hand. The wood of it is one and a half spans thick, and some are two spans thick; with these they lift a man out of the saddle and throw him behind them. And when the Jews come across, they kill a thousand times a thousand of the white Moors, as well as of the people of Preste Jan; no one can withstand them, and the Jews have bows and arrows and are mightily strong; they are gilded, and the side on which one draws is a sinew of oxen; the arrows, however, are of a common wood, and at the front of the wood is an iron arrowhead with three edges, four fingers wide, and smeared with deadly poison; whoever merely touches the arrow must die. And when one of the young men of the Jews challenges a strong man of Preste Jan's people to fight with him, that man gives him as much gold as he weighs, so that he will leave him in peace. When the Jews are on this side, they plunder and rob from their enemies everything they can seize, and lay waste land and people until tribute is paid to them, and they wage war with their enemies for several months until they have subdued everything, and then they cross back over the Sambatjon in peace; on the road, however, King Rabbi Eliezer commands the other twenty-three kings, who also wage strong war with them; and there is yet another king under him, who is called the pious Daniel, who is a great man like a giant and strikes down a thousand men at a stroke, and is very gentle, and dwells in the city of Dam Efróach in Armonia. Their chambers are built entirely of precious stones and pearls, and no foreign person may enter those chambers. It is also the custom that when that king goes to the synagogue, his queen walks with him at his side. The pious King Daniel also has four sons, who are powerful, strong young men, and two daughters who have no equal in beauty; and the women are very chaste; they look at no foreign man, nor can any man see them, for they wear hoods of pure silk, which they draw over their faces and tie at the bottom of the neck, but over the face they are transparent so that they can see through them. The men and women can also practice all manner of crafts to sustain themselves, and they have all manner of pearls and precious stones, gold and silver beyond reckoning. Nothing is lacking to them in their land except iron for fighting, but it is brought from Turkey. Furthermore, they told me how the pious King Daniel has a precious stone in his castle called a carbuncle, which illuminates the entire house like the sun; and when the Sabbath begins, one takes out that carbuncle and places it in the castle, where it shines day and night, so that one observes the commandment of Exod 35:3 (which reads): "You shall kindle no fire in any of your dwellings"; and also in honor of the Sabbath. During the week one wraps the stone in a silken cloth and locks it away until the Sabbath. In the year 390 according to the small reckoning (that is, in the year 1630 A.D.), the children wanted to go to war with the king, and the king was angry about this because they were still young; but when they saw how their companions were armed with coats of mail and armor, they also put them on without the king's knowledge, and rode very swiftly on their horses across the Sambatjon, and found a thousand men of their enemies and slew them, and returned home safely; whereupon the king was greatly pleased that they had shown such strength in their youth. They also told me that in the land where the Jews dwell, beautiful, large, thick wheat grows, and the earth is completely black like coal and very fertile. They also take care not to defile themselves; and if they do defile themselves, and one is rich, he throws the garment away; but if he is poor, he washes it many times. In that same year the king of India also sent a gift to King Rabbi Eliezer and sent three great princes from his land with it; they rode across the Sambatjon and came to the king and appeased him with good words and with gifts, as is the custom, and made peace between the Jews and the kingdom of India, which are nonetheless to be distinguished from one another (for the Jews are holy and the Indians are unholy, which is why the word להבדיל lehavdil is used here, of which an account was given above in the fifteenth chapter of the first part); and the embassy returned home safely and came back to the city of Sevilia, which lies two days' journey from the river Sambatjon. While I was in that same city, an embassy came from King Preste Jan, which wished to make peace, and it brought him (King Eliezer) a great gift; and I saw the gift, which was a man without a head, whose mouth and eyes were on his chest, and he ate nothing but fish; his language, however, was a kind of Greek. Furthermore, the gift consisted of forty perforated, large, pure pearls, some of which were cone-shaped, some long, and as large as a joint; and the box in which the pearls lay was large, and high, and as wide as a span, made of fine crystal. With it was a costly precious stone called a sapphire, which lay in a small box cut from coral; it was three fingers wide and three fingers high. There the ambassador was told that he should not bring the man across the Sambatjon, or he would be killed. Why? Because he speaks the Greek language, he must be from idolatrous people! But there is an entire land of such people by the great sea, and they are subject to King Preste Jan. They also told me how in the year 388 according to the small reckoning (that is, in the year 1628 A.D.), eight Jews had come out of those lands and crossed the Sambatjon, and the king of the Jews had asked them how they had been able to cross through the wildernesses and through the peoples without desecrating the Sabbath. They answered: it did not happen by our own will; we were held captive among the peoples, and we fled to you so that we might be redeemed, for we have heard that you are Jews, and you will fulfill toward us the words of Deut 23:15 (which read): "You shall not deliver a servant to his master." Then the king asked them whether they could learn anything (and whether they had studied), and they said yes. Then a book was brought to them, and they read before the king, whereupon the king believed that they were Jews and gave them great gifts, and they took wives there. They also told me how in the city of Dam Efróach in Armonia a synagogue is built of precious stones and pearls, which the entire realm of Christendom and the Turks together could not pay for. These are the words of Rabbi Gerson in his booklet Gelilóth érez Jisrael.

That these same things consist of crude, palpable untruths and shameless lies is as clear as the sun from what follows. For, first, he writes that for one hundredweight of iron brought across the Sambátjon, one hundredweight of gold is given in return; that would indeed have to be very expensive iron. If this were true, the Dutch and other nations sailing to the East Indies would long since have discovered it, brought enough iron there, and sought to draw such great profit to themselves, and would not have left it to the Turks alone; and if they, as Christians, had not been permitted to cross the Sambátjon, they would have engaged other people for the purpose who would have done it in their name. Moreover, nothing has ever appeared in the histories or news reports indicating that the Turks carry on such a highly profitable trade with the inhabitants of the aforementioned river, whereas, if it were true, it could not have remained secret so long, since at all times many Christians travel to Turkey, and would surely have learned of it and made it known.

Secondly, he reports that when King Eliezer rides out, he has one hundred and fifty thousand armed horsemen with him to accompany him. But what purpose would such an exceedingly great multitude of people serve? It has indeed been noted above at p. 541 in this chapter, from the little book of the Danite Eldad, that there is no wicked person, nor any danger whatsoever, in that land; therefore a king has nothing to fear there and has no need of such a multitude of people about him. But if he were to have them with him in order to display his great state and splendor, it would be far too many, for as long as the world has stood, no king has done such a thing, and so this too must be a crude fabrication.

Thirdly, he reports that when the aforementioned King Eliezer goes to war, he takes with him one hundred and eighty thousand horsemen and an innumerable multitude of foot soldiers, and because the river Sambatyon is calm and completely still for two hours before the Sabbath, so that one can cross over it, he therefore crosses quickly in those two hours, so as to be on the other side before the Sabbath and not to desecrate it; and when he is across it, he halts and observes the Sabbath, but only after it does he attack his enemies. However, since the river, according to his account, is seventeen parsaoth or miles wide, each of which, as has already been noted above, contains 4,000 large paces, it is simply impossible that one could cross it in so short a time on horseback, much less on foot; and thus this too is a fat lie.

Fourthly, he claims that the horses there are fed with finely chopped and cooked mutton, and given wine to drink, whereupon they become so spirited that they kick and bite; and when people wish to mount them, they bind their feet together and cover their eyes, but fasten their mouths with iron chains. He also claims that the riders' feet are locked onto the horse with a lock, so that they do not fall off when riding at full gallop. But where in the entire world has it ever been heard that horses are fed in such a manner, and that they are supposed to eat meat? And where would all the sheep in that country come from, just to feed the horses with them? Who has ever heard that one must make such a great fuss with horses when one wishes to mount them, and that one must bind their feet together and fasten their mouths shut with iron chains fixed firmly in place? Or that people on horseback must lock their feet in, so as not to fall off during a gallop? These are nothing but sheer foolish fantasies. In our own lands there are also spirited horses, yet one has no need of such strange practices with them. It is likewise an absurd matter that the king should mount his horse by means of a golden ladder of seven rungs, as though one could not get onto a horse without a ladder. Furthermore, it is a foolish claim that the horses can stand for three days together with the men and everything upon them, and that the riders, who carry their provisions with them, remain seated the entire time and do not dismount. But how can it be possible for a person to remain seated so long? Even if he did not grow weary from sitting, which cannot be the case, he would nonetheless, to put it decorously, necessarily have to dismount in order to relieve himself.

Fifthly, he writes that King Eliezer is such a hero that he alone drives off eight hundred men, and that King Daniel strikes down a thousand, and that no one can stand against those Jews. But if this were true, why don't they come out and drive the Turks from the Promised Land and resettle themselves there? The tribes, which, as mentioned above, sent the Reubenite Rabbi David to Pope Clement the Seventh and to the King of Portugal, so that he might petition them for help against their enemies in order to reconquer the land of Canaan, would surely not have needed such an embassy, but could instead have sought help from the Jews who dwell beyond the Sambatjon, since those are such mighty heroes that no one can stand against them, as has already been noted above in connection with the description of the Jewish heroes found in the book of Eldad. But since this did not happen, it is entirely certain that everything which Rabbi Gerson puts forward here is pure fabrication.

Sixthly, he writes that when the Jews cross over the Sambatjon, they kill a thousand times a thousand of the white Moors. But if they always killed so many whenever they crossed over, where would so many white Moors come from? They don't grow up like turnips or heads of cabbage in a field. Therefore this too is a false claim.

Seventhly, he reports that when a young man among the Jews challenges a strong man from the troops of King Prester John to combat, that man is so frightened that he simply leaves him in peace and is glad to preserve his life. If this were true, Jewish young men would constantly be challenging people to combat in order to obtain so much gold. But where would those who were challenged find so much gold that they could give it to those who challenged them? Gold is nowhere so common among subjects that they could give it away in such quantities, and therefore this too is a shameless untruth.

Eighthly, he reports that King Daniel has in his castle a carbuncle stone which, on the Sabbath, shines like the sun throughout the entire house day and night, and serves in place of light, because kindling fire on the Sabbath is forbidden. Now, even if it were true that such a stone gives off so bright a radiance (which no stone can do), it could still only illuminate the room in which it is placed, just as in the 163rd chapter of the Maase-buch, fol. 55, col. 1, one reads of a carbuncle that it illuminated the room in which Rabbi Channina slept. But how should it also be able to illuminate the other rooms? This, therefore, is likewise no small fabrication. Finally, ninthly, he claims that he had traveled as far as Sevilla, which is a border town of the white Moors and lies only two days' journey from the river Sabbatjon, and that he had been unable to reach it on account of the danger posed by King Preste Jan's guards, who keep watch over the Jews. But since he had, by his own account, undertaken so long and arduous a journey, and since he reports that King Preste Jan had at that time dispatched an embassy with very costly gifts, which he himself had seen, to the Jewish king Eliezer, he could surely have waited for the conclusion of that embassy, and thereafter, once it was safe again, crossed over the Sambatjon, surveyed that entire land with his own eyes, and properly informed himself of its true condition, in order to be able to furnish the Jews scattered in other places with an accurate account of it. But since he did not do this, it is likewise not true that he traveled so far. To say nothing of his many other falsehoods.

From all of this, it is reasonable to conclude that Rabbi Gerson was a reckless and godless scoundrel, in that he bound himself to God with a solemn oath that he would not write the least untruth, and yet he reported such palpable and gross lies. Without doubt, his sole purpose was to strengthen and sustain the Jews in their superstition, so that when they hear that they still possess such mighty kingdoms in the world, they might conclude from this that God still receives them in grace and has not entirely cast them off, as the Christians charge them. This was also without doubt the reason why this little book was previously burned in Poland, so that the Jews would not be hardened in their obstinacy by reading it. That it was indeed burned, I find in the book Mikveh Jisrael, fol. 40, col. 1, in the 10th chapter, number 41, where Rabbi Menasse writes as follows: והמדינה ההיא אינה נודעת לי רק כהיום ט"ז שנה באו שני יהודים מאנשי פולין אחר נסעם בעולם זמן רב אל עיר לובלין ויהיו להדפיס ספר קטן בלשון אשכנז יהודית וכתוב היו מספרים ענין ועסק המדינה הנזכרת ונשרף הספר הקטן הנזכר בעצת הכשרים וכתוב : בעיר בעיר ווארשיי"א ונקרא גלילות ארץ ישראל That is: that same land (which lies beyond the Sabbatjon) is unknown to me; however, fifteen years ago two Polish Jews, after having traveled about the world for a long time, came to the city of Lublin and had a small book printed in the German language in the Jewish manner, in which they reported on the nature and condition of the said land; but the aforementioned little book, which is called Gelilóth érez Jisráel, was burned on the advice of the clergy in the city of Warsaw. As for the false fabrications of this little book, they are also to be found in the above-mentioned book called Maalióth velippúrim min Málke Jisráel, and this was without doubt taken from the former, as can be clearly seen when one compares them side by side, since many things are word for word identical.

Beyond this, Rabbi Gerson disagrees entirely with the other rabbis cited above on various points. For first, he states that not only the Jews who live beyond the Sabbatyon often come across before the Sabbath, when it rests, when they wish to make war against their enemies, and then return back across after the war is ended, but also that other people go across and back again. Against this, however, as was shown above on p. 536, it is read in the book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 80, col. 2. that King Prester John wrote to a Pope in Rome that the river Euphrates held the Jews enclosed so that they could not come against him, by which Euphrates Rabbi Gedalja understands the Sabbatyon. And on p. 537, it was reported from the little book of the Danite Eldad that as soon as the Sabbath draws near, a fire arises all around the river, which lasts until the end of the Sabbath and burns on both sides of the river to a breadth of roughly half a mile, so that no person can approach the river. How then should people be able to travel across or back? And on p. 541, it was further shown from the aforementioned Eldad that the people beyond the river see no person and are likewise seen by no one, except for the four tribes who dwell on this side of the river, to whom they are said to call out across the river from time to time; so they certainly cannot come across. And on p. 542, it was noted from the book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 28, col. 2. that on account of the breadth of the river, no one comes across it to the people, and they likewise cannot come to anyone. Beyond that, it was also brought forward on p. 544 from Elias Tishbi that the ten tribes are enclosed by the Sambatyon, from which they cannot go out, so that they do not desecrate the Sabbath. And in the little book Mikvéh Jisráel of Rabbi Menasseh ben Israel, it is read at fol. 37, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, numero 35: ועל שהנהר סמבטיון הולך וסוער כל ששת ימי החול כי אם בשבת הוא נח מזעפו על כן הם סגורים וכלואים שם כי לחלל את השבת אי אפשר ולכן אין אנו שומעין מהם דבר, That is: Because the river Sambatyon moves turbulently on all six working days but rests from its raging on the Sabbath, therefore they (namely the ten tribes, mentioned just before) are enclosed and confined there, for they may not desecrate the Sabbath, and therefore we hear nothing from them. Now if the Jews, according to Rabbi Gerson's account, are able to cross the Sambatyon and do so frequently, why are there so many who contradict him in this matter and teach the opposite?

Secondly, Rabbi Gerson writes that one can hear the river rushing from two days' journey away; Rabbi Eldad, however, teaches that at night one can hear it only half a day's journey away, which is a very great discrepancy. Finally, thirdly, Rabbi Gerson reports that the Jews beyond the river keep very many horses; Rabbi Eldad, however, teaches that no unclean animal is to be found among them, and for this reason they sometimes call out to the four tribes who dwell on this side of the river, and ask them to show them their camels, dogs, and donkeys.

This is what I have found in the Jews' books concerning the river Sambatyon, and the land and the people beyond it; but all of this is a foolish Jewish fantasy, for no such river is to be found anywhere in the entire world, otherwise it would long since have been discovered and described by the Dutch, English, French, Spanish, and Portuguese, who travel throughout the entire world on account of trade. The Danite Eldad writes in his little book, as was mentioned above on pagina 540, that the land which it encircles is as long and as wide as one can travel in three months, and so it must be, reckoning at least six miles per day, five hundred and forty miles long and equally as wide. How then could such a river, together with the great land enclosed within it, which is said to lie in upper East India, or according to others near the Caspian Sea, be so unknown that no one but the Jews alone should know anything of it? On the maps, in those countries where the river and its land are supposed to be, there is not a single place even forty miles in size in which well-known cities and localities are not to be found; where then, in such regions, could an unknown land five hundred and forty miles long and wide possibly be found?

Rabbi Menasse ben Israel had indeed taken great pains, in his little book Mikveh Jisrael, to prove that such a river exists; for in the tenth chapter, fol. 36 and 37, from number 32 to 36, he seeks to establish this from Jewish books in which it is mentioned. And at fol. 38, col. 1, number 36, he appeals to the testimony of Josephus and Pliny, with these words: ומה מאד היא חזקה הערות יוסף בן גוריון הכהן בספרו הז' של מלחמות ישראל אשר חבר לרומיים שכתב פרק כ"ד שכאשר נסע טיטוס בין מדינת ארקאש ומדינת רופאנא מקומות המלך אגריפא ראה נהר נפלא שאף שמימיו רבים ושוטף בחוזק הוא נח מזעפו אחר כל ששת ימים עד שביום השביעי רואין בו התום יבש בלי מים כלל. ואחר יום השביעי הולך וסוער בלי שינוי כלל. ועל כן כנו ארת הנהר ההוא בשם שאבא'תיקא על שם ששובת ביום השבת קדש. וגם פליניוס הסופר כתב בדברי הימים שלו בספר ל"א ממעשים הטבעיים פרק ב' שהנהר ההוא בארץ יהודה אבל לא דק: בלשונו שרעהן בוראי שאצל הנהר ההוא ישכנים יהודה או ישראל That is: How powerful also is the testimony of the priest Josephus, son of Gorion, in his seventh book of the Israelite Wars, which he composed for the Romans, in which he writes in the 24th chapter that, when Titus was traveling between the towns of Arce and Raphanaea, places belonging to King Agrippa, he saw a wondrous river which, although it has much water and flows strongly, yet after every six days rests from its turbulence, so that one can see the bottom of it entirely without water. After the seventh day, however, it runs again with turbulence without any change whatsoever; for this reason it was named the Sabbatical River, because it rests on the holy Sabbath. Pliny also wrote in his history books, in the 31st book of natural histories, in the 2nd chapter, that this same river is in the Jewish land; he did not, however, state the matter clearly, for his meaning was certainly that the Jews and Israelites dwell along that river. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse ben Israel.

All of this, however, serves him as no sound proof. For as regards what the rabbis write about it, that consists of an erroneous and false opinion which they have never yet been able to demonstrate. As for the supposed testimony from Flavius Josephus, from the 24th chapter of the 7th book on the Jewish Wars, upon which Rabbi Abraham Perizol also relies in his book Iggéreth orchóth ólam, chapter 24, fol. 28, col. 1, that citation is entirely incorrect, since Josephus's account is directly contrary to the Jewish opinion, in that he reports that the river is completely dried up during the six working days, but on the seventh day the water returns and flows strongly. The Jews, on the other hand, maintain that it flows with great force during the six working days, but is completely dried up on the seventh day. To demonstrate this, I will cite the words of Josephus, which read as follows: But after the Emperor Titus had remained for a time, as mentioned, at Berytus, and had then departed from there, he arranged magnificent spectacles in all the cities of the land of Syria into which he came, in which he had the captive Jews put to death as a testimony to their downfall. Along the way, however, he saw a river whose nature is well worth knowing: it runs through the middle of both cities of the kingdom of Agrippa, namely Arce and Raphanaea, and has a wondrous property, for notwithstanding that the said water is great and of a fairly swift current, it nevertheless runs off and dries up completely within six days, and begins to flow again on the seventh day, as though no change had ever occurred in it. It is also accustomed to maintaining this order always (as has been ascertained through reliable experience), and is therefore named the Sabbath River, after the Jews' holy seventh day. This stands in Josephus, from which it is clearly to be seen that his account is entirely contrary to the Jews' position; and therefore Rabbi Menasse and Rabbi Abraham Perizol have done very ill to appeal to his testimony.

Regarding the testimony from Pliny, that too is not significant. He does indeed write in the cited passage: In Judæa rivus Sabbatis omnibus siccatur, That is: In the Jewish land a river dries up every Sabbath; however, this is of no help to the Jews, for they claim that the river Sabbation is located at the Caspian Sea, or in upper India; but Pliny states that it is in Judæa, which are lands very far removed from one another. Rabbi Menasse would indeed like to argue that Pliny did not state the matter clearly, and that his meaning was that the Jews dwell by that river but not in Judæa; but this is quite absurd, for he writes quite plainly that the river is in Judæa: and by Judæa no other land can be understood than the land which the Jews formerly inhabited; and he doubtless meant precisely that same river of which Josephus makes mention, even though they do not agree with one another in their description of it. It may also well be that in former times such a river existed in the Jewish land, but at the present time nothing more is known of it.

What Rabbi Abraham Perizol sets forth in his book Iggéreth orchôth ôlam concerning such a river and the Jews, together with their government there, is all held to be without force by Rabbi David Gans in his book Zémach David, in the first part, fol. 14, col. 2. and fol. 15, col. 1., where he writes as follows: גלות עשרת השבטים היה בשנת שש ליחזקיהו היא שנה תשע להושע בן אלה מלך ישראל למרדו והיא שנת ר"ה ונגלכדה שומרון ויגל שלמנאסר מלך אשור את ישראל אשורה וינחם בחלה וחבור נהר גוזן וערי מדי מלכים ב' סימן י"ה והנה למרחק הדרך לא נודע לנו הווית עשרת השבטים ומה להם והערה קטנה תמצא בספר אורחות עולם ומביאו בספר יוחסין דף קנ"ה. גם בעל מאור עינים כתב מזה מעט מזער בספרו בפרק י"ג אך כל זה אינו שוה לי לריות את נפשנו הצמאה. גם יש גמגום בספר אורחות עולם וביוחסין במה שיחסו מקום גלות עשרת השבטים למדינת פריטי יואן אשר הם ברחוק מזרח ממערב, That is: The ten tribes were led into exile in the sixth year of Hiskia, which was the ninth year of Hosea, the son of Ela, king of Israel, and of his apostasy, and the 205th year (of the fourth thousand in the count of years since the creation of the world), when Samaria was taken; and Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria, carried Israel away into Assyria and placed them in Chalach and Chabor, by the river Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes, as may be read in 2 Kgs 18:11; and behold, on account of the great distance of the way, the condition of these ten tribes, and what has become of them, has not been made known to us. You may, however, find a brief account in the book Orchôth ôlam (of Rabbi Abraham Perizol), which is cited in the book Juchasin fol. 153. Likewise, the one who composed the book Meór enâim wrote something brief about this in his book, in the 13th chapter; but all of this avails nothing to satisfy our thirsting soul. There is also a stumbling block (and doubt) in the book Orchôth ôlam and in the book Juchasin, in that they ascribe the place of the exile of the ten tribes to the land of Prester John, such that they are supposed to be as far away as the east is from the west. From this one can see that Rabbi David Gans did not believe Rabbi Abraham Perizol. In the matter of his writing that it is not known where the ten tribes went and what their condition is, Rabbi David Kimchi agrees with him, when, in his commentary on the words of Jer 31:15, "Rachel wept for her children, because they were no more," he writes: גלות השבטים לא שבו עוד, ולא נודע מקומם אים, That is: The tribes have not returned again, and their place is not known, where they may be. Now if it is not known where they went, how can one say with any foundation of truth that they dwell here and there and have their own kings and rulers? But let this be enough concerning the Jews' supposed kingdoms and dominions in Asia.

Regarding the imaginary kingdom of the Jews in Africa, it is said to be located in Ethiopia or Abyssinia, concerning which Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, in his oft-mentioned little book Mikveh Jisrael, fol. 34, col. 1. 2., in the 8th chapter, numero 29, expresses himself as follows: וגם יושבין קצת מעשרה השבטים במדינת עטיא"פא ומדינת אבא"סא והיא מלכות פאפ"יאן ועוד היום יושבין ברומא אומה אחת נקראים אב"סיניא על שם אותה המדינה אבא"סא והם מעידים על דבר זה. ואחד מהם היה נקרא שמו בוט"רו וכתב שעל שפת נהר נילוס יושבים ב' אומות גדולות ואחת מהם אומת ישראל ויש להם מלך אדיר. וגם רבי אברהם פריצול כתב זאת בספרו הנזכר ששמע זאת משני רבנים שהיו שם. וגם העידו הרבנים דבר הזה על אמתתם לפני הער"קוליס דוכס פיר"ארא. וגם הוא. בלי ספק שמהם קבלו האב"סיניא מצות מילה ושבת ושאר הנהגות ישראל שנוהגין עוד היום גם הסופר נאמן פטולו"מיוס בספרו צורת העולם כתב שבאפ"ריקא חדשה והוא חלק אחד מחלקי אפר"קא שלא היה נודע לסופרים הקדמונים באשר שלא היו יודעים מקור נהר הנילוס. ומקור והתחלת נהר הנילוס הוא מן ההרים הגדולים הנקראים בפי הקדמונים מו"נטס ד"ע ל"א לו"נא, ויושבים שם גם כן עם יהודים שאין מספר ונכנעים למלך פא"פיאן ומעלין לו: that is to say, there also dwell some of the ten tribes in the territory of Ethiopia and Abyssinia, which is the kingdom of Pap Jan (who is otherwise also called Prester John, and by the Dutch Paep Jan), and there still dwells to this day a people in Rome who are called Abyssinians after the name of the territory of Abyssinia, and they themselves testify to this matter. One of them, by name Bottus, also wrote that on the bank of the river Nile there dwell two great peoples, one of which is an Israelite people that has a mighty king. Rabbi Abraham Perizol also wrote this in his aforementioned book, that he had heard it from two rabbis who had been there. Those same rabbis also testified to the truth of this before Hercules, Duke of Ferrara. The Abyssinians have also, without doubt, learned the commandment of circumcision and of the Sabbath and of the remaining Israelite customs from the Jews, which they still observe to this day. The faithful writer Ptolemy also wrote in his book, which is called the Description of the World, that the new Africa, which is a part of Africa, had not been known to the ancient writers, because they did not know the source of the river Nile. The river Nile, however, has its source and origin from the great mountains which by the ancients are called Montes Lunæ, that is, the Mountains of the Moon, and there dwell Jews without number who are subject to Pap Jan and pay him tribute. But if the Jews there are such a great and mighty people and have their own powerful king, why should they be subject to Pap Jan, or Prester John, and pay him tribute? They must therefore be no great heroes, unlike the tribes that reside in Asia, who are subject to no other peoples but rather make those peoples subject to themselves and receive tribute from them.

The aforementioned Rabbi Menasse, fol. 43, col. 2. in the 13th chapter, numero 47, in the said little book, also wishes to prove from Isa 11:11 that Jews are to be found in Aethiopia, since it is stated there that God will in the future recover the remnant of His people from among other lands, including from Cush or the land of the Moors, when he writes: כּוֹשׁ לְפִי דַעַת הַהִמּוֹנִים הִיא מְדִינַת עֲטִיאוֹפָא וְזֶהוּ שְׂאֵמֶר יִרְמְיָהוּ י"ג פְּסוּק כ"ג הִנֵּהפָּךְ כּוֹשִׁי עוֹרָו וְנִמְרָ חֲבִרְבוּרֹתָיו גַּם אֲתָם תּוֹכְלוּ לְהִיטִיב וְגו' וּלְפִי זֶה נִבָּא יִשְׁעָיָהוּ שֶׁהַשִּׁבְטִים הֵם בְּמִדְיַת אַבְיִסִינָא הַקְּרוּבָה לְעֲטִיאוֹפָא: that is, Cush signifies, according to the common opinion, the land of Aethiopia or the land of the Moors, and this is what Jeremiah said in Jer 13:23: "Can a Moor also change his skin, and a leopard his spots? So too could you do good, etc." According to this, Isaiah (in Isa 11:11) thus prophesied that the tribes would be in the land of Abyssinia, which lies close to Aethiopia. This, however, is a poor proof, and it is just as little true that the Jews have a kingdom in Abyssinia as it is true that twenty-four Jewish kings reign beyond the Sabbathyon.

Since Rabbi Menasse also reports that the word Cush is commonly understood to refer to the region of Ethiopia or Abyssinia in Africa, and that a great multitude of Jews is said to dwell in that land who have their own king, I am surprised that the Jews do not write that the river Sabbatjon is in Abyssinia. It was reported above at pagina 527 from the booklet of Eldad, and at pagina 529 from the book Shalshelet hakkabbala fol. 28, col. 1, that the four tribes of Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher migrated into the land of Cusch. And at pagina 541 it was shown from the aforementioned booklet of Eldad that these four tribes dwell very close to the Sabbatjon and sometimes speak with the people who are on the other side of it. Now if Cusch signifies the region of Abyssinia, then the river Sabbatjon cannot be in Asia, as is commonly claimed, but must be in Africa. Beyond this, it was also shown above at pagina 536 from the aforementioned book Shalshelet hakkabbala fol. 80, col. 2 that King Preste Jan, who in the booklet Maasioth veseppurim min malke Jisrael is called Prester John, wrote in the year 1460 A.D. to the then-reigning Pope in Rome and furnished him with information concerning the Jews dwelling beyond the river; and it is reported of this same King Preste Jan in the words cited above at pagina 555 from the booklet Geliloth érez Jisrael that he is an Ishmaelite and an adherent of the Mohammedan or Turkish faith. Since it is not credible, however, that a Mohammedan king would have written to the Pope on this matter, given the Turks' unspeakable hatred toward Christians, whereas the king of Abyssinia, to whom the Jews are said to be subject and to pay tribute, as was reported above from the booklet Mikvéh Jisrael fol. 34, col. 2, is a Christian and, as Hornius indicates in his Orbe Imperante, pages 310 and 311, is commonly called Prester John in place of Prester Chan, which means a king of serfs, it would bear a somewhat closer resemblance to the truth if the Jews were to teach that the river Sabbatjon is in Ethiopia. Yet however they may choose to present the matter, their teaching concerning this river is a vain fabrication.

Regarding the supposed dominion of the same in America, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel expresses himself on this matter in his cited booklet Mikvéh Jisrael, fol. 61, col. 2., in the 20th chapter, numero 71, as follows: במדינת הודו מערבא יושבין קצת מעשרת השבטים שנשעו לשם מארץ קדר דרך that is, in the land of the West Indies there dwell some of the ten tribes, who journeyed from the land of Kedar through Anian or Sina; and they are still to this day, by the providence of the blessed God, hidden in the part of the world called America. At the beginning of his aforementioned booklet, however, he writes up to fol. 12. concerning the manner in which a Jew named Aaron Levi, who among the Spaniards was called Montesinus, came to Amsterdam in the year 5404 after the creation of the world, and in the year 1644 A.D., on the 18th of August, and reported that he had been in the West Indies, and had been led by an Indian named Francisco over high mountains and cliffs for three days, and had finally been brought to a river, above which the Jews dwell; and that, after a signal of their presence had been given, four men immediately crossed over the river toward him, to whom Francisco related that Montesinus was a Jew; whereupon the Indian Jews embraced Montesinus and kissed him, and, because they could not speak with him, conveyed to him by signs nine different things. After that they crossed back over, and four others came in a small boat, and after these four more again, and so on, such that within three days some 300 and more had crossed over the river in groups of four, one after another, and all had spoken the same words and conveyed the aforementioned nine things; and Montesinus had been angry that they had not answered his questions. After this he took his leave of them and traveled back again with Francisco.

In support of this testimony of Montesini, Rabbi Menasse wishes to adduce further evidence that there are lands in America inhabited entirely by Jews, and he asserts at fol. 18, col. 1, 2, in the 2nd chapter, numero 9, that the Americans have many Jewish customs and practices, which they must have learned from the Jews in those lands. And at fol. 19, col. 1, 2, numero 10, he reports that white people are found in America who grow long beards, whereas the Americans are brown-yellow in complexion, from which he concludes that the white people must be Jews. And at fol. 26, col. 2, in the 5th chapter, numero 19, he reports that the Spaniards found large buildings in America, and asserts that the Jews must have built them, to say nothing of various other things he advances in support of his opinion. Nevertheless, he places the testimony of Montesini above all else that he has adduced as proof, at fol. 25, col. 1, in the 4th chapter, numero 17, and at fol. 62, col. 1, numero 72. How the Jews came to West India, according to his view, he sets forth in greater detail at fol. 16, col. 1, 2, in the 2nd chapter, numero 6, and at fol. 17, col. 1, numero 7, and at fol. 64, col. 2, and fol. 65, col. 2, numero 72. However, everything he advances as proof of the entire matter is built upon a poor foundation, and is no more true than what was reported above concerning the Jewish kingdoms and dominions in Asia.

Who would want to believe even the least of all the Jewish fancies enumerated above? The ten tribes were driven out of their land on account of their terrible idolatry and other grave sins, as can be seen in 2 Kgs 15:28-29, 2 Kgs 17:5-24, 2 Kgs 18:11-12, and also 1 Chr 5:25-26, and God rejected the entire seed of Israel and cast them away from His face, as is written in 2 Kgs 17:20. Indeed, the Talmud itself testifies that they have no share in eternal life, for in the tractate Sanhedrin fol. 110, col. 2. it is written as follows: תנו רבנן

עשרת השבטים אין להם חלק לעולם הבא שנ' ויתשם יי' מעל אדמתם בעולם הזה וישליכם
 that is, Our rabbis teach that the ten tribes have no share in the life to come (eternal life), as it is said (Deut 29:28): And the Lord cast them out of their land with great wrath, fury, and displeasure. (The words)
 "And the Lord cast them out of their land" signify this present life; (but the words) "And cast them into another land" signify the life to come (eternal life).
 How then could it be possible that God would have allowed them to come into such glorious and fertile lands, as is claimed, in which they are supposed to dwell better and more peacefully under their kings and rulers than they had ever lived before in the promised land? Rabbi David Kimchi himself did not believe that the Jews of the present day have kings and rulers of their own lineage anywhere in the world; for this reason he writes in his commentary on the words of Hos 3:4, "The children of Israel shall remain for a long time without king or prince," in the following manner: בן ימי הגלות שאנחנו בו אלה הם ימי הגלות שאנחנו בו
 היום ואין לנו לא מלך ולא שר מִיִּשְׂרָאֵל כִּי בִרְשׁוֹת הַגּוֹיִם אֲנַחְנוּ וּבִרְשׁוֹת מַלְכֵיהֶם וּשְׂרֵיהֶם that is, This is to be understood of the days of the exilii, or exile, in which we presently find ourselves, and we have neither king nor prince from Israel, for we are under the power of the Gentiles and under the authority of their kings and princes. Furthermore, in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 47, col. 3. numero 19.
 under the heading Galuth one reads: בחטא מכירת יוסף שהיה י"ב שנים בבית האסורים that is, On account of the sin of the selling of Joseph, who spent twelve years in prison (in Egypt), and because a hundred blessings were withheld from him every day, the twelve tribes were punished by being placed in the Edomite exilio, or exile.
 And this is also to be found in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 68, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajeschef, as well as in the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 13. under the heading Galuth, drawn from the book Medrasch néelam. Now since by Edom Christendom is understood, and all twelve tribes are supposed to be in exile among the Christians, how then can they be in Asia, Africa, and America, and have their kingdoms there? The highly learned rabbis may see for themselves how they can reconcile these things with one another. With this, let enough have been said concerning the Jewish dominions and kingdoms, which consist of nothing other than the vain and fantastical imaginings of the Jews.

Chapter XI.

In which four questions are examined: first, whether it is permitted to the Jews, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, to deceive a Christian? Second, whether it is allowed to them to steal from or rob him? Third, whether they may keep something that a Christian loses and they find? And finally, fourth, whether they may practice usury against Christians?

It is well known to everyone what a deceitful people the Jews are; but if it were to be objected against them that deception must be permitted among them, because they are so greatly given to it, they could answer that it is held by their Rabbis to be a great sin, wherefore it stands written in the Talmudic tractate Báva mezía fol. 59, col. 1: שלשה אין הפרגוד ננעל בפניהם אונאה : that is, there are three things before which the curtain is not closed (that is, before which the curtain is not drawn, so that God does not see and punish them): deception, robbery, and idolatry; which can also be read in the Jalkút Schimóni on the prophet Amos, fol. 79, col. 4, number 546.

Further, they can say that deception is also forbidden by their rabbis, as is taught in the Sépher mizvóth gádol of Rabbi Mosche Mikkózi, fol. 61, col. 1, under the title Hilchóth onaóth (or Hilchos onáos), as follows: אסור לרמות בני אדם : ואם היה יודע שיש בממכרו מום יודיעו ללוקח ואפילו לגנוב דעת הבריות בדברים אסור : that is, it is forbidden to deceive people in buying and selling, or to steal their sense (or opinion), (that is, to cause them to believe and think something that is entirely false and untrue,) not even the sense of a Goi (or Christian); and the Gójim, or Christians, and the Israelites are to be regarded as equal to one another in this matter. And if someone knows that what he is selling has a defect, he shall disclose it to the buyer. Indeed, it is also forbidden to steal people's sense with words, (that is, to deceive them with words in such a way that they think a thing is constituted differently than it actually is in fact.) This is also to be read in the book Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 80, col. 2, in the 18th chapter, number 1, under the title Hilchoth mechira, as well as in the book Shulchan aruch, in the part Choschen hammischpat, number 228, § 6. They can also object that Rabbi Salman Zevi, in his Jewish Theriac, fol. 8, col. 2, in the first chapter, number 14, sufficiently demonstrates how strictly deception is forbidden to them.

Beyond this, they can bring forward the fact that in the aforementioned book Shulchan aruch, in the mentioned section Choschen hamischpat, number 231, §. 1, the following is read: עובר בלאו : דלא תעשו עול במדה : במשקל ובמסורה : that is, whoever measures or weighs too little for his fellow (namely a Jew) or even for an idolater (by which a Christian is to be understood), transgresses a prohibitory commandment: (for it is written in Lev 19:35:) You shall not act unjustly with the ell, with the weight, and with the measure. Likewise, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon writes in the fourth part of his aforementioned book Jad chasaka, fol. 19, col. 2, in the 7th chapter, number 8, under the title Hilchoth geneva, in the following manner: אחד הנושא ונותן עם ישראל או עם עובד עכו"ם אם מדד או שקל בחסר עובר על לא תעשה וחייב להחזיר. וכן אסור להטעות את כותים בחשבון אלא ידקדק עמו שנאמר וחשב עם קונוהו אע"פ שהוא כבוש תחת ידיך קל וחומר לכותי שאינו כבוש תחת ידיך. והרי הוא בכלל כי : תועבת יי' אלהיך כל עושה אלה. כל עשה עול מכל מקום : that is, whoever conducts trade with an Israelite or with an idolatrous person, and measures or weighs too little for him, transgresses a prohibitory commandment and is obligated to make restitution. Likewise, it is also forbidden to cause a Cuthean (or Christian) to err in his accounting; rather, one must observe the matter precisely with him (and shortchange him not in the slightest), as it is said (Lev 25:50): He shall reckon with his buyer; even if he is already subject to your power. How much more is such a thing forbidden toward a Cuthean who is not under your power. And behold, this is included among those things (of which it is written in Deut 25:16:) For whoever does such things is an abomination to the Lord your God. And they can further note that this is also found in Rabbi Mosche Mikkozi Sepher mizvoth gadol, fol. 58, where, however, instead of the word Cuthean, Goi is read.

Furthermore, they can say that the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche Mikkozi, in the said book fol. 132. col. 3., under the title הלכות השבת האבדה Hilchoth bachavath baaveda, writes further as follows: כבר דרשתי לגלות ירושלים אשר בספרד ולשאר גליות אדום אדום כי עתה שהאריך הגלות יותר מדאי יש לישראל להבדיל מהבלי העולם ולואחו בחותמו של הק"ב"ה שהוא אמת ושלא לשקר לא לישראל ולא לגוים ולא להטעותם בשום ענין ולקדש עצמם אף במותר שלהם שנאמר שארית ישראל לא יעשו עולה ולא ידברו כזב ולא ימצא בפייה לשון תרמית וכשיבא הק"ב"ה להושיעם יאמרו הגוים בדין עשה כי הם אנשי אמת ותורת אמת בפייה אבל אם יתנהגו עם הגוים ברמאות יאמרו ראו מה עשה : that is, I have already preached to the exiles of Jerusalem (who are in Spain, and to the remaining exiles who are in Edom, that is, in Christendom) that now, since the exilium, or captivity, has lasted far too long, the Israelites ought to separate themselves from the vanities of this world and hold fast to the seal of the holy and blessed God, which is truth, and neither lie to an Israelite nor to the Gojim (or Christians), nor deceive them in any matter, but also in those things that are permitted to them, they should keep themselves holy, as it is said (Zeph 3:13): The remnant of Israel shall do no more iniquity, nor speak lies; neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth. When then the holy and blessed God shall come to deliver them, the Gojim will say: He does rightly (in that He redeems them), for they are truthful people, and the true law is in their mouth. But if they deal deceitfully with the Gojim, they will say: See what the holy and blessed God does, that He has taken thieves and deceivers as His inheritance?

Beyond this, they can also give as an answer that in the book Caphtor uphérah fol. 36, col. 2. it is written: כשם שאתה צריך להיות נוהג באמונה עם ישראל כך אתה צריך להתנהג עם הגוים: that is, just as you ought to deal faithfully with the Israelites, so too must you deal faithfully (and honestly) with the Gojim (or Christians). All of this, I say, the Jews could give as an answer, and could add thereto that those Jews who act contrary to this sin against it and act in opposition to the teaching of the Rabbis; in which case the answer to the aforementioned first question, whether the Rabbis permit in their teaching the defrauding of a Christian, would come out thus: that they do not permit it, since their cited teachings demonstrate precisely the opposite.

To this, however, I reply that this teaching of the Rabbis may be entirely good, and it would be desirable that all Jews would follow it, for then not so many Christians would be brought to ruin of their property in a godless and wanton manner through their shameful frauds, as so frequently occurs. But since the Rabbis not only look on at such abominable fraud committed by those under their authority and do not themselves punish it, but also, when they themselves are engaged in dealings, seek to overreach the Christians, it must follow that they must have yet another teaching in their books which runs directly contrary to the one just mentioned; all the more so since it is entirely common among the Rabbis that two contradictory teachings are found among them, both of which are nonetheless supposed to be the word of God, as has been clearly demonstrated above in the eighth chapter of the first part, pages 315 and 316.

Indeed, it is entirely certain that the teaching cited above is nullified in other places by the rabbis, and that they teach the opposite therein; for in the Talmudic tractate Báva mezía fol. 61, col. 1., at the end, in the Tosephoth, it is written as follows: אונאה ורבית שרי בגוי דכתיב לנכרי תשיך ואונאה נמי דכתיב אל תונו: That is: It is permitted to deceive a Goi (or Christian) and to take usury from him, as it is written (Deut 23:20): You may charge interest to the foreigner. It is likewise permitted to deceive him, as it is written (Lev 25:14): When you sell something to your neighbor, or buy something from his hand, let no one deceive his brother. Thus it is here permitted to deceive a Goi or Christian, because the Law of Moses only forbids deceiving one's neighbor or brother. So too does Rabbi Moses bar Maimon write in the fourth part of his book Jad chasáka fol. 74, col. 2., in the 12th chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilboth mechira, in the following manner: אסור למוכר או לקונה להונות את חבריו That is: It is forbidden for a seller or buyer to deceive his fellow, as it is said (Lev 25:14): When you sell something to your neighbor, or buy something from his hand, let no one deceive his brother. And in the 14th chapter, numero 12, fol. 77, col. 2, under the aforementioned title Hilboth mechira, he teaches: בשם שהוניה במקח וממכר That is: Just as there is deception in buying and selling, so too is there deception in words, as it is said (Lev 25:17): Let no one deceive his neighbor. From which it can be seen that it is only forbidden to Jews to deceive their neighbor. For this reason they also beseech God on their Jom kippur, or Day of Atonement, in a prayer which begins: על חטא שחטאנו לפניך Al chet schechatanu lefanécha, which is found in the Frankfurt Machsor fol. 44., in which they call upon God for the forgiveness of their sins, in the following manner: ועל חטא שחטאנו לפניך בהונאת רע That is: And (forgive us) our sin, which we have committed before You, by deceiving the neighbor; and here the Gojim or Christians are not mentioned at all.

By "their neighbor," however, they understand only the one who belongs to their religion, for in the book Chóschén hammschpat, fol. 132, col. 2, in the notis or annotations on numero 95, §. 1, of the Amsterdam printing, the following is read: בכל מקום שנאמר רעהו אין העכו"ם בכלל that is, In all places where (in the Law of Moses) it says "his neighbor," an idolater is not included therein (and is not comprehended under it). And in the cited fourth part of the book Jad chasáka, there stands at fol. 31, col. 1, in the 11th chapter, numero 3, under the title Hilboth geséla, the following written: הנשבע לכותי וכיחש את הקרן ואינו חייב בחומש שנאמר וכחש בעמיתו that is, He who swears to a Cutbean (or Christian) shall return the principal sum to him; however, he is not obligated to pay the fifth part (concerning which Lev 6:5 is to be read), because (there at v. 2) it says: And he denied it to his neighbor. Likewise, in the book Pesikta sotárta, fol. 81, col. 1, at the end, in the Paráscha Ki téze, on the words of Deut 23:25, "When you pass through your neighbor's grain" etc., it is taught: רעך פרט לקמת אחרים that is, By the words "your neighbor," the grain of others (namely the Gojim) is excepted. Accordingly, in the book Beér haggóla, fol. 44, col. 2, the following is also read: מה שאמרו במסכת בבא מציעא שאונאת הגוי מותרת דכתיב ולא תונו איש את עמיתו דבר זה מדבר כאשר אדם מוכר דבר לחבירו ונמצא שנתאנה בשתות צריך להחזיר לו that is, What is said in the (Talmudic) tractate Bava mezia, that it is permitted to defraud a Goi, as it is written (Lev 25:17): "Let no one defraud his neighbor"; this speaks of the case where one sells something to his companion (or fellow man) and it is found that the latter has been defrauded by a sixth part, in which case he must return it to him; but to a Goi he need not return it.

Yes, the Talmud teaches in the tractate Megilla, fol. 13, col. 2, that it is also permitted for the righteous to deceive someone, for it is read there as follows: That is: ומי שרי לצדיקי לסגויי ברמיותא אמר לה אין עם נבר תתבר ועם עקש תתפל What? Is it then permitted for the righteous to walk in deceit (that is, to deal in it)? And he said to her: Yes, (for it is written in 2 Sam 22:27:) With the pure you are pure, and with the perverse you are perverse. Concerning this, the following is also found in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 20, col. 2, in the Paráscha Bereschith, taken from the book Emek-hammélech: ברמאות לסגויי ברמאות שרו להו לצדיקי 'עם נבר תתבר ועם עקש כיעקב מדה כנגד מדה כאשר עשתה נחש כן שילם לה אלהים שנ 'עם נבר תתבר ועם עקש תתפל. וכל זה מפני ששמעו אדם וחווה לנחש ברמאות ונתפתו וברמאות נתרפאו שעל ידי That is: It is permitted for the righteous to act deceitfully, as Jacob did, and like was repaid with like: just as the serpent had acted, so God repaid it in kind, as it is said (Ps 18:27): With the pure you are pure, and with the perverse you are perverse. And all of this came to pass because Adam and Eve obeyed the serpent; thus they were led astray through deceit, and through deceit they were healed again: for through Jacob the world was blessed with thirty-nine blessings, in answer to the thirty-nine curses with which it had been cursed in the time of Adam and Eve.

It has indeed also been reported from Rabbi Mosche Mikkosi's book Sepher mizvoth gadol that it is forbidden to deceive a Goi even with words alone; however, the thieving Talmudic teacher Raf Cabana, who is mentioned in what follows, teaches the Jews the opposite by his own example, in that when he came to a Goi he said: שלמא למר Schelama lemor, that is, "may the lord be greeted," yet he meant not the Goi but his own Rabbi, who was above him, and thus deceived the Goi, who thought the greeting was directed at him, with ambiguous words, as was indicated above in the 15th chapter of the first part. Rabbi Eliezer did likewise, of whom it is written in the Talmudic tractate Avoda sara fol. 16, col. 2. as follows: ת"ר כשנתפס ר' אלעזר למינות העלוהו לגרדום לידון אמר לו אותו הגמון זקן שכמותך יעסוק בדברים בטיילים הללו אמר לו נאמן עלי הדיין כסבור אותו הגמון עליו הוא אומר והוא לא אמר אלא כנגד אביו שבשמים אמר לו הואיל והאמנתי אתה: That is: Our Rabbis teach that when Rabbi Eliezer was seized by the heretics (namely the Romans, who wanted to compel him to idolatry, as Rabbi Salomon indicates in his commentary on this passage) and was brought before the criminal tribunal to be condemned, the magistrate said to him: should an old man such as you are occupy himself with such vain things (as are in your religion)? To this he replied: the judge is faithful toward me (and deals rightly with me). The magistrate, however, supposed that he had said this of him, whereas he had in fact said it of his Father in Heaven (God the Lord), intending thereby to indicate that He was rightly visiting him thus on account of his sins. And the magistrate said to him: since I believe you (that you judge me so sincerely), I swear to you by Dimus (who was an idol) that you shall be free and released.

Regarding what was mentioned from the book Jad chasaka, that it is forbidden to cause a Goi or Christian to make an error in an account, the opposite of this is taught in the book Choschen hammischpat fol. 423, col. 1, Amsterdam printing, numero 348, in the annotation, with these words: טעות ע"כס כגון להטעותו בחשבון או להפקיע הלוואתו מותר ובלבד שלא יודע לו דליכא חילול השם: חילול השם ויש אומרים דאסור להטעותו אלא אם טעה מעצמו שרי That is: The error of an idolater, namely to cause him to make a mistake in an account, or to cancel what he had lent to a (Jew) (that is, to say that he had paid it to his deceased father, even if it is not true, as Rabbi Salomon Jarchi explains in his commentary on Bava mezia, fol. 113, col. 2.), is permitted, provided only that he does not find out about it and the name of God is not profaned. Some, however, say it is forbidden to cause him to err; but if he errs of his own accord (and shortchanges himself in the account), then it is permitted (to keep that by which he has wronged himself). On this matter it is also written in Rabbi Mosche Mikkozi's book Sepher mizvoth gadol fol. 132, col. 3., under the title Hilchoth haschavath aveda, as follows: טעות גוי עובד ע"ז מותר והוא שטעיה מעצמו כיצד כגון שעשה עמו חשבון וטעה וצריך שיאמר לו ישראל ראה שעל חשבונך אני סומך ואיני יודע אלא מה שאתה אומר אני נותן לך אבל להטעותו אסור שמא נתכוון הגוי לבדוק ונמצא שם שמים מתחלל That is: The error of an idolatrous Goi is permitted (that is, one may keep that amount by which he has erred) when he errs of his own accord. How is this to be understood? When the Goi makes an account and makes a mistake in it (such that he wrongs himself), the Israelite must say to him: See, I rely upon your account, and I do not know (whether it is correct or not), yet I give you what you state. But to cause him to err is forbidden, for perhaps the Goi does it deliberately (and pretends not to know the error) in order to test him, whereby the name of God would be profaned. This same ruling is also to be found in the book Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 31, col. 1, in Chapter II, numero 4. 5., under the title Hilchoth gesela vaaveda.

This passage is taken from the aforementioned Talmudic tractate Bava kamma fol. 113, col. 2., where several examples of such deception are recorded, which were committed by Talmudic teachers, and the words there read as follows: אמר שמואל טעותו מותרת כי הא דשמואל זבן מניי לקנא דדהבא במר דמאה דפרזלא בכ 'זווי ואבלע ליה חד זוזא. רב כהנא זבן מניי מאה ועשרים חביתא בכמר דמאה ואבלע ליה חד זוזא. אמר ליה חזי דעלך קא סמיכנא. רבינא זבן איהו לההוא גוי דיקלא ואכלע ליה חד זוזא. That is: Samuel said that the error (of a Goi and the deception which proceeds from it) is permissible. Thus this Samuel bought a golden flask from a Goi for four shillings, which the Goi believed to be made of iron (or brass), and withheld one shilling from him (and confused him in the counting, so that he took three shillings instead of four, as Rabbi Solomon explains in his commentary on this passage). Rab Raf Cáhana bought one hundred and twenty barrels (of wine) from a Goi instead of one hundred, and withheld one shilling from him, and said to him: see, I rely upon you (and upon your reckoning that it is correct). Rabbéna had sold palm trees to a Goi for splitting, and (before the Goi had fetched them) said to his servant: go and take something away from the trunks (or cut something off from them), for the Goi knows well the number (of the trees, but he does not know how thick or thin they were). We see here, therefore, in what manner Samuel defrauded a Goi doubly, in that he first bought a golden flask from him as though it were one of iron or brass, and then also shortchanged him by one shilling in the payment. Likewise, that Raf Cáhana cheated a Goi out of twenty barrels and one shilling; and in what a thievish manner Rabbéna dealt with another Goi and stole from him the wood that had been sold. These frivolous and godless tricks the Jews have always known how to follow masterfully and to put into practice, which is why every Christian who has dealings with them must take good care not to be deceived by these unconscionable people. The question thus arises whether the Rabbinical teachers permit Jews to defraud a Christian; and the answer that emerges is that, although some forbid it, others on the contrary allow it. It is the latter that they also follow, as daily experience attests, and as I myself have personally experienced in practice.

Regarding this, the converted Ferdinand Heß addresses them in his Judenspiegel, in the second chapter, pagina 10, as follows: "Before our lending, you may take all our goods from us; you ought not to refrain from it, for you consider it no עבירה averó to be a גוי מרמה Goi merámmeb, that is, to deceive is reckoned among you Jews as no sin, whoever can deceive a Christian." And in the second part of his Judengeissel, in the 6th chapter, he reports how the Jews blow a ram's horn on their New Year's Day, and writes the following concerning it: "When the ram's horn is blown and gives a clear, bright sound, they are joyful and in good spirits, saying expressly that it will go well for them this year, and that they will have good fortune and blessing in bodily sustenance, and victori against the Christians, whom God will take away this year. But if it happens that the horn did not sound clearly, they are very sorrowful and despondent, saying and fearing that they have an unlucky year to expect; amid these proceedings, one Jew asks another whether he has not been merámme to some Goi, whether he has had any mezios, that is to say, whether he has deceived any Christian, or whether he has not stolen from him, or indeed moved someone to steal, and sold the stolen goods to the Jew for half price, or whether he has cheated or defrauded a Christian in a transaction or exchange. In short, there one person discloses to another by what means and method he has defrauded someone. Then the other says: 'Well then, you have brought a korban, that is, you have brought an offering to God, or done a pleasure to our Lord God, in that he had indeed deceived a Christian.'" These are the words of Ferdinand Heß.

The convert Samuel Friedrich Brentz also shows this in his Jüdischer abgestreiffter Schlangenbalg, page 21, in the 4th chapter, following up on this matter, and says: When the Jews have run around for a whole week and here and there deceived a Christian, they commonly come together on their Sabbath day and boast of their roguish deeds; whereupon the other Jews respond, mann soll den Gójim das lefauß der néphesch lokéach seyn, that is, one should take the heart out of the body of the Christians, and they say further טוב שבגויים הרוג tof schebegójim haróg, that is, the best among the Christians should be struck dead. If a Christian has been very severely deceived by a Jew, the other Jews who hear of it say that he has brought a korban, that is, a sacrifice, in that he deceived this person in such a manner.

Of such deceptions by the Jews, the converted Dieterich Schwab gives an account in his Jüdischer Deckmantel, in the third part, in the second chapter, pages 157 and 158, as well as in the third chapter, and in the aforementioned third chapter he relates an incident in these words: I knew an old, aged Jew not far from here, whom I could well name if it were necessary, but since he was my father-in-law, I will spare him. To this man, a distinguished citizen once sent his wife with several pledges and also a written list of them, because he urgently needed money (as often happens in merchant dealings); when the Jew saw this and immediately noticed that the Christian had miscalculated or miswritten, and had set the gold some 10 thalers too low, putting down too little, he kept silent about it, broke open the sealed pledges, and without scruple took away as much as had been miscalculated on the gold. And since he did not have the money himself, he carried those pledges to another Jew and obtained the money on them. What happened? Some time later, the Christian wished to redeem his pledges; not only did he have to pay 30 per 100 in annual interest, but the Jew also secretly stole six reichsthalers in gold from him during the return delivery and the counting of the interest. The Christian goes home again with his pledges, thinking he has received them honestly, whereupon he finds that a silver scabbard of 30 Loth is missing; he sends to the Jew's house and has it demanded back, but the Jew denied it to him with great oaths and would not confess, notwithstanding that he had shown it to me immediately after the citizen's departure, rejoicing and boasting, and had stated without scruple that the Goi should not get to see it again, as he indeed kept it, broke it into pieces, and sold it to another Jew named David Hirsch. This I afterward reported to that same citizen, when by the grace of God I had come to the Christian faith, but he, being rich, distinguished, and held in great esteem, did not wish to trouble himself much about it, lest it might redound to his diminishment that he had had to borrow money from a Jew; and so the good Christian lost the aforementioned property of his. Beyond this, the same Jew also drew the said Christian's wife to himself through flattering words and cunning tricks, without her husband's knowledge (though it is now known to him), so that she conducted trade and exchange with him, but so honestly on his part that he gave her, among other things, as one unacquainted with gold, no more than one reichsthaler and seven shillings for a double ducat, and for a double gold guilder or angel only one thaler and eight groschen, and this not in money but in loose, worthless rags that were of no great value, thereby deceiving the good woman by more than half. What do you think now, my Christian: is this not an upright Jewish priest, who knows so well how to deal with other people's goods and to bring them to himself, and who knows how to lead other Jews by such an example? Thus far are the words of Dieterich Schwab, from which it is plainly evident how the Jews follow the thievish examples of the aforementioned Talmudic teachers, namely Rabbi Samuel, Raf Cáhana, and Rabbenä. Now if the rabbis do such things, as this Jew of whom Dieterich Schwab speaks was also one, it is easy to imagine what the common Jews are accustomed to doing, whose scheming and striving is directed at nothing other than deception, by which also very many Christians are plunged into utter ruin.

The converted Dieterich Schwab shows, in the 4th chapter of the third part of his Jüdischer Deckmantel, how deceitfully the Jews deal with the promissory notes they receive from Christians as security for money lent to them, and he reports that they either, when the Christian repays the money and demands his note back, claim that it has been misplaced and that they cannot find it, assuring him they will deliver it to him as soon as it comes to hand, and then keep the Christian running back and forth until he grows weary of it, after which they demand the money a second time from him or from his heirs; or they employ this fraud: when the amount of the borrowed sum is written in numerals, they alter it, and instead of 20 fl. they write 200. For this reason he also warns those who give promissory notes to Jews that they should not write the sum in numerals but should write it out in full in letters. He likewise reports in the 6th chapter of the aforementioned third part how easily a Christian can be deceived and cheated by a Jew through a Hebrew promissory note concerning what the Jew owes the Christian, and he admonishes that one should take German promissory notes from them if one does not wish to be defrauded, as has already happened to many a Christian, of which he provides two examples. The first occurred here in Frankfurt once during the fair, where a Jew from Prague bought fox pelts from a merchant for 400 fl. and gave him a Hebrew promissory note for payment at the next following fair, which the merchant accepted in good faith. But when the Jew failed to appear at the appointed time and the merchant had the note read aloud, there was nothing in it but these words: Ix perfix, enemy of hares, no foxes, I acknowledge nothing to you for as long as I live. The second occurred in Paderborn, where a Jew by the name of Meyer Wallig owed an old simple-minded woman one hundred and thirty thalers, yet gave her only a promissory note for thirty thalers and did not even put his name in it. But when he, Dieterich, subsequently read the note by order of the authorities and the fraud was discovered, and the woman also proved her claim with witnesses, the godless, thieving Jew was compelled to pay the full sum. Therefore one may well say of the Jews what is written in Jer 5:26-27: "They lay ruinous snares to catch men. As a cage is full of birds, so their houses are full of deceit; thereby they have become great and grown rich."

Regarding the second question, whether Rabbinic teaching permits Jews to steal from or rob a Christian: the Jews can answer this with a no. As far as stealing is concerned, they can say that it is forbidden by their Rabbis, for in the book Jad chasaka of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, in the fourth part, fol. 14, col. 1, in the 1st chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchoth geneva, the following is written: כל הגונב ממון משהו פרוטה ולמעלה עבר על לא תעשה וג' ואחד: the-guinner from-money of a penny or more transgresses a prohibitory commandment, etc. Whether he steals the money or property of an Israelite, or of a Cuthean who practices idolatry, or of a great or small person (it is all the same). So too is it taught in the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Chóschén hammíschpat, numero 348, §. 2: כל הגונב אפילו שוה פרוטה עובר על לאו: that is, whoever steals even the worth of a penny transgresses a prohibitory commandment (for it is written in Lev 19:11:) You shall not steal, and is obligated to return (what was stolen), whether he steals the money or property of an Israelite, or of the Gójim (that is, of the Christians), or of a great or small person. The very same is also to be found in the Sepher mizvóth gádol, fol. 58, col. 3, under the title Hilchóth genéva ugeléla.

Regarding robbery, by which one takes another's property openly and by force (whereas by theft one takes another's property secretly and without his knowledge), as may be read in the aforementioned Sépher mizvóth gádol at the said fol. 58, col. 3, as well as in the said book Shulchan áruch in the section Chóschén hammíschpat, numero 348, §. 3, they can likewise say that it is forbidden by their rabbis; for in the Talmudic tractate Báva kámma, fol. 113, col. 2, it is written: גזול הגוי אסור: that is, It is forbidden to rob a Goi. And in the aforementioned book Shulchan áruch in the section Chóschén hammíschpat, numero 359, §. 1, it is written thus: אסור לגזול או לעשוק אפילו כל שהוא בין מגוי מיראלי: that is, It is forbidden to rob, or to obtain by injustice (or by cunning or force), even the least thing from either an Israelite or a Goi. And this is also to be found in the aforementioned Sepher mizvóth gádol, fol. 58, col. 4, under the title Hilchóth genéva ugefélla, as well as in the book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 22, col. 1, in the first chapter, numero 2, under the title Hilchóth gesélavaavéda. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, it is likewise taught at fol. 150, col. 1, in the Parascha Behár Sinái: גזל השם: that is, It is forbidden to rob a Goi, because the name of God is thereby profaned. And shortly thereafter it follows: מצינו בתוספתא: דבבא קמא הגזול את הגוי חייב להחזיר חמור גזל הגוי מגזל ישראל מפני חילול השם: that is, We find in the Tosáphta on (the Talmudic tractate) Báva kámma: Whoever robs a Goi is obligated to return the stolen goods to him; and the robbery of a Goi is a graver sin than the robbery of an Israelite, because the name of God is thereby profaned. On this matter, the book Cad hakkémach, fol. 15, col. 3, may also be consulted.

Beyond this, they can also say that their rabbis forbid buying anything from a thief or robber, for in the book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 17, col. 2, in the 5th chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchóth genéva, the following is written: אסור לקנות מן הגנב החפץ שגנב ועון גדול הוא שהרי מחזיק ידי עוברי עבירה וגורם לו לגנוב גניבות אחרות שאם לא ימצא לוקח אינו גונב ועל זה נאמר חולק עם גנב: that is, it is forbidden to buy from a thief anything that he has stolen, and it is a great sin, for he strengthens the hands of transgressors and gives the thief cause to steal yet other things; since if he finds no buyer, he does not steal; and of such a one (buyer) it is said (Prov 29:24): Whoever shares with a thief is his own enemy. And in the following fol. 18, col. 2, in the 6th chapter, numero 1, under the aforementioned title, one reads: כל דבר שחזקתו: שהוא גנוב אסור ליקח אותו: that is, it is forbidden to buy anything that is presumed to be stolen. Exactly the same is also to be found in the frequently mentioned book Shulchan áruch, in the part Chóschen hammíschat, numero 356, §. 1. Furthermore, in the said book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 26, col. 1, in the 5th chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchóth geséla vaavéda, one reads: הגזול מן הגזולן אסור לקנות דבר הגזול מן הגזולן that is, it is forbidden to buy stolen goods from a robber. This is also to be seen in the aforecited book Shulchan áruch, in the part Chóschen hammíschat, numero 369, §. 1. This is what the Jews can put forward in their defense in answer to the second question.

In response to this, I give the following answer: although stealing and robbery are forbidden in many places by the rabbis, as shown by their cited statements, which is also to be commended, there are nevertheless also to be found, on the other hand, such teachings and examples in their books that contradict the cited good teaching and can bring the Jews into the erroneous opinion that it is permitted to steal from a Christian and to take what is his. For in the Talmudic tractate Báva kámma, fol. 37, col. 2, it is written thus: שור של ישראל שנגח לשור של נכרי ושל נכרי פטור ושל נכרי שנגח לשור של ישראל בין תם בין מועד משלם נזק : that is, when an Israelite's ox gores a stranger's (namely, a Goi's) ox (and causes damage to it), the Israelite is free (and pays the Goi nothing for the damage). But when a stranger's ox gores an Israelite's ox (and thereby causes damage), whether that ox had not previously been known to gore or had been known to gore, he must pay him the full damages. Concerning this, the following reason is given in the subsequent fol. 38, col. 1: אמר רבי אבהו אמרו : קרא עמד וימודד חמדי ארץ ראה ויתר גוים ראה ז' מצוות שקבלו עליהם בני נח כיון שלא שנגח לשור של נכרי שנגח לשור של ישראל שנגח לשור של נכרי פטור : that is, Rabbi Abbu said: the Scripture says (Hab 3:6), He stood and measured the earth, and looked, and permitted (as it is here incorrectly understood, whereas it actually means: scattered) the heathen. He looked upon the seven commandments which the children of Noah had taken upon themselves (to observe); but because they did not keep them, He arose and permitted their goods to the Israelites. Shortly thereafter, the following continues in the same place: תנו רבנן וכבר שלחה מלכות הרשעה שני פדיוטות אצל חכמי ישראל למדונו תורתכם קראו ושנו ושלשו בשעת פטירתן אמרו להם דקדקנו בכל תורתכם ואמרת הוא חוץ מדבר זה שאתם אומרים שור של ישראל שנגח לשור של נכרי פטור : 'ושל נכרי שנגח לשור של ישראל בין תם בין מועד משלם נזק : that is, our rabbis teach that the godless (understand: the Roman) empire once sent two executioners to the sages of Israel, (who said to them:) teach us your law; (and the sages of Israel complied with them and taught them,) and they read through it three times in its entirety. When they then lay on their deathbeds, they said to the sages of Israel: we have gone through your entire law carefully (and examined it) and found it to be true (and right), except in this matter, which you state: when an Israelite's ox gores a stranger's ox, the Israelite is free; but when a stranger's ox gores an Israelite's ox, whether that ox had not previously been known to gore or had been known to gore, he must pay him the full damages, etc. Concerning this, Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary as follows: לא גלו להם טעמו של דבר שיהא ממונו של גוי בחזקת הפקר : that is, they (the sages of Israel) did not reveal to them the reason for the matter on account of the danger, namely, that a Goi's goods are to be regarded as hefker, that is, free (which everyone is permitted to take).

It is thus to be seen from this that, according to this Talmudic teaching, all the goods of the Gojim are free for the Jews to take, and they may seize them, because God has permitted them to do so. Although in the book Beér haggóla fol. 24, col. 2. this is meant to be understood only with respect to the ox; yet, as will be seen in what follows, it is understood to apply to all goods. For Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon expounds the word hefker in the fourth part of his book Jad chafáka, fol. 96, col. 1., in the 1st chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchoth sechía umattána, as follows: הפקר כל המחזיק בו זכה וכן המדברות והנהרות : that is, whoever seizes that which is hefker, that is, free and permitted, possesses it (and has a right to it.) Thus it is also with the wildernesses, and the rivers, and the streams, and all that is in them, that they are hefker or free, and whoever comes first possesses them by right. So too it was shown above in the 5th chapter of this second part, paginâ 200, from Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 132, col. 1, and from Vajikra rabba fol. 146, col. 1. 2, as well as from the Sépher ikkarím of Rabbi Joseph Albo, that power and authority over the property and blood of all peoples has been given to the Jews by God; which can also be read twice in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Prophet Habacuc fol. 83, col. 3. numeró 536. Now if they believe this, they may boldly steal from the Christians what belongs to them, provided only that they can arrange matters so as not to endanger their own lives.

For this reason, too, the aforementioned thieves, the Talmudic teachers Samuel, Raf Cabana, and Rabbena, as has been shown from Tractate Báva kámma fol. 113, col. 2., undoubtedly committed the said theft; where the following is also read immediately thereafter concerning Raf Aschi: הוה רב אשי באורחא חזא שיבשא דגופנא בפרדיסא ותלו בה קוטופי דענבי אמר ליה לשמעיה זיל חזי אי דגוי נינהו אייתי אי דישראל נינהו לא אייתי לי שמעיה הוא גוי דהוא יתיב בפרדיסא : That is: Raf Aschi was traveling on a road and saw a vine of a grapevine in a garden, on which clusters of grapes were hanging; he said to his servant: go and see, if they belong to a Goi, bring them to me, but if they belong to an Israelite, do not bring them to me. A Goi who was sitting in the garden heard this and said to him: is it then permitted to take that which belongs to a Goi? To which Raf Aschi answered him: a Goi takes money for it (and lets them pay him), but an Israelite takes no money for it. Thus this Raf Aschi must also have been of the opinion that it is freely permitted for a Jew to take and steal that which belongs to a Goi, just as the aforementioned rabbi, the father-in-law of the convert Dieterich Schwaben, was likewise steeped in such godless delusion, in that he stole a silver scabbard of 30 Loth from a Christian, and even boasted of it, and also cheated that same Christian's wife in exchanging gold in such a wanton and thieving manner.

Furthermore, in the Sépher chasidim, número 198, it is written that a rabbi permitted a certain person who had converted from the Jewish faith to the Christian religion, and who offered to return to the Jewish religion, to steal from certain Christians, and the words read as follows: אחד שהמיר לי ורצונו לימים שאל ליהודים לשוב ולהיות יהודי אך אין לי אלא מעט כסף והנכרים מאמינים ליקח מהם הרבה ואחר כך לכרוח עם הכל ולהיות יהודי : השיב לו כיון שרצונך לשוב ולהיות יהודי יהודי אל תגנוב ואל תקח משום אדם אפילו מן הנכרים. ואמר חכם אחר כיון שלא המיר אלא בשביל שלא היה לו האות נפשו מוטב שיקח מן הנכרי ואחר כך יברח ולא יאכל חזיר ולא יחלל שבתות ואם יתפשוהו וימיתוהו הרי מיתתו כפרה לכל עוונותיו. אמר החכם שלישי דע לכם כי טוב לו שלא הורו לו ולא הגדו לו מה לעשות כי אם נגרום להרע הוא מיד יגיד לנכרים שהיהודים נתנו לו עצה על זה ויבאו לידי סכנה לכך אל תדברו לו. וכן היה הגיד לנכרים זה : that is to say: (One who had recently apostatized asked the Jews how he should go about returning to them and becoming a Jew again, and said to them: I have only a little money, but the Nochrim, or foreigners, that is, the Christians, trust me; therefore I intend to take a great deal from them, and then to abscond with all of it and become a Jew again. Thereupon one of the wise rabbis answered him: since you are minded to convert back and become a Jew, do not steal, and do not take anything from any person, not even from the foreigners. At this, another wise man, that is, a rabbi, spoke up: since he apostatized only because he did not have what he desired, it is better that he take something from a nochri, or foreigner, and then flee, than that he eat pork and desecrate the Sabbath; and if they catch him and put him to death, then his death is an atonement for his sins. Then the third wise man said: know that it is better for him that you do not instruct him and do not show him what to do, for if we are the cause of his doing evil, he will immediately make it known to the foreigners, namely the Christians, that the Jews gave him counsel to do so, and they will be brought into danger; therefore say nothing to him. And so it came to pass, for he did inform the foreigners, and the foreigners very nearly killed them, and the Jews were compelled to pay a great deal of money on account of it.) From this we can see that the second rabbi permitted the taking of money from Christians and defrauding them of it; and he will without doubt also have been of the opinion that it is permitted for Jews to deceive and steal from Christians. That the third rabbi did not agree with this is without doubt due more to fear than to any good intention.

Regarding robbery: although it is, as has been reported, forbidden, it is nevertheless also permitted according to the statements of some Talmudic teachers, for in the Talmudic tractate Bava mezia fol. 111, col. 2. one reads: גזול הגוי מותר, that is, the robbery of a Goi is permitted, and this is proven there from the fact that Lev 19:13 says: "You shall not wrong your neighbor, nor rob him," and it is noted that this means גוי רעך ולא גוי, "your neighbor, and not the Goi," you shall not rob; as this can also be found in the aforementioned tractate Báva mezía fol. 61, col. 1. in the Tosephóth, nearly at the end. And in the tractate Bákamma, at fol. 113, col. 2 at the beginning in the Tosephóth, concerning the words of Lev 25:50, "He shall reckon with his buyer," from which others wish to prove that it is forbidden to rob a Goi, it is written as follows: הנני תנאי דפרק המקבל דסברי דגזול הגוי מותר מוקמי להאי קרא לדרשא אחריתי, That is: those Doctores of the Mishnah who are mentioned in the chapter Hammekábbél (that is, in the 9th chapter of the tractate Báva mezía fol. 111, col. 2.) and who are of the opinion that the robbery of a Goi is permitted, interpret this passage differently. Rabbi Bechai, however, teaches in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 198, col. 1 in the Parasha Ekef, on the words of Deut 7:16, "You shall devour all the peoples which the Lord your God shall give you," that robbery is indeed forbidden to them at the present time, when he writes as follows: דרשו רז"ל בזמן שמסורין בידך מכאן למדנו, שגזול הגוי אסור בזמן הזה, That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have interpreted this (that the devouring, that is, the robbery of all peoples, is only permitted) at the time when they are delivered into your power. From this we learn that the robbery of a Goi is forbidden in this present time. And he has taken this from the Talmudic tractate Bákamma fol. 113, col. 2., where it is also found. If, therefore, the Jews at the present time had power over us, as they imagine they will have it in the time of the Messiah, they would certainly rob us of everything; and there is nothing that holds them back from doing so except their powerlessness and the great danger that would arise for them from it.

Although it was mentioned in the preceding section, from the book Shulchan aruch, part Chóschén hammíschpat, numero 359, §. 1., as well as from the book Jad chazáka, fol. 22, col. 1., in the fourth part, that it is forbidden to wrong a Goi through deceit or force, or to deprive him of what is his, nevertheless in the Talmudic tractate Báva mezía, fol. 111, col. 2., at the beginning, concerning the words of Deut 24:14, "You shall not oppress the day laborer who is in need and poor, from among your brothers" (or: wrong him through deceit or force), the following is taught: פרט לאחרים, that is, "The others are excluded." Who, however, is to be understood by "the others" is indicated by Rabbi Solomon Jarchi in his commentary thereon, when he states that by this are meant the אומות העולם, ummóth (or úmmos) haólam, that is, the peoples of the world, namely all those who are not Jews. The like is also to be found in the Tosephóth thereon, where it is taught that the words "from among your brothers," as they stand in Scripture, are there למעוטי נכרי, that is, to exclude the foreigner (namely, the one who is outside of Judaism). In the book Jad chasaka, likewise, in the fourth part, fol. 22, col. 1., in the commentary Késef mischneh, on the above-cited words of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon in chapter 1, numero 2, that it is forbidden to wrong a Cuthean or Goi through deceit or force, the following is written: ויש לתמוה על זה שכתב שאסור לעשוק דהא קרא לא תעשוק את רעך כתיב ומשמע כותי וגו' ולא כתב, that is, "It is a matter of wonder that he (namely, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon) writes that it is forbidden to wrong him (the Goi) through deceit or force, since it is indeed written (Lev 19:13): 'You shall not wrong your neighbor,' which teaches that the Cuthean (or Goi) is excluded, etc." He did not, however, write that one thereby transgresses a prohibitory commandment (when one wrongs a Goi through deceit or force), in order to indicate thereby that this is not forbidden in the Law of Moses. Thus also in the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 57, col. 1., in the Tosephóth, one reads: בני נה מותר דלא תעשוק את רעך כתיב ולא גוי, that is, "An Israelite is permitted to wrong a Goi, since it is written: 'You shall not wrong your neighbor,' and the Goi is not mentioned." We see, therefore, from all of this that, although it is forbidden by some rabbis for Jews to steal from and rob a Christian, it is nevertheless permitted again by others on the contrary; and since both teachings are, as noted above, supposed to be the word of God, anyone who, for the sake of his shameful profit, prefers the evil teaching that stealing and robbing is permitted over the other, good teaching, may content himself in his theft with the assurance that he does nothing other than what the word of God allows him.

That such vices must also be rampant among the Jews is evident from a prayer found in all their Machsoren, under the title Schácharith schel jom kippur, specifically in the first part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 104, col. 1, which is prayed by them on the Day of Atonement and begins as follows: אשמונו בגדנו גזלנו דברנו דופי העיינו וגו' That is: We have incurred guilt, we have acted treacherously, we have robbed, we have spoken slander, we have done wrong, etc. Here they themselves confess every year on their long day, or Day of Atonement, on which they are, according to their own belief, absolved of all sins, as has been demonstrated above in the 4th chapter of this second part, that they have robbed; and one cannot have a better witness against them than their own confession.

Since theft is being discussed here, I also want to show in what manner a Jew who steals something from a Jew, and a Gentile or Christian who steals something from a Jew, ought to be punished according to Jewish teaching. Regarding the punishment for theft and robbery that a Jew commits against another Jew, the book Emek hammelech fol. 20, col. 4., in the 12th chapter, under the title Schaár tikkúne hatterchúva, teaches the following: הגנב או הגזול ממון מישראל וגו' תקוני להתענות ע' צומות וגו' ולכל הפחות יתענה מ' יום וילקה על לאו שעבר ויש לו לפרוע לו או ליורשיו כל מה שגנב או גזל ויותר ממנו יתן לו כי הפסידו מן הריחה ויבקש ממנו מחילה ויתודה בכל יום ויזהר מלקבל פקדונות ולא ירגיל ללכת על ממון חבירו ויתרחק מממון שאינו שלו ויתן צדקות יותר משאר בני אדם ויעשה גמילות חסדים : that is, whoever steals money or goods from an Israelite, etc., must, in order to be restored to righteousness, fast seventy times, etc.; at the very least, however, he shall fast forty days and be beaten on account of the prohibitory commandment that he has transgressed; and he shall pay back to that person (from whom he stole) or to his heirs everything he stole or robbed, and shall give him more than that same amount, because he caused him loss of profit; and he shall beg his forgiveness and confess (his sin) every day, and take care not to accept any goods that someone wishes to entrust to his keeping; likewise not to make a habit of dealing with his neighbor's property, but rather to abstain from goods that are not his own, and to give more alms than other people, and also to show mercy with his body and his goods, etc. Concerning the theft, however, that a Jew commits against a Christian, nothing whatsoever is mentioned here, and perhaps for the reason that it was not considered a sin by the author of the book, Rabbi Naphtali. As for what punishment is to be inflicted upon a Gentile who steals something from a Jew, the Talmudic tractate Jevammóth fol. 47, col. 2. teaches the following: בן נח : that is, a child of Noah (that is, one who is not a Jew) is put to death for less than a penny's worth (that he has stolen). And this is also to be read in the tractate Avóda sára fol. 71, col. 2., where the following is read in the Tosephóth on that passage: בן נח מצווה על הגזל ואזהרתן זו מיתתו : that is, a child of Noah is forbidden to rob, and they are warned against it in no other way than by being put to death.

Regarding the commandment in Exod 20:15, "You shall not steal," the Jews interpret it as referring to the stealing of persons, meaning that one shall not steal any human being, as is indicated in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 86, col. 1, with these words: תנו רבנן לא תגנוב בגונב הכתוב מדבר וגו' לא : that is, our Rabbis teach that Scripture, through the words "You shall not steal," speaks of a kidnapper, etc. (But through the words of Lev 19:11,) "You shall not steal," it makes mention of one who steals money and property. Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon also writes in his Sepher mizvóth fol. 105, col. 2, under the title Mizvóth lo táafeh: מצוה רמ"ג הזהיר שלא : לגנוב איש מישראל והוא אמרו בעשרת הדברות לא תגנוב that is, in the 243rd commandment we are warned that we shall not steal any person from among the Israelites, and this is what is said in the Ten Commandments: "You shall not steal." This commandment is thus likewise understood by the Jews only in such a way as if it were permitted to steal someone who is not a Jew. One may also consult the book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, in the 9th chapter, number 1, under the title Hilchóth genéva, as well as Rabbi Salomon Jarchi's commentary on Lev 19:11.

Regarding the third question, namely whether it is permitted for Jews to keep that which a Christian loses and they find: the Jews can answer that this is forbidden to them, since in Sepher chasidim numero 358 it is written as follows: נכרי הוריו בישבע מצות שנצטוו לבני נח הזהר בטעותו שטעותו אסור ותשיב לו : אבידה ואל תזוללוהו אלא תכבדהו יותר מישראל שאינו עוסק בתורה that is, guard yourself against the error of a foreigner who is diligent in observing the seven commandments that were enjoined upon the children of Noah (so that you do not deceive him in that wherein he makes a mistake in his reckoning), for such an error is forbidden. You shall also return to him what he has lost, and not despise him, but honor him more than an Israelite who does not study the Law. To this, however, I give the answer that this cannot be understood as referring to Christians, because the Jews hold them all together to be idolatrous people, as has been demonstrated in the 16th chapter of the first part, and idolatry is forbidden under the seven commandments of the children of Noah; accordingly, no Jew is obligated to return to a Christian what he has lost.

But the rabbis do indeed teach that it is permitted to keep whatever a Goi loses, concerning which one reads in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 150, col. 1., in the Parascha Behár Sinái, as follows: אבירתו : מותרת שנאמר לכל אבידת אחיך ולא גוי that is, his (namely the Goi's) lost property is permitted (to keep), because it is said (Deut 22:3): with everything lost that your brother loses (but not what a Goi loses). And at fol. 212, col. 1., in the Parascha Kitéze, the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai writes further on this subject concerning the words of Deut 22:3, as follows: אין מצוה זו של השבת אבידה אלא בישראל אבל לא בגוי והוא שאמרו ר"ז לכל אברת אחיך ולא גוי לפי שהגוי אינו חלק ה' אבל הוא חלק אלהי נכר הארץ ואבדתו היא אבדה שאינה נמצאת בארץ החיים. ולא תחזור לבעליה לעולם שאין המעלה הזאת בשאר העמים כי אם בישראל לבד שהם בהבטחת יחיו that is, this commandment concerning the return of lost property is to be observed only toward an Israelite, but not toward a Goi; and this is what our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: with everything lost that your brother loses, but not what a Goi loses; for a Goi is not God's portion, but rather he is the portion of the foreign gods of the earth, and that which he loses is a lost thing that is not found upon the earth of the living and shall never return to its owner, inasmuch as this excellence belongs not to the other peoples but only to the Israelites, according to the promise (of the words of Isa 26:19): your dead shall live, etc. This teaching, however, is taken from the Talmudic Tractate Bava kamma fol. 113, col. 2., where the following is read: מנין לאבידת הגוי שהיא מותרת שנאמר לכל אבדת אחיך לאחרך אתה מחזיר ואי אתה מחזיר לגוי that is, from where is it proven that it is permitted to keep what a Goi loses? Because it is said (Deut 22:3): with everything lost that your brother loses. To your brother you shall return it, but to a Goi you shall not return it.

But this is still not enough: the rabbis not only permit keeping a Goi or Christian's lost property, but they also teach that it is forbidden to return it; indeed, they consider it a sin to restore lost property to a Goi or Christian. That it is forbidden among them is evident from the book of Rabbi Mosche Mikközi, Sepher mizvóth gadól, in which he writes at fol. 132, col. 3 under the title Hilchóth haschávath avedá as follows: מצות עשה להשיב אבידה לישראל שנאמר השב תשיבם לאחרך. ודרשינן במסכת עבודה זרה פרק שני לכל אבידת אחיך לרבות המשומד הילכך אפילו היה הבעל אבירה רשע ואוכל נבילות לתיאבון וכיוצא בו מצוה להשיב לו אבידתו. אבל אוכל נבילות להכעיס הרי הוא מין והמינין והאפיקורוסין ועובדי עבודה זרה ומחללי שבתות בפרהסיא אסור להחזיר להם אבידה, That is: It is a positive commandment to return lost property to an Israelite, for it is said (Deut 22:1): You shall return it to your brother. We also interpret the words (Deut 22:3), with every lost thing of your brother's that he loses, in the Tractate Avoda sara in the second chapter (fol. 26, col. 2) to mean that even a Meschúmmad (that is, one who has apostatized from the Jewish faith) is included in this commandment. Therefore, even if the person who has lost something is a wicked man who eats carrion out of appetite, or does the like, it is nonetheless commanded to return the lost property to him. But one who eats carrion in order to provoke someone is a heretic; and to heretics, and to Epicureans, and to idolaters, as well as to those who publicly desecrate the Sabbath, it is forbidden to return lost property. This is also to be found in the book Col bo, fol. 93, col. 2, numero 83, under the title Din haschávath avéda, and in the book Shulchan áruch in the section Chóschén hammischpat numero 266. Likewise it is taught in the Talmud at fol. 88, col. 4 of the Tractate Jóma, in the Piske Tósephoth, numero 62: אסור להחזיר אבידה לגוי, That is: It is forbidden to return lost property to a Goi.

That it is considered a sin to return lost property to a Christian is taught by Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon in his book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 31, col. 1, in the 11th chapter, numero 3, under the title Hilchoth geséla vaavéda, in these words: עבירה מפני שהוא מחזק ידי רשעי עולם. ואם החזירה לקדש את השם כדי שיפארו את ישראל וידעו שהם בעלי אמונה הרי זה משובה. ובמקום שיש חילול השם אבירתו אסורה וחייב להחזירה : that is, the lost property of an idolatrous Gentile is permitted (to be kept), because it is said (Deut 22:3): "With all that is lost of your brother's"; and he who returns it to him commits a sin, inasmuch as he strengthens the hands of the wicked of the world. But if he returns it to him for the purpose that the name of GOD be sanctified and Israel be praised, so that the Gentiles may know that the Israelites are honest people, then he is worthy of praise. In that place also where the name of God is profaned (by keeping the lost property), it is forbidden to keep the lost property of a Gentile, and one is obligated to return it. On this matter, the book Shulchan áruch in the section Chóschén hammischpat, numero 266, may also be consulted. In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 76, col. 2, the following is also written concerning this matter: המשיא את בתו לזקן והמשיא אשה לבנו קטן והמחזיר אבידה לגוי עליו הכתוב : that is, he who gives his daughter in marriage to an old man, and gives a wife to his underage son, and returns lost property to a Gentile, of such a one Scripture says (Deut 29:19-20): "So that I add the drunken to the thirsty (and join her with it). The Lord will not forgive him." Rabbi Salomon Jarchi expounds this in his commentary thereon as follows, saying: המחזיר אבידה לגוי הישוה וחבי גוי לישראל ומראה בעצמו שהשבת אבידה אינה מצוה לוראו שאף לגוים הוא עושה כן שלא נצטווה עליהם. רוח אומות שבעין שאינם צמאין ליוצרים. צמאה זו כנסת ישראל שצמאה למצוה והאיבה ליראת יוצרה : that is, he who returns lost property to a Gentile treats him as equal to an Israelite and associates him with him, and thereby shows by his own conduct that he does not regard the returning of lost property as a commandment of his Creator, since he does it even for Gentiles, though he was not commanded to do so on their account. By "the drunken" are understood the seventy nations, who do not thirst after their Creator. But "the thirsty" signifies the Israelite community, which thirsts and longs for the fear of its Creator and the keeping of His commandments.

The chicken-carrier to whom Rabbi Channina, the son of Dosa, gave goats in exchange for the lost chickens was therefore perhaps a Jew, of whom the following is read in the Talmudic tractate Taanith fol. 25, col. 1: רבי חנינא בן דוסא הוה להו הנך עיזי אמרו ליה קא מפסדן אמר אי קא מפסדן ניכלינהו דובי ואי לא כ"ל הדא ותדא תיתי לאורתא דובא בקרנייהו ואייתו כל חדא וחדא דובא בקרנייהו ונו : זרבי חנינא בן דוסא מהיכן הוה ליה עזים והא עני הוה ועוד אמרו חכמים אין מגדלין בהמה דקה בארץ ישראל. אמר רב פנחס מעשה ועבר אדם אחד על פתח ביתו והניח שם תרנגולין ומצאן אשתו של רבי חנינא בן דוסא ואמר לה אל תאכלי מביציהן והרבו ביצים והתרנגולים והיו מצערין אותם ומכרן וקנר. בדמיהן עזים פעם אחרת עבר אותו אדם שאכלו ממנו התרנגולין ואמר להחבירו בכאן הנחתי התרנגולין שלי שמע רבי חנינא אמר לו יש לך בהן סימן אמר לו הן נתן that is, Rabbi Channina, the son of Dosa, had goats; then the people said to him that they were causing damage, and he said: if they are causing damage, then let the bears devour them; but if not, then let each one bring a bear on its horns by evening. And in the evening, each one brought a bear on its horns, etc. But where had Rabbi Channina, the son of Dosa, gotten the goats? For he was a poor man; and moreover the Sages had said that one should not raise small livestock in the land of Israel. Rabbi Pinchas said that it came to pass that a man walked past the door of Rabbi Channina's house and left his chickens standing there, and he told his wife that she should not eat from their eggs. After they had then obtained many eggs and chickens, and the chickens had plagued them, he sold them and bought goats with the money obtained from the sale. But when the man who had lost the chickens once passed by and said to his companion that he had left his chickens here, Rabbi Channina heard this and said to him: can you give a sign that they were yours? And he answered yes, and gave him the sign, and took the goats away; and these goats were the very ones that had brought the bears on their horns. This Rabbi must have been very conscientious, in that he returned the lost chickens to the chicken-carrier with such good profit and kept nothing for himself.

That in a place where the name of God is profaned through the retention of lost property, a Goi's lost item ought to be returned to him: this is also found in the Sepher mizvóth gádol of Rabbi Mosche Mikkózi, fol. 132, col. 4., under the title Hilchóth hascháyath avéda, in these words: פנחס בן יאיר אומר במקום שיש חילול השם חייב להחזיר אבידת גוי עובד עבודה זרה כאבידת ישראל That is: In the latter chapter, which begins Haggósel (that is, in the 10th chapter of the Talmudic tractate Báva Kámma fol. 113, col. 2.), it is taught: Rabbi Pinchas ben Jair says, in a place where the name of God is profaned, one is obligated to return a Goi's lost item to him, just as one returns it to an Israelite. On this matter, the book Shulchan áruch in the section Chóschén hammischpat, numero 266., as likewise the book Col bo, numero 83., may also be consulted. But in the Sepher mescharím of Rabbi Jerúcham, it is written to the contrary at fol. 51, col. 4, under the title Nathibh éscrim, chélek schéni, as follows: משכנו של ישראל ביד גוי שהלה לו עליו הגוי המעות ונאבד מן הגוי ומצאו ישראל חזירו לראשון ואינו יכול להחזירו לגוי כי כיון שנפל מן הגוי פקע שיעבודו מאחר שמצאו ישראל ואם יבא לומר המוצא אני רוצה להחזירו משום קדושת השם יאמר לו האחר אם תרצה ישראל That is: When a Goi has an Israelite's pledge in his possession, upon which the Goi has lent him money, and the Goi loses it, and an Israelite finds it, then he shall return it to the first party, and he may not restore it to the Goi; for once it has fallen from the Goi's possession, the obligation or security is at an end, since an Israelite has found it. But if the one who found it should come forward and say he wishes to return it to the Goi for the sake of the sanctification of the name of God, then the other shall say to him: if you wish to sanctify the name of God, do so with what belongs to you.

What finally concerns the fourth question, whether Rabbinical teachings and law permit the Jews to take usury from Christians: it is to be known that usury in the Hebrew language is called נשך néschēch, which word derives from נשך Naschách, meaning to bite, and Rabbi David Kimchi writes about this in his Sepher Scharaschím, under the root word Naschách, as follows: לפי שהריבית הוא נשך, that is, because usury bites a person, as it were, it is called néschēch. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 213, col. 4, in the Parascha Ki téze, the following is also read on this subject: נקרא הרבית נשך מלשון אם ישוך הנחש להורות כי כשם שהנחש נושך נכנס סן הנושך אל נשך, that is, usury is called néschēch (from naschách, that is, to bite), as it is said in Eccl 10:11: Im jischóch bannáchasch, that is, when a serpent bites, in order to teach that just as the venom of a biting serpent enters the limbs and nerves of the one bitten, so too does the punishment of the prohibition enter into the property of the one who lends at usury. But Rabbi Salomon reports the following on this subject in his commentary on Exod 22:19: נשך הוא כנשיכת נחש שנושך חבורה קטנה ברגלו ואינו מרגיש ופתאום הוא מבעט ונופח עד קדקדו כך רבית אינו מרגיש ואינו ניכר עד שהרבית עולה ומחסרו ממון הרבה, that is, usury is like the bite of a serpent, which bites a small wound into the foot of a person so that he does not feel it, yet it quickly causes a burning swelling that rises all the way to the crown of his head; in the same way, a person does not feel usury either, and it goes unnoticed until it rises and multiplies and diminishes his great wealth. And Rabbi Salomon took this from Schemóth rábba, fol. 121, col. 2, from the 31st Parascha. Beyond this, usury is also called רבית ribbith, or ríbbis, and תרביט tarbith, or tárbis, both of which words derive from רבה rabba, meaning to be multiplied and to increase, because the means and goods of the usurer are multiplied and increased through usury.

Since usury deprives one's neighbor of his means through shameful practice and thereby brings him to ruin, it is regarded in certain books as a very great sin. For in the little book Máase Thóra of Rabbi Hakkadósch, which is printed in Amsterdam after the little book Ben Sira, in the 7th chapter, fol. 40, col. 1. 2., it is written as follows: שבעה אין להם חלק לעולם הבא. המזכיר את השם בכל עת

ובכל מקום. והמקטיר לע"ז והקורע בגדיו בחמתו. והלווחש על המכה. ומזכיר עליו את השם. That is: There are seven who have no share in the life to come (eternal life): he who mentions the name of God at all times and in all places; and he who burns incense to an idol; and he who tears his garments in his anger; and he who speaks a blessing over a wound and thereby invokes the name of God over it; and he who lends his money at usury; and likewise he who stirs up strife among brothers. And in the book Shulchan aruch, in the part Jóre déa, numerô 160, §. 2, one reads: נכסיו נכסיו That is: Everyone who lends (his money) at usury, his goods crumble away (and diminish), and he does as much as if he denied the exodus from Egypt and the God of Israel. And this is taken from the Talmudic tractate Báva mezia, fol. 71, col. 1. In the book Schémoth rábba, fol. 121, col. 1, in the 31st Parascha, it is likewise taught: לעתיד לבא כשיפתח הקב"ה לצדיקים אוצרות גן עדן הרשעים שאכלו נשך ותרבית עתידין להיות נושכין בשיניהם את בשרם שנ' הכסיל חובק את ידיו ואוכל את בשרו והם אומרים ולואי היינו פועלים 'והיינו טוענים בכתפינו ולואי שהיינו עבדים וגו' That is: When the holy blessed God shall in the future open the treasures of paradise to the righteous, the wicked who have consumed usury and interest shall bite their own flesh with their teeth, as it is said (Eccl 4:5): The fool folds his hands together and eats his own flesh; and they shall say: Would to God we had labored and borne burdens upon our shoulders; would to God we had been servants, etc. So it is taught in Schémoth rábba, fol. 121, col. 3, in the 31st Parascha: עכ"ם המרבה הון בנשך וגו' That is: Whoever increases his wealth through usury is an idolater; and the wicked lend at usury and gain. Upon this there follows in the same place, in the fourth column, the following: כל מי שנוטל רבית מעלה עליו הכתוב כאלו עשה את כל הרעות והעברות שבעולם שנאמר בנשך נתן ותרבית לקח והקב"ה אומר עד עכשיו הוא חי וחי לא יחיה את כל התועבות האלה עשה מות ימות 'דמיו בו יהיה. אבל מי שהוא מלוה בלא רבית מעלה עליו הקב"ה כאלו עשה כל המצות שנ' כספו לא נתן בנשך That is: Everyone who takes usury is regarded by Scripture as though he had committed all the evils and all the sins that exist in the world, as it is said (Ezek 18:13): He gives at usury and takes interest. And the holy blessed God says: Does such a one still live until now? Should such a one live? He shall not live, because he has committed all these abominations; he shall surely be put to death: his blood shall be upon him.

Concerning this, it is also found that it is not only forbidden for them to take usury from one another, but also that they do right and well when they take no usury from Christians and other peoples. That no Jew should take usury from another is to be seen from the aforementioned 31st Parascha, in Schemóth rábba fol. 122, col. 1., where, concerning the words of Exod 22:25, "If you lend money to my people, to the poor among you, you shall not deal with him as a creditor," the following is written: ברבית כל מי שהוא מלוה ברבית כל העבירות שבתורה ואינו מוצא מי שילמד עליו זכות כיצד אדם שחטא אחת מכל העבירות ועומד לפני הק"ה בדין המלאכים עומדין אלו מלמדים זכות ואלו מלמדים חובה שנאמר ראיתי את י"י יושב על כסאו וכל צבא השמים עומדים עליו מימינו ומשמאלו. אבל מי שמלוה לישראל ברבית אין אחד מהם מלמד לו זכות שנאמר בנשך נתן ותרבית לקח וחי לא יחיה. וכל אדם מישראל שמלוה לחבירו ואינו נוטל רבית כאלו קיים כל המצוות שכן דוד אומר י"י מי יגור That is: Come and see, every one who lends at usury commits all the sins that are contained in the Law, and finds no one who speaks anything in his justification. How so? When a man has committed one of all the sins and stands before the judgment of the holy blessed God, the angels stand there, and some point to something that serves his justification, while others point to something that serves his condemnation, as it is said (1 Kgs 22:19): "I saw the Lord sitting upon His throne, and all the heavenly host standing beside Him, to His right and to His left." But when one lends to an Israelite at usury, there is not a single one among them who speaks anything in his justification, as it is said (Ezek 18:13): "He gives at usury and takes interest. Shall such a one live? He shall not live." But every man among the Israelites who lends to his companion (or fellow man, namely a Jew) and takes no usury does just as much as if he kept all the commandments, for thus speaks David (Ps 15:1): "Lord, who shall dwell in Your tent?" And (v. 5) it is written: "Who does not give his money at usury," etc. Likewise, at fol. 121, col. 4. in the last-mentioned Parascha, the following is read: מי שנוטל רבית That is: Whoever takes usury from an Israelite does not fear God.

In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, the following is also read at fol. 113, col. 4, in the Parascha Ki téze: המלוה לישראל ברבית עובר על מצוה עשה, That is: whoever lends to an Israelite at usury transgresses a positive commandment. Beyond this, the book Emek hammélech, fol. 20, col. 4, in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne hatteschéva, teaches the following: הלוקח ריבית מישראל מחמירין יותר דהא עבר על כמה וכמה לאוין לכך ילקה: ויהודה ויתענה לכל הפחות שנה תמימה ואחר כך יתודה כל ימיו בבכו ובשברון לב ולא יקה רבית אפילו מן הגוי לכל הפחות שנה תמימה בין ריבית קצוצה בין אבק ריבית ואם אפשר לו להתפרנס שלא יקה ריבית כל ימיו אפילו מגוי מה טוב וחלקו, That is: whoever takes usury from an Israelite, it is reckoned against him as a grave sin (as though he had stolen or robbed from him), for he transgresses many prohibitory commandments; therefore he shall be flogged and shall confess (his sin) and fast for at least one full year. Thereafter he shall confess his sin every day of his life with weeping and a broken heart, and shall take no usury, not even from a Goi or Christian, for at least one full year, whether it be fixed and determined usury or incidental usury; and if it is possible for him to sustain himself such that he takes no usury for the days of his life, not even once from a Goi or Christian, then it is well with him.

That the Jews act rightly and well when they take no usury from Christians and other peoples is evident from the Talmudic tractate Maccóth (or Máccos) fol. 24, col. 1., where, concerning the words of Ps 15:1-2 etc., "Lord, who shall dwell in Thy tabernacle? Who shall abide upon Thy holy mountain? He that walketh uprightly and doeth right, etc., he that putteth not out his money to usury," and "He that doeth these things shall never be moved," it is written as follows: גוי כספו לא נתן בנשך אפילו ברבית גוי, that is, "He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh usury even from a Goi." From which it is evident that he who dwells in the tabernacle of God and shall never be moved, that is, shall never be lost but shall partake of eternal blessedness, is he who putteth not out his money to usury either to a Goi or to a Jew; and likewise that all usury is here forbidden, especially since it is said to be driven by the instigation of the Devil, for Rabbi Abraham Seba in his book Zerór hammór, fol. 145, col. 3., in the Párascha Ki téze, writes as follows: אמר לא תשיך לאחריך נשך כסף נשך אוכל וגו' : 'להזהיר על הרבית לפי שיצר הרע משיאו עצה זו בשביל מעותיו שלא יהיו בטלים אצלו לפי שזאת היא עצת נחש הקדמוני הנושך עקב סוס ויפול רוכבו אחר אמר נשך כסף נשך אוכל וגו' That is: (Scripture) says (Deut 23:19), "Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother: usury of money, usury of victuals, etc.," in order to warn against usury, for the jezer harâ, that is, the evil inclination (by which the Devil is to be understood, as was indicated in the 18th chapter of the first part, leads man astray) through such counsel, on account of his money, lest it lie idle with him. Since, then, this is a counsel of the old Serpent, which biteth the horse's heels so that his rider falleth backward, (Scripture) therefore says, "usury of money, or usury of victuals, etc."

When one reads all of this, and did not know from daily experience that the Jews drive unspeakable extortions through abominable usury, one might well fall into the thought that usury must be strictly forbidden among them, and that those who act against it are not observing the teaching of their rabbis. But this is far from the case, for not only is usury permitted among themselves, but also toward Christians and all other peoples; indeed, as far as Christians and the remaining peoples are concerned, it is outright commanded. As regards what concerns the Jews among themselves, it is written in the Talmudic tractate Báva mezía fol. 75, col. 1. as follows: אמר רבי יהודה אמר שמואל תלמידי חכמים מותרים ללוות זה מזה בריבית מאי טעמא מידע ידעי דריבית אסורה ומתנה הוא דיהבי אהדדי. א"ל שמואל לאבות בר איהי הלויני מאה פלפלין במאה ועשרין פלפלין ואריך. אמר רב יהודה אמר רב מותר לו לאדם להלוות בניו ובני ביתו בריבית כדי להטעימן טעם ריבית That is: Rabbi Jebuda reported that Samuel said that it is permitted for the wise (and highly learned rabbis) to lend to one another at usury. What is the reason? Because they know well that usury is forbidden, and that what one gives to another (on account of the loan) is a gift. Samuel said to Aboth bar Ibi: lend me a hundred (pounds) of pepper for a hundred and twenty (pounds), for this is right and proper (inasmuch as those twenty pounds given above the hundred pounds received are not usury, but a gift for the kindness shown through the lending, as an expression of gratitude). Raf Jehuda says that Raf said it is permitted for a man to lend to his children and members of his household at usury, so that they may taste the flavor of usury.

That it is permitted to them to lend at usury to one who is not a Jew is to be seen from the fourth part of the book Jad chasáka fol. 172, col. 1. in the 5th chapter, numero 1, where it is taught as follows: הכותי וגר תושב לוויין מהן ומלווין לא תשיך לאחיך לאחיך אסור ולשאר עולם מותר אותן ברבית שנאמר לא תשיך לאחיך לאחיך אסור ולשאר עולם מותר that is, one borrows from a Cuthean and from a resident alien (that is, a Goi who dwells among us in the land of Israel and has taken upon himself to observe the seven commandments of Noah) and lends to them at usury, as it is said (Deut 23:20): You shall not charge usury to your brother. To your brother it is forbidden, but to the remaining people of the world it is permitted. And in the Piské Tosephóth of the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 77, col. 1. numero 1, the following is read concerning the Gójim: אסור להלוותן דוקא בלא ריבית ובריבית שרי that is, it is forbidden to lend to them simply, without usury, but at usury it is permitted. So too writes Rabbi David Kimchi in his commentary on Ps 15:5, on the words "who does not put out his money at usury," as follows: התורה לא תשיך אסרה אלא לישראל אבל לנכרי תותר כמו שנאמר לנכרי תשיך that is, the Law has only forbidden lending money at usury to an Israelite, but toward a foreigner it is permitted (to practice usury), as it is said (Deut 23:20): From the foreigner you may (or shall) take usury. More examples of this kind could be adduced. And Rabbi Bechai, in his aforementioned commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 113, col. 4, interprets the words cited above from the tractate Maccóth fol. 24, col. 1, to the effect that one should not take usury even from a Goi, in the following manner, and says: מהו שאמרו במסכת מכות כספו לא נתן בנשך אפילו רבית דגוי אין להבין מזה אסור אלא דרך גדר וחומרא היא במי שנוהג באותן המדות והוא גודר עצמו בנדרים וסייגים שיזכה לאותן המעלות הנזכרות באותו מזמור that is, what our rabbis say in the tractate Maccóth: "he who does not put out his money at usury, nor takes usury even from a Goi" is not to be understood from this as a prohibition (as though it were forbidden to take usury from him), but it is done only by way of a fence and a stringency on the part of one who exercises himself in those virtues (which stand in Ps 15), so that he (when he abstains from such usury) encircles himself with vows and fences, in order that he may become a partaker of those excellences which are mentioned in that Psalms. This gross error, however, is to be found thoroughly refuted in Hulsius's Theologia Judaica, pages 422, 423, and 424.

Regarding the words cited shortly before, Deut 23:20, לֹנְכָרִי תִשִּׁיךְ Lenóchrí taschich, the rabbis do not agree with one another in their interpretation of them; for some explain them thus: "You may charge interest to the foreigner," that is, it is permitted to you to do so when you wish, and you are free to do it or to leave it undone. According to others, however, they mean: "You shall charge interest to the foreigner," and they teach that it is a commanding precept, and that they are obligated to take usury from the Gójim, and that they sin when they do not do so, because they act against God's command. This latter opinion is found in the book Pesikta rabbetha, fol. 80, col. 4, in the Parascha Téze, where it is written: לֹנְכָרִי תִשִּׁיךְ מִצְוַת עֲשֵׂה, that is, the words Lenóchrí taschich are a commanding precept, meaning: "You shall charge interest to the foreigner." And this is also found in the book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 172, col. 1, in the 5th chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchoth malvéh velovéh. It is likewise maintained by Rabbi Levi ben Gerson in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 234, col. 1, in the Parascha Téze, with these words: לֹנְכָרִי תִשִּׁיךְ הִיא מִצְוַת עֲשֵׂה מִפְּנֵי שֶׁהוּא עוֹבֵד עֲבוֹדַת זָרָה חֵיִיבָה לוֹ מִהֲזֹק כְּדִי שֶׁאִפְשֵׁר שֶׁלֹא אוֹתֵנוּ הַתּוֹרָה לִהְיוֹת לוֹ בְּרִבִּית בְּשִׁיחָרָה לִלְוֹת מִמֶּנּוּ לְגֵרוֹם לוֹ מִהֲזֹק כְּדִי שֶׁאִפְשֵׁר שֶׁלֹא תִהְיֶה בּוֹ נִטְיָה כִּהְיוֹשֵׁר וְלֹא יִצּוֹר גַּם כֵּן בְּמָה שֶׁקֹּדֶם לְנַחֵשׁ הַנִּכְרִי וְרֹאִי שֶׁיִּחְבָּאֵר שְׁאִין הַכּוֹנֵה בּוֹ, בִּזְוֵה לְנִכְרִי הַנוֹכֵחַ לְהִשָּׁיךְ שֶׁאִם הִיא הֵעֲנִין כֵּן הִידִי 'הִיא הַמֵּאֲמֵר מוֹתֵר וְגוֹ' That is: the words Lenóchrí taschich are a commanding precept, meaning: "You shall charge interest to the foreigner." Because he practices idolatry, the Law has imposed upon us the obligation to lend to him at interest when he wishes to borrow from us, so that we may cause him every possible harm, whereby we do no wrong. For this reason Scripture has also commanded us in what precedes (namely Deut 15:3) to exact payment from the foreigner (and to torment and afflict him with the enforcement of the debt). And this must be interpreted in such a way that the purpose therein is not: "You may charge interest to the foreigner"; for if that were the meaning, these words would indicate only that it is permitted, etc.

Rabbi Moses bar Maimon likewise agrees with this, in his Sepher mizvóth fol. 73, col. 4. under the title Mizváth aséh, when he writes: מִצְוַת קצ"ח הִיא שְׂוִיָּה לְבִקֵּשׁ רִבִּית מִן הַגּוֹי וְאִם נָלוּהוּ לוֹ עַד שֶׁלֹא נִוְעִילָהוּ וְלֹא נִעֲזָרוּ לוֹ אֲבָל נִזְקָהוּ וְאִפְּלוּ בְּעֵינָי שְׁנֵהֲנָה עִמּוֹ כְּמוֹ שֶׁהוֹדֵרְנוּ מַעֲשֵׂוֹת כַּךְ לְיִשְׂרָאֵל וְהוּא אָמַר יִתְעַלֶּה לְנִכְרִי תִשִּׁיךְ וְשֵׁנִי בְּפִירוֹשׁ הַמִּקְוֵל שְׁוִיָּה מִצְוַת עֲשֵׂה. ולשון ספרי לנכרי תשיך מצות עשה ולא חיך לא תשיך מצות לא תעשה: that is, the one hundred and ninety-eighth (affirmative) commandment is that (God) has commanded us to demand usury from a Goi, and that we are then to lend to him (only when he gives us usury, and otherwise not), such that we are to bring him no benefit and render him no assistance, but rather are to cause him harm; even in a matter from which we ourselves derive benefit together with him; just as we are, conversely, warned not to do such a thing to an Israelite: and this is what the praised God says: Lenóchri táschich, that is, "From the foreigner you shall exact usury"; for the orally received (and learned) interpretation shows that this is an affirmative commandment. It is likewise stated in the book Siphre that (the words) "From the foreigner you shall exact usury" are an affirmative commandment, and (the words) "But from your brother you shall not exact usury" are a prohibitive commandment.

Regarding the first opinion, Abarbanel writes about it in his book Markéveth hammíschneh fol. 77, col. 3. as follows: בספרי דרשו לנכרי תשיך זו מצות עשה ונמשכו במהלכות מלוה ולוה והרלב"ג בפירושו התורה אחרי זה הרמ"ם בספר המשפטים בפרק ה' מהלכות מלוה ולוה בפירושו השו"ת: שאלו אבל התלמוד שלנו אינו סובר כן שבארו בפרק איזהו נשך שלנכרי תשיך רשות: that is, in the book Siphre it is taught that the words Lenóchri táschich constitute an affirmative commandment, meaning: you shall charge interest to the foreigner. This opinion is followed by Rabbi Moses bar Maimon (in his book Jad chasáka) in the book of judgments, in the 5th chapter, under the title Hilchóth málveh velóveh, as well as by Rabbi Levi ben Gerson in his commentary on the Law. But our Talmud does not hold this view, for in the chapter (which begins with) Eléhu néscheb (namely in the 5th chapter of the tractate Báva meziá fol. 70, col. 2.) the words Lenóchri táschich are interpreted to mean: you may charge interest to the foreigner, so that it is a matter which one is free to do or to leave undone. The same is also to be found in the aforementioned Abarbanel's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 360, col. 4 in the Parascha Reéh, and fol. 382, col. 1 in the Parascha Téze. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, the following is also read on this subject at fol. 213, col. 4: יש שפירשו לנכרי תשיך שאינה מצוה אלא רשות כמו ששת ימים תעבוד וכוונתם שהתורה לא לקבעה מצוה בזה על כל פנים להלוות לגוי ברבית אלא שהרשות בידו אם ירצה אם לא: that is, there are some who interpret the words Lenóchri táschich as meaning: you may charge interest to the foreigner, so that it is not a commandment but a voluntary matter, just as (the words of Exod 20:9) "six days you shall labor" (in which it is left to a person's free choice whether to work or not to work); and their intent in this is that the Law has ordained no commandment whatsoever in these words requiring that one lend to a Goi at interest, but rather that it is left to one's free choice whether to do so or not, since the Law has not forbidden it.

The Jews, however, much prefer to hold to the aforementioned opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, as well as that of Rabbi Levi ben Gersom, who teach that it is God's command to lend to the Gójim at usury and to harm them in every possible way; and they know how to practice such wicked doctrine in such a manner that they frequently compound the usury against poor Christians into the principal, and thus take usury not only on the originally borrowed principal, but also on the usury added to it, of which more shall be said in what follows. They therefore take no heed of what is read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 213, col. 4, in these words: כּבּר הוּזְהִירוּ ר"ל בּפִירוּשׁ רבִּית הַגּוֹי בְּכַדִּי חַיִּי וְהוּא שֶׁאִמְרוּ בְּבֵבָא מְצִיעָא אֶסְרוּ לְהַלוּוֹת בְּרִבִּית לַגּוֹי בְּיוֹתֵר מְכַדִּי חַיִּי אֶלָּא אִם כֵּן הוּא תַלְמִיד חֹכֵם גּוֹרֵר שְׂמָא יִלְמוּד מִמַּעֲשֵׂיו That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have expressly permitted taking from a Goi only as much usury as is necessary for the maintenance of life; and this is what they said in (the Talmudic tractate) Báva meziá: It is forbidden to lend to a Goi at usury beyond what suffices for the maintenance of life, unless one is a learned rabbi; and this was ordained so that one might not learn anything from his deeds. For according to this teaching of the Talmud, they ought not to take more usury than they need for their livelihood, but with this they are not satisfied; rather, they seek to grow rich through such accursed fleecing and to scrape together much money and goods. And one may say of them, from Ezek 22:29: "The people of the land practice wicked violence; they rob wantonly; they oppress the poor and the needy; they wrong the stranger against all right." And from Amos 3:10: "They store up treasures of wickedness and robbery."

Since it is now clear from the foregoing that, according to the teaching of their rabbis, it is permitted to the Jews to take usury from all peoples, and that Christians are included among them, one could reproach them and say that in this matter they act contrary to the Law of Moses, since it is written in Deut 23:20: "You shall not charge usury to your brother." For they teach that Christians are descended from Esau and are Edomites. The Edomites, however, are the brothers of the Jews, as can be seen in Deut 23:7, where it is written: "You shall not abhor an Edomite, for he is your brother." It is also found in the Talmudic tractate Táanith, fol. 18, col. 1, and Rosch haschána, fol. 19, col. 1, that when once a severe decree had been issued in Rome against the Jews, forbidding them henceforth to study the Law, to circumcise their children, or to observe their Sabbath days, they came, on the advice of a distinguished lady, by night to her house, in which the most eminent lords of Rome were at that time gathered, and cried out with a lamenting voice: "Are we not your brothers, and do we not descend from one father and one mother, namely Isaac and Rebecca, who were the parents of Jacob and Esau? Why have you proceeded in such a manner as to issue such harsh decrees against us?" And it follows from this that the lords of Rome were moved by such a plaintive speech to annul the decree they had issued. From this it can be seen that the Jews, in times of need, themselves acknowledged such a brotherhood (which, for the sake of argument in this matter, we will accept as though it were true, even though it is false that we Christians are descended from Esau and his lineage). Concerning this brotherhood, the commentary of Rabbi Bechai on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 229, col. 2, in the Parascha Vesóth habberachá, may also be consulted. It therefore necessarily follows that they sin against the Law of Moses when they take usury from Christians.

What the Jews answer to such an objection can be seen in the old Nizzáchon, paginâ 138 and 139, where it is written as follows:

אם תאמר גם בני עשו נקראים אחים שנ' לא תתעב אדומי כי אחיך הוא ויש לומר אמת הוא שהיו אחים מקדם ונאסרו. הרבית מהם עד זמן שפסל את עצמו ועתה נחשבו לגוים בראותם שהם שחרב בית מקדש ולא באו לעזרה שנ' ביום עמדך מנגד וגו' עד כאחד מהם וכ"ש אשר הם בעצמם עורו להחריבו. שנ' זכור יי' לבני אדום את יום ירושלים וגו' וגם שמשחשין עצמן לבני נכר שאינם נימולים וכתיב כל בן נכר אשר לא ימול בשר ערלתו וגו' : 'ועוד יש לומר על הרבית שמעון כשר הוא שהרי אומר שלמה מרבה הונו בנשך ובתרבית לחונן דלים יקבצנו כלומר בצדקה יכופר העון שיש לו ואלו היה גזל מה היה מועיל הצדקה הלא כתוב זבח רשעים That is: If you wish to say that the children of Esau are also called brothers, as it is said (Deut 23:7): You shall not abhor an Edomite, for he is your brother, the answer is: it is true that they were brothers in former times, and it was forbidden to take usury from them, until they made themselves unworthy of having this commandment observed toward them, and are now regarded as foreigners; for when they saw that the Temple had been destroyed, they did not come to its aid, as it is said (Obad 1:11): In the time when you stood against him, etc., down to the words: you were like one of them. How much more, then, are they to be regarded as foreigners, since they themselves helped to destroy the Temple, as it is said (Ps 137:7): Lord, remember the children of Edom on the day of Jerusalem, etc. Moreover, they regard themselves as foreigners, since they are not circumcised, and it is written: Every foreigner who does not circumcise the flesh of his foreskin, etc. Beyond this, it is to be said concerning usury that it is a lawful good, for behold, Solomon says (Prov 28:8): Whoever increases his wealth through usury and interest, gathers it for one who will give it generously to the poor; as if he wished to say: through almsgiving his sin is atoned for. But if usury were robbery, what good would almsgiving do? Is it not written (Prov 15:8): The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination. So it is also written (Deut 23:20): You shall not charge usury to your brother, but to the foreigner, that is, from the uncircumcised you shall take usury.

In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 213, col. 4, and fol. 214, col. 1, in the Parascha Ki téze, the following is also read on this subject: דרשו ר"זל ולאחיך לא תשיך שעושה מעשה אחיך וזה לרבות את הגרים : שאסור לך להלוותן ברבית ולהוציא זרעו של עשו שאף על פי שכתוב בו כה אמר אחיך ישראל אחרי כן הותר שכן הזכיר הנביא ביום עמדך מנגד ביום שבות זרים חילו ונכרים באו שערי ועל ירושלים ידו גורל גם אתה אחד מהם למדך שכבר נתבטלה האחוה ויצא מכללה והרי הוא כשאר האומות הורים שהרי הרבית לא נאסר לישראל אלא מטעם שנצטוינו להחיות ולעשות עפו גמילות חסדים ממה שכתוב וחי אחיך עמך והאי לא לחי 'ולא ליקי': 'וכן המשונר לע'ז That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have expounded the words (Deut 23:20), "You shall not charge usury to your brother," explaining that by "brother" one is to understand him who does your brother's work, so as to include the Judengenossen (that is, those who adopt the Jewish religion), for it is forbidden to you to lend to them at usury; and so as to exclude the seed of Esau (that is, the Christians). For although it is written of him (Num 20:14), "Thus your brother Israel says to you," this was nonetheless subsequently permitted, for the prophet thus declares (Obad 11): "In the day that you stood against him, when strangers carried away his army captive, and foreigners entered into his gates, and cast lots over Jerusalem, you were even as one of them." This teaches you that the brotherhood has already been annulled, and he has been excluded from that company, and he is counted equal to the other foreign peoples; for, behold, it is forbidden to take usury from an Israelite for no other reason than that we are commanded to sustain him in life and to show him mercy, as it is written (Lev 25:36): "That your brother may live beside you"; but this one (namely, the seed of Esau) shall not live and shall not remain. Likewise, it is also permitted to lend at usury to a Jew who has fallen away into idolatry. His body is permitted (meaning that one may kill him); how much more, then, his money?

Rabbi Lipmann presents in his Sépher Nizzáchon, number 272, yet another reason why it is permitted for them to take usury from Christians, as the supposed Edomites, and his words read as follows: אם יאמרו שמאדום באו שנקרא: ועוד אפילו היינו יודעים ומכירים שהוא אחינו כמו לא תתעב אדומי כי אחיך הוא הלא שתי תשובות בדבר חדא כי סנחריב מלך אשור בלבל כל האומות כמו שג 'בישעיה שאמר פי בכל אלהי הארצות שהציל ארצו מידי וגו': 'ואלו היינו מכירים שוודאי אדומי הוא לא נקח ממנו רבית: וועד אפילו היינו יודעים ומכירים שהוא אדומי מותר ליקח ממנו רבית: כי מה שכתוב בתורה לנכרי תשיך ולאחיך לא תשיך ר"ל שהוא אחיך כאמונתך ותדע כי אם אדם הוא יהודי ומל כל שכן גוי וגו': 'ולאחיך לא תשיך ד"ל שהוא אחיך כאמונתך ותדע כי אם יהודי אסור ליקח רבית מן בני אדם מפני שנקראו אחינו לכתוב לאחיך לא תשיך ולא יותר ממילא שמעינן הא לנכרי מותר, ולמה כתבה התורה לנכרי תשיך אלא לומר עוד היתר אפילו באחיך כשנעשה נכרי כאמונתנו תשיך. ומאחר that: שהנצירים באו מעשו שהוא אדום יתקיים בהם הנאמר ליתר פורעניות שנאמרו על אדום is to say, if they (namely the Christians) say that they descend from Edom (that is, from Esau) and are called our brothers, since it is said (Deut 23:7): "You shall not abhor an Edomite, for he is your brother," then one can give them a twofold answer in this single matter (and say) that Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, mingled all peoples together with one another (so that one can no longer distinguish them from each other and know which of them are Edomites), as is reported (Isa 36:20), where he is said to have declared: "Who among all the gods of the lands has delivered his land from my hand?" And if we knew with certainty that someone was an Edomite, we would take no usury from him. Moreover, even if we already knew and recognized that someone is an Edomite, it is nonetheless permitted for us to take usury from him, for as regards that which is written in the Law (Deut 23:20): "From a foreigner you may exact usury, but from your brother you shall not exact usury," by "foreigner" is to be understood one whose deeds are entirely estranged from our faith, even if he were already a Jew, and how much more so if he is a Gentile? etc. Likewise, the words "from your brother you shall not exact usury" refer to one who is your brother according to your faith; and know that if it were forbidden to take usury from the children of Edom on the grounds that they are called our brothers, then it would need to be written (only): "From your brother you shall not exact usury," and nothing further (whereas in fact one also reads alongside it: "From a foreigner you may exact usury"). We learn from this, however, that it is permitted to exact usury from a foreigner. Why then did the Law also write, "From a foreigner you may exact usury"? For the purpose of saying further that it is permitted to exact usury from your brother as well, when he becomes a foreigner in respect of our faith. Since the Christians descend from Esau, who is Edom, that which is said in Obadiah, together with all the punishments that are mentioned concerning Edom, will be fulfilled upon them. On this matter one may also consult the book Maggen Abraham, in chapter 72, where this is treated at length, and in which, after all the reasons that have been adduced as to why usury may be taken from a Christian, it is written as follows: להתיר הרבית הזה ראו אמתת הדבר הכמינו הקדושים לישאל ולקחתו מן הגוי הנוצרי, That is: Our holy Sages have seen the truth of this matter, in that they have permitted an Israelite to take usury from a Christian Gentile.

We can see from this, then, on what the Jews base their erroneous opinion. However, as far as I am aware, the sole Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel contradicts this and teaches that it is forbidden to take usury from Christians; for in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 382, col. 1. 2., he writes as follows: 'אפילו שנודה שהרבית מצד עצמו מגונה הנה לא התירהו השם יתברך כי אם בנכרי שהוא מז' אומות ואין הנכרי נקרא כל איש אשר לא מזרע היהודים הוא. ואמנם לזרע אדום לא יאמר נכרי כי הוא נקרא אח שנ' 'לא תתעב אדומי כי אחיך הוא ונכלל בלא תשיך לאחיו. וכן ישמעאל ושאר האומות לא נקראו בשם נכרי. ולנכרי שהוא מז' אומות אינו מגונה לקחת רבית ממנו ולעשות לו שלא כהוגן כיון שהוא עשה שלא כהוגן ולא יבא בצדקת השם יתברך ולא יזכה בחסד התורה אחרי אשר כפר בה : That is: Even if we were to concede that usury is in itself a shameful thing, the blessed God has nonetheless permitted it nowhere other than with respect to the stranger who is of the seven peoples (of the land of Canaan, which are mentioned in Deut 7:1), and not every person who is not of the seed of the Jews is called a stranger. And certainly the seed of Edom is not called a stranger, for he is called a brother, as it is said (Deut 23:7): You shall not abhor an Edomite, for he is your brother; and he is included under the commandment (Deut 23:20): You shall not charge usury to your brother. Likewise, the Ishmaelites (that is, the Turks) and the remaining peoples are not called by the name of stranger. But to take usury from a stranger who is of the seven peoples, and to deal with him in a manner that is not fitting, is not shameful, since he too has done what was not proper, and such a one does not come within the justice of the blessed God; nor is he worthy of the mercy of the Law (that is, of the compassion that is commanded in the Law), since he has denied it. Exactly the same is also to be read in the aforementioned Abarbanel's book Markeveth hammischnneh, fol. 77, col. 4., in the Parascha Téze, the words found therein having been cited above in the 16th chapter of the first part, pagina 661 and 662.

Herein Abarbanel writes quite correctly that in the Law of Moses, through the words "of the stranger thou shalt take usury," it was only permitted to take usury from the peoples of the land of Canaan, and thereby to plunge them into ruin; for since God had given the Israelites power over those peoples' body and life, goods and blood, and had commanded that they be utterly exterminated, as can be seen in Deut 20:16-17, He had also given them permission to strip those peoples of their goods and means through usury. The greedy Jews, however, do not follow Abarbanel, but prefer to follow the others, who permit the fleecing and draining of all peoples, and in particular the Christians, through usury, and even teach that God commanded them in His holy word to do so; for this reason they take usury not only on the loaned principal, but also, as already mentioned, add the usury back onto the principal, so that they may draw usury upon usury as well.

Concerning this godless Jewish fleecing, the convert Dieterich Schwab writes in the 7th chapter of the third part of his Jüdischer Deckmantel, paginâ 171 &c., as follows: When a Christian is in need of money and comes to the roguish Jew to borrow some, the Jew knows how to masterfully and in manifold ways ensnare the poor Christian and deceive him. He pays close attention to the Christian's qualitäten and means, and if he perceives that the man is wealthy in goods and desires only a small sum, which he would soon wish to repay, the Jew deals with him in a most agreeable manner, presenting himself as willing to advance him twice as much if he should desire and want it, and not demanding it back until the Christian can conveniently pay and deliver it at a good opportunity. With such cunning and false words he lures out the promissory note, which is set at a fixed rate of interesse, gives the Christian the money, and lets him go home. The malicious Jew, however, keeps his own counsel, leaves the Christian undisturbed for a good while, but the villainous Jew compounds the usury upon the usury until he has driven the sum so high that the pious and trusting Christian cannot pay it by any means without alienating his property and goods, or until the sum has grown to several hundred or thousand, depending on the circumstances of the persons and the capitals; at that point the Jew comes forward with the promissory note, demands to settle accounts and to be paid, and presses and harasses the Christian until he pays him, or petitions the authorities to be placed in possession of the Christian's goods. That is one trick on the Jewish lute. If, however, the Jew perceives that the Christian is of modest means and in need of money and knows of no other way to be helped, the Christian must dance to his tune, and the Jew presents himself as having no money to lend; the Christian persists, requests that he be helped, and offers to give good security along with collateral and a good rate of interesse. Then the Jew deals with him entirely according to his own will and desire, does indeed produce the money, but the Christian must bind and obligate himself by a promissory note to heavy rates of interesse, and sometimes also by the actual delivery of more than fourfold collateral. The Jew also sometimes deducts a considerable sum immediately for the interesse before he delivers the money, and lets the Christian go with the remainder and enjoy a brief period of peace; thereafter he summons him, settles accounts, and demands to be paid, or to have the interesse added to the principal sum and to receive a new bond. This he practices not only once but repeatedly: for as soon as the interesse has grown a little, he immediately adds it to the principal sum, and it must bear him a young usury, which in time hatches and breeds yet another young usury, until he has at last utterly ruined the Christian. This can be sufficiently demonstrated with truthful examples.

Thereupon the aforementioned Dieterich Schwab continues and reports: I knew a Jew, of whom I made mention before, to whom a craftsman had come and had received only eight thalers on his and his wife's clothing and bedding, which had been worth more than forty thalers; the Jew had manipulated him so thoroughly and set him up so precisely on the line that within a short time he had not only deprived him of the aforementioned pledges, but also demanded and required a considerable sum of money from him besides, at which the Christian was utterly horrified and distressed. But the Jew gave him no peace until the Christian had to hand over another forty thalers in addition to the previous pledges, as well as other necessities such as beer, coal, etc., which he himself urgently needed for his own household; and when I saw this, it moved me to heartfelt pity.

Further, he writes on this matter: It is now publicly known in these parts how a Christian stood surety for a Jew on behalf of another Christian for 25 thalers, which the godless Jew increased through usury in such a manner, through interest upon interest, that it became impossible for the surety to pay the sum, and he would have lost house, home, and all that was his, had the high authorities not intervened for lawful reasons and rendered assistance to the innocent Christian. This is indeed a terrible and almost unheard-of act of financial extortion. But no one should be surprised at how they accomplish and bring this about: for when a Jew lends money, he customarily takes no less than two small pennies per thaler per week, unless he knows of other ways to play to his advantage with the borrower; and this amounts annually, in simple terms, without compounding or calculating interest upon interest, to 30 thalers, 34 groschen, and 2 pfennigs in Paderborn currency per hundred. But they are not content to take such modest interest; rather, they calculate the interest sometimes weekly, sometimes monthly, upon which they then charge the same interest for the following week or month, and in this way increase the sum in a short time through interest upon interest to a nearly infinite amount, and thus drain the Christian people dry.

After this, the aforementioned Dieterich Schwab demonstrates in the said chapter, pagina 174, in a table, that a Jew, reckoning a guilder at 15 batzen or shillings, and the shilling at 9 pfennigs, but the interest calculated weekly at 2 pfennigs per guilder, can, through usury upon usury over 21 years, bring it to 3,841 fl. 13 shillings and 3 1/2 hellers. And after he has brought forward much more concerning such devilish Jewish usury, he finally breaks out on pagina 179 into the following words and says: From all of this, every person will easily be able to gather and understand what a godless and harmful people the Jews are, and what benefit the Christian people can expect from them. Let everyone take heed and guard himself against these harmful birds, so that he is not devoured. For when such people come among the community, it is just as if a pike were let into a pond, or a fish-rich pool among the fish, or a wolf into the sheepfold among the flock, or a fox among the hens. These are the words of the said Dieterich Schwab, and he has certainly indicated nothing other than the plain truth thereby; wherefore, concerning such bloodsuckers, whose mind and thoughts are directed solely toward how they may flay the Christians of their hard-earned sweat and blood, it can with the highest justification be said from Isa 56:11: They are shameless dogs who cannot be satisfied. Those Christians also sin greatly who lend money to Jews at usury, since by doing so they put into their hands the means by which they lend money to Christians and can practice their accursed fleecing upon them all the more, without which money many a Jew would not accomplish much. But woe to those who do such things!

Chapter XII.

This chapter reports: first, what the Jews think of Christians' food and drink, and whether they are permitted to eat with a Christian; second, whether it is right that one buys meat from Jewish butchers; third, whether Jews may invite a Christian as a guest.

In the 16th chapter of the first part, from pagina 700 to 704, it was demonstrated that Christians are regarded by the Jews as unclean people, who derive from the unclean spirit; from this it is easy to infer what they think of Christians' food and drink. As regards the bread of Christians, it is written in the book Col bo fol. 112, col. 2. numero 100, under the title Din bilchóth issúre maachalóth, as follows: ויש אסור לאכול פת של גוים גם משום חתנות. ויש מקילין לקנות של נחתום במקום שאין נחתום ישראל מפני שהיא שעת הדחק. אבל פת של בעלי בתים אין מי שמורה בה להקל שמא יבא לסעוד אצלם. והר' אהרן הלוי כתב דכל מקום שאין פלטר מצוי כלל מותר אפילו פת של בעלי בתים ואפילו במקום שיש פלטר ישראל מותר ליטול מן העיר פת בעלי בתים ולילך לאכול בשדה אלא שהוא דבר מכוער לתלמיד חכם. ופת בעל הבית ביד פלטר מותר ופת פלטר ניד בעל הבית אסור. והרשב"א ז"ל כתב דבתר מעיקרא אזלינן ופת בעל הבית ביד פלטר אסור ופת פלטר ביד בעל הבית מותר. ואם הפלטר חומיין ישראל הרי פתו כפת בעל הבית. ואם הגיע שם פלטר ישראל הרי פתו של פלטר גוי אסורה עד שימכור הפלטר ישראל פתו ולאחר שמכרה פתו של ישראל חוזר פתו של פלטר גוי להכשירה עכ"ל ה"ר אהרן הלוי ז"ל. ויש מחמירים עוד בפת בעל הבית ואומרים שצריך לעמוד שלשה ימים בלתי אכילה קודם שיאכל פת בעלי בתים אבל לאחר שלשה ימים מותר משום That is: it is forbidden to eat the bread of the Gojim (or Christians), also on account of intermingling (as is read in Deut 7:3: "You shall not make alliances with them"). Some, however, make it easy (and permit) that one may buy from a (Christian) baker in a place where there is no Israelite baker, since it is a time of necessity (and necessity requires it, so that one may sustain one's life). As regards the bread of householders, however (which is not baked by bakers but by other people in their homes), there is no one who makes it easy (and permits buying it), lest one thereby be induced to eat with them. Rabbi Aharon Levi, however, has written that everywhere where no baker at all is to be found, the bread of householders is also permitted; indeed, that even in a place where there is an Israelite baker, it is permitted to take householders' bread from a town and go away and eat it in the field, though this is a shameful thing for a learned Rabbi. And that a householder's bread, when it is in the hands of a baker, is permitted, and (on the other hand) a baker's bread, when it is in the hands of a householder, is forbidden. Rabbi Shimshon bar Abraham, of blessed memory, however, has written that we follow the original source (and judge accordingly), and that a householder's bread that is in a baker's hands is forbidden, and a baker's bread that a householder has in his hands is permitted. And when a baker invites an Israelite (to eat), his bread is to be regarded as householders' bread (and forbidden to eat). When an Israelite baker also arrives there, the bread of the Christian baker is forbidden until the Israelite baker has sold his bread; but thereafter, when the Israelite baker's bread is exhausted, the Christian baker's bread becomes cóscher again (that is, proper and permitted to eat). Thus far are the words of Rabbi Aharon Levi, of blessed memory. There are some, however, who make the matter even stricter regarding householders' bread, and say that one must remain three days without eating before one eats the bread of householders; but after three days it is permitted, for the sake of the life of the person (so that he does not die of hunger), etc. And that the bread of the Gojim or Christians is also forbidden in an Israelite's house, on account of the fact that the Gojim do the cooking (all of which is forbidden). Likewise, the remaining cooked things of the Gojim are also forbidden, even when they are already in an Israelite's house. These are the words of the book Col bo. On this subject one may also consult the book Toledóth Adam vechávva, in the seventh part, fol. 161, col. 2, in the 17th Náthif, as well as the book Schylchán áruch in the part Jore déa, numero 112, from § 1 to § 9.

In the German-Hebrew book Brandspiegel, in the 18th chapter, fol. 67, col. 2, it is also written as follows: דאש מיר דאט ברוט עטין פון גוים עט חזי טורלייך נון גמרא דאט דיא חכמים האבן עט מהיר גיוועזן דרווייל איר זיין חין גלות חוני 'קיינ זיך ניט גיוויגן בקין חוני 'איר וומנדן גייטין דען פויקר עט זיין וואו לויט ניט עטין קיין בראט פון גוים גיוויגן: that is, that you eat the bread of the Gojim (or Christians), it has come about with difficulty that the Sages permitted it, since we are in exilio or misery, and cannot bake enough for ourselves, and we wander among the peoples. There are indeed people who eat no bread from the Gojim (or Christians): well is it for them, well is it for their souls. That it is, however, to be seen in the prayer book printed here in Frankfurt by the Jews before now, which the Jews call the thick Tefillab, fol. 34, col. 2, where the one who confesses his sins speaks, among other things, as follows: אכלתי פת של בעל הבית גוי, that is, I have eaten a householder's bread from a Goi (or Christian).

Regarding the flesh of livestock slaughtered and killed by Christians: it is held by Jews collectively to be carrion, which is also supposed to defile even the one who merely carries it, and for this reason they are forbidden to eat it.

That it is held to be carrion is to be seen from the book Schylchán áruch, in the part Jore déa, numero 2, §. 1, where it is written as follows: שחיטת נכרי נבילה: that is, that which a nócbri, that is, a foreigner (namely, one who is not a Jew), slaughters, is carrion, even if that same person is still a minor, and commits no idolatry, and others are watching him. So too is it read in the second part of the book Jad chasáka, fol. 201, col. 1, in the 4th chapter, numero 11, under the title Hilchóth schechíta, as follows: נכרי ששחט אף על פי ששחט כפני ישראל בסכין יפה ואפילו היה: that is, what a foreigner slaughters is carrion, even if it has already been slaughtered before an Israelite's face with a clean knife, and that same foreigner is still a minor; and the one who eats of it shall be beaten according to the Law, as it is said (Exod 34:15): and you eat of his sacrifice.

That which is slaughtered or killed by Christians defiles the one who carries it; this is stated in the Talmudic tractate Chóllin fol. 13, col. 1. in these words: שחיטת נכרי נבלה ומטמאה במשא, That is: what a stranger slaughters is carrion, and it defiles the one who carries it (for it is read in Lev 11:28 that whoever carries carrion defiles himself). And in the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, one reads at fol. 114, col. 2. in the Parascha Tezavveh: ארז"ל שחיטת נכרי נבילה ומטמאה במשא כי דינו כדין כתר וסיכתו, That is: our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that what a stranger slaughters is carrion and defiles through carrying, for it is judged in the same manner as his (namely the stranger's) power and cause (that is, the devil, who is said to rule over him, who is also unclean, of which matter was treated in the 18th chapter of the first part); and it is written (Lev 20:23): You shall not walk in the statutes of the heathen. Rabbi Bechai likewise agrees with this in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 63, col. 4. in the Parascha Schemoth, where he states: שחיטת נכרי נבלה ומטמאה במשא כי הטומאה, מצד כחו, That is: what a stranger slaughters is carrion and defiles through carrying, for the uncleanness comes from his power (namely the devil who governs him). In the book Jad chasaka, in the second part, fol. 160, col. 2., in the 4th chapter, numero 1., under the title Hilchoth maachaloth asuroth, the following is also found: האוכל כזית מבשר בהמה שמיתה או חיה שמיתה או עוף שמת: That is: whoever eats as much as an olive's worth from an animal that has died (of itself), or from a wild beast that has died, or from a bird that has died, shall be beaten, because it is said (Deut 14:21): You shall not eat any carrion. But everything that has not been slaughtered as is proper is considered dead, that is, it is treated as though it had died of itself.

What punishment, however, a Jew who eats of carrion has to expect is shown by the book Emek hammelech, fol. 20, col. 3. 4. in the 12th chapter, under the title Schaar tikkune hatteschuva, in these words: האוכל נבילה בין באונס בין ברצון וּגו' דינו במגופה ומתגלגל בכלב שהוא אוכל נבילה או בבהמה טהורה ולא זוכה לשחיטה הגונה רק ימסר ביד השוחט ויצא נבילה מתחת ידו מדה כנגד מדה שנאמר שופך דם האדם באדם דמו ישפך תיקונו עור"ה הנב"ל יצום פ"ז צומות כמספר אלהים עם המלה That is: Whoever eats of carrion, whether under compulsion or willingly, etc., shall be judged by a plague, and his soul shall pass into a dog that eats carrion, or into a clean animal. He shall not be deemed worthy of being properly slaughtered as is fitting, but shall be handed over to a Schechter (or butcher), and under that person's hand shall become carrion, and thus like shall be repaid with like, as it is said (Gen 9:6): Whoever sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed. He shall, however, be restored to righteousness (through that which is expressed in Ps 57:9 in the words) עורה הנבל Urah bannevel, That is: Awake, O Psalter! (namely, through the numerical value of the word הנבל bannevel, which yields 87,) and he shall fast eighty-seven times, according to the numerical value of the word אלהים Elohim together with the word (which likewise amounts to 87, for Elohim equals 86, and the word Elohim counted as one unit also yields the number 87.) Is this not a subtly devised means by which the soul of one who eats carrion is set free, so that it need not pass into a dog or some other animal?

Regarding those foods which are forbidden in Lev 11 and Deut 14, Rabbi Lipmann writes in his Sepher Nizzachon, numero 83, concerning the words of Lev 11:4 וְכָל חַי חַי וְעוֹף וְשָׂרֵץ, as follows: נמצא מבואר שכל האכילות האסורות מבהמה וחיה ועוף ושרץ that is, it is clearly found that all forbidden foods from cattle, and wild animals, and birds, and vermin, as well as fish, stop up the instruments of the understanding so that one cannot grasp the truth וְכָל. And in the book Zérór hammór it stands at fol. 95, col. 4, in the Parascha Schemini, written thus concerning this: אלו המאכלות האסורות והבהמות הטמאות that is, these forbidden foods and unclean animals stop up the heart, and darken the pure souls, and confuse the understanding. In the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati on the five books of Moses, the following is also read at fol. 136, col. 4, in the aforementioned Parascha Schemini: הטעם לאסור הבהמות הטמאות לפי הפשט כי הם מולידים עפוש רע וחולי בנפשות ומעכבין שלמות האדם מלהבין בשם יתברך וְכָל that is, the reason for the prohibition of unclean animals is, according to the plain meaning, that they produce an evil putrefaction and sickness in the souls, and hinder the perfection of man so that he cannot cleave to the blessed God וְכָל. And at fol. 137, col. 1, the following is read in the same work concerning the forbidden animals: רוחותם מרוחות הטומאה השטין באויר that is, their spirits are of the unclean spirits (the devils) who roam about in the air. There also stands at fol. 138, col. 2, in the last-mentioned book: כבר ידעת כי that is, you already know that the unclean (animals) receive their influence, or their influx, from the North, which is called the unclean Spirit. Furthermore, it is stated in the same work at fol. 137, col. 2-3, that certain souls pass into such unclean animals, and the following then ensues: האוכל מהם כאלו אוכל בשר חברו הנטמא that is, therefore the Law has forbidden (the eating of them), for whoever eats of them does as much as if he were eating the flesh of his neighbor who has been defiled through sins. As for the prohibition against eating pork, this matter, together with a description of swine, has already been treated above in the 16th chapter of the first part, from pagina 704 to 708.

Why, however, eating the unclean animals forbidden in the Law is permitted to Christians, this is shown in the book Chissuk emúna paginâ 142, where it is stated that abstaining from a food occurs for one of two reasons: either because it is too noble and excellent, and the person who should eat it is a lowly person, or because it is base and contemptible, and the person who should eat it is too distinguished and eminent for it. And the following is then concluded: והנה הנוצרים לא יוכלו לומר שאותם הבעלי חיים האסורים מפני יקרותם נאסרו לנו בעבור פחיתותנו כי הכתוב הכריחם לומר ההפוך ר"ל שמפני טומאתם נאסרו לנו בעבור קדושתנו אם כן מה שהוחזו להם הטמאים הוא בעבור פחיתותם כאשר הכתוב מעיד באמרם ויקרא י"א טמא הוא לכם ר"ל לכם הם טמאים לפי שאתם קדושים ואינם טמאים לאומות העולם אחר שאין להם קדושה וגו : that is, now the Christians cannot say that those same forbidden animals were forbidden to us on account of their excellence, because of our lowliness, for Scripture compels them to say the opposite, namely that they were forbidden to us on account of their uncleanness and our holiness. If that is the case, then the unclean animals are permitted to them to eat on account of their lowliness (in that they are base and lowly people), just as Scripture testifies when it says in Lev 11:4: "That shall be unclean to you," that is, to you they (namely the forbidden animals) shall be unclean, because you are holy; but to the nations of the world they are not unclean, because there is no holiness in them, etc. Beyond this, the Rabbis teach that all foods are permitted to Christians to eat, because they are ordained by God for hell, as was shown above in the fourth chapter of this second part, paginâ 254 and 255.

On the eating of blood, Rabbi Lipmann writes in his Sepher Nizzáchon, on the words of Lev 17:10-11, "Against any such person who eats blood, I will set my face, and will cut him off from the midst of his people; for the soul of the flesh is in the blood," in the following manner: נמצא טעמא מברור שאין לאכול : that is, the reason why one ought not to eat it is clearly found, since the soul of the animals is bound up in it; for whoever eats of it, his rational soul takes on the nature of the animals. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 140, col. 1, in the Parascha Acharé moth, among other reasons why one ought not to eat blood, the following is also written: מפני שהדם הוא הנפש הבהמית אין ראוי לנו שנערב טבענו ואנו מקבלי התורה צריכים שתהיה זכי הגופות ראויין לקבל המושכלות ונצטוונו שנגדל טבענו להיותו רך ורחמני לא אכזרי ואלו היינו אוכלין הדם היה מוליד בנפשנו אכזריות וגסות טבע וקרוב שתהיה כנפש הבהמית כי הדבר הנאכל ישוב בשר מוליד בגוף האוכל ויוליד לו טבע כיצא בו וגומר : that is, since blood is the soul of the animals, it is not fitting for us to mingle its nature with our nature; and we, who have received the Law, must be pure in our bodies in order to grasp intelligible things. We have also been commanded to accustom our nature such that it be gentle and merciful, and not cruel. But if we were to eat blood, it would produce in our souls a cruelty and a coarse nature, so that they would be nearly equal to the brutish souls; for that which is eaten becomes flesh in the body of the one who eats it, and brings about in him a like nature, etc.

So too shall the Devil be the father of those who eat blood, concerning which the following is read in the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 35, col. 1, in the Parascha Toledoth: כבר ידעת כי ממנו : קבל הנחש כח להחטיא ולשפוך דם והיה הוא אב ושרש לכל בוהרי הדם והאוכלים אותו והוא העוזר לזרע עשו האדמוני לשפוך דם והוא המקטרג של ישראל הנימולים ומהרחקים : that is, It is already known to you that the serpent had received from him (namely from the prince of Esau, the supreme Devil Sammaël, who is mentioned in the preceding passage) the power to cause sin and to shed blood, and that this same one (Sammaël) is the father and origin of all those who choose blood and eat it, and that he helps the seed of the red Esau to shed blood. He is also the accuser of the Israelites who are circumcised and who keep themselves distant and abstain from eating blood, etc.

Regarding wine, the Jews are forbidden to drink the wine of Christians and of all peoples, for in the book Toledoth Adam ve-Chavva fol. 150, col. 1. in the first part, under the title Nábfischischa ásar chélek rishon, it is written as follows: כתב הרמ"ב כי הנוצרים עובדי עבודה זרה הם וינם אסור בשתיה ומותר בהנאה : that is, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon has written that Christians are idolatrous people, and that drinking their wine is forbidden, though otherwise it is permitted to seek benefit from it. In the book Col bo, at numero 96. fol. 104 col. 2. under the title Hilchoth jen nésech, it is likewise taught: בשתיה : ויין הגוי בחובו : that is, the wine of a Goi or Christian is at this time forbidden (to drink), but it is permitted to make use of it for one's benefit, and an Israëlit may accept it from a Goi in payment of a debt. The same is also to be found in the book Shulchan arúch, in the part Jore

déa numero 123. §. 1. in the annotation. And at numero 124. §. 6. in the aforementioned book Jore déa it is taught: כל גוי שאינו עובד אלילים יינם אסור: בשתיה בשחיטה ומותר בהנאה: that is, the wine of every Goi, even one who does not practice idolatry, is forbidden to drink, but it is permitted to seek benefit from it. Elias reports the following on this matter in his book Tischbi, under the root word Násach: והשוה ממנו לוקה: כל יין שנתנסך לעבודה זרה הוא נקרא יין נסך והשוה ממנו לוקה: מן התורה משום שנאמר אשר חלב זבחימו יאכלו ישתו יין נסיכם ונזון ההוא אמרו חכמים that is, all wine that is offered to an idol is called jen nésech, that is, sacrificial wine, and whoever drinks of it shall be flogged according to the Law, because it is said (Deut 32:38): those who ate the fat of their sacrifices and drank the jen nesicham, that is, the wine of their offering. The Sages, however, have at this time forbidden the wine of the Gojim entirely (for drinking), because it is doubtful whether it may have been offered to an idol. And although they say that the Gojim at this time are not altogether given to idolatry, it is nonetheless forbidden, etc. The Jews, however, call all wine belonging to Christians jen nésech, that is, libation wine, or simply nésech, even though it has not been offered to any idol, although in the book Col bo, numero 96, fol. 104, col. 2, one reads: כתוב בתשובה הגאונים דגוי בזמן הזה אינו עובד עבודה זרה וכן פירש רש"י ז"ל: פרק שני דיבמות דגוים שבחוצה לארץ לא עובדי עבודה זרה הן על זה סומכין ליקח יינם נסך בחובות: that is, it is written in the responsa of the Geónim (that is, of the highly learned rabbis) that a Goi (or Christian) in the present age does not produce jen nésech. And thus Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, of blessed memory, explained in the 2nd chapter of the Talmudic tractate Jevammóth that the Gójim who are outside the land of Canaan are not idolatrous people, and upon this basis one relies in accepting their jen nésech in payment of debts. These words, however, contradict one another, for it is stated that a Goi or Christian in the present age does not produce jen nésech, and yet the wine that a Christian gives to a Jew on account of a debt is nonetheless called jen nésech. In the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, concerning the prohibition against drinking wine from the Gójim, one likewise reads: רבי אלעזר המודעי אומר עמד פנחס וההרים על ישראל בסוד שם המפורש: ובכתב שנכתב על הלוחות בחרם בית דין עליון ובחרם בית דין התחתון שלא ישתה אדם מישראל מיינם של גוים כי אם מרפס רגלם שנאמר וצאני מרמס רגליכם תרעינה ומרפס רגליכם תשתינה שכל יינם של גוים לעכו"ם שהן לוקחין ראשית תירושם לעכו"ם ולזנות: that is, Rabbi Eliezer Hammodái says that Phinehas arose (after he had stabbed Zimri the son of Salu and Cozbi the daughter of Zur on account of the fornication they had committed together, of which one may read in Num 25:6 &c.) and by means of a ban imposed upon the Israelites, by the mystery of the Schem hammphorásch (that is, of the name Jehova) and by the writing that had been inscribed upon the tablets, under the ban of the supreme court as well as under the ban of the lower court, forbade that any person among the Israelites should drink the wine of the Gójim, but only that which is trodden by their own (namely, the Israelites') feet, as it is said (Ezek 34:19): "My sheep shall graze on what your feet have trodden, and drink what your feet have trodden." For all the wine of the Gójim incites to idolatry, since they take the firstfruits of their must for idolatry and fornication, as it is said (Hos 4:11): "Fornication, and wine, and new wine take away the heart."

That it is considered a sin by the Jews when they drink wine belonging to Christians is also to be seen in their prayer book, the thick Tefillab, fol. 36, col. 1., under the title Shacharit, where a confession of sins is found, in which the sinner speaks, among other things, as follows: שהיה יין נסך, that is, I have drunk jen nésech. Likewise, the converted Dieterich Schwab, while he was still mired in his Jewish superstition and drank wine here in Frankfurt with Christians, was punished by the rabbis, as was indicated above in the 9th chapter of this second part, paginâ 487. Beyond this, anyone who has drunk jen nésech must also fast on account of such a sin committed, for in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 20, col. 4., under the title Scháar tikkúne battechéwa, in the 12th chapter, it reads as follows: אם שתה יין נסך יצום ע"ג כמנין יין וג' אותיותיו, that is, if someone has drunk jen nésech, he shall fast seventy-three times, according to the numerical value of the word יין jajin (which means wine) and its three letters, which together make 73; for the word יין jajin yields 70, and three is added on account of the letters, giving 73 in total.

Concerning the prohibition that Jews are not permitted to drink wine belonging to Christians and other peoples, the following story is written in the book Caphtor uphérah, fol. 121, col. 2, and fol. 122, col. 1: מעשה שהיה במלך גדול ורע מעללים שמו פירגא"נדיקו מושל בכל האקלים, טעץ לקרוא לכל חכמיו וזקניו, גם קרא י"א חכמים רשומים מבני עמנו שיבאו לפניו וכאשר באו אליו קם על רגליו והקבילם בכבוד הרחק כמטחוי קשת ממקומו, הוא והזקנים אשר עמו, ובני ישראל תמהו על הכבוד אשר עשה, כי לא נסה, ויאמר אליהם אהבתי אתכם כבבת עיני, ורצוני שתהיו מאוכלי שלחני, בחרו לכם הטוב בעיניכם, אחת שאלתי מכם, או לאכול בשר חזיר מבושל ומבושם, אשם אשם, או לבעול ארמית, במעל ונתרמית, או לשהות יין נסך ודם רסימי, כבודי ומרים ראשי, או ארע, כי מצאתי חן בעיניכם ואטיבה אתכם: קם על רגליו חכם אחד רשום מבני עמנו, מבחר שלומים, עיניו הדרנ"ה מים, והשתחוה אפים, אפים, זאמר אדונינו מלך האדיר הנה לנו זמן ג' ימים, נעיין בספרי דברי החכמים, ונראה איזה מהם יכשר, אם אבר מן החי או היין או הבשר, ויען, המלך נשאתי פניכם, עשרה, תעשו הטוב בעיניכם, והחכמים נועדו ויתבודדו בלב המרמר, וקרא זה אל זה ואמר, הבו לכם עצור, אם נבחר החזיר היין או האשה, כי השעה נחוצה, ולהרחיקו מהם החזיר והאשה, כי הוא עון פלילי וישאר ולצמצם, אך שתיית היין המלך בחרו לכם, כי אינם יודעים בטיב וע"א ומעשה אבותיהם בידיהם, ויבואו למלך, ויאמרו אליו אדוננו המלך מצאנו חן בעיניך, להשיבנו ולהושיבנו עם אוכלי שלחניך, כל היום וכל הלילה נרוה

דורים נשתה מיינך, כי טובים דודיך, והמלך הרשע והזקנים שמו מגמתם, להכשילם יחד, בשלשתם: ויאמר המלך אך זה היום שקויתי, לאכול מהכשולי מעדניכם אותי, ייין מלכות רב לחיך יערב, מתוק מזקוק מיינ וקוניטון והחכמים עשו לכבוד מלכות מאכלים ותבשילים ומעדנים, מינים ממינים שונים, וישבו לפניו, גם המלך והקני, והמלך עשה בערמה, שלחן עגול מתנועע בחכמה, כפי חפצו יסובבנו, ולכל אשר יחפוץ יטנו: ויהי הם אוכלים ושותים באשר טוב לבם, כי המלך אוהבם, וגלה להם סודות המלכות וטעמו, וישכרו עמו, וכאשר ראה המלך שדעתם מטרפת סבב את השלחן והביא מאכל החכמים לפני הזקנים ומטעמיהם, ומאכל שולחנו בשר החזיר סבב אליהם, ומלאו כרסם מבשר החזיר והטרפות, ויהיו לחרפות, ולמשמרת למהרתו, שם תבשיל היהודים להראותו, ולערב ערב הציע להם מטות זהב כלי מילה ושלטונו לל אחד ואחד במטתו, ואשה זונה שוכבת לצדתי, וחזק היין בהם, שנו ושלשו בחשבם שנשותיהן הן, וישכב המלך בבקר ויאמר אוהבי קומו מהנוטותיכם, התפללו בערכם, מה זה אשר עשיתם, הלא חטאה גדולה חטאתם, אכלתם החזיר בגאווה ובתגבורת, והנה התבשיל שהבאתם למשכרה, ובעלתם הנשים הנכריות, ועמוניות צידוניות החיות והגריות, וכאשר ראו חרפתם, בחרו מיתתם, ובתוך השנה מתו כלם מיתה משונה, ליצול רחמנא. וכל זה אירע להם בבחרם שתיית היין שהוא מדבריהם אסור בזמן הזה משום חיתון ואף על גב דהמלך, ובזמן הזה לאו עוברי עבודה זרה וזה הם מכל מקום החומרא דהוא ועונש הבנינו ז"ל עדיין היא במקומה עומדת: That is: There once occurred a story that a great king, but evil in his deeds, by name Pirgandicus, who ruled over the entire climate (that is, a certain division of the heavens), took counsel and had all his wise men and elders come to him; and he also summoned eleven distinguished wise men from our people, that they should come before him. When they had come to him, he rose to his feet, together with his elders who were with him, and received them with reverence while they were still a bowshot's distance from his place; but the Israelites (namely the aforementioned eleven wise men) marveled at the honor he showed them, for they were not accustomed to it. And he spoke to them: I love you as the apple of my eye, and I desire that you shall eat at my table; choose for yourselves (one of three things which I propose to you) that which seems best to you. One thing I require of you: either that you eat boiled and seasoned pork, which is (among you) a sin; or that you touch heathen women through transgression and deceit; or that you drink wine of nefech and of my red wine, which is my honor and lifts up my head (that is, makes me merry); then I shall know whether I have found favor with you, and I will do you good. Then a distinguished wise man from our people rose to his feet, one who was a chosen man among our worthy folk, and he wept and fell down and spoke: O our lord and mighty king, grant us three days' time, and we will search in the books of the words of the wise men and see which of these three things will suit us best (and can most fittingly be done): whether a limb from a living creature (that is, the heathen women), or the wine, or the (pork) flesh (shall please us). Thereupon the king said: I grant you this; do what you find good. Then the wise men assembled and lamented their distress to one another with sorrowful hearts, and called out to one another: give counsel as to whether we should choose the pork, or the wine, or the women, for the time is swift (passed, so that we must declare ourselves); and they rejected the pork and the women, for it is a sin that belongs before the judge (to be punished by him, when one eats pork or lies with heathen women), and that remains and presses hard; but the drinking of wine they chose, because the Gentiles or heathens are not so idolatrous, and the work of their fathers is in their hands. Thereupon they came to the king and spoke to him: Lord king, we have found grace with him, that we are so highly regarded that he wishes to seat us among those who dine at his table; we will devote ourselves to love the whole day and the whole night, and drink of his wine, for his love is pleasant. But the wicked king's and his elders' aim was directed toward making them stumble and sin in all three matters. Then the king said: truly, this is the day for which I have waited, and I have longed to eat of your well-cooked and savory dishes, and I have much wine which will be pleasant to the palate (and taste excellently), sweeter than spiced wine. Upon this, the wise men prepared, in honor of the king, dishes and savory things of various kinds, and seated themselves before him (at his table) after the king and his elders had seated themselves. But the king had craftily had a round table made which could be cleverly moved and turned around at his pleasure, and directed wherever one wished. Now as they ate and drank and were of good cheer, the king revealed to them the secrets of the kingdom and the reason for it, because he loved them, and they ate and became drunk with him. But after the king had seen that their understanding was disordered (through the drunkenness), he turned the table around and caused the dishes and the delicate courses of the wise rabbis to come before the elders, while his own dish, namely the pork, was turned toward them; and they filled their bellies with the pork and the teréfos (that is, the flesh forbidden to eat), and they were put to shame; but the Jews' dishes he kept until the following day in order to show them. In the evening, however, he had golden beds and garments of the finest wool prepared for them, and gave each one a separate bed, and laid a harlot at his side; and because the wine had overpowered them, they touched them two or three times, supposing them to be their wives. And the king rose early and spoke to them: you, my dear people, rise from your sleep and pray for yourselves; what have you done? Have you not committed a great sin? You have eaten pork with arrogance and boldness. Behold, the dish which you brought is kept (by which you can see that you ate very little of it, and therefore must have eaten pork). Likewise you have lain with foreign Ammonite, Sidonian, Hittite, and Hagarite women. When they saw their shame, they chose death for themselves, and all died within a year by a sudden death, from which may the merciful God preserve us. All of this befell them because they had chosen to drink the wine, which at this time, according to their (namely the rabbis') words, is forbidden on account of intermarriage (so that no Jew should lie with a heathen woman and thus come into kinship with the heathens), even if it were the king's wine, and even if they (understand: the Gójim, that is, Christians or other peoples) were not idolatrous people; yet the strictness (that is, the sharp prohibition) of our wise men, of blessed memory, and the punishment (which they have imposed upon it) remain standing in their place to this day. These are the words of the book Cáphtor uphérach (כפתור ופרח), by which the Jews wish to make it understood that they should abstain from the wine of Christians and other peoples, because they might thereby fall into sin.

A Christian can also ruin a Jew's kosher wine, which is permitted for drinking, by touching it, so that the Jew is no longer allowed to drink from it; and this occurs in various ways, concerning which the following is written in the book Agúdda fol. 64, col. 2. numero 49.: כותי שהניח אצבעו על פי הברוא אסור That is: When a Cuthite (or Christian) places his finger on the bung-hole (of a cask full of wine), the entire cask (full) is forbidden for drinking. How much more so (is it forbidden) when he inserts his finger into the hollow of the cask? Likewise also when he inserts the bung into the cask, or moves it in the hole, or draws it out, which cannot happen without movement. In the book Shulchan aruch, in the part Jore déa, the following is also read concerning this at numero 124. §. 14.: חבית שנטלה ממנו עכ"ם אצבעו ער שנגע ביין כולו אסור וכן אם הוציא הכרוא התחובה בנקב הכרוא והכנים בה That is: When an idolater inserts his finger into a cask from which the bung has been removed, such that he touches the wine, all the wine is forbidden. Likewise it is the same when he draws out the bung that is stuck in the bung-hole and which reaches down to the wine. Exactly the same can also be found in the Piské Tosephóth of the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára fol. 78, col. 1. numero 117.

Beyond this, a Christian can also render a Jew's kosher wine, which he has in a jug, unfit for drinking by merely touching the jug; and the convert Dieterich Schwab, in the fourth part of his Jüdischer Deckmantel, pages 207 and 208, in the 6th chapter, writes about this in the following manner: A Jew drinks no wine whatsoever with a Christian, whether it be a distilled wine or any other wine, according to the Talmud, unless it is wine of their own that they themselves have pressed, or have otherwise had fetched from another Jew: that wine they do indeed drink with Christians, yet with discretion, such that the Jew must at all times hold the jug with the wine in his hand, and take great care that the Christian does not touch it in the slightest; and if it were touched by the Christian, they may not drink the wine, but rather that same wine is called among them jain nésech, unworthy wine, and the wine is given to a Christian or poured out; and when the Jew drinks the aforementioned wine with the Christian, a tub of water must stand nearby, for as often as the Christian has drunk out the glass or cup, it is immediately rinsed out afterward; and if the Christian were to touch the rinsed drinking vessel in the slightest, it must be rinsed out anew. That a Jew may not drink wine which is in a jug that a Christian has touched is evident from the book Jóre déa, which is a part of the book Shulchan áruch, numero 125, §. 1, where the following is taught: נטל עכ"ם כלי של יין והגביהו ויצא היין אף על פי שלא שכשך נאסר בשתיה שהרי היין בא מכחו ומה שנשאר בכלי אסור גם כן: that is, when an idolater takes a vessel with wine and lifts it up so that the wine runs out, even if he has not swirled it (in the vessel), the wine is nonetheless forbidden for drinking, for behold, the wine has come forth by his force (in that he has poured it in), and what remains in the vessel is likewise forbidden.

Where it comes from that the wine touched by a Christian becomes defiled, this can be seen from Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 221, col. 4, at the end of the Parascha Haasínu, where he writes as follows: טעם ישתהו יין נסיכם פירשהי בפרשת נח ומכאן סמכו רז"ל לאיסור יין: נסך כי השפע הבא לכתות הטומאה נקרא יין נסך ומשם נאצלים נפשותיהן של אומות העולם ועל כן מגעו ועל כן מגעו יין נסך: that is, I have explained the meaning of the words (Deut 32:38) Die den jen nesichám, that is, the wine of their drink-offering, in the Parascha Noach. And upon this our Rabbis of blessed memory have founded the prohibition of jen nésech; for the influence, or the influx, that comes to the powers of impurity (that is, to the unclean spirits or devils) is called jen nésech; and from thence (namely from the powers of impurity, or the devils) the souls of the peoples of the world receive their influx; therefore the touch of a Goi renders the wine a jen nésech. We thus see clearly from this that the wine touched by a Christian is forbidden to Jews to drink because it is defiled by the Christian, whose soul is said to receive its influx from the unclean spirit, the devil. Indeed, the Rabbis teach outright that the souls of Christians and of other peoples outside of Judaism derive from the devils, as has been sufficiently demonstrated above in the first chapter of this second part; therefore it is no wonder that they forbid Christians' food and drink among themselves. Otherwise much more could be shown here regarding in what manner wine is forbidden or not forbidden to Jews when this or that circumstance arises, but I must leave this aside because the matter is far too extensive.

Since mention is made here of wine, I must also indicate who is supposed to have invented it, concerning which the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 139, col. 2, in the 27th chapter of the third Máamar, contains the following written passage: במדרש אככיר ויחל נח איש הארמה ויטע כרם בא לקראתו השטן ויאמר לו רצונך שנטענר יחד אני ואתה. אמר לו הן. מיד הביא רחלה אחת ושחטה על הגפן. ואחר כך הביא ארי ושחטו על אותה הגפן. ואחר כך חזיר אחד ושחטו על אותה הגפן. מפני מה עשה כן השטן כשאדם שותה כוס אחד הוא כרחלה ענו ושפל רוח. וכשהוא שותה שתי כוסות מיד נעשה גבור כארי ומתחיל לדבר גבורות ואומר מי כמוני. וכשהוא שותה שלשה או ד' מיד הוא נעשה כחזיר שמתלכלך בטיט ורפש אף הוא מתלכלך בקיא ואף במימי רגלים. עד כאן. ואל תחשוב בלבך שנת איש צדיק תמים עשה שותפות עם השטן. אבל כוונתם להורות שבהיות השטן גרמא בכל : בזקי האדם אף הוא היה סיבת המצאת היין אשר עליו ינזא זנות ויין ותירוש יקח לב that is, in the Medrasch Afkir, the following is read concerning the words (Gen 9:20) "And Noah began and became a husbandman, and planted a vineyard": Satan came toward him and said to him, "If it pleases you, let you and I plant it together." Noah answered Satan, "Yes, I am content." Thereupon Satan immediately brought a sheep and slaughtered it over the vine. After that he brought a lion and slaughtered it over that same vine. After this he also brought a pig and likewise slaughtered it over that same vine. Why did Satan do this? When a man drinks one cup, he is like a sheep, humble and of a lowly spirit. When he drinks two cups, he immediately becomes strong like a lion and speaks of mighty things and says, "Who is my equal?" But when he drinks three or four cups, he straightway becomes like a pig, which wallows in filth and mire; so too does he wallow in what he has vomited, as well as in his own water. Thus far (are the words of the aforementioned Medrasch.) But do not think in your heart that Noah, who was a righteous and pious man, entered into a partnership with Satan; rather, the purpose of these words is aimed at teaching that, since Satan is the cause of all the harms that befall a person, he was likewise the cause of the invention of wine, concerning which it is said (Hos 4:11): "Whoredom, wine, and new wine take away the heart." At this point, page 61 may be consulted. But let this be enough concerning wine.

We can see from all of the above what the Jews think of Christians' bread, meat, and wine, and how all of these things are forbidden to them. They are likewise forbidden to eat anything cooked by a Christian, as is written in the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Jore déa, number 113, §. 1, as follows: דבר שאינו נאכל כמו שהוא חי שבישלו עכום אפילו בכלי ישראל ובבית ישראל אסור משום בישולי עכום: that is, That which is not eaten raw, and which an idolater (or Goi) has cooked, even if it were cooked in an Israelite's vessel and in an Israelite's house, is forbidden (to eat), because it was cooked by an idolater. That it is moreover considered a sin when a Jew eats such food can be seen in the thick Tefillah, fol. 34, col. 3, under the title Shacharit, where among other sins that are confessed, this one also appears: אכלתי בישולי גוים, that is, I have eaten what the Gojim (or Christians) have cooked. This is also to be found in the little book called Sepher joreb chattaim, under the letter Aleph, with these words: אכלתי מבישולי עכו"ם. אכלתי גבינת עכו"ם. אכלתי פת של בעל הבית עכו"ם, that is, I have eaten of the cooked food of an idolater; I have eaten the householder's bread of an idolater; I have eaten cheese from an idolater.

It is not even permitted for them to attend a meal given by a Christian, even if they were to bring their own food and drink. On this matter, the book Agudda, fol. 60, col. 1, numero 4, teaches as follows: גוי שעשה משתה לבנו וזימן כל היהודים שבעירו אף על פי שאוכלין ושותין משלהם מעלה עליהם הכתוב כאילו אכלו מזבחי מתים, That is: When a Cuthean (or Christian) prepares a meal for his son and invites all the Jews in his city, even if they eat and drink from their own provisions, Scripture nevertheless regards them as though they had eaten from the sacrifices of the dead. This passage, however, is taken from the Talmudic tractate Avoda sara, fol. 8, col. 1, where the following is read: גוי שעשה משתה לבנו וזימן כל היהודים שבעירו אף על פי שאוכלין ושותין משלהם ושמש שלהן עומד לפנייהם מעלה עליהם הכתוב כאילו אכלו מזבחי מתים שנ' וקרא לך ואכלת מזבחו, That is: When a Goi (or Christian) prepares a meal for his son and invites all the Jews in his city, even if they eat from their own provisions and drink from their own provisions, and their own servant waits upon them, Scripture nevertheless regards them as though they had eaten from the sacrifices of the dead, as it is said (Exod 34:15): "And someone invites you, and you eat of his sacrifice." On this matter, the book Shulchan aruch, in the section Jore dea, numero 152, § 1, may also be consulted. The reason for this prohibition is indicated in the book Col bo, fol. 108, col. 4, numero 97, under the title Avoda sara, in these words: גוי שעשה משתה לבנו או לבתו אסור ליהנות מפעודתו ואפילו לאכול הישראל משלו שם, That is: When a Goi arranges a meal for his son or his daughter, it is forbidden to partake of anything from his feast; and even if an Israelite wished to eat and drink there from his own provisions, it is still forbidden, because he would be sitting among the Gojim (or Christians) and eating in their company.

A Christian is thus not deemed worthy enough that a Jew should sit beside him or eat with him; and they believed that they might be defiled if they were to eat with a Christian, for in the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the 29th chapter, it is written thus: כל עבדים שנימולו עם אברהם איבנו לא נתקיימו לא הם ולא זרעם בישראל: ומניין שמלן שנאמר וכל אנשי ביתו יליד בית נימולו ולמה מלן בשביל הטהרה שלא יטמאו את ארוניהם במאכליהם ובמשתייהם שכל מי שאוכל עם הערל כאלו אוכל עם הכלב מה הכלב שלא נימול כך הערל שלא נימול וכל הנוגע בערל כנוגע במת. וכל הרוחץ עמו כרוחץ עם המצורע שהם בחייהם כמתים ובמותם כנבלת השדה ואין תפלתם נכנסת לפני הקדוש ברוך הוא ועליהם הוא אומר לא המתים יהללו יה: that is, all servants who were circumcised by our father Abraham did not remain steadfast among Israel, neither they nor their seed. From where is it proven that he circumcised them? Because it is said (Gen 17:27): "And everything male in his house, both those born at home, was circumcised." But why did he circumcise them? For the sake of purity it was done, so that they would not defile their masters with their food and drink; for anyone who eats with an uncircumcised person does just as much as if he were eating with a dog, for just as a dog is not circumcised, so likewise one who still has his foreskin is also not circumcised; and whoever touches an uncircumcised person does just as much as if he were touching a dead man; and anyone who bathes with him does just as much as if he were bathing with a leper, since the uncircumcised are, during their lifetimes, as though dead, and after their death like carrion in the field, and their prayer does not come before the holy and blessed God, and of such it is said (Ps 115:17): "The dead do not praise the Lord." From this one can see how mockingly the Christians are regarded by the Jews because they do not have themselves circumcised, and why the Jews are not permitted to eat with them.

Regarding the question of whether a Christian acts rightly when he buys meat from a Jew: a Jew could say in his own defense that a Christian does no wrong in this matter, since according to the teaching of the Rabbis he can be assured that nothing unclean or bad will be sold to him, inasmuch as it is written in the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Chóschén hammischpat, numero 228, §. 6: אסור לרמות בני אדם במקה וממכר וגו' ואף אם הוא עכו"ם לא ימכור, That is: it is forbidden to deceive people in buying and selling, etc.; and even if he were an idolater (or Goi), one shall not sell him flesh from a nefela or carrion under the pretense that it is to be regarded as properly slaughtered. The same is likewise to be found in the book Lebúsch ir Schülchan, numero 228, col. 3. So also in the book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 80, col. 2, in the 18th chapter, numero 3, under the title Hilchóth mechira, one reads: אין מוכרין בשר נבילה לכוּתִי בכלל שחוטה שחוטה אף על פי שהנבילה אצלו כשחוטה, That is: one does not sell a Cuthean (or Goi) any nefela or carrion under the guise of slaughtered meat, even though the carrion is regarded by him as equivalent to slaughtered meat. And in the Talmudic tractate Chóllin, it is taught at fol. 94, col. 1 as follows: מפני ב' דברים אמרו אין מוכרין נבילות, That is: for two reasons it is said that one shall not sell a nóchri (or foreigner) any nefela, that is carrion, or teréfa: first, because one thereby leads him into error (so that he believes there is no defect in it, whereas in fact the matter stands otherwise); and second, so that he does not go and sell it to an Israelite.

As for the word teréfa, which derives from טרף taráf, meaning "to tear apart," its significance is explained by Elias in his Tischbi fol. 39, col. 1. in these words: שהם טריפה שאסרה לנו התורה הוא בשר בהמה או חיה שנטרפה על ידי זאב או דוב ויוצא סהם ר"ל שמשו בה דרך השאלה לשאר איסורי מאכלות : בהם רק ר"ל זל שמשו בה דרך השאלה לשאר איסורי מאכלות that is, the teréfa which the Law (Lev 17:15) has forbidden us properly signifies the flesh of a domestic animal or wild beast that has been torn apart by a wolf, or bear, or similar (predatory animal); but our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have also used this word metaphoricè and improperly for the remaining forbidden foods. Thus by this word one understands not only that which has been torn, but also everything forbidden for consumption on account of illness or some other defect. How many kinds of teréfa there are, however, is taught by Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 105, col. 1. in the Parascha Mischpatim, in these words, when he states: כבר ידעת כי ע' מיני טרפיות הן שמנו ר"ל במסכת חולין, that is, it is already known to you that there are seventy kinds of teréfa, which our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have enumerated in the Talmudic tractate Chóllin.

The word nefela, which derives from נפל nafál, meaning "to fall," signifies an animal that has fallen and died of itself, as can be seen in Rabbi Levi ben Gershom's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 220, col. 1, in the Parascha Reéh, where one reads: נבילה היא הבהמה שמתה, that is, Nefela signifies an animal that has died. And in the Talmudic tractate Avóda Zára, fol. 26, col. 2, it is written in the Tosephóth: נבילה היא שמתה מחמת חולי, that is, that which (an animal) has died through an illness is called nefela. Likewise, in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 203, col. 2, in the aforementioned Parascha Reéh, it is taught that the unclean spirit dwells upon a nefela, or carrion: שמיטתה היתה ברוח הטומאה, that is, because its death was caused by the unclean spirit (namely, the devil).

I respond, however, to what the Jews can bring forward in their defense: that although the cited words of the Rabbis, in which it is forbidden to sell a Christian a nefela or teréfa, are perfectly sound, there are nevertheless many other statements of the Rabbis in which precisely the opposite is taught, and in which it is permitted to sell a Christian carrion and the flesh of an animal that has died on its own from illness, or a teréfa. For in the little book Othioth (or Otios) of Rabbi Akiva, Cracow edition, it is written at fol. 20, col. 1 as follows: מן שבהמה מתה בעלה מוכר אותה לגוים וגוים אוכלים את בשרה ועורה נותנים That is: When an animal dies, the one to whom it belongs sells it to the Gojim (or Christians), and the Gojim eat its flesh, but the hide they give (to the tanner) to be tanned. And in the Sepher Toledóth Adam ve-Chávva, it is taught at fol. 141, col. 4 under the title Náthif chámischa áfar, chélek chamischi:

בכל מקום מותר למכור נבילה וטריפה לגוי סתם ואף על גב דסבור גוי דכשירה דהוא מטעה עצמו וישראל הרואהו אסור לחזור ולקנותה. ואם מפרש לו שהוא כשירה אסור מפני שהוא מטעהו ועוד שמא ישראל הרואהו יחזור ויקנה מהגוי. ואין הפרש בזה בין מכר למתנה בין בביתו בין במקולין. ואם כל טבחי העיר הם ישראלים ורגילים להכריז כשיש שם טרפה. קודם הכרזה אסור למכור לגוי נבילה וטריפה ולא ירך חתוכה ולאחר הכרזה מותר ששום ישראל לא יקנה מגוי That is: It is permitted in all places to sell a nefela and terefa, that is, carrion (or an animal that has died on its own) and a torn one (or one that otherwise has a defect), to a Goi (or Christian) without qualification, even if the Goi supposes that it is colcher (or fit and proper to eat), for (one does not cause the Goi to err and to buy something bad as something good, but rather) he causes himself to err; and it is forbidden to an Israelite who sees this to buy it back again. But if he (namely the Jewish butcher) were to tell him (the Goi) in plain words that it is colcher flesh, then it is forbidden to do so (because he would thereby cause him to err and lead him astray), as well as for the reason that an Israelite who sees it might buy it back from the Goi. There is also no distinction in this matter whether (the Goi is) sold or given a gift by the Jew, whether in his house or at the market stall. But if all the butchers in a city are Israelites and are accustomed to making a public announcement when there is a terefa, then before the announcement it is forbidden to sell a Goi a nefela, or terefa, or even a severed hip; but after the announcement it is permitted, because then no Israelite will buy it from a Goi. So too in the book Shulchan aruch, in the section Jore dea numero 117., one reads: 'ודגים טמאים' (וכן מי שנתמנה לו נבילה וטריפה בביתו) (מותר למכרם וגו') That is: When a hunter comes across game, or birds, or fish that are unclean, and likewise when someone in his house obtains a nefela and terefa, it is permitted for him to sell them, etc. From this one can see as clear as the sun that the good teaching cited previously is entirely nullified by this one, as will likewise become apparent in what follows.

Concerning the proof which the Jews employ to maintain this frivolous teaching, that they may sell a carcass to a Christian, it is taken from Deut 14:21, where it is written: You shall not eat any carcass; to the Ger, that is, the sojourner, within your gates you may give it, that he may eat it; or sell it to a nochri, that is, a foreigner. Concerning these words, Rabbi Levi ben Gershom writes in his commentary thereon, fol. 220, col. 1: הנה גר שער הוא הגר שקבל: עליו שלא לעבוד עבודה זרה כי העובד עבודה זרה לא ישב בארצנו כאמרו בפרשה ואלה המשפטים לא ישבו בארצך פן יחטאו אותך לי. והתורה צוה במקומות רבים לאהוב את הגר ולזה הקדים היותה לגר בנתיניהל למכירתה לנוכרי והנה לא רצה השם יתעלה שתתן אותה לנוכרי לפי שהוא עובד עבודה זרה ולזה לא רצה שתהיה לו ממנו מתנה חנם that is, Behold, the Ger or sojourner at the gate is that stranger who has taken upon himself not to serve any idol (and has bound himself to observe the seven commandments of the children of Noah), for one who practices idolatry shall not dwell in our land, as is said in the Parashah Veélleh hammischpatim (Exod 23:33): They shall not dwell in your land, lest they cause you to sin against me. The Law has also commanded in many places to love the Ger, and therefore it places first that one should give it (namely the carcass) to the Ger, and only thereafter that one may sell it to the nochri or foreigner (who is given over to idolatry). And behold, the praised God did not wish that you should give (or present) it to a foreigner, since he practices idolatry; therefore the Law did not wish that we should procure benefit for him through a gift given freely (but rather he shall pay for it). And in the Talmudic tractate Avoda sára, fol. 20, col. 1, the following is read concerning the aforementioned words of Deut 14:21: אין לי אלא לגר בנתינה ולגוי במכירה. לגר במכירה מנין ת"ל תתננה או מכור לגוי. בנתינה מנין ת"ל תתננה ואכלה או מכור לנכרי נמצא אתה אומר אחד גר ואחד גוי בין בנתינה בין במכירה דברי רבי מאיר. רבי יהודה אומר דברים ככתבן לגר בנתינה ולגוי במכירה that is, I see from this nothing other than that one should give (or present) the carcass to a Ger and sell it to a Goi. From where is it proven that one should sell it to a Ger? Because it is said: You shall give it (to the Ger), or sell it to a Goi. But from where is it proven that one should give it to a Ger? Because it is stated: (To the Ger) you shall give it, that he may eat it; or sell it to a nóchri or foreigner. It is therefore found that you say that it may be either given or sold to a Ger as well as to a Goi. These are the words of Rabbi Meir. Rabbi Jehuda says that such words (of the Law) are to be understood as they are written, and that it should be given (or presented) to a Ger, but sold to a Goi. The very same is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim, fol. 21, col. 2. From this one sees clearly that the aforementioned passage is used to prove that one should sell a carcass to a Goi or Christian.

In the old Nizzáchon, which is an entire book written against the Christians, the following is also read on paginâ 243 and 244: מה שמנבחים ואומרים שאין נכון לערל וטמא לשמש ליהודים : אמור להם אדרבא אם לא ישרתו ליהודים הם הן חייבים כליה ומיתה דכתב בישעיה הנביא קומי אוריבי בא אורך וגו' כי הגוי והממלכה אשר לא יעבדוך יאבדו והגוים חרוב יחרובו : אבל כל זמן שמשמשים את ישראל יש להם קצת תקוה שנאמר ועמדו זרים ורעו צאנכם ובני נכר איכריכם וכורמיכם אם כן יש להם לעבור אותנו בל שער לקיים מה שנאמר ורב יעבוד צעיר : ומתוך כך אמרה תורה לא תאכלו כל נבילה לגר אשר בשעריך תתננה ואכלה או מכור לנכרי : על כן אמרה תורה למכור נבילה לנכרי כי הם יעבדונו ואין הקב"ה מקפח שכר כל ברייה : וכן אנו עושים שכן פסולות שלנו נמכור להם : וגם That is: As for their barking and saying that it is not right for an uncircumcised and unclean person (such as they are) to serve the Jews, give them this answer: that on the contrary, if they do not serve the Jews, they are deserving of extermination and death, as it is written in the Prophet Isaiah (chap. 60, v. 1): Arise, shine, for your light has come, etc. (and it follows there at v. 12): For the nation or kingdom that will not serve you shall perish, and those Gōjim or heathens shall be utterly destroyed. But as long as they serve the Israelites, they have some hope, for it is said (Isa 61:5): Strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and foreigners shall be your farmhands and vinedressers. Since this is so, they must serve us, in order to fulfill what is said (Gen 25:23): The elder (namely Esau) shall serve the younger (that is, Jacob). (That is, the Christians, who descend from Esau, must render service to the Jews, who descend from Jacob.) And for this very reason the Law says (Deut 14:21): You shall not eat any carrion; to the Ger or stranger who is within your gates you shall give it, that he may eat it, or sell it to the nóchri or foreigner. For this reason the Law has commanded that we shall sell carrion to the nóchri or foreigner (namely the Christians), since they serve us; for the holy and blessed God withholds the wages of no creature (that serves Him). And thus we do it, for we sell them that which is unclean (or forbidden) to us (to eat). For this same reason we also sell them the hindquarters of the cattle. From this it is plain to see what reward, according to this teaching, is given to the Christians who serve the Jews for their trouble and labor, namely that they sell them carrion and other foods forbidden to Jews for consumption. Does anyone call this giving a man his wages for his labor, when one sells him unclean and worthless meat for good money?

Indeed, the Gōjim, namely the Christians and other peoples, are regarded by the malicious Jews as less than dogs, in that they teach that according to the Law of Moses, one may sell carrion or livestock that has died on its own from some disease to a Goi, but that which has been torn by a wild animal, and is far better than carrion, should be given to a dog to eat; and this is proven from the words of Exod 22:31, where it is written: "You shall be holy people to me; therefore you shall not eat any flesh that is torn by beasts in the field; you shall cast it to the dogs." Concerning these last words, "you shall cast it to the dogs," Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his Commentary as follows: אף הוא ככלב או אינו אלא כלב כמשמעו הלמוד לומר בנבילה או מכור לנכרי קל וחומר לטרפה שמותרת בכל הנאות אם כן מה תלמוד לומר לכלב לכלב למדך שהכלב נכבד ממנו ולמדך הכתוב שאין הקדוש ברוך הוא מקפח שכר כל ברייה שנאמר ולכל בני ישראל לא יחרץ כלב לשונו אמר הקדוש ברוך שכו: that is, he (namely the Goi) is also like a dog; or is there by this (understand: by the word "dog") nothing else to be understood than literally a dog? Scripture teaches, concerning a nefela or carrion (Deut 14:21), that one should sell it to a nóchri or foreigner: how much more, then, is it permitted to sell him a teréfa, or that which has been torn, from which one may seek profit in every manner? If that is so, what then do the words mean: "You shall cast it to the dog"? They teach you that a dog is more worthy of honor than he (namely the Goi or Christian). So Scripture also teaches you that the holy blessed God withholds the (deserved) reward from no creature, as it is said (Exod 11:7): "But against none of the children of Israel shall a dog move his tongue"; and the holy blessed God said: give him (namely the dog) his reward, that is, give the dogs the torn flesh as their reward, because they only barked at the Egyptians when they buried their dead by night, and did not bark at any Israelite, as Rabbi Bechai indicates in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, pagina 97, col. 1, in the Parascha Mischpatim.

That the little word "he" is to be understood as referring to a Goi or Christian is to be seen in the book Zeda laderech, which Rabbi Bär composed as a commentary on the aforementioned Rabbi Salomo Jarchi's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 72, col. 3, in the Parascha Mischpatim, where the said Rabbi Bär writes as follows concerning the cited words of Rabbi Salomon: קשה בעיני מאי אף הוא דקאמר ר"ש הלא לא זכר ולא פקד כלל מקודם גוי אם כן איך יפול עליו לומר אף הוא ואנחנו לא נדע מי הוא זה ואיזהו לכן נראה לי שר"ש ז"ל כתב אף הגוי הוא ככלב אלא שמפני הרעומות דגוים דלגו המדפיסים מלת גוי כשם שעשו בשאר דברים הרבה כיוצא בזה: that is, it seems difficult to me what the words "he is also like a dog" mean, which Rabbi Salomon Jarchi mentions. He had not mentioned a Goi at all in what preceded. If that is the case, how could it be said of him that he is also like a dog? And we do not know who is meant by the little word "he." For this reason it seems to me that Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, of blessed memory, wrote that the Goi (or Christian) is also like a dog; but the printers skipped over (and omitted) the word Goi on account of the murmuring of the Gojīm (or Christians, who might become angry if they were to read it), just as they have done in many other such matters (which are directed against Christians). These are the words of Rabbi Bär, in which he has rightly brought to light the opinion of Rabbi Salomon; for that this is indeed the case is clearly to be seen from the said Rabbi Salomon's commentary on the Talmudic Tractate Pesachim, fol. 22, col. 1, where he writes as follows concerning the aforementioned words of Exod 22:31, "You shall cast it to the dog": אין הק'בה מקפח שכר כל בריה ונאמר במצרים לא יחרץ כלב לשונו לפיכך אמר הקפירה תורה ליתן שכרו וכבדה הכלב מן הגוי שהנבלה ימכור לגוי וטרפה לכלב: that is, the holy blessed God withholds the reward from no creature, and it is said (Exod 11:7) concerning Egypt that no dog moved his tongue; therefore the Law was careful to give them their reward, and it honored the dog more than a Goi, for it commands therein that one shall sell the carcass to a Goi, but cast the torn flesh before a dog. Rabbi Salomon has without doubt taken this from the book Mechilta, fol. 35, col. 2, where one reads: מה תלמוד לומר לכלב תשליכון ללמדך שאין הק'בה מקפח שכר כל בריה שהכלב מכובד מן העבד שהטרפה לכלב ונבלה לעבד ללמדך שאין הקב"ה חן לן שכר כל בריה שנאמר ולכל בני ישראל לא יחרץ כלב לשונו אמר הק'בה תן לו שכרו: that is, what do the words mean: "You shall cast it to the dog"? They teach you that a dog is more honored than a servant, for the torn flesh is to be cast before a dog, but the carcass is to be given to the servant. They also instruct you that the holy blessed God cuts off the reward from no creature, as it is said: "But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue"; and God commanded that the dog's reward be given to him. Now, that a servant is mentioned here in place of a Goi is a change made deliberately by the Jews, so that a Christian who reads it should not notice that he is regarded by the Jews as less than a dog; which is irrefutably evident from a comparison of the cited words of Rabbi Salomon, and may also be reasonably concluded from the fact that nowhere in Scripture is it commanded that a carcass be given to a servant. That by the dog, in the words "You shall cast it to the dog," Rabbi Salomon understands a Goi or Christian is no wonder, for the Jews commonly call Christians dogs, as was reported above in Chapter 16 of the first part, pagina 713, 714, and 715.

Regarding that which is called teréfa, which has either been torn by wild animals or otherwise, as mentioned above, has some defect: it is undeniable and sufficiently well known that the Jews sell it to Christians, concerning which the book Shulchan áruch in the section Jóre déa, numero 119, §. 13, and in the section Chóschen hammíschat, numero 234, §. 3, may be consulted. Hence it also comes about that when they slaughter a goose or a chicken or the like and find a defect in it, they have it carried into the houses of Christians and see how they may sell it. And there is also an example in the Talmudic tractate Chóllin, fol. 94, col. 1, that Rabbi Schmuel had a chicken, which was teréfa and had a defect, given through his servant to a Goi who was a boatman or ferryman, passing it off as properly slaughtered and sound, in payment for his fare. Now if a Talmudic teacher employed such deception, today's Jews will do no better, but will endeavor to follow his example. One ought not to buy anything whatsoever from these malicious people, for they teach that a neféla and a teréfa receives an influence from the Devil, as may be seen from the book Emek hammélech fol. 84, col. 1, where in the 12th chapter under the title Scháar Kirjiáth árba it is written as follows: כל הבהמות והחיות והעופות יש להם נפש היורדת מלמעלה ונשפעת עליהם מהחיות הנושאות את המרכבה אם טהורה נשפעת מסטרא דקדושה אם טמאה נשפעת מסטרא אחרא וזהו סוד הבריקות דרבנן שנתנו סימנים של נבילה וטריפה: that is, all cattle and wild animals and birds have a soul which comes down from above and is imparted to them by the animals that bear the chariot (of which mention is made in Ezek 1); if it is a clean animal, it is granted to it from the side of holiness; but if it is an unclean one, it is given from the other side (namely, from the side of uncleanness, that is, from the evil spirits). And this is the mystery of the examination, in which signs have been given (and taught) by which one may recognize a neféla and a teréfa, which receives an influence from the unclean side. And in the 14th chapter that follows upon this, in the 3rd column of the aforementioned 84th folio, one reads: והבהמה אשר ימצא בה טרפות אין בה ניצוץ טהרה וקדושה והמאכילו לישראל: שלא לדעת מדבק בו טרא אחרא ולכן נענש המאכיל מדה כנגד מדה וגומר: that is, the animal in which something is found that renders it teréfa has no spark of purity and holiness; and whoever gives it to an Israelite to eat without his knowledge causes the other side (that is, the unclean and evil spirit) to cleave to him. Therefore, the one who gives it to eat is punished, and like is repaid with like, etc. If, then, the Jews sell Christians meat that is teréfa, and those same Christians eat it, it follows according to this teaching that the consequence thereof is that the unclean spirit, the wretched Devil, cleaves to those who eat it.

I must also here state the reason why it is said to be commanded to the Jews to give to the Christians, and to other peoples who are outside of Judaism, that which is teréfa and nefélá, concerning which the following is written in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 74, col. 2, in the Parascha Bo el Paroh: הכה המשחית לא ישבע לעולם לאמור הב הב ובעבור כי הנבילה והטריפה לקו מצד כח המשחית לכך צותה התורה להשליך הטריפה והנבילה לנכרי שנאמר או מכור לנכרי מצד כח המשחית לכך צותה התורה להשליך הטריפה והנבילה לנכרי שנאמר או מכור לנכרי: that is, the destructive power (namely, the Devil) will never be satisfied, but says, give here; and since a nefélá and teréfa has been struck from the side of the power of destruction (and thus an animal that dies of itself, or is torn apart, or otherwise acquires a defect such that it is forbidden for Jews to eat, has been touched and struck by the Devil), therefore the Law has commanded that such teréfa and nefélá shall be thrown to the nochri, or stranger (namely, to him who is not a Jew), as it is said (Deut 14:21): Or sell it to a stranger; since the peoples (of the world, meaning the Christians and all remaining peoples) come from that same side (namely, from the side of the Devil, as has also been shown at greater length above at the beginning of the first chapter of this second part). The godless scoundrel, Rabbi Bechai, thus wishes to give it to be understood that, since an animal that has died of illness, or has been torn apart, or otherwise has a defect, has been touched by the Devil, and since Christians together with other peoples also originate from the Devil, it therefore follows for this reason that carrion, or that which is torn, or that which is defective in some other manner, is fitting and proper for Christians; since both the reprehensibility of such flesh and the Christians are said to originate from the Devil.

Further, the aforementioned Rabbi Mechai teaches in his said commentary, fol. 213, col. 4., concerning this matter as follows: הנבלה שלקתה מאותו צד היא לנכרי במכירה ולא בנתינה שנאמר או מכור לנכרי שהרי הנבלה לנכרי במכירה והטריפה לכלב בנתינה שנאמר לכלב תשליכון אותו וכן דעת הרמב"ם ז"ל שזו מצות עשה וחשבה מכלל רס"ח מצות עשה: that is, the neféla, or carrion, which is struck from that same side (namely, from the side of impurity, the Devil), shall be sold to the stranger and not given to him as a gift, for it is said (Deut 14:21): "Or sell it to the stranger." For behold, carrion shall be sold to a stranger, and that which is torn shall be given to a dog, as it is said (Exod 22:31): "You shall cast it to the dogs." And thus it is the opinion of Rabbi Moshe bar Maimon, of blessed memory, that this is a positive commandment, which he has counted among the 248 positive commandments. In this passage, however, something has been omitted after the words "Or sell it to the stranger," as can be seen in the Hebrew, where a blank space stands; yet it can be gathered from a comparison with what was cited shortly before this, from fol. 74, col. 2. of the said Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, that the omitted words must be these: לפי שהאומות מאותו צד הם, that is, because the peoples (of the world) are from that same side (namely, the side of the devils). Rabbi Bechai has thus intended once again to teach that an animal which has been struck by the Devil so that it must die shall be sold to a Christian, because the Christian also originates from the Devil.

The same can also be read in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 105, col. 1, in the Parashah Mishpatim, where he writes concerning the aforementioned words of Exod 22:31, "You shall be holy people unto me; therefore you shall not eat any flesh that is torn by beasts in the field; you shall cast it to the dogs," as follows: כי דבקות ישראל הוא במקום הקודש בר"א כי חלק י"י עמו. ובשר בשרה טריפה. השדה הנוטי הוא שדה של הפוחם ואחרי שנטרפה על ידי חיות היער בשדה הנזכר אין ראוי לישראל לאכלה רק ליתן אותה לכלב הידוע שהלקהו ויתגרה בו וכשכשכ לו בזנבו ושלחה קפצה פיה ולא ירחץ כלב לשונו וזהו טעם או מכור: that is, (you shall not eat anything torn,) because the Israelites cleave to the place of holiness (namely, to God), as it is said (Deut 32:9): "For the Lord's portion is His people." (So it is also written in Exod 22:31: Therefore you shall not eat any flesh that is torn by beasts in the field. The field that is mentioned here is the field of the apple trees; and when an animal has been torn by wild beasts in the said field, it is not fitting that an Israelite should eat it; rather, he shall give it to the well-known dog (that is, to the chief devil Sammaël, who is the angel of death and is called a dog, as was shown above in the eighteenth chapter of the first part), who had struck it down, and shall contend with him, whereupon he will wag his tail (as dogs do when they fawn), and wickedness will shut its mouth, and the dog will not move his tongue; and this is the reason for the words: "Or sell it to a foreigner," because his power comes from there, that is, because the devil is the prince and ruler of the foreigner, for those seventy evil angels, or devils, of whom mention was made in the said eighteenth chapter of the first part, are called by the rabbis Cochóth, or the powers, of the seventy nations.

That flesh which is teréfa has been struck by the devil: this is likewise taught by the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai in his mentioned commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 97, col. 1, in the Parascha Mischpatim, with these words: ישראל מקודשים וכיון שכח מעלתם גדול כך אין להם לאכול בשר טרפה שליקה מצד הכח המשחית והזכיר בשדה לתוספת ביאור כי שם כחו של עשו הרשע שהיה איש שדה והוא כחו של קין ראש המרצחים שהזכיר בו הכתוב ויהי בהיותם בשדה גם הכלבים מן הצד ההוא והטרפה ראויה להם ולכך אמר לכלב תשליכון אותו: That is: The Israelites are sanctified, and because the power of their holiness is so very great, they shall eat no flesh that is teréfa, since it has been struck from the side of the power of the Destroyer (namely, the devil). The field, however, is mentioned (in the words of Exod 22:31) so that the matter may be explained all the more clearly, for it is there that the power of the wicked Esau dwells, who was a man of the field (namely, the chief devil Sammaël), and that same power is also the power of Cain, the first murderer, of whom Scripture makes mention (when it says in Gen 4:8): And when they were in the field. The dogs, too, are from that same side (namely, from the side of the devils), and the torn flesh is fitting for them; therefore Scripture says: You shall cast it to the dogs.

From all of this, it can be reasonably judged that, even though some rabbinical books forbid Jews from selling to a Goi or Christian the flesh of an animal that has died of disease, or been torn apart by wild beasts, or that otherwise has some defect, nevertheless many others not only permit this but even hold it to be a commandment of God that they ought to do so. Those Christians who receive meat from them can therefore see plainly how shamefully and recklessly they may be deceived by them; and anyone who receives meat from them must always be anxious that it may come from an animal that has dropped dead or was diseased. Why, moreover, should a Christian honor a Jew so highly as to give him money in such a manner, given that the Jews, as mentioned above, regard us as dogs to whom carrion belongs, and indeed as people who are descended from the Devil, and believe that they ought therefore to sell us carrion and other flesh from defective animals, because such flesh has likewise been touched by the Devil?

There is, however, yet another important reason why Christians ought not to buy meat from Jews, namely because, according to the unanimous testimony of converted Jews, they greatly defile the meat they sell to Christians. On this subject, the converted Ferdinand Heß writes in his Judengeissel, in the 11th chapter of the second part, as follows: Whoever among the Jews does not know this art (namely, the removal of the veins from the hindquarters of a slaughtered animal, without which the Jews are forbidden to eat them), and yet wishes to stock his kitchen with good meat, slaughters the animal and sells the hindquarters to the Christians, for they may not eat them unless the veins have been carefully removed. But see, you Christians who are so fond of eating with Jews, how they handle the meat: their children must first thoroughly soil it, yes, even spit and urinate upon it, and say therewith that the Goyim shall devour it with מיתה משונה mifa meschúnna, that is, unwholesome diseases and certain death. Take note of this, you Christians who are so fond of eating with Jews and buying meat from them that they have slaughtered. The converted Samuel Friedrich Brenz also reports the following on this matter in his Jüdischer abgestreiffter Schlangenbalg, chapter 3, pag. 15, and says: Furthermore, it is also to be known that the Jews eat no hindquarters whatsoever from cattle unless they are veined in a particular manner, which scarcely one in a hundred, indeed in a thousand Jews, is able to do; and they derive this practice from Gen 32. Therefore they have the custom of slaughtering the cattle and taking the two front quarters; upon the two hind quarters they spit and say, כפרה Cappóro, it is a pity that the Goyim should devour that, and they wish upon the Christians that they should devour the סם המות Sam hammóves, that is, bitter death. If the meat of the hindquarter is not quite at its best, they blow it up with their poisonous breath so that it may appear all the more presentable and saleable. Likewise, if an animal falls dead on a Jew, he says to the Christians: I have slaughtered the animal and it has become teresa for me, that is, I am not permitted to eat it, and thus sells such carrion meat to the Christians.

Therefore, the highly learned and renowned Buxtorf writes in his Judenschul published in German and printed in the year 1643 at Basel, on pages 591 and 592, at the end of the 27th chapter concerning the Jews, in the following manner: They do not eat the hindquarters, on account of the angel having dislocated the joint of Jacob's hip, as is to be read in the first book of Moses (Gen); in Italy, however, they have discovered through the art of Anatomy (as I myself have seen printed among them on a patent) that through skillful and subtle removal of the sinews, the hindquarters can also be made clean and permissible to eat. Had they known this art in the time of Moses, he would have had to step aside with his forbidden foods. It would be good if one were to let these skillful masters and Anatomicos also perform an Anatomy on swine; perhaps that flesh might likewise be made permissible to them. The hindquarters they generally sell to Christians; but those who gladly buy this meat from them ought to consider that all who have converted from Jewish unbelief to the Christian faith write unanimously that they first defile such meat, let their children urinate upon it, and also speak a blessing over it, that the goi must מיתה משונה (míta meschünnab) devour it thereby, that is, the Christian shall choke on a sudden death from it. Exactly the same is also to be found in the Judenschul published by Buxtorf in the Latin language, printed and enlarged at Basel in the year 1661, at the end of the 36th chapter, on pages 617 and 618.

Beyond this, I recall quite well that when I traveled up the Rhine from Holland in the year 1681, I was told at that time, in the region of Cleves, as a certainty, that shortly before, in that same area, a Jew had been executed who, among other wicked deeds he had committed, had also confessed that he had sold carrion and all manner of unclean and defiled meat to Christians. Now, although one might say that not all Jews will be so inclined, anyone who buys meat from them must always live in fear that it might have been contaminated in such a manner, and cannot be assured that nothing improper has taken place with it. This suspicion, moreover, can be increased all the more by the fact that the Jews hate us Christians in the most extreme degree and are our worst enemies, as is sufficiently evident from what has been thoroughly reported in the 15th chapter of the first part and in many other places of this book: from an enemy, however, one has nothing other than evil to expect. For this reason, every Christian does very well when he keeps entirely clear of this godless people, leaves them their unclean meat, with which they wish a sudden death upon whoever eats it, and buys none of it from them at all; and even if he must pay a butcher among the Christians perhaps one or two pennies more per pound, he is nonetheless assured that he receives clean meat, whereas with that which the Jews sell he can eat his way into an illness. And even if a Jew were to maintain by an oath that the meat he wishes to sell is clean, he is still not to be believed, even according to the teaching of the rabbis themselves, for in the book Shulchan arúch, in the section Jore deá numero 119, §. 8, it is written: החשור על הדבר אינו נאמן עליו אפילו בשבועה: That is: Whoever is suspect in a matter is not believed, even if he swears an oath.

Johannes Schmid also presents, in his book written against the Jews and printed at Coburg in the year 1682, which he titles Feuriger Drachen giff/ und wütiger Ottern gall [Fiery Dragon's Poison and Raging Adder's Gall], etc., in the sixth book, paginâ 189, the following question: Whether it is true, as people say, that when they (the Jews) sell to Christians the hindquarters of cattle, which they themselves do not eat, or other meat that they slaughter and sell to Christians, they not only curse it, so that the Christians shall eat all manner of sickness and death from it, but also besmear it with their spittle and other filth? And he answers this as follows: As to the curse, there is no room for doubt, since, according to their teaching and belief, they cannot give Christians any blessing, but must curse them. As for the other matter, it was likewise still common among them in the first part of this period, and because it had been exposed in Swabia and become known in other lands, they suffered much trouble on account of it, so that a magistrate compelled them to spit upon a quarter of beef, salvô honore, and the following day it was examined and found that in those very spots where the spittle had fallen, it had turned blue, yellow, and green all mixed together, and was more foul than if it had been fouled by poisonous flies; and for this reason he had it hung on the gallows, to see whether ravens or other carrion birds would feed upon it, but none touched it. From that time on, no further account has been received. Even supposing they were to leave off such practices, I could not eat anything from them, even if it were candied and prepared with the finest spices, which I have also never done, for all the time I have spent among them; and I have more than once been utterly astonished that great and distinguished persons eat of their slaughtering, seeing that Jews are by nature foul-smelling, and conduct themselves in a filthy and unclean manner in their slaughtering, cooking, and the like, and in their housekeeping, though they could manage it more cleanly and safely. These are the words of the aforementioned Johannes Schmid.

According to Jewish teaching, there is also another way by which a food or drink can become defiled, namely when such things are placed under a bed. On this subject, the book Shulchan aruch, in the section Jóre déa, numero 116, §. 5, states as follows: לֹא יִתֵּן תַּבְשִׁיל וְלֹא מִשְׁקִים תַּחַת הַמִּטָּה מִפְּנֵי רוּחַ רָעָה שְׁשׁוּרָה עֲלֵיהֶם That is: one shall place no cooked food or drink under the bed, because the evil spirit dwells upon it. And in the Sepher chasidim, at numero 458, one reads: שֶׁם תַּחַת הַמִּטָּה לֹא יִהְיֶה אָדָם מֵאֲכֹל כִּי רוּחַ הַטּוֹמְאָה שָׁם That is: a person shall place no food under a bed, because the unclean spirit is there. This, however, is taken from the Talmudic tractate Pesachim, in which fol. 112, col. 1, the following is taught: אוֹכְלִין וּמִשְׁקִין תַּחַת הַמִּטָּה אֶפִּילוּ מִחוּפִּין בְּכָל רוּחַ רָעָה שׁוֹרָה עֲלֵיהֶן That is: upon foodstuffs and drinks that are under a bed, the evil spirit dwells, even if they are already covered with an iron vessel. The Jews, however, will not observe this teaching with respect to what they sell to Christians; for when, in a nearby town, the Jews were once forbidden, at the insistence of the butchers' guild, to sell meat, and the guild masters learned that they had nonetheless not ceased doing so, they went by night into a Jewish house that was suspected on this account, and found several quarters of meat lying under a filthy and stinking bed, which they then took away. The aforementioned guild masters themselves recounted this to me in detail the following day. The Jew to whom the meat belonged had presumably placed it there so that it might, in his estimation, be defiled by the unclean spirit, and so that Christians might afterward eat such filth. But let this be enough on this subject.

Regarding the question of whether it is permitted for Jews to invite a Christian into their home as a guest: one might well come to think that it must be permitted for them, since experience attests that this sometimes occurs among one or another of them. But it must be known that such Jews act contrary to the express prohibition of their rabbis, for in Rabbi Lipmann's Sepher Nizzáchon, numero 346, it is written thus: כל המזמין גוי ומאכילו ומשקהו גורם גלות גלות לבניו that is, everyone who invites a Goi as a guest and gives him food and drink causes his children to come into exile or misery (and to be driven out). Likewise, in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin fol. 104, col. 1. it is read: כל המזמין גוי לתוך ביתו ומשמיש עליו גורם גלות לבניו שנאמר ומבניך אשר יצאו ממך יקחו והיו סריסים בהיכל מלך בבל that is, everyone who invites a Goi into his house and waits upon him causes his children to come into misery, as it is said (Isa 39:7): And they shall take your children who shall come forth from you, and they shall be chamberlains in the palace of the king of Babylon. Now in both of these passages this is said with reference to King Hezekiah, of whom it is read in Isa 39 that he had sinned because he received the envoys of Merodach-Baladan, king of Babylon, so cordially, showed them everything in his house, and fed them, with the result that his sons were therefore taken captive to Babylon; accordingly, in the cited passage in the Talmud it is read: בשביל שניים אכלו על שולחנו גרם גלות לבניו that is, because heathens ate at his table, he caused his sons to be led away as captives.

Jews are also not permitted to invite any Christian to a wedding, concerning which the book Brandspiegel, in the 34th chapter, fol. 123, col. 2, contains the following written passage: *ער גיוואהרנט זיין דש אן קיין ערלים זול ביטן חויך חיינ התנה שלמה המלך: חגט אין משלי ובשמחתך אל יתערב זר דחט חי: טייטש מין דיינר ורייד ניט עס וול זיין אישין מיין פרעמדר: דיא חכמי הקבלה שרייבן ווען דיא מזיקים זעהן דאט מואט פרעמדס חויך איוט אין חיינ פריידר: דיא חכנה חוי: חונ' זיא וון חון: that is, one must be very careful not to invite any uncircumcised person to a wedding. King Solomon says in his Proverbs (Prov 14:10): "In your joy no stranger shall mingle." Those who understand the Cabbalam write that when the devils see that someone foreign is at the wedding and the people are merry, they cause harm. Indeed, it is considered a sin among the Jews when they invite a Christian as a guest, and therefore in the large Tefillah fol. 35, col. 1., under the title Schácharith, among other sins that a Jew confesses, this too is read: ווימני גוי ביום טוב, that is, "I have invited a Gentile as a guest on the feast day." And the very same thing is also to be found in the little book printed at Fürth, which is called Sepher mepháresch chataim, under the letter Sain.*

Who would willingly eat with a Jew, and give him occasion to call upon God for forgiveness of such an imagined sin? There is surely no filthier, more disgusting, more unclean, and more stinking people under the sun than the Jews: how then could one have any appetite or desire to put into one's mouth something that such loathsome people have had in their unclean hands, at the enjoyment of which they, out of their innate bitter hatred, which they know how to cunningly conceal and keep secret through their hypocrisy, might well wish one poison in the body and sudden death? How should a Christian show such great regard for a Jew, who is his most sworn enemy, and who hopes every day that when the Messiah comes he will strangle and kill him in a pitiful and cruel manner, and who regards him as nothing more than a dog and curses him so many times over, as has been shown above in the second chapter of the second part, that he might eat with him? One is always accustomed to guard oneself against one's enemies; how much more reason, then, does a Christian have to guard himself against a Jew, who is, next to the Devil, his worst enemy, so that no harm may befall him from him, which can very easily happen through food and drink? Indeed, how should one eat and drink with such a godless and poisonous mouth, which every day blasphemes and reviles our most precious Savior three times in a most terrible manner in a prayer that begins עלינו לשבח וגו' Olénu lěschabbéach etc. (mention of which has been made above in the 2nd chapter of the first part, at page 81, etc.)?

Therefore, it was entirely well done in the Concilium Agathense that it was forbidden therein to eat with the Jews, concerning which the following is written in the Jus Canonicum, in the second part of the Decretals, in the 28th Causa, in the 1st Quaestio, cap. 14: Omnes deinceps Clerici sive Laici, Judeorum convivia evitent, nec eos ad convivium quisquam accipiat; quia cum apud Christianos communibus cibus non utantur, indignum atque sacrilegum est eorum cibos à Christianis sumi: cum ea quæ, Apostolo permittente, nos sumimus, ab illis judicentur immunda, ac sic inferiores incipiant esse Christiani, quam Judæi, si nos, quæ ab illis apponuntur, utamur, illi verò à nobis oblata contemnant: that is, henceforth all clergy and laity shall avoid the Jews' meals, and no one shall receive them at table; for since they do not eat of the same food among Christians, it is improper and injurious to sacred ordinance that their foods should be consumed by Christians, inasmuch as those foods which we eat by the Apostle's permission are held by them to be unclean, and in such a manner Christians begin to become lesser than the Jews, when we partake of what is set before us by them, while they despise what is offered by us. But let this suffice on this subject.

Chapter XIII.

In which it is shown: 1. That the time in which the Messiah, according to the prophecies of the Old Testament, must have come, has long since passed. 2. When he, according to the teaching of certain rabbis, was born. 3. Where he has resided since he was born. 4. Why he has not yet come until now. 5. When, how, and from where he will come. 6. What signs of his coming there will be. And finally 7. how many Messiahs, in the opinion of the Jews, there are supposed to be.

That the Messiah must already have been born and come long ago is easily demonstrated not only from the Holy Scripture of the Old Testament, but also from the Jews' own books. As regards the Holy Scripture of the Old Testament, Gen 49:10 reads as follows: The Schevet, that is, the scepter, shall not depart from Judah, nor the Mechokék, that is, the lawgiver, from between his feet, until Schiloh (that is, the Messiah) comes; and by these words it is indicated that the royal government and the Synedrium, or the great council at Jerusalem, which consisted of seventy persons and was the highest court, should not cease and come to an end before the Messiah would come. For that by the scepter the royal government is to be understood is to be found from the threefold Chaldean translation of these words, which was cited above in the fourth chapter of the first part, pagina 208. That by the Mechokék the Synedrium is meant becomes clear from the book Zerór hammór, fol. 60, col. 3. in the Parascha Vajechi, where concerning the aforementioned words, "nor the Mechokék from between his feet," the following is taught: זה רמז על הסופרים והחכמים והסנהדרין, that is, this has a reference to the scribes and the wise men and the Synedrium, or the high council. And in the Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, there stands at fol. 49, col. 3. numero 160. the following written concerning it: ומחוקק מבין רגליו אלו יושבי יעבץ שמורין: הלכות בארץ ישראל בסנהדרי גדולה שהיא יושבת בחלקו של יהודה שנאמר משפחות סופרים יושבי יעבץ, that is, by the Mechokék, or lawgiver, between his feet, are understood those who dwelt in Jabez, who taught ordinances in the land of Israel in the great Synedrium or council, which Synedrium dwelt in the portion of the land of the tribe of Judah, as it is said (1 Chr 2:55): and the families of the scribes (or learned men) who dwelt at Jabez. That by Schiloh the Messiah is meant, however, is to be seen from the aforementioned book Zerór hammór fol. 37, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajéze, where it is read: שילה, רמז על מלך המשיח.

that is, the word Schilób signifies the King Messiah, which is also confirmed in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 59, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajechi, as likewise in the aforementioned three Chaldean translations of the words of Gen 49:10. Now the scepter, or the royal government, had already been taken from the tribe of Judah at the time of Christ, and the Synedrion also ceased not long thereafter. It therefore follows that, according to the aforementioned prophecy of Jacob, the Messiah must have come at that very time. In the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, at fol. 98, col. 1., the following is also read: אמר רבי מלאי משום רבי אלעזר בר שמעון אין בן דוד בא עד שיכלו כל שופטים ושוטרים מישראל, that is, Rabbi Milai said in the name of Rabbi Eliezer the son of Simon: the Son of David (that is, the Messiah) does not come until all judges and officers cease from Israel. These, however, have long since come to an end, in that they have been made subject to the judges of other peoples.

In the prophet Malachi, in the 3rd chapter, v. 1, it is written: Behold, I will send my angel (or messenger), who shall prepare the way before my face (or before me): and the Lord whom you seek shall suddenly come to His temple, and the angel of the covenant whom you desire; and it is thereby indicated that the Messiah was to come quickly and within a short time to the second Temple, which was standing at the time of that prophecy. That the Messiah is to be understood by the Lord and the angel of the covenant is evident from Rabbi David Kimchi's commentary, or exposition, on these words, in which he teaches: הברית הוא מלאך והוא המשיח הוא הארון that is, This Lord is the King Messiah, and He is the angel of the covenant; which is also to be found in Rabbi Saadia's book, which is called Sepher haëmunóth vehadeóth, fol. 38, col. 3, under the title Máamar geúlla acharóna, where it is written: ואם לא יבא בן דוד פתאום כמו שאמר ופתאום יבא אל היכלו האדון אשר אתם מבקשים that is, And if he (namely the son of Joseph) does not come, then the son of David will come quickly, as it is said: And the Lord whom you seek shall suddenly come to His temple. Now this angel of the covenant is also called the Face of God, which is why in Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 76, col. 3, in the Parascha Tissa, on the words of Exod 33:14, My face shall go (before you), it is written as follows: פני ילכו מלאך הברית אשר אתם חפצים שבו פני יראו פני שעליו נאמר בעת רצון עניתיך כי שמי בקרבו that is, My face shall go (before you), (namely) the angel of the covenant whom you desire, in whom my face is seen, of whom it is said (Isa 49:8): I have heard you in a time of favor. (And of him it is written in Exod 23:21:) For my name is in him. So also in the Zijóni, fol. 58, col. 4, in the aforementioned Parascha Tissa, it is written: פני ילכו מלאך הברית כמבואר By the words, My face shall go (before you), the angel of the covenant is to be understood, as is clear. Thus the word "face," which appears in the cited passage of the prophet Malachi, Mal 3:1, also signifies the Messiah, the angel of the covenant, who in His divine nature appeared to the patriarchs in the time of the Old Testament, and who led the Israelites when they went out of Egypt and went before them; and He is called the Face of God because He is the image of the same, as is evident from Col 1:15 and 2 Cor 4:4. Now the second Temple was laid waste at the time of the destruction of the city of Jerusalem, shortly after the suffering of Christ. It therefore follows that the Messiah, who is called by the prophet Malachi the Face of God and the angel of the covenant, must have been born and must have come before the destruction of the Temple, especially since in the aforementioned passage of Malachi it is written that He was to come quickly, by which it was indicated that He would not tarry long.

Beyond this, it is read in the Prophet Daniel, cap. 9, v. 24: "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to restrain transgression, and to seal up sin, and to make atonement for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up vision and prophet, and to anoint the most holy." By "the most holy," however, the Messiah is understood, which Isaac Abarbanel also acknowledges in his commentary on this passage, in his book Májene jeschúa, fol. 64, col. 1. 2., where he first expounds it as referring to the place of the Temple, which has been called the Most Holy, and then writes as follows: או פירוש למשוח קדש קדשים על משיח צדקנו לפי ולפי שישראל בכלל נקראו קדושים קדושים תהיו קדש ישראל לה' לכן נקרא המשיח קיה"ק, That is: "Or the words 'and the most holy shall be anointed' signify the Messiah, who is our righteousness; and because the Israelites are generally called holy (for it is written in Lev 19:2: 'Ye shall be holy,' and it is read in Jer 2:3: 'Israel is holy unto the Lord'), therefore the Messiah is called the Most Holy, because He will be holier than all of Israel." Likewise, Rabbi Azariah, in his book Meór enáim, fol. 139, Mantua edition, in the third part, in the 43rd chapter, has expressed himself on this passage as follows: לחתום חזון ונביא ולהביא משיח צדקנו, That is: "To seal up vision and prophet, and to bring the Messiah, who is our righteousness." From which it is evident that he understood by "everlasting righteousness" the Messiah, since in place of the words of the text, "and to bring in everlasting righteousness," he wrote "and to bring the Messiah, who is our righteousness." Now, since the said 70 weeks are year-weeks and amount to 490 years, as Rabbi Saadiah and Aben Ezra indicate in their respective commentaries on this passage, and since these came to an end at the time of the death of Christ or shortly thereafter, it follows also that the Messiah must have been born at the said time. To say nothing of other proofs that could otherwise still be adduced from the Old Testament.

Regarding the proofs from the Rabbinical writings that the Messiah must have come a very long time ago: in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 97, col. 2. (where the time is discussed in which the Messiah was supposed to come), the following is read: אמר רב כלו כל הקיצין that is, the Rav has said, all the appointed times (in which the Messiah was supposed to come) have come to an end (and have passed). And in the aforementioned tractate Sanhedrin, there is found at fol. 98, col. 2.: אמר רב אין בן דוד בא עד שתתפשט מלכות הרשעה על ישראל תשעה חדשים שנ' לכן יתנם עד עת יולדה ילדה ויתר אחיו ישוּבון על בני ישראל: that is, the Rav has said, the Son of David does not come until the godless kingdom (that is, the Roman Empire) has spread itself over Israel for nine months, as it is said (Mic 5:3): Therefore He will give them up until the time when she who is to give birth has given birth; but the remainder of their brothers will return to the children of Israel: for a woman gives birth to a child only at the end of the ninth month. Likewise, in the book Nézach Jifrael, fol. 31, col. 1., in the 21st chapter, it is written that the aforementioned Rav said: אין בן דוד בא עד שתתפשט מלכות אדום בכל עולם ט' חדשים וגו' that is, the Son of David does not come until the Edomite (understand: the Roman) kingdom has spread itself over the entire world for nine months, etc. Concerning which, more is also to be found in the second column of that same place. And in Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel's book Májene jescháa, there is read at fol. 76, col. 3.: חלק אמר רב יהודה אמר רב אין בן דוד בא עד שתתפשט מלכות הרשעה בעולם ט' חדשים שנ' עד עת יולדה ילדה. זה יורה שהיה מקובל אצלם שסמוך לגאולה יהיה התפשטות האומה; that is, in the chapter Cbélek (of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 98, col. 2.) it is reported that Rabbi Jehuda related that the Rav said: the Son of David does not come until the godless kingdom is spread throughout the world for nine months, as it is said (Mic 5:3): Until the time when she who is to give birth has given birth. This teaches us that they had learned through a tradition, or oral teaching, that near (the time of) the redemption, the godless people, which is Edom, would spread itself abroad. Now, however, in the Talmudic tractate Avóda Sára fol. 8, col. 2. it is written: מאה ושמונים שנה קודם שנחרב הבית פשטה מלכות הרשעה על ישראל; that is, the godless kingdom spread itself over Israel one hundred and eighty years before the Temple was destroyed. And this is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat fol. 15, col. 1.; and Rabbi Solomon notes in his commentary in both places that by the godless kingdom the Roman Empire is to be understood. In the latter place, however, he teaches that the Romans began to subjugate the Jews and bring them under their yoke 180 years before the destruction of the Temple. Likewise, in the little book Schevet Jehuda fol. 2, col. 1., the following is read concerning the time of Emperor Augustus: הרומיים בעת ההיא מושלים היו: עד סוף העולם that is, the Romans ruled at that time unto the end of the world.

It therefore follows from all of this that the Messiah must have been born at that very time, as indeed He was born in the time of Emperor Augustus, as may be seen in Luke 2.

Furthermore, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemön writes in his letter, which is called Iggéret h battéman, fol. 126, col. 3 of the Amsterdam printing, appended to his book called Sepher mizvóth, in the following manner: בִּיאָתוֹ תִּהְיֶה כְּשֶׁתִּתְקַף יָד אֲדוֹמִים וְעַרְבִים. וְכִשְׁתַּפְּשֻׁת מַלְכוּתָם בְּעוֹלָם כְּמוֹ הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה דָּבַר שֶׁאֵין בּוֹ סֶפֶק וּמִזָּה לֹא יֵעָבֹר וּדְנִיָּאל סוֹף מֵר' שֶׁסֶּפֶר מַלְכוּת יִשְׁמַעֵאל וְעַמִּידָת מַחֲמַד וְאַחֲרָיו בִּיאָת הַגּוֹאֵל כִּמ"שׁ בַּפֶּסֶק. That is: He (namely the Messiah) will come when the Edomites (or Christians) and the Arabs (or Mohammedans) have the upper hand (and are powerful), and when their dominion over the world will have spread, just as it is today. In this matter there is no room for doubt, and beyond this he will not go (and will not come later). The last thing that Daniel also said concerns the Ishmaelite (that is, Turkish) kingdom and the establishment of Mahomet (to be understood thereby), and that shortly after this the Redeemer will come. Thus, according to this view as well, the Messiah must long since have already come.

In the aforementioned Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, it is read at fol. 97, col. 1: תנא דבי אליהו ששת אלפים שנה הוי עלמא שני אלפים תוהו שני אלפים תורה שני אלפים 1: that is, the school of the house of Elijah teaches that the world will stand for six thousand years: two thousand shall be desolate (or empty and without the Law, as Rabbi Solomon expounds it), two thousand shall be the time of the Law, and two thousand shall be the days of the Messiah; but on account of our many sins, those years have elapsed which have elapsed. Concerning this, Rabbi Solomon writes in his Commentary as follows: ק"נב שנה קודם השלמה ד' אלפים נחרב הבית וסוף אותן ק"עב נשלמו שני אלפים תורה וגו' ושני אלפים שנות המשיח שלאחר שני אלפים תורה דזה דינו שיבא משיח 'תכלה מלכות הרשעה ויבטל השיעבוד מישראל. אבל בעונותינו שרבו לא בא משיח לסוף ד' אלפים ויצאו מה שיצאו ועדיין הוא מעוכב לבא: that is, one hundred and seventy-two years before the first four thousand years had come to an end, the Temple was destroyed, and at the close of those 172 years the 2,000 years of the Law were completed, etc. As for the 2,000 years of the days of the Messiah, it would have been fitting, after the 2,000 years of the Law, that the Messiah should have come, and the godless kingdom should have ceased, and the servitude of Israel should have come to an end; but on account of our manifold sins, he did not come at the end of the four thousand years, and those years have elapsed which have passed, and he is still being delayed in coming. On this point, the book Caphthor uphérach, fol. 143, col. 1, may also be consulted. The aforementioned words of the house of Elijah are likewise to be found in the Talmudic tractate Avoda Zara, fol. 9, col. 1, and Rabbi Solomon writes there in his Commentary upon it in the following manner: ששת אלפים שנה נגזר על העולם להתקיים כמנין ימי השבוע וכיום השביעי שבת ובשבעת אלפים נוח לעולם. שני אלפים ראשונים נגזר עליו 'להיות תוהו בלא תורה. ושני אלפים בלא ימות המשיח: ושני אלפים ימות המשיח וגו': that is, it is decreed that the world shall stand for 6,000 years, according to the number of the days of the week; but on the seventh day is the Sabbath, and in the seven thousandth year the world rests. For the first 2,000 years it was decreed that they should be desolate and without the Law; and 2,000 years should be the days of the Law, without the days of the Messiah; and 2,000 years the days of the Messiah, etc. We see therefore from this that the Messiah ought to have come when the world had stood for 4,000 years. But the true Messiah, our Savior Christ Jesus, was born around that very time, and came into the world in the year 3,950, or according to others, 3,963.

All of the above has long since convinced the Jews in their consciences to such a degree that they have had to confess that the Messiah was born long ago. Hence Aben Ezra writes in his commentary on the prophet Isaiah, on the words of Isa 52:13, "Behold, my servant shall deal wisely," in the following manner: רבים פירשוהו על משיח שאמרו, That is: Many have interpreted these words concerning the Messiah, because our Ancients, of blessed memory, have said that the Messiah was born on that very day on which the Temple was destroyed, and that he is bound in chains. And in his commentary on the words of Song 7:5, "The king is bound (as it were) to the galleries," he teaches: הוא המשיח שהוא אסור כאשר העתיקו קדמונינו כי ביום שחרב ירושלים נולד (king) is the Messiah, who is bound, as our Ancients have transmitted, for he was born at the time when Jerusalem was destroyed.

This is also consistent with what is found in the book Nézach Jisrael, fol. 57, col. 3, in the 50th chapter, where the words read as follows: ביום שחרב הבית נולד המשיח כמו שהתבאר למעלה, That is: At the time when the Temple was destroyed, the Messiah was born, as has been explained above. And at fol. 38, col. 1, in the 25th chapter of the same work, the following is read: עובדא הוה בחד ברנש דהוי רדי געת תורתא עבר עליו חד ערבי אמר ליה מרה את אמר ליה יהודאי אנא אמר ליה. שרי תורך ושרי פרנך אמר ליה למה אמר ליה דבית מקדשון דיהודאי חרב אמר ליה מנא ידעת אמר ליה. מגעיית דתורך עד דעסק עמיה געת זמנא אחרייתי אמר ליה אסור תורך אסור פרנך דאזילד פריקחון דיהודאי אמר ליה ומה שמיה אמר ליה מנחם שמיה ואבו מה שמיה, אמר ליה חזקיה אמר ליה והיכן שרייה אמר ליה בבית ערבא בבית לחם יהודה, That is: A certain event befell a man while he was plowing (his field), in that his cow cried out; an Arab passed by him and said to him, who are you? And he answered him, I am a Jew. Then the Arab said to him, unyoke your cow and remove your yoke. The Jew asked, for what reason should I do that? The Arab answered him, because the Temple of the Jews has been destroyed. The Jew

[illegible]

Since the Jews knew, after the destruction of the Temple, that the time had passed in which the Messiah was supposed to have been born, and believed that He had been born, they accepted, 52 years after the city of Jerusalem had been laid waste, a man who called himself כוכב בר Bar Cócba, that is, a Son of the Star, and had presented himself in the city of Bither as the Messiah, as the true Messiah; by whom, however, they were greatly deceived, which is why they afterward called him כוזבא בר Bar Cosiba, or Ben Cosiba, that is, a Son of Lies, because he had led them astray with lies and brought them into the greatest misery. Of this it is written in the book Zémach David, in the first part, fol. 27, col. 1, Frankfurt printing, as follows: בן כוזבא הנקרא בר כוכבא מרד ברומיים ועשה
'את עצמו משיח ועל כן נקרא בר כוכבא מפני שדרש ואמר שעליו נאמר דרך כוכב מיעקב וגו
ורבי עקיבא עצמו באשר ראהו אמר עליו היינו מלכא משיחא בדאיתא באינה רבתה בפסוק
בלע ארני . והיהודים אשר בביתר משחוהו ונתררו : כתררהוהו עליהם למלך ופרקו את עול
הרומיים מעל צוארם ועשו והרג רב ברומיים וביוונים אשר באפריקא עם גדול ורב כחול
אשר על שפת הים אשר לא יסופר . וכן עשו במצרים גם הושבי אלכסנדריאה של מצרים הרגו

גם הם ברומיים ודברי בעל מאור עינים פרק י"ב יותר ממאתים אלף איש. והיהודים אשר בנפרי היא ציפרן הרגו גם הם כל הגוים עד בלתי השאיר להם שריד עד שקיסר טריאנוס שלח עליהם את שר צבאו בן אחותו אדריאנוס ועשה בהם הרג רב אשר לא נשמעה ולא נראתה That is: Ben Cosifa, who had called himself Bar Cóchaf, had (in the year 3880 after the creation of the world) risen up in rebellion against the Romans and presented himself as the Messiah. He was called Bar Cóchaf, that is, a Son of the Star, because he said that the words (Num 24:17) "A Star shall come out of Jacob, etc." were spoken of him. Rabbi Akkiva himself also, when he had seen him, said of him that this was the King, the Messiah, as can be seen in Echa rábbetha (fol. 302, col. 1) on the words (Lam 2:2) "The Lord has destroyed without mercy all the glory of Jacob." And the Jews who were in Bither anointed him and crowned him king over them, and threw off the yoke of the Romans from their necks, and killed very many Romans and Greeks who were in Africa, and slew a great multitude of people, like the sand on the shore of the sea, which cannot be counted. Likewise did those Jews who dwelt in Alexandria in Egypt, and, according to the testimony of Rabbi Asariæ in his book Meór enáim, in the 12th chapter, killed more than two hundred thousand people. So too the Jews who dwelt on (the island of) Cyprus killed all the Gójim, or nations, until not one of them remained; until the Emperor Trajanus sent against them his general or field commander, Adrianus, who was the son of his sister, and who killed so many that the like had never been heard of or seen, neither in the days of Nebusar Adan nor of Titus.

That this occurred 52 years after the destruction of the city of Jerusalem can be seen at fol. 28, col. 1. in the aforementioned book Zémach David, shortly after the preceding entry at the said number 880. Regarding this Bar Cosifa, one may also consult the booklet Kabbaláth haráabbad fol. 59, col. 2. and the book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 21, col. 2., as well as the book Echa rábbathi fol. 302, col. 1. 2. 3., in which last place much can be read about him and the power he possessed. It is also read in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 97, col. 2. that he reigned for two and a half years. How many Jews, however, perished and were killed in the city of Bither is reported in the Talmudic tractate Gittin fol. 57, col. 2., where, upon the words of Gen 27:22, "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau," the following is read: קול יעקב זה ואספיינוס קיסר שהרג בכרך ביתר ארבע מאות רבוא ואמרי לה ארבעת אלפים רבוא והדיג : ידי עשו זו מלכות הרשעה שהחריבה את ביתנו ושרפה את היכלנו והגלתנו מארצנו That is: the words "The voice is Jacob's voice" signify the Emperor Vespasianus, who killed forty times one hundred thousand people in the city of Bither, or, as others say, forty thousand times one thousand people. And the words "But the hands are the hands of Esau" signify the godless (understand: the Roman) empire, which destroyed our houses, burned our Temple, and drove us out of our land. In the Talmud, however, the name Vespasianus is erroneously placed in the position of Adrianus, for the city of Bither was not taken by Vespasianus, who had destroyed Jerusalem 52 years earlier, but by Adrianus. How populous the city of Bither was can be seen from fol. 58, col. 1. of the said tractate Gittin, where it is written: ארבע מאות בתי כנסיות היו בכרך ביתר ובכל אחת ואחת היו בה : ארבע מאות מלמדי תינוקות וכל אחד ואחד היו לפניו ארבע מאות תינוקות של בית רבן : That is: In the city of Bither there were four hundred houses of assembly (or synagogues), and in each synagogue or school there were four hundred (schoolmasters) who taught the children, and each (schoolmaster) had four hundred schoolchildren before him. Thus, according to this teaching of the Talmud, there were one hundred and sixty thousand schoolmasters and sixty-four thousand times one thousand children there who attended the schools. Whether one of the great Talmudic lies does not lurk herein, I leave for everyone to judge. In Echa rabbathi, fol. 302, col. 3., this matter is read differently, and the words there run as follows: חמש מאות בתי סופרים היו בביתר : וקטן שבהם לא היה פחות משלש מאות תינוקות והיו אומרים אם יבאו השונאים עלינו במכתבין ודוקרין אותם : That is: There were five hundred schoolhouses in the city of Bither, and in the smallest of them there were no fewer than three hundred children, who said: when the enemies come against us, we will go out with our penknives and stab them with these. By this reckoning, with three hundred children counted in one school, no more than one hundred and fifty thousand children in all would have attended school there, which could well be true. And from this one can see what a great multitude of people perished on account of the false Messiah, which rightly befell them, because they would not recognize the true Messiah, Christ Jesus, nor accept Him as their Redeemer. They were also frequently led astray after that time by deceivers of the same kind who gave themselves out as the Messiah, and were brought into great misfortune by some of them; of these I will here give a brief account. in the year 1137 A.D., a dissolute Jew in France presented himself as the Messiah, concerning whom the following is written in the letter of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, which is called Iggéreth battéman, near the end, fol. 127, col. 4 of the Amsterdam printing in quarto, where several such deceivers are treated: קודם זה כמו לי שנה עמד אחד בצרפת ואמר שהוא משיח : ועשה אותות לפי סברתם והרגוהו : That is: Thirty years before this (namely before the deceiver who had presented himself as the Messiah in Corduba in Spain), one arose in France who said that he was the Messiah, and he performed miracles according to their (that is, the Jews') opinion. The French, however, killed him, and together with him put entire holy assemblies and congregations to death. Concerning this villain, Rabbi Salomon ben Virga in his little book Schévet Jebúda fol. 35, col. 2., where he also makes mention of some who presented themselves as the Messiah, likewise gives the following account: that is, In France a man likewise rose up in such a manner, and many congregations lost their lives on his account. The very same thing is also to be found in the book Shalsbelet hakkabbála fol. 34, col. 1. in the year 1138 A.D., a Jew in Persia set himself up as the Messiah, concerning whom the aforementioned little book Schévet Jebúda fol. 35, col. 2. and fol. 36, col. 1. 2. contains the following account: במלכות פרס בזמן אחר קם איש יהודי ועשה עצמו משיח והצליח מאד וקבץ אליו עם רב מישראל וכי שמע המלך כל חפצו וניטונו להלחם עמו שלח וקבץ ליהודים שבארצו ואמר להם שאם לא יעשו עם האיש ההוא שישתלק מעליו שירע נאמנה שיעביר את כלם בחרב רעה וישמיד טף ונשים ביום אחד אז נקבצו יחדיו כל עם ישראל והלכו אל האיש ההוא ונפלו לפניו ארצה והתחננו מאד וצעקו ובכו שישוב מדרכו ולמה ישים עצמו בסכנה וכל עמי עמל כי כבר נשבע המלך להעבירם בחרב ואיככה יוכל יראה ברעה כל קהלות פרס. השיב אני באתי להושיע אתכם ולא אביהם ולמי יראתם ומי יעמוד לפני ומה יעשה המלך פרס ולא ירא ממני ומחברי. שאלו לו מה המופת שהוא משיח והשיב כי הוא מצליח ואין למשיח צורך אות אחר השיבו הרבה עשו כן ולא הצליחו אז שלהם מעל פניו בחמה עזה. ביום השני שבו לפניו בתענית וקטניהם לפניו לשיכמרו רחמיו אז אמר למען רחמי הקטנים האלה כן אעשה אם יתן לי מלך פרס ההוצאות שהוצאתי להכנס מלחמה זו אשוב אל מקומי ולא איקנו. אמרו לו היהודים ואיך מלך אדיר כמו מלך פרס יכנע לתת הוצאות לאיש הזה? השיב הארור משיח השקר ואמר אם תשובו פעם שנית אפילו יתן לי כל ההוצאות וחצי מלכותו לא אקשיב. וכי ראו היהודים רוע לבבו ואין טענת אמת מועיל הלכו מרים ובוכים לפני המלך ואמרו אדוננו המלך בבקשת השררה וכתר המלוכה אין דת ולא טעם יספיק להעביר השטות לפי שנשתטה בן האיש ההוא ראינו בו כי הוא בענין זה שטות מוחלט איננו שומע בקולנו ובכל מה שאמרנו לו כי שם נפשנו בסכנה ואנחנו נקיים ועל זה נפלינו אנחנו כי איך ישית אדוננו את לבו לדברי השוטה כי יפלו כאשר אין לו רגלים וכטו האילן הנופל באשר אין לו שרש. דברים דברנו אל האיש ההוא מספיקים לשבר לב האבן והוא בסכלותו עומד ואמר לנו שאם יתן לו אדוננו כל מה שהוציא לעשות מלחמה זו ישוב לארצו ויספיק כל זה להעיד איך הוא שוטה מפורסם. השיב המלך למה קראתם אותו שוטה על זה ואם העני אין לו אוצרות והוציא הוצאות בערבון ובטחון נצוח המלחמה והוא שב לדרכו מה יעשה אם לא כדרך זו לכן מהרו ושובו אל האיש ההוא ואמרו לו כי כתרצה אני במה שהוא שואל ושישלח בבטחון ואמונה איש אחד עם פנקסו ומיד אשלח לו במשרת יפים וכן נעשה. אחר ששב האיש ההוא ונתבטלה המלחמה צוה המלך וקבץ כל היהודים אשר במלכותו ואמר להם אחד מכם בא אלי להלחם בי וספר לו שהיה בהסכמת כולכם ולא חשבתם כי הרעה ישוב נגד פניכם. השיבו היהודים טענות מספיקות ולא הועיל וסוף כל הדברים אמר להם תנו לי ההוצאות מיד ואחרי כן אדעה מה לעשות לכם וכאשר שבו לפייס ולדבר צוה ויתפשו כל ראשיהם במאסר חזק ומתוך הצרה הוצרכו לתת הסך ורבים מהם היו מוכרים את בניהם למלאות הסך ואחר שנתנו לו מה ששאל אמר שכבר עלבוננו יקבלו That is: In another time, a Jew in Persia set himself up and gave himself out as the Messiah, and had success, and gathered a great multitude of Israelites. When the king had heard of his power and learned that his intention was directed toward war against him, he had the Jews in his land summoned together, and said to them that if they did not bring it about that this man be restrained from him, they should know for certain that he would have them all put to death by the sword, and would have their wives and children killed in a single day. Then the entire people of Israel assembled, and they went to that same man, and fell before him upon the ground, and besought him greatly, with crying and weeping, that he should desist from his course, (and they put before him) why he would place himself, as well as the poor people, in danger, seeing that the king had already sworn that he would have them killed by the sword; and how he could bear to look upon the misfortune of all the communities in Persia. To this he answered them: I have come to redeem you, and you are unwilling. Whom do you fear? And who will be able to stand before me? And what will the king of Persia do? Does he not fear me and my sword? Then they asked him what sign (or miracle) he could perform (in order to prove that he was the Messiah), and he answered that (his sign was this:) since he was prosperous, the Messiah had no need of any other sign. But when they replied to him that many had done likewise and yet had been unsuccessful, he sent them away from him in fierce anger. The next day they came before him again with fasting, and had their small children before them, so that he might take pity; then he said: out of compassion for these small children I will do it thus (as you desire): if the king of Persia reimburses me for the expenses which I have laid out in undertaking this war, I will go back to my place and do him no harm. But when the Jews said to him, how should so mighty a king as the king of Persia humble himself in such a manner as to give a Jewish man his expenses back, the accursed false Messiah answered and said: if you come back again, and he were willing to give me all the expenses and half his kingdom, I still will not be satisfied. After the Jews had seen his evil disposition, and that no truthful representation would avail, they went before the king, sorrowful and weeping, and said to him: O our lord king! Since this man desires dominion and the royal crown, no law nor reason is sufficient to rid this man of the folly with which he is possessed. We see in him that in this matter he is utterly mad; he does not listen to us, nor to anything we say to him, that he is placing us in great danger of our lives. We are, however, innocent, and we marvel that our lord (the king) takes the words of this fool to heart, for if he lets him go, he will fall of his own accord, just as we find with all false words that they come to nothing, since a lie cannot stand, just as a tree falls that has no roots. We have used against this man such words as could break a heart of stone, yet he remains steadfast in his folly, and has said to us that if our lord (the king) were willing to give him back all the expenses he has laid out for the war, he would go back to his land; and all of this is sufficient to testify that he is a manifest fool. Then the king answered: why do you call him a fool on that account? The poor man has (no money and) no treasure left, since he has spent everything he had on the war in hope of victory; but what is he to do now, if he is to go his way (and desist from the war), if he does not do it in this manner? Therefore make haste, and go back to this man, and tell him that I grant him what he requests, and that he should send in safety and confidence one man with his account (of the expenses), and I will send them to him at once in fine coin: which also came to pass. After that same man had gone back (upon receipt of the money) and the war had been called off again, the king issued a command to have all the Jews in his realm assembled, and said to them: one of you has come against me to deceive me, and it has been reported to me that this occurred with the consent of you all, and you did not consider that the misfortune would come upon you. Then the Jews brought forward sufficient reasons (to excuse themselves), but these would not avail. Finally the king said to them: give me back the money that was laid out immediately, and thereafter I will know what to do with you. But when they sought to appease him and speak further, he commanded that the foremost among them be put in strong bonds in prison, and through this misery they were compelled to pay the sum; many of them, however, sold their children in order to raise the sum. But after they had given him everything he had demanded, he declared that for the insult they had done him, they must take upon themselves this disgrace: that the Jews should go barefoot and wear their trousers only up to the hip. in the year 1157 A.D., a Jew in Spain, in the city of Cordova, presented himself as the Messiah, concerning whom Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, in his aforementioned letter Iggéreth hattéman fol. 127, col. 3-4, writes as follows: וקודם זה כמו עשר שנים עמד בארצות ספרד במדינת קורטובה: איש אחד ואמר שהוא משיח that is, About ten years before this (namely, before one who had put himself forward as the Messiah in Fez) a man arose in Spain in the region of Cordova who said that he was the Messiah. Concerning this, the booklet Schévet Jehúda fol. 35, col. 2 also contains the following written account: וקודם זה עשר שנים עמד משיח במדינה קורטובה וכמעט היתה כליה בשארית ישראל: that is, Ten years before this, a Messiah arose in the land of Cordova, and the remaining people of Israel were nearly destroyed by him. The same is to be found in the book Schallschéleth hakkabála fol. 34, col. 1. in the year 1167 A.D., such a deceiver also appeared in the Kingdom of Fez, concerning whom the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche bar Majémon, in his mentioned letter fol. 127, col. 3, expresses himself as follows: כמו כן עמד איש אחד במערב במדינת פאס: היום מ"ה שנה ואמר שהוא מבשר ושלוחו של משיח ואמר שבאותה שנה יגלה ולא יצא דבר: that is, Likewise, a man arose in the west, in the land of Fez, 45 years ago, who said that he was a joyful herald and messenger of the Messiah; and he announced that the Messiah would reveal himself in that very year; but his declaration did not come to light, and great misery befell the Israelites on his account. The booklet Schevet Jebuda fol. 35, col. 2 may also be consulted on this matter.

In the aforementioned year 1167, a Jew in Arabia also went about with such deception, concerning whom the said Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon writes as follows in his letter, which he wrote to the Jews of Marseilles, as can be seen in Buxtorf's Institutione epistolari Hebraica, pagina 453 and 454: ועל עסקי המשיח אשר זכרתם שהגיעו לכם דברים משמי לא היה כך המעשה כמו ששמעתם ולא במזרח היה אלא בארץ תימן עמד איש אחריש לדבר זה כ"ב שנה ואמר שהוא עול משיח מישר דרך לפני ביאתו ואמר להם כי המלך המשיח הוא יתגלה בארץ תימן ונתקבצו אנשים רבים יהודים וערביים. עמו והיה מסבב בהרים והיה מטעה אותם ואומר להם תמיד בואו עמי ונצא לקראת המשיח כי הוא שלחני אליכם לישר דרך לפניו וכתבו אלי אחינו שבארץ תימן כתב גדול והודיעו לי משפטו וחדושו שחדש להם בתפילות ומה היה אומר להם ואמרו לי שכבר ראו מנפלאותיו כך וכך ושאלו לי על זה והבנתי כל הדברים והכרתי מתוך דברי כתבם שאותו האיש העני חסר דעת אבל היה יהא שמים ואין בו חכמה כלל וכל מה שאומרים שעשה או נראה על ידו הכל שקר וכזב ופחדתי על היהודים בישם והבדדתי להם כמו שלשה קונטרסן בענין המלך המשיח וסימניו וסימני הזמן שיתראה בו והזהרתי אותם שיהיו זה האיש שמא יאבד הוא ויאבד הקהלות. בללו של דבר לאחר שנה נתפש וברחו ממנו כל הנגלים אליו ויאמר לו מלך אחד ממלכי הערביים אחר שתפשו מה זאת עשית אמר לו אדוני המלך אמת אני אומר כי בדבר יי עשיתי אמר לו המלך מה מופת שלך ענה ואמר לו אדוני המלך חתוך ראשי ואחר כך אחיה ואקום ואהיה כבראשונה אמר לו המלך אין לך מופת גדול מזה ואם הוא כך אני וכל העולם נאמין בודאי שדבריך כולם אמתיים וטובים ונכוחים ושקר נחלו אבותינו הבל ואין במ מועיל. מיד גזר המלך וצורה ואמר קחו לי חרב ויביאו החרב לפני המלך וצורה והתכו את ראשו ונהרג אותו העני ההא מיתתו כפורה עליו ועל כל ישראל ונענשו היהודים ברוב המקומות ממון גדול. ועד עתה יש שם חסרי הדעת אומרים עתה יחיה ויעמוד מקברו. כך היו הדברים: That is to say: Concerning the Messiah, about whom you have reported that certain things regarding him have reached you in my name, the affair did not transpire as you have heard, and it did not take place in the East; rather, in the land of the South a man arose 22 years ago who said that he was the Messiah's messenger, sent to prepare the way before his coming, and he let it be known that the Messiah would reveal himself in the land of the South, and many people, Jews and Arabs, gathered to him, and he went about in the mountains and led the people astray, saying to them continually: Come with me, and let us go forth to meet the Messiah, for he has sent me to you to prepare the way before him. Our brothers who dwell in the land of the South also wrote me a long letter, informing me therein of his conduct and manner, as well as the new things he had introduced into the prayers, and what he had said to them, and they reported that they had already seen this and that of his miracles, and they asked me about it. But when I had considered all their words, I perceived from the words of their letter that this poor man was lacking in understanding, yet was God-fearing, but had no wisdom in him at all, and that everything they said he had done, or that had been seen to occur through him, was untrue and false. And I was filled with fear on account of the Jews there, and I wrote to them about three quires concerning the nature of the King Messiah and his signs, as well as the signs of the time in which he will appear, and I warned them that they should admonish this man, lest he perish and plunge the communities of the Jews into ruin. To put it briefly, he was captured after a year, and all those who had attached themselves to him took to flight. One of the Arabian kings then said to him, after he had taken him captive: Why have you done this? And he answered him: My lord King, I speak the truth, for I did it by God's command. Then the king said to him: What sign do you have? And he answered him and said: My lord King, cut off my head, and I will thereafter come back to life, and rise up, and be as I was before. Thereupon the king said to him: Have you no greater sign than this? And if it be so, then I and the whole world will certainly believe that all your words are true, good, and right, and that our fathers have inherited lies and vanity, which profited nothing. Upon this the king immediately resolved, and commanded, and said: Bring me a sword; and a sword was brought before the king, and he commanded that his head be cut off; and so that poor man was killed, whose death may be an atonement for him and for all Israel, and the Jews were punished in many places with a large sum of money. But to this day there are foolish people there who say he will now come back to life and rise from his grave. This is the course of the affair. On this matter the book Shalsbelet hakkabbála fol. 34, col. 1 may also be consulted.

Not long after that time, a Jew beyond the river Euphrates presented himself as the Messiah, concerning whom the following is written in the aforementioned little book Schevet Jebuda, fol. 35, col. 2: בתחלת מלכות ישמעאל עמד איש בעבר הנהר ואמר שהוא משיח והיו ישראל בסכנה עצומה ויצאו מכלל הדת עשרת אלפים מישראל והיתה אות שלו שלן מצורע והשכים בריא ובסוף נפל ונשארו ישראל בעצם אלגות: that is, at the beginning of the Ishmaelite kingdom, a man arose beyond the river (Euphrates) who said that he was the Messiah, and the Israelites were (on his account) in great danger, and ten thousand of them fell away from their religion. His sign, however (to prove that he was the Messiah), was this: that he went to sleep in the evening as a leper and arose again in the morning in good health. In the end he fell, and the Israelites remained in their exilio, or misery, and in the hatred (of other peoples). This is also to be found in the aforementioned letter of Mosche bar Majemon, which is called Iggéreth hattéman, fol. 127, col. 3. in the year 1174 A.D., a Jew in Persia once again put himself forward as the Messiah, concerning whom Rabbi Gedalja expresses himself as follows in his book Shalsbelet hakkabbála, fol. 34, col. 1: ראיתי בספר: שבט יהודה האומר שהיה במדינת פרס איש שעשה עצמו משיח וגלגל צרות רבות לישראל: that is, I have seen in the little book Schévet Jebúda that it is reported therein that there was a man in the land of Persia who presented himself as the Messiah and brought many tribulations upon Israel.

After this time, there appeared a man named David Al-músser, who was from the city of Amaria in Media, and who presented himself as the Messiah. The following is read concerning him in the aforementioned book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 34, col. 1. 2.: "שקם איש אחד עם זרה" וכן נראה בחדש "בא שאלת" "קכר בעיר נקרא אמריה והוא קרוב לנהר פישון בקרב מלכות מדי והיה שם כמו אלף בעלי בתים ובתוכם בחור נקרא דוד אלמוסר ונתחכם בקבלה מעשית ומיני כישופים עד שנכנס בו רוח שטות ועשה עצמו משיח והסית והדיח יהודים רבים ומרד במלכות וישלח לו המלך בטחון שיבוא אליו ובבואו השימו בצוהר והוא ברח משם וילך המלך אחריו והוא היה רואה ואינו נראה. זיגל עיני המלך והראה לו שהיה בורח וצוח המלך ליהודים שיביאוהו אליו בקנסים גדולים ולבסוף נהרג וחמת המלך שככה אף השימ מס גדול על היהודים. That is: one reads in the book of Rabbi Schimon bar Abraham, in the tenth question of his book, which is called Scheelóth und Teshuwóth, that is, Questions and Answers, that in the year 4924 a man arose with such confusion in a city called Amária, situated on the river Pischon in the kingdom of Media, in which there were about a thousand heads of household, among whom there was a young man, or student, named David Almuffer, who was very well versed in the Cabbala practica, or practical Cabbala, and in the various kinds of sorcery, until the spirit of folly took hold of him and he presented himself as the Messiah, led many Jews astray and drew them away, and showed himself to be rebellious against the king. When the king had sent him an assurance that he should come to him, and he had presented himself before him, the king had him placed in prison; but he escaped from it in flight, and the king pursued him, yet he could see the people while himself remaining unseen, since he had made himself invisible through his sorcery. After he had, however, opened the king's eyes and caused him to see that he was in flight, the king commanded the Jews under severe penalty to bring him to him. In the end, however, he was killed and the king's wrath was appeased, though the king imposed a great tribute upon the Jews.

In the booklet Schévet Jehúda [שבט יהודה], it is read at fol. 34, col. 1-2 and fol. 35, col. 1. 2. numero 31. that in the aforementioned city of Amaria a certain man by the name of David Eldavid [דוד אלדויד] presented himself as the Messiah, who was a very wise man and well versed in the Talmud and all manner of foreign sciences, as well as in all manner of books of sorcery. In the booklet Matteóth Benjamin [מטות בנימין], the same person is called David Elroi, as can be seen in the Judeo-German exemplar at folio 66. 67. and in the entirely Hebrew one at fol. 19, col. 1. &c., where an extensive account of him is given. Since, however, his description agrees with the aforementioned David Almuffer both with respect to the city and with respect to his deeds, these three names,

David Eldavid, Elroi, and David Almuffèr, doubtless refer to one and the same person; for otherwise Rabbi Gedalja, who in his book Shalsbelet hakkabbála [שלשלת הקבלה] at fol. 34, col. 1-2 briefly describes all those who have presented themselves as the Messiah, and who, as mentioned above, makes mention of David Almuffèr, would not have omitted David Eldavid. in the year 1222 A.D., the Jews at Worms were led astray in a laughable manner by a hoped-for Messiah, concerning which the following account is found in the late Mr. Johann á Lent's little book on the false messiahs, entitled Schediasma historico-philologicum de Judæorum Pseudo-Messiis, printed at Herborn in quarto in the year 1683, drawn from the second book of examples of Georgius Stengelius, cap. 3. pag. 51. In the time of Honorius the Third, in the year 1222 A.D., there lived at Worms a Jew who had a beautiful daughter, who had fallen in love with a neighboring young clergyman, and he in turn had fallen in love with the beautiful Jewish girl. This disorderly love drove them both to the fulfillment of their carnal desires, from which the Jewish girl became pregnant, and she therefore deliberated carefully about how she might conceal or excuse her deed. She confided in her lover and feared that she would be secretly put to death by her parents with cruel torment. The young man advised her that when her father and mother asked her why her belly was swelling and it appeared she was pregnant, she should answer: "Whether I am pregnant I do not know, but this I do know, that I am still a virgin and have known no man." In all other respects she should leave the matter to him; he would see to it that she would be believed and would still retain her honor despite the loss of her virginity. Now the young man knew that the old Jew had his bedchamber on the ground floor of the house facing the street, and he therefore took a long, thin reed, came to the house at midnight, and, having previously noticed a small hole in a shutter, he stuck the reed through the hole into the Jew's chamber and addressed the Jew and his wife through it in a whispering voice: "O you righteous and God-fearing married couple" (calling them by name), "rejoice, for your daughter, who is a virgin, has conceived a son in her womb, who will be the redeemer of your people Israel." He then noticed that the Jew had awakened, roused his wife as well, and said to her: "O my dearest, did you hear the heavenly voice? An angel has been here; arise, let us pray, that you too may be made worthy to hear the heavenly voice." The young man heard all of this, and as they prayed together, he spoke again through the reed and said: "You shall hold your daughter in high honor and take great care that she and her son are well provided for; from her virginal womb the Messiah will be born, for whom you have been waiting." This aroused great joy in the foolish parents, especially because they, as righteous and God-fearing people, had been addressed by the supposed heavenly messenger. They revealed their joy over the heavenly voice they had heard to their neighbors and friends, who wrote of it to other Jews, who rejoiced over the imminent coming of the Messiah, honored the beautiful virgin, brought her many gifts, awaited her hour of delivery with great longing, and called and cried out daily: "Messiah, O Messiah, you our longing, come." At last this virgin gave birth to a daughter, whereby all the hope, honor, and joy of the Jews fell into the pit, and they were laughed at and mocked by everyone. One of the Jews seized this new Messiah and, in his impatience, dashed her against the wall, for which act of infanticide he also received his just reward, and the daughter was compelled to reveal the father of the child. in the year 1500 A.D., a Jew in Austria by the name of Rabbi Lemle presented himself as a forerunner of the Messiah and assured the Jews that the Messiah would come in that very year, as is reported in the aforementioned book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 34, col. 2., whose words are cited below on pagina 671 in this chapter. But the foolish Jews were also deceived in their hope at that time, and the book Zémach David may be consulted on this matter at fol. 43, col. 1 of the first part, at the number 260 of the sixth millennium. in the year 1666 A.D., a learned Jew by the name of Sabbethai Zevi, who was a native of the city of Smyrna in Asia Minor, and who had been described at length by the aforementioned late Mr. Johann de Lent in his mentioned booklet from page 60 to 79, also put himself forward as the Messiah, over which the Jews in all countries greatly rejoiced, and many of them sold everything they possessed and followed after him. But after he had been thrown into prison by the Turks and had sat therein for a time, he was brought to Adrianople before the Turkish Emperor, as well as the Mufti and other distinguished Turkish men; and when the Emperor had asked him whether he was the King of the Jews and the new Messiah, he answered with a frightened heart that he was a Doctor of Jewish Law, and that he was innocent of the accusation that he had put himself forward as a Jewish King. But since the Emperor was unwilling to be satisfied with this, he commanded that men should strike him with a sword and shoot at him with arrows, in order to see whether he could free himself from death by a miracle. When Sabbethai Zevi heard this and feared death, he, in order to preserve his life, adopted the Turkish faith, in which his wife also followed him at his request. In this manner the Jews were at that time led astray by their supposed Messiah, to their utmost shame and mockery. in the year 1682 A.D., a German Jew by the name of Mardochai, who was a native of Eisenstadt and very learned, and who was also very renowned for his austere way of life and had rebuked vices severely, presented himself as the Messiah, and was recognized as such by all the Jews in Italy and by most of those in Germany, as is reported in the aforementioned little book of the late Mr. Johannes à Lent, cited above, at pagina 79. But just as the Jews had been shamefully deceived by all the aforementioned impostors, so too did this one lead them astray.

In this manner, they will likewise be put to shame once again by their present hope, since they firmly persuade themselves that the Messiah will come very soon, because in Jerusalem, according to their claim, a living spring of water is said to have burst forth at the very spot where the Temple and the Holy of Holies once stood, whose water is as sweet as honey; and this sweet spring is also said to have been there when the Temple was still standing, but to have dried up since then. That this spring signifies the coming of the Messiah, they wish to prove not only from the prophet Joel, in whose third chapter, v. 18, it is written thus: "At that time the mountains shall drip with new wine, etc., and a fountain shall flow out of the house of the Lord"; but they also draw upon the words of Zechariah 14:8, which read: "At that time living waters shall flow out from Jerusalem." There are also thirty-one Polish Jewish households, consisting of 120 persons, who some months ago journeyed to Jerusalem in order to hasten the coming of the Messiah there through prayer and fasting; and in the past month of March of the current year 1700, four of the most prominent among them were here in Frankfurt, who exhorted the Jews to repentance and to abstaining from all the pomp of the Christians, and assured them at the same time that their redemption had drawn near and that the Messiah was stirring, which could be gathered from all the events befalling the Christians and the Turks; and a great deal of money has been collected here and there among the Jews, which is to be used for the maintenance of the aforementioned Polish Jews in Jerusalem. In this undoubted conviction that the Messiah will soon appear, a certain Jew here in Frankfurt said to several Christians: within a year I will no longer be here, and you will not be here either. That he will no longer be here, he will have understood in the sense that he will go forth to meet the Messiah; but that he said the aforementioned Christians will also no longer be here, he will without doubt have aimed thereby at what the rabbis teach, namely that all Christians are to be killed at the time of the Messiah, and that therefore they, since they too are to be put to death, will no longer be here.

Since, as mentioned before, the Messias is supposed, according to Jewish teaching, to have been born already a very long time ago, namely at the time when the Temple was destroyed, I must also indicate where he has, in their opinion, resided since then. On this point two opinions are found: some report that he resides in Paradise, while others maintain that he sits in Rome. That he is in Paradise is read in the book Avodáh bakkódesch, fol. 55, col. 2, in the 43rd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, in these words: קבלת רז"ל במשיח

That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have learned through a tradition that the Messias, the son of David, is living in Paradise to this very day. It has likewise been indicated above, in the 19th chapter of the first part, pages 865 and 866, that the Messias is one of those who are said to have entered Paradise alive.

That he, however, according to another opinion, resides in Rome, this is read in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin fol. 98, col. 1., where it is written as follows: רבי יהושע בן לוי אשכחיה לאליהו דהוי קיים אפיתחא דמערתא דרבי שמעון בן יוחי אמר ליה אתינא לעלמא דאתי אמר ליה אם ירצה אדון הזה אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי שנים ראיתי וקול ג' שמעתי אמר ליה אימת אתי משיח אמר ליה זיל שיליה לדידיה והיכא יתיב אפיתחא דרומי ומאי סימניה יתיב ביני עניי סובלי חלאים וכולן שרו ואסירי בחד זימנא איהו שרי חד ואסירי חד That is: Rabbi Jehoshua ben Levi found Elijah standing at the gate of the cave of Rabbi Shimon ben Yochai, and said to him: shall I also come into the future (eternal) life? To which he answered him: if this Lord (namely God, who stood with them, as Rabbi Solomon Yarchi explains it) wills it. Rabbi Jehoshua speaks. He also asked Elijah when the Messiah would come, and he answered him: go and ask him yourself. (He further asked him:) where does he reside? (And he gave him the answer:) at the gate of Rome. (He further asked him:) what sign does he have (by which one can recognize him? And he answered:) he sits among the poor who are laden with sicknesses (and have many wounds), and they all loosen (the bandages of their wounds) all at once (and cleanse them) and then bind them again; but he loosens the bandage of one wound and binds it again (and thus he does with the remaining wounds, binding them one after another). Now Rabbi Solomon writes in his commentary on this passage as follows: נראה לטורי לא פתח רומי ממש אלא גן עדן הוא כנגד כלי העולם וקאמר ליה That is: It seems to my teachers that the gate of Rome here must not be understood literally, but rather that Paradise is situated over against the whole world, and that (Elijah) told him (Rabbi Jehoshua ben Levi) that the Messiah resides on that side of Paradise which faces the gate of the city of Rome. Against this, however, stands what is found in Shemoth Rabbah, fol. 96, col. 2., in the first Parashah, where it is written as follows: ואף מלך המשיח שעתיד ליפרע מעכו"ם יושב עמהם במדינה שנאמר That is: Pharaoh's daughter raised the one who was to take vengeance upon her father; so likewise the Messiah dwells among the idolaters in the land (or in the city) upon whom he will take vengeance, as it is said (Isa 27:10): the calf shall feed there and lie down there, etc. By which words it is signified that the Messiah will take vengeance upon those in whose land or city he resides, just as Moses took vengeance upon King Pharaoh, at whose court he was raised by his daughter; and by the aforementioned city the city of Rome is understood, as is evident from the disputation of Rabbi Moses bar Nachman, which he held with Brother Paul, where on pagina 37 it is read that when the king, in whose presence the disputation was held, had put it to the said Rabbi Moses bar Nachman that he had previously acknowledged that the Messiah was in Rome, he himself made the following reply: עניתי ואמרתי לא שהוא תמיד ברומי אלא שנראה שם באותו יום כי אליהו אמר לו לרבי יהושע בן לוי שימצא אותו שם באותו יום ונראה שם משום טעם האמור באגדות. ואני רוצה לגלותו מפני המון העם הזה: וגם זה הענין לא רציתי לגלות להם שאומרת ההגדה שמשיה עומד ברומי עד שיחריבנה כמו שמצינו במשה רבינו שנתגדל בביתו של פרעה עד שנפרע ממנו והטביע את כל עמו בים: וכמו שנאמר בחירום מלך צור ואוציא אש היא אכלתך: That is: I answered him (the king) and said: I did not acknowledge that he (namely the Messiah) is in Rome at all times, but rather that he was there on that particular day (when Rabbi Jeboshua ben Levi asked Elijah where the Messiah was) and had shown himself there on account of the reason mentioned in the Haggadoth, which I do not wish to disclose on account of the multitude of this people. (This was the answer he gave the king; but he had something else in mind, and therefore he writes further:) I also did not wish to disclose to them this matter, that the Haggadah states that the Messiah resides in (the city of) Rome until he will destroy it, just as we find concerning our teacher Moses, that he was raised in Pharaoh's house until he took vengeance upon him and drowned his people in the sea; and just as it is said of Hiram, the king of Tyre (Ezek 28:18): therefore I will bring forth a fire from within you, which shall devour you. Beyond this, the said disputation states concerning the Messiah: עד שיהריבנה: That is: He dwells in the city of Rome until he will lay it waste. Concerning this dwelling of the Messiah in Rome, one may also consult the book Nézach Yisrael in the 27th chapter, as well as the book Abavath Olam fol. 95, col. 3. and the Jerusalem Targum on Exod 12:42; and the aforementioned passage in the book Nézach Yisrael treats the matter at length.

Concerning the reasons why, according to the erroneous opinions of the Jews, the Messiah has not yet come, there are two of them. The first is said to be their impenitence; therefore Rabbi David Kimchi writes in his Commentary on Isa 56:2 as follows: התשובה מעכבת ביאת המשיח, That is: Repentance delays the coming of the Messiah. By this he wishes to convey that the Messiah does not come because the Jews do not perform genuine repentance. And in Schir haschirim rábba, fol. 269, col. 1, the following is read: רבי לוי אמר אלו היו ישראל עשין תשובה אפילו יום אחד מיד הם נגאלין מיד בן דוד בא, That is: Rabbi Levi said, if the Israelites were to repent for even a single day, they would immediately be redeemed, and the son of David would come at once. Rabbi Bechai also teaches in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 64, col. 2, in the Parascha Schemóth, these words: אפשר לומר כי הפרשה הזאת היא רמז לגאולתנו זאת העתידה:

שהיא תלויה בתשובה ובתפלה כי כן נגאלת מצרים חזרו בתשובה והתפללו אל ה' 'העונה בעת צרה ותקבלה תפלתם ובא להם הגואל מיד ועל כן סמך לו ומשה לרמוז כי ביאת הגואל תלויה בתשובה ובתפלה, That is: One may say that this Parascha is an allusion to our future redemption, which depends upon repentance and prayer; for thus did (our forefathers) repent at the time of the redemption from Egypt, and prayed to God, who hears in the time of distress; and their prayer was accepted (and heard), and the redeemer (Moses) came immediately; and therefore (Exod 3:1) the words "But Moses" are added, to indicate that the coming of the Messiah depends upon repentance and prayer. Concerning such repentance, something may also be read in the book Chisuk emunáh, pages 100 and 101. Likewise, in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 97, col. 2, it is written: כלו כל הקיצין ואין הדבר תלוי אלא בתשובה ובמעשים טובים, That is: All the termini (in which the Messiah should have come) have passed, and the matter depends on nothing other than repentance and good works. And immediately following this: רבי אליעזר אומר אם ישראל עושין תשובה נגאלין ואם לאו אין נגאלין. אמר לו רבי יהושע אם אין עושין תשובה אין נגאלין אלא הקדוש ברוך הוא מעמיד להן מלך שגירותיו קשות קשה, That is: Rabbi Eliezer says, if the Israelites repent, they will be redeemed; but if not, they will not be redeemed. Rabbi Jebóschua then said to him: if they do not repent, they will not be redeemed; but the holy, blessed God will set over them a king whose decrees are harsh, like those of Haman (his decree), whereupon the Israelites will repent, and he will bring them back to the good, so that they become pious. On this matter, the book Pirke Rabbi Eliezer at the end of chapter 43 may also be consulted, together with the book Afkáth róchel, in the first book, in the second part.

But if the Messiah is supposed to come when the Jews repent, then he would certainly have had to come when the aforementioned Rabbi Lémle was alive and had proclaimed that he would come soon, and the Jews in all places and regions had repented, of which the book Shalshelet hakabbála, fol. 34, col. 2. writes as follows: בזמן זה שנת חמשת אלפים ר"ס לבריאה קם יהודי בגליל אוסטריאה ושמו ר' אשר לימלה אשכנזי שעשה עצמו נביא והיה אומר שיצומו וישובו בתשובה כי קרובה הישועה. וכן כל גלות איטליאה האמינו לדבריו וישוב איש מדרכו הרעה בכל כחם דבר בלי כמעט כתשובת נינוה. וימות האיש ולא בא משיח וגלגל המרה גדולות כי בראות הפתאים : that is, at this time, in the year 5260 after the creation of the world (in the year 1500 A.D.), a Jew arose in the borderlands of Austria, by the name of Rabbi Ascher Lemle, a German by birth, who presented himself as a prophet and told the Jews that they should fast and turn to repentance, since salvation was near. All the exiled Jews who were in Italy also believed his words, and each one turned from his wicked ways with all his might, so that it was a wonder, and it was nearly a repentance like that of Nineveh (which is mentioned in Jonah 3). But that same man (Lemle) died, and the Messiah did not come, and this caused a great apostasy among the Jews, for when the simple-minded saw that the Messiah had not come, they fell away from the Jewish faith and adopted another religion, and to this day that same year is still called the year of repentance. From this the Jews can see that it is not true that the Messiah will come when they repent, for otherwise he would have had to come at that time, since they performed every possible act of repentance. And they ought rightly to consider that their rabbis, through such erroneous teaching, are giving them nothing but a vain hope and leading them around by the nose, for the Messiah has long since already come to atone for sins, as may be read in Dan 9:24, and is thus awaited by them in vain.

But this too is the teaching, that the Messiah will not come until the Jews repent, which contradicts what is read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 149, col. 4, in the Parascha Behár Sinai, where the words read as follows: הגאולה תלויה בתשובה ואף אם לא יעשו תשובה אי אפשר: להתאחר מזמן הקץ הקצוב: that is, the redemption depends on repentance; but even if the Israelites do not repent, he (the Messiah) will nonetheless not delay beyond the appointed time. Something similar is also to be found in Schemóth rábba fol. 116, col. 3, in the 25th Parascha. So too it is written in the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 97, col. 1, as follows: רבי יהודה: אומר דור שכן דוד בא בו בית הוועד יהיה לזנות וגו' וחכמת הסופרים תסרה ויראי חטא ימאסו לפני הדור כפני כלב והאמת. נעדרת שנאמר ויהי האמת נעדרת וסר מרע משתולל וגומר. רבי נהוראי אומר דור שכן דוד בא בו נערים ילבינו פני זקנים וזקנים יעמדו לפני נערים ובת קמה באמה וכלה בחמותה לפני הדור כפני כלב ואין הבן מתבייש מאביו. רבי נחמיה אומר דור שכן דוד בא: בו העזות תרבה והיוקר יעות והגפן יתן פרי ויהיין ביוקר ונהפכה כל המלכות למינות ואין תוכחה. פשיט ליה לרבי יצחק דאמר רבי יצחק אין בן דוד בא עד שתתהפך כל המלכות למינות: that is, Rabbi Jehuda says: in the time in which the Son of David will come, the houses of assembly (that is, the schools of the wise, which they attend in order to study the Law therein) will become brothels, etc., and the wisdom of the scribes will stink, and those who fear sin will be despised, and the faces of the people will be like the faces of dogs (that is, shameless), and truth will be lacking, as it is said (Isa 59:15): "And truth is lacking, and whoever departs from evil is considered a fool," etc. Rabbi Nehōrai says: at the time when the Son of David comes, young boys will put the old to shame, and the old will stand before the young, and the daughter will rise up against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law, and the faces of the people will be like the faces of dogs, and the son will not be ashamed before his father. Rabbi Nechémja says: at the time when the Son of David comes, shamelessness will be great, and the one who is most esteemed and honored will be an unrighteous man; and the vine will bear its fruit, and yet wine will be expensive (because there will be no blessing in it, and many will be given over to drinking, whereby it becomes costly). So too will the entire kingdom be transformed into heresy, and no one will rebuke it. This confirms what Rabbi Yitzhak says, for Rabbi Yitzhak has said that the Son of David will not come until the entire kingdom is turned into heresy. All of this can also be read in the Talmud in Massecheth dérech érez Sóta fol. 21, col. 1, and in the tractate Sóta fol. 49, col. 2, and in the book Pesikta rabbetha fol. 28, col. 3, 4, as well as in Schir haschirim rabbba fol. 260, col. 2. And from this it can be seen that, according to the testimony of the aforementioned rabbis and Talmudic teachers, people will be very godless at the coming of the Messiah. But if they are to be so godless, where then is repentance to be found? At the time of our Savior Jesus Christ, however, there were many godless people and terrible heresies among the Jewish sects, and especially among the Sadducees. In the book Schemóth rabbba it is also read at fol. 116, col. 3, in the 25th Parascha: אם משמרים ישראל את :השבת כראוי אפילו יום אחד בן דוד בא למה שהיא שקולה כנגד כל המצות that is, if the Israelites kept the Sabbath even one single day as is proper, the Son of David would come. Why? Because the observance of the Sabbath is held to be equal to all the commandments. Since, then, the Messiah has not yet come up to this point, it follows that the Jews have not yet kept a single Sabbath properly, even though they make a great clamor and wailing in their synagogues on that day and wish to be considered very holy people. But let this suffice regarding the first reason why the Messiah, according to the opinion of the Jews, is supposed not yet to have come.

Regarding the second reason, it is found in the Médrasch Kohéleth, fol. 3 12, col. 1. in these words: לעולם אין מלך המשיח בא עד שיעמרו כל הנשמות שעלו במחשבה : להבראות ואלו הן הנשמות האמורות בספרו של אדם הראשון שנאמר זה ספר תולדות אדם : that is, the King Messias will never come until all the souls are present which came into (God's) thoughts to be created; and these are those souls which are mentioned in the book of the first man Adam, as it is said (of this book, Gen 5:1): This is the book of the generations of Adam. In Vajikra rabbba this is also found at fol. 147, col. 4. in the 15. Parascha, though somewhat altered, in these words: אין מלך המשיח בא עד שיכלו כל הנפשות שעלו במחשבה להבראות ואלו הן : האמורות בספרו של אדם הראשון ה"הד זה ספר תולדות אדם : that is, the King Messias will not come until all the souls have come to an end which came into (God's) thoughts to be created; and these are those souls which are mentioned in the book of the first man. This is what is written (Gen 5:1): This is the book of the generations of Adam. On this subject, the following is also read in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sara, fol. 5, col. 1.: אמר רבי יוסי אין בן דוד בא עד שיכלו : נשמות שבגוף : שנאמר כי רוח מלפני יעטף ונשמות אני עשיתי that is, Rabbi Jose has said that the Son of David will not come until all the souls which are in the Guf have come to an end, as it is said (Isa 57:16): For my spirit (that is, the Messiah, as it is interpreted in the Tosephoth) shall linger before me on account of the souls which I have made. As for what the word Guf, which otherwise means a body, signifies here, Rabbi Salomon indicates this in his Commentary on the passage, when he states: אוצר יש ושמו גוף ומבראשית נוצרו כל הנפשות : that is, there is a treasury which is called Guf, and (by God) from the time of the creation of the world all the souls that are to be born have been created, and He has placed them in that same treasury. The very same thing is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Jevan-moth fol. 62, col. 1. All of this taken together thus teaches that the Messiah will not come until all the souls which God has created and placed in a certain place called Guf have entered into human bodies and been born.

In the book Avodath hakkodesch, at fol. 51, col. 2, in the 37th chapter under the title Chelek haavoda, the passage drawn from the Talmud is expounded as follows: *חכמי האמת קבלו בסודו כי כל הנשמות יודקו קודם בא המשיח בסוד העבור והוא אמרו עד שיכלו כל הנשמות שבגוף ואז יזכו החדשות לצאת ושבגוף אמרו בו שבגוף האדם וביאור הכתובים כן כי לא לעולם אריב עם ישראל ולא לנצח אקצוף שלא לגאול אותם ומה המעכב שאיני גואל אותם הרוחות שהם יוצאות מלפני שעדיין לא כלו כלומר לא נודקו ובהכרח הן צריכות להזדקק והוא אמרו יעטוף הרוח הוא מאחר ומעכב הגאולה מלשון העטופים : ללבן וכשיזדקקו או הנשמות שאיני עשיתי יצאו ואז יצא המשיח בכללן ודו' that is, the Sages of truth have learned the secret thereof through tradition or oral teaching, that all souls are to be purified before the coming of the Messiah through the Ibbur (of which the first chapter of this second part, pages 87 and 88, has treated above), and this is what is said (in the Talmud): until all the souls that are in the Guf, that is, the body, have come to an end (and no longer pass through the Ibbur into another body), then the new souls (which have not yet entered any body) will be worthy to come forth. And the words of the Talmud, "which are in the Guf," mean as much as those which are in the bodies of men; and the Scripture (Isa 57:15) must be expounded in this manner: (that God intended to indicate this with such a verse,) "for I will not contend forever with Israel, nor will I be angry evermore, so as not to redeem them." But what hinders it that I do not redeem them? It is the spirits (that is, the souls) that go forth from me, which have not yet come to an end, that is, which have not yet been purified (through the Ibbur) and must necessarily be purified; and this is what the words jaatóf barúach mean, that is, the spirit lingers (or comes late, that is, the souls pass late into other bodies through the Ibbur, just as the word atufim in Gen 30:42 is taken from the sheep of Laban that came late, so likewise the word jaatóf here means to come late): that same spirit delays and hinders the redemption. But when they shall have been purified, then the* new souls that I have made will go forth, and then the Messiah will also come forth among them. This is the opinion of the Sages of truth. Thus far are the words of the book Avodáth hakkódesh, according to which the Messiah is not to come until all souls have been purified through the Ibbur. Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, however, expounds it in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 159, col. 2, at the end of the eleventh chapter, in the fourth Máamar on the transmigration of souls, which is called Gilgul, and says: כל דוד בא עד שתכלו כל, רזל אמרו אין בן דוד בא עד שתכלו כל, הנשמות שבגוף רוצה לומר להתגלגל, that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: the Son of David will not come until all the souls that are in the body have come to an end, namely by passing through the Gilgul from one body into another. According to this exposition of Rabbi Menasse, the Messiah is therefore not to come until the souls are no longer being transferred from one body into another.

Regarding the aforementioned book of Adam, the following is written about it in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára fol. 5, col. 1.: מאי דכתיב זה ספר תולדות וגו' וכי ספר היה לו לאדם הראשון מלמד שהראה לו הק"ה לאדם הראשון דור ודורשיו דור דור וחכמיו דור דור ופרנסיו כיון שהגיע לדורו של רבי עקיבא שמח בתורתו ונתעצב במיתתו, That is: What is the meaning of what is written (Gen 5:1): "This is the book of the generations of Adam," etc.? Did the first man then have a book? It teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, showed the first man each and every generation and its preachers, each and every generation and its wise men, each and every generation and its leaders; and when He came to the generation of Rabbi Aktiva, he rejoiced over his knowledge of the Law (that is, his great learning in the Law) and was grieved over his death. The very same thing is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin fol. 38, col. 2. And in Schemóth rábba one reads at fol. 126, col. 2 in the 39th Parascha: הראה לו כל הדורות שהן עתידין לעמוד מבראשית עד תחיית המתים דור ודור ומלכיו דור ודור ומנהיגיו דור ודור, That is: He showed him all the generations that would exist from the creation of the world until the resurrection of the dead; each generation and its kings, each generation and its rulers, each generation and its prophets. Likewise it stands in the Jalkut chadásch fol. 111, col. 2. under the heading Luchóth, that God showed Adam all souls precisely as they were to come into the world; which words of the Jalkut have been cited above in the first chapter of this second part, pages 16, 17, and 18.

Concerning the aforementioned book, one reads in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 1., under the title Sépher, from the Sohar, who gave it to Adam, and the words read as follows: ספר ניתן לאדם הראשון על ידי רזיאל בגן עדן כיון דחטא פרח מיניה והוה בכי אדם וצוהיר ליה. ההוא כפרא על ידי רפאל ואנה לשת בריה וכן לכל אינון תולדין עד דמטא לאברהם וביה הוה ידע לאסתכל ביקרא דמאריה that is, a book was given to the first man in Paradise by the angel Rasiel; but when he had sinned, it flew away from him, and when he had wept on that account, the book was given back to him by the angel Raphael; and he left it to his son Seth, and thus to all those generations, until it came into the hands of Abraham, and he was able to see in it the glory of his Lord, namely God. Thereupon, in the same place at numero 2., the following is recorded from the book Peliáh concerning the contents of that book: כשנברא אדם הראשון שמו הקדוש ברוך הוא: בגן עדן ירד מלאך ולמדו וכתב לו ספר והזהירו על כל דבר ודבר והראה לו סדר המולות וסיבתן והראה לו השתלשלות העולם שלא נשאר שום גרעין ושער שלא למדו והראה לו דור דור ודורשיו דור דור והכמיו ענק איוב וסיבתו והראה לו איבריו וגידיו וכל מה שנברא בגופו וסיבתו ועניינו על אותו ספר נמצא ואותו הספר היה עד חזקיה המלך: that is, after the first man had been created, the holy and blessed God placed him in Paradise, and an angel came down who taught him and wrote him a book, and gave him a warning and instruction concerning each and every thing. He also showed him the order of the constellations and the cause thereof, and showed him how the world hangs together, such that not a single grain or hair remained of which he had not instructed him. He also let him see each generation and its preachers, each generation and its wise men, as well as the matter that befell Job and the cause thereof; and he showed him his limbs and sinews; and everything that had been created in his body, together with its cause and nature, was found in that same book. That same book was also in existence until the time of King Hezekiah.

Regarding the time when the Messiah is supposed to come: in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin fol. 97, col. 2., a curse is pronounced upon anyone who investigates the time in which the Messiah is to come, for there one reads: תיפח רוחן של מחשבי קיצין That is: the bones must burst asunder of those who calculate the appointed times (of the Messiah). And in the book Ir gibbórim it is written at fol. 28, col. 1. numero 54: אסור לחקור ולדרוש אחר ביאת הגואל כא"ז: תיפח רוחן של מחשבי קיצין כי שאם לא יבא אל הזמן ההוא יחשוב או יתיאשו העם ממנו. That is: it is forbidden to inquire and to investigate the coming of the Redeemer (namely the Messiah), as our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: the spirit must burst asunder of those who calculate the times (of the Messiah). So too does Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon write concerning this matter in his letter, which is called Iggéreth battéman and is printed behind his Sepbér mizvóth at Amsterdam, fol. 125, col. 4., as follows: ביאר לנו דניאל עמק ידיעת הקץ והיותו סתום ונעלם ולפיכך מנענו החכמים ז"ל מלחשוב הקצים לביאת המשיח לפי שיכשלו בהם ההמון ושמא יטעו בראותם שבאו הקצים ולא בא: וכן אמרו החכמים ז"ל תיפח רוחם של מחשבי קצין לפי שהם תקלה לעם לפיכך: That is: Daniel has explained to us the depth of the knowledge of the time (in which the Messiah is to come); and since that time is hidden from us, the Sages, of blessed memory, have forbidden us to calculate the times of the coming of the Messiah, because common people take offense at it and may fall into error when they see that the times have arrived and yet he (the Messiah) has not come. For this reason the Sages, of blessed memory, say that the spirit must burst asunder of those who calculate the times, since they are a cause of offense to the people. Therefore the Sages have prayed against them, that their minds may burst asunder and their calculations come to nothing.

Rabbi Isaac Ababenel teaches in his book Rosch amanáb, in the first chapter, fol. 5, col. 1, where he treats of the thirteen articles of the Jewish faith, the following concerning this matter as well: היסוד השנים עשר ימות המשיח והוא שצריך להאמין שבא יבא ולא יאחר ואם יתמהמה חכה לו. ואין ראוי לפקוע לו זמן ולא להוציא להם פסוקים דיוקים כדי לידע עת בואו הכי אחז"ל תפח דעתן של מחשבי קיצין וגו' that is, The twelfth foundation concerns the days of the Messiah, and it is necessary to believe that he will certainly come and will not fail to appear; and even if he has already tarried, wait for him nonetheless. It is also not fitting that one should set a fixed time for him, or draw inferences from the verses (of Holy Scripture) in order to know the time of his coming. Have not our Sages, of blessed memory, said: the mind of those who calculate the times must burst asunder. And in the Sepher Nizzáchon of Rabbi Lipmann, one reads at numero 334, pagina 187: אמרו רז"ל בפרק חלק תיפח תיפח נשמתן בניהגם של מחשבי קיצים: That is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said in the chapter Chélek (of the tractate Sanhédrin): the soul of those who calculate the times (of the Messiah) must burst asunder in hell.

Furthermore, those who wish to calculate such times are also considered fools; hence it is written in the Sobar chádasch fol. 10, col. 2. in the Medrasch néelam as follows: אמר הק"ב שוטים הם המחשבים קיצי משיחא דבר שלא גליתי לעולם That is: The holy and blessed God has said, those are fools who wish to calculate the time of the Messiah, since it is a matter that I have never revealed to anyone. For the day of vengeance is in my heart, which will come, and it has not been revealed to any mouth, and yet they busy themselves with calculating the times. And in the aforementioned book Rosch amanáb, it is read at fol. 20, col. 1. in the 14th chapter: אמר ליה אליהו לרב יהודה אחוה דרב סלא חסידא אין העולם באוצרותיו That is: Is not the coming of the Messiah hidden with Him (namely, God the Lord) and sealed in His treasures?

Notwithstanding all of this, the Jews have repeatedly pondered and calculated the time when the Messiah is to come, for in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin fol. 97, col. 2. it is written: אמר ליה אליהו לרב יהודה אחוה דרב סלא חסידא אין העולם באוצרותיו

That is: Elijah said to Rabbi Jehuda, the brother of the pious Raf Salla, that the world would stand for no fewer than eighty-five jubilee years (that is, 4,250 years), and that in the last jubilee year the Son of David would come. After this, the following passage appears in the same place: שלח ליה רב חנן בר תחליפא לרב יוסף מצאתי אדם אחד ובדיו מגילה אחת כתובה אשורית ולשון קודש אמרתי לו זו מנין לך אמר לי לחיילות של רומי נשכרתי ובין גנזי רומי מצאתיה וכתוב בה לאחר ארבעה אלפים ומאתים ותשעים ואחת שנה לבריאתו של עולם העולם יהום מהן מלחמות תנינים מהן מלחמות גוג ומגוג והשאר ימות המשיח ואין הק"ב"ה מחדש את עולמו אלא לאחר שבעת אלפים שנה. That is: Rabbi Chanan, the son of Tachalifa, sent word to Raf Joseph, saying: I found a man who had a book in his hand, written in Assyrian letters and in the Hebrew language, and when I asked him where he had obtained it, he answered me: I was hired among the military forces of the Romans (and served as a foot soldier) and found it among the Roman treasuries. Written in it, however, was the following: after 4,291 years from the creation of the world, the wars of the Dragons (that is, of the kings of the earth, as Abarbanel explains in his book Máyene jesebúa, fol. 81, col. 1., where all of this is likewise found) and the wars of Gog and Magog will cease, and in the remaining time (of the world) the days of the Messiah will be (when he will then come). And the holy, blessed God will not renew His world until after seven thousand years. According to this book, therefore, the Messiah ought to have come in the year 531 A.D. The aforementioned Abarbanel teaches in the cited fol. 81, col. 1., among other things on this matter, in the following manner, and says: העולם הזה הוא עולם הגלות ויהיו מלחמות תנינים שהם מלכי האדמה הלוחמים זה עם זה ומלחמתם על ישראל ומלחמת גוג ומגוג שהוא סוף הגלות נקמת ה' ודינו ומשפטו על אדום וישמעאל. ושאר ימי המשיח פירושו כפי האמת כי יהום העולם הגלות בשנת ה' אלפים ור"צ לבריאת עולם: That is: This world is the world of the exilii, or of misery, and the Dragons, namely the kings of the earth, will wage war against one another as well as against Israel. Likewise there will be the war of Gog and Magog, which will be the end of the exilii, or of misery, and the vengeance of God and His judgment upon Edom (that is, Christendom) and the Ishmaelites (that is, the Turks); the remaining days, however, will be the days of the Messiah. This interpretation accords with the truth, for the world of the exilii, or of misery, will come to an end in the year 5,291 from the creation of the world.

In the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, the following is read at fol. 9, col. 2: אמר רבי חנינא אחר ארבע מאות לחורבן הבית אם יאמר אדם לך קח שדה שוה אלף דינרים בדינר אחד לא תקח. במתניתא תנא אחר ארבעת אלפים ומאתים ושלושים ואחת שנה לבריאת עולם: that is, Rabbi Channina said: if a man should come to you four hundred years after the destruction of the (second) Temple and say, "Buy a field worth a thousand denarii, or half quarter-thalers, for a single half quarter-thaler," do not buy it. In the Mishnah, another Talmudic Doctor says: if, after the year 4231 from the creation of the world, someone should come to you and say, "Buy yourself a field worth a thousand denarii, or half quarter-thalers, for a single half quarter-thaler," do not buy it. The reason for this is given in the commentary, or exposition, of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi upon this passage: namely, that the Messiah was expected to come at such a time, according to the opinion of the aforementioned Talmudic teachers, and that he would lead the Jews back into the Promised Land, and thus a field in any other land could be of no use to a Jew who purchased it.

In the book Shalshelet hakkabbála by Rabbi Gedálja, it is also written thus at fol. 35, col. 2: ה'אלפים ת"ה ליצירה יהי הזוהר פרשת תולדות אומר כשישתלם שנת ה'אלפים ת"ה ליצירה יהי משיחא ובישנת היובל הזאת תשובו איש אל אחוזתו ושמעתי אחרים מביאים אסמכתא ויענו משיחא: בני חת את אברהם שר"ל כשישלימו ימי העני שנת ת"ה that is, in the Sohar, in the Paráscha Toledóth, it is reported that when the year 5408 after the creation shall have been completed, the Messiah will come, and this is signified by the words (Lev 25:13): In the year ה'יובל הזאת hajóbel hasóth, of this jubilee year, every man shall return to his inheritance. (Since the little word זאת fóth or sós yields the number 408, and when 5000 is placed before it, which the letter He or H in the word הזאת hasóth indicates, signifying the number five, the said number 5408 results.) I have also heard others who, in order to confirm this, cite the words (Gen 23:5), which read as follows: וַיֵּעָנוּ בְנֵי הָאֵת אֲבְרָהָם: that is, "And the children of הָאֵת Cheth answered Abraham," or "afflicted Abraham" (as it is intended to be understood here, for עָנָה Innah means to afflict, and they wish thereby to indicate) that this signifies: when the days of affliction, namely the year 408, shall have come to an end, the Messiah will then come; and the number 408 is taken from the word הָאֵת Cheth, which amounts to that much. Concerning both of these proofs, the book Emek hammelech, fol. 68, col. 2, in the 22nd chapter, under the title Scháar dikna kaddíscha, may also be consulted; but concerning the first proof, which is taken from the word זאת sóth, the book Emek hammelech, fol. 33, col. 2, in the 55th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu, and fol. 132, col. 2, in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha dilér ánpin, as well as the book Zerór hammór, fol. 25, col. 2, in the Parascha Cháje Sára, may be consulted.

Rabbi Gedaliah writes further in his aforementioned book Shalshelet hakkabbála, fol. 36, col. 1, that according to the opinion of Rabbi Moses bar Maimon, the gift of prophecy was to return among the Jews in the year 4976 after the creation of the world, which had to occur shortly before the coming of the Messiah, and he then reports the following: שְׁמַעְתִּי אֲמָרִים אֲסֻמְכָתָא:

גימטריא פסוק אם יתמקמה חפה לו וכו' שעולה אלה ש"לה כנבואת דניאל האיסור פסוק אשרי המחסה ויגיע וכו' שעולה כמוהו. שמעתי אומרים אסמכתא הנ"ה אנכי ראשי תיבות ה' אֱלֹפִים : ש"ולח לכם את אלהי הנביא ר"ת עולה ש"לו והוא רמז בקרוב אל פסוק עד כי יבא ש"לה שמעתי על שם רבי שלמה מלכו א"מר א"ויב א"י דוף א"שיג אַתְלַק ש"לל ש"ר"ת עולה ה' אֱלֹפִים ש"פ נהרי זה קרוב לדעתי שאכתוב למטה שעולה הש"בת. הרב אדוני אבי בפירוש דניאל מוכיח שזמן הקץ יהנה שנת ה'ת"ש לבריאה. וראיתי בספר הקנה אביו של רבי נחונא האומר בכל השבונהו שיהנה בשנת ה'ת"ש נב וסימן ב"ר"ן יחד פוככי בקר. אברבנאל בפירוש ישעיה וינהא אומר שיהנה בשנת ה'ת"סג או ה'ת"צ. יש אומרים ב' פסוקים אחרונים של דניאל עולים ש"לה. יש אומרים שמלת לקץ ה'ת"מ המימות הממה עולים ש"לה. י"א גמטריא של הסתר אסתיר עולים ש"לה. י"א מועד מועדים ר"ל מועד של שני מועדים שונים שהם ת"ף שנים מציאות מצרים עד בנין ראשון ות"ו של משה זמנו שהם יחד תמ"ף הוסיף עליהם מקצתם והיו אלה ש"לה : מוה"ר מרדכי דאטו בספר מגדל דור שלו מפרש מאמר כ"ח מפרקי ר' אליעזר האומר שמי ד' מלכיות פרס ינו ונהרביעית ימשכו יום אחד של הק"ב"ה פחות ב' ידות שעה. ובפרק ס"ח שם נראה דאלף שנים הם לו ית' יב שעות אם כן יום שלם יהיה ב' אלפים חוציא מהם ב' שלישי שעה שהם נ"ה שנים ו' חדשים ב' ימים ותמנה אלף תתק"מד שנים ה' חדשים י' ימים מראשית מלכות פרס שהיה נ"ב שנים אחר חרבן ראשון שהם י"ח שנים קודם בנין בית שני נמצא מלכות ו' מלכיות יכלה י' אדר שילה ובשנת ש"סה קבוץ גלויות ובשנת ת"ח תחיית המתים. רבינו סעדיה ד"שי רל"בג בפירוש ספר דניאל רבי אברהם הנשיא בספר מגלת המגלה והרמב"ן בספר הקץ ובספר הגאולה ורבינו בחיי פרשת ויכלו כולם מקיימים שראוי להיות בשנת תק"ח. וזה בקיאות האסמכתא שאמרו חז"ל שני אלפים ימות המשיח והם כי ד' אלפים ליצירה ישרו ק"ע שנים אחר חרבן בית שני שים עליהם קי"ח שנים יעלו לסך ר"ץ וזהו שרמו דניאל ולתת שיקוצ שומם ימים אלף ר"ץ ומר"י שכתוב אחריו אשרי המחכה ויגיע לימים אלף של"ה בנקו אל מ"ה שנים אחר קי"ח שאז יהיו כל המלחמות באופן שתכלית הזמנים והמלחמות יהיו קסג שנים ובזה דרון יהי ימי השלוה וימות המשיח תת"לו שנים כי לסוף האלף ששי ישוב העולם תהו ובהו וכלו יהיה שבת. ולזה רומז ישעיה בפסוק למרבה המשרה עם מס סתומה שעולה ת"ר והשאר עולה ד"לו. ובזה היו ימי השלוה לישראל לשעבר שהם ו' שנים שעמדו על בנין ות' שעמד הבית ראשון ות"כ לבית שני שהם יחד תת"לו שנים. וכן אם תצרף ק"ע שנים אחר חרבן בית שני שאז נשלמו ד' אלפים תורה עם ק"סג מהאלף חמשי יהיו יחד אלף ש"לה. ולזה רומז גם כן עדן שלוטן על ת"פ שנים שיצאו מציאות מצרים עד בנין בית ראשון; ועדן שני רומז אל ת' שעמד הבית ופולג עדן רומז אל חצי שני החשבונית הנז' שעולים ת"מה שבלם יחד הם אש"לה: ורבי אברהם זכות בספר התכונה שלו אומר שיהיה שנת ר"ץ: ורבי אברהם הלוי גיוס בספר משרא קטין מקים שנת ר"ץ. ואני הצעיר אמרתי להגיד אליך אל זה הענין מה שאירע לי והנני נשבע אליך כי כנים דברי זה: כי בשנת ה'ש"טו בליל שביעי של פסח על משכבי בלילה ההיא נדדה שנת מעיני ונכנסתי בהתבודדות עד מתי קץ הפלאות ואחרי הדברים רבים נרדמתי ויהי בבקר והגזו עליה זית בפי מפסוק אראנו ולא עתה וכו' ונתתי לבי עליו ומצאתי כי עולה כל הפסוק ה' אלפים שנה"ח בזה האופן: כל הפסוק בהויות עולה ה"שיב וסימניך ה"שייב את חמתי מעל בני ישראל ועוד שוב ותמנה תיבות דרך כוכב מיעקב וקם שבט מישראל במספר קטן בהנהו ו' של כוכב להיותה נחה ובלתי נשמעה בדבור שעולה מ"ו וסימניך אליה הנביא שכלם יחד שלום הש"נח ובהביטי אחר כך אל דברי התרגום שאומר ויתרבה משיחא שמחתי מאד כי ראשי המשיח עולה כן : קרוב לזה מצאתי פסוק ויקרא יעקב לבניו ויאמר האספו ואגידה לכם את אשר יקרא

אתכם באחרית הימים שעולה הש"נ בזה הדרך ה' רומז על ה' אלפים אחר כך תספור י יוד מ מס שעולים ש'. תספור אחר כך פתח ההא וקמץ י' והדגש י' וחירק המס שהם ב' ווין וג' יוד שעולין מ"ב. אחר כך תמנה כל התיבה במספר קטן וקמץ י' והדגש י' וחירק המס שהם ב' ווין יחד עולה ש"נח: וכן אם תמנה פסוק או נבהלו אלופי אדום וכו' תמצא ה' אלפין נעים שרומזים אל חמשת אלפים. אחר כך תמנה מלה ראשונה ואחרונה שבכל אלו התיבות חוץ ממילת אחד שכבר באו במספר וגם אל תמנה מאות אלא אחדים ועשרות יעלו בידיך שפ"א הסר מהפסוק כ"ה מילות שאין צורך מהם שלא יעזרו בחשבון ישאר בידך שני"ח וכן על זה הדרך פסוק עזי וזמרת יה שיש ה' אלפין ואחר כך תמנה ראש וסוף התיבות ויעלו בידיך ר"נח אחר כך תתחיל הפסוק ותמנה במספר קטן עד אליו ואותו ויעלה בידיך ק' שהכל יחד הם הש"נח: וכן בפרשה הן סיני בשני הפסוקים אחרי נמכר גאולה תהיה לו אחד מאחיו יגאלנו או דודו או בן דודו יגאלנו או משאר בשרו ממשפחתו יגאלנו או השיגה ידו ונגאל כי יש ה' שמות של גאולה יש אות א' עולה ה' אלפים ויש ג' יגאלנו שעולים במספר מלא ש': ואחד כך תמנה ג' יגאלנו במספר קטן עולה נ"ז.

That is: I have heard that some bring a proof, by means of the Gematria (or the numerical value of the letters) of the words (Hab 2:3) Im jithmahmáb chakkéh lo, that is, "And if he carries, yet wait for him," etc., which (Hebrew words) amount to 1335 in number, just as the prophecy of Daniel (Dan 12:12) says: Aschré hammechakkéh vejag-gía etc., that is, "Blessed is he who waits and reaches" (the thousand three hundred and thirty-five days), which amounts to exactly the same number. I have also heard that some draw a proof from the words (Mal 4:5) Hinnéh anóchi, that is, "Behold, I," where the first letters of these two words, namely the ה Hé or H and the א Aleph or A, amount to 5000 (for the He signifies 5 and the Aleph Alaphim, that is, thousands). The following words Scholéach lachém eth Eliáhu hannábhi, that is, "send you the prophet Elijah," amount with their first letters to 337 in number, and this has altogether a bearing on the words (Gen 49:10) "until Schiloh comes" (for the numerical value of the word Schiloh, which yields 345, nearly agrees with the said number 337). I have further heard that Rabbi Salomon Malco wished to bring a proof (of the time of the coming of the Messiah) from the words (Exod 15:9) Amár ojébb erdóf, assig, achallék schálal, that is, "The enemy said: I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil," in which (Hebrew) words the first letters amount to 5360 (for the five Aleph or A signify 5000, and the word schálal 360, which together yields 5360), and this comes very close to my own opinion, of which I will write below, which consists in 5358. My father maintained in his commentary on Daniel that the time of the end (when the Messiah is to come) shall be in the year 5700 after the creation. I have also seen in the book Hakkána, which the father of Rabbi Nechónja composed, that he states, according to the force of his calculations, that it (namely the end of the misery of the Jews and the time of the redemption) was to be in the year 5252, and that this is signified by the words (Job 38:7) בֹּקֶר יְהִי כְכֹבֵי בֹרֶן Berón jáchad cóchebbe bóker, that is, "When the morning stars sang together" (since the word בֹּרֶן Berón amounts to 252 in number). Abarbanel states in his commentary on Isaiah and Jeremiah that it will be in the year 5263 or 5294. Some say that the two last verses in Daniel yield 335 in number. Others say that from the words (Dan 12:13) לְקֵץ הַיָּמִין lekéz hajämin, that is, "until the end of the days," when they are fully calculated, the number 335 results. Others report that through the Gematria of the words (Deut 31:18) אֶסְתִּיר אֶסְתִּיר Hastér astír, that is, "I will surely hide," the number 335 arises. Others hold that the words (Dan 12:7) מוֹעֵד מוֹעֲדִים Moëd moadim, that is, "a time and times," signify a time of two different periods, namely 480 years from the exodus from Egypt until the building of the first Temple, and 410 years during which that same Temple stood, which together amounts to 890 years; and because in the cited passage of Daniel מוֹעֵד חֶצִי Chezi moëd, that is, "half a time," is also mentioned, add to this the half thereof (namely 445), and 1335 results. The distinguished Rabbi Mordechai Dato expounds in his book Migdal David the 28th chapter of the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in which it is stated that the days of the last three of the four kingdoms (or monarchies), namely the Persian, the Greek, and the fourth (understand: the Ishmaelite or Turkish) kingdom, shall last one day as the days of the Holy One, blessed be God, less two (thirds) of an hour. Now it is to be seen in the 48th chapter of the same work that a thousand years with the blessed God are 12 hours; if this is so, then a full day is 2000 years. Subtract from this two thirds of an hour, namely 55 years, 6 months, and 2 days, and you will count 1944 years, 5 months, and 10 days from the beginning of the Persian kingdom, which was 52 years after the destruction of the first Temple, or 18 years before the building of the second Temple, and it will be found that the rule of the four monarchies will cease on the tenth day of the month Adar (or February) in the year (five thousand) three hundred and thirty-five, and that in the year 408 the gathering of the Jews scattered here and there will take place, and in the year 408 the resurrection of the dead will occur. Rabbi Saadias, Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, Rabbi Levi ben Gerson, in their commentary on Daniel; Rabbi Abraham Hannási in the book Megillát hammegilla; and Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman in the book Hakkéz and in the book Haggeüllä; as also Rabbi Becháí in the passage Vajechyllu (that is, in the commentary on Gen 2:1, fol. 10, col. 1) unanimously maintain that our redemption must be in the year 5118 (from the creation of the world) (on which the book Májene jeschúa fol. 78, col. 3 may also be consulted), and they prove it from the fact that our sages, of blessed memory, have said that 2000 years will be the days of the Messiah. Now the 4000 years after the creation were completed in the one hundred and seventy-second year after the destruction of the second Temple; add to this 118 years, and the sum of 290 results, to which Daniel points (when he says in Dan 12:11): "And from the time that the daily sacrifice is taken away and the abomination of desolation is set up, there shall be one thousand two hundred and ninety days." But what is written after this (v. 12): "Blessed is he who waits and reaches the thousand two hundred and thirty-five days" has a bearing on the 45 years which will follow after the 118 years, for then all wars will be over, so that the end of the (evil) times and of the wars will be in the year 163, and in this manner the days of rest and the days of the Messiah will last 837 years; for at the end of the sixth thousand years the world will again become waste and void (as it was in the beginning) and be pure Sabbath. And to this Isaiah points in the words (Isa 9:7) לַמָּרְבֵּה הַמִּשְׁרָה lemárbeh hammisra, that is, "He who increases the dominion," with a closed Mem (or M in the word lemárbeh), which amounts to 600, while the remaining letters of that word amount to 237, and so long also was the time of Israel's rest before this; for 7 years they spent in building the (first) Temple, and that Temple stood 410 years, and the second Temple stood 420 years, which together amounts to 837. If you therefore add (since at that time the fourth thousand years of the Law had come to an end) 163 years from the five thousand years, it amounts together to 1335 years. And to this also points what is written (Dan 7:25), for the word עֵדָן iddan, that is, "time," signifies 480 years, which elapsed from the exodus from Egypt until the building of the first Temple. The second word עֵדָן iddan, that is, "time" (which follows upon the preceding), has a bearing on those 410 years during which the Temple stood. But the (subsequently following) words פֶּלֶג עֵדָן pelág iddan, that is, "half a time," signify half of the two said reckonings, namely 445, which all added together amounts to 1335. Rabbi Abraham Sachuth states in his book Hattechúna that the redemption will be in the year 290 (that is, in the year 5290 after the creation). His brother-in-law, Rabbi Abraham Hallévi, likewise maintains that this will occur in the year 290. But I, a humble person, have mentioned (above) that I wished to show you in this matter what has befallen me, and I swear to you that my words are true. When in the year 5315, on the seventh night of the Passover festival, I lay in my bed and sleep departed from my eyes, I withdrew into solitude and into contemplation of when the end of wonders might be. After many things had come to my mind, I fell asleep again, and in the morning an olive leaf came into my mouth from the words (Num 24:17) "I shall see him, but not now," etc. And when I had considered them carefully, I found that the entire verse amounts to 5358 in number, and indeed in the following manner. The entire verse as it stands amounts (according to the Hebrew letters in number) to 5312, and you may take as a sign of this the words (Num 25:11) הָשִׁיב אֶת חַמְתִּי מֵעַל

בני ישראל Heschbf eth chamatbi meál bené jisraél, that is, "He has turned away my wrath from the children of Israel" (where the word השיב Heschbf yields 5312). Then count further the words (which follow in the said verse, Num 24:17) דרך Darách cóchabh mijaacóbb, vekám schébbet mijisráél, that is, "A star shall come out of Jacob, and a scepter shall rise out of Israel," according to the small number (setting aside those which consist of ten) and omitting the letter Vau in the word כוכב cóchabh, since it is quiescent and not heard in pronunciation, and 46 results, and you have a sign of this in the words אליה הנביא Eliab hannábhi, that is, "the prophet Elijah" (for the word Eliab amounts to that number), which all together yields 5358. And when after this I saw the words of the Chaldean translation (of Onkelos and Jonathan), in which it is stated ויתרבי משיח, that is, "And the Messiah will be exalted," I rejoiced greatly, since I saw that the word המשיח hammaschiach, that is, "the Messiah," gives exactly the same amount (namely 5358) in number. I have also found another verse which comes close to this (namely Gen 49:1, where it is read): "And Jacob called his sons and said: Gather together, that I may tell you what will befall you בימיך beacharith hajamím, that is, in the last days." There the word הימים Hajamím also yields 5358 in the following manner: the ה He signifies 5000; then count with the letter י Jod 10, and with the whole word ידי Jod 20, with the מ Mem 40, and with the word מים 80, and with the other י Jod 10, and with the word ידי Jod 20, as also with the other מ Mem 40, and with the word מים Mem 80, so that 300 results. After this, count the Pathach under the ה He, the Kamez under the י Jod, and the Dagesh in the י Jod, and the Chirek under the מ Mem, which vowel points, since they correspond in form to two Vavs and three Yods, amount to 42 in number. Count after this the entire word (הימים hajamim) according to the small number together with the whole word, and 16 results, which all together amounts to 358. You will likewise find, when you calculate the words (Exod 15:15) אז וגוי Usi vesimrath Jah etc., that is, "Then the princes of Edom were terrified," etc., five Alephs which are pronounced and signify 5000. Then count the first and last letter in all those words, excepting the letters Aleph which have already been counted; also do not count the values which contain 100, but only those which comprise one and ten, and 381 results. Remove from the verse 25 letters which are not needed and contribute nothing to the calculation, and the number 358 remains. It is likewise with the words (Exod 15:2) (which read as follows): יה וגוי Usi vesimrath Jah etc., that is, "The Lord is my strength and song," etc. For there are five Alephs therein (which signify 5000); then count the beginning and end of the words, and 358 results. After this, begin the verse and count according to the small number up to the words אלי ואננהו Eli veanvehu, and 100 results, which all together amounts to 5358. It is likewise with the two verses in the Parascha Har Sinai (namely Lev 25:48-49) (which read as follows:) אחריו נמכר גאלה תהיה לו אחד מאחיו יגאלנו: או דדו או בן דדו יגאלנו (which is, "After he is sold, he shall have the right to be redeemed, and one of his brothers may redeem him, namely his uncle (that is, his father's brother) or his uncle's son may redeem him, or any near kinsman of his family may redeem him, or if his own hand acquires enough, he may redeem himself." For the redemption is mentioned five times therein, and the letter Aleph is found therein five times, which signifies 5000; and the word יגאלנו Jigalennu, "shall, may, or can redeem him," stands three times in the same passage, which amounts to 300 in its full numerical value. After this, count the three words יגאלנו jigalénnu according to the small number, and 57 results. And when these three words are added together, they yield 1 more, from all of which 5358 in number results. I also rejoiced greatly when I saw that Rabbi Jacob Báal hattúrim has said that the word דדו dodó, that is, "his uncle" (which is defective, in that the vowel Cholem is omitted from it, and it ought to be written in full as דודו dodó), has a bearing on the Messiah, the son of David. One can expound these two verses beautifully and easily concerning the exile or captivity of the Israelites, who have been sold among the nations, and that the Holy One, blessed be He, has made a vow to redeem them, since He is the nearest kinsman. These are the words of Rabbi Gedálja.

In Rabbi Bechai's Commentario on the five books of Moses, it is also written at fol. 21, col. 1: מעת כי משה בן דוד לא יחיה בו מיתה אבל הוא עתיד שיהיה לעולם כי מעת בואו יהיה ה' לו שנים להשלים האלף הששי והוא במנין למרבה המשרה שחשבון מ סתומה That is: the Messiah, the Son of David, will not die, but will live eternally; for from the time of his arrival there will be 837 years until the end of the six-thousandth year, according to the numerical value of the word למרבה lemarbéh (which appears in Isa 9:7, where it is read lemarbéh hammisra, that is, "He who increases the dominion"); for the closed Mem, or מ, amounts to 600 in number (and the remaining letters to 37, which together gives 837); and after the 837 years, the seven-thousandth year will immediately begin, which will be pure Sabbath and eternal life. Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel writes in his book Májene jefchúa fol. 81, col. 1. as follows: יתום העולם הגלות בשנת ה' אלפים ורצ"א לבריאת העולם That is: the world of captivity will cease in the year 5291 after the creation of the world; and by this he intended to convey that the Messiah would come at such a time and would redeem the Jews from their exile, or from their captivity.

From all of this it can be seen that, although it is forbidden to calculate the times of the Messiah, and it is wished upon those who do so that their bodies may burst asunder, this practice has nonetheless not been abandoned. Rabbi Jehúda Léva bar Bezálleel does indeed wish to excuse this in his book Nézách Jisraél, at the end of the 40th chapter, fol. 50, col. 3, where he writes: גלוי הקץ אין ראוי לשום אדם וכל זה מפני מעלת הקץ לכך לא היה ראוי לגלות הקץ כי אב ליעקב שהקץ נעלם אין ידיעה בו ולכך תפח רוחן של מחשבי הקץ ותורת הרע כי כל מה שאמרו חכמים בענין הקץ לא שהיו גוזרים שכך יהיה בודאי באותו זמן ובאותו שעה רק שגלו לנו זמן מוכן שראוי שיהיה בו הקץ ועד אותו הזמן אין ראוי שיהיה הקץ כלל עד אותו זמן שהוא מוכן אבל לא באו לומר שהזמן והקץ הוא בודאי באותו זמן שדבר זה אי אפשר כמו שהתבאר : That is: the revelation of the end (that is, the time in which the Messiah is to come) belongs to no man, on account of the excellence of that end; therefore it is not fitting to reveal it to anyone other than Jacob, since it is hidden and one has no knowledge of it. For this reason, the spirit of those who calculate the end must burst asunder. You should therefore know that everything the Sages have stated concerning the end is not to be understood as though they had judged that it would certainly occur at that particular time and at that particular hour, but only that they thereby disclosed to us the fitting time in which the end ought rightly to occur, and that until that time it is not at all fitting that the end should come, until that time which is suited to it. They did not therefore intend to say that the appointed time and the end would certainly occur at that particular time which they named, for such a thing is impossible, just as it has been explained that the end is one of the hidden things which cannot possibly be revealed with clarity. These are the words of Rabbi Jehuda Léva; the like can also be read in Rabbi Lipmann's Sepher Nizzáchon, numero 334, paginâ 187.

It may be that the aforementioned Rabbi Jehuda bar Léva, together with Rabbi Lipmann, can paint the matter whatever color he likes; yet those who calculate the time of the Messiah act contrary to the above-mentioned prohibition, which states plainly in the Talmud and in the other Rabbinic books cited above that one shall not calculate such a time nor adduce proof for it from Scripture. This prohibition is directly contradicted by what has been set forth at length from the book Shalshelet Hakkabbála, especially since Scripture is abused in so absurd a manner, particularly in what the said Rabbi Gedalia has adduced from his unrefined mind in a foolish and utterly ridiculous fashion.

On the subject of such inquiry into the time of the coming of the Messiah, Rabbi Menasse ben Israel expresses himself in the 16th chapter of his little book Mikvéh Jisraél, fol. 49, col. 2. and fol. 50, col. 1. 2., after he has indicated the passages of Scripture in which the redemption is treated, as follows: וכל הפסוקים הנ"ל המורים על גאולת ישראל והשבת ישראל אל ארץ אבותם הם דברי ה' על ידי נביאים קדושים. אבל הזמן הוא כמוס ולא נודע לכל חי אפילו לרבי שמעון בן יוחאי בעל הזוהר. רק הוא כמוס אצל השם ויתעלה כמ"ש משה בפרשת האזינו הלא הוא כמוס עמדי חתום באוצרותי וגם ישעיה ס"ג פסוק פסוק ה' אמר כי יום נקם בלבי ושנת גאולי באה. שעל זה אח"ז לבא. לפומא לא גלי ר"ל ללנו גלה ולא למלאך. ובמקום אחר אח"ז אם יאמר לך אדם שמיה בא אל האמין כמ"ש המלאך לדניאל י"ב פסוק ט' לך דניאל כי סתומים וחתומים הדברים עד עת קץ. ולכן כל אותן שרצו לבקש ולחקור זמן הגאולה טעו כמו רבינו סעדיה ורבינו משה ממצרים ורבינו משה גרונדי ורבי לוי בן גרשם ורבי שלמה ורבי אברהם ברבי חייא ורבי אברהם זכות"א ורבי מרדכי דא"ט ודון יצחק אברבנאל. כי הם רצו לחקור מה שאין בכח שכל אנושי להשיג ורצו לגלות מה שהעלים אל שדי. ואף שנגלה לדניאל מקצת מלכי האומות ממשלתם ומפלתם. הדברים הנוגעים לגאולה העתידה לא היה יכול להבין ולהשיג כלום. ועל זה פרשו חז"ל המ"ם סתומה שבאמצע התיבה למרבה המשרה בישעיה ט' פסוק ו' 'על שררת וכבוד That is to say: All the aforementioned verses, which teach the redemption of Israel and the return of the Israelites to the land of their fathers, are the word of God, which He caused to be spoken through the holy prophets; but the time is hidden and known to no living being: indeed, even Rabbi Schimon ben Jochai, who composed the Sohar, did not know it, but rather it is hidden with the most highly praised God, as Moses said in the Parascha Haasinu (Deut 32:34): Is this not hidden with me, and sealed in my treasuries? So also Isaiah says in the 63rd chapter, v. 4: For the day of vengeance is in my heart, and the year of those who are to be redeemed by me has come; concerning which our sages, of blessed memory, have said that the heart did not reveal it to the mouth, that is, He (namely God) revealed it to His heart, but to no angel. And in another place our sages, of blessed memory, say: if a man says to you that the Messiah has come, do not believe it; just as the angel said to Daniel in the 12th chapter of Daniel, v. 9: Go, Daniel, for the words are hidden and sealed until the time of the end. For this reason, all those who wished to investigate and fathom the time of the redemption have erred, such as Rabbi Saadiah, and Rabbi Moses from Egypt (that is, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon), and Rabbi Moses Gerundi (that is, Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman), and Rabbi Levi ben Gerson, and Rabbi Salomon, and Rabbi Abraham bar Chija, and Rabbi Abraham Sachuth, and Rabbi Mordechai Dato, as well as Don Isaac Abarbanel, inasmuch as they wished to investigate that which it is not within human powers to comprehend, and wished to reveal that which almighty God has kept hidden. Although Daniel was shown the dominion and fall of certain kings of the nations, he was nonetheless unable to understand or comprehend in the slightest the things pertaining to the future redemption. For this reason our sages, of blessed memory, have interpreted the closed Mem or M, which stands in Isa 9:6 in the middle of the word למרבה Lemarbél (whereas otherwise it is always found only at the end of words), as referring to the dominion and the glory of the redemption, which is hidden and sealed until the time of the end.

In some rabbinical books it is furthermore taught that the Messiah will come after the destruction of the city of Rome, and in the book Zerór hammór fol. 144, col. 2. in the Parascha Ki tézé one reads as follows: בחרבן רומא מיד תהיה גאולתינו that is, at the destruction of the city of Rome our redemption will immediately come to pass. So too does Isaac Abarbanel write in his book Májene jeschúa, fol. 49, col. 4. on Dan 7:13 as follows: מאשר זכר הנביא ראשונה חרבן רומי ואחריו זכר גאולת ישראל ותשועתו למדנו בלי ספק שכן יהיה בעתיד שראשונה תחרב רומי ואחרי כן יתגלה מלך המשיח. אמרו בפרקי רבי אליעזר שלש מלחמות של מהומה עתידין בני 'ישמעאל לעשות באחרית הימים שנאמר כי מפני חרבות נדדו א'בים מפני חרב נטושה: וא בשדה שנאמר מפני קשת דרוכה. וא 'בכרך גדול של רומי שהיא כבדה משתיהם שנאמר ומפני כובד מלחמה. ומשם בן דוד יצמח ויראה באבדן של אלו ואלו. ומשם יבא לארץ ישראל שנאמר מי זה בא מאדום חמוץ בגדים מבצרה. גלו בזה שעיקר המלחמות אשר יהיו בזמן הגאולה העתידה יהיה עם אומת אדום. וגלו עוד שבראשונה תחרב רומי ואחר כך יבא מלך that is, since the prophet first made mention of the destruction of the city of Rome, and only thereafter spoke of the redemption and salvation of Israel, we learn from this without doubt that it will come to pass in the future in this same manner, and that Rome will first be destroyed, and only thereafter will the Messiah reveal himself. In the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer it is said (at the end of the 30th chapter) that the children of Ishmael (that is, the Turks) will wage three violent wars in the last days, as it is said (Isa 21:15): For they flee from the sword. First upon the sea, because there one reads: From the drawn sword. And secondly in the field, because it is said: From the bent bow. And thirdly in the great city of Rome, which war will be heavier than the two preceding ones, because it is said: And from the grievous war. From there the Son of David will also come forth, and will behold the downfall of both (as well of the Christians as of the Turks). And from there he will come into the land of Israel, as it is said (Isa 63:1): Who is this that comes from Edom, with sprinkled garments from Bozrah? By this it is revealed that the foremost among the wars which will take place at the time of the redemption is to be waged against the Edomite people (that is, the Christians). It is further revealed that Rome is first to be destroyed, and thereafter the King Messiah will come; for this reason Daniel first speaks of the devastation of the city of Rome, and thereafter of the redemption of Israel.

From this it can thus be seen that the Ismaeliten or Turks will capture the city of Rome, and that thereafter the Messiah shall come forth. He notes that Abarbanel does indeed mention in his book Maschmia jeschua fol. 59, col. 2. that the Persians will destroy the city of Rome, when he writes: אמרו ז"ל בפ"ק That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said in the first chapter of the Talmudic tractate Joma, according to that which they received through tradition, that Rome will fall by the hands of the Persians; which is also to be found in his Commentary on Jeremiah fol. 147, col. 4.; however, the Persians are also counted among the Ismaeliten. And at fol. 76, col. 2 he states: אפרש לומר שאחרי אבדת הנוצרים על ידי הישמעאלים יבאו יהושע ביריחו והם סובבים את העיר ותוקעים בשופרות ובפעם השביעית מרעיש תרועה שמע ישראל יי' אלהינו יי' אחד ונפלה חומת העיר והם נכנסים בתוכה ומוצאים את הילדים מתים ברחובותיה שנאמר לכן בחוריה ברחובותיה וגו' ואחרי כן הם קובצין את כל שללה וישראל מבקשין את אלהיהן ואת דוד מלכם ומיד נגלה עליהם מלך המשיח והוא אומר להם אני הוא מלך המשיח שהייתם מחכים והוא אומר להם שאו את הכסף ואת הזהב והם נושאים אותו That is: For the second time a voice will come from Heaven and speak (to the Israelites): Go into Edom and execute my vengeance there, as it is said (Ezek 25:14): I will take my vengeance upon Edom through my people Israel. Thereupon the Israelites will march against Rome, and a voice from Heaven will come for the third time (and say): Deal with it as Joshua dealt with Jericho. Whereupon they will surround the city and blow trumpets, and for the seventh time cry out with a great shout the words from Deut 6:4: Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one God; then the wall of the city will fall, and they will enter it and find their young men lying dead in its streets, as it is said (Jer 49:26): Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, etc. After this they will gather all the plunder of that city and seek their God and David their king, and the King, the Messiah, will reveal himself immediately and say to them: I am the King, the Messiah, for whom you have waited. He will also say to them: Take the silver and the gold; and they will take it, as it is said (Isa 60:6): The multitude of camels shall cover you.

In the book Pesikta sotārta, however, it is read at fol. 58, col. 2 in the Parashah Balak that the Jews will take it, and the Messiah will reveal himself after this; and the words read as follows: בת קול מפוצצת שנית לכו לאדום ועשו בה כאשר עשה יהושע ביריחו והם סובבים את העיר ותוקעים בשופרות ובפעם השביעית מרעיש תרועה שמע ישראל יי' אלהינו יי' אחד ונפלה חומת העיר והם נכנסים בתוכה ומוצאים את הילדים מתים ברחובותיה שנאמר לכן בחוריה ברחובותיה וגו' ואחרי כן הם קובצין את כל שללה וישראל מבקשין את אלהיהן ואת דוד מלכם ומיד נגלה עליהם מלך המשיח והוא אומר להם אני הוא מלך המשיח שהייתם מחכים והוא אומר להם שאו את הכסף ואת הזהב והם נושאים אותו That is: For the second time a voice will come from Heaven and speak (to the Israelites): Go into Edom and execute my vengeance there, as it is said (Ezek 25:14): I will take my vengeance upon Edom through my people Israel. Thereupon the Israelites will march against Rome, and a voice from Heaven will come for the third time (and say): Deal with it as Joshua dealt with Jericho. Whereupon they will surround the city and blow trumpets, and for the seventh time cry out with a great shout the words from Deut 6:4: Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one God; then the wall of the city will fall, and they will enter it and find their young men lying dead in its streets, as it is said (Jer 49:26): Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, etc. After this they will gather all the plunder of that city and seek their God and David their king, and the King, the Messiah, will reveal himself immediately and say to them: I am the King, the Messiah, for whom you have waited. He will also say to them: Take the silver and the gold; and they will take it, as it is said (Isa 60:6): The multitude of camels shall cover you.

But Rabbi Bechai teaches in his book Cad bakkémach fol. 48, col. 1. that the Messiah himself will destroy the city of Rome, when he writes: המושיע האחרון שיגלה במהרה בימינו הוא עתיד לצאת מתוך מטרופולין של רומי ומחריבה הוא שנתבא ישעיה עליו השלום שם ירעה עגל ושם ירבץ וכלה סעיפיה That is: The last Deliverer (who may speedily be made known in our days) will go forth out of the capital city of Rome and destroy it; and this is what Isaiah prophesied (when he says in Isa 27:10): The calf will feed there, and lie down, and browse its branches. And in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 63, col. 4. in the Parasha Schemóth, he expresses himself thus: לעתיד מתוך רומי עתיד לצאת שיחרים אותה זה מלך המשיח הוא שנתבא ישעיה כי השח יושבי מרום קריה נשגבה ישפילנה ישפילה

עד ארץ יגיענה עד עפר וכתיב תרמסנה רגל רגלי עני פעמי דלים וכתיב שם ירעה עגל וגומר
 That is: In the future, he who will put it under the ban (and destroy it) will come forth out of (the city of) Rome, and this will be the King Messiah; and this is what (Isaiah prophesied, who) humbles those who dwell on high, and casts down the exalted city: he strikes it to the ground, so that it lies in the dust. And in v. 6 it is written: That it shall be trodden underfoot, with the feet of the wretched, with the steps of the poor. So also it is written (Isa 27:10):
 The calf will feed there, etc.

Since the time that the destruction of the city of Rome is mentioned here, I must, on account of this, report further what is found concerning it; and the aforementioned Abarbanel writes in his Commentary on Isa 34:5 etc. through
 v. 16, fol. 53, col. 2, about it as follows: בצרה הנזכרת גפרית ומלח תשרוף כל ארצה
 כמהפכת סדום ועמורה וגו' סדום ועמורה ועל זה אמר כאן ונהפכו נחליה לזפת ועפרה לגפרית
 וגו' וכן דרשו בילמדנו ונהפכו נחליה לזפת זו היב"רוס וטאר"סינוס הנתונים על שפת רומי וכן
 תרגם יונתן ונהפכו נחליה נחלתה ורומי והוא המוכיח בביאור שבצרה היא רומי כמו שפירשתי
 כי עם היות שמצאנו בצרה אחת במלכות מואב שנקראת כן להיותה קריה בצורה מי המונע
 שתקרא גם כן רומי כן להיותה כבר. ומי יודע אם כיוונו הנביאים עליהם השלום לקרוא לרומי
 בצרה מפני שהמלה הזאת עולה בגימטריא ב"ה צ"די ור"ש שנה רצ"ב ה' היא במקום ה' אלפים
 לרמזו שלשנה חמשת אלפים רצ"ב לבריאת העולם ישלם חרבן רומי. כי כבר הודעתך במעיני
 הישועה ובישועות משיחו מדה שזכרו ז"ל מהמגלה שנמצאת בגניזת רומי והיה כתוב בה שיהיה
 חרבנה בשנת ה' אלפים ור"צא לבריאת העולם ולהיות זה מקובל אצלם קראו אותה בצרה
 שעולה אותו מנין ועליה אמר כאן לילה ויומם לא תכבה לעולם יעלה עשנה לפי שיהיה ענינה
 כמהפכת סדום ועמורה וכמהפכת בבל שנהפכה גם כן ובעבור שהיתה הקריה הבצורה הגדולה
 הזאת מטעה את העולם באמונותיה והיא היתה בית מושב לחשמונים ולהגמונים ראשי אמונתם
 לכן היה משורת הדין שתחרב לנצח נצחים אין עובר בה ובמקום הגמוניה וחשמוניה יירשוה
 קאת וקפוד וינשוף ועורב ישכנו בה שהם הבעלי חיים והעופות המקולקלים והארורים ונטה
 עליה הקב"ה קו תהו ואבני בהו רצה לומר לסתור ולהשחית ולבלוע ולא לבנות ואמרו חוריה
 ואין שם מלוכה יקראו חוזר גם כן לבצרה הנזכרת וגם זה יוכיח שהיא רומי לפי שיש בה
 חורים שהם שרים כמו חורי יהודה והם החשמונים וההגמונים אשר בקרבה עם האפיפיור
 שלהם אבל לא נקרא עליהם שם מלך ולא מלוכה והוא אומרו חוריה ואין שם מלוכה רוצה
 לומר חורי בצרה. וביאור הכתוב למה אמר חוריה ולא אמר מלכיה לפי שאין שם בצרה דרומי
 לומר רומי קוראים לשון ושם מלוכה וזהו מלוכה יקראו כי אין מלך מושל עליהם שהנה אותם
 חורים וכל שריה יהיו אפס ובמקום שהיו בבצרה ארמונות גדולים לאותם החורים והשרים
 עתה תעלה בארמונותיה סירים קמוש וחוח במבצריה והיתה נוה תנים חציר לבנות יענה רצה
 לומר שבאותם הארמונות להיותם שוממים מבלי יושב יעלו סירים וקמוש וחוח כמו שעולים
 במדבר השמם ולא יהיה שם צאן ובקר אבל יהיו נוה תנים ובנות יענה ופגשו ציים את איים
 רוצה לומר מיני חיות רעות שונות זו מזו. ושעיר על רעהו יקרא דהוא כנוי לשדים מלשון
 ולא יזבחו עוד את זבחייהם לשעירים זכן אף שם הרגיעה לילית ומצאה לה מנוח שהיא השדה
 הנקראת בדברי חז"ל לילית וכן תרגם שעירים ולילית על שדה ושרות וגם זה היה מדה כנגד
 מדה כי במקום שבצרה היא רומי היתה

(v. 6) That is to say: The aforementioned (city of) Bozra will be overturned with sulfur and salt, and its entire land like Sodom and Gomorrah; and therefore he (namely God) says here (v. 9): Its streams will be changed into pitch, and its earth into sulfur, etc. Likewise, the words "and its streams will be changed into pitch" are expounded in the book Jelammedénu to mean that these streams signify the rivers Tiber and Tarsinus, which are at Rome. Likewise, Jonathan (in his Chaldean translation) expounded the words "and its streams will be changed" as referring to the river of the city of Rome. And this proves clearly that Rome is to be understood by Bozra, as I have expounded it. For although we find that there was another Bozra in the Moabite kingdom, which was so named (from בִּצֶר bizzér, that is, to fortify, or to make strong) because it was a fortified city, what should prevent the city of Rome from likewise having been so named, since it is of such a character (and is strong)? Who knows, moreover, whether the prophets, upon whom be peace, did not deliberately call the city of Rome בִּצְרָה Bozra, because the letters Beth, Tzade, and Resh (that is, B, Z, and R) amount by Gematria to the number 292, while the letter He, or ה (which signifies five), stands in place of 5,000, in order thereby to indicate that in the year 5,292 after the creation of the world the destruction of the city of Rome would be accomplished. For I have already made known to you in the book Májene jeschúa and in the book Jeschuòth Mischichó what our sages, of blessed memory, have reported concerning a book that was found among the treasures at Rome, in which it was written that the city of Rome was to be laid waste in the year 5,292 after the creation of the world; and because they had learned this through a tradition or oral teaching, they called it Bózra, which yields exactly the same number. Of it, it is also said here (v. 10): It shall be quenched neither night nor day; its smoke shall rise up forever; for it shall fare as it fared with Sodom and Gomorrah, and also with Babel, which were overturned. And because this great fortified city led the world astray with its faith, and it is a dwelling place of the Cardinals and Bishops, as the foremost of its faith, it will therefore be just that it be destroyed for all eternity, and that no one pass through it anymore; and in place of its Bishops and Cardinals, the bitterns and hedgehogs will take possession of it, and the night-owls and ravens will dwell therein, which are worthless and accursed beasts and birds. The holy and blessed God will also (as is to be read in v. 11) stretch over it the measuring line of desolation and the plumb line of ruin; that is, He will destroy, lay waste, and ruin it, and not build it up. The words (v. 12): They shall call upon its nobles (or name its nobles), and there shall be no kingdom there (or, they shall name its nobles and no kingdom there), likewise refer to the aforementioned Bózra and prove it to be the city of Rome, because in it there are nobles who are princes, just as the nobles of Judah were, and these are the Cardinals and Bishops who are therein with their Pope. They are not, however, called by the name of king or kingdom, and this is what is said: They shall call upon their nobles, namely the nobles of Bozra, and there shall be no kingdom there. And Scripture explains the reason why it says "their nobles" and not "their kings": because in Bozra, that is in Rome, the word and the name "kingdom" is not named (from that place); and this is the meaning of the words: They shall name no kingdom, because no king rules over them. And behold, those same nobles and princes who are therein shall come to nothing; and in the place where in Bozra there were great palaces for those nobles and princes, there shall now grow up in their palaces thorns, thistles, and briars in their fortresses; and it shall become a habitation of dragons and a court of young ostriches; that is, in those same palaces, because they shall lie desolate without inhabitants, thorns, thistles, and briars shall grow up, just as they grow in a wild desert; and there shall no sheep or cattle graze there, but it shall be a habitation of dragons and of young ostriches. (And in v. 14 it is written:) And the martens and vultures shall meet one another, by which various kinds of evil beasts are to be understood. And a Sair, that is, a field-devil, shall call to another; and the word Sair is a designation for devils, as it is used (Lev 17:7), where it is written: And they shall no more offer their sacrifices to the Seirim, that is, to the field-devils. Thus (it is also further read there, in the said v. 14:) There shall the Lilith (or Lilis) rest and find her repose; and by this is understood that she-devil who is called by our sages, of blessed memory, Lilith (or Lilis). Likewise, Jonathan (in his Chaldean translation) rendered the words Seirim and Lilith by the words Schédah and Schedóth, that is, she-devils and female devils. But thereby like shall be repaid with like; for whereas Bozra, that is Rome, had been the holy place of the Edomite god and of their idols, it shall now become a place of devils and spirits.

These are the words of Abarbanel, which are also found in his book Maschmía jescháa, fol. 17, col. 4, and fol. 18, col. 1. There is yet more to be read in the same commentary on the Prophet Jeremiah, fol. 147, col. 3, on chapter 49, v. 7 etc., concerning the destruction of the city of Rome and its name Bozra. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, it is also indicated at fol. 46, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajischlach, from the book Pirke bechalóth, how very little Rome shall be esteemed at that time, when he writes that it shall be held in such little regard: עד שיאמר אדם לחברו הא לך רומי בפרוטה ויאמר לו אינה מתבקשת לי That is: So that when someone says to his neighbor, "Here, take the city of Rome for a penny," the other will answer him, "I do not want it."

At the time of the coming of the Messiah, Elijah the prophet shall appear three days beforehand; concerning which it is written in the book Pesikta

räbbertha, fol. 62, col. 1., as also in the Jalkut Schimoni on Esaia, fol. 53, col. 3. numero 337., as follows: בשעה שהק"ב גואל את ישראל ג' ימים קודם שיבא משיח: בא אליהו ועומד על הרי ישראל ובוכה ומספיד עליהם ואומר להם הרי ארץ ישראל עד מתי אתם עומדים בארץ ציה ושממה וקולו נשמע מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואחר כך אומר להם בא שלום לעולם בא שלום לעולם שנ' מה נאוו על ההרים רגלי מבשר משמיע שלום. כיון ששמעו רשעים הם שמחים ואומר זה לזה בא שלום לנו. ביום שני בא ועומד על הרי ישראל ואומר באת טובה לעולם באת טובה לעולם שנ' מבשר טוב. ביום ג' בא ועומד על הרי ישראל ואומר באת ישועה לעולם באת ישועה לעולם שנ' משמיע ישועה. וכיון שהוא רואה את הרשעים שהם אומרים כך אומר לציון מלך אלהיך ללמדך לציון ולבניה בא ישועה ולא לרשעים: That is: At the time when the Holy Blessed God will redeem Israel, Elijah will come three days before the Messiah arrives, and will stand upon the mountains of Israel, and weep over them, and lament for them, and say to them: O mountains of the land of Israel, how long do you stand in a dry and desolate land? And his voice will be heard from one end of the world to the other. Thereafter he will say to them: Peace comes into the world, peace comes into the world, as is declared (Isa 52:7): How lovely upon the mountains are the feet of the messenger who proclaims peace. When the wicked hear this, they will rejoice, and one will say to another: Peace comes to us. On the second day he comes again and stands upon the mountains of Israel and says: Good comes into the world, good comes into the world, as is said (in the aforementioned v. 7, referring to the preceding words): Who brings good tidings. On the third day he comes once more and stands upon the mountains of Israel and says: Salvation comes into the world, salvation comes into the world, as is said (in the aforesaid v. 7): Who proclaims salvation. And when he sees the wicked speaking thus, he will say to Zion: Your God is King, to teach you that salvation comes for Zion and her children, but not for the wicked. From this, then, the reason is to be seen why the Jews so frequently call upon the Lord that Elijah may come soon, as may be read here and there in their prayers, namely because they hope that they will then be redeemed and led back into the promised land by the Messiah, and shall also rule over the entire world.

Regarding the manner in which the Messiah will come, he is said to arrive riding upon that same donkey on which Abraham and Moses rode; concerning which, in the Jalkut Shimoni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 28, col. 2, numero 98, on the words of Gen 22:3, "Then Abraham rose early in the morning and saddled his donkey," it is written as follows: הוא בן האתון שנבראת בין השמשות. הוא החמור שרכב עליו משה שנאמר ויקח משה את אשתו ואת בניו וירכיבם על החמור. הוא החמור שעתיד בן דוד לרכוב עליו שנאמר עני ורוכב על חמור: that is, This (donkey) is a foal of that she-donkey which was created (at the beginning of the world) at the dividing of the day (or twilight). That same is the donkey upon which Moses rode, as it is said (Exod 4:20): "And Moses took his wife and his sons and set them upon a donkey." That same is the donkey upon which the Son of David will ride, as it is said (Zech 9:9): "He is poor and rides upon a donkey." The very same is also to be read in the book Pirke Rabbi Eliezer, in the 31st chapter, as well as in the aforementioned Jalkut Shimoni on Zechariah, fol. 86, col. 1, numero 575. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi likewise writes, in his commentary on the already-cited words of Exod 4:20, concerning the donkey mentioned therein, in the following manner: חמור המיוחד הוא החמור שחבש אברהם לעקידת יצחק הוא שעתיד מלך המשיח להגלות עליו שנאמר עני ורוכב על חמור: that is, This is the particular donkey which Abraham saddled for the binding of Isaac, and the one upon which the Messiah will reveal himself in the future, as it is said (Zech 9:9): "He is poor and rides upon a donkey." This donkey must therefore be exceedingly old, and on account of his aged and stiff limbs he will not be able to perform any leaps in the air; or perhaps he has until now been staying in Paradise, and has been eating there of the wholesome and beneficial herbs that are said to grow therein, which may have kept him in full vigor.

In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 98, col. 1, the following is read: אמר רבי אלכסנדר רבי יהושע בן לוי רמי כתיב וארו עם ענני שמיא כבר אנש אתי וכתוב עני ורוכב על חמור זכו עם ענני שמיא לא זכו עני ורוכב על חמור. אמר ליה שבור מלכא לשמואל אמריתו משיח על חמרא אתי אישדר ליה סוסיא ברקא דאית לי אמר ליה מי אית לך בר חיוור גווי: That is: Rabbi Alexander said that Rabbi Jehoshua ben Levi had raised an objection, or a difficulty (saying): it is written (in Dan 7:13, concerning the Messiah): "And behold, one came in the clouds of heaven like a son of man"; and it is also written (in Zech 9:9, likewise concerning him): "He is poor and rides upon a donkey." (How can these two things be reconciled, if he is to come in the clouds and yet ride upon a donkey? The matter is to be understood as follows:) if they (namely the Jews) are worthy of it, he will come (swiftly) in the clouds of heaven; but if they are not worthy of it, he will ride poor and upon a donkey (slowly). The (Persian) King Sapor said to Samuel (who was a Talmudic teacher): you say that the Messiah will come upon a donkey; I will send him a splendid horse that I have (for it would be a disgrace for him to ride upon a donkey; the king was thus mocking Samuel). Whereupon Samuel answered him and said: do you then have a horse that has a hundred colors? For the Messiah's donkey has that many colors.

As for the place from which the Messiah is to come, it can be seen from what was shown shortly before in this chapter, from Rabbi Bechai's book Cadbakkémach, fol. 48, col. 2. and his commentary on the five books of Moses fol. 63, col. 4., that he is to come from the city of Rome. The Targum Jeruschálmi also agrees with this, that is, the Hierosolymitan Chaldean translation of the five books of Moses, in which, in the Parascha Bo, four remarkable nights are mentioned, and among other things the following is written there: לילא רביעאה כד ישרים עלמא קציה למתפרקא חבלי רשיעא ישתיצון ונירי: that is, on the fourth night, when the world will complete its appointed time in order to be redeemed, and the yokes of iron will be broken, Moses will come forth from the wilderness, and the King, the Messiah, from Rome.

Regarding the signs by which the coming of the Messiah will be indicated, and which are to occur before that time: ten of them are described in the book Afkáth róchel, in the first part of the first book, which I will set down here one after another. The words concerning the first sign read as follows: האות הראשון עתיד הק"בה להעמיד שלש מלכים וכופרים ברעתם ומשקרים ומראים עצמם לבני אדם שהם עובדים להק"בה ואינם עובדים ומתעים ומבלבלים כל הבריות ומפורש אומרה העולם העולם בדיניהם ואף פושעי ישראל המתאשים מן הגאולה כופרים בהק"בה ועוזבים את יראתו ועל אותו הדור נאמר ותהי האמת נעדרת ומהו נעדרת שבעלי האמת נעשו עדרים ועדרים והולכים ובורחים ומתחבאים במערות ובמחילות עפר ונאספים כל גבורי הדור ובטלו אנשי אמנה ונגנזו שערי חכמה והעולם עומד משונה ובאותו זמן אין מלך ולא נשיא בישראל שנאמר כי ימים רבים ישבו ישראל אין מלך ואין שר אין זבח ואין מצבה וגו' ולא ראשי ישיבות וגאון יעקב לא רועים נאמנים ולא חסידים ובעלי השם ונעולים דלתי שחקים ונסגרים שערי פרנסה וכלכלה וכדן שמשיח יתגלה בגבורתו דור הולך ונופל בחייו מפני גזרות קשות ומשונות ועוברות שגורות שלשה מלכים הללו ועוד שעזורים לכפור בהק"בה ובתורה והק"בה גוזר שתמלוך מלכות הרשעה ט' חדשים בכיפה שנ' לכן יתנם עד עת יולדה ואין לכן אלא שבועה שנ' לכן נשבעתי לבית עלי וגזרים גירות קשות וכופלים מס על ישראל על אחד עשר מי שהיה נותן עשרה נותן מאה וכל מי שהיה נותן שמנה נותן שמנים וכל מי שאין לו חותכין ראשו וכל אלו תשעה חדשים מתחדשות גזירות אחר גזירות זו קשה מזו ויוצאים בני אדם מסוף העולם שהם מכוערים ביותר וכל מי שרואה אותם מת מפחדם ואינם צריכים לעשות מלחמה אלא מפחדם ממיתים הכל וכל אחד ואחד יש לו שני קדקדים ושבעה עינים והם דולקים כאש וקלים בהליכתם כצבאים באותה שעה זועקים ישראל ואומרים ווי ווי וקטנים מישראל מתבעתים והולכים ונטמנים כל אחד ואחד תחת אבו ותחת אמו ואומרים ווי ווי אבא מה נעשה ואבותיהם That is: The first sign. The Holy and Blessed God will establish three kings who are, in their minds, deniers of God and liars, yet will present themselves to men as though they served the Holy and Blessed God, while in fact they do not serve Him, but will instead lead all people astray and throw them into confusion; and the nations of the world will, through their judgments, deny God, and the wicked Israelites who despair of the redemption will likewise fall away from God and abandon the fear of Him; and of that same generation it is said (Isa 59:15): "Truth is lacking" (and is no longer present). What does "lacking" mean? The lovers of truth will gather together in crowds, take to flight, and hide themselves in caves and pits (or clefts) of the earth; all the valiant men of that time will be swept away, and all the faithful will cease to be. The gates of wisdom will also be hidden, and the world will stand transformed. At that same time there will be no king nor prince in Israel, as it is said (Hos 3:4): "For the children of Israel shall remain for a long time without a king and without a prince, without sacrifice and without an altar," etc. There will also be no heads of the academies, nor distinguished men of Jacob (that is, princes of the synagogues), nor faithful shepherds, nor pious and renowned men. The doors of heaven and the gates of sustenance and provision will be shut; and at the time when the Messiah will be revealed in his strength, the people will, during his lifetime, fall (and perish) on account of the harsh, varied, and sudden decrees of persecution that those same three kings will issue. Beyond this, they will also issue commands that the Holy and Blessed God and His law are to be denied; and God has decreed that the wicked (that is, the Roman) empire shall reign under the entire heavens for nine months, as it is said (Mic 5:3): "Therefore He will give them up until the time when she who is to give birth has given birth"; and the word "therefore" signifies nothing other than an oath, as it is said (1 Sam 3:14): "Therefore I have sworn to the house of Eli." Those same (three kings) will accordingly issue harsh decrees and impose a tenfold tribute upon the Israelites, so that one who previously gave eight (guilders) must give eighty, and the one who is unable to pay will have his head cut off. Throughout all these nine months, new decrees will follow one upon another, each harsher than the last. Exceedingly hideous men will also come forth from the ends of the earth, and whoever looks upon them will die of fright; and these will have no need to wage war, but will kill all people through the terror that others have of them. And each one will have two crowns of the head (that is, two heads) and seven eyes burning like fire, and they will be as swift as deer in their gait. At that same time the Israelites will cry out and say, "Woe, woe!" and the small children of the Israelites will be seized with terror, and each one will hide under his father and under his mother and say, "Woe, woe! Father, what shall we do?" But their fathers will answer them: "We are now close to the redemption of Israel." This is the description of the first sign. As for the wondrously formed and hideous men, they will perhaps be descended from those of whom mention was made above in the 9th chapter of the first part, pagina 465, 466, and 467.

The second sign is described as follows: מביא הק"ב חום בעולם מחמה של רשעים וקדחת ורבים חלאים רעים והברומוגפה (ממיתים מאומות העולם אלף אלפים בכל יום וכל רשעים שבישראל מתים עד שיבכו אומות ויצעקו אוי לנו אנה גלך ואנה נברח וחופרים כל אחר קברו בחייו ושואלן אה נפשו למות ומתחבאים בצחיחים ובצריהון והבוהן כלי לבנן את עצם עצמם ובאים במעלות ובמחילות עפר ואם תאמר איך ינצלו הצדיקים מחום החמה ה"ב יעשה להם רפואה באותו חום שנאמר וזרחה לכם יראי שמי שמש צדקה ומרפא בכנפיה ועל That is: The holy blessed God will, from the heat of the sun, send into the world a heat with consumption, burning fever, and many evil diseases, pestilence and plagues, which will kill a thousand times a thousand from the nations of the world every day; and the godless who are among the Israelites will also die, so that the nations will weep and cry out: "Woe to us! Where shall we go? Where shall we flee?" And each person will dig his own grave while still alive, and wish for death, and will hide himself (on account of the great heat) in elevated places, castles, and towers in order to cool himself, and will also (to that same end) go into the caves and clefts of the earth. Now if you wish to ask how the righteous will be saved from the heat of the sun, (I answer:) the holy blessed God will make for them a medicine from that same heat, as it is said (Mal 4:2): "But unto you who fear My name shall the Sun of righteousness arise, and healing under His wings." Concerning this same testimony, the wicked Balaam also prophesied (Num 24:23): "Alas, who shall live when God does this?" These are the words of the second sign; but as regards the heat of the sun that is mentioned therein, something was also noted about it above in the 8th chapter of this second part, pp. 366 and 367; and Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary on the words of Mal 4:1, "And the day that cometh shall burn them," in the following manner: יום זה לשון שמש הוא שכך אמרו חכמים אין גיהנם לעתיד לבא אלא ה"ב מוציא חמה מנרתיקה ורשעים 'נידונים בה וצדיקים מתרפאים בה וזהו שנ' וזרחה לכם יראי שמי וגו' That is: By "day" the sun is meant, for our sages have said thus: in the future there will be no hell; rather, the holy blessed God will cause the sun to go forth from its sheath, and the godless will be punished by it, while the righteous will be healed by it; and this is what is said (v. 2): "But unto you who fear My name," ע"כ.

The third sign consists of the following:

הקדוש ברוך הוא מוריד טל של דם ויראה לאומות העולם כמי מים וישתו ממנו וימותו ואף רשעי ישראל המתאישים מן הגאולה ישתו ממנו וימותו וצדיקים המחזיקים באמונתו של ה"כר אינם נזקים כלל שנאמר והמשכילים יזהירו כזוהר הרקיע ויהיה כל העולם דם כל אותם השלשה ימים שנ' ונתתי מופתים בשמים ובארץ

That is: The holy blessed God will let fall a dew of blood, which will appear to the nations of the world as water, and they will drink of it and die. Likewise the wicked among the Israelites, who lose all hope of redemption, will drink of it and perish. But the righteous, who remain steadfast in their faith in the holy blessed God, will not be harmed by it at all, as it is said (Dan 12:3): "But the wise shall shine like the brightness of the firmament." The entire world will also be full of blood for three whole days, as it is said (Joel 2:30): "And I will give wonders in the heavens and upon the earth, namely blood, fire, and pillars of smoke."

The fourth sign is described as follows: הקדוש ברוך הוא מוריד טל של רפואה לרפאות הדם וישתו ממנה הבינונים ויתרפאו מחלים שנ' אהיה כטל לישראל יפרח כשושנה That is: The holy blessed God will let fall a healing dew, to heal the blood (that is, the sickness which comes from drinking the aforementioned bloody dew); and the middling ones (namely those who are neither wholly righteous nor wholly wicked) will drink of it and be healed of their sickness, as it is said (Hos 14:6): "I will be to Israel like a dew, so that he shall blossom like a lily, and his roots shall spread forth like Lebanon."

The fifth sign shall be the following: הקדוש ברוך הוא מחזיר את השמש לחשך שלשים יום שנאמר השמש יהפך לחשך והירח לדם. אחרי שלשים יום ה"בה מחזירו לקדמות שנאמר ואספנו אסיפה אסיר על בור וסוגרו על מסגר ומרוב ימים יפקדו. ומתפחדים אומות העולם ומתביישים ויודעים שבשביל ישראל כל האותות האלו ורבים מהם מתהירים בסתרי העולם: That is: The holy blessed God will transform the sun into darkness for thirty days, as it is said (Joel 2:31): "The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood." After those thirty days, the holy blessed God will restore it to its former state (so that it will shine again as before), as it is said (Isa 24:22): "They shall be gathered together as prisoners into a pit, and shall be shut up in a prison, and after many days they shall be visited." On account of this, the nations of the world will be terrified and put to shame, and will recognize that all these signs have come to pass on account of the Israelites; and many of them will secretly adopt the Jewish faith, as it is said (Jonah 2:9): "Those who hold to their vain vanities will forsake their own mercy" (or rather, as it is understood here: they will forsake their shame, that is, their false religion). As for the adoption of the Jewish religion mentioned here, it will be treated in detail in the next following Chapter 14.

The sixth sign is described as follows: ממליך הק"ב אדום הרשעה על כל העולם כמו שאמרנו למעלה ויקם מלך אחר ברומי וימלוך על כל העולם תשעה חדשים ויחריב מדינות רבות ויחר אפו על ישראל וישליך עליהם מס גדול ויהיו ישראל באותה שעה בצרה גדולה מרוב הגזירות והמהומות שמתחדשות עליהם בכל יום וישראל מתמעטין וכלין באותו זמן ואין עוזר לישראל ועל אותו זמן נתנבא ישעיה ואמר וירא כי אין איש וישתומם וגו' : 'לסוף תשעה חדשים יגלה משיח בן יוסף ושמו נחמיה בן חושאל עם שבט אפרים ומנשה ובנימין ומקצת בני גד ושומעין ישראל שבכל המדינות שבא משיח ה' ומתקבצים אליו מעט מכל מדינה ומכל עיר שנאמר בירמיהו שובו בנים שובבים נאם ה' כי אנכי בעלתי בכם ולקחתי אתכם אחד מעיר ושנים ממשפחה והבאתי אתכם ציון. ויבא משיח בן יוסף ויתגרה מלחמתו עם מלך אדום וינצח את אדום ויהרוג מהם הילי חילים ויהרוג את מלך אדום ויחריב מדינת רומי ויוציא קצת כלי בית המקדש שהם גנוזים בבית יוליינוס קיסר ויבא לירושלים וישמעו ישראל ויתקבצו אליו ומלך מצרים ישלים עמו ויהרוג כל אנשי המדינות אשר סביבות ירושלים עד דמשק ואשקלון ויבא משיח בן יוסף וישמעו כל אנשי העולם ויפול אימה גדולה עליהם: That is to say: The holy and blessed God will allow the wicked Edom (meaning the Roman Empire, or all of Christendom) to rule over the entire world, as we have mentioned above, and a king will arise in Rome who will reign over the entire world for nine months and will lay waste to great lands. His wrath will also be kindled against the Israelites, and he will impose a heavy tribute upon them; and the Israelites will at that time be in great distress on account of the many persecutions and plagues that will befall them anew each day, and they will therefore dwindle and diminish, and no one will help them. Of that time Isaiah prophesied when he says (Isa 59:16): "And He sees that there is no man, and is astonished and appalled," etc. At the end of those nine months, the Messiah, the son of Joseph, by name Nehemiah the son of Chuschiel, will reveal himself together with the tribe of Ephraim and Manasseh and Benjamin, along with a portion of the children of Gad. And when the Israelites in all lands hear that the Messiah of the Lord has come, some few from each province and city will gather themselves to him, as it is said in Jeremiah (Jer 3:14): "Return, you backsliding children, says the Lord, for I am married to you, and I will take you, one from a city and two from a family, and I will bring you to Zion." Thereafter the Messiah the son of Joseph will come and engage the Edomite king in fierce war, and will overcome the Edomites and slay them in great multitudes, and will also kill the Edomite king and lay waste to the land of Rome, and will bring forth certain vessels of the Temple that had been hidden in the house of the Emperor Julian, and will march to Jerusalem. When the Israelites hear of this, they will gather themselves to him, and the king of Egypt will make peace with him. He will also kill all the inhabitants of the provinces surrounding Jerusalem as far as Damascus and Ashkelon, and when the people of the world hear of this, a great terror will fall upon them. These are the words of the sixth sign. As for the war mentioned therein, which the Jews will wage against the Christians, a more detailed account of it will be given in the following Chapter 14.

The seventh sign consists of the following content: הקירי ברוך הוא בעל נפלאות עושה מופת בעולם. אמרו שיש ברומי אבן של שיש דמות נערה יפה תואר והיא אינה עשויה ביד אדם אלא הקב"ה בראה כן בגבורתו ובאין רשעי אומות העולם בני בליעל ומחממין אותה ושוכבים אצלה והקדוש ב"ה משמר טפתן בתוך האבן ובורא בה בריה ויוצר בה ולד והיא מתבקעת ויוצא ממנה דמות אדם ושמו ארמילוס השטן זה שהאומות קורין אותו אנטיקריסטו ארכו שנים עשרה אמה ורחבו שנים עשרה ובין שתי עיניו זרת והן עמוקות אדומות ושער ראשו כצבע זהב פעמי רגליו ירוקין ושתי קדקדין יש לו. ויבא אצל אדום הרשעה ויאמר להם משיח אני אני אלהיכם מיד מאמינים בו וממליכים אותו עליהם ומתחברים בו כל בני עשו ובאים אצלו והולך וכובש כל המדינות ואומר לבני עשו הביאו לי תורת שנתתי לכם ומביאים לו תפלות ואומר להם אמת היא שנתתי לכם ואומר לאומות העולם האמינו בי כי אני משיחכם מיד מאמינים בו. באותה שעה משגר לנחמיה בן חושאל ולכל ישראל ואומר להם הביאו לי תורתכם והעידו לי שאני אלוה מיד מתפחדים ויתמהו. באותה שעה יקום נחמיה בן חושאל ושלישים אלף גבורים מנבורי בני אפרים ויקחו ספר תורה וקורין לפניו אנכי ה' אלהיך לא יהיה לך אלהים אחרים על פני. ויאמר להם אין בתורתכם זו כלום אלא באו העידו לי שאני אלוה כדרך שעשו כל האומות. מיד יעמוד כנגדו נחמיה ויאמר לעבדיו תפשוהו וכפתוהו. מיד יחרה אפו של ארמילוס הרשע ויקבוץ כל חילי אומות העולם לעמק החרון וילחם עם ישראל ויהרג ממנו תילי תילים וינגפו מישראל מעט ויהרג משיח ה' ובאים מלאכי השרת ונוטלים

אותו ומטמינים אותו עם אבות העולם. מיד ימס לבם של ישראל ויתש כחם וארמילוס הרשע לא ידע שמת משיח שאם יודע לא היה משאיר מישראל שריד ופליט. באותה שעה כל אומות העולם טורדין ארץ ישראל ממדינותיהם ואינם מניחים פניחים אותם לדור עמהם במדינותיהם ואומרים ראיתם את העם בזוי ושפל שמרדו עלינו והמליכו מלך ותהי צרה לישראל שלא היתה כמות מימות העולם עד אותו זמן. ובאותה שעה יעמוד מיכאל לברר את הרשעים מישראל שנאמר ובעת ההיא יעמוד מיכאל השר הגדול העומד על בני עמך והיתה צרה אשר לא נהיתה וגומר. מיד יברחו כל ישראל במדברות וכל מי שלבו מסופק בדינו חוזר על אומות העולם ואומרים זו הגאולה שאנו מחכים לה שהמשיח נהרג וכל מי שאינו מצפה לגאולה מתבייש ממנה וחוזר על אומות העולם. באותה שעה הקב"ה בוחן את ישראל וצורפן ככסף וכזהב 'שנאמר בזכריה והבאתי את השלישי באש וצרפתים כצורף הכסף ובחנתים כבחון הזהב וגו' וכתוב ביחזקאל וברותי מכם המורדים והפושעים בי וגו': 'ובדניאל כתיב יתבררו ויתלבנו ויצרפו רבים והרשיעו רשעים וגו' ויהיו כל שארית ישראל והקדושים והטהורים במדבר יהודה חמשה וארבעים יום ויהיו רועים ואוכלים מלוחים ועלה שיח קוטפים ובהם מתקיים מה שנאמר בהושע לכן הגה אנכי מפתיה והולכתי המדברה ודברתי על לבה. ומנין שחמשה וארבעים יום הם שנאמר ומעת הוסר התמיד ולתת שקוץ משומם אלף ומאתים ותשעים וכתוב אשרי המחכה. ויגיע לימים אלף שלש מאות ושלושים וחמשה. נמצא בין אלו לאלו חמשה וארבעים יום באותה שעה ימותו כל רשעי ישראל שאינם ראויים לראות הגאולה. ויבא ארמילוס וילחם במצרים וילכדה שנאמר וארץ מצרים לא תהיה לפליטה ויחזור פניו לירושלים להחריבה פעם that is, the שניה שנ' יטע אהלי אפדנו בין ימים להר צבי קדש ובא עד קצו ואין עוזר לו the holy and blessed God, who works wonders, will perform a miraculous sign in the world. It is said that in Rome there is a marble stone which has the form of a beautiful maiden, and was not made by human hands, but was created in this form by the holy and blessed God through His power; and that the most godless and wicked villains among the nations of the world will heat this stone and commit fornication with it, and that God will preserve their seed within it, and will create a creature from it and form a child within it, and that the stone will afterward split open, and from it will come the form of a man who is called Armillus. This one will be the adversary whom the nations call the Antichrist, and he will be twelve ells long and twelve ells wide, and between his two eyes there will be a span's breadth of space, and they will be deep and red; the hair on his head will be gold-colored, but the soles of his feet will be green, and he will have two crowns of the head. He will go to the godless Edomites (that is, the Christians) and say to them: I am the Messiah, I am your God. Then they will immediately believe in him and make him king over themselves, and all the children of Esau (that is, the Christians) will gather to him and come to him. Thereupon he will go forth and conquer all lands (and bring them under his dominion), and will say to the children of Esau: bring me my law that I gave you; and they will bring their Tipluth, that is, their foolishness (meaning the New Testament, which is here called by this name in a godless manner); then he will say to them: this is the truth which I gave you; and he will say to them: believe in me, for I am your Messiah; and they will straightway believe in him. At that same time he will send to Nehemiah the son of Chuschiel and to all the Israelites, and will say to them: bring me your law, and bear witness for me that I am God; and they will immediately be frightened and astonished, and Nehemiah the son of Chuschiel will arise with thirty thousand heroes from among the heroes of the children of Ephraim, and they will take the Law (of Moses) and read before him (the words of Exod 20:2-3): I am the Lord your God. You shall have no other gods before me. But he will say to them: this counts for nothing in your law; rather, come here and bear witness for me that I am God, just as all the nations have done. At this, Nehemiah will immediately set himself against him and say to his servants: seize him and bind him. And Nehemiah the son of Chuschiel with his thirty thousand heroes whom he will have with him will arise, and they will make war against him and kill two hundred thousand of his men. At this the godless Armillus will become very wrathful and will gather all the armies of the nations of the world in the valley of decision (of which mention is made in Joel 3:14) and will fight against the Israelites; and his men will be slain in heaps, but only a few of the Israelites will be killed, and the Messiah of the Lord will be slain, and the ministering angels will come and take him away and conceal him with the fathers of the world (namely Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob). Then the hearts of the Israelites will immediately melt (and despair), and their strength will be weakened; but the godless Armillus will not know that the Messiah has died, for if he were to learn of it, he would leave no one among the Israelites alive or remaining. At that same time all the nations of the world will drive the Israelites out of their lands and will no longer allow them to dwell with them in their lands, and will say: see, this despised and lowly people, which has risen up in rebellion against us and set a king over itself and accepted him! Then there will be a misery among the Israelites the like of which will not have existed from the days of the world until that time. Then the angel Michael will arise to sweep out and separate the godless from among the Israelites, as it is said (Dan 12:1): And at that time the great prince Michael will arise, who stands for the children of your people; for there will come a time of tribulation such as has not been, etc. Then all the Israelites will immediately flee into the wildernesses; but whoever doubts in his religion will go back to the nations of the world, and such people will say: is this the redemption for which we have waited, that the Messiah has been slain? And everyone who will not look toward the redemption and wait for it will be ashamed of it and go to the nations of the world. At that same time the holy and blessed God will test the Israelites and refine them like silver and gold, as it is said in Zech 13:9: And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined. And in Ezek 20:38 it stands written: I will also purge out from among you the rebels and those who have transgressed against me, etc. And in Dan 12:10 it stands written: Many shall be purified and made white and refined; but the wicked shall continue to act wickedly, etc. And all the remaining holy and pure ones in Israel will spend forty-five days in the wilderness of Judah, and will eat nettles and pluck the leaves from the bushes; and in them will be fulfilled what is said in Hos 2:14: Therefore, behold, I will allure her and lead her into the wilderness and speak to her heart. But from where is it proven that it shall be forty-five days? Because it is said (Dan 12:11): And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away and the abomination of desolation set up, there shall be one thousand two hundred and ninety days. And it stands written (ibid. v. 12): Blessed is he who waits and reaches the one thousand three hundred and thirty-five days. It is thus found that between the one and the other there are forty-five days (for when 1,290 days are subtracted from 1,335, 45 remain). At that same time all the godless among the Israelites will die, who will not be worthy to see the redemption. Armillus will also come and make war against Egypt and take it, as it is said (Dan 11:42): And Egypt will not escape him. After that he will turn his face toward Jerusalem to destroy it a second time, as it is said (Dan 11:45): And he will plant the tents of his palace between the two seas on the glorious holy mountain; and he will come to his end, and no one will help him. These are the words concerning the seventh sign.

Regarding the aforementioned Armillus: in a book printed in quarto at Constantinople in the year 284 according to Jewish reckoning, that is, in the year 1524 A.D., in which various small tracts are printed together, such as the booklet Ben Sira, Sepher Serubabel, Medrasch Vajóscha, and others, after the booklet Ben Sira, under the title אותות המשיח Othóth hammaschiach, where the ten signs of the coming of the Messiah are also briefly mentioned, the following is written at the seventh sign: האות השביעי יצא ארמילוס מאותו צלם נקבה של אבן שברומי ויאמרו עליו שהאבן תלד אותו ויהיה ארכו שנים עשרה אמות ורחבו שנים אמות That is: the seventh sign consists in this, that Armillus will come forth from that stone female figure which is in Rome; and it is said of this Armillus that the stone itself will bear him, and that he will be twelve cubits tall and two cubits wide, and that between his two eyes there will be the space of a span; and he will be the Messiah of the children of Esau (that is, of the Christians). This therefore does not agree with the book Atkátb róchel; for here it is stated that he will be only two cubits wide, whereas in that other book it is reported that he will be twelve cubits wide and twelve cubits long, and thus a four-cornered monstrum and a wondrous creature. In the aforementioned booklet Sepher Serubábel it is found that the angel Metátron spoke to Serubabel as follows: הנה מה הנה הוא נינוה עיר הדמים והיא רומה רבתא ואמרתי לו אדוני עד מתי קץ יוכא וידבק בי ויאחז בידי ויביאני בית הלצות ויראני שם אבן שיש ולה כפני בתולה אשר לא ידעה איש. ויאמר אלי מה אתה רואה ואומר אני רואה אבן אחת דמות אשה ודמות פניה כאשה יפהפיה ויען המדבר אלי ויאמר האבן הזאת אשת הבליעל היא ובשעה שידעה אותו הבליעל ותהר ותלד את ארמילוס והוא היה ראש לכל עבודה זרה That is: this city is Nineve, the city of blood, which is the great Rome. Then I (Serubabel) said to him (namely to Metátron): my lord, how long is it still until the appointed time (in which the Messiah will come)? And he drew close to me and took me by my hand and led me into a Bethbalhallezúth or bes hallézus, that is, into a house of mockery (namely into a church), and showed me a marble stone which had a face like that of a virgin who had not yet known any man, and said to me: what do you see? And I said to him: I see a stone that has the form of a woman, and in her face she resembles a very beautiful woman. Then he who was speaking with me answered and said: this stone is the wife of the villain, and when the villain shall have known her, she will become pregnant and bear Armillus, and that same stone will be the head of all idolatry.

Thereupon it is further read in that same place that before the coming of the Messiah there will be ten kings, and the following is reported concerning the tenth: והמלך העשירי הוא ארמילוס בן אבן השיש שבבית התורף של לצים וכל הגוים מכל המקומות יבואו ויעמדו לפני האבן ויקטרו ולא יוכלו לראות פניה מיופיה וכל אשר יגבה לבו להביט אליה לא יוכל. וזה סימן ארמילוס בן האבן שער ראשו צבוע וידיו עד פעמי רגליו ואורך פניו זרת ושתים עשרה אמה קומתו ועיניו עמוקות ושני קדקדין יהיו לו. ויעלה וימלוך באי מים מדינת השטן אב בליעל אביו וכל רואיו יזועו ממנו. ואחר כך יבא לפניו מנחם בן עמיאל מן נחל השטים ויפח באפיו וימיתוהו כמו שנאמר וברוח שפתי ימית רשע ואחר כך that is, the tenth king will be Armillus, the son of the marble stone, who is in the Beth battioref, that is, in the house of shame (namely the church) of the mockers; and all the heathens from every place will come and stand before the stone and burn incense, and will not be able to look upon its face on account of its beauty, and whoever is bold enough to gaze upon it will not be able to do so. But this is the sign of Armillus, the son of the stone: the hair of his head will be dyed (or red), and his hands will reach down to the soles of his feet. The length of his face will be one span. He will be twelve ells tall, and will have deep-set eyes and two crowns of the head. He will set out and reign on an island of the waters of the land of Satan. His father is the father of Belial, and all who see him will tremble before him. After this, Menachem, the son of Ammiel, will come before him from the river Shittim, and will blow into his face and kill him, as it is said (Isa 11:4): "And with the breath of his lips he will slay the wicked." Thereafter the kingdom will come to the Lord. In the aforementioned little book Médrasch Vajóscha, after mention has been made of Gog and Magog, the following is also taught concerning the same: אחריו יקום מלך עז פנים ויעשה מלחמה עם ישראל שלשה חדשים

חרשים ושמו ארמילוס ואלו הן אותותיו יהיה קרח ועינו האחת קטנה והאחרת גדולה וזרועו של ימין טפה והאחרת שתי אמות וחצי ויהיה צרעת במצחו ואונו הימנית סתומה והאחרת פתוחה וכשיבא האדם לדבר אליו טובה מטה לו אזנו הסתומה ואם ירצה אדם לדבר לו רעה יטה לו אזנו פתוחה ויעלה לירושלים ויהרוג משיח בן יוסף שנ' 'והביטו אלי את אשר דקרו וספדו עליו כמספר על היחיד. ואחר כך יבא משיח בן דוד בענן שנ' 'וארו עם ענני שמיא כבר אנש אתה הוה וכתוב ביה ולתת ליה שלטן ויקר ומלכו וימית ארמילוס הרשע שנ' 'וברוח שפתיו That is, after him there will arise a shameless king who will wage war against the Israelites for three months, and his name will be Armillus. But these are his signs: he will be bald, and will have one small eye and one large eye. His right arm will be one handsbreadth wide, but the other will be two and a half ells long; and he will have leprosy on his forehead. His right ear will also be stopped up, but the other will be open; and when a person comes to speak good things with him, he will hold his stopped-up ear toward him, but when someone comes to speak evil things with him, he will turn his open ear toward him. He will then make his way to Jerusalem and kill the Messiah the son of Joseph, as it is said (Zech 12:10): "And they will look upon me, whom they have pierced, and will mourn for him as one mourns for an only child." After this, the Messiah the son of David will come in a cloud, as it is said (Dan 7:13): "And behold, one came with the clouds of heaven like a son of man." And after this it is written (in verse 14): "He gave him dominion, honor, and a kingdom"; and he will slay the wicked Armillus, as it is said (Isa 11:4): "And with the breath of his lips he will slay the wicked." After this, the holy and blessed GOD will gather together the dispersed of Israel, who are scattered here and there, &c. Furthermore, in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 144, col. 3, in the Parascha Ki téze, something of this senseless and foolish fable is also to be read, where, concerning the words of Deut 22:8, "When you build a new house, make a railing around your roof, so that you do not bring bloodguilt upon your house if someone falls from it," the following is written in a foolish manner:

וכן רמז כי יפול הנופל ממנו על ארמילוס הרשע שבביאת משיחנו יהרג כאומרו וברוח שפתיו ימית רשע ותרגם יונתן בן עוזיאל יקטול ארמילוס רשיעא וכבר אמרו שהוא יושב באבן גדולה שברומי ובאוהו זמן יפול הנופל כי אותה אבן תפול נפל אחר שהוא ארמילוס הרשע וזהו כי יפול הנופל ממנו יפול

That is: The words "when someone falls down" also carry a meaning pointing to the wicked Armillus, who will be slain at the coming of our Messiah, as it is said (Isa 11:4): "And the wicked he will slay with the breath of his lips." And Jonathan, the son of Uziel, translated these words (in his Chaldean rendering) as follows: "He will destroy the wicked Armillus through the speech of his lips." And (our sages) have also said that he dwells within a great stone that is in Rome, and at that appointed time he will fall out of it, for that stone will bring forth a monstrous birth, which will be the wicked Armillus, and this is indicated by the words "when someone falls down." Something of this is also to be found in the little book of Rabbi Saadia, which is called Sepher ha'emunoth vebaddeoth, fol. 38, col. 2-3, under the title Máamar chamíschî, geülláh acharónab. As for the war, however, which is mentioned in the above-cited words of the book Atkáth róchel, the war that the Christians are supposed to wage against the Jews, it will be described in the following Chapter 14.

Regarding the great and severe tribulations which, as mentioned, are to befall the Jews at the time of their Messiah, these are called חבלי המשיח Chéble hammaschiach, that is, the birth pangs of the Messiah, concerning which Abarbanel in his book Maschmía jesehúa, fol. 75, col. 1, on the words of Zech 13:9, "And I will bring that third part through the fire, and will refine them," teaches as follows: אפשר לפרשו על הצרות והרעות העצומות אשר יהיו בזמן קבוץ הגליות, שהם חבלי משיח שעליהם אמר יחזקאל וברותי מכם המורדים והפושעים, that is, one can interpret this as referring to the great tribulations and evil things which will exist at the time of the gathering of the captive Jews, which are the Chéble hammaschiach, that is, the birth pangs of the Messiah, of which the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek 20:38) says: "I will also purge out from among you the rebels and those who have transgressed against me." And at fol. 37, col. 1, he writes in the aforementioned book, on the words of Jer 31:9, "They shall come with weeping," in the following manner: אמר בבכי יבאו להגיד שיהיו צרות זמן קבוץ גליות, וחבלי משיח כל כך עד שיבאו בוכים וצועקים מהרעות שסבלו, that is, he (namely the prophet Jeremiah) said "they shall come with weeping" in order to indicate that at the time of the gathering of those driven into misery (the Jews), there will be such great tribulations and birth pangs of the Messiah that they will come weeping and crying out, on account of the evil they have endured. In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 97, col. 1, the following is also found concerning such misery: אמר רבי יוחנן דור שכן דוד בא תלמידי חכמים מתמעטים והשאר עיניהם כלות ביגון ואנחה וצרות רבות וגזרות קשות מתחדשות עד שהראשונה פקודה ושניה ממחרת לבוא, that is, Rabbi Jochanan said that at the time when the Son of David comes, the wise men will diminish, and the eyes of the rest will grow dim with sorrow and sighing, and many tribulations and harsh decrees of persecution will be issued, such that when one has not yet passed, the next will hasten to come. How one may be delivered from such misery is taught in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat, fol. 118, col. 1, in these words: כל המקיים שלש סעודות בשבת ניצול משלש פורעניות מחבלו של משיח ומדינה של גיהנם וממלחמת גוג ומגוג מחבלו של משיח כתיב הכא יום וכתוב התם הנה אנכי שולח לכם את אליהו הנביא לפני בוא יום ה' הגדול והנורא, that is, whoever observes the three meals on the Sabbath will be delivered from three punishments: from the Chéble hammaschiach, that is, the birth pangs of the Messiah, from the judgment of hell, and also from the war of Gog and Magog. From the birth pangs of the Messiah, because here (namely Exod 16:25) the word "day" is written, and there (Mal 4:5) it is written: "Behold, I will send you the prophet Elijah before the great and terrible day of the Lord comes." And this is also to be found in the book Shulchan árba of Rabbi Bechai, fol. 5, col. 4, as well as in the Jalkut Schimóni on Malachi, fol. 88, col. 4, number 595. It is likewise written in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 98, col. 2: מה יעשה אדם וינצל מחבלו של משיח יעסוק בתורה ובגמילות חסדים, that is, what shall a man do in order to be delivered from the birth pangs of the Messiah? He shall devote himself to the Law and to acts of charity.

How long such a time of the sufferings of the Messiah will last is indicated in the book Emek hamméleah fol. 42, col. 4. at the end of the 72nd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam battóhu, where the following is read: מזמן קבוץ גלויות עד תחיית המתים יהיה מ' שנה וכל צרות וכל מלחמות יתעוררו על שונאיהם של ישראל באותן המ' שנה והלכן נקראים חבלי משיח והמ' שנה בזמן מלכות המשיח ואשרי הנמלט מהם דכתיב בעת ההיא ימלט עמך כל הנמצא כתוב בספר. ואותם הימים יהיו ימים אשר תאמר אין לי בהם חפץ וזה יהיה ארבעים שנה ואחרי אשר יעברו הצרות והרשעים יכלו יחיו המתים ולא יהיה צרה עוד דכתיב לא תקום פעמים צרה ודי להם במה שעברו, That is: From the time of the gathering of the dispersed Jews who find themselves in exile or misery, until the resurrection of the dead, there will be forty years; and in those forty years all tribulations and all wars will be stirred up against the Israelites; for this reason they are called Chéble Maschiach, that is, the sufferings of the Messiah; and those forty years will fall within the time of the reign of the Messiah. But blessed will be the one who is delivered from them, as it is written (Dan 12:1): "And at that time your people will be saved, everyone who is found written in the book." On those forty years, the aforementioned book Emek hammelech may also be consulted at fol. 121, col. 3. in the 152nd chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, as well as at fol. 134, col. 4. in the 18th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha disér ánpin. Now, Christ the Lord aimed in some measure at the aforementioned tribulations and sufferings that were to arise at His first and second coming, when He says in Matt 24:8: πάντα δὲ ταῦτα ἀρχὴ ὧν, that is, "All these things" (which are described in vv. 6-7) "are a beginning of the sufferings." And in the Syriac New Testament the word "sufferings" is rendered by חבלא, Chéble.

The eighth sign is of the following content. יעמוד מיכאל ויתקע בשופר שלשה פעמים שנאמר והיה ביום ההוא יתקע בשופר גדול ובאו האובדים וגו' וכתוב וה' אלהים בשופר יתקע והלך בסערות תימן הקיעה הראשונה יגלה משיח בן דוד ואליהו הנביא לאותם הצדיקים הברורים מישראל שנסו למדבר יהודה לסוף מ"ה ימים ישיבו את לבם ויחזיקו את ידיהם הרפות וברכיהם הכושלות יאמצו. וישמעו כל ישראל הנשארים בכל העולם את קול השופר וידעו כי פקד ה' אותם וכי באה הגאולה השלימה ויתקבצו ויבאו שני' ובאו האובדים

בארץ אשור וגו' ומאותו קול יפול פחד ורחלה על אומות העולם ויפלו עליהם חלאים רעים וישראל מתאזרים לצאת. ויבא משיח בן דוד ואלהיו הנביא עם הצדיקים ששבו ממדבר יהודה ועם כל ישראל הנקבצים ויבא לירושלים ויעלה במעלה בית הנשארה ויושב שם. וישמע ארמילוס שעמד מלך לישראל ויאמר עד אנה האומה הבויה והשפלה הזאת עושין כן. מיד יקבוצ כל חיילי אומות העולם ויבא להלחם עם משיח ה' ואז הקב"ה אינו מצריכו למלחמה אלא אומר לו שב לימיני והוא אומר לישראל התיצבו וראו את ישועת ה' אשר יעשה לכם היום. מיד הקב"ה נלחם בגוים ההם כיום הלחמו ביום קרב. וה' קבה מוריד אש וגפרית מן השמים שנ' ונשפטתי אתו בדבר ובדם וגשם שוטף ואבני אלגביש אש וגפרית אמטיר עליו ועל אגפיו ועל עמים רבים אשר אתו: מיד ארמילוס הרשע ימות הוא וכל חילו ואדום הרשעה שהחריבו בית אלהינו והגלונו מארצנו. ובאותה שעה יעשו בהם ישראל נקמות גדולות שנאמר והיה בית יעקב אש ובית יוסף להבה ובית עשו לקש ודלקו בהם ואכלום ולא יהיה שריד לבית עשו. That is: the (archangel) will stand and blow a trumpet three times, as it is said (Isa 27:13): At that time a great trumpet shall be blown, and those who were lost shall come, etc. And it is written (Zech 9:14): And the Lord shall blow the trumpet, and shall go forth in the storm-winds of the south. At the first blast, the Messiah the Son of David and the prophet Elijah will reveal themselves to those righteous and pure Israelites who will have fled into the wilderness of Judah. After 45 days they will regain their courage, and will strengthen their heavy hands, and will make firm their stumbling knees; and all the Israelites who remain in the whole world will hear the sound of the trumpet, and will recognize that God has visited them, and that the perfect redemption has come; and they will gather together and come, as it is said (Isa 27:13): And those who were lost shall come into the land of Assyria, etc. And from such a sound, fear and terror will seize the nations of the world, and evil diseases will assail them; but the Israelites will gird themselves to go forth. Thereafter the Messiah the Son of David, together with the prophet Elijah, along with the righteous who will have returned from the wilderness of Judah, and with all the Israelites who will have gathered, will come and make their way to Jerusalem, and will ascend the steps to the remaining house, and will take up residence there. When Armillus hears that a king has arisen among the Israelites, he will say: How long will this despised and lowly people carry on in this manner? And he will gather all the armies of the nations of the world and come to do battle with the Messiah of the Lord. But the holy and blessed God will not compel him (namely the Messiah) to fight; rather He will say to him (from Ps 110:1): Sit at my right hand. And He will say to the Israelites: Stand still, and behold the salvation of the Lord, which He will accomplish for you today. Thereupon the holy and blessed God will make war against them, as it is said (Zech 14:3): But the Lord shall go forth and fight against those nations, even as He (formerly) fought in the day of battle. And God will cause fire and brimstone to fall down from heaven, as it is said (Ezek 38:22): I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon

all his troops, and upon the many peoples that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire and brimstone. Thereupon the wicked Armillus will immediately die, together with his entire army and all the wicked who previously laid waste to the house of our God and drove us out of our land into misery. At that same time the Israelites will take mighty vengeance upon them, as it is said (Obad 1:18): And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, but the house of Esau (that is, Christendom, as the Jews understand it) shall be stubble; and they shall kindle them and devour them, so that none shall remain of the house of Esau. These are the words of the eighth sign. As for the blowing of the trumpet, an account of it has been given above in the second chapter of this second part, at page 132, where I indicated the curses with which the Jews curse us on their New Year's Day. As for the winds that concern the Jews who will gather in the Promised Land, without doubt a great many will be brought there by the wind, for in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Song of Solomon, fol. 179, col. 3, num. 988, it is written as follows: אנו מביא הרוחות עתידין להתנצח צפון אומר אני מביא את הגליות ורוח דרומי אומר: אנו מביא That is: the winds will dispute with one another; the north wind will say, I will bring the exiled Jews hither, and the south wind will say, I will bring them hither; but the holy and blessed God will make peace between them, so that they will blow at the same time. As for the great slaughter of the Christians, a detailed account of it shall be given in the following chapter.

The ninth sign is described as follows: יהקע מיכאל תקיעה גדולה ויבקעו מחילות המתים בירושלים ויחיה אותם הק"ב. וילך משיח בן דוד ואלהיו הנביא ויחיו משיח בן יוסף הנאסף בשיערי ירושלים וישלחו את משיח בן דוד בשביל שארית ישראל הפזורים בכל הארצות מיד כל מלכי אומות העולם נושאים אותם על כתפיהם ומביאים אותם לה' וגומר : That is: the (angel) Michael will blow mightily, whereby the graves of the dead in Jerusalem will split open, and the holy blessed God will raise them up. The Messiah, the Son of David, together with the prophet Elijah, will also raise from the dead the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, who will lie preserved beneath the gates of Jerusalem. Thereafter, the Messiah, the Son of David, will be sent out on account of the remnant of the Israelites scattered throughout all lands (so that he may gather them together), and immediately all the kings of the earth will carry them upon their shoulders and bring them to the Lord, ש"כ. The foolish Jews thus imagine that the great kings and potentates of the world will have to carry them into the Promised Land and will be their servants, which is indeed an arrogant fantasy on the part of this worthless rabble. But it will never come to pass that they would even be deemed worthy enough to walk there on foot, let alone that they should be carried there.

The tenth sign reads as follows: ויוציא ה"קב"ה מנהר הוקע מיכאל הקיעה גדולה גוזן וחלה וחבור ומערי מדי כל השבטים ויבאו עם בני משה באין מספר ובאין שיעור. כגן עדן הארץ לפנייהם ואחרייהם תלהט להבה ולא ישאירו מחיה לאומות העולם. ובשעה שיצאו השבטים ענני כבוד יקיפו אותם והק"ב הולך לפנייהם שנאמר ועלה הפורץ לפנייהם והק"ב יפתח להם מעיינות של עץ החיים וישקה אותם בדרך שנ' בישעיה אפתח על שפיים נהרות ובתוך בקעות מעיינות. משים מדבר לאגם מים וציה למוצאי מים וכתוב לא ירעבו ולא ימצאו ולא יכסו שרב ושמש וגו' : 'הק"ב יזכנו לראות את הגאולה מהרה ויזכנו לראות בית הבחירה ויקיים בנו מקרא שכתוב הנני שב את שבות אהלי יעקב ומשכנותיו ארחם ונבנתה עיר על תלה וארמון על משפטו ישב. ויקיים עלינו כל נחמותיו וכל הבטחותיו שנאמר על ידי נביאיו וכתוב בעת ההיא אביא אתכם ובעת קבצי אתכם כי אתן אתכם לשם ולתהלה בכל עמי הארץ בשובי That is: Michael will blow powerfully (with the trumpet), and the holy blessed God will bring forth all (ten) tribes from the river Gozan, and from Chalach and Chabor, as well as from the cities of Meden (concerning which one may read in 2 Kgs 17:6, and which was treated above on page 519 in the 10th chapter), and they will come together with the children of Moses (who were mentioned above in the said 10th chapter, p. 539, etc.) without number. The earth will be before them like Paradise, and behind them a flame will kindle, and they will leave no provisions for the nations of the world. When the tribes go forth, the clouds of glory will surround them, and the holy blessed God will go before them, as it is said (Mic 2:13): The one who breaks through will march before them. God will also open for them the springs of the Tree of Life and give them drink along the way, as it is said in Isaiah (Isa 41:18): I will open rivers on the heights, and fountains in the midst of the valleys; I will make the wilderness into pools of water, and the dry land into springs of water. So also it is written (Isa 49:10): They shall neither hunger nor thirst; neither heat nor sun shall strike them, etc. May the holy blessed God make us worthy to see the redemption speedily. May He also make us worthy to behold His chosen house (namely, the Temple), and may He fulfill in us what is written (Jer 30:18): Behold, I will turn the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places; and the city shall be built again upon its hill, and the palace shall stand in its proper manner. May He also fulfill all His consolations and all His promises toward us, which were spoken through His prophets, and (in particular) what is written (Zeph 3:20): At that time I will bring you in, namely at the time in which I will gather you, for I will make you a name and a praise among all the peoples of the earth, when I turn your captivity before your eyes. These are the words of the last sign from the book Afkáth ròchel.

Regarding the aforementioned ten tribes, it is read in 2 Kgs 17:6 and 1 Chr 5:26 that the kings of Assyria, Salmanasser, Phul, and Tiglath-Pileaser, led them away into Assyria and settled them in Chalach and in Chabor, by the river Gosan, and in the cities of the Medes. By the aforementioned river Gosan, however, the Jews understand the river Sabbátjon, mention of which was made above in the tenth chapter of this second part, concerning which Rabbi Bechai, in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 225, col. 1, in the Parascha Haasinu, on the words of Deut 32:26, "I said, I will scatter them into corners, I will make the remembrance of them to cease from among men, had I not feared the wrath of the enemy," writes as follows: רמז זה לגלות עשרה השבטים, That is: This has a meaning pointing to the exiled ten tribes, who were led away captive to the river Gosan, which the Sages call the river Sabbátjon. That they will return at the time of the Messiah, however, is read in the book Mischmia jeschúa, fol. 33, col. 1, in these words: העיקר הרביעי שבזמן הגאולה העתידה ישובו עשרה השבטים וגו', That is: The fourth principal article is that at the time of the future redemption the ten tribes will return, which is also to be found there at fol. 35, col. 3, and fol. 36, col. 2. And at fol. 62, col. 2, it is written there: לפי שעשרת השבטים יבאו ראשונה והם יתחילו להלחם באומות לכן אמר ויתר אחיו שהם יהודה ובנימין ישובון על בני ישראל שהם עשרת השבטים, That is: Because the ten tribes will come first and will begin to wage war against the nations of the world, therefore he says (namely the prophet Micah in chapter 5, verse 3): But the remaining brothers, namely Judah and Benjamin, will return to the children of Israel, that is, to the ten tribes.

So also in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 45, col. 3., under the title Oth Nun, concerning the words of Isa 27:12, "At that time the Lord will thresh (or beat out) from the stream of the waters to the river of Egypt, and you children of Israel will be gathered, one by one," the following is written: הזכיר לשון יחבוט לשון נופל על חטים חטים שנ' כי תחבוט זיתך כמי שחובט זיתים מן האילן וחובט חטים שהוא חובט החטה מתוך הקש והתבן כן יחבוט יי' לישראל מתוך האומות שהם מפוזרים ביניהם ושבולת הנחר הוא נהר סמטיון כמו שכתוב וזרם מעבר ער נחל מצרים כי עד שם עתידין : That is: (the prophet) here used the word jachbót (which means to thresh, beat out, or shake), which is used of barley and olive trees, as it is said (Deut 24:20): When you shake your olive tree, as when one beats (or shakes) the olives from the tree and threshes barley, for he beats the barley out of the straw; so also will the holy and blessed God thresh the Israelites out of the nations (that is, drive them out) among whom they are scattered. By the stream of the waters, however, the river Sabbátjon is understood, as it is written (1 Kgs 14:15): And He will scatter them beyond the water. (By the words) unto the river of Egypt (it is indicated) that the ten tribes will in the future come as far as there, and will gather together with their brethren, Judah and Benjamin. (But the words) And you will be gathered (signify those of the tribe of) Judah and Benjamin, who are scattered. In the Jalkut Schimóni on the Song of Songs of Solomon, at fol. 176, col. 4. numero 985., on the words of Song 1:16,

"Our bed is green," the following is also read: אף ערשנו אלו עשרת השבטים שגלו לפנים מנהר סמבטיון שעתידין גלות יהודה ובנימין לילך אצלם להביאם כדי שיזכו עמהם ל"מי משיה ולחיי העולם הבא שנ' בימים ההם ילכו בית יהודה וגומר That is: The words "our bed" signify the ten tribes who were led away captive beyond the river Sabbátjon, to whom those driven out from Judah and Benjamin will go, in order to bring them back, so that they may share with them in the days of the Messiah and in the life to come, as it is said (Jer 3:18): At that time those who are of the house of Judah will go to the house of Israel, etc. In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, it is disputed at fol. 110, col. 2 whether the ten tribes will return and will have a share in the life to come, and the words there read as follows: עשרת השבטים אינן עתידין לחזור שנאמר וישליכם אל ארץ אחרת כיום הזה מה יום הולך ואינו חוזר אף הם הולכים ואינן חוזרין דברי רבי עקיבא. רבי אליעזר אומר כיום הזה מה היום מאפיל ומאיר אף עשרת השבטים that is, the ten tribes will not return, as it is said (Deut 29:28): "And He cast them into another land, as it is this day." Just as the day passes and does not return, so too have they gone away and will not return; these are the words of Rabbi Akiva. Rabbi Eliezer says that the words "as it is this day" signify that just as the day is dark (in the morning) and grows bright (toward noon), so too was it dark for the ten tribes, and it will grow bright for them again. After this, the following continues: ת"ר עשרת השבטים אין להם חלק לעולם הבא שנאמר ויתשם י' מעל אדמתם באף ובחמה ובקצף גדול. ויתשם י' מעל אדמתם בעולם הזה וישליכם אל ארץ אחרת לעולם הבא דברי ר'נ. ר"ש בן יהודה איש כפר עכו אמר משום רבי שמעון אם מעשיהם כיום הזה אינן חוזרין ואם לא חוזרין. רבי אומר that is, our Rabbis teach that the ten tribes have no share in the life to come (that is, in eternal life), because it is said (Deut 29:28): "And the Lord cast them out of their land with great wrath, fury, and indignation." The words "the Lord cast them out of their land" are to be understood as referring to this world, and the following words, "and cast them into another land," signify the world to come. These are the words of Rabbi Simeon ben Jehuda, who was from the village of Acco, said in the name of Rabbi Simeon that if their deeds are as they were on that same day (on which they were led away into captivity), they will not return; but if not, they will return. Rabbi says they will come into the life to come, because it is said (Isa 27:13): "At that time a great trumpet shall be blown," etc. That the ten tribes will not return, and that they have been entirely cast off by God, this is what Holy Scripture teaches; for in 2 Kgs 17:18, 20 it is read: "And the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them from His sight; there was none left but the tribe of Judah alone. Therefore the LORD rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until He had cast them out of His sight." And in Hos 1:6 it is written: "I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, that I should in any wise forgive them." The hope of the Jews, therefore, that they will return is vain and futile.

Regarding the Messiahs who, according to the opinion of the Jews, are yet to come: they erroneously hold that there shall be two of them, namely the Son of Joseph and the Son of David. Concerning this, one reads in the book Menoráth hammáor fol. 81, col. 2., at the beginning of the 10th chapter, under the title Ner chamíschi chélek schéni, as follows: המלך המשיח שעתיד ליגלות מובטח: לנו שעתיד להחזיר מלכות של דוד ליושנה ובונה בית המקדש ומקבץ נדחי ישראל ויחיו זמנב ואמרו רבותינו שמלך אחר שאינו מזרע דוד יקדימו ויהרג וקראוהו משיח בן יוסף כדגרסינן במסכת סוכה פרק החליל דף נ"ב ת"ר משיח שעתיד ליגלות במהרה בימינו אומר לו הקב"ה שאל מה אתה מבקש ואני נותן לך שנ' אספרה אל חק וגו' שאל ממני וגו' כיון שרואה שמשחית 'בן יוסף' נהרג אומר לפניו רב"שע איני מבקש ממך אלא חיים שנ' חיים שאל ממך נתת לו וגו' : That is: We are assured that the King Messiah, who shall be revealed, will restore the kingdom of David to its former state, will build the Temple, will gather the scattered Israelites, and will live for a long time. Our Rabbis have also said that another king, who shall not be of the seed of David, will come before him and will be slain, whom they have called the Messiah the Son of Joseph, just as we read in the (Talmudic) tractate Súcca, in the chapter Hachálil, fol. 52, col. 1. (where it is written:) Our Rabbis teach that God will say to the Messiah who shall be revealed (which may it happen swiftly and in our days): Ask what you desire, and I will give it to you, as it is said (Ps 2:7-8): I will declare what has been decreed, etc. Ask of me, etc. When he sees that the Messiah the Son of Joseph has been slain, he will say to Him: I desire nothing from You but life, as it is said (Ps 21:5): He asked life of You, and You gave him length of days. And in the book Schené luchóth habberith it is written at fol. 242, col. 1 as follows: מתחילה יבא משיח בן יוסף ואחר כך משיח בן דוד ואז יתקן בית יוסף מה שקלקלו בהתחלקות מלכות בית דוד כילא יבא משיח בן יוסף לצורך עצמו רק יבא : 'בשביל משיח בן דוד כי הוא ימסור נפשו והערה נפשו למות ודמו יכפר על עם ה : That is: First will come the Messiah the Son of Joseph, and thereafter the Messiah the Son of David; and then the house of Joseph will set right what they corrupted and did wrong through the division of the kingdom of the house of David. For the Messiah the Son of Joseph will not come for his own need, but will appear on account of the Messiah the Son of David; for he will give himself up, and will pour out his soul unto death, and his blood will atone for the people of God. It is likewise apparent from what was cited shortly before from the book Atkáth róchel, concerning the eighth and ninth signs of the coming of the Messiah, that there shall be two Messiahs; this is also to be found in Rabbi Solomon Jarchi's commentary on Isa 24:18. And this is proven in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 142, col. 1. numero 28. under the title Maschiach, from the Sohar, from the words of Gen 49:10, "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor the lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh comes," in a most subtle manner, after the Rabbis' over-ingenious fashion, where one reads as follows: לא יסור שבט מיהודה זה משיח בן דוד. ומחוקק וגו' זה משיח בן יוסף. עד כי יבא שילה זה: That is: The words "The scepter shall not depart from Judah" signify the Messiah the Son of David; by "the lawgiver" is meant the Messiah the Son of Joseph; and by "Shiloh," Moses is signified, since one equals the other in numerical value (inasmuch as שילה Schilo yields 345, and משה Mosche yields exactly the same). More of the same kind is also to be read in the aforementioned Jalkut chádasc, in the cited passage, at numero 26. and 27. And at fol. 143, col. 2. numero 54. under the mentioned title Maschiach, the following is taught concerning the words of Exod 21:33, "When someone digs a pit and does not cover it, and an ox or a donkey falls into it": שור זה: משיח בן יוסף חמור זה משיח בן דוד: That is: By the ox is meant the Messiah the Son of Joseph, and by the donkey the Messiah the Son of David.

Regarding the Messiah, the Son of Joseph: he is to come from the tribe of Ephraim, concerning which the book Emek hammélech, fol. 135, col. 1, in the 18th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha di sér ánpin, contains the following: הוא יעשה נקמות בגוים ותוכחות בלאומים לאסור מלכיהם בזיקים ונכבדיהם בכבלי בריל וזהו אוסרו בזוהר פרשת שמות וקודשא בריך הוא ילביש קנאה להר שופר זעירא הוא המלך המשיח שיבא מצעירי השבטים שהוא משבט אפרים כמו שהרגם יונתן בפרשת ויחי על פסוק ואולם אחיו הקטון יגדל ממנו וצעיר בניו שהוא שבט אפריים ממנו יבוא משיח בן יוסף ויגאלם כמו שנאמר חי' ה' אם לא יסחבום צעירי הצאן וכונת הפסוק על אדום שישחב וימשך את שר אדום מסולם הנער מטטרון שיפול בנהר דינור ויסור ממשלתו ממנו ומי יעשה זה צעירי הצאן שהם שבט אפרים שהוא נולד אחרון שבשבטים והוא הצעיר וישראל נקראו צאן שנ' ואתם צאני צאן מרעיתי אדם אתם עם המשיח דאמשחו עליו זהו חיה משיח בן יוסף משבט אפרים והוא ממש סוד נשמת ירבעם שפרחה ממנו קודם שחטא בינעה שעלה במחשבתו לחטוא כען והוא אמר: That is: He (namely the Messiah, the Son of Ephraim) will take vengeance upon the Goyim (or Christians) and punish the nations, so that he will bind their kings in chains and their most illustrious (or most renowned persons) in iron fetters; and this is what is said in the Sohar in the Parascha Schemoth, that the holy blessed God will clothe a small trumpet, namely the King Messiah, with vengeance, who will come from the least of the tribes, namely the tribe of Ephraim, just as Jonathan rendered it in his Chaldean translation in the Parascha Vajechi, on the words (Gen 48:19) "But yet his younger brother shall be greater than he," that from the least of his sons, namely from the tribe of Ephraim, the Messiah the Son of Joseph shall come and redeem us, as it is said (Jer 49:20): "As the Lord liveth, the least of the flock shall surely drag them away." These words, however, refer to Edom (that is, Christendom), meaning that he (namely the Messiah, the Son of Joseph) will drag and draw the Prince of Edom (who is said to be the chief devil Sammael) from the ladder of the youth Metatron, so that he will fall into the (infernal) river Dinur, and will strip him of his dominion. But who will accomplish this? The least of the flock, namely the tribe of Ephraim, for he (Ephraim) is the last-born among the tribes (in that he was Joseph's youngest son) and was the least (or smallest). So too are the Israelites called a flock, as it is said (Ezek 34:31): "And ye are my flock; ye men are the sheep of my pasture." (And the tribe of Ephraim will accomplish this) together with the Messiah whom they will anoint over themselves, who will be the Messiah the Son of Joseph from the tribe of Ephraim, and who is in truth the soul (called neschâma, not the soul called néphesch) of Jeroboam (the son of Nebat), which flew away from him before he had sinned, at the time when the thought of sinning first arose in his mind, just as it came to pass with the sin of the first man, that his neschâma flew away from him, which was thereafter received by Enoch, who is called Metatron, and for this reason he also did not die, etc.

So also at fol. 137, col. 3 in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, in the 24th chapter, under the said title Schâar réscha diser ânpin, the following, among other things, is read from the same: משיחא דא משבטא דאפרים הוא ומרעא דירבעם בן נבט הוי מכריה דאביה וגו' ; 'המשיח הזה יהיה בן טוב לאל י"י שנ' י"י אמר אלי דירבעם בן נבט הוי מכריה דאביה וגו' ; 'המשיח הזה יהיה בן טוב לאל י"י שנ' י"י אמר אלי That is: This Messiah will be of the tribe of Ephraim, and of the seed of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and will descend from his son Abijah, etc. This Messiah will be a good son to God, as it is said (Ps 2:7): The Lord has said to me, you are my son; today I have begotten you. Concerning this, still more is to be found in the same place, and the like may also be seen in the little book Schebechâth lêket, number 20, under the title Maschiach, as well as in the small Jalkut Rubéni, number 7, under the aforementioned title Maschiach.

For this reason he is also called משיח בן אפרים Maschiach ben Ephraim, that is, the Messiah the son of Ephraim, concerning which the following is read in the little book Mikvéh Jisrael, fol. 47, col. 2. numero 53. in the 14th chapter: ועיני גאולה העתידה כהור וכמוס מכל אדם. רק כפי הנראה מן הנביאים כי יהיה שעשרת השבטים יסעו לארץ הקדושה על יד שר וראש אחר. וח'זל וגם התרגום כנוהו בשם משיח בן אפרים וגו' : that is, the work of the future redemption is hidden from all men; but so far as one can see from the prophets, it will come to pass that the ten tribes will travel to the Holy Land by the hand of a prince and head, whom our Sages, of blessed memory, as well as the Chaldean translation, have called Maschiach ben Joseph, that is, the Messiah the son of Joseph, and in another place Maschiach ben Ephraim, that is, the Messiah the son of Ephraim. Shortly thereafter, fol. 48, col. 1. numero 58. follows: גם נוכל

לומר שלכך נקרא בן אפרים שהיא נולד משבט אפרים ויהיה ראש על עשרה השבטים המכונים בשם אפרים בכל המקרא דוגמת מלך הראשון ירבעם בן נבט שהיה משבט אפרים. ובן יוסף נקרא לא לבד בעבור שבה מגזע יוסף אלא שיוסף הוא אות אמת ודוגמא לכל בית ישראל. כמו שאירע ליוסף מן היסורין וחמוני בבית האסורין והעלמוהו מן אחיו ימים רבים. ומן האושר וההצלחה כי מבית האסורים יצא למלוך כן הרכב עם עשרת השבטים שהם סגורים וכלואים ונעלמים מכל אדם ובאחרית הימים יזכו להאשר וההצלחה נולדה כיוסף: that is, we can also say that he is therefore called Ben Ephraim, that is, the son of Ephraim, because he will be born of the tribe of Ephraim and will be the head over the ten tribes, who are called by the name Ephraim throughout the entire Bible, after the example of the first king Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who was of the tribe of Ephraim. He is also called ben Joseph, that is, the son of Joseph, not only because he comes from the tribe of Joseph, but also because Joseph was a certain sign and prefiguration of the entire house of Israel. Just as plagues befell Joseph, and he was shut up in prison and hidden from his brothers for a long time, and was afterward fortunate in that he was raised from prison to rule, so it is also with the ten tribes, who are enclosed and imprisoned and hidden from all men; but in the last days they will attain great happiness and prosperity, like Joseph. In the Chaldean translation of Song 4:5, the following is also written concerning these two Messiahs: הרין פריקין רעתידין למפרקין משיה בר דוד ומשיה: that is, your two redeemers who will redeem you, the Messiah the son of David and the Messiah the son of Ephraim, are like Moses and Aaron, the sons of Jocbebed, who are compared to two young roes that are twins of a roe. The same is also to be read in the said translation of Song 7:3. Indeed, he is also called simply Ephraim, as can frequently be seen in the book Pesikta rabbetha, fol. 62, col. 2. 3. 4. And the following is also written there at fol. 63, col. 2.: מליבש הק"בה: לאפרים משיה צדקנו לבוש שזיוו הולך מסוף העולם ועד סופו: וישראל משתמשין לאורו ואומר: that is, the Holy, blessed God will clothe Ephraim, the Messiah who is our righteousness, with a garment whose radiance will extend from one end of the world to the other, and the Israelites will make use of his light and say: blessed is the hour in which he was created; blessed is the womb from which he came. But in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, it is taught at fol. 77, col. 1. at the end of the 39th chapter, under the title Scháar abbave-emma, that he will be Joseph himself, concerning which the words read as follows: משיה בן יוסף הוא יוסף בעצמו כמו דוד: הוא משיה בן דוד: that is, the Messiah the son of Joseph will be Joseph himself, just as the Messiah the son of David will be David himself.

This Messiah, the son of Joseph, is said to have already been in the world at various times; for he is said to have been the widow's son at Zarpath, mentioned in 1 Kgs 17:17 etc., and also the prophet Jonah, as well as Rabbi Isaac Luria.

That he was the son of the aforementioned widow is taught in the Jalkut chadash fol. 24, col. 1. 2. numero 112. under the title Eliabu, from the book Asarah maamaroth, cap. 15. fol. 52, col. 2., with these words: איתא בתוספות בבא מצינא פרק המקבל דף קי"ד שנתלקו ר"ל עם אליהו מאיזה שבט הוא הם אמרו שהנא מבני לאה והוא כאן ואליהו אמר ולא כהן הוא אלא מבני בניה של רחל הוא דאמרו ליה אם כן דלא כהן מר למה אמרת להצרפית עשי לי עוגה קטנה ולבנך תעשי באחרונה וודאי הותרת כוהנך לאכול הלא אם כן כהן אתה. והשיב להם לפי שאותן התינוק היה משיח משיח בן יוסף ורמזוהו להם רמז טרם שבא משיח אני אבא תחילה עד כאן שם בתוספות. והנה ידוע שאותו התינוק היה יונה ולכך חרדה לו ניונה שלא נהפכה ננוה בימין בהיותו משיח בן יוסף חשב להב פן יהיה עתה עמו מלחמת גוג ומגוג וזהו כוונת הגמרא בתענית משום דבעי לומר מרחם על הארץ הקרימו יונה לדור ולשלמה וכו' כי אחרי שידקר יונה שהוא משיח בן יוסף יבא דוד דוד that is, in the Tosephoth of the Talmudic Tractate Bava Metzia, it is written in the 9th chapter, fol. 114, col. 2., that the Rabbis were in disagreement with Elijah about which tribe he was from. They said he was from the children of Leah, and a priest; but Elijah said that he was no priest, but rather from the descendants of Rachel. Then they said to him: if that is the case, that the master is no priest, why then did he say to the widow of Zarpath (1 Kgs 17:13): Make me first a small cake, and afterward make one for your son as well? To this he answered them: since that boy (and son of the widow) was the Messiah, the son of Joseph, I thereby wished to indicate to them that before the Messiah comes, I will come first. Thus far are the words of the Tosephoth. See, it is well known that that same boy was the (prophet) Jonah; for this reason Jonah was angry that Nineveh was not overthrown and destroyed in his time, for since he was the Messiah, the son of Joseph, he was anxious that he would now have to wage war with Gog and Magog. And this is the intent of the Gemara in the Tractate Taanith, fol. 17, col. 1.: because Jonah must pronounce the words (blessed are You, Lord) who has mercy upon the earth, he was therefore placed before David and Solomon. For after Jonah, who is the Messiah the son of Joseph, shall have been pierced (which piercing refers to Zech 12:10), then David, that is, the Messiah the son of David, will come.

That he was also the Rabbi Isaac Lurja, I prove from the following: because in the cited book Emek hammelech fol. 11, col. 4. in the 5th chapter, under the title Hakdamáth hammechabbér, it is taught, on the report of Rabbi Chájim Kliperis in his book Ez chájim, who was a disciple of the aforementioned Rabbi Isaac Lurja, that he raised several dead persons, with whom he held a conversation concerning the mysteries of the Law. And shortly thereafter the following is read: יודע: בעם אחת שארי ז"ל בעמדו על ציון שמעיה ואבטליון והתלמידים: עמו ואמר אל התלמידים בני הרעו ששמעיה ואבטליון צוו לי לאמר לכם שהתפללו על משיח בן יוסף שלא ימות עדי כאן לשון לשון של מהר"ה בספר עץ חיים וכתב על ז"ד וטרוב טפשותנו לא היה בנו דעת לשאול אותו מי הוא המשיח בן יוסף ולא עמד אלא ימים מועטים

ונתבקש רבינו בישיבה של מעלה ונודע לנו למפרע שהוא היה משיח בן יוסף ורוב ענותנותו
 That is: It once came to pass that, as the Lord, the Rabbi Isaac, stood at the gravestone of Schemája and Abtálon, and his disciples were with him, he said to his disciples: my sons, know that Schemája and Abtálon have commanded me to tell you that you should pray for the Messiah, the son of Joseph, that he may not die. Up to this point are the words of Rabbi Chájim in the book Ez chájim, and he wrote concerning this (thus): On account of our great foolishness, we had no understanding to ask him who the Messiah, the son of Joseph, was; but our teacher remained (after this) alive only a few days, and was summoned to the high school (of heaven); and we learned, in a reversed manner (that is, after the fact), that he had been the Messiah, the son of Joseph, but on account of his humility he had not wished to reveal himself.
 After this, the following is further written in the same place at fol. 11, col. 4. and fol. 12, col. 1. concerning him: פעם אחת בערב שבת סמוך להכנסת כלה יצא עם הלימדיו וחו : לעיר צפה לבוש ד' בגדים כדי לקבל השבת מתחיל מזמור לדוד הבו לה בני
 אלים ופזמון מיוסד לקבלה שבת ומזמור ליום השבת וה' מלך בגיגון נאה ובתוך שהיו
 משוררים אמר הרב לתלמידיו חבירים רצונכם שנלך לירושלים קודם השבת ונעשה שבת
 בירושלים וירושלים היא רחוקה מצפת יותר מ"כה פרסאות השביו קצת מן התלמידים אנן
 שומעים בכך וקצת השיבו ואמרו נלך מקודם ונודיע אותו לנשינו כיון שאמרו נלך מקודם
 לביתנו נתחרד הרב חרדה גדולה והכה כף אל כף ואמר אי לנו שלא היה בנו זכות להגאל
 שאילו הייתם כולכם משיבים בפה אחד שאתם רוצים לילך בשמחה גדולה תכף היו נגאלים
 כל ישראל שעתה היתה השעה עומרת להיגאל ומתוך שמאנתם בדבר חזר הגלות לאיתנו בע"ה That is: He went out one evening of the Sabbath, close to the time when the Sabbath began, with his disciples outside the city of Zephath, clothed in four garments, in order to receive the Sabbath, and began (the 29th Psalm, which begins:) A Psalm of David. Give unto the Lord, ye children of the mighty; and the carmen, or poem, appointed for the reception of the Sabbath; as also (the 92nd Psalm, which begins:) A song for the day of the Sabbath; (and the 97th Psalm, which begins:) The Lord is King, (to be sung) with a beautiful melody. And while they were singing, the teacher said to his disciples: companions, do you wish that we go to Jerusalem before the Sabbath, and that we keep the Sabbath in Jerusalem? (Jerusalem, however, was 25 miles distant from Zephath.) Then some of the disciples answered: we will obey in this (and go with you, if you wish to go there); but some among them answered and said: we will first go and let our wives know. When they had said, we will first go to our houses, the teacher began to tremble violently, and struck one hand against the other, and said: woe unto us, that there was no worthiness in us to be redeemed! For if you had all answered with one voice that you wished to go with great joy, all Israelites would have been redeemed immediately, for now was the right time to be redeemed; but because you have refused to go with me, the exilium, or misery (that is, the captivity), has returned to its former strength on account of the manifold sins. He also revealed most of his mysteries in the fields and in the wilderness, and had no need of any book. Concerning all of this, the cited book Emek hamélech fol. 109, col. 2. at the end, and col. 3. in the 112th chapter under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba may also be consulted, where the following is likewise read: ידוע שמפני אותה העת רצון בא האר"י זל"ה לעולם הוא נשמת משיח בן יוסף כנודע בביאור בשער גלגול נשמות, That is: It is known that Rabbi Isaac Lúrrja (whose memory be unto eternal life) came (into the world) on account of that time of good pleasure, and that he was the soul of the Messiah, the son of Joseph, as is clearly shown in the treatise on the transmigration of souls. And at fol. 33, col. 1. the following is read in the cited book Emek hammélech, in the 55th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu: והיה הרב רבי יצחק לוריא: זל"ה בא לזכות את הדור והקב"ה השפיע עליו אלף ידות רוח הקודש מעין חכמה וגו' הוא 'היה המשיח בן יוסף של אותו הדור ובעוונות הדור הגרוע נאסף ונגוע שלא בזמנו וגו' That is: Rabbi Isaac Lúrrja, whose memory be unto eternal life, came to justify the generation of mankind, and the holy, blessed God poured out the Holy Spirit upon him a thousandfold, etc. He was the Messiah, the son of Joseph, of the generation of that time, but on account of the sins of the base generation he was taken away and died before his time, etc.

Further, in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, fol. 151, col. 4., in the 44th chapter, under the title Scháar rèscha difér ánpin, it is reported that he was able to recognize all the sins that were marked upon people's foreheads, and that he not only knew what people had done in their private chambers, but also what they had thought in their minds. And at fol. 152, col. 1., one reads how the souls of the wicked ran after him and sought help from him, in these words: כל הנשמות האבודות ההולכים מדחי אל דחי ונקלעים בכף הקלע אינם רוצים לקבל אותם ואפילו בגיהנם מחמת רבוי הזוהמא ששאבו נשמתם בחייהם ואין כח בגיהנם ללכך אותם כל אותם הנשמות היה מספר לתלמידיו שבאים לאלפים ולרבבות לפניו כשיהוא הולך על השדה חזה כל האילנות מלאים מהם וכן בנהר הם צפים על גבי המים לאין מספר והיה שואל אותם מה ענינם שם והיו משיבים ששמעו את רוב קדושתו והשגתו מסוף העולם ועד סופו ובאו לתקן אותן כי יש בידו לתקן אותן ולהשיב להם אם יגזור השם בחיים אתקן אתכם That is: he also recounted to his disciples that all those lost souls who are driven from one place to another and hurled about with a sling, and who are not even accepted in hell on account of the great impurity they had drawn upon themselves during their lifetimes, and whom hell itself is not capable of purifying, had come before him in thousands and tens of thousands, so that when he walked in the field he saw all the trees filled with them. They also floated in the rivers, upon the water, in countless numbers; and when he asked them what they were doing there, they gave him the answer that they had heard of his great holiness and ability from one end of the world to the other, and had come so that he might set them right again, since he was capable of doing so. He then answered them that if God granted him life, he would set them and the whole world right again. He also revealed to his disciples how they could be set right.

Regarding the time of his birth and how long he lived: as for the time of his birth, it can be seen in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech fol. 10, col. 1., in the 2nd Chapter, under the title Hakdamath hammechabbér, that he is said to have been born in the year 5294 after the creation of the world, that is, in the year 1534 A.D., in the Promised Land, and to have been circumcised in the lap of the prophet Elijah. As for the time of how long he lived, the following is read concerning this in the said fol. 10, col. 3, at the beginning of the 3rd Chapter: אחרי העשרים שנים של הפרישות הגדול שעשה במצרים נתגלה אליו אליהו הנביא ז"ל בצווי הקב"ה ואמר לו כבר הגיע העת סמוך לפטירתך ואותו הפעם לא היו לו כי אם ל"ו שנה ובן ל"ח שנה היה בשנה שנתבקש בישיבה של מעלה פה ק"ק צפת בע"זה That is: after he had for twenty years in Egypt greatly separated himself from unholy things, the prophet Elijah, of blessed memory, revealed himself to him by command of the Holy and blessed God, and said to him that the time had come in which he would soon die; and he was at that point no more than 36 years old: but in the 38th year of his age, here in the holy congregation of Zephath, on account of our manifold sins, he was called to the supreme high school (which is in heaven).

Furthermore, it is also read in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, fol. 6, col. 4. in the first preface, that he will come again in the future and redeem the Jews, and the words read as follows: הָאָר"י ז"ל אֲשֶׁר מָסַר נַפְשׁוֹ עַל תְּקוּן: הדור וְעָלָיו נֶאֱמַר וּבְחִבּוּרְתּוֹ נִרְפָּא לָנוּ וְהוּא מְחוּלָל מִפְּשָׁעֵינוּ מְדַכָּא בַּעֲוֹנוֹתֵינוּ וְעֵתִיד הוּא לְחֹזֵר That is: Rabbi Isaac Lurja, of blessed memory, gave his soul to set the generation aright, and of him it is said (Isa 53:5): "And by his wounds we are healed, and he was wounded for our transgressions and crushed for our sins." He will also come again to us and redeem us, and through the mercy of the holy and blessed God restore the Crown to its former state.

Otherwise, it is taught in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 91, col. 2. in the Parassha Bo: בְּכָל דּוֹר וָדוֹר שׁוֹלֵחַ הַקָּב"ה נִיצוֹץ אֶחָד מִמְּשִׁיחַ אוֹ לְגָאוֹל אוֹ יְחִזְרוּ בְּתַשׁוּבָה אוֹ לְקַיֵּם: That is: In each and every generation, the holy and blessed God sends a spark of the Messiah, either to redeem the Jews if they repent, or to sustain the world, as in the generation of persecution (that is, the generation that was persecuted), or else to illuminate the world in the exilio, or captivity, through the light of the Law, so that it may not perish entirely. But let this suffice concerning the Messiah the Son of Joseph.

Concerning the Messiah, the Son of David, who is also called only בן דוד ben David, that is, the Son of David, Abarbanel was of the opinion that he would come from among the Jews who dwell in Christendom, for he writes thus in his book Maschmia jeschúa, fol. 4, col. 2.: מפני מַפְלֵת אֲדוֹם שֶׁהִיא עֲצָמָה יַעֲצְרוּ כֹּחַ: הַיִּשְׁמְעֵאלִים לְבֹא עַל רוֹמֵי כְּמוֹ שֶׁהַרֹּמִיִּים הִלְכוּ עַל יְרוּשָׁלַיִם וְאִז תְּהִיָּה הַמֶּלֶכְמָה גְּדוֹלָה בְּכַרְדּוֹ גְּדוֹל שֶׁבְּרוֹמֵי וּמָמָה שֶׁאֲמָרוּ וּמִשֶּׁם בֶּן דָּוִד יֵצֵא וְיָבֵא לְאַרְצֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְיִרְאֶה שֶׁיְהִיָּה מִשִּׁים בֶּן דָּוִד מֵאֲדוֹם That is: On account of the fall of Edom (that is, of Christendom), which will be mighty, the Ishmaelites will marshal their forces to march against Rome, just as the Romans marched against Jerusalem; at that time there will be a great war in the city of Rome.

As for what is said, that the Messiah, the Son of David, will come from there and make his way into the land of Israel, it appears that the Messiah, the Son of David, will be from among the Jews who are in the Edomite exile or misery (that is, in captivity under the Christians), just as the words "Who is this that comes from Edom?" (Isa 63:1) are interpreted by our rabbis.

Furthermore, some rabbis hold that he will be from the lineage and descendants of King David; others, however, namely the Kabbalists, are of the opinion that he will be King David himself, with respect to the soul. As for the first opinion, it is certain and true that the Messiah would have had to be of the lineage of King David, as is clearly to be seen from Jer 23:5 and 33:15, in both of which passages, by the Jews' own admission, the Messiah is treated of; wherefore Rabbi David Kimchi also writes, in his commentary on the words of Ezek 34:23, "I will raise up a shepherd over them who shall feed them, namely my servant David," in the following manner: עבדי דוד המשיח שיעמוד, That is: the words "my servant David" signify the Messiah, who at the time of redemption will arise from his (namely David's) seed. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi likewise teaches in his commentary thereon: עבדי דוד מלך מזרעו, That is: the words "my servant David" are to be understood as referring to a king from his seed. In the same manner, the words of Jer 30:9, "They shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up for them," are rendered in the Chaldean translation as follows: ופִּלְחוּן קִדָּם יְיָ אֱלֹהֵהוּן, That is: they shall serve the Lord their God, and shall obey the Messiah, the Son of David, their king, whom I will raise up for them. And Abarbanel writes in his commentary thereon, fol. 129, col. 2, in the following manner: ואת דוד מלכם אשר אקים להם הוא מלך המשיח, That is: the words "and David their king, whom I will raise up for them" signify the King Messiah, who will reign from the house of David.

Now since the Messiah would have had to be of the lineage of King David, he cannot be David himself, as the foolish Kabbalists absurdly imagine; concerning whom one reads in the book Tisbbi of Elijah, fol. 16, col. 2, under the word Gilgul, as follows: דוד המלך ומדוד של דוד המלך בגוף של דוד המלך, That is: it is said that the soul of the first man passed into the body of King David, and that it will pass from David into the body of the Messiah; and thus the letters of the word אדם, Adam, are the initial letters of the names Adam, David, Messiah. Abarbanel likewise expresses himself in his commentary on the aforementioned words of Ezek 34:23 as follows: 'לכן, דוד וגו', אמר המפרשים שמפני שמלך המשיח יהיה מזרע דוד וגו', אבל בעלי הקבלה שקיימו וקבלו דעת גלגול נפשות אמרו שמלך המשיח קראו דוד ונכון הוא. יהיה דוד עצמו כי הנר נפש דוד תתגלגל במלך המשיח ולכן הוא עצמו ימלוך בישראל, That is: the commentators have said that, since the King Messiah will be of the seed of David, etc., he is therefore called David, and this is also correct. But the Kabbalists, who maintain and have accepted the doctrine of the transmigration of souls from one body into another, say that the King Messiah will be David himself, because the soul of King David will pass into the King Messiah; and therefore he himself will reign over Israel. But just as the Kabbalists' doctrine of the transmigration of souls from one body into another, and consequently the passing of King David's soul into the Messiah, is a Jewish fabrication and reckless folly, so too is the doctrine of the Messiah the Son of Joseph a fable sprung from the vain minds of the witless rabbis; for Holy Scripture makes mention of only one Messiah, who was to be of the tribe of David, as shall, God willing, be demonstrated by me in another book against the Jews.

To conclude this chapter, I will also indicate what Rabbi David Kimchi writes in his commentary on Ps 89:48, in these words: בכול דור ודור יהאזה מי שהוא מזרע : דוד שהיה בימיו הישועה ויהיה הוא מלך המשיח that is, in every generation (and age) the one who is of the seed of David shall wish that the redemption may come to pass in his time, and that he may become the King Messiah. This, however, is a foolish matter, for the true Messiah has long since come, and is thus awaited in vain by the Jews. And so every person who is of the lineage of David may let go of the foolish fancy that he will be the Messiah, and never allow it to enter his mind, since the Messiah promised in Holy Scripture had to be not merely a man, and indeed one without sin, but also at the same time God.

Chapter XIV.

In which it is shown in what manner, according to the teaching of the Jews, the Christians will wage a great war with the Turks shortly before the coming of the Messiah; and how, during that war, the Messiah the son of Joseph will fight valiantly alongside the Christians and be slain; and how after that the Messiah the son of David will come and bring the entire world under his dominion; in which time all Christians together with their supposed prince and ruler, Sammael, are to be exterminated; as well as what else will further come to pass at that time.

The Jews hold the undoubted opinion that at the coming of their Messiah, who has thus far been awaited in vain, a severe war will break out between the Christians and the Turks, but that the Messiah will intervene and conquer the entire world. For this reason, it is written in the book Nézach Jisraël fol. 46, col. 2., at the beginning of the 35th chapter, as follows: בזמן המלך המשיח שיגלה במהרה בימינו קודם מלכותו יהיה מלחמת גוג ומגוג שכל האומות יעלו עליהם למלחמה עד שינצח המשיח את הכל ואז יהיה מלך אחד בעולם הוא המלך המשיח וגוי: That is: At the time of King Messiah (may he be revealed speedily and in our days), before his reign, the war of Gog and Magog will be waged, for all the nations will go forth against them (namely, the Jews) in battle, until the Messiah shall overcome them all; and then there will be one king in the world, namely King Messiah, etc.

As to who is to be understood by Gog and Magog, the rabbis do not agree with one another on this point. Rabbi Saadias understands by Gog the fourth kingdom (that is, the Roman Empire), which is mentioned in Dan 2:40, for he writes thus in his Commentario on that passage: ומלכות הרביעית תקיפה כברזל: היא גוג, That is: By the fourth kingdom, which is strong as iron, Gog is signified. Rabbi David Kimchi interprets it as referring to the enemies of God, when in his commentary on the words of Isa 66:6 ("A voice of tumult shall be heard from the city") he expresses himself thus: לימי המשיח יצאה קול שאון מעיר: 'ירושלים על גוג ומגוג והם אויבי ה', That is: At the time of the Messiah, a voice of tumult will go forth from the city of Jerusalem against Gog and Magog, who will be the enemies of the Lord.

Rabbi Abraham Seba holds that certain peoples are to be understood by this, whom the Greek King Alexander the Great is said to have enclosed behind certain mountains; concerning which he writes in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, which is called Zerór hammór, fol. 74, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajehi beschallach, on the words of Exod 15:7, "And with the greatness of Your majesty You will overthrow those who rise up against You," in the following manner: בזהר כתבו וברוב גאונך תהרוס קמ"ך אלו גוג ומגוג שיקומו נגד השם יתברך דכתיב למה רגשו גוים הם גוג ומגוג דכתיב על ה' ועל משיחו נראה לי שלקח ההרוס קמ"ך בגוג ומגוג שהוא כמו הריסת בנין על מה שראיתי כתוב בפירוש נביאים אחרונים של רבי יוסף קמחי ז"ל שראה כתוב בספר אחד כי אלכסנדרוס מוקדן הסגיר לגוג ומגוג בהרים גדולים וגבוהים שאין להם מוצא אלא ממקום אחד ובאותו מקום בנה בנין חזק מחומר ברזל בענין שלא יוכלו לצאת ובאותה חומה עשרה חרבות גדולות אנשים מברזל שהם מכים תמיד בחומה במיני פטישים וקרדומות בענין שיבינו האנשים שמבפנים שלעולם בונין אותו ומחזיקים אותו באופן שלא יצאו משם לעולם. ולפי שורה הבנין לא יהרס ולא יפתח עד שיבא אותו יום הגדול והנורא שירצה השם שיצאו משם דכתיב ביום בא גוג על אדמת ישראל לפי שאז ירצה השם לקדש שמו ולהודיעו לעיני הגוים שנאמר והתגדלתי והתקדשתי ונודעתי לעיני גוים רבים ולפי שאז יהרוס השם יתברך אותו בנין כדי שיצאו אמר הקדוש רבי שמעון בן יוחאי וברוב גאונך תהרוס קמ"ך אלו גוג ומגוג. ולזה תמצא שרמז יחזקאל באומרו במפלת גוג ומגוג והוצאתי אותך ואת כל חילך כי זאת ההוצאה היא יציאת אותם הרים. וכן אמר ובאת ממקומך מירכתי צפון ואמר בפרשה ביום בא גוג נהרסו ההרים ונפלו המדגות וכל חומה לארץ תפול שורה רמז על החומה שאמרנו שבנה אלכסנדרוס מוקדן ואז והתגדלתי והתקדשתי וכל זה רמז שורה רמז על החומה שאמרנו שבנה אלכסנדרוס מוקדן ואז והתגדלתי והתקדשתי וכל זה רמז לעתיד that is, in the Sohar it is reported that the words "And with the greatness of Your majesty You will overthrow those who rise up against You" signify Gog and Magog, who will rise up against the blessed God, as it is written (Ps 2:1): "Why do the nations rage?" These are Gog and Magog, as it is written (v. 2 of the same Ps 2): "(The kings of the earth take their stand, and the rulers take counsel together) against the Lord and against His anointed." It seems to me that he (namely Rabbi Schimeon ben Jochai, who wrote the book Sohar) took the words "You will overthrow those who rise up against You" as referring to Gog and Magog, and that thereby something equivalent to the destruction of a building is indicated, according to what I saw written in the commentary on the latter Prophets by Rabbi Joseph Kimchi, of blessed memory, that he had read in a book in which it was written that Alexander the Macedonian had enclosed Gog and Magog within great and high mountains, which have an exit in only one place, and at that same place he had built a strong structure of an iron wall, so that they could not go out; and upon that same wall he had made, through great wisdom and skill, iron men who continually strike the wall with certain kinds of hammers and axes, so that the people who are inside (in the mountains) might think that it is being continually built and reinforced, so that they might never go out. Now, since this structure will not be destroyed or opened until that great and terrible day comes on which God will desire that they go forth from there, as it is written (Ezek 38:18): "(And it shall come to pass at that same time) when Gog comes over the land of Israel," for then God will sanctify His name and make it known before the eyes of the nations, as it is said (ibid., v. 23): "Thus I will be magnified, sanctified, and made known before many nations." And because the blessed God will then destroy that structure so that they may go out, the holy Rabbi Schimeon ben Jochai said that the words "And with the greatness of Your majesty You will overthrow those who rise up against You" signify Gog and Magog. So you also find that Ezekiel aimed at this when he speaks (ch. 38, v. 4) of the fall of Gog and Magog: "I will bring you out, and your whole army," for this bringing out signifies the going forth from those same mountains. And thus he says further (ibid., v. 15): "And you will come from your place, from the uttermost parts of the north." And in the Parascha (which begins at v. 18 with the words: "And it shall come to pass at that same time") when Gog comes (v. 20 in the said 38th chapter), it is said: "The mountains also shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall sink to the ground," which signifies the wall of which we have said that Alexander the Macedonian built it. Then (says God) I will be magnified and sanctified. And all of this is alluded to when he says: "You will overthrow those who rise up against You," which is to happen in the future. These are the words from the book Zerór hammór.

Rabbi David Kimchi also mentions this foolish fable in his commentary on the words of Ezekiel 38:8, "You shall also be visited after a long time," where he states: אמרו כי מימי אלכסנדרוס מלך יון היו בני מגוג נסגרים שם בסוף צפון כי הסגרים שם אלכסנדרוס אחר ההרים ולא יצאו משם עוד וזהו שאמר מימים רבים הפקד כלומר תזכר בפי בני העולם בצאתך כי ער היום ההוא לא נזכרת כי היית נסגר ולא היית יוצא ביניהם: That is: It is said that the children of Magog, from the time of the Greek king Alexander, were shut in at the far north, and that Alexander imprisoned them there behind the mountains, from whence they did not come out again. And this is what (the prophet) says: "You shall be visited after a long time," as if to say, all the inhabitants of the world shall make mention of you with their mouths when you go forth, for until that time no one will think of you, since you have been shut in and have not come among them. So also in the book Iggéretz báale cháíjm, in the 12th chapter, under the heading Scháár schelítschi, one reads: גוג ומגוג שוכנים אחרי דלתות הברזל והם שתי אומות צורותיהם אנושיות ומדויותיהם צבועות לא ידעו לא הנהגה ולא מנהג לא מקח ולא ממכר ולא סחורה ולא אמונת לא חרישה ולא זריעה אבל יצורו מחיות השדה והדגים ויתפשזו קצתם את קצתם ויאכלו קצתם קצתם: That is: Gog and Magog dwell behind iron doors, and are two peoples who have human forms but the characteristics of dragons (or of creatures furnished with sharp claws). They know nothing of government or custom, neither of buying nor selling, neither of trade nor faith, neither of plowing nor sowing, but rather they catch wild animals and fish, and fall upon one another, and devour one another. By these peoples one may perhaps also understand that which is read in Rabbi Benjamin's German-Hebrew travel account, printed in Amsterdam, fol. 61, col. 2, concerning the land of Alana, in these words: דאט זעננביג לנד זיגט היינער בערג בשלאסן, חולי המט זיין אויסגנג אליין דורך אייזנני פפארטן. דיזע זעננביג פפארטן דיא חמט אלכסנדר מוקדון דא זמךן לאסן דיזי אומה ווערט גהייטן אלוי: That is: That same land lies enclosed entirely within mountains, and has its exit only through iron gates. Those same iron gates were built there by (King) Alexander the Macedonian. This people is called the Alans.

In the book Jalkut chadasch, at fol. 145, col. 3. numero 109, under the title Maschiach, drawn from the 181st Ofan or chapter of the book Megalléh amykkóth, it is reported that the king of Assyria, Sennacherib, who is mentioned in 2 Kgs 18:13, will be Gog and Magog; and the words there read as follows: דור הפלגה נתגלגלו בדורו של סנחריב והיה סנחריב ממש נמרוד והוא בעצמו לעתיד לבא גוג ומגוג: that is, the souls of the generation of the dispersion (at the building of the Babylonian tower) entered into the people who lived in the time of Sennacherib, and Sennacherib was in fact Nimrod. That same one will also in the future be Gog and Magog; and just as all the souls of those people departed from their bodies at once, at a single moment (when they were struck dead by the angel of the Lord, as may be seen in 2 Kgs 19:35), so it will likewise come to pass in the future with Gog and Magog, when the Messiah will slay him and his people all at once.

It is also read in the cited passage of the book Megalléh amykkóth that all seventy nations of the world will then join Sennacherib and make war against God and His Messiah. In the aforementioned book Jalkut chadasch, at fol. 50, col. 1, numero 67, it is indicated from the Sohar that not only Sennacherib but also other deceased kings will return and wage war, in these words: עתיד הקב"ה להחיות המלכים שצרו על ירושלים כגון לופינוס וסנחריב ונבוכדנאצר וכיוצא בהם ויתן להם ממשלה כמו מהחילה ויתאספו עליהם הרבה אומות וישלח עליהם הקב"ה פורעניות בגלוי סביב ירושלים וכן כתיב וזאת המגפה אשר יגוף יי' את כל הגוים אשר צבאו על ירושלים יצאו לארץ חיים: that is, the holy blessed God will restore to life those kings who attacked Jerusalem as enemies, namely Lupinus, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, and the like, and will give them dominion as was the case at the beginning; but many nations will gather against them, and the holy blessed God will send His punishments openly upon them, around the city of Jerusalem; for it is written (Zech 14:12): "And this shall be the plague with which the Lord will smite all the peoples that have warred against Jerusalem"; it does not say "who will war" but rather "who have warred against" (by which are to be understood) those who have already warred.

According to the opinion of Rabbi Samigae, the seventy nations of the world are to be Gog and Magog; for he teaches in his book Mikrae kodesch, in the second part, in the 2nd chapter, fol. 51, col. 2., that everything which in former times befell the patriarchs was a sign or prefiguration of things to come, and he continues thereafter: כל שכן וקל וחומר שנאמין שעל זה הערך יהיו בביאת המשיח המשפטים הגדולים והאותות והמופתים שיעשה כגוג ומגוג הרומז לשבעים אומות ע"א that is, How much more, then, should we believe that in such a manner, at the coming of the Messiah, great judgments, signs, and wonders will occur, which (God) will perform upon Gog and Magog, which is a designation for the seventy idolatrous nations, according to his reckoning (and count, for Gog umagog amounts to seventy in number) and for Amalek, etc.

Isaac Abarbanel holds that the Ishmaelites or Turks are to be understood by Gog and Magog, for he writes thus in his commentary on Zech 14:1 etc., fol. 295, col. 1: שנבא: המפרשים פירשו הנבואה הזאת על מלחמת גוג ומגוג כמו אותה נבואה. עליה יחזקאל וגם אני אודה להם בזה אבל בזהיה תהיה ענין אותה מלחמה בזה יתחלף דעתי מאד מדעתם כמן שהודעתך פעמים רבות כי הם חשבו שיבא גוג ומגוג שהוא עם עצום ורב וחזק שאר אשר בצד הצפוני המזרח להלחם על ישראל אחר גאולתם כשישמע שיתקבצו הגליות ושיעשה הש"י זה לצרף את השלישית שהם בני ישראל אשר ישארו בה. ואני כבר בארתי שאין הדבר בעיני כן אלא שהק"ב באחרית הימים וקץ הגלות יעיר את לבב בני אדום לעלות על ירושלים לכבשה ויעיר ג"כ את גוג ומגוג השוכנים בירכתי צפון וגם את שאר האומות השוכנות לצד המזרח. לבוא על הנוצרים הערלים ההם בני אדום להחרים ולהדיחם מן הארץ ועל זה תהיה ביניהם מלחמה עצומה וזהו יום ה' המיועד ברכי הנביאים ואין הכליתי כי אם להח נקמת ה' ב'אדום כעצם וראשונה וגם בשאר האומות אשר החרבו את ארץ ישראל והגלו את השבטים במקום הרשע שמה יהיה המשפט. וראיתי בדבריהם ז"ל שאמרו שלשה פעמיים בא גוג ומגוג על ירושלים ובשלישית הם באין ועולים לירושלם והם עולין ליהודה ומכתיבין מהן שהם גבורים שנ' וגברתים בה' ומוסרין לכל אחד מבני יהודה שני גבורים וכו' וכמו שזכרו שם במאמר ומי יתן. וארע מאין לקחו חז"ל ההקדמה הזאת ר"ל שנ' פעמים יבא גוג על ירושלים כי יחזקאל לא נבא כ"א על פעם אחת. אבל הם באמת חכמו השכילו הדעת הזה אשר הסכמתי עליו וגוג ומגוג הם הישמעאלים אשר בירכתי צפון ואותם כבר באו על ירושלים שתי פעמיים הראשונה היא כשבאו על בני אדום חיל רומיים שהיו מושלים בארץ ישראל מן העת אשר לכרד טיטוס עד אשר באו אותם הישמעאלים עליהם ולקחו את הארץ בחזקה והחריבו חיל הרומיים שהיו יושבים יושבים עליהם. ופעם שנית באו גם כן בימי הצרפתים ושאר הנוצרים שעלו על ארץ ישראל וכבשוה וישבו עליה פ"ח שנה וישבו הישמעאלים ההם וילחמו עמהם ויגרשוה מן הארץ ויקחו את ירושלים והחזיקו בה עד היום הזה. והפעם השלישית היא לעתיד לבוא. הנה למדנו מזה שגוג ומגוג הם גויי הישמעאלים הדרים בפאות ההם ושאותם שבאו בשתי פעמים האחרים הם אשר יבאו לעתיד. ולמדנו עוד שכל הפעמים שבאו ויבאו גוג ומגוג להלחם על ירושלים היה ויהיה בננד הנוצרים המחזיקים בה לא כנגד ישראל ושכן יהיה בעתיד וכמו שפירשתי בספר מעיני הישועה. ולפי שביום המלחמה ההיא יתראו נפלאות הש"י וילחם בגוים ההם בחרב וברבר ובאש וגפרית ורוח

ולעפות מן השמים לכן אמר כאן הנה יום בא לה' כי אותו יום המלחמה יהיה יום ה' הגדול והנורא: That is to say: The commentators have interpreted this prophecy, just as the prophecy of Ezekiel, as referring to the war of Gog and Magog, and I also give them my assent in this. But as regards the nature of that war, my opinion differs very greatly from theirs, as I have already indicated on many occasions; for they supposed that Gog and Magog, which is to be a very mighty, great, and strong people dwelling on the northern side toward the east, would come to make war against Jerusalem after the redemption of the Jews, when he would hear that the dispersed Jews would be gathering together, and that the blessed God would do this in order to refine the third part, namely the children of Israel who would remain therein. But I have already explained that, in my opinion, the matter is not so constituted; rather, that the holy blessed God, in His final wrath and at the end of the exile, will stir the hearts of the children of Edom (that is, the Christians) to go to Jerusalem and take possession of it, and that He will also rouse Gog and Magog, who dwell on the sides of the north, together with the remaining peoples who dwell on the eastern side, to march against those same uncircumcised Christians, the children of Edom, to destroy them and drive them from the land; and therefore there will be a mighty war between them. And this is the Day of the Lord that is promised in the words of the prophets, and its purpose is nothing other than that the Lord will take vengeance upon Edom (that is, Christendom) properly and principally, as well as upon the remaining peoples who have laid waste the land of Israel and led the tribes away captive, and that they shall be punished in that very place where they acted wickedly. I have also seen in the words of our Rabbis, of blessed memory, that it is said that Gog and Magog shall come against Jerusalem three times, and that at the third time they come and go up to Jerusalem and march into Judah, and shall enroll from among them those who are mighty men, as it is said (Zech 10:12): "And I will strengthen them in the Lord," and that they will assign to each one of the children of Judah two heroes, etc., and as is further related there in that passage. But would to God I knew from where our Sages, of blessed memory, derived this matter, namely that Gog would come against Jerusalem three times; for Ezekiel prophesied only of one time. Yet they were in truth wise and conducted themselves wisely in this opinion, with which I am in agreement. Now Gog and Magog are the Ishmaelites (or Turks) who dwell on the sides of the north, and they have already marched against Jerusalem twice. The first time was when they marched against the children of Edom, namely the army of the Romans, who had ruled in the land of Israel from the time that Titus took it, until those Ishmaelites came against them and took the land by force and destroyed the army of the Romans who had been dwelling therein. The second time they also came when the French and the other Christians had gone into the land of Israel and brought it under their yoke and had dwelt therein for 85 years; then those same Ishmaelites came again and made war with them and drove them out of the land and took Jerusalem, which they have held to this day. The third time, however, will come in the future. Behold, we learn from this that Gog and Magog are peoples of the Ishmaelites who dwell in those regions, and that those who came the two other times are the very same who will come in the future. We also learn further that every time Gog and Magog have come and will come to make war against Jerusalem, it has happened and will happen against the Christians who possess it, and not against the Israelites, and that it will be so in the future as well, in the manner in which I have explained it in the book Májene jeschúa (מעניי הישועה). And since at the time of that war the wonders of the blessed God will make themselves seen, and He will make war against those Gojim (or heathens) with the sword, pestilence, and fire, and brimstone and tempests from heaven, therefore he (namely the prophet Zechariah) said here (Zech 14:1): "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh"; for that same day of war will be the great and terrible day of the Lord. These are the words of Abarbanel, from which it is clearly to be seen that by Gog and Magog he understands the Ishmaelites or Turks.

According to these words of Abarbanel, the eastern peoples are to be Gog and Magog; which is also to be found in his commentary on Joel 3:2 etc., fol. 242, col. 4, and in his book Maschmía jeschúah, fol. 75, col. 1.

The same author also writes in his commentary on the 30th chapter of Jeremiah, fol. 129, col. 1, 2, on this matter in the following manner: במדרש אגדה דרשו הנבואה הזאת על מלחמת גוג ומגוג ולזה נטו רוב המפרשים ואני כבר פירשתי בספר מעניי הישועה בענין גוג ומגוג ועתה אפרש זאת הפרשה על פי דרכו הנה רבים מהנביאים נבאו על חרבן האומות בזמן הגאולה ואולם איך יהיה זה רואה אני מכת הנבואות שבאחרית הימים יעורר הק"ב לרוב אומת הנוצרים הנקראים היום אדום לעלות לכבוש ארץ ישראל כי שם עיניהם ולבם כל הימים כי שם נקבר אלהיהם ויבאו על הארצות ההם ויעשו בישמעאלים מכת חרב והרג ואבדן רב וכשישמעו הישמעאלים שבכל ארצות המזרח והצפון מהרעות שעושים הנוצרים באנשי דתם ובהיותם הולכים לכבוש העיר הקדושה שהיא גם כן אצל הישמעאלים שער השמים ומקום קדושה רבה יתקבצו ויבאו נגדם אלו ואלו למלחמה על ירושלים ואז תהיה ביניהם הריגה עצומה ונקמת ה' עליהם ואותם הבאים ממזרח הם הנקראים גוג ומגוג ולא יבאו להלחם בישראל כי אם באדום העולים על ארץ ישראל לקחת אותה מיד הישמעאלים וזהו המשפט שיעשה ה' בכל האומות בעמק יהושפט והיות ירושלים סף רעל לכל That is: In the Médrasch Aggáda this prophecy is interpreted as referring to the war of Gog and Magog, and most commentators incline toward this view; but I have already explained the nature of Gog and Magog in the book Májene jeschúa, and I will now expound this chapter according to its manner. Behold, there are many among the prophets who have prophesied the destruction of the nations at the time of the redemption; but how this shall come to pass, I see from the force of the prophecies, namely that the holy and blessed God will move the greater part of the peoples of the Christians, who are today called Edomites, to march forth and take possession of the land of Israel, for their eyes and hearts are always directed thither, since their God was buried there, and they will come into those lands and slay and destroy many Ishmaelites with the sword. When the Ishmaelites who are in all the regions of the east and of the north hear of such evil deeds as the Christians are committing against those of their religion, and that they are on the march to take the holy city (Jerusalem), which is likewise regarded by the Ishmaelites as the gate of heaven and a place of great holiness, they will gather together and march against them, and they will wage war against one another on account of Jerusalem; and there will then be a great slaughter among them, and the vengeance of God will come upon them. But those who come from the east will be called Gog and Magog, and they will not come to fight against the Israelites, but against the Edomites, who will march into the land of Israel to take it from the Ishmaelites. And this is the judgment which the Lord will execute upon all nations in the valley of Jebosaphat. And because Jerusalem will be a cup of trembling (or shuddering) to all peoples (as is to be read in Zech 12:2), Jeremiah has said here (in the aforementioned 30th chapter, v. 5): "We hear a voice of trembling, there is fear and no peace"; which will come upon the nations, etc. According to these words of Abarbanel, the eastern peoples are to be Gog and Magog; which is also to be found in his commentary on Joel 3:2 etc., fol. 242, col. 4, and in his book Maschmía jeschúah, fol. 75, col. 1.

Rabbi Moses bar Maimon holds, however, that one cannot properly know the nature of the war of Gog and Magog; for in his book Jad chasáka, in the second part, fol. 297, col. 1. in the 12th chapter, under the title Hilchóth melachím, numero 2. he writes as follows: אמרו חכמים אין בין עולם הזה לימות המשיח יראה מפשטן של דברי הנביאים שבתחילת ימות המשיח תהיה מלחמת גוג ומגוג ושקודם מלחמת גוג ומגוג יעמוד נביא לישר את ישראל ולהכין לבם שנ' הנה אנכי שולח לכם את אליהו וגו' ואינו בא לא לטמא הטהור ולא לטהר הטמא ולא לפסול אנשים שהם בחזקת כשרות ולא להכשיר מי שהוחזקו פסולין אלא לשום שלום בעולם שנ' והשיב לב אבות על בנים. ויש מן החכמים שאומרים שקודם ביאת המשיח יבא אליהו וכל אלו הדברים וכיוצא בהן לא ידע אדם איך יהיו עד שיהיו הדברים שתומין הן אצל הנביאים גם החכמים אין להם קבלה בדברים אלו אלא לפי הכרע הפסוקים. ולפיכך יש להם מחלוקת בדברים אלו ועל כל פנים אין סידור הויית דברים אלו ולא דקדוקיהן עיקר בדת ולעולם לא יתעסק אדם בדברי הגדות ולא יאריך במדרשות האומרים בעניינים אלו וכיוצא בהן ולא ישימם that is, The Sages have said that there is no difference between this world and the days of the Messiah, except only that the kingdoms (namely the nations of the world) shall be brought into servitude (and subjected to the Israelites). It is also apparent from the plain sense of the words of the Prophets that at the beginning of the days of the Messiah, the war of Gog and Magog will take place, and that before the war of Gog and Magog, a prophet will arise to guide the Israelites aright and to make their hearts understanding, as it is said (Mal 4:5, or according to others, Mal 3:23): Behold, I will send you the prophet Elijah. He will not come, however, to make the pure impure and the impure pure, nor to reject those people who are held to be righteous, nor to declare righteous those who are reprobate, but rather to establish peace in the world, as it is said (Mal 4:6, or according to others, Mal 3:24): He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, etc. There are also some among the Sages who report that Elijah will come before the arrival of the Messiah; but no man knows how all these and similar things will come to pass, since they are hidden among the Prophets. Likewise, the Sages have no tradition or oral teaching concerning such matters beyond what Holy Scripture provides as information. For this reason they are in disagreement on these matters. But neither the ordering of the coming-to-be of these things, nor the minute examination of them, is a principal article of religion, and a man should never occupy himself with those things that stand in the Haggadóth or historical narratives, nor dwell at length on the Midráschóth or figurative expositions of Scripture that treat of these and similar matters, nor hold them to be a principal concern, for they lead neither to fear nor to love. These are the words of Rabbi Moses bar Maimon, who was a very learned and discerning man, and who rejected with considerable reasonableness the foolish fables that are otherwise held in high esteem among the Jews in general, though no Jew readily follows him in this.

Abarbanel, however, paid no heed to this, for he, as can be seen from the foregoing, describes the circumstances of the war of Gog and Magog according to his own conceived imagination, as to how things will then unfold; concerning which he also expresses himself at still greater length in his commentary on Ezek 32:18 etc., fol. 197, col. 3, 4, and fol. 198, col. 1: קודם הגאולה אשר קוינה עתידים הנוצרים בני אדם אשר בארצות המערב ורומי ואיטליא ללכה לכבוש את ירושלים ואת כל ארץ ישראל שהוא כולו היום ממלכות מצרים וילכדו את ארץ מצרים ראשונה ראשונה ויחריבו את מצרים ויהרגו המון רב ועם עצום בקרבה וכן יכבשו הרבה מארץ ישראל וכשישמעו שאר האומות מארצות המזרח והצפון שרובם הם היום ישמעאלים אכזריות הנוצרים אשר עשו במצרים ובארץ ישראל ושאר הארצות שילכדו יפחדו וירעדו מפניהם פן יהפשו גם על ארצותם ויעשו בהם כמו שעשו במצרים ועם זה יקנאו קנאה גדולה על היות הנוצרים לוקחים להם העיר ירושלים שגם היא בפני הישמעאלים מקום קדושה ושער השמים ועל זה נאמר בפרשה שזכרתי למעלה והיתה הלהלה בכוש כנפול חלל במצרים וגומר כוש ופוט ולוד וכל הערב ובני ארץ הברית אתם בחרב יפלו שארץ הברית היא ארץ ישראל ופרט אותה לפי שעליה ולכבושה תהיה עליית הנוצרים שמה ומפני זה יתקבצו

העמים ממזרח ומצפון ויבאו על הננוצרים ויערכו אתם מלחמה קרוב לירושלים ויהרגו אלו באלו מכר רבה כי אז יתמו חטאים מן הארץ ותהיה נקמת ה' עליהם והאשוריים שהם היום מדת ישמעאל שהחריבו בית ראשון והגלו עשרת השבטים והננוצרים בני אדום שהחריבו בית שני בהיותם לוחמים ומתקושטים אלו עם אלו למשול על אדמת הקדש יקבלו בהזכרה עונש שמה: that is, before the coming redemption which we await, the Christians, the children of Edom, who dwell in the lands toward the setting of the sun, and in Rome and in (all of) Italy, will go forth to take the city of Jerusalem and the entire land, which today in its entirety belongs to the kingdom of Egypt, and they will conquer the land of Egypt first of all, and lay it waste, and kill therein a great multitude of people; and in like manner they will also subdue much of the land of Israel. When the remaining peoples of the regions toward the rising of the sun and toward the north, who today are for the most part Ishmaelites, shall hear of the cruelty of the Christians which they have committed in Egypt, and in the land of Israel, and in the other lands which they will have taken, they will fear and tremble before them, lest they also overrun their lands and deal with them as they dealt with Egypt. For this reason they will be greatly inflamed with zeal over the Christians' intention to take the city of Jerusalem, for the Ishmaelites likewise regard it as a holy place and the gate of heaven. Therefore it is said in the Parashah which I mentioned above (Ezek 30:4-5): "And there shall be anguish in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt" etc. "Ethiopia, Put, and Lud, and all the mingled people, and also the children of the land of the covenant, shall fall with them by the sword." By the land of the covenant, however, the land of Israel is to be understood, and it is mentioned separately because it is on account of it, and for the purpose of taking it, that the Christians will make their way thither. For this reason the peoples from the east and from the north will gather together and march against the Christians, and engage them in battle near Jerusalem, and both sides will kill great numbers of one another, inasmuch as the sinners shall then be rooted out from the earth and the vengeance of God shall come upon them. And the Assyrians, who today adhere to the Ishmaelite (or Turkish) religion, and who destroyed the first Temple and led the ten tribes away into captivity, as well as the Christians, the children of Edom, who laid waste the second Temple, when they fight and contend with one another for dominion over the holy land, shall receive therein their punishment for what they did there in former times; and in the place where they committed their wickedness, there shall the judgment (and the punishment) be executed. Concerning this war, and the cause thereof as indicated, as well as the vengeance of God which is thereby to be visited upon the Christians and Ishmaelites, one may also consult the aforementioned Abarbanel's commentary on Isa 34, fol. 53, col. 1, and his book Majene jeschúa, fol. 76, col. 1, 2, 3, 4, and the book Maschmía jeschúa, fol. 17, col. 3, and fol.

43, col. 1, 2, 3, 4; in which last place, in the fourth column, it is stated that the Christians who dwell in Abyssinia or Ethiopia will also come to the aid of the European Christians in taking the promised land.

When the Christians and Turks shall march against one another and fight in the manner described, the Jews will also gather together with the Messiah, the son of Joseph; concerning which, in the aforementioned book Maschmía jeschúa fol. 53, col. 3., it is written as follows: כְּאֶשֶׁר יִתְקַבְּצוּ בְּנֵי אֲדוֹם וְיִשְׁמַעְאֵל אֵלָיו עַל אֱלֹהֵי לְמַלְחָמָה יִתְקַבְּצוּ גַם-כֶּן בְּנֵי יְחוּדָה וּבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל יַחַד וְשָׂמוּ לָהֶם רֹאשׁ אֶחָד שֶׁהוּא מָשִׁיחַ בֶּן מִתּוֹךְ אוֹתָהּ נִקְמָה יִתְגַּלֶּה הַמָּשִׁיחַ וּמוֹרָה יִשְׂרָאֵל יִקְבְּצוּ וַיְהִי: That is: When the children of Edom and the Ishmaelites shall have gathered against one another for war, the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall likewise gather together, and shall set over themselves one head, who will be the Messiah the son of Joseph, etc. And in the book Májene jeschúa, it is read at fol. 76, col. 2.: מִתּוֹךְ אוֹתָהּ נִקְמָה יִתְגַּלֶּה הַמָּשִׁיחַ וּמוֹרָה יִשְׂרָאֵל יִקְבְּצוּ וַיְהִי: That is: In the midst of that vengeance (of which mention is made in the preceding passage, which God is to visit upon the Christians and Turks), the Messiah will be revealed, and (God,) who scattered the Israelites, will gather them again, and they shall be blessed.

Regarding the places from which the Jews will gather and assemble, the following is taught in the booklet Mikvéh Jisraél, fol. 46, col. 1. 2., in the 13th chapter, numero 51: ועוד אמר הנביא ישעיה מ"ג פסוק ה' ו' 'מנאולה העתידה אל תירא: כי אתך אני ממזרח אביא וזרעך וממערב אקבצך אמר לצפון תני ולתימן אל תכלאי הביאי בני מרחוק ובנותי מקצה הארץ. וזהו מר' פרס ואינדיא סינ"א שהם במזרח ארץ הקדושה. קדר או או"יאה שכ"וטיא בצפון ארץ ישראל. חנ"סיה היא בדרומה של ארץ ישראל. ערא"פא היא במערב ארץ ישראל. הביאי בני מרחוק היא אמר"יקא או וועסטאין"דיא ובשני פסוקים האלו: that is, the Prophet Esaias speaks further of the future redemption in Isa 43:5-6: "Fear not, for I am with thee. I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west; and I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back. Bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth." By this is understood Media, Persia, India, Sina, which lie to the east of the holy land. Kedar or Asia and Scythia, which lie to the north of the land of Israel. Abyssinia, which lies to the south of the land of Israel. Europe, which lies to the west of the land of Israel. The words "Bring my sons from far" signify America or West Indies; and in these two verses he shows quite plainly the places into which the tribes are scattered. And fol. 48, col. 2, as well as fol. 49, col. 1, in the 15th chapter, numero 57, the following is read there: ואלה השבטים יתקבצו מארבע חלקי העולם: יסעו אל שתי המדינות אשור ומצרים שהם קרובות לארץ הקדושה ומשם יוכלו לבוא לארץ אבותם בזמן מועט. ומאלו שתי הארצות נבא ישעיה כ"ז פסוק י"ג והיה ביום ההוא יתקע בשופר גדול ובאו האובדים בארץ אשור והנדחים בארץ מצרים. והשתחוו לה' בהר הקדש בירושלים. ר"ל כמו שעושים במלחמה שתוקעין בשופר להקהיל את המצנה כן יהיה הדבר הזה. ומה שאמר האובדים הם המפוזרים בכל חלק אסי'אר יבאו לארץ אשור. והנדחים הם שבחלק המע'ריקא יבאו דרך הים האמצעי לאלכסנד'ריא של מצרים. וכן אותם שבאפר'יקא וביום ההוא יהיה נהר הנילוס חרב ויבש וגם הנהר עפר'אטש כ'מש ישעיה י"א פסוק ט"ז ו'החרים ה' את לשון ים מצרים וגו' והיתה מסלה וגו'. ובעבור שאותן שבאמר'יקא יתקבצו אשונה אמר ישעיה ס' פסוק ט' כ' ל'י איים יקוו ואניות הרשיש בראשונה להביא בנין מרחוק כספם וזהבם אתם לשם ה' אלהיך ולקדוש ישראל כי פארך. ומאלו שתי הארצות ה'נל יבאו that is, those same ten tribes will be gathered from the four parts of the world and will travel to the two lands of Assyria and Egypt, which are near the holy land, from where they will be able to come to the land of their fathers in a short time. Concerning these two lands, Esaías prophesied in Isa 27:13: "And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great trumpet shall be blown; and those who were lost shall come into the land of Assyria, and those who were driven out into the land of Egypt, and shall worship the Lord on the holy mountain at Jerusalem." That is, just as is done in war, when a trumpet is blown to assemble the camp, so shall this thing also come to pass at that time. And when he makes mention of the lost, those are to be understood thereby who are scattered in the part of the world called Asia, who will come into the land of Assyria. By the driven out, however, are meant those who are in the part of the world called America, who will come through the Mediterranean Sea to Alexandria in Egypt; and likewise those who are in Africa are to be understood thereby. At that same time the river Nile, as well as the river Euphrates, will dry up, as Esaías said in Isa 11:15-16: "And the Lord will utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea, etc. And there shall be a highway, etc." And because those who are in America will be the first to gather, Esaías said in Isa 60:9: "Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of the sea first, to bring thy children from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because He hath glorified thee." And from these two aforementioned lands they will come swiftly and in great haste to worship on the mountain of the Lord at Jerusalem, etc.

Concerning the drying up of the rivers Nilus and Euphrates, the following is also reported in the aforementioned booklet Mikveh Yisra'el, fol. 45, col. i. 2., in the 13th chapter, numero 49: ועל הגאולה העתידה אמר השם יתברך כאשר עשה להם: נסים על ים האדום בעלותם ממצרים כן יעשה להם נסים על נהר נילוס שילכו בו ביבשה והנהר פרה יחלק לשבעה חלקים כדי שילכו בו שבעה גליות אשור מצרים פתרום כוש עילים שנער חמת אי נגד שבעה שבטים שבאותן מדינות שכל אחד יהיה לו דרך בפני עצמו שנאמר והחרימה 'את לשון ים מצרים והניף ידו על הנהר בעים רוחו והכהו לשבעה נחלים: that is, concerning the future redemption (of the Jews), the blessed God has said that, just as He worked wonders for them in the Red Sea when they went out of Egypt, so also He would work wonders for them in the river Nilus, so that they shall pass through it on dry ground; and the river Euphrates shall be divided into seven parts, so that the seven scattered companies in Assyria, Egypt, Pathros, the land of the Moors, Elam, Shinar, and Hamath may pass through it. Or this is said with regard to the seven tribes who are in those lands, since each one will have a separate path, as it is said (Isa 11:15): "And the Lord will lay the stream of the Egyptian Sea under a ban, and will lift up His hand over the river with His mighty wind, and will smite it into seven streams, so that they can pass through it with shoes"; just as it befell the Israelites when they went out of the land of Egypt.

Where, however, this Messiah will first make himself seen is indicated in the Jalkut chadäsch, fol. 142, col. 4, numero 43, under the title Maschiach, from the Sobar, in these words: משיח יתגלה תחילה בגליל כי שם התחיל הגלות that is, the Messiah will first reveal himself in Galilee, because the captivity began there first. So also in the book Pesikta sotārta, fol. 58, col. 1, 2, on the words of Obad 1:17, "But upon Mount Zion there shall be deliverance, and there shall be the sanctuary," it is read thus: מלמד שהיו ישראל מקובצין בגליל העליון ויצפה עליהם שם משיח בן יוסף מתוך הגליל והם עולים משם וכל ישראל עמו לירושלים לקיים מה שנאמר ובני נכשלו פריצי עמך ינשאו להעמיד חזון ונכשלו that is, this teaches us that the Israelites will be gathered in upper Galilee, and there the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, will lie in wait for them (and await them) in the midst of Galilee; and from there he will proceed with all Israel to Jerusalem, in order to confirm that which is said (Dan 11:14): "And also the robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall fall."

This Messiah, the Son of Joseph, is supposed to be the Antichrist, concerning which Abarbanel writes in his book Maschmia jeschua, fol. 32, col. 3, as follows: אני כבר הודעתוך בספר מעיני הישועה שהאנטיקריישטו אשר אמרו הוא משיח That is: I have already shown you in the book Majene jeschua that the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, whom we expect to come at the beginning of the redemption, is the Antichrist of whom they (namely the Christians) make mention. He is, however, supposed to wage war against the nations, namely the Christians, and to perish in the battle, concerning which the following is read in the book Majene jeschua, fol. 76, col. 1: קבלו חז"ל שבראשונה יגלה משיח בן אפרים וילחם עם האומות הבאים לירושלים ויהרג That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, have learned through tradition or oral teaching that the Messiah, the Son of Ephraim, will first reveal himself and wage war against the nations that will march against Jerusalem, but will perish in the battle. And in the book Maschmia jeschua, fol. 74, col. 1, the following is taught concerning him: 'בראשונה וימות: That is: He will be the head and the prince of the army among the people of the Lord, but will perish in that same mighty war. In the little book Mikveh Jifrael, fol. 48, col. 1, 2, number 56, the following is also written on this matter: יוסף יהרג במלחמת גוג ומגוג ואחר כך יעמוד בתחיית המתים לקבל שכרו וכבודו. ולא יהיה מלך רק שני למלך בן דוד כמו שהיה יוסף במצרים כי המלכות של בית ישראל נפלה מזמן הושע בן אלה והוא היה המלך האחרון של עשרת השבטים ועוד לא יוסיפו לקום למלכותם. כמו שנאמר עמוס ה' פסוק ב' 'נפלה ולא תוסיף קום בתולת ישראל. רק מלך אחד יהיה על כל ישראל ויהודה והוא משיח בן דוד המלך That is: The Messiah, the Son of Joseph, will be slain in the war of Gog and Magog, but will thereafter rise at the resurrection of the dead to receive his reward and his honor. He will, however, not be a king, but rather the first after the king, the Son of David, just as Joseph was in Egypt; for the kingdom of the house of Israel has fallen since the time of Hosea the son of Ela, who was the last king of the ten tribes, and they will not return to their kingdom again, just as it is said in Amos 5:2: The virgin Israel has fallen, so that she will not rise again. Rather, there will be one king over all Israel and Judah, namely the pious king, the Messiah the Son of David, as is stated in Ezek 37:24: And my servant David shall be king over them. Furthermore, in the immediately preceding Chapter 13, page 706, more has been reported concerning the death of this Messiah, drawn from the book Afkath róchel, in the description of the seventh sign of the coming of the Messiah.

The reason for his death, however, is attributed in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 141, col. 4. numero 21. under the title Maschiach, from the fourth part of the book Afara maamaróth, cap. 15. fol. 41, col. 1., to the sin of Jerobeam, who erected the golden calves at Bethel and Dan, as can be seen in 1 Kgs 12:28-29, and it is written there concerning this as follows: משיח בן יוסף שידקר בחרב של : That is: the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, will be pierced (and slain) with the sword of Gog and Magog on account of the sin of Jerobeam the son of Nebat.

He must therefore, according to such foolish opinion, suffer on account of Jerobeam without doubt, because he is supposed to descend from his lineage, as was mentioned in the aforementioned preceding Chapter 13, pagina 723. On the other hand, in the book Maschmía jeschúa, fol. 74, col. 1., concerning the words of Zech 12:8, "The weakest among them at that time shall be like David," the following is read concerning the Messiah the Son of Joseph: באר הנביא שלא תהיה מיתתו על חטא כי הנה אותו הנכשל בהם ביום ההוא יהיה הישלמות כדוד שהיה איש ירא את השם במצוותיו חפץ מאד, That is: the Prophet explains hereby that he will not die on account of a sin, for the weakest shall, on that same day, be equal to David in perfection, who was a God-fearing man and took great delight in God's commandments.

This Messiah is also said to be greatly mourned by all Jews after his death, concerning which the following, among other things, is found in the aforementioned book Maschmía jeschúa fol. 74, col. 1.: היות שיהיה המשיח ההוא 1.: מושבט אפרים שהוא מושבט יוסף הנה יגדל המספד בירושלים כמספד הדרמון שהיה מספד גדול ידוע אצלם That is: Although this Messiah will be of the tribe of Ephraim, namely from the tribe of Joseph, the mourning over him in Jerusalem will nonetheless be great, like the mourning at Hadadrimmon (of which Zech 12:11 is to be read), which was a great mourning well known at that time. And the words of Zech 12:10, "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him as one mourns for an only child," are likewise expounded there with reference to such a Messiah, just as they are also explained of him by Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, Rabbi David Kimchi, and Aben Ezra in their Commentarii thereon, as well as in the Talmudic Tractate Súcca, fol. 52, col. 1.

On account of this death, God is said to become exceedingly wrathful against all peoples, as may be seen from the aforementioned book Maschmía jeschúa fol. 74, col. 1., where the following is read: כאשר ימות משיח בן יוסף במלחמה יחרה אף השם וקנאדו להשמיד את כל הגוים הבאים על ירושלים כי מפני השלם ההוא יכבד עוונם וגו' That is: after the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, shall have died in the war, the wrath and the zeal of God will be kindled, so that He will destroy all the heathen who have marched against Jerusalem, for their sin and their punishment will, on account of that perfect one, become so much the heavier. And in the 4th column of the same place, concerning the words of Zech 13:7, "Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man who is my nearest," the following is written: אמר רועי וגבר עמיתי על על משיח בן יוסף ולפי שיהרג במלחמת האומות כמו שזכר למעלה לכן ישנן השם ברק חרבו על האומות לנקום נקמתו. ועל זה אמר חרב עורי על רועי ועל גבר עמיתי כאלו קורא השם את החרב ואת הנקמה שתעורר על האויבים בסבת משיח בן יוסף שהרגו שהיה רועה צאן השם והיה כפי צדקתו ושלמותו גבר עמיתו וכיון שהאומות הרגו את הרועה תבא חרב ה' והכה את הרועה וגו' וכל רועה ורועה מתאומות ומלכיהם כי על הריגת רועה ישראל יתגבר כל רועה מאויביהם That is: the words "against my shepherd, and the man who is my nearest" are spoken of the Messiah, the Son of Joseph; and because he will be slain in the war of the peoples, as has been mentioned above, God will therefore whet the blade of His sword against the peoples in order to take vengeance upon them. For this reason it is said, "Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man who is my nearest," just as if God were calling out to the sword and to vengeance, that the sword should arise against the enemies on account of the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, whom they have slain, who was a shepherd of the sheep of the Lord, and who, according to his righteousness and perfection, was the man nearest to Him. And after the peoples shall have slain the shepherd, the sword of the Lord will come and strike the shepherd, that is, every single shepherd from among the peoples and their kings; for on account of the slaying of the shepherd of the Israelites, all the shepherds of their enemies will be slain and the sheep scattered, since when the shepherds die, no people that is under them can endure.

After his death, the Messiah, the Son of David, shall come, continue the war, and overcome the enemies. Therefore it is written in the Jalkut chadrasch, fol. 141, col. 4. numero 22. under the title Maschiach as follows: אחר שידקר יונה : שהוא משיח בן יוסף יבא משיח בן דוד that is, When Jonas, who is the Messiah, the Son of Joseph, shall have been slain, then the Messiah, the Son of David, will come. So also in the book Májene jeschúa fol. 76, col. 1. it is read as follows: בראשונה יגלה משיח בן אפרים וילחם עם האומות הבאים לירושלים ויהרג במלחמה ואחריו יקום משיח בן דוד והוא ימית האויבים וארמילוס שר הלוחמים לחיילות הנוצרים כמו שגוג : that is, First the Messiah, the Son of Ephraim, will be revealed, and will fight against the nations that march against Jerusalem, and will be slain in the war. After him the Messiah, the Son of David, will arise and destroy the enemies together with Armillo (who will be the prince of the warring armies of the Christians, just as Gog will be the head and prince of the Ishmaelite armies).

What an enormous multitude of people, however, is to be killed on account of this Messiah and otherwise, may be seen from the book Maschmía jeschúa fol. 74, col. 4., where, concerning the words of Zech 13:8, "And in the whole land, says the Lord, two parts shall be cut off and perish; but the third part shall remain therein," it is written that they must be understood as follows: שמכלל האומות אשר בכל הארץ שני שלישים מהם יכרתו ויגועו במלחמה ובדבר והשלישית ר"ל : that is, that among all the peoples who are upon the whole earth, two thirds shall be exterminated and perish through war and pestilence, but the remaining third part shall survive.

At that time, the nations of the world shall be made to drink from four cups of terror or horror, concerning which the following is written in Rabbi Bechaj's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 50, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajéschef: תמצא בפרשה ד' פעמים כוס כנגד ארבעה כוסות של פסח וכנגדם עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להשקות לאומות העולם ארבע כוסות של פורענות שנאמר קח את כוס היין החמה הזאת מידי. וכתוב כוס זהב בבל ביד יי'. וכתוב כי כוס ביד יי' ויין חמר מלא מסך. וכתוב : that is, you find in this Parascha (Vajéschef, namely Exod 40:11, 13) the word "cup" four times, in reference to the four cups of the Passover feast (which are drunk at the Passover feast, concerning which information was provided above in the 2nd chapter of this second part, pagina 173 and 174), and corresponding to these, the Holy Blessed God will in the future make the nations of the world drink from four cups of punishment (or vengeance); for it is said (Jer 25:15): "Take this cup, which is full of wine of fierce wrath, from my hand." And it is written (Jer 51:7): "Babylon is like a golden cup in the hand of the Lord." And it is written (Ps 75:9): "For the Lord has a cup in His hand, poured full of strong (or turbid) wine." So too it is written (Ps 11:6): "He will rain down upon the wicked lightning, fire, and brimstone, and a storm shall become their portion of their cup." Concerning this, one may also consult Berefchith rábba, fol. 80, col. 1, in the 88th Parascha, and in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 100, col. 2, numero 45, under the title Jamim tofim, as well as in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol. 113, col. 3. The words of Gen 49:11 are also translated in the Targum Jeruschálmi as follows: מה יאי הוא מלכא משיחא דעתיד למיקם מדבית יהודה יהודה אמר חרצוהי ונפיק לקרבא לקביל שנאוי ומתקטלין מלכין עם שלטונין מסמק נהריא מדם קטיליהון ויחזור גולמותיה מן תרב גבריהון לבושויה מענגנין באדמא: that is, how beautiful is the King Messias, who will come forth from the house of Juda. He will gird His loins and march out to war against His enemies; and kings and rulers shall be slain. He will dye the rivers red with the blood of those He has slain, and make His cloak white with the fat of their warriors. His garments shall be sprinkled with blood.

How many people shall perish at that time is also to be seen in the aforementioned book Maschmia jeschúa, fol. 49 col. 1, and the following is read there in the second and third column concerning Ezek 39:9-13: זכר שיהיה רבוי האומות כל כך במלחמה ההיא וכמות כלי מלחמתם כל כך עצום ומופלג עד שיצאו יושבי ערי ישראל מעריהם אל השדה אשר תהיה שמה המלחמה לקחת חניה וחצים ולהדליק בהם אש האש במקום עצים והוא אמרו ובערו והשיקו בנשק ומגן וצנה בקשת ובחצים ובערו בהם אש שבע שנים באופן שלא יצטרכו לחטוב עצים מן השדה לפי שבאותם כלי נשק יבערו אש ועם זה ישללו את שולליהם שהם כלי האומות ההמה ששלו את ישראל ובזזו אותם בחרבנם ובגלותם יבזזו ישראל עתה אותם ובזה יתעשרו עושר רב ומפני שירבו חללי ה' במלחמה ההיא ויטמאו את הארץ ויעפשו את אוירה לכן יעד יתעלה שיתן לגוג שם קבר בישראל ר"ל שיתן להם שם מקום קבר ואין ענינו שיקברו כל אחד ואחד מהם ולפי כבודו כי אם שיעשו חפירה אחת וישליכם שמה כפגור מובס ויכסום בעפר כדי לטהר את הארץ. ולפי שתהיה המלחמה הזאת בין ימים להר צבי קדש כמו שנזכר בספר דניאל לכן אמר שתהיה קבורתם בגיא העוברים קדמת הים רוצה לומר בגיא העוברים בו ההולכים לים המזרחי אשר בארץ ישראל והיתה הקבורה הזאת לא לכבודם כי אם לפי שחוסמת היא את העוברים רוצה לומר כי מפני דראון החללים הרבים ובאשם היו העוברים שמה חוסמים וסוגרים אפיהם מהריח הרע ולכן נתנו לקבורה ויקברם בית ישראל לא לכבודם אלא לטהר את הארץ ולרבויה החללים והמור ענין קבורתם יכוננו אליה המון העם שבעה חדשים שיתעסקו בקבורה הזאת כל עם הארץ וגומר: that is, he (namely the prophet) reports that in that same war there shall be so great a number of peoples, and so abundant and extraordinary a quantity of their weapons of war, that the inhabitants of the cities of Israel shall go out from their cities into the field where the war shall have taken place, to collect spears and arrows in place of wood, with which to kindle fire; and this is what he says (v. 9): "And they shall kindle and burn the weapons, shields and bucklers, bows and arrows, handstaves and spears; seven years long shall they burn them." In such a manner that they shall have no need to hew wood from the field, since they shall make fire with those same weapons of war. Beyond this, the Israelites shall also plunder all those peoples who had previously plundered and robbed the Israelites in their ruined condition and in their captivity, and they shall thereby become rich. Since also very many from the armies shall be slain in that same war, who shall defile the earth and make the air putrid (and stinking), for this reason the praised God has here (v. 11) promised that He would give Gog a grave there, in the land of Israel, that is, that He would give them a place of burial there; which is not to be understood as meaning that each one shall be buried individually and according to his honor, but rather that a pit shall be dug and the slain cast therein as a trampled corpse, and covered over with earth, so that the land may be cleansed. Since also this war shall take place between the seas and the mountain of the glorious holy place, as is reported in the book of Daniel (Dan 11:45), for this reason he (namely the prophet Ezekiel in the cited 39th chapter, v. 11) says that their burial shall be in the valley through which one passes toward the sea, toward the rising of the sun, that is, in the valley through which those pass who go toward the sea that lies toward the rising of the sun in the land of Israel. And this burial shall not take place in their honor, but because it shall stop up the noses of those passing through, that is, because those traveling through, on account of the disgust and stench of the many slain, shall stop up their noses against the foul odor; for this reason the Israelites shall bury them, not in their honor, but to cleanse the land and on account of the multitude of the slain. Their burial, however, shall last seven months, and all the people of the land shall be occupied with it, etc. These are the words from the book Maschmia jeschúa. Now if the inhabitants of the land of Israel shall have wood enough to burn for seven years from the weapons of the slain peoples, and are to spend seven whole months with the burial of the dead, then surely an innumerable multitude of people must perish in such a war.

Indeed, one finds in several Rabbinical books that at the time of the Messiah all the nations of the world shall be slain, and the Jews alone shall remain; and it is written in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 179, col. 3, in the Parascha Balak, on the words Num 23:9, הֵן־יָם לְבֶדֶד יֵשְׁבֹן (Behold, this people shall dwell alone), that Balaam thereby meant to say: אִי

אפשר לי לבוא כנגדם לא מצד ראשיתם ולא מצד אחריתם לפי שהם עתידין שינחלו העולם
 That is: It is not possible for me to go against them (namely the Israelites), neither with regard to their beginning nor with regard to their end, for they shall in the future, in the last days, inherit the world, and all nations shall perish, but they alone shall endure. So also in Bammidbar rabba, fol. 172, col. 4, and fol. 173, col. 1, in the 2nd Parascha, the following is read: בעולם הזה הם משולים לעפר לימות המשיח הם משולים לחול הים בורעך כל גויי הארץ. מה דרכו של חול מקהה שיני כל האומות: כך ישראל לימות המשיח מכלין כל האומות
 That is: If there were no Israelites, the world could not endure, as it is said (Gen 22:18): In your seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. In this world they are compared to dust, but in the days of the Messiah they shall be compared to the sand of the sea. Just as sand is accustomed to blunting teeth, so shall the Israelites in the days of the Messiah exterminate all nations. Something similar is also to be found in the book Pesikta rabbetha, fol. 17, col. 3. Beyond this, the following is also found in the old Nizzachon, pages 255 and 256: זאת לפי שאין הקב"ה נפרע מאומה עד שתתמלא סאתה דכתיב בסאסאה בשלחה תריבנה וכאמר לאברהם ודור רביעי ישובו הנה כי לא שלם עון האמורי עד הנה ואינו רוצה לכלה עד שתמלא סאתו. ולכך לא ארך הקץ כי אם ת' שנה ביבתוך אותו זמן נתמלא סאתם על שתי אומות על מצרים ועל אמוריים ונתחייבו כליה. ומאד נשתהו למלאות שהרי התחיל מדור הפלגה עד קץ בבל. וגם גאולה בכל לא היתה רמה לפיכך לא ארך הקץ כי אם ע' שנים. אבל קץ זה זהו להחריב ולהשמיד ולהרוג ולאבד את כל האומות הם ושריהם של מעלה ואלהיהם כדכתיב יפקוד יי' על צבא מרום במרום ועל מלכי האדמה באדמה. וגם ירמיהו אמר אל תירא עבדי יעקב נאום יי' וגו' כי אעשה כלה בכל הגוים אשר הפיצותך שם אך אותך לא אעשה כלה
 That is: The heretics (namely the Christians) plague us and say that the appointed term (and the time in which we hope to be delivered from our present captivity) is being deferred longer than the other terms (which in former times, during the Egyptian and Babylonian captivities, were deferred); but there is no cause for wonder at this, for the holy blessed God punishes no people until its measure is full, as it is said (Isa 27:8): When you sent him away, you contended with him with measure. Thus He also said to Abraham (Gen 15:16): But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet fully complete, and He does not wish to destroy them until their measure is full. For this reason the term (or the end) was deferred no longer than four hundred years, for during that time the measure of two peoples, namely the Egyptians and the Amorites, was filled, so that they deserved to be exterminated. It took a long time, however, before they filled that measure, for behold, it began from the generation of the division (that is, the Babylonian confusion) and lasted until the end (or the destruction) of Babel. Likewise the deliverance from Babel was not so glorious; therefore the end was deferred no longer than seventy years. But this end (of the present captivity) is directed toward the destruction, extermination, slaying, and annihilation of all nations, together with their ruling princes above (that is, the devils who are supposed to govern them, as was shown in detail above in the 18th chapter of the first part) and their gods, as it is written (Isa 24:21): (At that time) the Lord shall punish the host on high in the heights, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. So also Jeremiah (Jer 30:10-11) said: Fear not, my servant Jacob, says the Lord, etc., for I will make a full end of all the nations among which I have scattered you, but of you I will not make a full end. Here you see that the holy blessed God will exterminate all nations, with the exception of the Israelites, etc.

Although this is found in the aforementioned manner in the cited books, the opposite is also taught in those same books, and it is read therein that many peoples will accept the Jewish faith at the time of the Messiah and will submit themselves to it, as will be seen from what follows.

But to return to the victorious arms of the Messiah: he is supposed to conquer the entire world and bring it under his power. For this reason, the words of Dan 7:13-14, "Behold, there came one in the clouds of heaven like a son of man, who reached unto the Ancient of Days, before whom he was brought; and to him was given power and royal dignity, so that all tribes, peoples, and tongues should serve him," are interpreted by the Rabbis as referring to their futilely awaited Messiah yet to come. For Rabbi Salomon Jarchi writes thus in his Commentary on this passage: כִּבְר אֱנִישׁ אֲתִי הוּא מֶלֶךְ, that is, the words "there came one like a son of man" signify the King Messiah. With this, Aben Esra and Rabbi Saadias also agree in their expositions; for the former teaches concerning this passage, הוּא הַמְּשִׁיחַ, that is, "This is the Messiah," while the latter states: זֶהוּ מְשִׁיחַ צְדִיקָנוּ, that is, "This is the Messiah who is our righteousness." Likewise, in the Sobar, at column 338 of the Sulzbach printing, in the Parascha Toledoth, the following is read concerning the aforementioned words of Daniel: דָּא מַלְכָּא מְשַׁחִיא, that is, "This is the King Messiah." It is indeed true that the Messiah is to be understood by this passage; but that he is yet to come, and is to establish a worldly government and conquer all the peoples of the world, this is a great and gross Jewish error.

In addition to the above, the Jews also wish to maintain that the Messiah will reign bodily over the entire world and will make all nations subject to him. And in Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's commentary on the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 120, col. 1. of the Talmud printed at Amsterdam, the following is read on this subject: ימות המשיח הוא זמן שתשוב המלכות לישראל ויחזרו לארץ ישראל ויהיה אותו המלך גדול מאד ובית מלכותו בציון יגדל שמו וזכרו יהיה מלא הגוים יותר מן המלך שלמה וישלמי אותו כל האומות ויעבדוהו לצדקו הגדול ולנפלאותיו שיהיו על ידו וכל מי שיקום עליו יאבדהו השם יתעלה וימסור אותו בידו וכל פסוקי המקרא מעידין על הצלחתו והצלחתנו עמו ולא ישתנה במציאות שום דבר ממה שהוא עתה אלא שהמלכות תחזור לישראל וזהו לשון חכמים אין בין העולם הזה לימות המשיח that is, the days of the Messiah are a time in which the kingdom (or the royal government) will return again to the Israelites, and they will return again to the land of Israel. That same king will also be very great, and the house of his reign will be in Zion. His name and renown will be great, and his memory will be among all nations, and indeed more so than was the case with King Solomon. All nations will also make peace with him and serve him, on account of his great righteousness and the wonders that will be performed through him. But whoever sets himself against him, the praised God will destroy and deliver into his hand. All the verses of Scripture likewise bear witness to his blessedness and to our prosperous condition with him; and nothing in the world will be any different from how it is at present, except that the kingdom will return again to the Israelites. And this is what our sages say (in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 99, col. 1.), that between this present time and the time of the Messiah there is no difference, except that the kingdoms (of the nations) will then be made subject.

The Jews seek to prove this secular dominion of the Messiah from the fact that it is written in Zech 9:9-10: "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee; just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass," etc. "And he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth." For this reason Rabbi David Kimchi writes in his commentary thereon: הנה ימשול בכל העולם, that is, "Behold, he (namely the Messiah) shall rule over the entire world," which is also to be found in the book Maschia jeschúa, fol. 72, col. 2. However, these words are not to be understood as referring to a temporal but rather to a spiritual dominion, which is clearly evident from the fact that the Messiah is called עני, ani, that is, poor. For if he were to be such a great secular king as the Jews imagine him to be, he could not be called poor. He is likewise described in the prophet Isaiah, in chapter 53, v. 3, as poor and wretched, and it is said of him: "He was the most despised and rejected among men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. He was so despised that men hid their faces from him, and we esteemed him not." Of no secular king, however, who is to rule over the entire globe, can it be said that he will be the most despised and the most wretched. But should the Jews wish to object that the cited words of Isaiah do not treat of the Messiah but of the Israelites, as Rabbi David Kimchi indeed writes in his commentary on the words of Isa 52:13, "Behold, my servant shall deal wisely," or "shall prosper," etc., to which chapter 53 is attached, as follows: הפרשה הזאת באמרה על גלות ישראל וקרא אותו עבדי כמו שאמר ואתה ישראל עבדי יעקב אשר בחרתי, that is, "This Parashah (or this passage) is spoken concerning the captivity of Israel, and (God) has called Israel His servant, just as He said (Isa 41:8): 'But thou, Israel, my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen'"; in which manner Rabbi Solomon Jarchi and Aben Ezra likewise expound the said words: if, I say, the Jews wish to raise this objection, the answer to be given them is that the ancient Jews, as was fitting, expounded those same words as referring to the Messiah, which Aben Ezra himself acknowledges in his commentary thereon, when he writes as follows: רבים פירשוהו על משיח בעבור שאמרו קדמונינו ז"ל כי ביום שחרב בית המקדש נולד משיח והוא אסור בזיקים, that is, "Many have expounded these words as referring to the Messiah, because our ancients, of blessed memory, have said that on the very day on which the Temple was destroyed, the Messiah was born and was bound in chains." In like manner Abarbanel expresses himself in his commentary thereon, fol. 78, col. 1, when he says: יונתן בן עזיאל תרגמה על משיח העתיד לבא וזהו גם כן דעת חכמים ז"ל בהרבה ממדרשותיהם, that is, "Jonathan the son of Uziel translated (this prophecy) as referring to the Messiah who is to come, and this is likewise the opinion of the Sages, of blessed memory, in many of their allegorical expositions." So too is it read in the Yalkut Shimoni on Isaiah, fol. 53, col. 3, no. 338: הנה ישכיל עבדי זה מלך המשיח, that is, "The words 'Behold, my servant shall prosper' signify the Messiah." It is therefore a wanton wickedness that the aforementioned rabbis and the Jews of today wish to expound those same words as referring to the Israelites.

Furthermore, the words of Isa 53:5, "He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our sins, etc.," were interpreted by the ancient Jews as referring to the Messiah; for in Médrasch Ruth rábba fol. 283, col. 2, on the words of Ruth 2:14, "Come here and eat of the bread, and dip your morsel in the vinegar," it is written as follows: מדבר במלך המשיח גשי הלום קרובי למלכות ואכלת, that is, "He speaks of the King Messiah: 'Come here,' you who are my nearest to the kingdom. 'And eat of the bread,' namely the bread of the royal government. (And the words) 'And dip your morsel in the vinegar' signify the chastisements (or punishments), as it is said (Isa 53:5): 'He was wounded for our transgressions.'" The like is also to be found in the Talmudischen Tractate Sanbédrin fol. 98, col. 2, and in the Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 53, col. 3, numero 338.

The Jews also believe that the nations which remain in the world at the time of their Messiah must serve them, since not only is it written in Isa 60:10-11: "Foreigners shall build your walls, and their kings shall serve you, etc. For the nation and kingdom that will not serve you shall perish, and those nations shall be utterly destroyed"; but also because it is read in Isa 49:23: "Kings shall be your foster fathers, and their queens your nursing mothers. They shall bow down to you with their faces to the earth, and lick the dust of your feet." Abarbanel likewise, in his commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, fol. 89, col. 4, on the words of Isa 61:5-6, "Foreigners shall stand and feed your flocks, and strangers shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers. But you shall be called the priests of the Lord; you shall be spoken of as the ministers of our God. You shall eat the wealth of the nations," expresses himself as follows: זכר שגם כן משה אותן ה' לבשר הכנעה האומות לישראל עד שיעמדו זרים ורעו צאנם ונכרים יהיו עובדים שדותיהם וכרמיהם כדי שבני ישראל לא יתעסקו בדבר מהעבודות הגסות רק לעבוד את ה' הנכבד בתורתם ותפלתם ועל זה אמר ואתם כהני השם תקראו כלומר אבל אתם לא תהיו רועי צאן ולא עובדי אדמה כי אם עובדי גבורה כהני השם ומשרתי אל עליון וכן יהיה שמכם וכדי שהיו פנויים לעבודת השם יתברך לכן חיל גוים תאכלו That is: He (namely the prophet) also reports that the Lord anointed him to proclaim to the Israelites that the nations shall be subjected to them, so that foreigners shall stand and feed their flocks, and strangers shall cultivate their fields and vineyards, so that the children of Israel need not perform any coarse labor, but may serve the glorious God with their Law and their prayer alone. Therefore he says: "But you shall be called priests of the Lord," as if he wished to say: you shall neither feed flocks nor till the earth, but shall serve the Most High and be priests of God and ministers of the Highest, and this shall be your name. But so that you may have time for the service of the blessed God, you shall eat the wealth of the nations.

Once again, not all nations are to share in this honor, for in the Jalkut Schimóni on the books of Mosis, fol. 64, col. 1, numero 212, the following is read: פעם אחת הייתי עובר ממקום למקום מצאני זקן אחד אמר: רבי יש אומות העולם לימות המשיח אמרתי לו בני כל גוי וכל ממלכה שענו את ישראל ולחצו אותם רואין בטובתן: 'של ישראל גדורין ושבין לעפרן ושוב אינן חיים לעולם שנאמר רשע רשע יראה וכעס וגו' וכל גוי וכל ממלכה שלא ענו את ישראל ולא לחצו אותם באין והויין אכרים וכורמים לישראל לימות המשיח שנאמר ועמדו זרים ורעו צאנכם ובני נכר אכריכם וכורמיכם ומהם כהני השם הקראו That is: Once I was traveling from one place to another, when an old man met me and said to me: My dear Rabbi, will there also be nations of the world (that is, people outside the Jews) at the time of the Messiah? And I answered him: My son, all nations and kingdoms that have plagued and oppressed the Israelites will see the prosperous condition of the Israelites, and thereafter will return to dust and never come back to life again, as it is said (Ps 112:10): The wicked will see it and be vexed by it, etc. But all nations and kingdoms that have not plagued and tormented the Israelites will come and, at the time of the Messiah, be the farmers and vinedressers of the Israelites, as it is said (Isa 61:5-6): Strangers will stand and tend your flocks, and foreigners will be your farmers and vinedressers. But you shall be called priests of the Lord.

How many servants each Jew will have at the time of the Messiah is read in the Jalkut Shimoni on Isaiah, fol. 56, col. 4. numero 359., in these words: שנו רבותינו בשעה שמלך המשיח בא ועומד על גג בית המקדש והוא משמיע להם לישראל אומר ענוים הגיע זמן גאולתכם ואם אתם מאמינים ראו באורי שזורה עליכם שנאמר קומי אורי כי בא אורך וכבוד יי' עליך זרח. ועליכם בלבד זרח שנאמר כי הנה החשך יכסה ארץ. באותה שעה מבהיק הקב"ה אורו של משיח ושל ישראל והולכים כלם לאורך של מלך המשיח ושל ישראל שנאמר והלכו גוים לאורך ומלכים לנגה זרחך. ובאים ומלחכים עפר מתחת רגליו של מלך המשיח שנאמר ועפר רגליך ילחכו. ובאים כלם ונופלים על פניהם לפני משיח ולפני ישראל ואומרים נהיה לך ולישראל לעבדים וכל אחד מישראל אלפיי ו'ת"ח עבדים יהיו לו שנאמר בימים ההמה אשר יחזיקו עשרה אנשים מכל לשונות הגוים והחזיקו בכנף איש יהודי לאמור נלכה עמכם כי שמענו אלהים עמכם: that is, our Rabbis teach: at the time when the King Messiah comes, he will stand upon the roof of the Temple and call out to the Israelites and say: "You who are humble, the time of your redemption has come; and if you believe it, then behold my light which rises over you," as it is said (Isa 60:1): "Arise, shine, for your light has come, and the glory of the Lord rises over you." It rises, however, over you alone, as it is said (v. 2 of the same): "For behold, darkness covers the earth." At that same time the Holy Blessed God will cause the light of the Messiah and of the Israelites to shine, and all the nations will walk by the light of the Messiah and of the Israelites, as it is said (v. 3 of the same): "And the Gentiles shall walk in your light, and kings by the brightness that rises over you." They will also come and lick the dust beneath the feet of the King Messiah, as it is said (Isa 49:23): "They shall lick the dust of your feet." Likewise they shall all draw near and fall upon their faces before the Messiah and before the Israelites and say: "We will be your servants and the servants of the Israelites." And each Israelite shall have two thousand eight hundred servants, as it is said (Zech 8:23): "In those days ten men from all the languages of the Gentiles shall take hold of a Jew by the hem (or corner of his garment) and say: 'We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.'" This same passage is also to be found in the book Pesikta Rabbetha, fol. 62, col. 3. 4.

How it is proven from the cited words of the Prophet Zechariah that every Jew will have two thousand eight hundred servants is shown by Rabbi Bechai in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 168, col. 2, in the Parascha Schelách lechá, with these words: כל המקיים מצות ציצית זוכה ומשמשין אותו אלפיים ושמונה מאות עבדים שנאמר והיה ביס ההוא והחזיקו עשרה אנשים מכל לשונות הגוים בכנף איש יהודי לאמור נלכה עמכם כי שמענו אלהים עמכם. שבעים אומות הם עשרה אנשים מכל אומה הרי ה"ש בכנף אחד ולארבע כנפור אלפים ושמונה מאור that is, everyone who observes the commandment concerning the fringes (which are called in Hebrew Zizith or Zizis, concerning which one may read in Num 15:39, and which hang at the four corners of a four-cornered garment worn by the Jews, called Talles, and consist of eight white woolen threads at each corner) earns thereby that two thousand eight hundred servants must serve him, as it is said in Zach 8:23: At that time ten men from all the languages of the heathens will seize a Jew by the wing or corner (of his garment) and say, we will go with you, for we hear that God is with you. Now there are seventy peoples, and ten men from each people make seven hundred at one wing or corner; at the four corners, however, (four times as many, namely) two thousand eight hundred. Is this not very cleverly and ingeniously calculated by the rabbis, so that every Jew may learn from it what a magnificent estate he will maintain in the future, when the Messiah comes riding along on his ancient donkey and will make the world subject to him? But since all Christians, as will be demonstrated in what follows, are to be killed, and since they also make up a considerable portion of the seventy peoples according to their many lands and languages, I do not know how the Jews will be able to arrive in this manner at the full number of their servants.

Since now the Messiah will subdue all the peoples of the world, we must also examine how he will keep them in his obedience. In Abarbanel's commentary on the eleventh chapter of the Prophet Esaías, fol. 20, col. 4., the following is read: יעד שיעשו נסים ונפלאות והוא אמרו והכה ארץ בשבט פיו וברוח שפתיו ימית רשע רוצה לומר שכאשר תמרוד ארץ מה במצות מלך המשיח לא יצטרך לאסוף חיל ולהלחם בה כי הוא בשבט פיו יכה אותה מכה רבה מבלי חרב וחנית. ואם איש אחד יחטא ויצטרך כפי הדין להמיתו באחת ממיתות בית דין לא יצטרכו אנשים וכלים לעשותו כי הוא עצמו ברוח שפתיו ימית הרשע ההוא ויענישהו כי בהיותו גוזר על גוי ועל ממלכה או על איש מיוחד שימות תרד אש מן השמים וישרפהו או תבקע האדמה ותבלע אותו או ימיתהו האריה והנחש ושאר הדברים משלוחי ההשגחה כמו שהיה ענין אליהו שאמר תרד אש מן השמים ותאכל אותך ואת חמישיך (That is: the Prophet Esaías) has promised that signs and wonders shall come to pass (from the Messiah), and this is what he means when he says (Isa 11:4): He will strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and slay the wicked with the breath of his mouth; by which he wishes to indicate that when a land sets itself against the commandment of the King Messiah, he will then have no need to assemble an army and wage war against it, but rather that he will strike it mightily with the rod of his mouth, without sword or spear. And when someone shall sin, and it shall be necessary according to the law to put that person to death by one of the deaths by which the courts are accustomed to condemn someone, there will be no need of men and weapons to carry it out, since he himself will put the wicked to death by the spirit of his mouth and punish him. For when he pronounces a sentence of death against a people, or a kingdom, or against a particular individual, fire will fall from heaven and burn him, or the earth will open and swallow him, or a lion, or a serpent, or something else that divine providence sends, will kill him, just as Elijah did, who (as is read in 2 Kgs 1:10) said: So let fire fall from heaven and consume you and your fifty (men). And likewise it is read of Elisha (2 Kgs 2:24): And he cursed them in the name of the Lord, and two bears came out of the forest, etc. In the Midrasch Tillim it is also written at fol. 4, col. 2. on Ps 2 as follows: לעתיד לבוא אומר למלך המשיח: מדינה פלונית מרדה בך והוא אומר יבא גובאי ויהריב אותה שנאמר והכה ארץ בשבט פיו וברוח שפתי ימית רשע. כיון שרואין צרתן רבה הן באין ומשתחווים למלך המשיח שנאמר אפים ארץ ישתחוו לך: That is: In the time to come, one will say to the Messiah, the province such-and-such has risen up in rebellion against you; and he will say, let the locusts come and lay it waste, as it is said (Isa 11:4): He will strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and slay the wicked with the breath of his mouth. When they (namely the rebels) see their great misery, they will come and fall down before the King Messiah, as it is said (Isa 49:23): They will fall before you with their faces to the ground.

In the book Emek hammelech, it is read at fol. 17, col. 3, in the 20th chapter, under the title Schaar olam battobu, that he will have them tormented by devils, in these words: באותו זמן ימלוך המשיח על העליונים ועל התחתונים ורוחין ושדין יצערו האומות על פי בן דוד כענין שלמה אצל חירם מלך צור ששלח אליו שד אחד והורידו לשבעה מדורי גיהנם עד שעשה כצונו והודה לו ואצל מלכת שבא. מכח יראת המשיח יבאו כל האומות ויחזיקו בכנף איש יהודי בזכות הציצית שטבליה וגו' והאומות יהיו בו להיות להם שמירה ממלאכי המשיחית ומהרהורה ומוכרתים להיות עבדים וגם מלכיהם ושריהם יבאו לשמוע דברי רוח הקודש: That is: At that same time the Messiah will reign over the upper and lower (creatures), and the spirits and devils will torment the nations at the command of the Son of David, just as Solomon dealt with Hiram, the king of Tyre, to whom he sent a devil and had him led down into the seven dwellings of hell, until he had done his will and complied with him; and as he dealt with the Queen of Sheba. Through the power of the fear of the Messiah, all the nations will come and seize the wings (of the garments) of the Jews, on account of the merit of the Zizis (that is, the aforementioned white woolen threads) that hang from the Talles (namely, the above-mentioned square garment that the Jews wear), etc. And the nations will seize them (since they protect against the devil), so that they may be preserved from the angels of destruction (namely, the evil spirits), and they will be compelled to be the servants (of the Jews). Likewise, their kings and princes will come to hear the words of the Holy Spirit. Beyond this, in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, fol. 132, col. 3, in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar réschá díser ánpin, the following is read concerning the Messiah: הוא יכניע האומות ויצורה עליהם המחבלים: That is: He will humble the nations and give command to the destroyers and hosts of devastation (that is, the evil spirits) against them, whenever one among them rebels against him, just as King Solomon, upon whom be peace, did, etc.

The Messiah will also have a staff with which he will chastise the nations, concerning which it is written in the Jalkut Shimóni on the words of Ps 110:2, "The Lord will send the staff of your power out of Zion," as follows: והוא המטה: זה מטה של יעקב שנאמר כי במקלי עברתי את הירדן הזה. והוא המטה שהיה ביד יהודה שנאמר ומטך אשר בידך. והוא המטה שהיה ביד משה שנאמר ומטה האלהים בידו. והוא המטה שהיה ביד אהרן שני וישלך אהרן את מטהו. והוא המטה אשר היה ביד דוד שנאמר ויקח מקלו בידו. והוא המטה שהיה ביד כל מלך ומלך עד שחרב בית המקדש ונגנז ועתיד לימסר ביד מלך המשיח ובו עתיד לרדות את האומות דאס איסט /דיעזעס איסט דער שטאב מצוין: That is: This is the staff of Jacob, as it is said (Gen 32:10): "For with my staff I crossed over this Jordan." It is also the staff that Judah held in his hand, as it is said (Gen 38:18): "And your staff that you hold in your hand." It is also the staff that was in the hand of Moses, as it is said (Exod 17:9): "And I will hold the staff of God in my hand." It is also the staff that was in the hand of Aaron, as it is said (Exod 7:10): "And Aaron cast down his staff." It is also the same staff that David held in his hand, as it is said (1 Sam 17:40): "And he took his staff in his hand." And it is likewise the staff that every single king held in his hand, until the Temple was destroyed and the staff was hidden away; and it shall be delivered into the hand of the Messiah, with which he will chastise the nations of the world; therefore it is said (Ps 110:2): "The Lord will send the staff of your power out of Zion." On this subject one may also consult the book Jalkut chadasch, fol. 92, col. 3, número 184, under the heading Jacob. Adam too is said to have possessed this staff, concerning which the following is read in the book Pirke Rabbi Eliezer, in the 40th chapter: המטה שנברא בין השמשות נמסר לאדם הראשון מגן עדן ואדם מסרו לחנוך וחנוך מסרו לנח ונח מסרו לשם ושם מסרו לאברהם ואברהם מסרו ליצחק ויצחק מסרו ליעקב ויעקב הורידו למצרים ומסרו ליוסף בנו וגומר: That is: The staff that was created at twilight was given to the first man out of Paradise. Adam gave it to Enoch, Enoch gave it to Noah, Noah gave it to Shem, Shem gave it to Abraham, Abraham gave it to Isaac, Isaac gave it to Jacob, Jacob took it with him into Egypt and gave it to his son Joseph, etc. Finally, Moses is said to have received it, as was reported above in the 8th chapter of the first part, from pagina 377 to 380. This ancient staff, however, will not suit the old donkey upon which the Messiah is supposed to ride particularly well, for since the stick is so old, it will surely be very brittle and rotten, and will therefore easily break into pieces when the stubborn donkey is struck with it and is to be driven into a gallop.

The teeth of those godless people who have plagued the Jews shall also grow very long out of their mouths at the time of the Messiah, concerning which it is written in the little book Othioth Rabbi Akkiva fol. 23, col. 4. under the letter Schin as follows: שֵׁן זֶה שְׁנִיָּהּ שֶׁל רָשָׁעִים נִטְוֵרִים שְׁעִיד הַקֶּב"ה לִשְׁבֶּרֶן שְׁלֹשׁ פְּעָמִים: אַחַת בְּעוֹלָם הַזֶּה וְאַחַת לַיָּמֹת הַמְּשִׁיחַ וְאַחַת לְעוֹלָם הַבָּא וְגו' וְלֹא עוֹד אֶלָּא שְׁעִיִּדִין שְׁנֵיהֶם שֶׁל אוֹכְלֵיהֶם שֶׁל יִשְׂרָאֵל לַיָּמֹת הַמְּשִׁיחַ לִהְיוֹת יוֹצֵאִין מִפִּיהֶם עֲשָׂרִים וּשְׁתַּיִם אֲמוֹת וְכָל בְּאֵי עוֹלָם רֹאִים וְאוֹמְרִים מַה חָטְאוּ אֵלּוּ שֶׁכֵּךְ יוֹצֵאִים שְׁנֵיהֶם מִפִּיהֶם מְשִׁיבִין וְאוֹמְרִים מִפְּנֵי מַה שְׁאוֹכְלִים מִמּוֹן שֶׁל יִשְׂרָאֵל שֶׁהֵם קְדוּשִׁים לְמָקוֹם כְּתוּרָמָה שֶׁכָּל הָאוֹכֵל מֵהֶם חַיִּיב כְּלִיָּה שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר That is: The letter Schin signifies the Schinnáim, that is, the teeth of the utterly godless, which the holy blessed God will in the future break three times: once in this world, a second time in the days of the Messiah, and a third time in the world to come, etc. Indeed, the teeth of those who devour (that is, plague) the people of Israel shall also grow out of their mouths twenty-two ells long in the days of the Messiah, and all people who come into the world shall see them and say: what have these sinned, that their teeth protrude from their mouths in such a manner? But an answer will be given to them, saying: because they have consumed the goods of the Israelites, who are as holy to God as a heave-offering; for whoever eats thereof is worthy of being cut off, as it is said (Jer 2:3): Israel is holy to the Lord, the firstfruits of His harvest; all who eat of it incur guilt (or sin against themselves): misfortune shall come upon them.

The rabbis also teach that in the future all nations will bring gifts to the Messiah, which shall be accepted from them; from the Christians, however, he will accept none. Concerning this, it is written in Schemoth Rabba fol. 124, col. 3. in the 35th Parascha as follows: כָּל הָאוֹמוֹת עֲתִידִין לְהַבִּיא דוֹרוֹן לַמֶּלֶךְ הַמְּשִׁיחַ: וּמִצָּרִים מִבִּיאָה תַּחֲלִילָה וְכַסְבוֹר שֶׁלֹּא לִקְבֹּל מֵהֶם וְאוֹמֵר לוֹ הַקְדוּשׁ בְּרוּךְ הוּא, אֲכַסְנִיא עֲשׂוּ לִבְנֵי בְּמִצְרַיִם. שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר, יֵאתִיו חֲשֹׁמְנִים מִנִּי מִצְרַיִם כּוֹשׁ תְּרִיץ יָדָיו לְאַלְהֵים מִיד מִקְבֵּל מֵהֶן. נִשְׁאָרוּ כּוֹשׁ קֵל וְחוֹמֵר וּמָה מִצְרַיִם שֶׁשֶּׁעֲבָדוּ בְּהֶן קֵבֵל מֵהֶם אֲנִי שֶׁלֹּא נִשְׁתַּעַבְדְּנוּ בְּהֶן עַל אַחַת כְּמָה וְכְמָה. מִיד כּוֹשׁ תְּרִיץ יָדָיו לְאַלְהֵים, מִיד כָּל הַמַּלְכוּיֹת שׁוֹמְעוֹת וְהֵן מִבִּיאֹת, שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר מִמַּלְכוֹת הָאָרֶץ שִׁירוּ לְאַלְהֵים: וְאַחֵר כֵּךְ מַלְכוֹת אֲדוֹם נוֹשָׂאָה קֵל וְחוֹמֵר בְּעִצְמָהּ וְאוֹמֵר וּמָה הַלֵּלוּ שְׁאִינוֹן אַחֵיהֶם קֵבְלוּ מֵהֶם אֲנִי עַל אַחַת כְּמָה וְכְמָה... וְאַף הַקֶּב"ה מִבְּקֶשָׁה לְהַבִּיא דוֹרוֹן לַמֶּלֶךְ That is: All nations will in the future bring a gift to the King Messiah, and Egypt will be the first to bring one. When he then hesitates as to whether he should accept it, the holy blessed God will say to him: they have given lodging to my children in Egypt, as it is said (Ps 68:32): The princes out of Egypt will come, Ethiopia will stretch out its hands to God; whereupon he will immediately accept it from them. After this, Ethiopia will draw the following conclusion (and say): if he accepted it from the Egyptians, who yet afflicted the Israelites with servitude, how much more will he then accept it from us, who did not make them serve us? Then Ethiopia will stretch out its hands to God (and the Messiah will accept their gifts). Upon this, all kingdoms will immediately hear of it and bring (gifts), as it is said (Ps 68:33): You kingdoms of the earth, sing to God. Thereafter the Edomite kingdom (that is, Christendom) will likewise draw such a conclusion for itself and say: if he accepted gifts from these, who are not even their brothers, how much more will they accept such from us? And it will also want to bring a gift to the King Messiah; but the holy blessed God will say to him (from Ps 68:31): Rebuke the beast that is in the reeds (that is, punish Christendom, which is called the beast in the reeds, as was indicated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, pagina 776 and 777). This same thing is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 118, col. 2. and in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 144, col. 3. numero 92. under the title Maschiach.

In the book Máor hakkáton it stands at fol. 42, col. 2, concerning the words of Dan 2:32, "The head of the image was of fine gold; its breast and arms were of silver; its belly and its sides were of bronze," written thus: זהב זה בבל שנאמר הוא צלמא רישיה דדהב טב. וכסף זו מדי שנאמר הדוהי ודרעוהי די כסף. נחושת זו יון שנאמר מעוהי וירכתיה די נחש. אבל ברזל אין כתוב כאן לא במקרש ולמרך שמכל המלכויות יקבל הק"ב דורון לעתיר לבא חוץ מארם. והרי בבל אף היא החריבה אותו אלא שלא קעקעה that is, the gold signifies Babel (understand: the Babylonian Monarchy), as it is said: "The head of the image was of fine gold." The silver signifies Media, as it is said: "His breast and arms were of silver." The bronze signifies Greece, as it is said: "His belly and his sides were of bronze." Concerning the iron, however, nothing is written here either regarding the Temple or the Tabernacle of the congregation. Why? Because the godless Edom (that is, the Roman Empire) is compared to it, which destroyed the Temple, in order to teach you that the holy and blessed God will in the future accept gifts from all kingdoms (or Monarchies), with the exception of Edom. The Babylonian Monarchy did indeed also destroy the Temple, but it did not brand it with a mark. But what is written concerning it? (In Ps 137, at the 7th verse, one reads of them:) "Who said, lay it bare, (that is, destroy it) even to its foundation." Shortly thereafter, in the said column, follows: אתה מוצא לעתיד לבוא שכל האומות עתידין להביא דורון למלך המשיח ויקבל מהם ואף מלכות ארם מבקשת להביא דורון למלך המשיח א"ל הק"ב גער חית קנה וגו' ויקבל מכל האומות חוץ מארם על שאמרו ערו ערו עד היסוד בה that is, you find that in the future all peoples will bring gifts to King Messiah, and that he will accept them from them. The Edomite kingdom will also seek to bring gifts to King Messiah, but the holy and blessed God will say to it (from Ps 68:31): "Rebuke the beast of the reeds." He will thus accept from all peoples, with the exception of the Edomites, because they said (when the city of Jerusalem was destroyed by the Romans): "Lay it bare even to its foundation."

At that time, all the nations shall also return to the Messiah those gifts which Esau received from Jacob; for in the book Schené luchóth habberíth, fol. 237, col. 1, as also in Beresbíth rábba, fol. 71, col. 2, in the 78th Parascha, it is read thus: כל אותן הדורות שנתן אבינו יעקב לעשו עתידין אמות העולם להחזירן למלך המשיח לעתיד לבוא, That is: The nations of the world will, in the future, return to the King Messiah all those gifts which our father Jacob gave to Esau. On this matter, the book Mattáb jah, fol. 16, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajischlach, may also be consulted. Rabbi David Kimchi interprets the words of Isa 60:17, "Instead of bronze I will bring gold, and instead of iron, silver, etc.," as meaning: אמת בלבם, לשלם להם כפלים וכפלי כפלים ממה שלקחו ממך הם ואבותיהם, That is: I will put it into their hearts (namely, the hearts of the Gentiles) to return to you twofold, indeed doubly twofold, what they and their fathers have taken from you. And in the Chaldean paraphrase, the words of the preceding verse 16 of the cited 60th chapter of Isaiah, "You shall suck the milk of the Gentiles, you shall suck the breasts of kings," are rendered thus: ותתפנקין נכסי עממא ויבבות מלכין דתפנקין, That is: You shall be satisfied with the goods (or the wealth) of the nations, and shall delight yourself with the plunder of kings.

Indeed, the money- and wealth-hungry Jews imagine that at the time of their Messiah they will possess exceedingly great riches, and Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 62, col. 4, in the Parascha Schemóth, concerning the Jews in the following manner: בסוף גלות האחרון, עתידים לירש שבעים אמות, That is: In the end of the last captivity they will inherit the seventy nations. From which it can be seen that all the money and goods which the nations collectively possess in the world at the present time are, according to the foolish imagination of the Jews, to fall to their share. So too in the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai's commentary, fol. 77, col. 1, in the Parascha Bo, the following is read: אין לך כל אחד ואחד מישראל שלא עלו עמו תשעים, חמורים טעונים כסף וזהב, That is: There is not a single one among the Israelites with whom seventy asses laden with silver and gold did not go (out of Egypt). In the book Zeénab ureénab, this is stated at fol. 42, col. 2, at the end of the aforementioned Parascha Bo, concerning the words of Exod 13:13, "Every firstborn of an ass you shall redeem with a sheep," even more explicitly, in these words: "When an ass has a firstborn, you shall redeem it with a sheep. But why was only the firstborn of an ass holy, and not equally that of a horse or of other unclean animals? This question is resolved as follows: The asses helped to carry much money and goods out of Egypt for the Israelites; for every single Jew had ninety asses, which carried silver and gold for the Israelites in the wilderness."

Since now the future redemption of the Jews is supposed to resemble the redemption from Egypt, as will be shown in what follows, every Jew will at that time likewise have to lead with him into the Promised Land just as many asses laden with silver and gold.

In the Talmudic tractate Pesachim, it is read at fol. 119, col. 1 concerning a great treasure that is said to lie in Rome, of which the words read as follows: אמר רב יהודה אמר שמואל כל כסף וזהב שבעולם יוסף לקטו והביאו למצרים שנאמר וילקט יוסף את כל הכסף הנמצא אין לי אלא שבארץ מצרים ושבארץ כנען ובשאר ארצות מנין תלמוד לומר וכל הארץ באו מצרימה וכשעלו ישראל ממצרים העלוהו עמהן שנאמר וינצלו את מצרים. רב אסי אמר עשאוהו כמצודה זו שאין בה דגן אמר רבי שמעון כמצולה שאין בה דגים והיה מונח עד רחבעם בא שישק מלך מצרים ונטלו מרחבעם שנאמר והיה בשנה החמישית למלך רחבעם בא שישק מלך מצרים ויקח את אוצרות בית ה' ואת אוצרות בית המלך. בא זרח מלך כוש ונטלו משישק. בא אסא ונטלו מזרה מלך כוש ושיגרה להדרימון בן טבריון. בא בני עמון ונטלו מהדרימון בן טבריון. בא יהושפט ונטלו מבני עמון והיה מונח עד אחז. בא סנחריב ונטלו מאחז. בא חזקיה ונטלו מסנחריב והיה מונח עד צדקיה. באו כשדיים ונטלוהו מצדקיה. באו פרסיים ונטלוהו מכשדיים. באו יוונים ונטלוהו מפרסיים. באו רומיים ונטלוהו מיוונים. That is: Rabbi Jehuda reports that Samuel said that Joseph gathered all the silver and gold that was in the world and had it brought to Egypt, since it is said (Gen 47:14): "And Joseph gathered all the money that was found in Egypt and in the land of Canaan." But here only the money in Egypt and the land of Canaan is mentioned; from where is it proved that he also gathered the money from the remaining lands? This is proved from the fact that it is read (Gen 41:57): "And all lands came into Egypt." When the Israelites then departed from Egypt, they took it with them, as it is said (Exod 12:36): "And they plundered Egypt." Rabbi Aschaf reported that they made Egypt like a net in which there is no grain (by which birds might be lured). Rabbi Simeon says (they left it, through their plundering) like a deep body of water in which there are no fish. But that same silver and gold was laid aside until the time of Rehabeam, when Sisack, the king of Egypt, came and took it from Rehabeam, as it is said (1 Kgs 14:25-26): "And it came to pass in the fifth year of King Rehabeam that Sisack, the king of Egypt, came and took the treasures of the house of the Lord and the treasures of the house of the king." After this, Serach, the king of the land of the Moors, came and took it from Sisack. Thereafter came (the king) Asa and took it from Serach, the king of the land of the Moors (see 2 Chr 14:13), and sent it to Hadarimmon (which should read Benhadad, as can be seen at 1 Kgs 15:18), the son of Tabrimmon. Thereupon the children of Ammon came and took it from Hadarimmon, the son of Tabrimmon. Subsequently Josaphat came and took it from the children of Ammon, and it was laid aside until the time of Ahas; then King Senacherib came and took it from Ahas. After this, Hiskias came and took it from Senacherib, and it was kept until the time of Zedekia. Then the Chaldeans came and took it from Zedekia. Thereupon the Persians came and took it from the Chaldeans; thereafter the Greeks came and took it from the Persians. Finally the Romans came and took it from the Greeks, and it still lies in Rome. The Jews, however, live in the hope that all the money and goods that are in Christendom will fall to their share at the time of the Messiah; therefore it is read in the Rabboth in Medrasch Kobeleth fol. 312, col. 3 as follows: הממון מהקנס למלכות אדום בעולם הזה משם הוא מתפזר לימות המשיח דכתיב והיה סחרה ואתננה קדש לה: לא יאצר ולא יחסן פי ליושבים לפני יי: והיה סחרה That is: All money and goods are gathered in this world in the Edomite kingdom (namely Christendom), and from there it will be distributed in the times of the Messiah, as it is written (Isa 23:18): "But her (namely Tyre, by which the Jews understand Christendom, as has been demonstrated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, pages 773 and 774) commerce and her harlot's wages shall be holy to the Lord. It shall not be stored up as treasure nor hoarded; but those who dwell before the Lord shall have her merchandise." Since they are to receive all the treasures that are in Christendom, they must also receive the aforementioned great treasure in Rome.

Furthermore, in the aforementioned place of the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 119, col. 2, one reads of a great treasure which is to be distributed among the Jews in the future, and the words there read as follows: אמר רבי חמא בר חנינא שלש מטמוניות הטמין יוסף במצרים אחת נתגלה לקרח ואחת נתגלה לאנטונינוס בן אסירוס ואחת גנוזה לצדיקים לעתיד לבוא עושר שמור לבעליהם לרעתו. אמר רבי שמעון בן לקיש זו עשרו של קרח שנאמר ואת כל היקום אשר ברגליהם. אמר רבי לוי משאוי שלש מאות פרדות לבנות היו מפתחות בית גנזיו של קרח וכולהו אקלידי וקולפי דגלידי That is: Rabbi Chama, the son of Channina, said that Joseph had hidden three treasures in Egypt, and that one was revealed to Korah, another to Antoninus, the son of Averis; the third is reserved for the righteous in the future (of which one reads in Eccl 5:12): "Riches kept to the harm of their owner" (who possesses them). Rabbi Shimon ben Lakish said this signifies the wealth of Korah, as it is said (Deut 11:6): "How the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up along with their households, their tents, and all their possessions that were under their feet" (that is, under their power). Rabbi Levi said there were so many keys to the treasury of Korah as three hundred white mules could carry, and all the keys and locks were made of hides (or leather). The very same is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin fol. 110, col. 1. Here one may well say: if one is going to lie, then one ought to lie properly.

All of this is still not enough; rather, the sea must also cast out for the Jews all the treasures that have fallen into it, and concerning this it is written in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 192, col. 3. in the Parascha Vesóth habberachá, from the little book Tuf baárez, fol. 34. as follows: דע כי מסורה בידינו כשיבא משיח עם קיבוץ גליות לארץ ישראל באותו יום יוציא הים שבעת אלפים מבני ישראל ובאותו היום יחיו מתים בארץ ישראל ובאותו היום יבנה בית המקדש מאבנים טובות ומרגליות. ובאותו היום יחזרו המתים שבארץ ישראל חיות בריה חדשה דהנייה וכן שבעת אלפים איש הנמצאים חיים כולם יעשו בריאה חדשה גוף ורוח, גוף של אדם קודם שחטא כגופו של משה רבינו עליו השלום ופורחו כולם באויר מעופפים כנשרים וכל זה לעיני אנשי קיבוץ גליות וכשיראו אנשי קיבוץ גליות שאותיהם נעשו בריה חדשה ופורחים באויר ללכת ולרוח בגן עדן התחתון ללמוד תורה מפי יתברך, אז יקבלו בני קיבוץ דאגה בלבם ודאבון נפש ויתרעמו על מלך המשיח ויאמרו. וכי אין אנו בני ישראל כמותם ומאין זכו הם להיות רוחניים בגוף ונפש מה שאין כן אנו ואחר להם מלך המשיח כבר נודע ומפורסם שכל מדותיו של הקדוש ברוך הוא מדה כנגד מדה. אותם שהיו בחוצה לארץ והשתדלו לבוא לארץ ישראל כדי לזכות נפש טהורה ולא חסו על ממונם ולא על גופם ופאו בים וביבשה ולא חששו להיות נטבעים בים או להיותם שבוים ביד ארונים קשים. ובעבור שעשו עיקר מרוחם ונפשם ולא מגופם וממונם לכן חזרו רוחניים מדה כנגד מדה. אמנם אתם שהייתם יכולין לבוא לארץ ישראל כמותם ונתרשלם לבוא בעבור חמדת ממון וחששתם לממונכם וגופכם ועשיתם מהן עיקר ורוחכם ונפשכם עשיתם טפל לכן גם כן אתם נשאתם גשמיים מדה כנגד מדה. לחמדת ממון שחמדתם השם יתברך נותן לכם מטון. שכל כסף וזהב ואבנים טובות ומרגליות שנטבעו בים הנה כל הימים מטבעים להביא אותם לים יפו תוך ב' ימים לטביעתן. וכל מה שנטבע מששת ימי בראשית עד זמן שלמה המלך עליו השלום הנה הקיא ים יפו ליבשה. ומשם נתעשר שלמה ומה שנטבע מזמן שלמה עד זמן קיבוץ גליות הכל עתיד יפו להקיא אותם ליבשה. ומלך המשיח יחלוק אותם לכל צדיק וצדיק החלק המגיע לו וזהו כי שפע ימים יינקו. וגם כל המטמונים תחת העפר עתיד הוא להיות נהלות מחולות הארץ לעשות להוליד כל האוצרות המלכים לארץ ישראל ההד ושפוני טמוני חול והכל יתגדרו בתוך ארץ ישראל למלך המשיח והוא יחלק אותם לאנשי קיבוץ גליות לכל אחד מחלקו ויישבעו ממון רב. ואותן שהקפירו על ממונם ועל גופם ישארו גשמיים וישבעו ממון ואותן שלא חשו על גופם ועל ממונם אלא על רוחם בלבד יעשה אותם כבריה חדשה ומוליד That is: Know that we have learned through tradition, or oral teaching, that when the Messias comes together with the Jews who were gathered from exile and wretchedness into the land of Israel, seven thousand of the children of Israel will be found there at that very time. At that same time the dead in the land of Israel will also come back to life, and the Temple will be built of precious stones and pearls. Then the dead who are in the land of Israel and have come back to life will become new spiritual creatures. In the same manner, those seven thousand people who will be found still living will become new creatures in body and spirit, and will have a body such as Adam had before he sinned, and such as the body of our teacher Moses was, upon whom be peace; and they will all fly like eagles through the air, and indeed before the eyes of the Jews gathered from captivity. Now when the Jews gathered from captivity see that their brethren have become new creatures and are flying through the air for the purpose of betaking themselves to the lower paradise, to dwell therein and to learn the Law from the mouth of the blessed

God, then those same Jews will be troubled in their hearts and be of sorrowful spirit, and will murmur against the King Messiah and say: Are we then not just as much Israelites as these? How is it then that they have become worthy to be made spiritual in body and soul, whereas we are not so? Then the King Messiah will answer them: It is known and manifest that the holy blessed God is accustomed to repay like with like. Since those who were outside the land of Israel and strove to come into it in order to obtain a pure soul did not spare their goods or their bodies, and traveled thither by sea and by land, and did not trouble themselves as to whether they might perish in the sea or be led captive into the power of harsh masters, and made the chief matter of their spirit and their soul, and not of their body and their goods, they have therefore become spiritual, and like has been repaid to them with like. But since you, who could have gone into the land of Israel just as they did, were too negligent to do so on account of your desire for riches, and were concerned for your goods and your bodies, and made those your chief matter while making your spirit and your soul only a secondary concern, you have therefore likewise remained bodily, and like is repaid to you with like. Since you desired riches, the blessed God will also give you riches. For behold, all the seas are adjured to bring all the silver and gold, as well as all the precious stones and pearls that have sunk to the bottom of the sea, within two days after they have sunk, to the sea (before the city of Joppe, situated in the land of Canaan). The sea at Joppe has also cast out onto dry land everything that has sunk from the creation of the world up to the time of King Solomon (upon whom be peace), from which King Solomon became rich. But everything that has sunk from the time of Solomon up to the time of the gathering of the Jews driven into exile will likewise be cast by the sea at Joppe entirely onto dry land, and the King Messiah will distribute it among all the righteous and give each one his due portion. This is what is written (Deut 33:19): They shall suck of the abundance (or riches) of the sea. So also all the treasures lying under the earth, as well as all the treasures of kings, will be brought through caverns under the earth into the land of Israel, and this is what is written (in the same passage, Deut 33:19, further on): And of the hidden treasures in the sand. All of this will be revealed in the land of Israel to King Messias, and he will distribute it among the Jews gathered from captivity and give each one his portion, so that they will be satisfied with great riches; and those who were careful on account of their goods and their bodies will remain bodily and have their fill of riches. But those who were not concerned for their body and their goods, but only for their soul, will be made into new creatures and brought into the lower paradise. Beyond this, it was shown above in the 5th chapter of this second part, page 314, that every righteous person will in the future possess three hundred and ten worlds; from all of which it is plainly to be seen what a strange hope the senseless Jews entertain for themselves regarding future riches.

Although it is written in the Talmudic tractate Jevammóth, fol. 24, col. 2.: תנו רבנן אין מקבלין גרים לימות המשיח כיוצא בו לא קבלו גרים לא בימי דוד ולא בימי שלמה: that is, Our rabbis teach that at the time of the Messia no proselytes or fellow believers will be accepted; in the same way, none were accepted either in the time of David or in the time of Solomon. The same is also to be found at greater length in the Talmudic tractate Avóda Sára, fol. 3, col. 2.: nevertheless, the rabbis teach that the nations of the world will accept the Jewish faith at the time of the Messia, concerning which Rabbi Bechai, in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 86, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajischma Jéthbro, writes as follows: כשם שבגאולה ראשונה של מצרים נתגייר יתרו וחזר לאמונתנו: that is, Just as in the first redemption from Egypt Jethro became a fellow believer in the Jewish faith and accepted our religion, so too will all nations, in the final redemption, convert to the Jewish faith. And in his book Cad hakkémach he teaches, fol. 47, col. 4, under the title Oth Nun, in the following manner, and says: בזמן המשיח יהיו כל האומות לאמונתנו הוא שכתוב כי אהפוך אל עמים שפה ברורה לקרוא כולם בשם יי' ולעבדו: that is, At the time of the Messia all nations will convert to our faith, and this is what is written (Zeph 3:9): "Then I will turn to the peoples a pure lip" (or: change the lips of the peoples so that they become pure), "that they may all call upon the name of the Lord and serve Him with one shoulder" (that is, unanimously). Likewise, in the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 57, col. 4., in the 1st chapter, under the title Chélek hattáchlith, the following is read concerning the nations who are outside of Judaism: בזמן הגאולה יכירו האמת: that is, At the time of the redemption they will recognize the truth and convert to the true religion.

Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel also agrees with this, in his preface to the commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, when he expresses himself at fol. 4, col. 2. as follows: that is, All nations will come to the mountain of the Lord and to the God of Jacob, and will be subjected to the Israelites, and will receive their law. And in his commentary on Mic 4:1-2, he writes at fol. 263, col. 2-3. in the following manner: האומות כולן יסכימו לקבל האמונה האלהית יכירו וידעו שכבוד ה' הכבוד העליון: וששקר נחלו אבותיהם והבל ואין בם מועיל ועל זה אמר ונהרו אליו עמים כי ירוצו מרוצה רבה כנהר עמים וגוים רבים ויאמרו זה לזה לכו ונעלה אל ה' ה' לא מפאת אותו ההר כי אם מפני בית אלהי יעקב אשר שם ויאמרו גם כן לא נהיה אנחנו כבני ישראל בימים הקדמונים שהשם יתברך נתן להם את התורה והם לא היו שומרים אותה אבל אנחנו כמו שירנו מדרכיו כן נלכה בארחותיו כי ידענו באמת שמציון תצא תורה לכל העמים ודבר ה' שהוא אמונתו תצא מירושלים ובזה מהיוער שכל העמים בארצותם לגוייהם עם ועם בלשונו ילמדו לשונם לקרוא

בשם ה' ויכנו את אלוה ברוך הוא בשמו וכמאמר צפניה הנביא כי אז אהפוך אל עמים שפה
 ה' ברורה לקרוא כולם בשם ה'. 'כן אמר מיכה שכולם יאמרו לכו ונעלה אל הר ה' that is, All nations will agree together to receive the divine faith, and will recognize and know that upon the mountain of the Lord the highest glory will be, and that their fathers inherited lies and vanity (that is, the false faith), which profited them nothing; therefore he says (namely the Prophet Micah): And the nations will flow to it (that is, run); for many peoples and gentiles will run boldly like a river, and will say to one another: Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, not on account of that mountain itself, but on account of the house of the God of Jacob, which will be there. They will also say: We do not wish to be as the Israelites were in former times, to whom the blessed God gave the law, which they did not keep; but we will walk in His ways as He will teach us, for we know with certainty that the law will go forth to all peoples out of Zion, and the word of the Lord, which is faith in Him, will go forth from Jerusalem.
 It is thus promised hereby that all peoples, according to their lands and their kindreds, and each people according to its language, will teach (and accustom) their tongue to call upon the name of the Lord, and that they will name the blessed God by His name; and indeed, as the Prophet Zephaniah (Zeph 3:9) says: Then I will turn to the peoples a pure lip, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord. Thus also the Prophet Micah (Mic 4:2) said that they will all speak: Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord.

Further, in the aforementioned Abarbanel's book Maschmía jeschúa fol. 23, col. 1., the following is read: יבא זמן שהמין האנושי בכללו יכיר אמונתו ואמיתת אלהותו That is: There will come a time in which the entire human race will acknowledge faith in Him (namely God) and the truth of His divinity. And in fol. 79, col. 3 of the aforementioned book Maschmía jeschúa, concerning the words of Ps 47:2, "Clap your hands, all you peoples; shout to God with a joyful cry," it is taught: רמז בזה שיקבלו האומות כולם אמונת השם יתברך, That is: By this it is indicated that all peoples will accept faith in the blessed God. Likewise, in the Jalkut chádäsch fol. 20, col. 1. numero 20., under the title Ummóth baólam, the following is written: לעתיד לבוא כל אומות יהללו להקב"ה בין אותם ששעבדו את
 ישראל ובין אותם שלא שעבדו את ישראל וזהו הללו את ה' כל גוים שבחיהו כל האומים. גוים הם, ששעבדו את ישראל אומים הם שלא שיעבדו בישראל, That is: In the time to come, all nations will praise the holy blessed God, both those who brought the Israelites into servitude and those who did not bring them into servitude; and this is what the words of Ps 117:1 signify: "Praise the Lord, all you heathens, and laud Him, all you peoples." The word "heathens" denotes those who made the Israelites serve them; the word "peoples," however, denotes those who did not make them serve them.

Therefore, we await You, O Lord our God, that we may speedily see the glory of Your strength, that all idols be removed from the earth and all false gods be utterly cut off, so that the world may be set right through the kingdom of the Almighty. (Then) all the inhabitants of the world shall acknowledge and know that before You every knee shall bow and every tongue shall swear. Before You, O Lord our God, shall they bow down and fall, and give honor to the glory of Your name, and all shall take upon themselves the yoke of Your kingdom. Reign speedily over them forever and ever, for the kingdom belongs to You. Reign in all eternity in glory, as it is written in Your law (Exod 15:18): "The Lord shall be King forever and ever."

In the future, at the time of the Messiah, all idolatry shall also be eradicated. For this reason, Rabbi David Kimchi, in his commentary on the words of Isa 2:18, 20, "But the idols He shall utterly destroy. In that day a man shall cast his silver and golden idols, which they made for themselves to worship, to the moles and to the bats," gives the following explanation: אף על פי שהאלילים כבר פסקו מקצת האומות היום עוד יש בקצה המזרח עובדי אלילים. ועוד יחשבו גם הם עובדי אלילים שהם משתחווים ועובדים לצלם. ואז בימות המשיח כל האלילים יכרתו עד גמירא לפיכך אלילים: that is, "Although idols have already ceased among some nations today, there are still people in the far east who serve idols. And they (the Christians) too are considered idolaters, because they bow down before the cross and venerate it. But at the time of the Messiah, all idols (or false gods) shall be completely eradicated; therefore the word 'utterly' is added." For this reason, the Jews are accustomed, as in the thick Tefillah fol. 32, col. 4 and fol. 33, col. 1, immediately after the prayer that begins: עלינו לשבח Olénu leschabbéach, to pray daily as follows: בתפארת מהרה לראות כרות יכרתון לתקן עולם במלכות שדי. וכל בני בשר עוון להעביר גלולים מן הארץ והאלילים כרות יכרתון לתקן עולם במלכות שדי. וכל בני בשר יקראו בשמך להפנות אליך כל רשעי ארץ. יכירו וידעו כל יושבי תבל כי לך תכרע כל ברך תשבע כל לשון. לפניך יי 'אלהינו יכרעו ויפולו ולכבוד שמך יקר יתנו ויקבלו כלם את עול מלכותך. ותמלוך עליהם מהרה לעולם ועד כי המלכות שלך היא ולעולמי עד תמלוך בכבוד. ככתוב בתורתך יי 'מלוך לעולם ועד: that is, "Therefore we await You, O Lord our God, that we may speedily see the glory of Your strength, that all idols be removed from the earth and all false gods be utterly cut off, so that the world may be set right through the kingdom of the Almighty. (Then) all the inhabitants of the world shall acknowledge and know that before You every knee shall bow and every tongue shall swear. Before You, O Lord our God, shall they bow down and fall, and give honor to the glory of Your name, and all shall take upon themselves the yoke of Your kingdom. Reign speedily over them forever and ever, for the kingdom belongs to You. Reign in all eternity in glory, as it is written in Your law (Exod 15:18): 'The Lord shall be King forever and ever.'"

Notwithstanding that from the foregoing it appears as though all nations will adopt the Jewish faith, this is nevertheless not to be understood in general and of all people, for the Christians are to be excluded and deemed unworthy of it; and therefore the aforementioned Isaac Abarbanel, in his commentary on the Prophet Zephaniah, fol. 276, col. 1., on the above-cited words of cap. 3. v. 9, "Then will I turn to the peoples a pure lip," expresses himself as follows: התבונן אמרו כי אז אהפוך אל עמים ולא אמר אל כל העמים לפי שלא מכלל אומת אדום בייעוד הזה כי הם אויביה 'ותורתו וכל יראו גאותה. 'אמנם שאר העמים מבני ישמעאל לפי שלא נתחלפו ולא נתרחקו כפי אמונתם מהפינות התוריות כבני אדום הם יזכו בכבוד האמונה האלהית. ולזה סמר הנביא בלשון סתמי חלקי כי אז אהפוך אל עמים ואמר בזה מלת אהפוך לפי שקודם בנין המגדל היו כולם מדברים בלשון הקדש כמו שאמר ויהי כל הארץ שפה אחת וכאשר חטאו בלל השם יתברך את לשונם ומפני זה התחלפו האומות באמונותיהם אמנם לעתיד לבוא יהפוך אל עמים אותה שפה ברורה שהיה להם מקודם לדבר בלשון הקדש. אך אמנם לא נאמר כאן שהעמים ההם ידברו בלשון הקדש בשלימות כבני ישראל אלא שיהפוך לבבם לקרוא כולם בשם ה' בשפה ברורה ר"ל שימצא שגור ומלומד בפיהם השם הנכבד ושם אלהים אחרים לא יזכירו וזה בלבד ידברו בלשון הקדש כלומר שמהאל היתברך ה' ויהיה עם זה מהפלא שעם היותם עמים מתחלפים ושונאים זה לזה הנח יתחברו ויסיכמו כולם לקרוא בשם ה' ולעבדו אחד: that is, Consider what he (namely the Prophet) says: "Then will I turn to the peoples (a pure lip)"; he did not say, however, "to all peoples," because the Edomite (that is, the Christian) people is not included under such promises, for they are enemies of God and of His law, and will not see the glory of the Lord. But the remaining peoples, from the children of Ishmael, will be deemed worthy of receiving the divine faith, because they, according to their faith, are not so greatly departed and removed from the principal articles of the law as the children of Edom; and therefore the Prophet expressed himself through a particular form of speech: "Then will I turn to the peoples (a pure lip)," and used here the word ehefoch, that is, "turn" (or "change"), because before the building of the (Babylonian) Tower they all spoke the holy tongue (that is, Hebrew), just as it is said (Gen 11:1): "And the whole earth had one lip and one speech." But after they had sinned, the blessed God confounded their languages, and for this reason the nations became divided in their religions. In the future, however, (God) will turn back to the peoples that same pure tongue which they had previously, so that they may speak the holy tongue. It is not stated here, however, that such peoples will speak the Hebrew tongue perfectly, as the children of Israel do, but rather that (God) will turn their hearts so that they will all call upon the name of the Lord with a pure lip (that is, tongue); that is, the glorious name (of God) will be very commonly used and accustomed in their mouths, and they will no longer make mention of the names of other gods; and this name, namely the name of the blessed God, the name Jehova, they will speak in the holy tongue alone. With this it will also be a wonder that, although they are different peoples who (at the present time) hate one another, they will nonetheless at that time all join together and with one accord call upon the name of the Lord and serve Him with one consent. This very same thing concerning the exclusion of the Christians, and what has been stated concerning the Hebrew tongue, is also to be found in the book Maschmia jeschúa fol. 65, col. 3.

Further, at fol. 30, col. 2 in the aforementioned book Maschmia jeschúa, concerning the words of Isa 65:25, "But dust shall be the serpent's food," the following is also read: על מלכות אדום אמר ונחש עפר לחמו וכברירת סמאל הוא שרו של עשו וכמו שזכרו חז"ל שהיה סמאל רוכב על הנחש שהסית לחוה כי הוא היה לישראל נחש צפעוני ולכן יאמר שזה לא יזכר בטובה כשאר האומות אבל יהיה עפר לחמו לפי שלעפר ישכון סלה ועם זה אלו ואלו לא ירעו ולא ישחיתו בכל הר קדשי הוא אשר דברתי אליכם שהיה נקמת השם יותר באומות אדום מבשאר האומות ולא תזכה אותה אומה המקוללת אל מה: שיוזכו האומות האחרונות לכן אמר עליו ונחש עפר לחמו: that is, the Prophet spoke the words "But dust shall be the serpent's food" concerning the Edomite kingdom (that is, Christendom, which is also called a serpent, as was indicated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, paginâ 787.): It is already known to you that Sammaël is the prince of Esau (that is, of the Christians), just as our Sages, of blessed memory, have stated that Sammaël rode upon the serpent that seduced Eve; for he was a basilisk to the Israelites. Therefore it is said that this one (Esau) shall not be worthy of good fortune as the other nations are, but that dust shall be his food, since he shall dwell in the dust, Sela. Therefore they (namely the nations that will serve God) shall do no evil to one another, nor shall one destroy the other on the entire mountain of my sanctuary (as is read in Isa 11:9). This is what I have said to you: that the vengeance of the Lord shall come more upon Edom than upon the other nations, and that that accursed people (namely the Christians) shall not be worthy of that which the other nations shall be worthy of; therefore it is said of them: "But dust shall be the serpent's food." The very same thing is also to be seen in the aforementioned Abarbanel's commentary on Isaiah, fol. 93, col. 4., on chapter 65, v. 25, and in addition to this, in the said fourth column and fol. 94, col. 1. 2., still much more is to be found.

In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, the following is also found at fol. 85, col. 3, at the end of the Parascha Beschallach: לימות המשיח על צבא השמים ויבטל הממונים העליונים ממנויים וגו' 'אבדו האומות וגו' ויש מן האומות הרבה שיחזרו לדתנו כענין שכתוב והחזיקו אנשים בכנף איש יהודי וגו' וכתיב כי אז אהפוך אל עמים שפה ברורה לקרוא כלם בשם י"י ולעבדו שכם אחד. ואין לך אומה בעולם שלא יהיה לו חלק בהק"ב אבל עמלק ועשו לא יהיה להם חלק וזכרון עם שאר האומות הנשארים הוא שכתוב ולא יהיה שריד לבית עשו באור הכתוב כי משאר האומות יהיו שרידים ופליטים שישארו מהם לעבוד את י"י ואין בו מזרעו של עשו אף ימחו מן השלם כענין שכתוב כי מחה אמהה את זכר עמלק ואז יהיה השם והכסא על השלימות, That is: In the days of the Messiah, when the blessed God will visit the host of heaven and will remove the supreme appointed rulers (namely the seventy princes who are said to be set over the seventy nations, as was indicated above in the eighteenth chapter of the first part) from their office, etc., the nations will perish, etc. But there are many nations that will convert to our religion, as it is written (Zech 8:23): "And ten men shall take hold of the hem (or wing) of the garment of a Jew," etc. And it is written (Zeph 3:9): "Then I will turn to the nations a pure lip, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord and serve Him with one accord"; and there will be no nation in the world that will not have a share in the Holy and blessed God, except Amalek and Esau (that is, the Christians, as has been demonstrated in the twenty-seventh chapter of the first part), who will have no share among the remaining surviving nations, and they will no longer be remembered. This is also what is said in Obad v. 18: "And no one will remain of the house of Esau," which means that from the other nations some will remain to serve the Lord, but none of the seed of Esau will be among them; rather, all of them are to be exterminated from the world, since it is written (Exod 17:14): "For I will utterly blot out the memory of Amalek," and then the name and the throne of God will be complete. Notwithstanding this, however, the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai teaches the opposite in his cited commentary, fol. 220, col. 4, in the Parascha Nizzavim, for he states there that not only the Ishmaelites or Turks, but also the Edomites, will adopt the Jewish faith.

Furthermore, it is also written in the book Séra Abraham fol. 37, col. 2. as follows: לעתיד הק"בה יקבל מכל האומות חוץ מן עשו שנאמר גער חית קנה That is: The holy blessed God will in the future receive from all peoples, except from Esau, as it is said (Ps 68:31): "Rebuke the beast that is in the reeds." In this same manner it is also found in the 2nd part of the Prague Machsor fol. 17, col. 2. in the Commentario under the title lepúrim: המלך הקדוש ברוך הוא נשבע שנאמר: כי יד על כס יה שאם יבואו כל האומות אני מקבלן חוץ מעמלק that is, The King, the holy blessed God, has sworn, as it is said (Exod 17:16): "For the hand is upon the throne of the Lord" (and has spoken:) "when all peoples come, I will receive them, except for Amaleck." By Amaleck, however, Christendom is understood by the Jews, as was noted above in the 17th chapter of the first part and demonstrated at length. And in the book Nézach Jisraël it is read at fol. 49, col. 1. in the 34th chapter: לימות המשיח יהו שלש מלכיות נמשכים אחר מלכות ישראל אבל: במלכות רביעית אין התאחדות עם ישראל ועל זה אמר גער חית קנה That is: At the time of the Messiah, the three kingdoms (or monarchies, namely the Medes, Persians, and Greeks) will be drawn entirely into the kingdom of Israel, but the fourth kingdom (namely the Roman, by which Christendom is understood, as was reported in the 17th chapter of the first part) cannot be united with the Israelites; for this reason it is said (Ps 68:31): "Rebuke the beast that is in the reeds." In the book Pesikta rabbetha it is also taught at fol. 1, col. 2. that only those peoples will be received who have not afflicted the Israelites with servitude, and concerning the words of Ps 65:3, "All flesh comes to You," the following is stated there: אפילו כל עכ"ם ולא כל עכ"ם אלא אותן שלא שעבדו בישראל :משיח מקבלן that is, Yes, even the idolaters (will be received), yet not all idolaters, but rather the Messiah will receive those who have not brought the Israelites into servitude. Regarding the future rejection of Christians, the book Máor hakkáton fol. 42, col. 2. in the Parascha Terúma may also be consulted.

Since now many peoples are supposed to accept the Jewish faith at the time of the Messiah, we also want to examine how many commandments are to be imposed and enjoined upon them to observe. In the Jalkut Shimoni on the Psalms, it is read at fol. 97, col. 2, numero 682 that two commandments will be imposed upon them, and the words there read as follows. אמר רבי חנינא אין מלך המשיח בא אלא ליתן לאומות העולם ב' מצות כגון סוכה ולולב אבל ישראל כלם למדים 'עיקר ביאת המשיח הוא כדי שכל העמים כלם יקראו בשם ה' : That is: Rabbi Channina has said, the King Messiah comes for no other purpose than to give the peoples of the world two laws, namely the law of the Feast of Tabernacles and that of the palm branches (both of which are mentioned in Lev 23:40 and following); but all Israelites will learn the law from the holy and blessed God, as it is said (Isa 54:13): And all your children shall be taught by the Lord. The very same is also read in the book Mikraei Kodesh, in the 20th chapter, fol. 107, col. 2, in identical words; and at fol. 108, col. 1 in the aforementioned 20th chapter, the following is written: ויעבדהו שכם אחד :כי אינו חפץ השם יתברך במות הרשע כי אם ליעצו וללמדו שישבו אליו ויעבדהו כי הכל מעשה ידיו ואמר (ר' חנינא (שעיקר ביאת המשיח הוא לתת לאומות ב' מצוות כגון אלו)ר"ל סוכה ולולב (כלומר שיחסו ויתלוננו תחת צל כנפי השכינה ויחזרו : מאחרי ע"ז ומהיותם תחת צל השרים של מעלה כי בימי המשיח יהיה ה' למלך על כל הארץ : That is: The principal work of the coming of the Messiah consists in this, that all peoples may call upon the name of the Lord and serve Him with one accord; for the blessed God has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but He desires to counsel him and to teach him, so that he may turn to Him and serve Him, for all things are the works of His hands. Rabbi Channina has also said that the principal substance of the coming of the Messiah consists in this, that He gives the peoples two commandments, namely that of the Feast of Tabernacles and that of the palm branches; that is, that they should place themselves under the shadow of the divine Majesty and abide therein, and should turn away from idolatry as well as from the shadow of the supreme princes (namely the seventy evil angels, of whom mention was made above in the 18th chapter of the first part) under which they are, since the Lord at the time of the Messiah will be a King over the whole earth.

But in the Médrasch Tillim it is read at fol. 19, col. 3 concerning Ps 21 that they shall receive three commandments, and the words read as follows: אמר רבי חנינא אין מלך המשיח בא אלא ליתן לאומות העולם שלש מצות כגון סוכה ולולב ותפילין 'אבל ישראל למדין תורה מן הקדוש ברוך הוא שנאמר וכל בניך למודי ה': that is, Rabbi Channina said: the King Messias comes only to give the peoples of the world three commandments, namely the commandment concerning the booth of branches, that concerning the palm branches, and that concerning the Tephillim, that is, prayer straps (which prayer straps the Jews bind around their hands and head at the time of their prayers, and which they claim to be obligated to do on the basis of the words of Exod 13:9, 16, as well as Deut 6:8 and 11:18). But the Israelites will learn the Law from the holy and blessed God, as it is said (Isa 54:13): And all your children shall be taught by the Lord. The words of Rabbi Channinae are thus cited in two different ways, in that he, according to some, makes mention of two commandments, but according to others, of three.

At the time of the Messiah, survivors shall remain from all peoples except the Christians, who are all to be killed, so that not a single one of them will remain alive. That survivors will remain from all peoples except the Christians is sufficiently evident from what was cited shortly before from Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, from the Parashah Beschállach, fol. 85, col. 3, as well as from the fact that all peoples, excepting the Christians, will serve God during the reign of the Messiah. That all Christians, however, are to be killed is written in Abarbanel's commentary on the prophet Obadiah, fol. 254, col. 3, concerning the words of v. 18, "And there shall be no survivor of the house of Esau," as follows: ידוע שלא היה חרבן נבוכדנצר ולא חרבן הורקנוס: שהחריב לאדום החלטי שלא נשאר מהם איש והוא מנה שיוכיח שלא היתה נבואתו כי אם לעתיד לבוא שיחריב אדום בהחלט ולא ישאר מהם שריד, That is: It is known that what is meant here is not the devastation that was brought about by Nebuchadnezzar, nor the complete destruction that was carried out by Hyrchanus, through which not a single man of those (Edomites) was supposed to have remained; and this indicates that his prophecy is directed only toward the future, when Edom will be utterly laid waste and none of them will remain, when the Lord redeems His people. And at fol. 255, col. 2, concerning the words of Obad 1:9, "And your warriors shall be dismayed, O Teman, so that every man from the mountain of Esau may be cut off by slaughter," the following is written: רוצה לומר שיכרת איש מכל אותם המתיחסים ונקראים ומכה עפים מהר עשו והם כלל הנוצרים ותהיה כריתתם מקטל כלומר מהריגה עצומה שתהיה בהם כי לא ישארו באדום מהמלחמה העתידה, That is: These words signify that every single one of all those who trace their lineage and descent from the mountain of Esau and are named after it shall be exterminated; and this refers to all Christians in general; and their extermination shall come about through a slaughter, that is, a mighty killing that will take place among them, for from the coming war in Edom not a single one will remain.

Furthermoore, in the same place, fol. 256, col. 3, the following is read: אמר שלא יהיה עוד שריד לבית עשו בבחינת העם הארומי והרומי שלא ישאר מהם איש, That is: He (namely the prophet Obadiah) has said that no one from the house of Esau will remain, with respect to the Edomite and Roman people, and that not a single man of them will remain alive. Rabbi Menasse ben Israel also teaches on this subject in his little book Mikvéh Jisraél, fol. 43, col. 2, in the 17th chapter, number 65, as follows: כשם שנפלנו אנחנו כן תפול מלכות אדום ותעקר והשרש כמו שאמר הנביא ישעיה ל"ד קרבו גוים וגו' כי רוותה בשמים חרבי על אדום תרד ועל עם חרמי למשפט וגו' כי זבח לה' בבצרה וטבח גדול בארץ אדום וגו' כי יום נקם לה' שנת שלומים תהיה, That is: Just as we have fallen, so too shall the Edomite kingdom fall, and be uprooted and destroyed, as Isaiah says in the 34th chapter (v. 1): Come near, ye nations, etc. (And in v. 5 he says:) For my sword is drunk in heaven; it shall come down upon Edom, and upon the people of my curse, for judgment, etc. (And in v. 6 it follows:) For the Lord holds a slaughter at Bozra, and a great slaughter in the land of Edom, etc. (And in v. 8 it further reads:) For it is the day of the Lord's vengeance, and the year of recompense, to contend for Zion, etc. So too is it found in the 2nd part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 12, col. 2, in the commentary on the prayer which begins: 'לאחרונה יסעו וגו' Laacharóna jisseú &c.: לעת ימחה שמו של עמלק מן העולם לא יהא נמלט אפילו אחד מהם, That is: At the time when the name of Amalek shall be blotted out from the world, not even a single one of them shall be saved. Then shall the holy, blessed God deliver the Israelites eternally.

In the Médrasch Tillim, fol. 10, col. 2, over the words of Ps 9:7, "The destructions of the enemy have come to an end: Thou hast overthrown their cities; their memorial is perished with them," it is also written thus: שבועה נשבע הקדוש ברוך הוא בכסא כבודו שלא להשאיר זכר לעמלק תחת השמים לא נין לו ולא נכד בעמו שלא יאמרו אילן זה של עמלק היה שנאמר אבד זכרם המה. אמר רבי לוי בשם רבי חטא כל זמן שזרעו של עמלק קיים לא השם שלם ולא הכס שלם עד שיאבד זכרו של עמלק שנאמר כי יד על כס יי'. היה צריך לומר על כסא יי', וכשיאבד זכרו של עמלק מן העולם השם שלם והכסא שלם שכן כתיב האויב חמו חרבות מה כתיב בתריה ויי' לעולם ישב כונן: That is: The holy blessed God has sworn an oath by the throne of His glory that He will leave no memorial, no son, and no grandson of Amalek under heaven among his people, so that no one might be able to say, "This tree belonged to Amalek," as it is said: "Their memorial is perished with them." Rabbi Levi said in the name of Rabbi Chama that as long as the seed of Amalek endures, neither the Name nor the throne of God is complete, until the memorial of Amalek passes away, as it is said (Exod 17:16): "For the hand of יה Jah, or the Lord, is upon the כס Kes, or throne." It ought to have said "upon the Kissé Jehova," that is, the throne of the Lord (and it ought to have stood not as Jah but as Jehova, and not as Kes but as Kissé, in complete words); but when the memorial of Amalek shall pass away from the world, the Name will be complete and the throne will be complete, for it stands written thus: "The destructions of the enemy have come to an end." But what is written after this (v. 9)? "But the Jehova, or Lord, sitteth enthroned forever: He has prepared His Kissé, or throne, for judgment."

In the book Zerór hammór, fol. 125, col. 2-3, in the Parascha Pinchas on Num 29, the following is also taught: רמז השעיר לעשו מלך אדום שהוא איש שער ושעירים רמזו עתידים להיות נעקרים מהעולם לפי שבאו מכה נחש הקדמוני אשר כתב בו על גחונך תלך בלא רגלים לפי שהשקר אין לו רגלים ולכן אנו בטוחים שאף על פי שאלו המלכויות יהיו חזקים ועזים כאלה וכאלון פתע פתאום ישרבו ויאבדו. ולכן כתב בעמלק ואחריתו עדי אובד ועליו אמר האויב תמו חרבות הוא עשו הרשע שהוא אויב לישראל ומבקש ואחריתו עדי אובד ועליו אמר האויב תמו חרבות הוא עשו הרשע שהוא אויב לישראל ומבקש That is: the Sáir, or he-goat (of which Num 29 speaks, which was to have been sacrificed as a sin offering), signifies Esau, the Edomite king, who is an isch sáir, that is, a hairy (or devilish) man, (as is said in Isa 13:21:) the Seirim, that is, field-devils, will dance there. And they (namely the Edomites, or Christians) will in the future be rooted out from the world, because they descend from the power of the ancient serpent (that is, the Devil), of whom it is written (Gen 3:14): upon your belly you shall go, without feet, because the lie has no feet. For this reason we hope that, even though those kingdoms (of the peoples mentioned in the preceding passage) are as strong as an oak tree, they will nonetheless be swiftly and suddenly broken and shall perish. Therefore it is written of Amalek (Num 24:20): but in the end he shall utterly perish. Of the same it is also said (Ps 9:7): the devastations of the enemy have come to an end; and this enemy signifies the wicked Esau, who is the enemy of the Israelites and seeks their misfortune. But the time will come when they (the Esavites, or Christians) shall perish, and this is what is written (in the aforementioned Ps 9:7): their memory has perished with them, because their memory will pass away in those days. Concerning this destruction of the Christians, the aforementioned book Zerór hammór may also be consulted at fol. 4, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschith, and at fol. 47, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajtschlach at the end, and at fol. 123, col. 2-3, in the Parascha Balak, as well as Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses at fol. 180, col. 4, in the aforementioned Parascha Balak, and at fol. 215, col. 4, at the end of the Parascha Ki téze, together with the book Maschmía ieschúa at fol. 4, col. 4, and Pesíktá rabbetha at fol. 28, col. 3.

Furthermore, in the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 96, col. 1, at the end of the Parascha Beschallach, the following is read: בימות המשיח ימחה זרעו של עשו ועמו ומלך מפני כחן של ישראל : שיגבר למעלה : that is, At the time of the Messiah, the seed of Esau and Amalek will be destroyed, on account of the power of the Israelites, which will be mighty. And the Esavites, that is, the Christians, shall be utterly ruined when the Israelites rise on high. For this reason it is reported in the book Sifra Abraham, fol. 24, col. 2: אי אפשר להיות יעקב ועשו יחד כשזה קם זה נופל : that is, It is not possible that Jacob and Esau can exist at the same time. When one rises, the other falls. So also in the Zohar of the Sulzbach printing, in the Parascha Toledoth, in the 335th column, the following is read: כד יקום מלכא משיחא יטול יעקב לעילא ותתא ויתאביד עשו מכלא ולא יהא ליה חולקא ואחסנתא ודוכרנא בעלמא כדא ויהיה בית יעקב אש ובית יוסף להבה ובית עשו לקש וגו' 'בנין דיתאביד עשו מכלא ויירת יעקב דאחי : that is, When the King Messiah shall arise, Jacob will take (everything) above and below, and Esau will lose everything, and he (Esau) will have no portion, nor inheritance (or possession), in the world any longer, and he will no longer be remembered, as it is said (Obad 1:18): And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, but the house of Esau shall be stubble, etc. Because Esau will lose everything, but Jacob will possess both worlds, this world and the world to come.

According to this, therefore, the Christians, as the supposed descendants of Esau, are not only to be exterminated in this world, but also to be excluded from eternal life. The like is also to be found in the book Majene jeschua, fol. 48, col. 4, and fol. 49, col. 1.

We now want to consider who will kill the Christians. In the book Maschmia jeschua, fol. 59, col. 3, on the words of Ezek 25:12-14, "Because Edom has taken vengeance on the house of Judah, and has greatly offended in that they have thus avenged themselves upon them: therefore thus saith the Lord: I will stretch out my hand over Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it, etc. I will take my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel, and they shall deal with Edom according to my anger and according to my fury, that they may know my vengeance," the following is written by Abarbanel: הנבואה הזאת מחוייב שתפרשיה לעתיד לבוא ועל רומי וכלל הנוצרים כיון שאמר יען עשות אדום בנקום ונקם לבית יהודה שזה נאמר על חורבן בית שני שעשו הרומיים. ולפי שהם היו בברית עם בני יהודה וילחמו בהם כאוייבים לכן אמר ויאשמו אשום וכנגד מה שעשו בהם בגלות מהשמדות וגזירות אמר עוד ונקמו בהם ואמר שיכרית מאדום אדם ובהמה ורוע שזה לא היה בימי נבוכדנצר ולא בימי הורקנוס ואמר גם כן שתהיה נקמת אדום ביד עם ישראל ואין זה

אלא מה שקבלו ח"ל שאמרו שמסורה היא בידם שאין עשו נופל אלא ביד בני בניה של רחל והענין שבאותה המלחמה אשר ילחמו בהם משפחות צפונה יצאו ישראל ומשיח בן יוסף That is: We must necessarily interpret this prophecy as referring to the future, and to Rome and Christendom as a whole, since he (namely God) says: "Because Edom has taken vengeance on the house of Judah," for this is said concerning the destruction of the first Temple, which was carried out by the Romans. And because they had been in a covenant with the children of Judah, and yet waged war against them as enemies, he therefore says: "And have greatly offended." But with regard to what they inflicted upon them during the exilio (or captivity) through persecutions and harsh decrees, he further states: "That they have avenged themselves upon them," and he says that he will cut off man and beast from Edom. It is well known, however, that this occurred neither in the time of Nebuchadnezzar nor in the time of Hyrchanus. He also says further that the vengeance upon Edom was to be carried out by the hand of Israel, which is nothing other than what our sages of blessed memory have learned through tradition or oral teaching, who say that they know by tradition that Esau will fall by no other means than by the hands of the descendants of Rachel. The meaning is that in the war which the northern peoples will wage against them (namely the Christians), the children of Israel, with the Messiah the son of Joseph going before them and being their head, will take fierce vengeance upon Edom in great wrath and fury.

The aforementioned Abarbanel teaches the same in his commentary on the words of Obad 1:21, "And saviors shall go up to Mount Zion to judge the mountain of Esau," where at fol. 256, col. 2, he says: אותם השבטים שישבו מארצות גלותם אשר באשור שנקראו בית יוסף ומלכות אפרים המה יהיו אש להבה להבעיר ולשרוף את בית עשו כי הם יבאו עם הגוים הבאים למלחמה ההיא והם ילחמו עם הנוצרים ואכלום ובאופן שלא יהיה עוד שריד לבית עשו וכן דרשו חכמים ז"ל שאין זרעו של עשו נופל אלא ביד בני בניה של רחל: that is, those tribes which are in Assyria and shall return from the lands of their captivity, which are called the house of Joseph and the kingdom of Ephraim, shall be a fiery flame to kindle and burn the house of Esau; for they shall come together with those nations that will go forth into that war, and they shall wage war against the Christians and devour them, so that not one shall remain from the house of Esau. And thus have the Sages of blessed memory explained it, that the seed of Esau shall fall by no other means than by the hands of the descendants of Rachel.

That the Christians are to be killed off through the lineage of Rachel: this is also found in the book Avodath hakkodesch, fol. 97, col. 3. in the 41st chapter, under the title Chélek battáchlith, and in the Jalkut Schimóni on the book of Judges fol. 9, col. 4. numero 51. and in the Jalkut chádäsch fol. 143, col. 3. 4.

numero 67. under the title Maschiach, as well as in the Prague Machsor, in the second part, fol. 52, col. 2. in the commentario under the title Józer lejóm ríschon schél Pésach, on the prayer which begins וְלֶחֶן פֶּרֶס וגו' Schelachbüch pardes etc. Furthermore, in the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the 32nd and 38th chapters, it is written thus: אין בני עשו נופלים עד שיבוא שריד מיעקב ויקצץ רגליו של עשו מהר : 'עשו וגו' that is, the children of Esau will not fall until the remnant of Jacob comes and cuts off the feet of Esau from the mountain of Esau, etc. In Rabbi Moses bar Nachman's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 123, col. 3. 4. in the Parascha Balak, the following is read: תפול אדום לגמרי.

"Edom will completely fall at the time of the appointed end, by the hand of the rising star" (namely the Messiah, of whom mention is made in Num 24:17). And shortly after this, the aforementioned Rabbi Moshe writes concerning the words of Num 24:24, "And ships from Chittim shall afflict Asshur, and shall also afflict Eber; but he shall also perish," in the following manner: הנה השלים דבריו באמרן כתיב כי הם החיה הרביעית שתשבר ביד המשיח כמו שאמר ודובד גשמה ויהיבת ליקירה אשא כי עדי אובד תכרת זכרם לגמרי וזה דבר בפורסם מדברי רבותינו כי החיה הרביעית שראה דניאל הוא אשר הגלתנו והוא אשר תאבד ביד המשיח, That is: Behold, he (namely Balaam) concluded his words with the downfall of the Chittites (that is, the Christians, as was shown above in the sixteenth chapter of the first part), for they are the fourth beast, which shall be broken by the hand of the Messiah, as it is said (Dan 7:11): "I watched until the beast was slain, and its body destroyed, and it was cast into the burning fire"; for their memory shall be utterly rooted out through their destruction, and this is a manifest matter from the words of our Rabbis, that the fourth beast, which drove us into misery, shall be destroyed and perish by the hand of the Messiah. Furthermore, the same author states a little after this, fol. 124, col. 1, as follows: מלכות רביעית בידו תמשך מלכותה עד המשיח ותאבד בידו, That is: The fourth kingdom shall continue its reign until the Messiah, and shall perish by his hand.

In the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, it is read in the 48th chapter that God Himself will do this, and the words there read as follows: חמש אצבעות של ימינו של הקב"ה כלן יסוד גאולות אצבע קטנה בה הראה לנו מה לעשות בהיבה שנאמר וזה אשר תעשה אותה. אצבע שנייה לקטנה בה הכה את המצרים שנאמר אצבע אלהים הוא. אצבע שלישית לקטנה בה כתב את הלוחות שנאמר לוחות אבן כתובין באצבע אלהים. אצבע רביעי שהיא שנייה לבוהן בה הראה הקב"ה למשה מה יתנו ישראל בפדיון נפשם שנאמר זה יתנו הבוהן כל היד בה עתיד הקב"ה להשמיד לבני עשו שהן צרין לבני ישראל וכן לבני ישמעאל. That is: All five fingers of the right hand of the blessed God are a foundation of redemptions. With the little finger He showed Noah what he was to do in the ark, as it is said (Gen 6:15): Make it in this manner. With the second finger after the little one He struck Egypt, as it is said (Exod 8:19): This is the finger of God. With the third finger after the little one He wrote the tablets, as it is said (Deut 9:10): The stone tablets written with the finger of God. With the fourth finger, which is the second after the thumb, the holy blessed God showed Moses what the Israelites were to give for the redemption of their souls, as it is said (Exod 30:13): This shall they give, etc. The thumb is the entire hand, with which the holy blessed God will destroy the children of Esau, who are the adversaries of the children of Israel, as well as the children of Ishmael, who are His enemies, as it is said (Mic 5:9): Your hand shall be lifted up over your enemies, so that all your adversaries shall be cut off. This same thing is also to be found in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 52, col. 2. numero 9. under the title Geülla.

In the Jalkut Shimoni on the prophet Obadiah, the following is also read at fol. 80, col. 2, numero 1: במצרים ממנה. במצרים פרע. על ידי מלאך. וישלח מלאך ויוציאנו ממצרים. כאשר ויצא מלאך יי' ויך במחנה אשור. במדי על ידי מרדכי ואסתר. ביון על ידי מתתיה ובניו. אבל אדום אין פורע ממנה אלא אני בעצמי That is: Woe to the fourth kingdom (that is, the Roman Empire, by which Christendom is understood), for the Holy One, blessed be He, will take vengeance upon it Himself. Upon Egypt He took vengeance through an angel (as is written in Num 20:16): "And he sent an angel, who brought us out of Egypt." Upon the Assyrians He likewise took vengeance, for it is read in 2 Kgs 19:35: "And the angel of the Lord went forth and struck in the camp of the Assyrians," etc. Upon the Medes He took vengeance through Mordecai and Esther, and upon the Greeks through Mattathias and his sons; but upon them (namely the Edomites, says God) none but I Myself shall take vengeance, as it is said (Obad 1:1): "Thus has the Lord spoken concerning Edom," etc. There is likewise found in the book Zerór Hammór, fol. 76, col. 2, at the end of the Parashah Beshalach, on the words of Exod 17:14-15, "Then the Lord said to Moses: Write this as a memorial in a book and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua, for I will utterly blot out the memory of Amalek from under heaven. And Moses built an altar to the Lord and called its name, The Lord is my banner," the following written: ויבן משה מזבח על בשורת הגאולה העתידה מגלות רביעית ומפלת עמלק. ולפי שאמר כי מזה אמחה אני בעצמי קרא שם המזבח ה'נסי כי הוא עתיד לעשות נס זה ולא אחר וזהו כי יד על כס יה רמז שנשבע בכסאו לעשות מלחמה בעמלק מדור דור. מדורו של משה עד דורו של שמואל ומדורו של משיח That is: And Moses built an altar on account of the proclamation of the future redemption from the fourth captivity and the fall of Amalek. And because God said, "I Myself will blot out (the memory of Amalek)," he called the name of the altar "The Lord is my banner" (or miracle), since He, and no other, will perform this miraculous work; and this is indicated by the words (v. 16), "For the hand is upon the throne of the Lord," signifying thereby that God swore by His throne that He would wage war against Amalek from one generation to another: from the generation of Moses to the generation of Samuel, and from the generation of Samuel to the generation of Mordecai and Esther, and from the generation of Mordecai to the generation (and the time) of the Messiah. Beyond this, the following is also read concerning the Roman Empire, that is, Christendom, in the book Mayene Yeshua, fol. 58, col. 3: ועל מלכות הזה אמר That is: ובאפס יד ישבר שגם הוא ערי אובד אבל לא ישבר ביד אנוש כי אם ביד השם Concerning this kingdom he (namely the prophet Daniel in chapter 8, v. 25) said: "But he (namely the insolent king mentioned in v. 23) shall be broken without hand, for he too belongs to destruction. Yet he shall not be broken by human hand, but by the hand of God."

Regarding the manner in which the Christians are to be exterminated and destroyed, the Rabbis teach that the future redemption will be like the redemption from Egypt. For this reason, Rabbi Bechai writes in his book Cad hakkémach fol. 49, col. 3. under the title Oth Samech as follows: כל הנביאים מסכימים פה אחד שהגאולה העתידה תהיה כדמיון הגאולה הראשונה: וכן אמר הנביא כימי אבות נפלאות: that is, All the Prophets unanimously agree with one another that the future redemption will be like the first redemption. And thus speaks the Prophet (Mic 7:15): I will show wonders, as in the time when you came out of the land of Egypt. Furthermore, the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai teaches in the said book Cad hakkémach fol. 47, col. 4. and fol. 48, col. 1. under the title Oth Nun as follows: קבלה בידינו שהגאולה העתידה שתהיה בדמיון גאולת מצרים כשם שמצינו קריעת ים סוף בגאולת מצרים כן תמצא בגאולה העתידה והחרים ה' את לשון ים מצרים והניף ידו על הנהר בעים רוחו וגו'. וכתוב והיתה מסלה לשאר עמו אשר ישאר מאשור כאשר היתה לישראל ביום עלותו ממצרים הרי זה 'סעייד שבגאולה העתידה עתיד הקב"ה. להר בים בים דרך כמו שהיה ביציאת מצרים. ועוד כתיב כאשר שמע למצרים יחילו כשמע צור. וזה מפורש שבדמיון גאולת מצרים תהיה גאולתנו העתידה שהרי צור מלכות אדום היא לפי שהוא פטר; ודרשו ז"ל כל צר שבמקרא חסר ואו במלכות הרשעה הכתוב הכתוב מדבר that is, We have a tradition, or oral teaching, that the future redemption will be like the redemption from Egypt. Just as we find (Exod 14:22) that the Red Sea parted at the redemption from Egypt, so too will you find it at the future redemption: (for it is written in Isa 11:15:) And the Lord will destroy the tongue of the sea of Egypt, and will wave His hand over the river with His mighty wind, etc. And (in the following verse 16) it is written: And there will be a highway for the remnant of His people who remain from Assyria, as it was for Israel in the day when they came up out of the land of Egypt. See, this testifies that the Holy One, blessed be He, will make a way through the sea at the future redemption, just as it happened at the exodus from Egypt. Furthermore it is written (Isa 21:3): Just as men were terrified when they heard of Egypt, so too will men be terrified when they hear of Zor. And it is clear that our future redemption will be like the redemption from Egypt, for see, Zor signifies the Edomite kingdom, because it is defective (and צר Zor is written without a Vau, and not צור Zor with a Vau). For our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught that wherever צר Zor without a Vau stands in Scripture, that passage speaks of the wicked kingdom; but wherever צור Zor is found in its complete form, Scripture makes mention of the city of Tyre.

So the same Rabbi Bechai also makes himself heard in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 58, col. 3, in the Parashah Vajechi, on the words of Jacob, Gen 48:21, "God will be with you and will bring you back to the land of your fathers," as follows: אחר שרמו לגאולת מצרים הוסיף לרמוז הגאולה האחרונה הזו באחרית הימים לפי ששתיהן דומות זו לזו וקבלה ביד הנביאים שעתידה גאולתנו זאת שתהיה בדמיון גאולת מצרים בהרבה ענינים מלבד שהיה בה תוספת מעלה והשגה בלבבות בידיעת That is: After he had signified the redemption from Egypt, he further indicated the final redemption, which is to take place in the last days, since the two are alike to one another. There is also a tradition among the prophets that our future redemption will be like the redemption from Egypt in many respects, except that it will be far more glorious, and hearts will comprehend more of the knowledge of the blessed God.

Furthermore, in the same commentary of Rabbi Bechai fol. 68, col. 2. at the end of the Parasha Schemóth, the following is read on this matter: כשם שמצינו שנתחזקה להם השעבוד לישראל במצרים מעת בא הגואל הראשון לפני פרעה ואמר לו בדבר ה"שי שלח את עמי ויחוגו לי במדבר ואחרי זאת כבדה עליהם העבודה ותעוררה עליהם השנאה ונתוספה ביניהם מאד על מה שהיתה כן בגאולתנו זאת העתידה בהגלות הגואל האחרון התעורר השנאה בין האומות ויוסיפו שעבוד על שעבודם ויהיה הגואל נגלה וחוזר ונכסה כדי להתעות את האומות ולהקשיח את לבם שכן מצינו בגאולת מצרים שנגלה להם משה וחזר ונכסה מהם וזהו שדרשו רז"ל ויפגעו את משה ואת אהרן. אחר ששה חדשים נגלה הקב"ה במדן ואמר לו לך שוב מצרימה. בא משה ממדן ואהרן ממצרים ופגעו בהם שוטרי ישראל כשהם יוצאים מלפני פרעה וגו'. וכן הגואל העתיד יהיה נגלה וחוזר ונכסה שהרי גאולה זו עתידה להיות 'כדמיון גאולת מצרים בהרבה ענינים וגו': That is: Just as we find that it went hard for the Israelites in Egypt from the time when the first redeemer (Moses) came before Pharaoh and said to him, by the command of the blessed God (as is read in Exod 5:1): "Let my people go, that they may hold a feast for me in the wilderness"; and that after this they were burdened all the more by servitude, and hatred toward them was aroused and increased greatly among them, so that it became greater than it had been before: so also at our future redemption, when the last redeemer (namely the Messiah) shall reveal himself, hatred among the nations against the Israelites will be aroused, and they will heap one servitude upon another upon them. The redeemer will also reveal himself, and thereafter hide himself again, so that he may lead the nations astray and harden their hearts. For thus we find at the redemption from Egypt that Moses revealed himself to them and thereafter hid himself from them again. And this is what our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have stated in their commentaries on the words (Exod 5:20): "And (as they went out from Pharaoh) they met Moses and Aaron." After six months the Holy and Blessed God revealed Himself (to Moses) in Midian and said to him (as is seen in Exod 4:19): "Go, return again to Egypt." Then Moses came from Midian and Aaron from Egypt, and the overseers of the children of Israel met them as they came out from Pharaoh, etc. Thus also the future redeemer will reveal himself and hide himself again, for behold, the future redemption will in many respects be like the redemption from Egypt, etc.

[illegible]

בשרו והוא עומד על רגליו. במצרים ברד וכאדום כתיב ואבני אלגביש. במצרים ארבה ובאדום כתיב בן אדם אמור לצפור כל כנף התקבצו ובאו. במצרים חושך ובאדום כתיב ונטה עליו קף תהו ואבני בהו. במצרים מכת בכורות ובאדום כתיב כי רותה בשמים חרבי הנה על אדום תרד 'ועל עם חרמי למשפט וכתיב חרב לה 'מלאה דם הדשנה מחלב. וכתיב כי זבח לה 'בבצרה וגו' וכתיב זיררו דאמים עמם. דבי מאיר אומד אלו כותים. דבי אבא בר כהנא אומר וחשך ואפלה 'שמשו במצרים אבל תהו ובהו לא שמשו בעולם הזה ועתידיים לשמש בכרך גדול שברומי שנ ונטה עליו קו תהו ואבני בהו לאומות העולם שלא קבלו את התורה מתוך החשך שנאמר עליהם כי הנה החשך יכסה ארץ וערפל לאומים ועל ישראל נאמר ועליך יזרח ה 'וכבודו

"and His glory shall be seen upon you; He who exacted payment from the former ones shall exact payment from the latter ones." That is: the holy, blessed God will send upon Edom (that is, Christendom) in the future all the plagues that He sent upon the Egyptians in Egypt, for it is said (Isa 23:5): "As when they heard the report of Egypt, so shall they be dismayed at the report of Tyre." For wherever the word צר Zor appears in Holy Scripture in its defective form (that is, without a Vav in the middle, since it is otherwise written צור Zor), that passage speaks of the kingdom of the wicked (that is, of Christendom, as was demonstrated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, pages 756 and 757). In Egypt there was blood (as may be read in Exod 7:19), and so too shall there be blood in Edom, as it is said (Joel 2:30): "Blood, fire, and columns of smoke." In Egypt there were frogs (as may be seen in Exod 8:2-3), whose voice was heard, and of Edom it is written (Isa 66:6): "A voice of tumult from the city, a voice from the temple." In Egypt there were lice (as may be found in Exod 8:17), and of Edom it is written (Isa 34:9): "And its streams shall be turned into pitch, and its soil into sulfur." In Egypt there was a swarm of vermin (as may be read in Exod 8:24), and of Edom it is written (Isa 34:11): "The pelican and the hedgehog shall possess it, the owl and the raven shall dwell there." In Egypt there was pestilence (as may be seen in Exod 9:15), and of Edom it is written (Ezek 38:22): "I will enter into judgment with him with pestilence and blood." In Egypt there were grievous boils (as may be found in Exod 9:11), and of Edom it is written (Zech 14:12): "Their flesh shall rot away while they are still standing on their feet." In Egypt there was hail (as may be seen in Exod 9:18), and of Edom it is written (Ezek 13:13): "And great hailstones." In Egypt there were locusts (as may be found in Exod 10:13), and of Edom it is written (Ezek 39:17): "You, son of man, say to the birds of every sort of wing: Gather yourselves and come." In Egypt there was darkness (as may be read in Exod 10:22), and of Edom it is written (Isa 34:11): "He shall stretch over it the line of desolation and the plumb line of emptiness." In Egypt all the firstborn were struck down (as may be found in Exod 11:5), and of Edom it is written (Isa 34:5):

"For my sword is drunk in heaven, and behold, it shall come down upon Edom, and upon the accursed people for punishment" (Isa 34:5). And in the following verse it is written: "The sword of the Lord is full of blood, and thick with fat" (Isa 34:6). Further it is written there: "For the Lord holds a slaughter at Bozrah." So also it is written there: "And the Reemim, that is, the unicorns, shall come down with them" (Isa 34:7). Rabbi Meir said that these Reemim, or unicorns, are the Cutheans (or Romijim, that is, Romans, as was shown above in the second chapter of this second part, pages 172 and 173). Rabbi Abba, the son of Cahana, says: darkness and gloom served in Egypt, but the wilderness and desolation did not serve in this world; they will, however, serve in the great city of Rome, as it is said: "He will stretch a measuring line over it, that it may become a waste, and a plumb line, that it may be desolate" (Isa 34:11); and this will befall the nations of the world, who did not receive the Law out of the darkness, of whom it is said: "For behold, darkness covers the earth, and gloom the peoples" (Isa 60:2). But of the Israelites it is said in the same place: "But upon you the Lord rises, and His glory appears over you." He who took vengeance upon the first will also take vengeance upon the last.

The aforementioned Rabbi Bechai teaches the same thing also in his book Cad hakkémach, fol. 57, col. 4. under the title Oth Pe; and one may also look it up in the Jalkut Schimóni on Esaïam fol. 45, col. 3. numero 291, and in the book Toledóth Yitzhak, fol. 50, col. 2. in the Parascha Bo, and in the book Pesikta rábbetha, fol. 32, col. 4., where it is likewise to be found. So also writes Isaac Abarbanel in his commentary on the 23rd chapter of Esaïe, fol. 41, col. 2. as follows: צור הנזכר בנבואה הזאת הוא רומי וכל המכות שהביא הק"ה על המצריים במצרים עתיד להביא על רומי הרשעה is Rome, and the Holy Blessed God will bring upon wicked Rome all the plagues that He brought upon Egypt in time to come. And in Bammidbar rábba, fol. 103, col. 3 at the end of the 9th Parascha, the following is read: אמר רבי אלעזר בן פרת כשם שהביא הק"ה על המצריים כך הוא עתיד להביא על מלכות הרשעה שנ' כאשר שמע למצרים יחילו כשמע צר. אמר רבי אליעזר כל צר שבמקרא חסר במלכות הרשעה הכתוב מדבר: that is, Rabbi Eliezer, the son of Pedat, said: just as the Holy Blessed God brought (the plagues) upon the Egyptians, so will He also bring them upon the wicked kingdom, as it is said (Isa 21:3): just as men were terrified when they heard of Egypt, so will they also be terrified when they hear of Zor. Rabbi Eliezer said that wherever the word Zor stands defectively (without Vau, as mentioned above), Scripture speaks of the wicked kingdom (namely, Christendom).

Christendom, too, shall perish by fire and be utterly destroyed. Concerning this, the following is read in the book Zerór hammór, Venice printing, fol. 44,

col. 2, in the Parashah Vajischlach: כל המתגאה סופו ליפול באש כמו שמצינו בדור המבול שנידונו במעינות רותחים שנאמר בחמו נדעכו ממקומם. סדום דכתיב גאון שבעת לחם וכתוב זה 'המטיר על סדום ועל עמורה גפרית ואש. וכן סנחריב ויצא מלאך ה' ויך במחנה אשור ואמרו ז"ל כמין שני חוטי אש נכנסו בחוטמיהן וכן אדום המרשעת בגובה לבה עתידה ליפול באש שנאמר הנה על אדום תרד. וכתוב ויהיבת ליקידת אישא וזהו היא העולה על מוקדה על המזבח כל הלילה עד הבוקר. וכן בכאן ועולתך ידשנה סלה. כי השם יזכור כל המנחה והמסים שלקחו מישראל בגאון ובזו בענין שבזה ישרפם באש וזהו ידשנה סלה That is: Whoever exalts himself through pride shall at last fall into the fire; just as we find with the generation of the Flood, that they were punished with boiling springs of water, for it is said (Job 6:17): When it grows hot, they vanish from their place. And of Sodom it is said (Ezek 16:49): Pride and fullness of bread (or, sufficiency). So too it is written (Gen 19:24): And the Lord rained brimstone and fire upon Sodom and Gomorrah. Likewise it is read of Sennacherib (2 Kgs 19:35): And the angel of the Lord went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians (a hundred and eighty-five thousand men); and our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the fire entered their nostrils like two threads. In the same manner, wicked Edom, on account of the pride of its heart, shall in time to come fall into the fire, for it is said (Isa 34:5): Behold, it shall come down upon Edom. And it is written (Dan 7:11): (I beheld, until the beast was slain, and his body destroyed) and cast into the burning fire. (And it is read in Lev 6:9:) This is the burnt offering that shall burn upon the altar all night until the morning. And thus it is said here (Ps 20:4): And your burnt offering He will turn to ashes. Selah. For the Lord will remember all the gifts and tribute which they (namely the Edomites, that is, the Christians) have taken from the Israelites with pride and contempt, so that He will therefore burn them with fire; and this is what the words mean (Ps 20:4, "and your burnt offering") He will turn to ashes. Selah.

In the book Cad hakkémach, at fol. 17, col. 4, under the title Oth Daleth, the following is also written on this subject: דרשו ז"ל כל המתגאה נידון באש שנאמר היא העולה על מוקדה. זו מלכות רומי הרשעה שהיא מתגאה ומעלה את עצמה סופר שתדון באש שנאמר היא העולה That is: Our Rabbis of blessed memory have taught that everyone who exalts himself in pride shall be punished with fire, as it is said (Lev 6:9): "This is the burnt offering that shall burn." This signifies the wicked Roman Empire, which shows itself arrogant and exalts itself, but shall in the end be judged by fire, as it is said: "This is the burnt offering." Shortly after this, the following is further read in the same place: לעתיד לבוא מלכות רומי הרשעה על ידי שמתגאה ומעלה את עצמה הוא שכתוב אם הגביה כנשר ואם בין כוכבים שים קינך לפיכך נידונה באש That is: Because the wicked Roman Empire is arrogant and exalts itself, as it is written (Obad 1:4): "Though you exalt yourself like the eagle, and though you set your nest among the stars, etc." Therefore it shall be punished with fire, as it is said (Dan 7:11): "I beheld until the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame." Concerning all of this, one may also consult Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 127, col. 1, in the Parascha Zaf.

In Schemóth Rábba, fol. 108, col. 4, in the 15th Parascha, it is taught that the Christians shall in the future be judged by the sun, and the words read as follows: הכותיים מונין לחמה לומר מה חמה אינה אלא ביום כך אין מושלים אלא בעולם : that is, The Cutheans count (their years) according to the sun, thereby indicating that just as the sun rules only by day, so they too rule only in this world; and just as the sun is fiery, so shall they also be punished by it, as it is said (Mal 3:19): For behold, the day comes that shall burn like an oven, etc. This is also confirmed in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 75, col. 1, with these words: זרעו של עשו המונין לחמה עתידין לומר שידונו כן שנאמר ולהט אותם היום : הבא : that is, Those who are of the seed of Esau and count (their years) according to the sun shall in the future be judged by it. In Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel's commentary on the Prophet Jeremiah, it is read at fol. 147, col. 3 that Christendom will utterly perish like Sodom and Gomorrah, and he expounds upon the words of Jer 49:13, "For I have sworn by myself, saith the Lord, that Bozrah shall become a desolation, a reproach, a waste, and a curse; and all her cities shall be perpetual wastes," as follows: *בצרה הנזכרת כאן היא רומי כמו שתרגם יונתן כי בארץ אדום לא היתה עיר שתקרא בצרה אלא כמואב כמו שאמר למעלה ועל קריות ועל בצרה ועל כל ערי ארץ מואב אבל בארץ אדום לא היתה בצרה אלא רומי שנקראת כן בדברי ישעיהו בפרשת קרבו גוים לשמוע ובדברי ירמיהו כאן וזה להיותה עיר בצורה ומטושה בעמים ומהי היתה לשמה לחרפה ולקללה וכל עריה חרבות עולם אלא שזה ייעוד עתיד בהכרח לבוא עליה וכן אומרו והיתה אדום לשמה כל עובר עליה ישום וישרוק על מכותיה כמהפכת סדום ועמורה ושכניה אמר ה' לא ישב שם איש ולא יגור בה בן אדם. וידוע שאדום עם היות שכבשה מלך בבל והכניעה תחת ממשלתו לא נחרבה בהחלט ולא נהפכה כמהפכת סדום ועמורה שגם היום יושבים עליה הפך מה שאמר לא ישב שם איש ולא יגור בה בן אדם. ואם זה לא נתקיים על ידי נבוכד נצר ולא בימי דור ולא בימי הורקנוס המלך מכית חשמונאי הנה אם כן הוא ייעוד לעתיד לבוא בהכרח על רומי : that is, Bozrah, of which mention is made here, is Rome, just as Jonathan rendered it in his Chaldean translation; for in the land of Edom there was no city called Bozrah, but rather in the land of Moab, just as he (namely the Prophet Jeremiah) said above (in chapter 48, v. 24): "And upon Kerioth, and upon Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab." In the land of Edom, however, there was no Bozrah other than Rome, which is so named in Isaiah in chapter 34 (which begins:) "Come near, ye nations, to hear" (at v. 6), and here in Jeremiah (from בצר, Bizzér, which means to fortify), because it is a fortified city and holds dominion over the peoples. But when did it become a desolation, a reproach, and a curse, and when did its cities* become a perpetual waste? (This has not yet come to pass.) It is therefore necessarily a promise that will come upon her in the future; for thus he says (namely the Prophet Jeremiah in the cited chapter 49, vv. 17-18): "And Edom shall become a desolation, so that everyone who passes by it shall be astonished and shall hiss at all its plagues. As Sodom and Gomorrah were overthrown together with their neighbors, saith the Lord, so shall no one dwell there, and no man shall sojourn therein." It is well known, however, that even though the King of Babylon conquered it and brought it under his dominion, it was not utterly laid waste, nor was it overthrown as Sodom and Gomorrah were, since it is still inhabited to this day, which is contrary to what he says: "No one shall dwell there, and no man shall sojourn therein." Since this was fulfilled neither through Nebuchadnezzar, nor in the time of David, nor in the time of King Hyrchanus, who was of the Hasmonean lineage, it is therefore necessarily a promise for the future against Rome.

Furthermore, the aforementioned Abarbanel fol. 148, col. 1. writes concerning the above-mentioned words of the 17th and 18th verses of the 49th chapter of Jeremiah in the following manner: כל זה אמר הנביא על בצרה שהוא רומי ועל אומה בני אדום שנתמלאה מהם ועליהם אמר והיתה אדום לשמה כל עובר עליה ישום וגו' ואמר כמהפכת סדום ועמורה ושכניה אמר ה' לא ישב שם איש ולא יגור בה בן אדם רוצה לומר שתתהפך בצרה כמו שנתהפכה סדום ועמורה ושכניה שהם שאר ערי הכבוש ושלא יישב בה: אחר בן שום אדם וזוהי יתבאר שזה הייעוד הוא לעתיד כי עד עתה לא היה זה: that is, the Prophet said all of this concerning Bozrah, which is Rome, and concerning the people of the children of Edom, of whom it is full; and of them he says: And Edom shall become a wasteland, so that whoever passes by there shall be astonished, etc. He also said: As Sodom and Gomorrah together with their neighbors were overthrown, says the Lord, so shall no one dwell there, and no man shall have his abode therein; by which he means to indicate that Bozrah shall be overturned, just as Sodom and Gomorrah together with their neighbors, namely the remaining cities of the plain, were overturned, and that after this no man shall dwell therein any longer; and it is evident from this that this promise is to be fulfilled in the future, for until now this has not come to pass.

How this downfall of Christendom has been prefigured is shown in Médrasch kohéleth fol. 333, col. 3. with the following words: אמר רבי שמעון בן לקיש בשעה שאמר הק"ב לנחש על גחונך תלך ירדו מלאכי השרת וקצצו ידיו ורגליו והלך קולו מסוף : העולם ועד סופו. בא נחש ונלמד על מפלתה של אדום שנאמר קולה כנחש ילך: that is, Rabbi Shimon, the son of Lakish, said: at the time when the Holy Blessed God had spoken to the serpent, "Upon your belly you shall go" (as is to be read in Gen 3:14), the ministering angels came down and cut off its hands and feet, and its voice (as it cried out on account of this) went from one end of the world to the other. Thus the serpent came and taught the downfall of Edom, as it is said (Jer 46:22): "Her voice shall go like a serpent." There also stands written in the book Mikrää kodesch, in the 2nd chapter, fol. 51, col. 2. as follows: כל מה שאירע לאבות סימן לבנים ומה שאירע במצרים גם כן סימן למה שיבוא בביאת המשיח that is, everything that befell the fathers was a sign (or prefiguration) for their children; and what came to pass in Egypt was likewise a sign (or prefiguration) of that which will occur at the coming of the Messiah.

At that same time, the seventy princes mentioned above in the 18th chapter of the first part, who according to the Jews' belief govern the seventy nations of the world and are supposed to be their gods, shall also be overthrown. Concerning this, the book Májene jeschúa fol. 46 col. 1 contains the following: הגה יעד הנביא שבזמן הגאולה הב"ה ישפיע מבלי אמצעי אחר גם על כל האומות ויסיר ויבטל 'כחות שרי האומות כלם והיה ה' למלך על כל הארץ ועל זה נאמר אלהי כל הארץ יקרא וגו' That is: Behold, the prophet has promised that the holy and blessed God, at the time of redemption, without the mediation of any other, will also abundantly impart (His gifts) to all nations, and will take away and destroy the powers of all the princes of the nations, so that the Lord will be a King over the entire world, as it is said (Isa 54:5): (The Holy One in Israel) will be called a God of the entire world. And in the fourth column of the same place one reads: הגה מה שאמר חזי הויה עד די כרסון רמיו נאמר על כסאות שרי האומות המשפיעים That is: Behold, what the prophet Daniel says in the 7th chapter, v. 9: I watched until the chairs (or thrones) were cast down, is said concerning the thrones of the princes of the nations, who abundantly impart (their gifts) to them. For when the holy and blessed God wishes to punish them (namely the nations), He casts down the thrones of their supreme princes before Him. Likewise, in the Jalkut Schimóni on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 60 col. 3, numero 199, the following is taught at the end: אין לך כל אומה לוקה שאין אלהיה לוקה עמה שנ' 'ובכל אלהי מצרים אעשה שפטים That is: There is no nation whatsoever that is struck without its god being struck along with it, as it is said (Exod 12:12): And I will execute judgment against all the gods of the Egyptians.

The princes, however, are to be punished before the peoples, concerning which one reads in Schir baschirim rábba at the end, fol. 277, col. 3, as follows: הנה פורע מאומה למטה עד שמפיל שריה מלמעלה that is, the holy blessed God takes vengeance on no people here below unless He has first cast down its prince above. With this Rabbi Bechai also agrees, when he at fol. 47.

74. col. 1. in the Parascha Bo expresses himself thus: כשהקדוש ברוך הוא נפרע מן האומה נפרע מאלהיה תחלה וכן דרשו ז"ל כשם שנפרעים מן העובדים כך נפרעים מן

הנעבדים: that is, when the holy blessed God takes vengeance on a people, He first takes vengeance on its god. And thus our rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught that just as one takes vengeance on those who serve, so also does one take vengeance on those who are served. This is likewise confirmed by Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, when he speaks at fol. 89, col. 2. at the beginning of the Parascha Beschállach: דע כי כשהקדוש ברוך הוא רוצה לעקור אומה ולהשפילה מישפיל השר שלה תחלה במרום כמו : 'שאר' זל אין אומה נופלת אלא אם כן נופל שרה תחלה שנ 'יפקוד ה' על צבא המרום וגו' : that is, know that when the holy blessed God wishes to uproot a people or to humble it, He first humbles its prince on high; just as our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that no people falls unless its prince falls first, as it is said (Isa 24:21): the Lord shall visit the host of the high ones, etc. And in the book Mechilta one reads at fol. 15, col. 1.: להק"ב עתיד להפרע מן המלכות לעתיד לבוא : 'עד שיפרע משריהן תחלה שנ 'והיה ביום ההוא יפקוד ה' על צבא המרום וגו' : that is, the holy blessed God will not in the future take vengeance on the kingdoms (or monarchies) until He has first taken vengeance on their princes, as it is said (Isa 24:21): at that time the Lord shall visit the host of the high ones, etc. On this matter the book Cad hakkémach may also be consulted at fol. 20, col. 1. under the title Oth Gimel.

The reason, however, why such princes are to be punished is said to derive from the sins of the peoples subject to them, for in the book Toledóth Yitzhak fol. 26, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajéra it is written thus: במדרש הוזהר ויבוא אלהים אינו אלא שרו של אבימלך ואמר לשר שלו הגוי גם צדיק תהרגו והשיב שר שלו גם אנכי ידעתי כי בתום לבבך עשית זאת ואחשון גם אנכי אותך מחטו לי מחטו אינו באלף בסוף המלה לפי ששר האדם מענישין אותו כשחוטא האדם שהוא ממונה עליו ולזה אמר ואחשון גם אנכי אותך בעכור שלא יהט לי עונש בשמים ומחטו הוא מלשון חטט שהיא עונשים גדולים כאלו : that is, in the Medrasch of the Sohar (it is read that the words of Gen 20:3) "But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night" signify none other than the prince of Abimelech (who is here called Elohim, that is, God), and he said to his prince (v. 4): "Wilt thou then also slay a righteous people?" But his prince answered him (v. 5): "I know also that thou didst this with a sincere heart, therefore I also withheld thee, mecható li, that is, that thou shouldst not sin against me."

The word mecható (which properly means sinning) had no Aleph at the end (whereas it ought to have been written with an Aleph, mecható), because the prince of a man is punished, who is set over that man, when the man sins; for this reason he (namely, the prince of Abimelech) said: "Therefore I also withheld thee, so that they might not punish me in Heaven." The word mecható, however, carries a meaning derived from the word machat (which means a needle), and signifies great punishments, as if one were to strike me with needles and pierce me with them.

In the small Jalkut Rubéni, under number 73, beneath the title Othióth Aleph Beth, the following is also read: כל מה שהאומות העולם פושעים לוקים על פשעם: השרים שלהם וזהו שאמר שרו של אבימלך ואחשור איתך מחטו לי חסר אלף כלומר דע משעה שחטאת שלקחת שרה אשת אברהם דנו אותי בבית דין של מעלה ומכניסין בי קוצים ומחטים ואני בצער גדול כי אלהים זה שדבר עם אבימלך שרו היה כי לא היה ראוי לנבואה ומחטים ואני בצער גדול : that is, for all the sins which the nations of the world commit, their princes are struck. This is what the prince of Abimelech said (Gen 20:6, to Abimelech): "Therefore I have restrained you": מחטו לי mecható li, that is, from sinning against me (or, so that you would not sin against me). The word mecható, however, is written without the letter Aleph, as though he had meant to say: Know that from the moment you sinned and took Sara, the wife of Abraham, I was condemned in the highest court of justice (in Heaven), and was pierced with thorns and needles, so that I suffer great pain. For the God who spoke with Abimelech was his prince, since Abimelech was not worthy of prophecy, nor was it fitting that he should speak with any angels other than his own prince. But is this not contrary to a strange Rabbinical madness, in that what God spoke with Abimelech is attributed to a devil, and the word mecható, that is, "from sinning," is interpreted as though it meant machath, that is, a needle, and piercing with needles? Yet among the hardened Jews, such foolish interpretations must pass for pure wisdom.

Now, as mentioned, since the princes of the nations are to be punished in the future at the time of the Messiah, we also want to examine what shall befall Sammaël, the supposed regent and prince of Christendom. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 135, col. 2, in the Parashah Tasria, it is written that he shall be struck with leprosy, and there, upon the words of Lev 13:2, "When a person has on the skin of his flesh a swelling, or a scab, or a bright spot, and it appears to be a leprous disease on the skin of his flesh," the following is written: because (Isa 14:4) it is said: Then you shall take up this proverb against the king of Babylon (which "taking up" in Hebrew is called nasáta and derives from Nasá.) The word ספחת Sappáchath, that is, scab, signifies the Median Empire, because Haman attached himself to Abasuerus in order to destroy, to kill, and to annihilate (the Jews) (which "attaching oneself" in the Hebrew text is called hiftappéach and derives from Saphách, that is, to cause to attach, or to join together.) The word בהרת Babéreth, that is, bright spot, signifies the Greek Empire, which displayed itself magnificently over the Israelites and had commanded: whoever has an ox shall inscribe upon its horn the words: I have no portion in the Lord, the God of Israel. But whoever had not done so, they condemned to death. (The word צרעת Zaráath, that is, leprosy, in the words:) "and it appears to be a leprous disease," that is, a Zaráath or leprosy on the skin of his flesh, signifies the Edomite Empire, which, together with its prince, the Holy and Blessed God will strike with leprosy; for thus did Jeremiah, upon whom be peace, prophesy (in chapter 46, v. 15): Why has אביריך נסחף abbirécha nischáf, that is, your mighty one been swept away? (Why) did he not stand firm? Because the Lord has thrust him down. The word nischáf means as much as nispách, that is, to be attacked or struck with scabs, from the word Sappáchath, which means a scab. He also says אביריך abbirécha, that is, your mighty ones, with a Yod (which is the sign of the plural number, or of the greater number, whereas it ought to read only אבירך abbirechá, that is, your mighty one, in the singular number, or in the single number), because the prince of the Edomite Empire encompasses within himself all the mighty ones (that is, all the other princes) who stand under his power; and the Mighty One of Jacob (that is, God) will come and take vengeance upon that same mighty one.

דרשו רז"ל שאת זו בבל וגו' שנאמר ונשאת המשל הזה על מלך בבל. ספחת זו מלכות מדי שהיה המן מסתפח עם אחשורוש להשמיד להרוג ולאבד. בהרת זה יון שהיתה מבהרת על ישראל ואומרת כל מי שיש לו שור יחקק על קרן השור אין לי חלק ביי 'אלהי ישראל ואם לאו גוזרין עליו להריגה. והיה בעור בשרו לנגע צרעת זו מלכות אדום שהק' בה מלכה אותו 'בצרעת ואת השר שלה שכן התנבא ירמיהו עליו השלום מדוע נסחף אביריך לא עמד כי יי הדפו. זמלת נסחף כמו נספה מלשון ספחת ואמר אביריך בידו לפי שהשר שלה הוא כולל כל האבירים שתחת ידו יבוא אביר יעקב ויפרע מאותו אביר : That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have explained it thus: the word שאת Seéth, that is, swelling (which derives from נשא Nasá, that is, to lift up, etc.) signifies Babel (or the Babylonian Monarchy),

Shortly thereafter, the following appears in the same place: זמנין שפרע הק"ה: ומנן השר שלה בצרעת: שכן התנבא זכריה וזאת תהיה המגפה אשר יגוף יי' את כל ממנה ומן השר שלה בצרעת: That is: From where is it then proven that the holy, blessed God will take vengeance upon that same (Edomite Kingdom) and its prince with leprosy? Because Zechariah (in chapter 14, v. 12) has prophesied thus: "And this shall be the plague with which the Lord will smite all the peoples that have fought against Jerusalem; he will cause the flesh of each one to waste away while he is still standing on his feet." (Zech 14:12)

In the Jalkut chádasc, at fol. 143, col. 2, numero 58, under the title Maschiach, it is read that he shall be slaughtered, and the words run as follows: עתידים כל אומות לבגוד במלכות הרשעה ויגרשום מאומתם ויברחו עד בית גוברין וימצאו שם משיח ויסכימו שם להמליכו והשר שלהם יברח לבצרה ונגלה עליו הק"ה להרגו אמר לו רבונו של עולם כתיב ונס אל אחת הערים האל וחי והק"ה משיבו לא קראת מה כתיב בצידו גואל הדם ימית הרוצח וכתיב בני בכורי ישראל זכו 'מיד הק"ה תופסו בציצית ראשו ואלהיו שוחטו That is: In the future, all nations will fall away from the godless kingdom (namely the Christians) and drive them out from among their people; thereupon they will flee as far as Beth guvrin, and there find the Messiah, and unanimously make him king. But when their (understand: the Christians') prince (namely Sammaël) takes flight toward Bozra, the holy blessed God will reveal Himself over him in order to kill him. He will, however, say to Him: "Lord of the world, it is written (Deut 4:42): And the manslayer shall flee into one of those cities and remain alive." Then the holy blessed God will answer him: "Have you not read what is written alongside it (Num 35:21): The avenger of blood shall put the manslayer to death; and it is written (Exod 4:22): Israel is my son, my firstborn, etc." Thereupon the holy blessed God will immediately seize him by the locks of his head, and Elijah will slaughter him, so that his blood will spatter upon his garment, etc. Exactly the same is also to be read in the aforementioned Jalkut chadasch, fol. 80, col. 4, numero 20, under the title Jézer tof vejézer ra, in these words: אמרו חז"ל עתיד הק"ב להשחוט את היצר הרע דאיהו סמאל שר של ארום לא הק"ב בעצמו ישחטנו אלא הק"ב יתפוס אותו בציצית ראשו ואליהו שוחטו That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, have said that the holy blessed God will in the future slaughter the Jézer hará, that is, the figmentum malum, or the evil inclination, namely Sammaël, the prince of Edom; yet the holy blessed God will not slaughter him Himself, but will seize him by the locks of his head, and Elijah will slaughter him. It is likewise found in the Talmudic tractate Súcca fol. 52, col. 1 that he shall be slaughtered.

But he shall not be slaughtered alone; rather, the same fate shall befall all the princes of the kingdoms as well, for in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 89, col. 3, in the Parascha Beschállach, the following is written: וזהו מאמרם ז"ל בספר היכלות לו נקמה להנקם ממנו עד שיגיע יפקוד יי' על צבא המרום במרום שהוא נשחט ומוטל הוא וכל שרי מלכויות וכבשים של יום כפורים במרום כגדיי That is: (This, that God punishes the princes before He punishes the people,) is that which our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said in the book Hechalóth concerning Sammaël, the prince of Rome, and his powers (that is, his subordinate spirits): and the vengeance is reserved for him, that one will take revenge upon him when the time comes (of which it is written in Isa 24:21: "At that time the Lord will visit the upper host on high"; for he shall be slaughtered, together with all the princes of the kingdoms who are on high, like the goats and lambs of the Day of Atonement). Concerning this, one may also consult the small Jalkut Rubéni, no. 56, under the title Sammaël.

Elsewhere it is read that the Messiah will kill and overthrow Sammaël together with his host, and this is taught in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 151, col. 4, numero 21, under the title Nissim, as follows: כשיבוא משיח יהרוג כל חילו של סמאל

That is: When the Messiah comes, he will kill the entire host of Sammaël. In the Jalkut Schimóni, however, on Isaiah, it is written at fol. 56, col. 3, numero 359: במלמד כי טוב מלמד זה אורו של משיח שנאמר וירא אלהים את האור כי טוב מלמד זה אורו של משיח ובמעשיו קורם שנברא העולם וגנזו למשיח ולדורו תחת כסא הכבוד שלו אמר שטן לפני הקב"ה רבונו של עולם אור שנגנז תחת כסא הכבוד שלך למי. אמר לו למי שהוא עתיד להחזירך ולהכלימך בבושת פנים. אמר לו רבונו של עולם הראהו לי אמר לו בא וראהו אותו. וכיון שראה אותו נודעזע ונפל על פניו אמר בודאי זהו משיח שעתיד להפיל את לי ולכל האומות בגיהנם שנאמר בלע המות לנצח ומחה יי אלהים דמעה מעל כל פנים that is (What do the words of Ps 36:10 mean:) In your light we see light? They signify the light of the Messiah, as it is said (Gen 1:4): And God saw the light, that it was good, which teaches us that the Holy and blessed God had looked upon the generation of the Messiah and upon his works before the world was created, and that He had hidden it for the Messiah and his generation beneath the throne of His glory. Then Satan spoke to the Holy and blessed God: Lord of the world, for whom is the light that is hidden beneath the throne of your glory? And He answered him: It is for the one who will drive you back and put you to shame. Thereupon he said further to Him: Lord of the world, let me see him; and God said to him: Come and see him. But when he had seen him, he was seized with terror and fell upon his face and said: This is surely the Messiah who will cast me and all the nations into hell, as it is said (Isa 25:8): He will swallow up death forever, and the Lord will wipe away tears from all faces. The very same is also to be found in the book Pesikta rabbetha fol. 62, c. 1.

Through such downfall of Sammaël and his supposed subordinate people, that grave decree which was issued against him long ago, on account of the ten rabbis delivered to the Romans to be killed (who are called עשרה הרוגי מלכות asárah harúge málchus, that is, the ten who were put to death by the [Roman] Empire), and which he is said to have signed, shall be carried into effect. Concerning these ten rabbis and the decree signed by Sammaël, an account was given above in the 2nd chapter of this second part, pagina 139 and 140, and it is therefore unnecessary to repeat it here.

After such a fall and downfall of Christendom, things are said to go very well for the Jews, and in Bereschith rábba fol. 4, col. 4. at the end, and fol. 5, col. 1 in the 6th Parascha, the following is read: שקע כל זמן שאורו של גדול קיים אין אורו של קטן מהפרסם. שקע אורו של גדול מהפרסם אורו של קטן. כך כל זמן שאורו של עשו קיים אין אורו של יעקב מתפרסם. שקע אורו של עשו מהפרסם אורו של יעקב. הה"ד קומי אורי כי בא אורך כי הנה החשך יכסה ארץ: that is, as long as the light of the great one endures, the light of the small one does not become manifest; but when the light of the great one sets, the light of the small one makes itself seen. So too, as long as the light of Esau endures, the light of Jacob does not become manifest; but when the light of Esau sets, the light of Jacob reveals itself. This is what is written (Isa 60:1-2): Arise, shine, for your light has come, etc., for behold, darkness covers the earth. This is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimoni on the five books of Moses, fol. 4, col. 1. numero 8. at the end, and fol. 58, col. 3. numero 191.

Now let us also examine at what time of year, according to the opinion of the Rabbis, their redemption will take place. In the Jalkut Shimoni on Isaiah, it is written on this subject at fol. 47, col. 1, numero 302 as follows: רבי אליעזר אומר בניסן נגאלו ישראל ממצרים ובתשרי עתידין להגאל וגו': 'רבי יהושע אומר בניסן נגאלו וגו': 'ובניסן עתידין להגאל וגו': that is, Rabbi Eliezer says the Israelites were redeemed from Egypt in March and will in the future be redeemed in September, etc. Rabbi Jehoshua says they were redeemed in March and will in the future be redeemed in March, etc. And this is taken from the Talmudic tractate Rosh Hashbanah, fol. 11, col. 2. In the book Mayene Yeshua, it is read at fol. 86, col. 4 as follows: הגאולה העתידה תהיה כראשונה ולכן אמרו ז"ל בניסן נגאלו ובניסן עתידין להגאל: That is, the future redemption will be like the first one; therefore our sages, of blessed memory, said that the Israelites were redeemed (from Egypt) in March and that they shall also be redeemed in the future in March. For this reason the Jews pray in a prayer that begins אות זה החדש, Oth seh hachodesch, found in the second part of the Prague Machzor, fol. 30, col. 2 and fol. 31, col. 1, under the title Yotzer lepharashath hachodesch, to God in the following manner: חפץ באני ישנה והצילנה מעדינה בראשון לחדשי השנה: That is, Look upon her who says "I sleep" (that is, the Jewish community) and deliver her from Adina (that is, Christendom) in the first of the months of the year. And this is expounded in the Commentary thereon as follows: הציל לישראל מאומה הרשעה: That is, Deliver the Israelites from the wicked people in the first month of the year, namely in the month of March, in which they are to be redeemed. In the book Ir Gibborim, it is taught at fol. 26, col. 1, numero 45 as follows: הגאולה שלעתיד הגופנית תהיה באותו פרק שהייתה הגאולה הראשונה דהיינו בניסן שנאמר כימי צאתך מארץ מצרים אראנו נפלאות או באותו פרק שגוטלה גדולתן של ישראל דהיינו בט' באב ובאותו פרק הוא עתיד לשמחנ שנאמר באותו פרק: That is, the future bodily redemption will occur at the very same time at which the first redemption took place, namely in March, as it is said (Mic 7:15): I will show them wonders, as in the time when you came out of the land of Egypt. Or at the time at which the glory of the Israelites was taken from them, namely on the ninth day of the month of July, and at that same time He will cause them to rejoice again, as it is said (Ps 90:15): Make us glad according to the days in which you have afflicted us. So too is it found in the book Emek Hammelech, fol. 141, col. 2, in the 32nd chapter under the title

Shaar resha difer anpin: יש לנו קבלה אמתית שהדיה הגאולה בזמן קבלת שבת: that is, We have a certain tradition, or oral teaching, that the redemption will come at the time of the receiving of the Sabbath (that is, on Friday evening, when the Sabbath begins).

Chapter XV.

In which it is shown how long the Messiah will reign after the defeat of his enemies and the subjugation of the entire world, and what further events will occur during his reign.

Just as the rabbis hold very different opinions on many matters, so too they do not agree at all on the question of how long the Messiah will reign, as can be clearly seen from the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 99, col. 1., where the following is written: רבי אליעזר אומר ימות המשיח ארבעים שנה שנאמר: רבי אלעזר בן עזריה אומר שבעים שנה שנאמר והיה ביום ההוא ונשכחת צור ע' שנה כימי מלך אחד איזהו מלך מיוחד הוא אומר זה משיח. רבי אומר שלשה דורות שנאמר יראוך עם שמש ולפני ירח דור דורים וגו': 'תניא אידך רבי אליעזר אומר ימות המשיח ארבעים שנה בכתיב הכא ויענך וירעיבך ויאכילך וכתיב התם שמחנו כימות עניתנו שנות ראינו רעה. ר' יוסא אומר ד' מאות שנה כתיב הכא ועבדום וענו אותם ארבע מאות שנה וכתיב התם שמחנו כימות עניתנו. ר' אומר שלש מאות וששים וחמש שנה כמנין ימות החמה שנאמר כי יום נקם בלבי ושנת גאולי באה וגו'. 'הני אבימי בריה דרבי אבהו ימות המשיח לישראל שבעת אלפים שנה שנאמר כמשוש חתן על כלה כן ישיש עליך אלהיך. אמר רב יהודה אמר שמואל ימות המשיח כמיום כשנברא העולם ועד עכשיו שנאמר כימי השמים על הארץ. אמר רב נחמן בר יצחק אמר כימי נח עד עכשיו שנאמר כי מי נח זאת לי אשר נשבעתי: that is, we have learned in a Baraita or tradition: Rabbi Eliezer says the days of the Messiah will last forty years, as it is said (Ps 95:10): "Forty years long was I grieved with this generation." Rabbi Elazar, the son of Azariah, says they will last seventy years, as it is said (Isa 23:15): "And it shall come to pass at that time that Tyre shall be forgotten for seventy years, according to the days of one king." Who is this singular king? Say that he is the Messiah. The Rabbi says they will last three generations, as it is said (Ps 72:5): "They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, from one generation to another." (In Hebrew it reads Dor dorim, דור דורים, which means "generation" and "generations," and the word Dor, that is, "generation," is said to signify one generation, and Dorim, that is, "generations," two generations, as Rabbi Solomon explains in his Commentary.) We have learned in another Baraita or tradition: Rabbi Eliezer says the days of the Messiah will last forty years. Here (Deut 8:3) it is written: "He humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee"; and there (Ps 90:15) it is written: "Make us glad again, according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, according to the years wherein we have seen evil." Rabbi Dosa says they will last four hundred years. Here (Gen 15:13) it is written: "They shall be made to serve and shall be afflicted four hundred years"; and there (Ps 90:15) it is written: "Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us." The Rabbi says they will last three hundred and sixty-five years, according to the days of the sun, as it is said (Isa 63:4): "For the day of vengeance is in my heart, and the year of my redeemed is come, etc." (and here the word "year" is said to signify three hundred and sixty-five years, because that is how many days are in a year.) Abimi, the son of Rabbi Ababu, teaches that the days of the Messiah shall last seven thousand years for the Israelites, because it is said (Isa 62:5): "As the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee"; for a wedding lasts seven days, and thus God will also rejoice for seven days, that is, seven thousand years, since one day of God is a thousand years, as Rabbi Solomon explains. Rav Jebuda says that Samuel said that the days of the Messiah will last as long as the time from the creation of the world until now, because it is said (Deut 11:21): "As the days of heaven upon the earth." Rav Nachman, the son of Isaac, has said that they will last as long as the time from the days of Noah until now, because it is said (Isa 54:9): "For this shall be unto me as the waters of Noah; for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah shall no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I will not be angry with thee, nor rebuke thee." The same is also found in the book Yalkut Chadash fol. 144, col. 4. numero 93. under the heading Mashiach, and in the book Midrash Tillim, fol. 40, col. 2. on Psalm 90, as well as in the Yalkut Shimoni on the Psalms, fol. 112, col. 2. 3. numero 805. and 806., though with some variation; and there follows in the third column, in the aforementioned numero 806. of the Yalkut Shimoni, the following: רבי ברכיה בשם רבי חייא הגדול אמר שש מאות שנה דכתיב כימי העץ ימי עץ חסרון עושה ת"ר שנה. רבי אליעזר בנו של רבי יוסי הגלילי אומר ת"ר שנה דכתיב כי יום נקם בלבי ויומו של הק"ב ת"ר שנה. רבי יהושע אומר שני אלפים שנה שנאמר שמחנו כימות עניתנו ואין : that is, Rabbi Berachya says in the name of Rabbi Chiya the Great that they shall last six hundred years, because it is said (Isa 65:22): "The days of my people shall be as the days of a tree"; for the trunk of a tree lasts six hundred years. Rabbi Eliezer, the son of Rabbi Jose the Galilean, says that they shall last one thousand years, because it is written (Isa 63:4): "For the day of vengeance is in my heart"; but one day of the Holy Blessed God is one thousand years. Rabbi Jeboshua says they will last two thousand years, because it is said (Ps 90:15): "Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us"; but the word "days" (which is the plural number) signifies no fewer than two days of the Holy Blessed God, which make two thousand years. On such opinions one may also consult the book Pesikta Rabbeta fol. 2, col. 1., as well as the book Netzach Yisrael fol. 51, col. 4. and fol. 52, col. 1-2 in the 42nd chapter, in which latter work the matter is treated at length.

The learned Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon set no fixed duration in his book Bábo Móse for how long this kingdom would last, but rather expresses himself on the matter at paginâ 160 in the Arabic language as follows: וידום מלכה דואמא : that is, His kingdom will endure for a very long time, and no one should find it strange that this kingdom will last several thousand years. The very same thing is also taught by him in his Commentario on the Mishnah of the Talmudic Tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 119, col. 1. of the Talmud printed at Amsterdam, in Hebrew, with these words: יארך מלכות ימים רבים עד מאד וגו' ואין לתמוה שתתקיים מלכותו אלפים מן השנים לפי : that is, The kingdom (of the Messiah) will endure for a very long time, etc., and one must not wonder that his kingdom will last several thousand years, since our sages have said that when a good company assembles itself, it will not quickly be dissolved. But according to the opinion of Abarbanel, it is to last forever, for he writes thus in his book Májene jeschúa fol. 39, col. 1.: המלכות העתידה אשר יזכור למשיח צדקנו לא : אמר שהיה עולה מן הים כי אם שבא עם ענני שמיא כלומר שלא יהיה ממשלתו מהשרים That is, concerning the future kingdom of the Messiah, who is our righteousness, of which he (namely the prophet Daniel in chapter 7) makes mention, he does not say that he arose out of the sea, but rather that he came in the clouds of heaven; that is, that his dominion would not derive from the higher princes, the spirits beneath the heavens (who rule over the nations of the world), but rather from the particular providentz, or providence (of God); and therefore it will be enduring and eternal.

The Jews also do not agree among themselves on whether the Messiah, the Son of David, will be mortal or immortal. Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon was of the opinion that he would die and that his sons would reign after him, for in his aforementioned Commentario on the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 120, col. 1. of the said Talmud printed in Amsterdam, the following is written: דע כי האדם יש לו למות בהכרח ויתפרד וישוב למה שהורכב ממנו : That is: Know that man must necessarily die, and that he will be dissolved and die, and return to that from which he was composed. Shortly thereafter follows: המשיח ימות וימלוך בנו ותחתיו ובן בנו וכבר באר הנביא אות מיתתו לא יכהה ולא : That is: The Messiah will die, and in his place his son and his grandson will reign; and the prophet (Isaiah) has clearly indicated his death (when he speaks of him in chapter 42, verse 4): He will not grow faint nor be broken until he has established justice upon the earth. He teaches the same thing also in his aforementioned book Babo Môte pagina 159. and 160., where he states: ואלמשיח ימות וילי אבנה וקר בין אללה מותה קאל לא יכהה ולא ירוץ : That is: The Messiah will die, and after him his son and grandson will reign; for God indicates that he will die (when He says): He will not grow faint nor be broken until he has established justice upon the earth. Rabbi Isaac also held this belief, for he expresses himself in his book Chisuk emuna pagina 473. as follows: זה המזמור נאמר על מלך המשיח אשר יקימהו השם: יתברך מזרעו של דוד המלך עליו השלום ויהיה מלך על כל ישראל ולא יהיה הפסק למלכותו אבל ימלוך הוא ובנו ובן בנו אחריו עד עולם, That is: This (namely Ps 45) is spoken of the King Messiah, whom the blessed God will raise up from the seed of King David (upon whom be peace), and he will be a king over all Israel, whose reign will not cease, for after him his son and his grandson will reign unto eternity.

On the other hand, Rabbi Bechai teaches in his Commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 21, col. 1, in the Parashah Noach, that the Messiah is immortal, when he writes the following over the words These are the generations of Shem (Gen 11:10): לא תמצא זכרון מיתה בתולדות שם כמו שתמצא: בדורות הראשונים מאדם ועד נח. ויתכן להיות בזה טעם בעבור שמלכות בית דוד בא משם ומשיח בן דוד לא יהיה בו מיתה אבל הוא עתיד שיהיה לעולם כי מעת באו יהיה ותל"ו שנים לתשלום האלף הששי והוא כמנין לסרבה המשרה שחשבון ס' סתומה ת"ר ואחרי ה"תל"ו יכנס מיד באלף השביעי שכולו שבת וחיים נצחיים ועליו אמר דוד עליו השלום חיים שאל ממך נתת: that is, you will not find among the generations of Shem that death is mentioned, as you find it among the preceding generations from Adam up to Noah; and this must be the reason, since the royal lineage of the house of David descends from him, and because the Messiah, the son of David, will not die but will live eternally. For when he comes, eight hundred and thirty-seven years will have elapsed toward the completion of the six thousandth year since the creation of the world, namely according to the numerical value of the word (Isa 9:7) לסרבה lemárbeh, in the words המשרה lemarbéh hammisra, that is, "he who increases the dominion," for the closed Mem makes 600 (and the whole word lemarbéh makes 837). After the eight hundred and thirty-seven years, however, the seven thousandth year will begin, which will be pure Sabbath and eternal life. And concerning that same Messiah, King David, upon whom be peace, said (Ps 21:5): He asked life of You, and You gave him length of days forever and ever.

Rabbi Meir is of the same opinion in his book Avódath hakkódesch fol. 55, col. 2., in the 43rd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, and he refutes therein the aforementioned opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon with these words: הר"מבם ז"ל שפט משפט מות על בני תחיית המתים ועל המשיח ודורו וזה גרם לו הסתבכותו בשרשים הפלוסופיים והדבקו בהם וחשבו שהם אמתיים כאמתה של תורה ה"ו ולזה פירש דברי התירה באופן שיסכימו עם דברי ארסטו וזופיו והבליי וכן עשה בדברי מקבלי האמת ע"ה כמפורסם בספריו וחשב שמופתי ארסטו ופתיי אי אפשר לחלוק עליהם ולהכחישם. ולזה כשיראה בתורה או בדברי מקבליה ע"ה דבר כנגדם יפרשהו באופן יסכים עמהם וחשב לפי סכל ועקש הבא כנגד דבריו. כללו של דבר על הזמן האבוד אשר בו נראה זאת הצרעת אמר understood (when he says of him): He will not fail nor be broken until he has established justice upon the earth, etc. But who among us is as wise as Rabbi Akkiva, who entered in peace and departed in peace, and wrote in his little book Othiôth in the following manner: What does the word "hand" signify? It teaches that the Holy and Blessed God will reveal His name to all the righteous and give them the cup of life, so that they may remain and live for eternity. Furthermore it is said therein: "hand" signifies the cup of life from which the Holy and Blessed God will in the future give the Messiah and the righteous to drink. So too is it read in the Médrasch Jellammedénu (that God said): In the world to come I will reveal myself in my glory to all Israelites, and they will see me and live for eternity, as it is said (Isa 52:8): For they will see it plainly when the Lord brings Zion back. Our Rabbis of blessed memory have also received through tradition or oral teaching that the Messiah, the son of David, is alive in Paradise to this very day. I have likewise already written in the preceding (42nd) chapter that our Rabbis of blessed memory have a tradition that in the future there will be no death. Let us therefore hearken to our tradition and pay no heed to the proofs of the Greek (namely Aristotle), which lead the upright astray and cause them to err through their evil way. These are the words of the aforementioned Rabbi Meir.

הנביא ע"ה וימים רבים לישראל ללא אלהי אמת וללא כהן מורה וללא תורה וזה אמת אין ספק בו ירוע לחכמי האמת היותו כן. ואש קנאת התורה הביאתנו אל זה ואשוב אל הענין אשר הייתי בו והוא כי הרב ז"ל כתב בפרק חלק בזה הלשון ודע כי האדם יש לו למות בהכרח ויחפרד. וישוב למה שהורכב ממנו ע"כ. זהו השרש והיסוד אשר עליו בנה תורת כפרו במה שאמר שם עוד והחמישית יבטח וימלוך בנו תחתיו ובנו וכבר באר הנביא את מיתתו לא יכה ולא ירוץ עד ישים בארץ משפט וגו'. ומי לנו בן דעת כרבי עקיבא שנכנס בשלום ויצא בשלום ואמר באותיותיו בזה הלשון ומהו יד מלמד שעתיד הק"ה להראות לכל הצדיקים שמו ונותן להם כוס של חיים כדי שיהיו קיימים לעולמים. עוד שם יד זה כוס של חיים שמשקוהו הק"ה למשיח ולצדיקים לעתיד לבוא. ובמדרש ילמדנו לעולם הבא אני נגלה בכבודי על כל ישראל והם רואים אותי וחיים לעולם שנאמר כי עין בעין יראו בשוב י' ציון. וקבלת ר"ז במשיח בן דוד שהוא חי בגן עדן עד היום. וכבר כתבתי בפרק שלפני זה כי קבלת ר"ז שאין מיתה לעתיד לבוא, ואל קבלתנו נשמע ולא נחוש לשופתי היוני המפתים ומשגים ישרים בדרכם הרע That is: Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon was of the opinion that those who will be raised from the dead, as well as the Messiah and the people of his time, would be subject to death. What led him to this was that he had become entangled in the philosophical foundations, had clung to them, and had supposed that they were just as true as the Law of Moses (which, however, is far from being the case); and for this reason he interpreted the words of the Law in such a way that they would agree with the words of Aristotle and his corruptions and vanities. In the same manner he dealt with the words of those who receive the truth (upon whom be peace), as is evident from his books; and he supposed that one ought not to oppose the proofs and seductions of Aristotle, nor charge them with falsehood. Therefore, whenever something in the Law, or in the words of those who received it (upon whom be peace), appeared to contradict them, he interpreted it in such a manner that it might agree with them; and he regarded anyone who contradicted his words as a simpleton, a fool, and a perverse person. In brief, concerning that ruinous time in which this leprosy arose, the Prophet said (2 Chr 15:3): Israel has now spent many days without the true God, and without a priest who taught, and without the Law; and this is true, and there is no doubting it, and it is known to those who understand the truth that it is so; and the fire of zeal for the Law has brought me to this (that I declare it). But I will turn again to the matter with which I was occupied, namely that the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, of blessed memory, wrote in his commentary on the Mishnah of the 11th chapter of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, which is called Chélek, in the following manner: Know that man must necessarily die, and that he will be dissolved and return to that of which he was composed. Thus far are his words. And this is the foundation and the ground upon which he built his silver palace, in that he further states therein: And the Messiah will die, and in his place his son and his grandson will reign; and the Prophet (Isa 42:4) has made his death clearly

Since we have now seen what opinions the Jews hold concerning the Messiah with regard to the time he is to live, we also want to examine how long, according to their teaching, other people will live at the time of the Messiah. Rabbi Bechai is of the opinion that they will live four to five hundred years, and he expresses himself in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 201, col. 4, and fol. 202, col. 1, on the words of Deut 11:21 ("That you and your children may live long in the land which the Lord swore to give to your fathers"), as long as the days of heaven upon earth endure, in the following manner: לפרך הכתוב כי ארץ ישראל נתונה לעולם כימי השמים על הארץ שהם לעולם ואם יגלו ממנה עתידין לחזור לתוכה וגו' : 'ויתכן עוד לומר שיהיה הבטחה לעתיד לבא כי בזכות התורה יאריכו הימים ויחיו חיים ארוכים ארבע מאות וחמש מאות שנה וזהו שאמר כימי השמים על הארץ שהרי ת"ק שנה מן השמים לארץ. וכן התנבא ישעיה עליו השלום לעתיד ואמר כימי העץ ימי עמי כאותו זמן של אדם הראשון שאכל מן העץ והיו ימי האדם והיו ארוכים כן יהיו ימי עמי לעתיד וזה יהיה כשתחזור השכינה שהיא ה"א אחרונה שבשם לפי שבעולם הזה אין בית דין של מעלה מענישין עד עשרים שנה ולעתיד כשתחזור הה"א לא יהיו מענישים עד מאה שהוא חמש פעמים עשרים שכן כתוב כי הנער בן מאה שנה ימות והחוטא בן מאה שנה יקולל. וכיון שיאריכו לרשע ולא יענש עד מאה שהוא ה' פעמים עשרים אין ספק כי הצדיק המתברך והזוכה יהיה למעוט חמשה פעמים מאה שהוא ת"ק וזהו שאמר ישעיה עליו השלום כימי העץ ימי עמי והוא עץ החיים שדרשו בו רבותינו ז"ל עץ החיים מהלך ת"ק שנה וזהו שאמר משה בכאן כימי השמים על הארץ כמדת השמים על הארץ וזה אחד אלא שהרב רסו והתלמיד בירש. ויש לפרש עוד כי הכתוב ירמוז על שני חיי האבות כי הם היו

כלן ת"ק שנה שהרי אברהם חיה ק"ע שנה ויצחק ק"פ שנה ויעקב ק"מ שנה הרי ת"ק שנה שהיו האבות השנים הנשארים כנגד שמים וארץ ות"ק הוא שיעור שבין שמים לארץ, That is: This verse teaches you that the land of Israel has been given to the Israelites forever, as long as the days of heaven upon earth endure, that is, eternally; and even if they are driven out of it, they will nevertheless return into it, etc. Furthermore, it is fitting to say that this is a promise for the time to come, that people will live long on account of the merit of the Law, and will extend their lives to four hundred and five hundred years; and this is what Scripture says: as long as the days of heaven upon earth endure, for it is five hundred years (to travel) from heaven to earth. Likewise did Isaiah, upon whom be peace, prophesy concerning the time to come, and said (in chapter 65, v. 22): the life of my people will be like a tree, just as it was in the time of the first man Adam, who ate of the tree (of life) and lived long, so shall the days of my people be long in the time to come; and this will come to pass when the Shekhinah, that is, the Divine Majesty, which is the last Ha in the name Jehovah, shall return. For in this world the supreme court (in heaven) punishes no one until he has reached his twentieth year; but in the time to come, when the letter Ha returns, it will punish no one until the hundredth year, which is the fifth time twenty; for thus it is written (Isa 65:20): for when a youth is a hundred years old, he shall die, and the hundred-year-old who sins shall be accursed. Since, then, the wicked shall live so long and not be punished until the hundredth year, which is five times twenty, there is no doubt that the righteous man, who is blessed and worthy of it, will live at the very least five times a hundred, that is, five hundred years. And this is what Isaiah, upon whom be peace, said: the life of my people shall be like a tree; and the tree of life is understood here, of which our Rabbis, of blessed memory, taught that it is as long as a man can walk in five hundred years. This is also what Moses said here (when he says): as long as the days of heaven endure upon earth, that is, according to the measure from heaven to earth; and both are one and the same, except that the teacher (Moses) indicated it, while the disciple (Isaiah) stated it plainly. Furthermore, the words of Isaiah can be interpreted to mean that Scripture alludes to the years of the lives of the patriarchs, since they all together lived five hundred years; for behold, Abraham lived a hundred and seventy-five years, and Isaac a hundred and eighty years, and Jacob a hundred and forty-seven years, and thus the patriarchs lived (together) five hundred and two years; the two remaining years are in consideration of heaven and earth (since these likewise make two); but the five hundred signify the measure between heaven and earth. These are the words of Rabbi Bechai. Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon also teaches in his aforementioned commentary on the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 120, col. 1, that people at the time of the Messiah will live longer than at present, when he says: יארכו חיי בני האדם, גם כן לפי שכשיורו הדאגות והיגונות יארכו ימי אדם, That is: the life of men will also be long, for when cares and sorrows depart, the days of man will be lengthened. And this is also to be found in his book Babo Mose, page 160.

According to the teaching of the Talmud, the Jews are to be immortal in the future, while the remaining peoples are to be mortal; for in the tractate Pesachim fol. 68, col. 1. it is written thus: כי לא דמי כתיב ובלע המות לנצח וכתיב כי That is: Ulla raises an objection (and says): it is written (Isa 25:8): He will swallow up death forever; and (Isa 65:20) it is written: When a young man is a hundred years old, he will die. (These words are indeed contradictory; for the former (that death will be swallowed up forever) is to be understood of the Israelites, but the latter (that when a young man is a hundred years old he will die) is to be understood of the peoples of the world.) So also in the book Emek hammelech fol. 17, col. 3. in the 20th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu, one reads: הנער בן מאה שנה ימות באומות העולם כתיב אבל בישראל נאמר בלע המות לנצח That is: the words, "When a young man is a hundred years old, he will die," are written of the peoples of the world. But of the Israelites it is said: He has swallowed up death forever. So also in Bereschith rabba fol. 24, col. 3. in the 26th Parascha one reads that, according to the opinion of Rabbi Channina, those who are not Jews will die; but according to the teaching of Rabbi Joshua ben Levi, neither the Jews nor the remaining peoples shall die, and the words there read as follows: רבי יהושע בן לוי אמר לא בישראל ולא באומות העולם שנאמר ומחה ה' אלהים דמעה מעל כל פנים וגו' That is: Rabbi Channina had said: in the future there is no dying except only among the children of Noah. Rabbi Joshua ben Levi said: neither among the Israelites nor among the peoples of the world will anyone die, because it is said (Isa 25:8): The Lord will wipe away tears from all faces, etc.

Rabbi Meir teaches in his book Avodáth hakkódesch fol. 55, col. 1, in the 42nd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, that the pious among the nations of the world will not die, and his words read as follows: עוד יש לומר כי חסידי אומות העולם שאמרו שיש להם חלק לעולם הבא הם אשר ימצאו בזמן התחייה אשר ישארו קיימים יהושע בן לוי אמר לא בישראל ולא באומות העולם שנאמר ומחה ה' אלהים דמעה מעל כל פנים וגו' That is, one must further say that the pious of the nations of the world, of whom (our Rabbis) have stated that they will have a portion in the world to come, are those who will be found at the time of the resurrection of the dead, who will remain alive and will not die. And shortly thereafter he writes, concerning the cited words, from Bereschith rabba, in the following manner: הנה כי לדעת רבי יהושע בן לוי אין מיתה לעתיד לבוא אפילו באומות העולם. ורבי חנינא שסובר שיש מיתה באומות העולם מודה שאין חסידי אומות העולם בכלל מיתה that is, behold, according to the opinion of Rabbi Joshua ben Levi, there is no death in the future, not even among the nations of the world. Rabbi Channina, however, who holds that there will be death among the nations of the world, acknowledges that the pious of the nations of the world are not included among those who will die.

Furthermore, the aforementioned Rabbi Meir writes in the said book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 56, col. 2. in the 43rd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, that in the future death will no longer hold any sway at all, in these words: אחר כך תהיה התחייה ובני תחיית המתים לא ישובו עוד לעפרם ויחקיימו בגוף ונפש כי כן היתה הכוונה בתחלה באדם הראשון שיחיה לעולם כמו שכתבנו כבר והחטא גרם לו ולכל הבאים אחריו המות ואחר התחייה שיבוער היצר הרע מן העולם אין עוד מות כי הגורם חלף הלך לו. ולפי שאין יצר הרע אין חטא ואם אין חטא אין מות כי אין הרכבת היסודות מחייבת ההפרדה בהכרח כדעת היוני והנמשכים אחר דעתו המזוייף אבל החטא הוא המפסיד והמפריד ההרכבה. כי מתחלה כוון בהרכבה זו שלא תפרד לעולם והחטא גרם לה להפרד. ולעולם הבא that is to say, after this (namely, after the redemption) the resurrection of the dead will take place, and those who are raised will not be turned back into dust again, but will remain alive in body and soul; for this was originally the intention with the first man Adam, that he should live for eternity, as we have already written: but sin brought death upon him and upon all his descendants. After the resurrection, however, when the evil inclination (and sinful nature) will be eradicated from the world, there will be no more death, for the dissolution of the elements does not necessarily follow from their combination, as the opinion of the Greek (namely Aristotle) and of others who follow his false opinion would have it: rather, it is sin that corrupts and dissolves the combination. For the original intention with the combination was that it should never be dissolved, but sin brought about the separation; in the world to come, however, after the resurrection, there will be neither sin nor death any longer. On this matter, the book Shulchan árba fol. 11, col. 2. may also be consulted.

Since the time of creation, man has had the freedom to do good or evil according to his own will; and this is likewise the condition of men for as long as the Law endures, so that they may have merit when they choose the good, and (conversely) be punished when they take pleasure in evil. But in the days of the Messiah, the choosing of good will be natural to them, and the heart will not desire that which is not fitting. They will also take no pleasure whatsoever in what is improper; and this is the circumcision spoken of here (in the aforementioned words of Deut 30:6), for lust and desire are the foreskin of the heart. When man will no longer have lust and desire, he will at that time return to what he was before the sin of Adam, when man by nature did that which was fitting to do, and there were not two contrary things in his will; and this is what Scripture says in Jeremiah (in chapter 31, vv. 31, 32, 33): "Behold, the time is coming, says the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah, not like the covenant that I made with their fathers; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days: I will put my Law in their hearts and write it in their minds"; and these words signify the abolition of the evil nature, so that the heart may by nature take heed of what is proper. For this reason he says further (vv. 33, 34): "And I will be their God, and they shall be my people; and no one shall teach his neighbor, saying, Know the Lord, but they shall all know me, from the least to the greatest." It is thus (from Gen 8:21) well known that the imagination of the human heart is evil from his youth, and that it is necessary to teach men; but their jézer, or imagination (and evil nature), will at that time come entirely to an end. In this manner it is said in Ezekiel (chapter 36, vv. 26, 27): "And I will give you a new heart and a new spirit, etc. I will put my spirit within you and will cause you to walk in my commandments." The heart, however, signifies man's nature, and the spirit signifies desire and will. And this is what our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said (on the words of Eccl 12:1): "Before the years come in which you will say, I have no pleasure in them": these (years) are the days of the Messiah, in which there will be neither merit nor guilt (or sin), for merit and sin depend upon the will. This last point, that in the days of the Messiah there will be neither merit nor sin, is also to be found in Médrasch Kohéleth, fol. 336, col. 1, where the words of Eccl 12:1 are likewise cited for the same purpose. That the jézer hará, or evil imagination, and the evil disposition and nature of man, shall come to an end in the time of the Messiah, is also to be seen in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 72, col. 1, in the Parascha Bo, and fol. 151, col. 4, in the Parascha Nizzavim, as well as in the book Pesikta rábbetha, fol. 63, col. 1.

Since it has been mentioned here that in the future the evil and sinful disposition, which the Rabbis call Jézer hará, is to be entirely eradicated from the world, and that men will sin no more, I must also indicate what the Rabbis write further on this subject; and it stands in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 217, col. 3, 4, in the Parascha Nizzavim, on the words of Deut 30:6, "And the Lord your God will circumcise your heart and the heart of your offspring, etc.," the following is written: מזמן הבריאה היתה דשור ביד האדם לעשות כרצונו טוב או רע וכל זמן התורה כן כדי שיהא להם זכות בבחירתם בטוב ועונש ועונש ברצותם ברע, אבל בימות המשיח תהיה הבחירה בטוב להם טבע ולא יתאוה הלב למה שאין ראוי ולא יחפצו בו כלל והיא המילה הנזכרת כאן כי החמדה והתאוה ערלה בלב הן, וכשלא יחמוד ולא יתאוה ישוב האדם בזמן ההוא לאשר היה קודם חטאו של אדם הראשון שהיה עושה בטבעו מה שהיה ראוי לו לעשות לא היה ברצונו דבר והפכו וזהו שאמר הכתוב בירמיה הנה ימים באים נאם יי' וכרתי את בית ישראל ואת בית

יהודה ברית חדשה לא כברית אשר כרתי את אבותם כי זאת הברית אשר אכרות את בית ישראל אחר הימים ההם נתתי תורתי בלבם ועל לבם אכתבנה וזהו ביטול יצר הרע לעשות הלב בטבעו מעשה הראוי ולכך יאמר עוד והייתי להם לאלהים והמה יהיו לי לעם ולא ילמדו עוד איש את אחיו לאמר דעו את יי' כי כלם ידעו אותי למקטנם ועד גדולם, ובידוע כי יצר לב האדם רע מנעוריו וצריכים ללמד אותם אלא שתכלה יצרם בזמן ההוא לגמרי, וכן נאמר ביחזקאל ונתתי לכם לב חדש ורוח חדשה וגו' ואת רוחי אתן בקרבכם ועשיתי את אשר בחוקי תלכו, והלב החדש ירמוז לטבעו והרוח לחפץ והרצון וזהו מה שאמרו רבותינו ז"ל והגיעו שנים אשר תאמר אין לי בהם חפץ אלו ימות המשיח שאין בהם לא זכות ולא חובה כי הזכות that is, since the time of creation, man has had the freedom to do good or evil according to his own will; and this is likewise the condition of men for as long as the Law endures, so that they may have merit when they choose the good, and (conversely) be punished when they take pleasure in evil. But in the days of the Messiah, the choosing of good will be natural to them, and the heart will not desire that which is not fitting. They will also take no pleasure whatsoever in what is improper; and this is the circumcision spoken of here (in the aforementioned words of Deut 30:6), for lust and desire are the foreskin of the heart. When man will no longer have lust and desire, he will at that time return to what he was before the sin of Adam, when man by nature did that which was fitting to do, and there were not two contrary things in his will; and this is what Scripture says in Jeremiah (in chapter 31, vv. 31, 32, 33): "Behold, the time is coming, says the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah, not like the covenant that I made with their fathers; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days: I will put my Law in their hearts and write it in their minds"; and these words signify the abolition of the evil nature, so that the heart may by nature take heed of what is proper. For this reason he says further (vv. 33, 34): "And I will be their God, and they shall be my people; and no one shall teach his neighbor, saying, Know the Lord, but they shall all know me, from the least to the greatest." It is thus (from Gen 8:21) well known that the imagination of the human heart is evil from his youth, and that it is necessary to teach men; but their jézer, or imagination (and evil nature), will at that time come entirely to an end. In this manner it is said in Ezekiel (chapter 36, vv. 26, 27): "And I will give you a new heart and a new spirit, etc. I will put my spirit within you and will cause you to walk in my commandments." The heart, however, signifies man's nature, and the spirit signifies desire and will. And this is what our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said (on the words of Eccl 12:1): "Before the years come in which you will say, I have no pleasure in them": these (years) are the days of the Messiah, in which there will be neither merit nor guilt (or sin), for merit and sin depend upon the will. This last point, that in the days of the Messiah there will be neither merit nor sin, is also to be found in Médrasch Kohéleth, fol. 336, col. 1, where the words of Eccl 12:1 are likewise cited for the same purpose. That the jézer bará, or evil imagination, and the evil disposition and nature of man, shall come to an end in the time of the Messiah, is also to be seen in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 72, col. 1, in the Parascha Bo, and fol. 151, col. 4, in the Parascha Nizzavim, as well as in the book Pesikta rábbetha, fol. 63, col. 1.

People shall also in the future attain once again that stature which they possessed before the fall of Adam, concerning which Rabbi Bechai writes in his book Shulchan árba fol. 9, col. 4. as follows: תמצא מפורש שהקומות יחזרו לעתיד למאטים אמה והוא שדרשו בפרק הספינה ואולך אתכם קוממיות שתי קומות של אדם הראשון דברי רבי מאיר • רבי יהודה אומר מאה אמה כקומת ההיכל שנאמר מחוטבות תבנית היכל וגו' • 'ראוי שתשכיל אחר שידוע כי לפי שחטא אדם הראשון נתמעטה קומתו כמו שדרשו ז"ל כיון שחטא נתן ה"ב ענינו עליו ומעטו והעמידו על אלף אמה שנאמר אחר וקדם צרתני ותשת עלי כפכה אין לתמוה בהתכפר החטא ובהתבטל הגזירה אם יחזרו הקומות לשיעורן שהרי הקומות לא נתמעטו אלא בשביל החטא שבסבתו נתקלקל האויר ובזמן ההוא ישתנה כל מעשה בראשית לטוב וישוב לשלמותו וזכותו כמו שהיה בזמנו של אדם הראשון קודם החטא That is: You will find it plainly stated that bodily statures shall in the future reach two hundred cubits, and this is what is taught in the Talmudic Traktat Báva báthra fol. 75, col. 1., in the chapter Hassefina (on the words of Lev 26:13): "And I have caused you to walk" קוממיות Komemiúth, that is, upright (or with an upright, straight body); for according to the statement of Rabbi Meir, the word Komemiúth, that is, "upright," signifies as much as Schetté Kumóth schel ádam harischon, that is, two bodily statures of the first man Adam (which amounts to two hundred cubits, since Adam, who was originally created so tall that he reached with his head up to Heaven, was afterward made so small by God that he remained only one hundred cubits tall, as was mentioned above in the 8th chapter of the first part, paginâ 367). Rabbi Jehuda says that people shall be one hundred cubits tall, according to the height of the (second) Temple, as it is said (Ps 144:12): "Hewn after the structure of the Temple," etc. It is fitting that you understand this, since it is known that the bodily stature of the first man Adam was made smaller because he had sinned, just as our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught it (when they say): After he had sinned, the holy blessed God turned His eyes upon him, made him smaller, and set him so that he was only one thousand cubits tall, as it is said (Ps 139:5): "You have formed me behind and before, and laid Your hand upon me." One need therefore not wonder, when the sin is atoned and the judgment (which was passed against it) shall be lifted, that bodily statures will return to their (former) measure; for bodily statures were made smaller solely on account of sin, because through sin the air was corrupted. But at that same time (namely, at the time of the Messiah) the entire work of creation shall be transformed into good, and shall return to its perfection and purity, as it was in the time of the first man Adam before he had sinned. Then bodily stature shall become greater and return to their measure; and all Israelites shall be exalted and shall delight themselves in the Kingdom of the Almighty. These are the words of Rabbi Bechai.

That the aforementioned word קוממיות Komemiúth signifies two bodily heights of Adam can also be seen in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 100, col. 1., and Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary thereon as follows: קוממיות שתי קומות של אדם הראשון כדאמרינן בחגיגה שמיעטו הק"ה והעמידו על מאה : that is, the word Komemiúth signifies two Komoth, or bodily heights, of the first man Adam, as we read in the (Talmudic tractate) Chagigah (fol. 12, col. 1.) that the holy and blessed God made him smaller and set him at a height of one hundred cubits, because it is said (Ps 139:5): "And You have laid Your כף Caph, that is, hand upon me"; and the word כף caph amounts in number to precisely that much, namely one hundred.

The rabbis also teach that six things were taken from the first man Adam, among which is also his bodily stature, which are to be restored to mankind in the time of the Messiah. That six things were taken from Adam is taught in Bereschith rabba fol. 11, col. 2. in the twelfth Parascha, where, concerning the words of Gen 2:4, "These are the תולדות Toledoth (or Toledos)," that is, the generations of the heavens, the following is written: אמר רבי שמואל בר נחמן כל תולדות שנאמרו בתורה חסרין בר' מן הדין אלה תולדות פרץ וגו' והדין. ומפני מה אינון חסרין רבי יודן בשם רבי אבין אמר כנגד ששה דברים שנטלו מאדם הראשון ואלו הן זיוו וקומתו וחיוו ופירות הארץ ופירות האילן ומאורות. זיוו מנין שנאמר משנה פניו ותשלחהו. חיוו מנין שנאמר כי עפר אתה. קומתו מנין שנאמר ויתחבא האדם ואשתו. אמר רבי אבהו באותה שעה גובה קומתו של אדם הראשון ונעשית של מאה אמה. פרי האילן ופרי הארץ מנין שנאמר ארורה האדמה בעבורך. מאורות דר' שמעון ב"ר יהודה איש כפר עכו אמר משום ר' מ' אף על פי שנתקלקלו המאורות מערב שבת לא לקו עד מוצאי שבת. אתיא כרבנן ולא אתיא כרבי יוסי דאמר רבי יוסי אדם הראשון לא לן כבודו עמו. מאי טעמיה אדם ביקר בל ילין וגו' : ורבנן : That is to say: אמרי במוצאי שבת ניטל זיוו ממנו וטרדו מן עדן הדא הוא ויגרש את אדם : Rabbi Samuel bar Nachman said that the word תולדות, that is, "generations" or "lineages," wherever it is mentioned in the Law (namely, the five books of Moses), is defective (in that either the preceding or the following Vau is missing, and it is read as תולדת toledoth or תלדות toledoth), with the exception of two instances (namely, Ruth 4:18, in the words:) "These are the תולדות toledoth," that is, the generations of Perez, etc., and here (Gen 2:4). But why is it defective? Rabbi Joden said in the name of Rabbi Abbin that this occurs on account of the six things that were taken from the first man Adam (for the missing Vau accounts for the number six, and these are the following:) his radiance, his life, and his bodily stature, and the fruit of the earth, and the fruits of the trees, as well as the lights. From where is it proven that his radiance was taken from him? Because it is said (Job 14:20): "You change his countenance and drive him away." From where is it proven that his life was taken from him? Because it is said (Gen 3:19): "For you are dust (and shall return to dust again)." From where is it proven that his bodily stature was taken from him? Because it is said (Gen 3:8): "And Adam hid himself with his wife." Rabbi Abhu said that at that very moment Adam's bodily stature was diminished and reduced to a hundred cubits (for if he had not been made smaller, it could not be said of him that he hid himself, since he had previously filled the entire earth with his great body, so that he could not have concealed himself had he remained as large as before, as may be read in the commentary Mattenoth Kehunna on this passage). From where is it proven that the fruits of the trees and of the earth were taken from him? Because it is said (Gen 3:17): "Cursed be the earth for your sake." As for the lights (namely, the sun and moon), Rabbi Simeon, the son of Rabbi Jehuda, who was from the village of Acco, said in the name of Rabbi Meir that although the lights were cursed before the evening of the Sabbath, they were not struck (and darkened) until after the Sabbath had ended. And this is in agreement with the statement of our rabbis, but not with the opinion of Rabbi Jese; for Rabbi Jese said that the glory of the first man Adam did not remain with him overnight. What was the reason for this opinion of his? (Because it is written in Ps 49:13:) "Adam (or man) did not remain in his glory overnight," etc. Our rabbis, however, say that his radiance was taken from him at the end of the Sabbath and that he was driven out of Paradise, and this is what is said (Gen 3:24): "And He drove Adam out." The very same is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimoni on the five books of Moses, fol. 6, col. 1. numero 17. at the end, and on the little book of Ruth fol. 145, col. 1. 2. numero 609, and in Bammidbar rabba fol. 207, col. 1. in the 13th Parascha.

That these six lost things are to be restored at the time of the Messiah can be read in the aforementioned place in Bereschith rabba fol. 11, col. 3. in the twelfth Parascha, in these words: רכי ברכיה בשם רבי שמואל אמר: אף על פי שנבראו הדברים על מליאתן כיון שחטא אדם הראשון נתקלקלו ועוד אינן חוזרין לתיקונן עד שיבא פרץ שנאמר אלה תולדות פרץ מלא בשביל ו' דברים שיחזרו ואלו הן זיוו חיייו קומתו פירות הארץ ופירות האילן ומאורות. זיוו מנין שנאמר ואהביו כצאת השמש בגבורהו. חיייו מנין שנאמר כימי העץ ימי עמי וגו' תני' ר' שמעון בן יוחאי אומר אין עץ אלא תורה היך מה דאמר עץ חיים היא למחזיקים בה: קומתו מנין שנאמר ואולך אתכם קוממיות. תני' רבי חייא בקומה זקופה ולא יראים מכל בריה. ר' יודן אמר מאה אמה כאדם הראשון. רבי שמעון אמר מאתים אמה. ר' אלעזר ב"ר שמעון אומר שלש מאות קום (מאה סיוה פואתים. ר' אבהו אמר תשע מאות אמה. רכי ברכיה בשם רבי דוסא אמר טעמיה דרבי אבהו מהכא כי כימי

העץ ימי עמי כשקמה הזו שהיא עושה שש מאות שנה והוולד יוצא משני אש אמו באמה גרומה צא וחשוב אמה ומחצה בכל שנה הרי תשע מאות אמה. פירות הארץ זכירות האילן מעין שנאמר כי זרע השלום הגפן תתן פריה וגו'. 'מאורות מנין שנאמר והיה אור הלבנה כאור היום' That is: Rabbi Beráchja said in the name of Rabbi Samuel: although all things were created in their fullness, they were nonetheless corrupted after Adam had sinned, and they will not return to their proper state until the son of Perez (that is, the Messiah) comes, as it is said (Ruth 4:18): "These are the generations of Perez," and the word תולדות toledóth, that is, the generations of Perez," and the word תולדות toledóth is written in full (for the letter Vau is not omitted, which in its numerical value signifies six), because six things will return and be restored to their former state, namely: the radiance of man, his life, his bodily stature, the fruits of the earth, and the fruits of the trees, as well as the lights. From where is it proven that his radiance will be restored? Because it is said (Judg 5:31): "But those who love Him shall be as the sun when it rises in its might." From where is it proven concerning his life? Because it is said (Isa 65:22): "For the days of my people shall be as the days of a tree, etc." We learn that Rabbi Simeon ben Jochai said that by the tree nothing other than the Law is to be understood, according to what Scripture says (Prov 3:18): "She is a tree of life to all who take hold of her." (The Law, however, endures forever, and thus men shall also endure forever, as is noted in the commentary Mattenóth Kebúnna on this passage.) From where is it proven concerning his bodily stature? Because it is said (Lev 26:13): "And I have made you walk קוממיות Komemiúth, that is, upright." Rabbi Chija teaches that men will walk with an upright and straight body and will fear no creature. Rabbi Jóden said that men will be one hundred cubits tall, as the first man Adam was. Rabbi Simeon stated that they will be two hundred cubits tall. Rabbi Eliezer, the son of Rabbi Simeon, said that they will be three hundred cubits tall, and that Kom, or the letter Koph or K (in the word Komemiúth), signifies one hundred, and miúth as much as matháim, that is, two hundred (which together makes three hundred). Rabbi Abhu said that they will be nine hundred cubits tall. Rabbi Beráchja said in the name of Rabbi Dósa that Rabbi Abhu's proof is derived from the fact that it is said (Isa 65:22): "For the days of my people shall be as the days of a tree," just as a wild fig tree, which stands in the earth for six hundred years. A child, however, comes forth from its mother's womb one small cubit in length; now reckon one and a half cubits for each year (of the six hundred years), and nine hundred cubits result. From where is it proven concerning the fruits of the earth and the fruits of the trees? Because it is said (Zech 8:12): "They shall be a seed of peace; the vine shall give its fruit, etc." From where is it proven concerning the lights? Because it is said (Isa 30:26): "And the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, etc." All of this is also to be found in Bammidbar rabba fol. 207, col. 1. in the 13th Parascha, as well as in the Jalkut Schimoni on the books of Moses fol. 6, col. 1. numero 18. and on the little book of Ruth fol. 165, col. 2. numero 609.; and from this one can see how varied the opinions of the most learned Rabbis are concerning the future stature of men, and how subtly each one defends his own view, such that one ought rightly to feel pity for their foolishness. That the Messiah will restore the aforementioned six things that were lost through Adam's sin can also be looked up in the book Avodath hakkodesch fol. 51, col. 4. in the 38th chapter, under the title Chelek haavoda.

Regarding the lifespan of human beings, and how long it shall endure in the future, this has been briefly indicated in the preceding section. As for the radiance which Adam lost, but which is to be restored at the time of the Messiah, mention of this will be made in what follows, in the description of the banquet which is to be held for the Righteous in Paradise, drawn from the little book Othioth (or Othos) Rabbi Akkiva. It is also written in the book Shulchan arba fol. 11, col. 2.: פניהם של צדיקים דומין לעתיד לבוא לחמה וללבנה לרקיע : ולכוכבים לברקים ולשנונים ולמנורות בית המקדש that is, the faces of the Righteous shall in the future be equal (in radiance) to the sun, the moon, the firmament, and the stars, to the lightning, the lilies, and the lampstand of the Temple.

Regarding the lights, such as the sun and moon, which are also supposed to regain their former brightness: this is proven in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 68, col. 1. from Isa 30:26, where it is written: "And the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be שבעתים Schifataim, that is, sevenfold, as the light of seven days, at the time when the Lord shall bind up the wound of His people." These words are interpreted by Rabbi Solomon Jarchi in his Commentary in the aforementioned fol. 68, col. 1 in the following manner: שבעתים הן ארבעים ותשע וכתב כאור שבעת הימים ארבעים : 'ותשע כאור שבעת ימים של עכשיו נמצא עודף על אור של עכשיו ג' מאות וארבעים וג' That is: (The word) Schifataim שבעתים means (seven times, that is,) forty-nine times; and it is written: "as the light of seven days," by which is understood that the light of the sun will be forty-nine times as great as it currently is over seven days; and it is thus found that its light will then be three hundred and forty-three times more glorious and greater than it currently is (for seven times forty-nine makes three hundred and forty-three). The aforementioned Rabbi Solomon also interpreted these words in the same manner in his Commentary on Isaiah; to which he was undoubtedly prompted by the Chaldean translation, in which those same words are rendered as follows: ויהי נהור סיהרא כנהור שמשא 'ונהור שמשא יהי עתיד לאנהרא על חד תלת מאה ארבעין ותלתא כנהור שבעת יומיא וכו' That is: "And the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall in the future shine three hundred and forty-three times as much (as it does now,) as the light of seven days (of the present time) is." The word שבעתיים Schifataim, however, is in this manner interpreted entirely incorrectly, for it means nothing other than seven times, or sevenfold. For this reason it is also rendered in the Chaldean translation at Ps 12:7 as שבעתי ומנין Schifatha simnin, that is, seven times, and at Ps 79:12 as שבעה חד chad schifab, that is, sevenfold. So too does Aben Ezra write in his commentary on Gen 4:15, on the words "Whoever slays Cain shall be שבעתיים Schifataim, that is, avenged sevenfold," in the following manner: המלה שבעה דורות כי אין זאת המלה ארבעה עשר ולא שלש מאות ומג' והעד ואור החמה יהיה שבעתיים ואחר כן באר הנביא דברו ואמר כאור שבעת הימים That is: Schifataim means as much as "unto the seventh generation," for it does not mean fourteen, nor does it mean three hundred and forty-three. This is attested by the words of Isa 30:26, where one reads: "And the light of the sun shall be Schifataim, that is, sevenfold," whereupon the prophet explains his words when he says: "as the light of seven days." Something has also been mentioned above in the sixth chapter of this second part concerning the future brilliance of the sun and its heat.

There will then also be no more months; instead, only years will be counted. Concerning this, Rabbi Samiga writes in his book Mikrä Kodesch, in the second part, fol. 48, col. 1, in the first chapter, as follows: בזמן המשיח יהיו שנה בלבד ולא חדש למה שיהיה אור הלבנה כאור החמה: that is, in the time of the Messiah there will be years and no months. Why? Because the light of the moon will be like the light of the sun. As for how long the days will be in the future, this can be seen from the little book Schebechath léket, where under numero 29, under the title Maschiach, the following is read from the book Hattemúna: לעתיד יהיה מנוחת הגלגלים שלא יתגלגלו במרוצה • ואחר יתגדלו הזמנים עד שיהיה יום של אותו זמן כשרבוע אחד שלנו וזה יהיה ק' שנים • ואחר יהיו ק' שנים כל יום כשני שבועים • ואחר כך: that is, in the future the celestial spheres will have rest, and they will no longer revolve with such great speed, but slowly, so that the days will become longer and the periods of time greater, and one day of that time will be as long as one of our weeks; and this will last for a hundred years. After this there will be a hundred years in which each day will be as long as two weeks. After that period there will be a hundred years in which each day will be as long as one of our months. And so it will continue and be doubled.

Regarding the fruits of the earth, things are supposed to go splendidly in the future, and Rabbi Jehuda Léva expresses himself on this matter in his book Nézech Jisráel, fol. 54, col. 2, in the 45th chapter, as follows: לעתיד כאשר יסתלק החטא מבני אדם האדמה אשר אררה השם בשביל חטא אדם תחזור לקדמותה ולברכתה כאשר היתה: that is, in the future, when sin will be taken away from mankind, the earth, which God cursed on account of the sin of man, will return to its original state and to its blessing, as it was before the sin of man. Likewise, in the Talmudic tractate Kethuvóth (or Kesúvos), fol. 111, col. 2, the following is written on this subject: אמר רבי חיה ברבי יוסף עתידה ארץ ישראל שתוציא גלוסקאות וכלי מילת שנאמר :יהי פסת בר בארץ • תנו רבנן יהי פסת בר בארץ בראש הרים אמרו עתידה חטה שתתמר כדקל ועולה הרים שמה תאמר יש צער לקוצרה תלמוד לומר • ירעש כלבנון פריי • הקדוש ברוך הוא מביא רוח מבית גנוז ומנשבת עליה ומשרה את סלתה ואדם יוצא לשדה ומביא מלא פיסת ידו וממנה פרנסתו ופרנסת אנשי ביתו • עם חלב כליות חטתה :חטה • אמרו עתידה חטה שתהא כשתי כליות של שור הגדול וגו' that is, Rabbi Chijá, the son of Rabbi Joseph, said that the land of Israel will in the future (at the time of the Messiah) bring forth cakes and garments of the finest wool (which will grow from it), because it is said (Ps 72:16): there shall be a handful of grain in the earth. Our rabbis teach (concerning the words): there shall be a handful of grain in the earth, upon the top of the mountains; one shall sow a handful of grain upon the earth at the top of the mountains, and they say that the wheat will grow like a palm tree, like a pillar, and rise above the mountains. You might perhaps say that it will be laborious to harvest it (since it will grow so tall that one cannot conveniently handle it and reach the ears of grain); to this, however, it is stated there: so shall its fruit rustle like Lebanon; that is, the Holy One, blessed be He, will cause a wind to come forth from the house of His treasures, which will blow against it and dissolve (and cast down) the fine flour that is within the kernels; then a man will go out into the field and bring back a full handful, and will sustain himself and his household from it. (It is written in Deut 32:14:) with the fat of the kidneys of wheat; and our rabbis say that the wheat (that is, a single grain of wheat) will be as large as the two kidneys of the greatest ox, etc. The very same thing is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol. 112, col. 3, numero 406.

Regarding the cakes and his garments, the following is also read in the Talmudic tractate Shabbath fol. 30, col. 2: יתיב רבן גמליאל וקא דריש עתידה ארץ : ויביא שתי ציצי גלוסקאות וכלי מילת שנאמר יהי פיסת בר בארץ לגלג עליו אותו הלמיד ואמר אין כל חדש תחות השמש אמר ליה בוא ואראך דוגמתן בעולם הזה נפק אחוי ליה כמיהין : that is, Rabbi Gamaliel sat and preached that the land of Israel will bring forth cakes and garments of the finest wool; but when a disciple laughed at him over this and said (from Eccl 1:9) there is nothing new under the sun, he said to him: come here, I will show you the like of these things in this present world, and he went out and showed him mushrooms and chanterelles (which grow up in a single night and are round like cakes). And as for the garments of fine wool, he showed him a branch (of a palm tree) with the tender and soft growth that is on it, on which hung a moss or wool shaped like a garment, as Rabbi Solomon explains it. In the book

Toledoth Yitzhak, at fol. 82, col. 1. in the Parashah Behar Sinai, the following is also found: ר"ז אמרו עתידה ארץ ישראל שתוציא גלוסקאות וכלי מילת שנאמר יהי פסת : בר בארץ פירוש לחם ממש אבוי בלא טורה וכן כלי מילת ולזה הקנו המוציא לחם מן הארץ : that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the land of Israel will bring forth cakes and garments of the finest wool, because it is said (Ps 72:16): there shall be a handful of grain in the earth, by which actual bread is to be understood, which will be baked without labor. Likewise, garments of the finest wool shall grow; for this reason they ordained (that when blessing the bread one should say: Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, Thou Lord of the world) who causest bread to come forth from the earth. One can thus see from this that Rabbi Isaac Karo intended this to be understood literally and according to the letter.

If this is true, that in the future bread and cakes will grow from the earth, and that fine wheat flour will be found in abundance in the fields, then the earth will without doubt also bring forth all manner of other fruits of itself, which are now produced only with great labor through digging and plowing. For what purpose, then, would the fields be cultivated at that time? For it is written in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 141, col. 2. numero 8.: לעתיד לבוא כל בעלי : that is, in the future all craftsmen will abandon their crafts and take up farming. This passage is taken from the Talmudic tractate Jevammoth fol. 63, col. 1. Furthermore, it was mentioned in the preceding fourteenth chapter of this second part that foreigners, namely those who are not Jews, will be required to cultivate the fields and vineyards of the Jews. Now, if the fields are to be cultivated at that time as they are at present, then the produce of the earth at that time must also be constituted as it is now, which was without any doubt the opinion of Rabbi Samuel, of whom it is written thus in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin, fol. 99, col. 1.: אמר שמואל : אין בין העולם הזה לימות המשיח אלא שעבוד מלכויות בלבד, that is, Samuel said: there is no difference between this world and the days of the Messiah, except only that the kingdoms (of the nations of the world will be subject to the Messiah). Now, if there is to be no difference between those times and the present, it follows that it is also not true that cakes will grow from the earth.

Regarding the fruits of the vine that will grow in the promised land in the time to come, the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Kethuvóth (or Kelúvos) fol. 111, col. 2.: אמרו לא כעולם הזה העולם הבא העולם הזה יש בו צער לבצור ולדרוך. העולם הבא מביא ענבה אחת בקרן או בספינה ומניחה בזוית ביתו ומספק הימנה כפיטס גרול ועציו מסיקין תחת התבשיל ואין לך כל ענבה וענבה שאין בה שלשים גרבי יין שנאמר ודם ענב תשתה חמר אל תקרי חמר אלא חומר. כי אתא רב דימי אמר מאי דכתיב אוסירי לגפן עירה. אין לך כל גפן וגפן שבארץ ישראל שאין צריך עיר אחת לבצור. ולשורה

בני אתונו אין לך כל אילן סרק שבארץ ישראל שאינו מוציא משא שתי אתונות. ושמא תאמר אין בו יין תלמוד לומר כבס ביין לבושו. ושמא תאמר אינו אדום תלמוד לומר ודם ענב תשתה חמר. ושמא תאמר אינו מרוה תלמוד לומר סוטה. שמא תאמר אין בו טעם ותלמוד תלמוד לומר חללולי עינים מין כל היין שטעמו אומר לי לי. ושמא תאמר לנערים יפה ולזקנים אינו : that is, (our Rabbis) have said: this world is not like the world to come. In this world one has trouble gathering the grapes (in autumn) and treading them; but in the world to come, one will bring a single grape on a cart or in a ship, and lay it in a corner of one's house, and draw from it as from a great cask; and the wood of that grape will be burned under the dishes that one cooks; and there will be no grape in which there will not be thirty measures of wine, as it is said (Deut 32:14): "And you will drink the blood of the grape as חמר chémer," that is, as pure (unmixed) wine. Do not read חמר chémer, which means pure wine, but rather חומר chómer (which was the greatest measure among the Hebrews, and contained as much as four thousand three hundred and twenty hen's eggshells). When Rav Dimi had come, he said: what do the words mean (Gen 49:11), "He will bind his foal to the vine?" (and noted thereby that it is taught by this that there will be no vine in the land of Israel whose harvested grapes will not require a young donkey to carry them. He further said: what then do the following words mean?) "And to a שורקה Sorékab," that is, to a barren tree, "the foal of his she-donkey?" (and said that it is thereby to be understood) that there will be no barren tree in the land of Israel that will not bear as much fruit as two donkeys can carry. Should you perhaps say that there will be no wine (or juice) in those fruits, it is written (in the aforementioned verse 11): "He will wash his garment in wine." Should you perhaps say that it will not be red, it is indeed read (Deut 32:14): "And you will drink the blood of the grape as pure wine." Should you perhaps wish to say that it will not make one drunk, the word סוטה Suthób is found in the cited passage (Gen 49:11), (which derives from הסית Hesith, that is, to incite or to drive, since that wine will inflame and intoxicate people). Should you perhaps claim that it will have no taste, it is written (also in the same place, v. 12): "His eyes will be red from wine. Every palate that tastes it will say: give me more of it." Should you perhaps wish to say that it is beneficial to drink for the young but not for the old, it is indeed read (also there): ולבן שנים מחלב Ulefén Schinnaím mechálaf, that is, "And white of teeth from milk." Do not read לבן שנים lefén schinnaím, that is, white of teeth, but rather לבן שנים lebén schaním, that is, for one who is advanced in years (and old), it will be beneficial and good to drink.

Here one can observe the peculiar sophistry of the Talmudic teachers, or rather, I should say, their great foolishness, in that they are not ashamed to pervert Holy Scripture in such a senseless manner. The word Chemér, which means pure and unmixed wine, must be transformed into chómer, which among the ancient Hebrews was the largest measure for measuring something, as has been noted. The word שורקה Soréka must be made to signify a barren tree, because סרק Serák in the Rabbinic usage means barrenness, and אילן סרק ilan serák means a barren tree; whereas it signifies nothing other than a magnificent vine, for Rabbi David Kimchi writes of it thus in his Sépher Scharaschim: הוא משובח ממיני הגפן, that is, it denotes the most celebrated variety among the vines. Rabbi Levi ben Gersom and Aben Esra likewise teach that it means a vine. How then do the Talmudic teachers wish to make a barren tree out of it? The word סותה Suthób means as much as כסותו Kesutób, that is, his garment, as it is interpreted in the Chaldean translation of Onkelos, and in the aforementioned Sepher Scharaschim, under the Radice or root word סות Suth, as well as in the commentary of the said Rabbi Levi, fol. 51, col. 1, and is commonly understood in this way; for which reason Rabbi Salomon Jarchi also writes in his Commentario: סותה לשון מין בגד, that is, Suthób denotes a kind of garment: how then can it mean to make drunk? How also can one with any reason whatsoever change the words לבן שנים lebén schinnáim, that is, white in the teeth, into לבן שנים lebén schaníim, that is, one who is advanced in years? This is indeed to draw Holy Scripture into a false and perverted meaning in a wanton and willful manner, and to lie so egregiously that the very rafters bend. Notwithstanding all of this, among the foolish and utterly obdurate Jews, the insipid book of fables, the Talmud, must be held as the Word of God and ranked higher than the Bible.

That the grapes, according to the supremely wise Rabbis' teaching, will in the future be so large need not cause one too much wonder, since they are also said to have grown extraordinarily large in the land of Canaan in ancient times. Concerning this, as well as other glories of that land, the following is read in the aforementioned passage of the tractate Kethuvóth fol. 111, col. 2. and fol. 112, col. 1: רב חייא בר אדא מקרי דרדיש דריש: כי אתא אמר ליה אמאי איפרת אמר ליה: דלית דלית לקיש הוה איפגר תלתא יומי ולא אתא. כי אתא אמר ליה אמאי איפרת אמר ליה: דלית אחת הניח לי אבא ובצרתי ממנה יום ראשון שלש מאות אשכולות אשכול לגרב. יום שני בצרתי שלש מאות אשכולות שני אשכולות לגרב. יום שלישי בצרתי מיניה שלש מאות אשכולות שלש שלש אשכול לגרב והפקרתי יותר מחציה. אמר ליה אי לאו דאיפרת הוה עבדא טפי. רמי בר יחזקאל איקלע לבני ברק חזנהו עזי דאכלן תותי תאיני וקנטף דובשא מתאיני וחלב טייף מנייהו ומיערב בהדי הדדי אמר היינו זבת חלב ודבש. ואמר רבי יעקב בן דוסתאי מלוד לאונו שלשה מילין פעם אחת קדמתי בנשף והלכתי עד קרסולי בדבש של תאנים. אמר ריש לקיש לדידי חזי לי זבת חלב ודבש של ציפורי והוי שיתסר מילין אשיתסר מילין, אמר רבה בר בר חנה לדידי חזי לי זבת חלב ודבש של כל ארץ ישראל והוה כמבי מיכסי עד אקרא דתולבנקי עשרים ותרתי פרסי אורכא ופותיא שיתא פרסי. רבי חלבו ורבי עזירא ורבי יוסי בר חנינא איקלעו להווא אתרא אייתו קמייהו אפרסקא דהוה כאלפס כפר הינו ואלפס barren land) because of the wickedness of those who dwell therein." Rabbi Joshua, the son of Levi, came once to Gabia, and saw the grapes (in the vineyards) standing there like calves, and said: are those calves among the vines? The inhabitants answered him: they are grapes. Thereupon he said: O land, draw in your fruits (and bring them forth more modestly). For whom do you bear your fruits? Are you not bringing them forth for these heathens who, because of our sins, have risen up against us? A year later Rabbi Chija came there and saw that the grapes were standing there like goats (and thus smaller than in the preceding year), whereupon he said (to the inhabitants): are those goats among the vines? But they answered him: go away, and do not do to us as your companion did, namely the aforementioned Rabbi Joshua, the son of Levi, who caused the grapes to be smaller now than they were a year ago. Furthermore, in the aforementioned fol. 112, col. 2 of the Tractate Kethuvóth, the following boast is made: תנו רבנן בברכותיה כל ארץ ישראל בית סאה עושה חמשת רבוא כורין, That is: Our Rabbis teach that when the land of Israel is blessed (and it is a fruitful year), a field on which one Seah of grain is sown (that is, as much as fills one hundred and forty-four hen's eggshells) yields five times ten thousand (that is, fifty thousand) Cor. Now a Cor is the largest measure the Hebrews had, and it held as much as the aforementioned chomer, namely four thousand, three hundred and twenty hen's eggshells, and roughly one malter by our measure; and thus on such a small field (which, as Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon and Bartenóra teach in their commentary on the Misbna of the Talmudic Tractate Schevi'ith, cap. I, numero 2, is to be no more than fifty cubits in length and breadth, for they write: בית סאה נ' אמה על נ' אמה, That is: A field requiring one Seah for sowing is fifty cubits long and fifty cubits wide, with which Rabbi Salomon Jarchi also agrees in his commentary thereon) fifty thousand malter of grain would have had to grow, which is indeed a monstrous and crude Talmudic lie. As for what is written elsewhere about a large turnip that a fox had hollowed out and made his lair in, yet which still weighed sixty pounds, as well as about a large mustard stalk and an exceedingly large cabbage stalk, at fol. 111, col. 2 of the aforementioned Tractate Kethuvóth, this has already been noted above in the eighth chapter of the first part, paginâ 406.

כפר הינו כמה הוי חמש סאין. אכלו שליש והפקידו שליש ונתנו לפני בהמתן שליש. לשנה איקלע רבי אליעזר להתם ואייתו לקמיה נקטו בידיה ואמר ארץ פרי למלחה מרעת יושבי בה רבי יהושע בן לוי איקלע לנבלא חזנהו להנהו קטופי דהו קיימי כי עגלי אמר עגלים בין הגפנים אמרו ליה קטופין אינהו אמר ארץ ארץ הכניסי פירותיך למי את מוציאה פירותיך לגוים הללו שעמדו עלינו בחטאותינו. לשנה איקלע רבי חייא להתם חזנהו דהו קיימי כעזו אמר עזוים that is, Rav Chija, the son of Ada, was Resch Lakisch's children's schoolmaster, and stayed away (on one occasion) for three days and did not come (to instruct the children). When he had come back, Resch Lakisch said to him: why have you stayed away (so long)? He answered him: my father left me a grapevine that is trained up high onto a trellis and tied there, from which on the first day I cut three hundred clusters of grapes, each of which yielded one Gerábh of must (that is, as much as goes into two hundred and eighty-eight eggshells). On the second day I gathered three hundred clusters of grapes, from every two of which one Gerábh of must was pressed (so that each one yielded as much as goes into one hundred and forty-four eggshells). On the third day I also cut three hundred clusters from it, of which every three yielded one Gerábh of must (so that in each one there was as much as goes into ninety-six hen's eggshells), and I left more than half standing, which anyone was free to take. Thereupon Resch Lakisch said to him: if you had not been negligent (in the instruction of my children), it would have yielded even more. Rami, the son of Ezekiel, came once to the inhabitants of Berák, and saw goats that were eating under the fig trees, and honey was dripping from the figs, while milk was flowing from the goats, so that both (honey and milk) mingled together; whereupon he said: this is the land in which (as is written in Exod 3:8, 17 and 13:5) milk and honey flow. Rabbi Jacob, the son of Dosethai, said: from Lud to Ono is three miles; and once I set out on that road before twilight (before the dawn had broken) and walked up to my ankles in the honey of the figs. Resch Lakisch said: I myself have seen that in the region of Zippori milk and honey flowed for sixteen miles in length and breadth. Rabba, the grandson of Channa, reported: I have seen where milk and honey flow throughout the whole land of Israel, and that region is as long as the distance from Bemichse to Akra-Tulbanke, namely twenty-two miles in length and six miles in breadth. Rabbi Chelbo, and Rabbi Avera, and Rabbi Jose, the son of Channina, came once to a certain place, where a peach was brought to them that was as large as a frying pan from the village of Hino. How large then was a frying pan from the village of Hino? It held six Seah (that is, as much as goes into eight hundred and sixty-four hen's eggshells, for one Seah holds as much as one hundred and forty-four eggshells): of this they ate one third, gave one third away freely (so that whoever wished might eat of it), and placed one third before their animals (namely their donkeys). A year later Rabbi Eliezer came there, and peaches were brought to him that were so small that he could hold one in his hand, whereupon he said (from Ps 107:34): "A fruitful land (God has turned) into a salt waste (and

Regarding the trees, they are all supposed to bear fruit every day, and the following is read concerning this in the Talmudic tractate Shabbath, fol. 30, col. 2.: יתיב רבן גמליאל וקא דריש עתידים אילנות שמוציאין פירות בכל יום שנאמר : ונשא ענף ועשה פרי מה ענף בכל יום אף פרי בכל יום ליגלג עליו אותו תלמיד אמר והכתיב : אין כל חדש תחת השמש אמר לו בוא ואראך דוגמתן בעולם הזה נפק אחוי ליה צלף that is, Rabbi Gamaliel sat and preached that the trees will bear fruit every day, as it is said (Ezek 17:23): "And it will bring forth branches and yield fruit." Just as the branches will be on the trees every day, so too will the fruit be every day. When a disciple laughed at him over this and said that it is written (Eccl 1:9):

"There is nothing new under the sun," he answered him: "Come here, I will show you something like it in this world," and went outside and showed him a caper bush (which simultaneously bears three kinds of fruit: unripe berries, capers, and also shoots, as Rabbi Solomon writes in his commentary on this passage). Indeed, all barren trees are also supposed to bear fruit, as was reported shortly before from the Talmudic tractate Kethuboth fol. 111, col. 2. It is likewise reported there at fol. 112, col. 2: אמר רב חייא בר אשי עתידין כל אילני : סרק שבארץ ישראל שיטענו פירות שנאמר כי עץ נשא פריו תאנה וגפן נתנו חילם that is, Rabbi Chija, the son of Aschi, said that all barren trees in the land of Israel will bear fruit, because it is said (Joel 2:22): "The trees will bring forth their fruit, and the fig trees and vines will give their abundance."

A stream shall also flow in the future from the Holy of Holies of the Temple, along which excellent fruits will grow, concerning which the following is written in the Talmudic Tractate Sanhedrin fol. 100, col. 1.: עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להוציא נחל מבית קדשי הקדשים ועליו כל מיני מגדים שנאמר ועל הנחל יעלה על שפתו מזה ומזה כל עץ מאכל לא יבול עלהו ולא יתם פריו לחדשיו יבכר כי מימיו מן המקדש המה מזה ומזה כל עץ מאכל לא יבול עלהו ולא יתם פריו לחדשיו יבכר כי מימיו מן המקדש המה That is: The holy, blessed GOD will in the future cause a stream to flow from the Holy of Holies of the Temple, along which all manner of excellent fruits will grow, as it is said (Ezek 47:12): Along this stream, on both sides of its banks, all manner of fruit-bearing trees will grow, whose leaves will not fall off and whose fruits will not cease. In every month they will bring forth new fruits, for their water comes from the sanctuary; and their fruit will be (good) to eat, and their leaves will be (good) for medicine.

In the Temple itself, precious fruits shall also grow in the future, and the following is found concerning this in the Talmudic Tractate Yoma fol. 21, col. 2.: בשעה שבנה שלמה בית המקדש נטע בו כל מיני מגדים של זהב והיו מוציאים פירותיהן בזמן וכשהרוח מנשבת בהן נושרין שנאמר ירעש כלבנון פריו וכשנכנסו גוים להיכל יבשו שנאמר ופרח לבנון אומלל ועתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להחזירן שנאמר פרוח תפרח ותגל אף גילת כבוד הלבנון נתן לה That is: At the time when Solomon had built the Temple, he planted in it all manner of golden, magnificent, fruit-bearing trees, which bore their fruits in their season; and when the wind blew upon them, the fruits fell down, as it is said (Ps 72:16): "His fruit shall rustle like Lebanon." But when the heathens had entered into the Temple, they withered, as it is said (Nah 1:4): "And the blossom of Lebanon faded." However, the Holy and blessed GOD will restore them, as it is said (Isa 35:2): "It (namely the wilderness) shall bloom abundantly and rejoice, and shall also be joyful and sing; (for) the glory of Lebanon shall be given to it."

The wives shall also, in the time of the Messiah, give birth every day, concerning which the following is read in the Talmudic Tractate Shabbath fol. 30, col. 2.: יתיב רבן גמליאל וקא דריש עתידה אשה שתלד בכל יום שנאמר הרה ויולדת 30, col. 2.: יחדו לגלג עליו אותו תלמיד אמר והכתיב אין כל חדש תחת השמש אמר לו בא ואראך דוגמתן That is: Rabbi Gamaliel once sat and preached that a woman would in the future give birth every day, because it is said (Jer 31:8): "She who is with child and she who gives birth at the same time." When a disciple laughed at him over this and said that it is indeed written (Eccl 1:9): "There is nothing new under the sun," he gave him this answer: "Come here, I will show you the like of this in the present world," and went outside and showed him a hen (which lays an egg every day). Likewise it was reported above in the 8th chapter of the first part, pagina 370, that Adam and Eve went to bed in the eighth hour and came back out of it as four, in that Eve immediately bore two children, namely Cain and his sister. In the book Emek bammélech it is written at fol. 23, col. 4. in the 42nd chapter under the title Scháar ólam battóhu that the blood of women will be transformed into pure milk and no impurity will come from it any longer, and there follows thereafter concerning the future daily bearing of children by women the following: לכן עתידה אשה שתלד בכל יום שלא תהיה עוד זוהמא בעולם והזרע יתבשל כראוי באותו זמן ולא יתקלקל That is: Therefore a woman will in the future give birth every day, because at that time there will be no impurity in the world, and the seed will ripen as it ought, and will no longer be corrupted; therefore it will at once grow and cause birth.

How many children each Jew will have at that time is indicated in the Medrasch Tillim fol. 28, col. 4., where the words of Ps 45:17, "In place of your fathers shall be your children," are written as follows: אמר רבי אלעזר ברבי יוסי . עתיד כל אחד ואחד מישראל להיות לו בנים כיוצא מצרים שנאמר תחת אבותיך יהיו בניך וכמה היו אבותי כשיצאו ממצרים ששים רבוא: אמר רבי אבהו ואל תתמה שהרי התרנגולת בדא ביומא רבא ילדה תרי ביעי וביומא זוטא חדא ה"ד כי כימי העץ ימי עמי That is: Rabbi Eliezer, the son of Rabbi Jose, said: In the future, every Israelite will have as many children as there were Israelites who went out of Egypt, as it is said: "In place of your fathers shall be your children." How many fathers did he then have when they went out of Egypt? Sixty times ten thousand (or six hundred thousand.) Rabbi Abhu said: Do not marvel at this, for a wild hen lays two eggs on a large day and one egg on a small day. This is what is written (Isa 65:22): "For as the days of a tree, so shall be the days of my people." On this matter, the book Mechilta fol. 24, col. 1. in the Parascha Jethro, in the second Parascha, may also be consulted.

Now let us also examine how large the land of Israel and the city of Jerusalem will be at the time of the Messiah, according to the teaching of the Rabbis. As regards the land of Israel, it is written in the book Emek hammelech fol. 1, col. 1. in the first chapter, under the title Scháar Schaaschuie hammléché, as follows: כולו : אמרין במדרש שעתיד ארץ ישראל להיות כל כך גדול כמו העולם כולו : that is, We say in the Medrasch that the land of Israel will in the future be as large as the entire world. Likewise, in the very same book, fol. 143, col. 2. in the 34th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha dise-ánpin, it is stated that the chief devil Sammaël and Lilis shall be slain, and Christendom burned above and below, and thereafter it follows: ואז ארץ ישראל תהיה כמלוא כל העולם כולו כי יתקדש מקום החלל : that is, Then the land of Israel will be as large as the entire world, for the hollow place of its essence will be sanctified from its beginning to its end, as it is said (Isa 44:6): I am the first and I am the last, and besides me there is no God. And at fol. 44, col. 1. it is taught in the 35th chapter, under the aforementioned title Scháar réscha dise-ánpin, as follows: לעתיד לבוא שיאמר הקדוש ברוך הוא לשכינה : הרחיבי מקום אהלך היא הגן עדן שלמטה יבלעה מקום חללה דגיהנם ויתקדש גם כן כקדושת הגן עדן . וכן למטה מקום ארץ ישראל יתרחב ויבלעה חוצה לארץ כולה ואז ישושם מדבר : that is, In the future, when the holy blessed GOD will say to the divine Majesty: enlarge the place of your tents, that is, spread out the lower Paradise, she will swallow up the hollow place of Hell's essence, and that place will likewise be sanctified, just as Paradise is sanctified. So too, down below, the place of the land of Israel will be enlarged, and it (the land) will swallow up all the lands that lie outside of it; then (as may be read in Isa 35:1) the wilderness and the dry land will rejoice and blossom like a rose, as it is said (Ps 82:8): Arise, O God! Judge the earth, for You shall inherit all the nations. More on this subject will also appear in what immediately follows.

In the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, it is read in the 43rd chapter that God will shake all impurity out of the land of Israel in the future with these words: לעתיד לבוא ה"בה אוהו בכנפות הארץ ישראל ומנער אותה מכל טומאה : כאדם שמנער את הבגד ומשליך כל מה שבתוכה ומשליך אותן לחוץ שנאמר לאהו בכנפות הארץ וינערו רשעים ממנה : that is, in the future the holy blessed God will seize the land of Israel by its corners and shake all impurity from it, as a man does who shakes out a garment and throws away everything that is in it and casts it out, as it is said (Job 38:13): that the corners of the earth might be seized, and the wicked shaken out of it.

Regarding the city of Jerusalem, the following is taught concerning its future greatness in the book Megalleh amykkóth, fol. 55 col. 1, in the 167th Ofan or Chapter: פרסאות על ג' פרסאות להיות ג' פרסאות על ג' פרסאות, that is, Jerusalem will in the future be three miles long and three miles wide; and this is taken from the Talmudic tractate Báva báthra fol. 75, col. 2, whose words shall be cited below, where the height of the city of Jerusalem is treated. In the Médrasch Tillim, one reads at fol. 39, col. 1 on Ps 87 as follows: אמר רבי פנחס בשם רבי ראובן עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להביא לסיני ולתבור ולכרמל וליתן ירושלים בראשן שנאמר נכון יהיה הר בראש ההרים, that is, Rabbi Pinchas said in the name of Rabbi Ruben that the holy, blessed God will in the future bring Sinai, Tabor, and Carmel together and set Jerusalem upon their peaks, as it is said (Isa 2:2): (It shall come to pass in the last days that) the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established upon the peak of the mountains. And in the Talmudic tractate Pesachím, one reads at fol. 50, col. 1 as follows: אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי עתיד הקב"ה להוסיף על ירושלים עד שהסוס רץ ומציל, that is, (It is written in Zech 14:20:) And it shall come to pass at that time that all the shadow of a horse shall be holy unto the Lord. What does the shadow of the horse signify (here)? Rabbi Joshua, son of Levi, said that the holy, blessed God will in the future do so much for Jerusalem (and extend it so far) as a horse runs (from early morning) until midday, when the sun stands directly above it, and it casts a shadow beneath itself. Here in the Talmud, the word מצילות mezillóth, which appears in the cited passage Zech 14:20, must be made to mean "a shadow," when in fact it means nothing other than bells, which are hung on horses, as Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, Rabbi David Kimchi, and Aben Esra themselves are compelled to acknowledge in their Commentarii on that passage.

In the book Schir hasschírim rábba, the following is read at fol. 274, col. 1 concerning the future greatness of the city of Jerusalem: עתידה ירושלים להיות כבכל ארץ ישראל עד שתהא מגעת לשער דמשק וגליות באות ונינוחות תחתיה לקיים מה מנוחתו : שנאמר ודמשק מנוחתו : that is, Jerusalem will be enlarged on all its sides, so that it will reach as far as the gate of Damascus, and the Jews who were in captivity will come and rest beneath it, in order to fulfill what is said (Zech 9:1): "And Damascus shall be his resting place." In the Jalkut Schimoni on Isaiah, the following is found at fol. 57, col. 2. numero 363: כתיב והיה מידי חדש בחדשו והיאך אפשר שיבא כל בשר בירושלים בכל שבת ובכל חדש אמר רבי לוי עתידה ירושלים להיות כארץ ישראל וארץ ישראל ככל העולם כלו והיאך באים בראש חדש ובשבת מסוף העולם אלא העבים באים וטוענים אותם ומביאים אותם לירושלים והם מתפללין שם : בבקר והוא שהנביא מקלסן מי אלה כעב תעופינה : that is, it is written (Isa 66:23): "And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another new moon (and from one Sabbath to another Sabbath, all flesh shall come to worship before me, saith the Lord)." How then will it be possible for all flesh to come to Jerusalem on every Sabbath and every new moon? Rabbi Levi said: Jerusalem will in the future be as large as the entire land of Israel (as it formerly was), and the land of Israel will be as large as the entire world. How then will they come there (to Jerusalem) on the new moon and the Sabbath from the ends of the earth? Clouds will come and carry them and bring them to Jerusalem, and they will pray there in the morning; and this is that which the prophet (Isaiah) praises them for when he says (Isa 60:8): "Who are these that fly like a cloud?" This is also found in the book Pesikta rabbetha fol. 1, col. 2. in these very same words.

When and in what manner the city of Jerusalem will be rebuilt is indicated by Rabbi Naphtali in his book Emek hammelech, fol. 132, col. 2, in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin, with these words: ביאת משיח צריך להיות קודם קבוץ גלויות ובנין בית המקדש ובנין ירושלים עיר הקודש שיורידם הקדוש ברוך הוא משמי מרום הוא קודם לקיבוץ גלויות. וקבוץ גלויות הוא קודם לתחיית המתים ותחיית המתים הוא האחרון שבכולם דכתיב בונה ירושלים יי' נדחי ישראל יכנס: that is, the Messiah must come before the gathering of the Jews who are in captivity, and before the building of the Temple and of the holy city of Jerusalem, which (city and Temple) the holy and blessed God will cause to descend from the high heavens before the gathering of the captive Jews; the gathering of the captive Jews will precede the resurrection of the dead, and the resurrection of the dead will be the last of all these things, as it is written (Ps 147:2): "The Lord builds Jerusalem; He will gather together the dispersed of Israel." According to this, then, God Himself is to build the city of Jerusalem after the coming of the Messiah and cause it to descend from heaven; and for this reason the Jews also pray daily, as can be seen in their prayer book under the title Shacharit, after the prayer which begins Velammalschinim al tebi tikvah, in the following manner to God: ולירושלים עירך ברחמים תשוב ותשכון בתוכה כאשר דברת: that is, Return with mercy to Jerusalem, Your city, and dwell therein, just as You have said; and build it speedily, in our days, as an everlasting structure, and swiftly prepare the throne of David within it. After this follows another prayer, which begins: נחם ברוך אתה יי' מנחם ציון ובונה ירושלים ברוך: that is, Comfort, O Lord our God, those who mourn for Zion, in which they speak as follows: ברוך אתה יי' מנחם ציון ובונה ירושלים: that is, Blessed are You, O Lord, who comforts Zion and builds Jerusalem; blessed are You, O Lord, who builds Jerusalem. That God Himself will build the city of Jerusalem is also written in the book Avodath hakkodesch, fol. 53, col. 1, in the 40th chapter, under the title Chelek haavoda, with these words: נשבע הקדוש ברוך הוא לבנות ירושלים ושלא תהרס לעולם דאמר רבי ירמיה עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לחדש עולמו ולבנות ירושלים ולהורידה בנויה מלמעלה בנין: that is, the holy and blessed God has sworn that He will build Jerusalem and that it shall never again be destroyed, for Rabbi Jeremiah has said that the holy and blessed God will renew His world and build Jerusalem and cause it to descend already built from heaven, with a structure that shall not be destroyed.

How high the city of Jerusalem will be built is stated in the Talmudic tractate Bava bathra fol. 75, col. 2. in these words: אמר רבה אמר רבי יוחנן עתיד הק"ב להגביה את ירושלים שלשה פרסאות למעלה שנאמר וראמה וישבה תחתיה מאי תחתיה כתחתיה וממאי דהאי תחתיה תלתא פרסי הויא אמר רבה אמר לי ההוא סבא לדידי חזי לי ירושלים קמיתא ותלתא פרסי הויא ושמא תאמר יש צער לעלות הלמוד לומר מי אלה כעב : תעופינה וכיונים אל ארובותיהם. אמר רב פפא שמע מינה האי עיכא תלתא פרסי מידלי : that is, Rabba reported that Rabbi Jochanan said that the holy blessed God will in the future raise the city of Jerusalem (with its buildings) three miles high into the air, as it is said (Zech 14:10): She (namely the city of Jerusalem) will be exalted and inhabited in her place. What do the words "in her place" mean? They mean that just as she will be three miles long and wide below in her place, so too shall she be built three miles high. But from where is it proven that she will encompass three miles below in her place? Rabba said: an old man told me that he himself had seen the first city of Jerusalem, which was three miles in size. You might perhaps say that people will have difficulty climbing up (because the houses will be so high); yet it is written (Isa 60:8): Who are these that fly along like a cloud, and like doves to their windows (or lofts and holes in which they dwell)? Rav Papa said: learn from this that a cloud rises three miles high. The very same thing is also to be found in the book Nézach Jisraël fol. 55, col. 2. in the 46th chapter. The people will therefore have to fly up to their dwellings, just as doves are accustomed to fly to their nests.

In the book Schir basschirim rábba, fol. 274, col. 1, far more is boasted about this matter, and it is written there as follows: עתידה ירושלים להתרחב ולעלות עד כסא הכבוד עד שתאמר צר לי המקום ולהיות מגעת עד כסא הכבוד עד שתאמר צר לי המקום, that is, Jerusalem will in the future be enlarged and rise up so high that it will reach to the Throne of Glory (of God, up to Heaven), such that one will say, "the place is too narrow for me," that is, as it is explained in the Commentario Matrenóth kebúnnab, the height of the world is too small to contain it. When people, as mentioned above, will be one hundred to nine hundred cubits tall, the houses as well, in which many stories stand one above another, will have to be built exceedingly high, for otherwise such giants would not have enough room to walk upright within them.

The gates of Jerusalem are also supposed to be built of magnificent stones, and the rabbis prove this from the words of Isa 54:12: "I will make your windows of crystal and your gates of carbuncle stones." Concerning these words, the following is read in the Talmudic tractate Báva bāthra fol. 75, col. 1: יתיב ר' יוחנן וקא דריש עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להביא אבנים טובות ומרגליות שהם:

שלושים על שלשים וחקוק בהן עשר על עשרים ומעמידן בשערי ירושלים לגלג עליו אותו תלמיד השתא כביעתא דציצלא לא משכחינן כולי האי משכחינן לימים הפליגה ספינתו בים חזא מלאכי שרת דיתבי וקא מנסרי אבנים טובות ומרגליות שהם שלשים על שלשים וחקוק בהן עשר ברום עשרים אמר להו הני למאן אמרו ליה שעתידי הקדוש ברוך הוא להעמידן בשערי ירושלים. אתא לקמיה דרבי יוחנן אמר ליה דרוש רבי לך נאה לדרוש כאשר אמרת כן ראיתי אמר לו ריקא אלמלא לא ראית לא האמנת מלגלג על דברי חכמים אתה נתן עיניו בו That is: Rabbi Jochanan once sat and preached that the holy, blessed God would cause precious stones and pearls to be brought, which would be thirty cubits long and thirty cubits wide, and would be hewn ten cubits in breadth and twenty cubits in height, and He would set them at the gates of Jerusalem. At this, a disciple laughed at him (and said): we can't even find one now as large as a turtledove's egg, and stones of such size are supposed to be found! Some time afterward, this disciple was sailing on a ship in the middle of the sea, and he saw certain ministering angels who were sawing precious stones and pearls that were thirty cubits long and thirty cubits wide, and were hewn ten (cubits in breadth) and twenty (cubits) in height. He asked them: to whom do these belong? And they answered him that the holy, blessed God would set them at the gates of Jerusalem. When he came back to Rabbi Jochanan, he said to him: Rabbi, preach on; preaching becomes you well. As you said, so have I seen it. Then he said to him: you fool, if you had not seen it, you would not have believed it. You mock the words of the Wise. And when he turned his eyes upon him, he was turned into a heap of bones, that is, he fell down and died. This Talmudic fable also appears in the tractate Sanbédrin fol. 100, col. 1, as well as in the Médrasch Tillim fol. 38, col. 4, on Ps 87.

By the aforementioned thor (gate), the portals through which one enters the city are understood; for this reason it is written in the aforementioned Médrasch Tillim at the cited passage as follows: שמואל רבי יהודה בשם רבי שמואל, אמר רבי יהודה בשם רבי שמואל, שער הגדול של ירושלים שתי מזוזות ושתי פשפשים על אבן אחת, That is: Rabbi Jehuda has said in the name of Rabbi Samuel that the great gate of Jerusalem shall have two mesusóth (or mesusos, that is, two scrolls which the Jews are accustomed to insert into the doorposts of their doors, concerning which information can be found in Buxtorf's Judenschul) and two small doors set in one stone. From this it can be seen that the aforementioned precious stones are to be used for the gates of the city of Jerusalem, from which it may be concluded that the gates will be twenty cubits high. But since it was mentioned above that people at the time of the Messiah will be at least one hundred cubits tall, and they would not be able to pass through a gate that is only twenty cubits high, Rabbi Bechai in his book Shulchan árba fol. 9, col. 3. maintains that by the word שערים Schearím one should understand not the gates of the city and the doors of houses, but rather window frames, expressing himself as follows: זה שאמר עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להביא אבנים טובות ומרגליות וחוקק בהם עשר ברום עשרים ומעמידן בשערי ירושלים שנאמר ושעריך לאבני אקדה שנראה מזה שיהיו הקומות כ' אמה לא יותר לכך הוצרכו לומר שאין זה נאמר בשערי הבתים חכימא פ' שאין יִכְנְסוּ אוֹתָם הַקּוֹמוֹת אֶלָּא בְּנֻדָּי בְּשַׁעְרֵי תַלְמוֹת נֶאֱמַר, That is: What is said (in the Talmud), that the holy blessed GOD will cause precious stones and pearls to be brought, which will be hewn ten cubits in breadth and twenty cubits in length, and will set them at the Schaaré, that is, the gates of Jerusalem, because it is said (Isa 54:12): "And thy Schearím, that is, gates of carbuncle stones," and from this it appears that the bodily stature of men will be only twenty cubits tall and no taller, one has been compelled to say that this is not spoken of the doors of houses, for how would such large people be able to enter through them? but rather that it is spoken of the Schearím or gates of the windows (that is, of the window frames). However, Rabbi Bechai ought to have demonstrated that the word Scháar, which nowhere signifies anything other than a portal or gate, can also be taken to mean a window frame, which he could never have done. If, then, the gates of Jerusalem are to be only twenty cubits high, it is not true that people will be as tall as was stated above.

Since the precious stones are mentioned here, I must also indicate what a great multitude of them will be in and around Jerusalem in the future. This is written in the Jalkut Schimóni on Esaiam fol. 54, col. 1. 2. numero 339., on the words of Isa 54:12, "I will make your windows of crystal, and your gates of carbuncle, and all your borders of pleasant stones," as follows: אמר רבי בנימין בן לוי עתידין תחומי ירושלים להיות מלאים אבנים טובות ומרגליות וכל ישראל באים ונוטלים חפציהם לפי שישאר בעולם הזה מתחמים באבנים ובצורות אבל לעתיד לבוא מתחמים That is: Rabbi Benjamin, the son of Levi, has said: the borders of Jerusalem will in the future be full of precious stones and pearls, and all Israelites will come and take from them as much as they please. In this world the Israelites set their boundary markers from (common) stones, but in the future they will set them from precious stones and pearls; this is what is written: "And all your borders of pleasant stones." The same is to be found in the Médrasch Tillim fol. 38, col. 4. on Ps 87.

Thereupon it continues in the cited passage of Jalkut Shimoní: אמר רבי לוי עתידין תחומי ירושלים להיות מלאים י"ב מיל על י"ה מיל אבנים טובות ומרגליות לפי שבעולם זה אדם חייב לחבירו הוא אומר לו לך גדון אצל הדיין פעמים שהוא עושה שלום ביניהם פעמים שאינו עושה שלום ביניהם לית הדתין אפין נפקין מרצין. אבל לעתיד לבוא אדם חייב לחבירו והוא אומר לו לך גדון אצל המשיח בירושלים וכיון שמגיעים אצל תחומי ירושלים הם מוצאים אותם מלאים אבנים טובות ומרגליות והוא נסיב תרתין מנהון ואל יותר מאלין אני חייב |חייב לך והוא אומר לו אף לא בדין יהא שרי לך יהא שביק לך הד"ה השם גבולך That is: Rabbi Levi has said: the borders of Jerusalem will in the future be twelve miles in length and eighteen miles in breadth, full of precious stones and pearls. When a man owes another in this world, he says to him: come, let us plead our case before the judge. Sometimes the judge makes peace between them (and reconciles them); sometimes, however, he makes no peace between them, and they do not both go away from him satisfied. But in the future, one will owe his neighbor, and will say to him: come, let us plead our case before the Messiah in Jerusalem; and when they arrive at the borders of Jerusalem, they find them full of precious stones and pearls; thereupon he (namely the debtor) will take two of them (and give them to his creditor as payment), and say to him: do I owe you more than these? But the other will answer him: you do not owe me even so much as that; I acquit you and release you from the debt. This is what is said (Ps 147:14): He who sets your borders in peace.

In the aforementioned Midrasch Tillim, the matter is presented differently at the last-cited passage, with these words: אמר רבי יודן לעתיד לבוא אדם יש לו שנים ושלשה זהובים חוב על חבירו והוא אומר לו נלך אצל מלך המשיח והם הולכים אצלו והוא אומר לו מה אני חייב לך שנים ושלשה זהובים איל מכאן שהכסף והזהב לפני מלך המשיח That is: Rabbi Joden said, when in the future someone has two or three guilders in debt to claim from his neighbor, the debtor will say to his creditor, let us go to the Messiah (to pay you). They will then go to him, and the debtor will say to the creditor, how much do I owe you? Two or three guilders? (and will there take as much money and pay his debt, and say:) I will depart from here (since my debt is paid;) for silver and gold will be before the King Messiah like dust (and thus in great abundance), as it is said (Ps 147:14): "He who sets your borders in peace."

Now, as has been mentioned, since there are to be so many precious stones and pearls around Jerusalem in the future, the Jews will have no need of serpents to bring them these things. Concerning this, the Talmudic tractate Avóth (or Ovós) of Rabbi Nathan, fol. 1, col. 2, 3, contains the following written passage: אלמלא לא נתקלל נחש לכל אחד ואחד מישראל היו לו שני נחשים בתוך ביתו אחד משגרו למערב ואחד משגרו למזרח ומביאים להם סנדלכים טובים אבנים טובות ומרגליות ואין כל בריה יכולה להחזיק ולא עוד אלא שהיו מכניסין אותן תחת גמל תחת חסור ותחת פרד : that is, if the serpent had not been cursed, every Israelite would have had two serpents in his house. He would have sent one toward the setting of the sun and the other toward the rising of the sun, and they would have brought him fine emeralds, precious stones, and pearls. No person would have been able to lay hands on them; indeed, they would have brought those same precious stones under the camels, donkeys, and mules (into the stalls), and carried the dung (from beneath such animals) out into the gardens and pleasure gardens. In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, however, this matter is read somewhat differently at fol. 59, col. 2, with these words: אלמלא לא נתקלל נחש כל אחד ואחד מישראל היו מזדמנין לו שני נחשים טובים אחד משגרו

לצפון ואחד משגרו לדרום להביא לו מרגליות טובות ואבנים טובות ומרגליות ולא עוד אלא
 that is, if the serpent had not been cursed, two good serpents would have been appointed for every Israelite, one of which he would have sent toward the south and the other toward the north, to bring him fine emeralds, precious stones, and pearls. This would not have been enough; rather, a strap would also have been fastened to their tail, with which they would have brought earth into the person's garden or uncultivated field. The very same thing is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimóni on the books of Moses, fol. 4, col. 4, numéro 15.

It is also said that in the future there will be a fire around the city of Jerusalem, through which people will pass unharmed, and this is written in the Jalkut on Zachariam, fol. 85, col. 1. numéro 569, as follows: אמר רבי שמעון בן : שבב פמליא שלי נעשים לה חומה לירושלים לעתיד לבוא ואני מצוה למלאכים לשומרה שנאמר על חומתך ירושלים הפקדתי שומרים וכי נאחד שהאש מוקפת לה מי יכול ליכנס בתוכה אבל לעתיד לבוא הצדיקים מהלכים באש כאדם שמהלך בחמה מפני הצנה והיא ערבה עליו. ואם אתה תמה בדבר זה בוא והסתכל בחנניה מישראל ועזריה שבעשה שהשליכם נבוכדנאצר בתוך כבשן האש היו מהלכים בו כאדם שהוא מהלך בחמה ביום הצנה שנאמר : ענה ואמר הא אנא חזי גוברין ארבעה שריין מהלכין מגו נורא וחבל לא איתי בהון that is, Rabbi Simeon, the son of Levi, says (that God has said): in the future, all those who are in my household (that is, all my angels) shall be a wall around Jerusalem, and I will command the angels to guard it, as it is said (Isa 62:6): "I will set watchmen upon your walls, O Jerusalem!" But since fire will surround it on all sides, who then will be able to enter? The righteous will in the future walk through fire, just as a person walks in the sunshine, which is pleasant to him on account of the cold. But if you marvel at this, then come and consider Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, who, when Nebuchadnezzar had them thrown into the fiery furnace, walked about within it just as a person walks in the sunshine when it is cold, as it is said (Dan 3:25): "He answered and said, I see indeed four men walking freely in the fire, and they are unharmed." But let this be enough concerning the city of Jerusalem; we will now also examine what the rabbis write about the Temple that will exist in Jerusalem in the future.

Regarding the work of the Temple, the rabbis do not agree with one another in their opinions. Some say God will build it Himself and cause it to come down from heaven; others teach that the Messiah will build it; others report that the Edomites, that is, the Romans, or the Christians, will build it; and others maintain that it was not burned but was hidden away by the devils. That God will build it Himself is stated in the book Séra Abraham, fol. 66, col. 3, in these words: יבנה הקדוש ברוך הוא בית המקדש לעתיד בעצמו שנאמר אני הצתי אש בציון : ואני עתיד לבנותה that is, the holy blessed God will in the future build the Temple Himself, as it is said (Lam 4:11): I have kindled a fire in Zion, and I will build it again. The following is also read on this subject in the Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 41, col. 1, number 258: רבי פנחס בשם רבי ראובן אמר: עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להביא סיני ותבור וכרמל ולבנות בית המקדש על גביהן מה טעם והיה באחרית הימים נכון יהיה הר בית יי' בראש ההרים והם אומרים שירה. אמר רב הונא דיינ עד that is, Raf Pinchas said in the name of Rabbi Ruben that the holy blessed God will bring Sinai, Tabor, and Carmel together and build the Temple upon them. From where is this proven? (Because it is written in Isa 2:2:) It shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established at the top of the mountains; and they shall sing a song of praise. Raf Hona said: Is that sufficient? The Temple will sing a song of praise, and the mountains will respond to it. In the book Toledóth Yitzhak, fol. 31, col. 1, in the Parascha Toledóth Yitzhak, the following is likewise written: בית המקדש השלישי יבנה על: that is, the third Temple will be built by the holy blessed God; and just as the holy blessed God lives eternally, so too will the Temple endure eternally and be laid waste no more. Beyond this, the following is also found in the little book Schechecháth léket, number 2, under the title Beth hammikdalch, drawn from the book Tikkúne hassóhar, from the twenty-first Tikkun: כדין ייבני ביתא דשכינתא דאיהו הוא בעצמו ובניינא דבי מקדשא ההא בנויה מכספא ודהבא ואבנין יקרין ותהא מרקמא מכל ציורין דעובדא דבראשית וגו' that is, thus will the house of the divine Majesty, namely the Temple, be built, which the holy blessed God will build Himself. The structure of the Temple, however, will be built of silver and gold and precious stones, and embroidered work depicting all manner of forms from the work of creation will be incorporated into it.

That God will cause the Temple to descend from Heaven is taught in the book Emek hamméleḥ fol. 121, col. 4., in the 152nd chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, in these words: אמרו רבותינו זכרונם לברכה שארץ ישראל יהיה לעתיד לבוא כל כך גדולה כמו כל העולם כולו בטהרתו ואז יוריד הקדוש ברוך הוא בית המקדש משמי שמים העליונים אשר כולו אש מעשה ידיו של הקדוש ברוך הוא וישמשו בו ישראל כמלאכי הקודש המשרתים בשמי מרום וזהו המקדש שעלה ברצונן של הק"בה להורידו משמי מרומים אחר יציאת מצרים ולכן הזכיר אותו משה רבינו עליו השלום בשירת הים שונו אל מקדש יי' כוננו ידיך ולא ישלטו בו ידי אדם מעולם וזהו סמיכתו יי' ימלוך לעולם ועד שראה ברוח הקודש שלא יורידו עד לעתיד אורות עין מיכה שנאמר ועבר בים צרה וגו' ולעתיד לבוא יורידו ה"קבה בזמן שימלוך יי' לעולם ועד שהוא אחר ביאת משיח ולכן לא אמר יי' מלך רק ימלוך והמבין יבין. וכמו שמלכותו קיים לעולם ועד ולנצח נצחים כך בנין בית המקדש שלו קיים לעולמי עד ולעולמי עולמים: That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the land of Israel will in the future be just as large as the entire world is, in its purity; and that the holy, blessed God will then cause the Temple to descend from the high Heaven, which will be entirely of fire and the work of the hands of the holy, blessed God, in which the Israelites will serve just as the holy angels serve in Heaven. And this is the very Temple which the holy, blessed God had resolved, at the departure of the children of Israel from Egypt, to cause to descend from the high Heaven; for this reason our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace, made mention of it in the song of praise concerning the sea (through which the Israelites passed on dry foot and in which the Egyptians drowned), that they would be made worthy of it (when he says, Exod 15:17: "You will bring them in and plant them on the mountain of Your inheritance, which You, O Lord, have made Your dwelling"), as the sanctuary, O Lord, which Your hands have prepared, over which the hands of men shall never have power. For this reason there follows immediately thereafter (v. 18): "The Lord shall reign forever and ever," since he (namely Moses) saw through the Holy Spirit that God would not cause it to descend until the future time, on account of the sin of Micah (mentioned in Judg 17), as it is said (Zech 10:11): "And he shall pass through the sea of affliction," etc. But in the future the holy, blessed God will cause it to descend at the time when the Lord shall reign forever and in eternity, which will come to pass after the coming of the Messiah; for this reason he did not say "the Lord has reigned, the Lord has reigned," but rather "He shall reign." Whoever is wise will understand it. And just as His kingdom endures forever and ever, so too will the building of His Temple endure for all eternity. That the Temple will be given by God from Heaven is also to be found in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech fol. 42, col. 4., at the end of the 72nd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam battóhu, and fol. 132, col. 2., in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha diser ánpin.

That the Messias will build it is stated in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Song of Solomon, fol. 179, col. 3, numero 988, where the words read as follows: מלך המשיח יתעורר מן הצפון ויבנה בית המקדש בדרום, That is: The King Messias will be roused from the north and will build the Temple toward the south. So too is it read in Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's book Jad chasaka, in the second part, fol. 297, col. 1, in the 11th chapter, under the title Hilchóth melachim, numero 1: המלך המשיח עתיד לעמוד ולהחזיר מלכות בית דוד לישנה הממשלה הראשונה ובונה וגו', המקדש וגו', That is: The King Messias will in the future arise and restore the dominion of the house of David, and set the first sovereignty back into its former state, and build the Temple, etc. In the book Pesikta sotárta, fol. 58, col. 1, in the Parascha Balak, on the words Num 24:17, "He will shatter the princes of Moab," it is likewise written: מלמד שיהיו ישראל מקובצין בגליל העליון ויצפה עליהם שם משיח בן יוסף מתוך הגליל והם עולים משם וכל ישראל עמו לירושלים וגו' והוא עולה ובונה את בית המקדש ומקריב קרבנות והאש יורדת מן השמים והוא מוחץ כל אומות

העולם, That is: This teaches us that the Israelites will gather in upper Galilaea, and that the Messiah, the son of Joseph, will watch over them from the midst of Galilaea, and will go up from there with all the Israelites to Jerusalem, etc. He will go up and build the Temple and offer sacrifices, and fire will come down from heaven, and he will shatter all the nations of the world. And in Bammidbar rabba, fol. 205, col. 2, in the 13th Parascha, it is read: לכשיתעורר, That is: When the King Messiah will be roused, he who is situated in the north, he will come and build the Temple, which is situated in the south. Beyond this, it is also taught twice in Abarbanel's commentary on Zech 4, fol. 284, col. 4, at the end, and fol. 185, col. 1, that the Messiah will build the Temple.

That the Edomites, that is, the Romans, or Christians, are to build it, this is taught by Rabbi Bechhai in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 132, col. 2, in the Parashah Shemini, where he expresses himself as follows: במדרש תנחומא למה נמשלה מלכות זו לחזיר שעתידין הק"ב להחזיר עליהן מדת הדין. ויש נוסחאות שכתוב בהן שעתידין להחזיר העטרה ליושנה. והענין כי שני המקדשים נבנו על ידי ישראל בית ראשון בנה שלמה שהוא מזרע יהודה. בית שני בנה זרובבל שהיה גם כן מזרע יהודה שנאמר ידי זרובבל יסדו וגו' אבל הבית השלישי עתידה אומה זו לבנותו. וזהו שאמרו : That is: In the Midrasch Tanchúma (it is read:) why is this kingdom (namely the Edomite or Roman kingdom, as can be seen from the preceding words) compared to a Chásir, that is, a pig? Because the holy and blessed God will cause the attribute of judgment to come upon them (namely the Edomites, or Romans, or Christians), which causing to come upon is called bachasir. In other copies, however, it is written (that the Roman Empire, or Christendom, is compared to a Chásir or pig for this reason) that it will restore the crown to its former state, which restoring is called bachasir. The meaning is that the two Temples were built by the Israelites. The first Temple was built by Solomon, who was of the seed of Judah. The second Temple was built by Zerubbabel, who was likewise of the tribe of Judah, as it is said (Zech 4:9): The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house. But the third Temple will be built by this people (namely the Edomite, that is, the Roman and Christian people); and this is what is meant when it is said that the Edomite kingdom will restore the crown to its former state, because it destroyed the Temple (through Titus Vespasianus). But if the Christians, as mentioned above, are all to be killed at the time of the Messiah, how will they then be able to build the Temple? Or will they perhaps be allowed to live until the building is finished, and only then be put to death? In such a manner, however, they would receive a very poor reward for their completed heavy labor and rendered bitter service.

Regarding the materials: as far as the stones are concerned, it is written in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 42. numero 66. under the title Beth hammikdasch as follows: לערתי יבנה בית המקדש על מכוננו מאותן האבנים בעצמן שהיה בית המקדש: ראשון בניי that is, in the future the Temple will be built upon its place from the very same stones with which the first Temple was built. As for the beams, the following is read in the Chaldean translation of the words of Song 1:17: אמר שלמה נביא כמה יאי בית מוקדשא די 'דאתבני על ידי מן קיסי גולמיש אבל יתיר יהי יאי בית מוקדשא דעתיד לאתבנא מיומי מלכא משיחא דכשורהי יהון מן ארזין דגנתא דעדן ושורבני: that is, the Prophet Solomon said: how beautiful is the Temple of the Lord, which was built by me from cedar wood. But the Temple which will be built in the future, in the time of King Messiah, will be far more beautiful, its beams being of cedars from the Garden of Eden, and its rafters of fir trees and cedars.

That the Temple was not burned but rather hidden by the devils: this is read in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 74, col. 3. numero 7. from the first part of the book Asarab maamaroth cap. 26. fol. 111, col. 2. with the following content: המקדש: 'לא נשרף אלא נגנו רק שדים ושרתין הביאו גל של אבנים סיד להשביע עינו של רשע וגו: that is, the Temple was not burned but hidden, and the devils and she-devils brought a heap of burnt lime to satisfy the eye of the wicked one (Titus Vespasianus). This is also read in the book Emek hammélech fol. 37, col. 1. at the end of the 65th chapter, under the title Schaar olām battóhu, that not only was the Temple not destroyed, but also that even at the present time sacrifices are offered therein by the angel Sandálfon, who is Elijah, and the words there read as follows: הוא המקריב בבית המקדש עתה אפילו בחרבנו כי אי אפשר לעולם בלא קרבנות והאומות אינם רואים אותו ואינם יודעים בו ויש לו מעות מהרומת הלשכה שנגנות לשם. ועל זה אז"ל שמעתי שמקריבין קרבנות אע"פ שאין בית המקדש והבן. ובאמת בית המקדש לא נחרב כמו שה'קבה גזר על הרוחין ושרין שהביאו האבנים בימי שלמה כאשר הוא במדרש רבה שיר השירים כן הביאו אבנים שרופות למלאות עינו של אותו רשע. וכן הוא בוהר פקודי דף ר"מ ע"ב ת"ה אינון אבנין דיסודי ציון וירושלים ה"ו דשליטו עליהו שאר עמין: that is, he (Elijah) is the one who now offers sacrifice in the Temple, even though it is desolate, for the world cannot exist without sacrifices; but the nations (who are outside of Judaism) do not see him and know nothing of it. The money (which is needed for this purpose) he has from the chamber of the heave-offerings, which is hidden there. For this reason our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: I have heard that sacrifices are offered, even though there is no Temple. Understand it well. It is also in truth the case that the Temple was not destroyed; rather, just as the holy blessed God ordained over the spirits and devils that in the times of Solomon they had to bring the stones (for the building of the Temple), as is read in the Médrasch rábba on the Song of Songs of Solomon, so too did they bring burnt stones (and covered the Temple with them) so that they might fill the eyes of that same wicked one (namely Titus Vespasianus) and satisfy him, so that he would believe the Temple had been burned. Thus it is also written in the Sóbar in the Parashah Pekudé, fol. 240, col. 2.: Come and see: far be it that the nations should have had power over the stones and foundations of Zion and Jerusalem. Furthermore, in the cited fol. 74, col. 4. numero 18. of the Jalkut chádasc, it is written from the book Galánte as follows: כל האבנים ויסודי ירושלים ויסודי המקדש לא נשרף ולא נחרב ולא נאבד אחד מהם אלא נגנזו וכשישיב הקדוש ברוך הוא ויקים את ירושלים על מקומו אותן האבנים הראשונים ישבו למקומם וכל הבנין יעמוד כבראשונה אף על פי שלפי הנראה היו מהרסים יסודי המקדש לא היה אלא מראית עין: that is, not a single one of all the stones, nor a single one of the foundations of Jerusalem and of the Temple, was burned, or destroyed, or lost; rather, they were hidden (and preserved or kept safe); and when the holy blessed God will restore Jerusalem and set it in its place again, those same original stones will also return to their place, and the entire structure will stand as before; although to outward appearance the foundations of the Temple were destroyed, it was nothing other than an illusion before the eyes.

The doors of the Temple, too, are said not to have been burned but rather to have been hidden away. Concerning this, the following is read in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol. 98, col. 4, no. 699, on the words of Ps 24:6, 9, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates," from the book Tanchúma, which is held in high esteem among the Jews: מי אמר הפסוק הזה שלמה אמרו כשעשה את הארון עשה של עשרה אמות ונשא אותו להכניס לבית קודש הקדשים כיון שהגיע לפתח בית המקדש היה הפתח של עשר אמות והארון של עשר אמות ואין עשר אמות יכולין ליכנס בתוך עשר אמות ועוד שהיו טוענין בו. כיון שראה שלא היה יכול להכניסו היה מתבייש ולא היה יודע מה לעשות התחיל מתפלל לפני הקדוש ברוך הוא שאו שערים ראשיכם ויבא מלך הכבוד. באותה שעה בקשו השערים לירד ולרוץ על ראשו של שלמה שהיו סבורים שמא על עצמו הוא אומר אמרו ליה מי הוא זה מלך הכבוד אמר להן ה' צבאות מלך הכבוד סלה. כיון שהזכיר ארונו של דוד וראו ארונו מיד נענה. אמר להן הק"ה אתם חלקתם חלקתם לי כבוד חייכם כשאחריב את ביתי אין כל אומה שולטת בכם. כל כלי בית המקדש גלו לבבל שנאמר מכלי בית ה' הביא נבוכדנאצר מלך בבל לבבל אבל השערים במקומן נגנזו שנאמר טבעו בארץ שעריה. ולמה That is: Who spoke this verse? Solomon spoke it. When he had made the Ark (of the Covenant), he had made it ten cubits in size; and he carried it, intending to bring it into the Holy of Holies. But when he came to the gate of the Temple, the gate was ten cubits wide and the Ark was also ten cubits wide; ten cubits, however, cannot pass through ten cubits (and beyond that, it was also being carried, which required still more room). When he saw that he could not bring it in, he was ashamed and did not know what to do, and he began to pray before the holy and blessed God: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, that the King of Glory may enter." At that moment the gates wanted to come down and fall upon Solomon's head (to crush it), because they supposed he had said this of himself (and had called himself the King of Glory), and they said to him: "Who is this King of Glory?" And he answered them: "The LORD of Hosts is the King of Glory." Sela. After he had made mention of David's LORD (that is, of God), and they had seen His Ark (of the Covenant), he was immediately heard (and they widened themselves so that one could enter). Then the holy and blessed GOD said to them (meaning the gates): "You have shown Me honor; I swear by your life that no nation shall have power over you when I destroy My house." All the vessels of the Temple were carried away to Babylon, as it is said (2 Chr 36:7): "Nebuchadnezzar also carried off some of the vessels of the house of the LORD to Babylon"; but the gates were hidden in their place, as it is said (Lam 2:9): "Her gates are sunk into the ground." But why was Solomon so afflicted (that things went so badly for him)? Because he had been arrogant and had said, as is seen in 1 Kgs 8:13: "I have built a house for You to dwell in." These are the words of the Jalkut Schimoni.

But where is it written that King Solomon made the Ark of the Covenant, or had it made? It is indeed read in 1 Kgs 8:6 that he had the Ark of the Covenant carried into the Holy of Holies, but it had already been made in the time of Moses, as can be seen in Exod 25:10 etc. and 37:1 etc. Likewise, the Ark was not ten cubits in size, as is erroneously stated here, but was only two and a half cubits long, one and a half cubits wide, and one and a half cubits high, as is to be found in the two last-cited passages; although in the Talmudic tractate Schekalim fol. 9, col. 1, it is read that according to the opinion of Rabbi Ilai there were two arks, a view which is however contradicted there by the Rabbis; on which matter the commentary of Isaac Abarbanel on 1 Sam 4:4 may also be consulted. Just as very great errors have been made in this regard, so too is all the rest an insipid and foolish Jewish fable, which is presented in a different manner in the Méderasch Tillim fol. 22, col. 3, on the aforementioned words of Ps 24:6, and indeed in these words: בית שלמה שבנה בשעה אחת מוצא ביקש שלמה להכניס את הארון והיה השער קטן חמש אמות ארכו ושתיים וחצי רחבו והארון הזה אמתים וחצי ארכו ואמה וחצי רחבו. וכי לא היה אמה וחצי נכנסת בתוך שתיים וחצי. אלא באותה שעה דבקו שערים זה בזה ואמר שלמה עשרים וארבע רגלות ולא נענה חזר ואמר שאו שערים ראשיכם ולא נענה כיון שאמר יי' אלהים אל תשב פני משיחך זכרה לחסדי דוד עבדך מיד נענה ונשאו שערים ראשון ונכנס הארון וירדה אש מן השמים. ולמה That is: You find that when Solomon had built the Temple, he wished to have the Ark (of the Covenant) brought into it, and that the gate was small, five cubits long and two and a half cubits wide, while the Ark was two and a half cubits long and one and a half cubits wide. What! Could the Ark, which was one and a half cubits wide, not pass through the gateway that was two and a half cubits wide? The gates held fast together at that time (so that one could not separate them and open them); and Solomon spoke twenty-four songs (in the hope that they would open), but he was not heard. Thereafter he said: Lift up your heads, O you gates! and was likewise not heard. But after he had spoken (the words of 2 Chr 6:42): Lord GOD, turn not away the face of Your anointed: remember the mercies of Your servant David, he was immediately heard, and the gates lifted up their heads, and the Ark went in, and fire came down from Heaven. But why was Solomon so distressed? Because he had been proud and had said: I have built a house for You as a dwelling. But if those gates were to be used again in the future for the Temple, which had been there in ancient times, then there would certainly be no place for that gate which the angels are said to have fashioned from precious stones for the future Temple, concerning which it is written in the Jalkut Schimóni on Esaias, fol. 54, col. 1, numero 339 as follows: אמר רבי ירמיה בשם רבי שמואל בר יצחק עתיד הקב"ה לעשות שער המזרח של בית המקדש הוא ושני פשפשין אבן אחת של מרגלית. רבי יוחנן הוה יתיב ודריש בבי כנישתא בציפורי עתיד הקב"ה לעשות שער המזרחי של בית המקדש הוא ושני פשפשין אבן אחת של מרגלית. הוה תמן חד אפיקורוס אמר אפילו כהדא ביעתא דשפנינא ליה אנן משכחין והדין יתיב ואמר הכדין עם שהוא מפרש בים הגדול פקעה ספינתו בים וירד לעומקי תהום וראה מלאכי השרת מסתתין בו מגלפין בו מרגלין בו אמר להם מהו זה אמרו לו זה שער המזרחי של בית המקדש הוא ושני פשפשין אבן אחת של מרגלית. אמר ליה סבא סבא כל מה דאת יכיל למגלג לגלג למשבחא שבח דאילוילי חמון עיני לא הינא מהימנא. אמר ליה ואילו לא חמון עינך לא הינא מהימנא למיליא דאורייתא הלא עיני ואסתכל ביה מיד נעשה ביה גל של עצמות: that is, Rabbi Jeremias said in the name of Rabbi Samuel, the son of Rabbi Isaac: the Holy Blessed God will in the future make the gate of the Temple facing the rising of the sun, together with two small doors, out of one precious stone (or one pearl). Rabbi Jochanan once preached in the synagogue in Zipporia (and said): the Holy Blessed God will in the future make the gate of the Temple facing the rising of the sun, together with two small doors, out of one precious stone. But there was an Epicurean (or heretic) present, who said: we find none that is as large as a turtledove's egg, and this man sits here and tells such lies. When that same man was afterwards sailing on the great sea, his ship broke apart in the sea, and he sank down into the depths of the abyss, and saw ministering angels therein cutting (a stone), and hewing it out, and fashioning a distinction upon it. Then he said to them: what is this? And they answered him: this is the gate of the Temple facing the rising of the sun, together with two small doors, fashioned from one precious stone. (After the said Epicurean had returned home again,) he said to Rabbi Jochanan: O old man, recount all that you can recount, and praise what you can praise; for had my eyes not seen it, I would not have believed it. But he gave him this answer: if your eyes had not seen it, you would not have believed the words of the Law.

And he lifted up his eyes and looked at him, and that man was turned into a heap of bones, that is, he died. These are the words of the Jalkut. But I would very much like to know how this Epicurean, after having suffered shipwreck and sunk into the depths of the sea, was kept alive and came back out again.

Notwithstanding that this is a palpable fabrication, there follows immediately after the passage just cited the claim that God Himself showed such a stone to a pious man who had also doubted it, and the words read as follows: מעשה בחסיד אחד דהוה מטייל בשינתא דימא והרהר בלבו ואמר נאכד שהק"ב עתיד לעשות שער המזרחי של בית המקדש הוא ושני פשפשין אבן אחת של מרגלית יצתה יצתה בת קול ואמרה אלולי שאתה חסיד גמור כבר היהיה מדת הדין פוגעת בו באותו איש : העולם כולו בראתי בששה ימים דכתיב כי ששת ימים עשה יי' את השמים ואת הארץ ושער המזרחי של בית המקדש אפשר לעשות ושני פשפשין אבן אחת של מרגלית : מיך בקש רחמים על עצמו ואמר רבון העולמים אף על פי שלבי הרהרתי בשפתי לא דברתי : מיד נעשה לו נס ונבקע הים לו וראה מלאכי השרת מכתתין בו פולפין בו ואמר להם מה הוא זה אמרו לו זה שער המזרחי של That is: It came to pass with a pious man that, as he was walking along the shore of the sea and was pondering in his heart that which is said, namely that the holy and blessed God (according to the teaching of the Rabbis) will in the future make a gate on the Temple facing the rising of the sun, with two small doors, out of a single precious stone (and he doubted whether this could be so), a voice came down from Heaven and said: if you were not a perfectly pious man, the attribute of judgment would already have struck (and punished) you. I have created the entire world in six days, as it is said (Exod 20:11): "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth"; so it is likewise possible for Me to make the gate of the Temple facing the east, with two small doors, out of a single precious stone. Thereupon that same pious man immediately begged for mercy and said: O Lord of the worlds! although I thought this in my heart, I did not speak it with my lips. Then a miracle was immediately wrought for him, and the sea was parted before him, and he saw ministering angels therein cutting, hewing, and making distinctions upon (a stone), and he said to them: what is this? And they answered him: it is the gate of the Temple facing the east, with two small doors, being fashioned out of a single precious stone.

The ark of the covenant, together with those things which had been in the Holy of Holies, is said to have been hidden away, but in the future, at the time of the Messiah, it will come to light again. That the ark of the covenant was hidden is found in the Talmudic tractate Jóma fol. 53, col. 2. in these words: רבי יהודה בן לקיש אומר ארון במקומו נגנו שנאמר ויאריכו ראשי הבדים : וגו' מן הקודש על : that is, Rabbi Jehuda, the son of Lakisch, says that the ark was hidden in its place, because it is said (1 Kgs 8:8): "But the poles of the ark were so long that their tips (that is, their outermost ends) were seen from the sanctuary before the inner chamber, but they were not seen on the outside, and they remained there until this day." The proof, as Rabbi Salomon notes in his commentary on this passage, is drawn from the fact that it says "and they remained there until this day," from which it follows that they must still be there. Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel writes in his exposition of these words, fol. 226, col. 1 of the Leipzig printing, as follows: ה"ז דרשו ויהיו שם עד היום הזה מלמד כשגלו ישראל לא נגלה הארון עמהם אלא במקומו נגנו; that is, our sages, of blessed memory, report that through the words "and they remained there until this day" it is taught that when the Israelites were led away into captivity, the ark was not carried away with them, but was hidden in its place.

From the Talmudic tractate Schekalim fol. 9, col. 1., it is taught that other things were hidden along with it, in these words: משננגז ארון נגזו עמו צנצנת של שמן המשחה מקלו של אהרן שקדיה ופרחיה וארגז שהשיבו פלשתים אשם לאלהי ישראל מי גזזו יאשיהו כיון שראה שכתוב יולך ה' אותך ואת מלכך עמד וגזזו שנאמר ויאמר אל הלויים המבינים לכל ישראל הקדושים לה' תנו את ארון הקדש בבית אשר בנה שלמה בן דוד מלך ישראל אין לכם משא בכסף עבדו את ה' אלהיכם ואת עמו ישראל. אמר להן אם גלה עמנו ישראל אינו חוזר למקומו וגזזו : that is, from the time when the ark was hidden, there were also hidden along with it the jar of manna (of which one may read in Exod 16:33), and the vessel with the oil of anointing, as well as the staff of Aaron together with its almonds and its blossoms (of which mention is made in Num 17:8), and the little chest which the Philistines sent as a guilt offering to the God of Israel (which may be seen in 1 Sam 6:11, 15). Who then hid them? Josiah did it, after he had seen that it is written (Deut 28:36): "The Lord will lead you and your king away," whereupon he arose and hid them, as it is said (2 Chr 35:3): "He also spoke to the Levites who taught all Israel, who were consecrated to the Lord: place the holy ark in the house that Solomon the son of David, king of Israel, built. You shall carry it on your shoulders no more. Now serve the Lord your God and His people Israel." He said: if it is carried away with us to Babylon, it will not return again to its place, and therefore it was hidden. The very same thing is also to be found, with minor variation, in the Talmudic tractate Horajoth (or Horajos) fol. 12, col. 1 Isaac Abarbanel expresses himself on this matter in his commentary on 2 Kgs 23:3, fol. 302, col. 3 of the Leipzig printing, as follows: ידע יאשיהו שעתיד היה הבית ליחרב מדברי חולדה הנביאה לכן צוה לגזוז קודש ה' אשר אהב כדי שלא יבא לידי האויבים ; i.e., Josiah knew that the Temple was to be destroyed, from what the prophetess Huldah (2 Kgs 22:15-17) had said, and therefore he commanded that the sanctuary of the Lord, which he loved, be concealed, so that it might not fall into the hands of the enemies, as did the remaining vessels of the house of the Lord.

Our sages, of blessed memory, say that this refers to the structure which Solomon had built beneath the floor of the inner sanctuary, in order to conceal the Ark there; for it was known to him that the Temple would be destroyed. He had that place made with deep and winding hidden vaults, and had a stone laid over the opening of that place, upon which the Ark stood. But Josiah concealed there the Ark, and the jar of manna, and the staff of Aaron, together with the anointing oil. And one may well say that he was moved to do this by the prophecy which, as mentioned above, had come to him.

Where, however, that same Ark, along with the other aforementioned things, was hidden, the aforesaid Abarbanel indicates in his commentary on the first book of Kings, on the words of Cap. 6, v. 19, "But the inner sanctuary he prepared within the house, that the Ark of the Covenant of the LORD might be placed there," fol. 220, col. 1 of the aforementioned edition, expressing himself as follows: חז"ל אמרו שבזה רמז אל הבנין אשר עשה שלמה תחת קרקע הדביר לגנוז שם את הארון לפי שהיה נודע אליו שעתידי היה הבית לחרב. ועשה אותו מקום במטמוניות עמוקות ועקלקלות והניח האבן על פי המקום ההוא ועל האבן ההוא היה הארון ויאשיהו גזז שמה הארון וצנצנת המן ומטה אהרן ושמן המשחה. ואפשר לומר שמתוך הנבואה הזו, שבאה לו כמו שזכר למעלה נתעורר לעשות זה, That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, say that this refers to the structure which Solomon had built beneath the floor of the inner sanctuary, in order to conceal the Ark there; for it was known to him that the Temple would be destroyed. He had that place made with deep and winding hidden vaults, and had a stone laid over the opening of that place, upon which the Ark stood. But Josiah concealed there the Ark, and the jar of manna, and the staff of Aaron, together with the anointing oil. And one may well say that he was moved to do this by the prophecy which, as mentioned above, had come to him.

That the Ark of the Covenant will come forth again and be revealed at the time of the Messiah is taught by the aforementioned Abarbanel in his Commentary on the First Book of Samuel, where he writes at fol. 86, col. 2 of the aforementioned edition, on the words of Cap. 4, v. 4, And the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinebas, were there with the Ark of the Covenant of GOD, as follows: הארון המיוחד הזה הוא אשר הכניס שלמה המלך בקדש הקרשים אחרי בנין הבית וכפי קבלת חז"ל האמתית הוא אשר גזו יאשיהו המלך בחרבן בית קדשנו ותפארתנו והוא העתיד להגלות בביאת משיחנו מהרה יגלה That is: This particular Ark is the one which King Solomon had placed in the Holy of Holies after the Temple was built. And according to the true Tradition, or oral teaching of our sages of blessed memory, it is the one which King Josias concealed at the destruction of our holy and glorious Temple, and which will in the future come to light at the coming of our Messiah (may he reveal himself speedily).

That the remaining things which were in the Holy of Holies shall also come forth again at that time is taught by the aforementioned Abarbanel on the ninth chapter of Daniel, as the highly learned Buxtorf indicates in his Exercitationes, in the history of the ark of the covenant, in the 23rd chapter, pagina 204, with these words: The sacred vessels which were in the Holy of Holies, namely the ark of the covenant of the LORD, the tablets which were written with God's finger, the book of the law of Moses which was laid at the side of the ark, and the vessel of the anointing oil which stood beside it, I say, all these sacred vessels were hidden away at the destruction of the first Temple: ושוב י"י את that is, but when the LORD shall bring back the captives of Zion, they shall all return again, in such a manner that the Holy of Holies in the house of God shall be with all its vessels and its holiness.

In the future, sacrifices shall also be offered again in the Temple, concerning which the following is read in the book Jad chasaka of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, in the second part, fol. 297, col. 1, numero 1, cap. 11, under the title Hilchóch melachím: המלך המשיח עתיד לעמוד ולהחזיר מלכות בית דוד לישנה הממשלה הראשונה ובונה המקדש ומקבץ נדחי ישראל וחוזרין כל המשפטים בימיו כמה שהיו מקודם מקריבין קרבנות ועושין שמטין ויובלות ככל מצוה האמורה בתורה that is, the King Messiah will in the future arise and restore the kingdom of the house of David to its former dominion in its original state, and build the Temple, and also gather the scattered Israelites. In his time all laws will be reinstated as they were before. Sacrifices will be offered, and the sabbatical years and jubilee years will be observed, according to every commandment mentioned in the Law. Likewise, in the book Pesikta sotárta fol. 58, col. 1, in the Parascha Balak, the following is read concerning the Messia: הוא עולה ובונה את בית המקדש ומקריב: that is, he will go up (to Jerusalem) and build the Temple and offer sacrifices.

On the other hand, it is written in Vajikra rábba fol. 142, col. 3. in the ninth Parascha as follows: לעתיד לבוא כל הקרבנות בטלים וקרבן תודה אינו בטל כל התפלות: that is, in the future all sacrifices will cease, but the sacrifice of praise (or of thanksgiving) will not cease. All prayers will cease, but the thanksgiving will not cease. And this is also to be found in the aforementioned Vajikra rabba fol. 161, col. 2. in the 27th Parascha, and in the Médrasch Tillim on the 56th Psalms fol. 31, col. 3., as well as in the book Maarébeth ha'elabúth fol. 129, col. 1. Likewise, in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 56, col. 2. in the 43rd chapter under the title Chélek haavóda, the following is taught on this matter: לעולם הבא אחר התחיה אין חטא אין מות ולוה אין חטאות: ואשמות ושום קרבן לעתיד לבוא וולת המידין ומוספין וקרבן תודה שלא יתבטלו לעולם כי

ההטאות ואשמות באות על חטא ובזמן שאין חטא חטאות ואשמות למה וגוי: that is, in the world to come, after the resurrection of the dead, there will be neither sin nor death any longer; therefore in the future there will also be no more sin offerings, nor guilt offerings, nor any sacrifice whatsoever, except for the daily and additional offerings and the thank offering, which will never cease: for the sin offerings and guilt offerings come on account of sin. But what purpose would sin offerings and guilt offerings serve in that time in which there is no sin? etc.

Regarding the aforementioned building of the Temple, it is evident from this that the Jews are caught in the erroneous belief that the third Temple is to be built at the time of the Messiah whom they have hitherto awaited in vain; and this is demonstrated in Bereschith rábba fol. 3, col. 4., at the end of the second Parascha, from the words of Gen 1:1-3, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth; and the earth was without form and void, etc.; and God said, let there be light," in a most hair-splitting manner, after the custom of the Jews, as follows: אמר רבי חייא מתחלת ברייתו של עולם צפה הקדוש ברוך הוא בית המקדש בנוי וחרב ובנוי: בראשית ברא אלהים הרי בנוי הין מה דאת אמר לנטוע שמים וליסוד ארץ וגוי: והארץ היתה תהו ובהו הרי חרב הין מה דאת אמר ראיתי את הארץ והנה תהו ובהו, ויאמר אלהים יהי אור הרי בנוי ומשוכלל לעתיד לבוא הין מה דאת אמר קומי אורי כי that is, Rabbi Chija said that the holy and blessed God had seen the Temple built, destroyed, and built again from the beginning of the world. The words "In the beginning God created" signify it as built, just as it is said in Isa 51:16, "To plant the heavens and to lay the foundations of the earth, etc." The words "and the earth was without form and void" signify it as destroyed, as it is said in Jer 4:23, "I looked upon the earth, and behold, it was without form and void." The words "and God said, let there be light" signify it as (again) built and completed in the future, just as it is said in Isa 60:1, "Arise, be enlightened, for your light has come." And it is written (Isa 60:2), "For behold, darkness covers the earth, etc."

Such a nonsensical proof is also found in the aforementioned Bereschith rábba ba, fol. 63, col. 3, in the 70th Parascha, on the words of Gen 28:17, "And (Jacob) was afraid, and said: How dreadful is this place! This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven," which reads as follows: אמר רבי שמעון בן יוחאי אין בית המקדש של מעלן גבוה מבית המקדש של מטן אלא י"ח מייל מאי טעמא וזה השער השמים מנין וזה דבר אחר מלמד שהראהו הק"ה ליעקב בית המקדש בנוי וחרב ובנוי. ויירא ויאמר מה נורא המקום הזה זה בנוי. המ"ר נורא אלהים ממקדשיך: ואין זה הרי חרב כמ"דאל על זה היה דוה לבנו ועל אלה חשכו עינינו: כי אם בית אלהים בנוי ומשוכלל לעתיד לבוא כמ"דא כי חזק בריחי שערך, That is: Rabbi Schimon ben Jochai said that the upper Temple is no more than eighteen miles higher than the lower one. From where is this proven? (Since it is said) Veseb, "This is the gate of heaven," where the word זה Veseb yields the number eighteen. In another manner, such words teach us that the holy, blessed God caused Jacob to see the Temple built, destroyed, and (again) rebuilt. The words "And he was afraid, and said: How dreadful is this place" signify it as built; this is what is said in Ps 68:36: "Thou art dreadful, O God, out of thy holy places." The words "This is none other" signify it as destroyed; just as it is said in Lam 5:17: "For this our heart is faint, and for these things our eyes are dim." The words "than the house of God" signify it as (again) built and perfected in the future, just as it is said in Ps 147:13: "For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates."

From this, nothing else could be concluded but that only two Temples were supposed to have existed, since it is mentioned only twice that one was to have been built: where, then, does the building of the third and future Temple fit? This is also acknowledged by Rabbi Bechai, in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 38, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajeze, where he says: ורשו רז"ל הראהו בית המקדש בנוי וחרב ובנוי. בנוי מה נורא המקום הזה חרב אין זה. בנוי וזה שער השמים that is, our Rabbis, themselves of blessed memory, have taught that God showed Jacob the Temple built, destroyed, and (again) built: built (because it is written:) "How awesome is this place?" Destroyed (because it is said:) "This is nothing." Again built (because one reads:) "And this is the gate of Heaven." After this, however, the Scripture indicates no more than two Temples (even though the third is also yet to be built.) Thereupon the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai further expresses himself as follows: יתכן לפרש שיש בכתוב רמז לשלש מקדשים ממה שידוע: כי מילת זה רמז לשכינה כמו זה אלי ואנוהו. ואמר מה נורא המקום הזה על בית המקדש הראשון ששרתה בו שכינה. אין זה כי אם על בית שני שלא שרתה בו שכינה כן כתוב בנבואת חגי ואירצה בו ואכבדה ואכבד כתיב כי השכינה שהיא ה"א נחסרה משם. וזה שער השמים על הבית השלישי שיבנה במהרה בימינו. שתחזור העבודה והשכינה בירושלים כימי קדם ומוזה הזכיר כאן שמים שיהיה מעשה שמים לא בנין אדם כמו הראשונים שהזכיר בהם מקום ובית. וכן רמז משה בברכות בנימין שבית המקדש בחלקו הוא שאמר ישכון לבטח עליו זה בית ראשון ששרתה בו שכינה שנקראת ידיד ה' 'יחופף עליו כל היום זה בית שני שלא שרתה בו שכינה. ובין כתפיו שכן זה בית שלישי העתיד שתשרה בו שכינה. וכן תמצא במסכת נזיר היכל ה' היכל ה' היכל ה' המה זה מקדש ראשון ומקדש שני ומקדש שלישי שימע מינה תרי חרוב וגו' יעמוד לעולם עד כאן. ונראה שהזכיר בשלישי לשון המה שהוא לשון מורה על דבר נצחי וקיים כלשון ואדע כי כרובים המה. וכנכי מעולם המה. וכן דרשו ז"ל בלשון כחית למאור. בית ראשון עמד ת"י שנה ובית שני ת"ך והכל כמנין כה"ת. והענין הזה נרמז בלשון כחית לפי ששני המקדשים היו מרמם ושניהם נחרבו אבל בית שלישי להעלות נר תמיד כלומר מעלתו that is, one must interpret the matter such that in the (seventh) verse (Gen 28) there is an allusion to three Temples, since it is known that the little word זה Seb, meaning "this" or "this one," signifies the Shekbinah, that is, the divine indwelling (or presence, or Majesty), just as it is said (Exod 15:2): Seh eli veanvéhu, that is, "This is my God, I will make Him a dwelling" (or "I will glorify Him"). He (namely Jacob) spoke the words "How awesome is this place" of the first Temple, in which the Shekbinah, or divine Majesty, had dwelt. The words "this is nothing" he spoke of the second Temple, in which the Shekbinah had not dwelt. Thus it is written in the prophecy of Haggai (Hag 1:8): "And I will take pleasure in it, and ואכבדה Veecafedáh, that is, that I may be honored." However, it is written ואכבד Veecafedá (without the He, or the letter Ha, at the end), because the Shekbinah, which the He signifies, was absent from that place. The words "This is the gate of Heaven" he spoke of the third Temple, which shall be built speedily and in our days, since the divine worship and the Shekbinah will return to Jerusalem as in former times. For this reason he made mention of Heaven here, because it will be a work of Heaven and not a building of men, as the preceding two Temples were, in speaking of which he used the words "place" and "house." Moses also signified this in the blessing of Benjamin, in whose inheritance the Temple stood, when he says (Deut 33:12): "(The beloved of the Lord) shall dwell securely with Him," by which the first Temple is to be understood, in which the Shekbinah had dwelt, and which is called the beloved of the Lord. (The following words:) "He shall cover him all the day long," signify the second Temple, in which the Shekbinah had not dwelt. The words "And he shall dwell between his shoulders" signify the future third Temple, in which the Shekbinah will dwell. Thus you also find in the Talmudic tractate Nasir (fol. 32, col. 2) that (the words of Jer 7:4) "The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord," הֵמָּה bèmmah, that is, "they are," signify the first and second, as well as the third Temple. Learn from this that two shall be laid waste, but the third shall remain standing for eternity. Up to this point (are the words of the Talmud:) and it appears that in connection with the third, the word הֵמָּה bèmmah was mentioned, which word signifies an eternal and enduring thing, according to the words (Ezek 10:20): "And I perceived, Ki Kerubhim bèmmah, that is, that they were Cherubim." Likewise it is said (Ps 25:6): Ki meolam bèmmah, that is, "For they are from eternity." So too have our Rabbis, of blessed memory, explained the words (Lev 24:2): כֹּתֵית לַמָּאֹר Cathith lemāor, that is, "(Pure olive oil) beaten for the light." The first Temple stood four hundred and ten years, and the second four hundred and twenty years, and both together remained standing according to the numerical value of the word כֹּתֵית Cathith (that is, eight hundred and thirty years). This matter was signified by the word כֹּתֵית Cathith (which derives from כָּתַת Catháth, that is, to crush and to shatter), because both Temples were trodden down (and shattered) and destroyed. But the third Temple shall be such that the everlasting light will be kindled within it, that is, its glory shall endure forever, and its light shall never cease.

These are the words of Rabbi Bechai, by which he intends to prove that the third Temple will yet be built; however, they contain nothing other than a foolish rabbinical fantasy. For how can one, with sound reason, force three Temples out of the aforementioned words of Gen 28:17 and Deut 33:12, as well as Lev 24:2? Beyond that, it is also an insipid foolishness to say that the word הָמָה signifies something eternal and enduring, since it is nothing other than a pronomén tertiae personae, masculini generis, pluralis numeri, meaning "they"; which is also sometimes taken in place of the verbum substantivum sunt, that is, "they are," or erant, that is, "they were," עָרָו. Thus it is read in Ps 16:3: "For the saints" אֲשֶׁר בָּאֲרֶץ הָמָה ashér baárez hémmab, that is, "who are upon the earth," where the word hémmab means "are." In this sense, and in no other, is it also taken in the passages cited by Rabbi Bechai. If it meant something everlasting and imperishable, why is it used with the stone tablets in Exod 32:16, where it is read: וְהָלָחַת מַעֲשֵׂה אֱלֹהִים הָמָה Vehalluchóth maasébh Elobím hémmab, that is, "And the tablets were the work of God"? Those tablets certainly did not last long, but were, as can be seen at v. 19 of the same passage, soon broken by Moses. Likewise it stands in Ps 78:39: וַיִּזְכֹּר כִּי בָשָׂר הָמָה Vajiczór ki basár hémmab, that is, "And He (namely, God) remembered that they (the Israelites) are flesh." Flesh is indeed a perishable thing and lasts but a short time, as is said in Isa 40:6: "All flesh is (like) grass, and all its goodness is like the flower of the field."

Just as the Jews' proof that the third Temple is yet to be built is entirely vain and foolish, so too is their hope in this matter completely and utterly futile and in vain. The second Temple, which, as can be seen in the book of Ezra, was built by Zerubbabel, is called the last Temple in the prophet Haggai 2:10, where one reads: "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than that of the former." If it was the last, then no other can be built after it. That God does not wish the Temple to be rebuilt is clearly to be seen from the third Oration of the ancient Church Father Chrysostom, which he delivered against the Jews; for after he had treated the desolation of the city of Jerusalem and of the Temple there, and the prophecy of Dan 9:26, and stated that they shall not be rebuilt, he goes on to speak further of this matter, as can be seen in the first Tomus or part of the edition prepared here in Frankfurt in the year 1698, from col. 431 to 435, as follows: Καὶ ὅτι οὐ ψεύδονται τὰ εἰρημένα, Φέρε καὶ τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῶν παρασχόμεθα μαρτυρίαν. εἰ μὲν γὰρ μὴ ἐπεχείρησαν οἰκοδομῆσαι τὸν ναόν, εἴχον ἂν λέγειν, ὅτι εἴγε ἠθελήθημεν ἐπιχειρῆσαι, καὶ τὰ τῆς οἰκοδομῆς ἄψασθαι, πάντως ἄνισχύσαμεν καὶ ἡνύσαμεν· νυνὶ δὲ αὐτοὺς δαίτυμι, ὅτι

οὐχ ἅπασι, οὐδὲ δις, ἀλλὰ καὶ τρεῖς ἐπιχειρήσαντας καὶ φαγέντας, καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς Ὀλυμπιακοῖς ἀγῶσιν· ὥστε ἀναμφισβήτητον εἶναι, τῆς ἐκκλησίας τὸν στέφανον. πῶς οὖν ἐπεχείρησαν οἱ αἰεὶ τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ ἀντιπύκτοντες, καὶ νεωτεροποιοὶ καὶ στασιασταί; μετὰ γὰρ τὴν Οὐεσπασιανοῦ καὶ Τίτου γενομένην ἐρήμωσιν, ἐπὶ Ἀδριανοῦ ζήσαντες ἔτι οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐσπούδαζον ἐπὶ τὴν προτέραν πολιτείαν ἐπανελ—ἐπανελθεῖν· οὐκ εἰδότες, ὅτι ψήφῳ θεοῦ πολεμοῦσι, κελεύσῃ διὰ παντός ἐρημοῦσθαι τὴν πόλιν· ὁ δὲ θεῶν πολεμῶν, περιγενέσθαι ἀμήχανον· συμβῆξαντες τοίνυν τῷ βασιλεῖ, πάλιν εἰς ἀνάγκην αὐτὸν κατέστησαν παντελοῦς ἐρημώσεως· καθελῶν γὰρ αὐτοὺς ἐκεῖνος, καὶ χειρῳάμενος, καὶ τὰ λείψανα ἀφανίσας πάντα, ἵνα μὴδὲ ἀναισχυρτεῖν ἔχῃσι λοιπὸν, ἢ ἀνδριάντα ἔστησε τ' ἐαυτοῦ· εἶτα ζωιδῶν, ὅτι συμβαίνει χρόνῳ ποτὲ τὰ μνημεῖα καταπεσεῖν, ὥστε αὐτοῖς εὐθεῖναι καυτήρα ἀνίατον τῆς ἥττης καὶ τῆς ἀναισχυρίας ἐκείνης ἔλεγchon· τὸ ὄνομα τὸ ἐαυτοῦ τῇ πόλεως ἐπέθηκεν λειψάνοις· Ἐπεὶ δὲ γὰρ Αἰλῖος Ἀδριανὸς ἐχρημάτιζεν· οὕτω καὶ τὴν πόλιν καλεῖσθαι ἐνομοθέτησεν, ἐκεῖθεν τε Αἰλία μέχρι τοῦ νῦν ὀνομάζεται, ἀπὸ τῆς ἐπωνυμίας τοῦ κρατήσαντος καὶ καθελόντος αὐτήν· ὁρᾷς τὴν πρῶτην ἐπιχείρησιν τῶν ἀναισχυρτῶν Ἰουδαίων, βλέπε καὶ τὴν μετ' ἐκείνην, πάλιν ἐπὶ Κωνσταντίνου τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἐπεχείρησαν· Ὁ δὲ βασιλεὺς ἰδὼν τὴν ἐπιχείρησιν αὐτῶν τὰ ὧτα αὐτῶν ἀποτεμῶν, καὶ τὸ τῆς παρακοῆς σύμβολον ἐνθεῖς αὐτῶν τῷ σώματι· πανταχοῦ περιῆγε καθάπερ τινὰς δραπέτας καὶ μαστιγίας· διὰ τῆς τοῦ σώματος πηρώσεως ἅπασι καταδύλους ποιῶν, καὶ τοὺς πανταχοῦ σωφρονίζων, μὴκέτι τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἐπιχειρεῖν πράγμασιν· ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ἀρχαῖα καὶ παλαιά· μᾶλλον δὲ τὸ μὲν τοῖς ἔτι πρεσβυτέροις καὶ γέρουσιν ὑμῶν ἐστὶ γνωρῆμον· ὁ δὲ μέλλω νῦν ἐρεῖν, καὶ τοῖς σφόδρα νέοις δῆλόν ἐστι καὶ καταφανές, οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐπὶ Ἀδριανοῦ καὶ Κωνσταντίνου γέγονεν· ἀλλ' ἐπὶ βασιλείῳ πρὸ εἴκοσι ἐτῶν γεγεννημένου ἐπὶ τῆς γενεᾶς τῆς ἡμετέρας· Ἰουλιανοῦ γὰρ πάντας ἐν ἀσεβείᾳ τοὺς βασιλεῖας νικῆσαντος, καλοῦντος αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ τὰς τῶν εἰδώλων θυσίας, καὶ ἐπισπωμένους αὐτοὺς πρὸς τὴν οἰκείαν ἀσεβείαν· εἶτα τὸν παλαιὸν τῆς θεραπείας προβαλλόμενον τρόπον, καὶ λέγοντες, ὅτι καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν προγόνων τῶν ἡμετέρων οὕτως ὁ θεὸς ἐθεραπεύετο· καὶ ἄκοντες ὁμολογοῦν τότε ταῦτα, ἅπερ ἡμεῖς ἀπεδείξαμεν νῦν, ὅτι τῆς πόλεως ἔξω θῦειν οὐκ ἔνι, ἀλλὰ παρανομοῦσι πᾶν ὅτι οὖν ἐπιτελοῦντες ἐπὶ γῆς ἀλλοτρείας· ὥστε εἰ βούλει φησὶν ἡμᾶς θύοντας ἰδεῖν, ἀπόδος ἡμῖν τὴν πόλιν, ἀνάστησον ἡμῶν τὸν ναὸν, δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὰ ἅγια τῶν ἁγίων, ἀνάστησον τὸν βωμὸν, καὶ θύσομεν καὶ νῦν καθάπερ καὶ πρότερον· καὶ οὐκ ἠσχύοντο οἱ μισροὶ καὶ ἀναισχυροὶ παρὰ ἀνδρὸς ἀσεβοῦς καὶ Ἑλληνος ταῦτα αἰτοῦντες, καὶ τὰς μισρὰς ἐκείνου χεῖρας καλοῦντες ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν ἁγίων οἰκοδομήν· καὶ οὐκ ἠσθάνοντο ἀδυνάτοις ἐπιχειροῦντες πράγμασιν, οὐδὲ συνείδον, ὅτι εἰ μὲν ἀνθρωπὸς ἦν ὁ καταλύσας ἐκεῖνα, ἐνὴν καὶ παρὰ ἀνθρώπου πάλιν λαβεῖν αὐτά· θεοῦ δὲ ὄντος τοῦ καθελόντος αὐτῶν τὴν πόλιν, ἀμήχανον τὴν θείαν δόξαντα ψήφῳ, δύναμιν ἀνθρωπίνην μετατρέψαι ποτέ· ἂ γὰρ ὁ θεὸς ὁ ἅγιος βεβήλωται, φησὶ, τίς διασκεδάσει; καὶ τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ τὴν ὑψηλὴν τίς ἀποστρέψει; ὥσπερ γὰρ ἂν ἀναστῆσαι βουληθῇ μένειν, καθελεῖν ἀδύνατον ἀνθρώποις, οὕτως ἄπερ ἂν καθελῇ καὶ μένειν καθηρημένα, ἀναστήσαι πάλιν πάλιν οὐκ ἐν ἑσῶ), Ἰουδαῖοι, ὅτι Βασιλεὺς τὸν ναὸν ἐδίδω, καὶ τὸν βωμὸν ἀνίστα, καθάπερ ὑμεῖς ἐποπτεύετε μάστιγι· μὴ καὶ τὸ πῦρ ἀνωθεν ὑμῖν ἀφεῖναι ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν δυνατὸν ἦν; τότε γὰρ οὐκ ἂν ἦν ἐναγῆς καὶ ἀκάθαρτος ἡ θυσία ὑμῶν· Διὰ γὰρ τοῦτο γὰρ οἱ παῖδες Ἀαρὼν ἀπώλοντο, ἐπεὶδὴ πῦρ ἀλλότρειον εἰσήνεγκαν· Ἀλλ' ὅμως εἰς ἅπαντας τυφλώττοντες, παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν, καὶ ἰκέτευον συμπρέσβασθαι τῇ οἰκοδομῇ τοῦ ναοῦ· ὁ δὲ καὶ χρήματα ἀνήλωσε, καὶ ἐπιστάτας τοῦ ἔργου ἐπεμψε τοὺς ἀπὸ τῆς μεγάλης ἀρχῆς, καὶ τεχνίτας πάντοθεν ἐκίνησε, καὶ πάντα ἐποίει, καὶ ἐπραγματεύετο, ἥξμα καὶ κατὰ μικρὸν αὐτοὺς ἄχρις εἰς τὸ θύειν ἐμβάλλη προσδοκῶν ἐκεῖθεν ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν εἰδώλων θεραπείαν ἄξειν ῥαδίως, ὁμοῦ τε ἐλπίζων ὁ μεμνηνὸς καὶ ἀνόητος τοῦ Χριστοῦ περιγράφειν τὴν ἀπόφασιν, τὴν οὐκ ἐῶσαν ἀναστῆναι τὸν ναὸν ἐκεῖνον· Ἀλλ' ὁ δρασσόμενος τοὺς σοφοὺς ἐν τῇ πανουργίᾳ αὐτῶν, εὐθέως διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἐδήλου, ὅτι αἱ τοῦ Θεοῦ ψῆφοι πάντων εἰσὶ δυνατώτεραι, καὶ ἰσχυρὰ τὰ λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ· ὥς γὰρ ἤψαντο τοῦ παρὰ νόμου ταύτης σπουδῆς, καὶ γυμνοῦν ἤρξαντο τὰ θεμέλια, καὶ πολὺν ἐκένωσαν χρόν, καὶ τοῦ οἰκοδομῆς ἄπτεσθαι λοιπὸν ἔμελλον, πῦρ ἐκπηδήσαν ἐκ τῶν θεμελίων τῆς γῆς εὐθέως, κατέφλεξε τε πολλοὺς ἀνθρώπους, οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς λίθους τοῦ τόπου ἐκείνου, καὶ τῆς ἀκαίρου φιλονεικίας ἔστησεν, οὐ μόνον τοὺς τῷ ἔργῳ ἐπιχειρήσαντας, ἀλλὰ καὶ Ἰουδαῖοι πολλοί, ἔτι θεασάμενοι ἐξέστησαν καὶ ἠσχύνησαν· Ταῦτα ἀκούσας ὁ βασιλεὺς Ἰουλιανὸς, καίτοι τοσαύτην μανίαν ἔχων περὶ τὴν σπουδὴν ἐκείνην, δέσας μὴ περαιτέρω προελθὼν ἐπὶ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ κεφαλὴν καλέσῃ τὸ πῦρ, ἀπέστη ἡττηθεὶς μετ' ἔθνους παντός· καὶ νῦν ἂν ἔλθῃς εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, γυμνὰ ὄφει τὰ θεμέλια τῆς γῆς ἐκείνης· καὶ τὴν αἰτίαν ζητήσης τῆς κατασκαφῆς, οὐδεμίαν ἄλλην ἢ ταύτην ἀκούσῃ, καὶ τούτου μάρτυρες ἡμεῖς πάντες, ἐφ' ἡμῶν γὰρ, οὐ πρὸ πολλοῦ ταῦτα γέγονε χρόνου· καὶ σκοπεῖ νίκης περιφάνειαν βεβαίαν· οὐ γὰρ ἐν χρόνοις βασιλέων εὐσεβῶν τοῦτο συνέβη, ἵνα μὴ τινες λέγωσιν ὅτι χριστιανοὶ ταῦτα θαρρῆσαντες ἐπελθόντες διεκώλυσαν μὴ ἀναστῆναι τὸν ναὸν, ἀλλ' ἵνικα τὰ ἡμέτερα ἡλαύνετο πρᾶγματα, ἵνικα περὶ τοῦ ζῆν πάντες ἐκινδυνεύομεν, καὶ παρῆρσι ἀνθρωπίνῃ πᾶσα παρῆρητο, καὶ τὰ Ἑλληνικὰ ἦνθει, καὶ τῶν πιστῶν οἱ μὲν ἐν τοῖς οἴκοις ἐκρύπτοντο, οἱ δὲ πρὸς τὰς ἐρημίας μετὰ κίζοντο, καὶ τὰς ἀγορὰς ἔφευγον, τότε δὴ ταῦτα ἐγίνετο, ἵνα μηδεμία ἀναισχυντίας αὐτοῖς καταλιμπάνηται πρόφασις. That is to say: in order to demonstrate that what has been said is no untruth, we wish to bring forward a testimony from their works (namely, those of the Jews); for if they had never undertaken to rebuild the Temple, they could say: had we set our hands to it and wished to begin the construction, we could have accomplished it by every means and brought it to completion. But now I show them that they undertook it not once or twice, but three times, and employed great vehemence, just as is customary in the Olympic contests, so that there can be no doubt that the (Christian) Church has received the crown (that is, the victory). Where then did those who always resist the Holy Spirit, and undertake new things, and stir up rebellions, set about this? After the destruction carried out by Vespasian and Titus, the Jews banded together under (the Emperor) Hadrian and applied every effort to return to their former governance; but they did not know that they were waging war against God's counsel, which commands that the city (Jerusalem) shall be desolate at all times. But when God wages war, it is impossible to prevail. When they had fought against the Emperor, they compelled him to bring about a complete destruction of the city; for when he had overcome and subdued them and had wiped out everything that remained, so that they might no longer conduct themselves shamelessly, he set up his image there. Thereafter, knowing that it would in time come to pass that it would fall into ruin, he gave his name to the remaining part of the city, in order to affix upon them an indelible mark of disgrace that would be a sign of their defeat and shamelessness; for since he was called Aelius Hadrianus, he also commanded that the city be named accordingly, and for this reason it has been called Aelia to this day, after the surname of its conqueror and destroyer. You see here the first undertaking of the shameless Jews; consider also that which followed upon it. Under (the Emperor) Constantine they also attempted such a thing; but when the Emperor saw their intention, he had their ears cut off and marks of their disobedience set upon their bodies, and led them about everywhere as runaway slaves and wicked scoundrels worthy of the whip, and made them known to all through the mutilation of their bodies, and brought those who were scattered everywhere to a better understanding, so that they should undertake such things no more. But one might say: these matters are old, and it has been a long time since they occurred. I answer, however: it is all the more well known to your old and aged people; but that which I am about to say is also known and manifest to the very young, for it did not happen under Hadrian or Constantine, but under the Emperor who lived twenty years ago, in our own lifetime. For when Julian, who surpassed all emperors in godlessness, summoned them to the sacrifices of idols and wished to draw them into his domestic impiety, they held before him the ancient manner of worship and said: it is also in this way that our forefathers served God. They then confessed against their will that which we have now demonstrated, namely that it is not permitted to offer sacrifice outside the city of Jerusalem, and that everything done in a foreign land is contrary to the Law; but they said to him: if you wish to see us sacrifice, then give us back the city of Jerusalem, build us the Temple, show us the Holy of Holies, set up the altar, and we will sacrifice as we did before. These vicious and shameless men were not ashamed to demand such things from a godless and heathen man, and to summon his unclean hands to the building of holy things, and they did not understand that they were undertaking impossible things; nor did they consider that if a man had destroyed them, it would also lie within a man's power to restore them. But since it is God who destroyed their city, it is impossible that human power should ever turn aside what divine ordinance wills; for He says (Isa 14:27): Who can scatter what the holy God has decreed? And turn aside His high hand? For just as it is impossible for men to destroy what He has built and wills to remain standing, so also it is not permitted to rebuild what He has destroyed and wills to remain destroyed. But suppose, you Jews, that the Emperor had given you back the Temple and set up the altar again, as you vainly hoped: would he then also have had the power to send fire down upon you from heaven above? But if that had not been the case, your sacrifice would have been impure and unclean; for it was for this reason that the sons of Aaron perished, because they had brought in strange fire (as may be read in Lev 10:1-2). But they were at the same time blind to all things, and sought him out and humbly entreated him to lend assistance to the rebuilding of the Temple and to undertake it together with them. Now he applied money to this end and sent overseers of the work who were of great lineage, and had craftsmen brought from all places, and did everything and took pains to drive them gradually and by degrees toward the offering of sacrifice, hoping thereby that he would easily bring them to the service of idols. At the same time this senseless and foolish man hoped to reduce to nothing the saying of Christ (Matt 23:38), which does not permit that same Temple to be rebuilt. But He who catches the wise in their craftiness revealed at once in deed that God's counsels are mightier than all things, and that the works of God's words are more powerful; for when they laid hold of this godless undertaking and began to lay bare the foundations and had cleared away much earth and wished to proceed with the rest of the building, fire immediately sprang forth from the foundations of the earth and burned many men, and indeed the very stones of that place, and not only those who were undertaking the work; and it checked their untimely stubbornness, and many Jews who saw it were seized with terror and shame. When the Emperor Julian heard this, although he was given over to this work with such great senselessness, he feared that if he proceeded further he might bring the fire upon his own head, and he withdrew from it, overcome, together with the whole people. If you now come to Jerusalem, you will see the foundations of that earth laid bare. And when you ask why the earth is thus cast up, you will hear no other answer than this; and we are all witnesses of it, for it happened not long ago in our own time. Consider now this excellent victory; for it did not come to pass in the times of pious emperors, lest some should say that the Christians who had gathered there prevented the Temple from being rebuilt; but rather at a time when our affairs were in disorder, when we were all in danger for our lives, and all human freedom had been taken away, and paganism was flourishing, and some of the faithful were hiding in their houses while others had made their dwellings in the deserts and avoided the marketplaces: it was then that this occurred, so that no pretext or excuse might remain for their shamelessness. These are the words of Chrysostom, from which it may be seen that God did not permit the godless Emperor Julian (who, on account of his apostasy from the Christian to the heathen faith, was given the surname Apokata, that is, a renegade) and the stubborn Jews to rebuild the Temple, in that fire came forth from the earth and burned the workers; concerning which one may also consult Sozomen's Ecclesiastical History, Book Three, Chapters 18, 19, and 21. And the senseless Jews may conclude from this that, since God at that time prevented the building of the Temple in so terrible a manner, He certainly does not will that it be erected again and that the Mosaic worship, which was nothing other than a prefiguration of Christ, be reinstated.

Would the malicious Jews wish to cast doubt on the words of the ancient Church Father Chrysostom, and claim that his testimony is suspect because he was a Christian, they must know that the pagan writer Ammianus Marcellinus, who lived in the time of the aforementioned Julian the Apostate and had much dealings with him, confirms this in his 23rd book, where he writes as follows: Ambitiosum quondam apud Hierosolimam Templum, quod post multa internecina certamina obsidente Vespasiano, posteaque Tito, aegre est expugnatum, instaurare sumptibus cogitabat immodicis: negotiumque maturandum Alypio dederat Antiochensi, qui olim Britannias curaverat pro praefectis. Cum itaque rei idem fortiter instaret Alypius, juvaretque provinciae rector, metuendi globi flammaram, prope fundamenta crebris assultibus erumpentes, fecere locum exustis aliquoties operantibus inaccessum: hoc modo elemento destinatus repellente cessavit inceptum: that is, he intended to rebuild with excessive expenditure the formerly magnificent Temple that had stood at Jerusalem, which had been besieged by Vespasian and afterward by Titus, and taken with great difficulty after much bloody fighting, and he entrusted the work to Alypius to expedite, who was from Antioch and had previously served as governor in Britannia. When now Alypius pressed forward vigorously, and the one who governed the province rendered him assistance, terrifying balls of fire and flame burst forth near the foundations, leaping repeatedly upon the workers, and rendered the site inaccessible, after the workmen had been burned several times. In this manner, as the element drove the people back, the work that had been begun came to a halt. Thus far are the words of Ammianus Marcellinus, which are in agreement with the testimony of Chrysostom.

If the Jews are still not willing to be satisfied with this, let them consider what their own historian, Rabbi Gedalja, writes about it in his book Shalshelet hakkabala, fol. 89, col. 2, Amsterdam edition, whose words read as follows: בימי רב חנן וחבריו שהיה שנת ד' אלפים ש"ט ליצירה אומרים הקרוניקי זה הקימוקן שהיה רעש גדול בכל השלם ונפל המקדש הגדול שעשו היהודים בירושלים בנצית יוליאנו That is: the chronicles report that in the time of Rav Chanan and his companions, which was approximately in the year 4343 after the creation of the world, there was a great earthquake in the world, and the great temple which the Jews had built in Jerusalem, by order of the Emperor Juliani Apostata, at great expense, had collapsed. On the following day, a great fire fell from heaven, so that the iron which was part of the building melted, and a great many Jews were burned, too numerous to count. Now, although the circumstances which Rabbi Gedalja presents do not agree with what Chrysostomus and Ammianus Marcellinus report, it is nonetheless stated on all sides that God brought the work to nothing through fire.

The Jewish historian Rabbi David Gans, however, in his book Zemach David, in the second part, fol. 24, col. 1, Frankfurt printing, concealed the truth of this account in a malicious and frivolous manner, writing of Julianus as follows: הקיסר הזה צוה לחדש בנין בית המקדש לכבוד ולתפארה ונתן לזה עזר מממונו אך מן השמים הקיסר שלא נתעבב בניהו כי הקיסר נהרג במלחמת פרס : that is, this emperor commanded that the Temple be rebuilt to honor and glory, and contributed money from his own funds toward it; he was, however, prevented by Heaven from completing the building, for the emperor was killed in the war he waged against Persia. The villain, however, was unwilling to state the true cause, so that the matter might not give the Jews occasion for reflection and prompt them to call into doubt the rebuilding of the Temple and to conclude that God no longer takes pleasure in Jewish worship. But let this be enough on the subject of the Temple.

To return to those things which will come to pass at the time of the Messiah: God will at that time make seven canopies or heavens for the Messiah, concerning which it is written in the book Pesikta rabbetha fol. 63, col. 1. as follows: מה הקדוש ברוך הוא עושה לו המשיח שבע חופות של אבנים טובות ומרגליות וכל 'חופה וחופה מושכים מתוכה ארבע נהרות של יין ושל דבש ושל חלב ושל אפרסמון טהור וגו' : that is, What then will the holy blessed God make for the Messiah? He will make for him seven canopies or heavens of precious stones and pearls, and from each heaven four rivers will flow, one of wine, another of honey, the third of milk, and the fourth of pure balsam, etc. Likewise it is read in the Talmudic tractate Báva bâthra fol. 75, col. 1. that God will make just as many canopies or heavens for every righteous person, and the words there read as follows:

אמר רבי עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות שבע חופות לכל צדיק וצדיק וגומר that is, The holy blessed God will in the future make seven heavens for each and every righteous person, etc. In the future, a magnificent banquet is to be held for the righteous in Paradise, concerning which the following is read in Vajikra rabba fol. 146, col. 2, in the 13th Parascha: אמר רבי יצחק אריסטין עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות לעבדיו הצדיקים לעתיד לבוא וכל מי שלא אכל נבילות בעולם הזה זוכה לראותו לעולם הבא הה"ד וחלב נבלה וחלב טרפה יעשה לכל מלאכה ואכול לא תאכלוהו That is: Rabbi Berachja said in the name of Rabbi Isaac that the Holy One, blessed be He, will in the future prepare a banquet for His servants, the righteous; and everyone who has not eaten carrion in this world will be worthy to behold it in the world to come; this is what is written (Lev 7:24): "But the fat of that which died of itself, and the fat of that which was torn by beasts, may be used for any other purpose; but you shall not eat of it." This is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 7, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschith, and in the Jalkut chádascb, fol. 143, col. 4, numero 68, under the title Maschiach, as well as in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Books of Moses, fol. 143, col. 4, numero 536. And in Bamidbar rabba it is written at fol. 205, col. 2, in the 13th Parascha, as follows: לעתיד לבוא עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות סעודה לצדיקים בגן עדן ואין צריכין לא בפלסמון ולא ראשי בשמים אלא רוח צפון ורוח דרום מכבדות ומזלות כל בוסמי גן עדן ונותנים ריחם הה"ד עורי צפון That is: In the future, the Holy One, blessed be He, will prepare a banquet for the righteous in Paradise, and they will have no need of balsam or of the finest spices; rather, the north wind and the south wind will sweep together all the fragrant things, and all the spices of Paradise will flow and give forth their fragrance. This is what is written (Song 4:16): "Awake, O north wind, and come, O south wind; blow through my garden, that its spices may flow."

Regarding the foods that are to be set before them, the first shall consist of the flesh of the two great fish called Leviathan, concerning which the following is read in the Talmudic tractate Báva bâthra fol. 75, col. 1.: אמר רבה אמר רבי יוחנן עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות סעודה לצדיקים מבשרו של לויתן שנאמר יכרו עליו חברים ואין כירה אלא סעודה שנאמר ויכרה להם כירה גדולה ויאכלו וישתו ואין חברים אלא חברים That is: Rabba says that Rabbi Jochanan said that the holy blessed God will prepare a meal for the righteous from the flesh of the Leviathan; because it is said (Job 40:25): "The companions יכרו עליו jichbrú aláu," that is, "will hold a meal over him"; for the word כירה Keráb means nothing other than a meal, as it is said (2 Kgs 6:23): "And he prepared for them Keráb gedolá," that is, "a great meal, and they ate and drank." By the companions, however, no one else is understood than the disciples of the wise, as it is said (Song 8:13): "You who dwell in the gardens: the companions hearken to your voice; let me hear it."

The female, however, is said to have been slaughtered by God at the beginning of the world and salted for such a meal, concerning which it is written in the Jalkút Schimóni on Esaïam fol. 46, col. 4. numero 301, from the Talmudic tractate Báva báthra, fol. 74, col. 2, as follows: אמר רב יהודה אמר רב כל מה שברא הק"ה בעולמו זכר ונקבה בראם אף לויתן נחש בריח ולויתן נחש עקלתון זכר ונקבה בראם ואלמלא נזקקין זה לזה היו מחריבין את כל העולם כלו מה עשה הק"ה סרס את זה : הזכר והרג את הנקבה ומלחה לצדיקים לעתיד לבוא שנאמר והרג את התנין אשר בים that is, Raf Jebuda says that Raf said: everything that GOD created in His world, He created a male and a female of it. He also created the Leviathan, which is a straight serpent, and the Leviathan, which is a crooked serpent (of which mention is made in Isa 27:1), a male and a female. But if they had mingled with one another (and multiplied their kind), they would have destroyed the entire world. What did the holy blessed God do? He castrated or gelded the male, and killed the female, and salted her for the righteous in the time to come, as it is said (in the cited passage, Isa 27:1): He will slay the dragon that is in the sea. This same thing is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 7, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschith.

As for the little male creature, it is supposed in the future to fight with the Behemóth, or great ox, which is mentioned in the passage immediately following, and they are supposed to kill one another and also to be set out as food at such a banquet. Concerning the combat of these two monstrous great beasts, the following is written in the Jalkút Schimóni on the second book of Samuel, fol. 25, col. 3, numero 161: אמר רבי יודן אמר רבי סימון בהמות ולויתן הם קניגין של צדיקים לעתיד לבוא וכל מי שלא ראה קניגין של אומות העולם בעולם הזה זוכה לראותו בעולם הבא. כיצד הם נשחטין בהמות אלו נותן ללויתן בין בין קרניו וקורעו ולויתן לראותו : That is: Rabbi Joden says that Rabbi Simon said that Behemóth and Leviáthan will in the future be the hunt of the righteous, and whoever in this world has not seen the hunt of the nations of the world will be worthy to see it in the world to come. But how will they be slaughtered or butchered? The Behemóth will take the Leviáthan between his horns and tear him apart; and the Leviáthan will take the Behemóth between his fins and split open his nostrils (and in this manner kill him), and the righteous will say: this schechting or slaughtering is coscher, that is, lawful, and the eating of their flesh is permitted. This same passage is also to be found in the aforementioned Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 144, col. 3, numero 535, and in Vajikra rábba, fol. 145, col. 2, in the 13th Parascha, as well as in the Jalkut chádäsch, fol. 143, col. 3, numero 60, under the title Maschiach.

What will remain of the Leviathan shall be sold in the markets of Jerusalem, concerning which, following the previously cited words from the Talmudic tractate Báva báthra fol. 75, col. 1, wherein an account is given of the meal from the flesh of the Leviathan, the following stands: והשאר מחלקין אותו ועושיין : בו סחורה בשוקי ירושלים שנאמר יחצוהו בין כנענים that is, the remainder they will divide among themselves and conduct trade with it in the markets of Jerusalem, as it is said (Job 40:25): they will divide him among the merchants. But since the great ox cannot subsist in the water, and the Leviathan cannot subsist on dry land, and yet these two animals are supposed to fight one another, I would very much like to know where they will come together and where this battlefield is supposed to be.

In the Talmudic tractate Báva Báthra, it is read at fol. 74, col. 2. at the end, and at fol. 75, col. 1, that the angel Gabriel will commence a hunt with the Leviathan, in these words: עתיד גבריאל לעשות קנוגיא עם לויתן שנאמר התמשוך לויתן : בחכה ובחבל תשקיע לשונו ואלמלא הק"ה עוזרו אין יכול לו שנאמר העושו יגש חרבו : that is, Gabriel will hold a hunt with the Leviathan, as it is said (Job 40:20): canst thou draw out the Leviathan with a hook, and press down his tongue with a cord? And if the holy and blessed GOD would not help him, he could not overpower it, as it is said (Job 40:14): he that made him shall make his sword approach unto him.

Since it was shown above in the 8th chapter of this second part, pagina 434, that the cited words of Isa 27:1, "At that time the Lord will visit with His hard, great, and strong sword both the Leviathan that is a straight serpent and the Leviathan that is a crooked serpent, and will slay the dragons in the sea," are interpreted as referring to the chief devil Sammael, who is called the Leviathan that is a straight serpent, and to his wife Lilis, who bears the name of the Leviathan that is a crooked serpent, just as these same words are also explained and understood in that manner in the first chapter of this second part, pagina 7, according to the content of the book Ammudeba Schibba, whereas here fish are understood by them: the rabbis may see for themselves how these things fit together. In the Chaldean translation, the aforementioned words of Isaiah are explained as referring to King Pharaoh. Rabbi David Kimchi, however, writes in his Commentary on this passage: לויתן נחש בריה וגו' משל הוא : that is, the Leviathan of whom the prophet makes mention is a figure for the kings of the mighty enemies. Rabbi Salomon Jarchi reports the following in his Commentary on this passage: לויתן נחש בריה הוא : מצרים לויתן נחש עקלתון הוא אשר signifies Egypt; but the Leviathan that is a crooked serpent signifies Assyria. Isaac Abarbanel understands by the straight serpent the Turks, and by the crooked serpent the Christians, as may be found in his Commentary on this passage. But where, then, does the fish remain that the Jews intend to eat?

The second meal will consist of the aforementioned great ox, which is called Schor habbar, that is, the wild ox, or also Behemoth, which was also mentioned in the eighth chapter of the first part, along with its female; and it is written thus in the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the eleventh chapter: בששי הוציא מן הארץ בהמות שהוא רבוצ בהררי אלף ובכל יום ויום מרעיתו אלף הרים ובלילה הם צומחין מאליהן כאלו לא נגע בהם שנאמר כי בול הרים ישאו לו ומי ירדן להשקותו שמימי הירדן סובבין את כל ארץ ישראל החציו למעלה מן הארץ והחציו למטה מן הארץ שנאמר יבטח כי גיח ירדן אל פיהו והוא מוכן לסעודה גדולה של צדיקים שנאמר העושו יגש חרבו That is: On the sixth day He (namely GOD) brought forth the Behemoth from the earth, which lies upon a thousand mountains; it also grazes a thousand mountains every day, and by night they grow back of themselves (and the grass stands there again) as though it had not touched them, as it is said (Job 40:15): The mountains bring him fodder. And the water of the Jordan is there to give him drink, for the water of the Jordan flows around the entire land of Israel, half of it above the earth and the other half of it beneath the earth, as it is said (Job 40:18): He trusts (or is confident) that he can draw up the Jordan with his mouth (and drink it); and this same creature is appointed for the great banquet of the righteous, as it is said (v. 14 ibid.): He who made him will bring his sword against him. It is likewise read in the Talmudic tractate Bava báthra fol. 74, col. 2 as follows: ואף בהמות בהררי אלף זכר ונקבה בראם ואלמלא נזקקין זה לזה מחריבין כל העולם כולו. מה עשה הקדוש ברוך הוא סירס הזכר וצינן הנקבה ושמרם לזה: לצדיקים לעתיד לבוא שנאמר הנה נא כוחו במתניו זה זכר ואונן בשרירי בטנו זו נקבה That is: He also created the Behemoth, which lies upon a thousand mountains, as a male and a female; and had they mingled with one another (and multiplied), they would have destroyed the entire world. What then did the holy blessed GOD do? He castrated the male and made the female cold (and rendered her unfit to bear young), and preserved her for the righteous for the time to come, as it is said (Job 40:11): Behold, his strength is in his loins, these words signify the male; and his power in the sinews of his belly, these words signify the female. In the Chaldean translation of the words of Ps 50:10, "For all the beasts of the forest are mine, the Behemoth upon a thousand mountains," it is read: ארום דיילי כל חיות חורשא. ושהתית לצדיקא בגן עדן בעיריא דכין וחור בר חרעי בכל יומא That is: For all the beasts of the forest are mine, and I have prepared for the righteous in paradise pure animals, and the wild ox that grazes every day upon a thousand mountains. Rabbi Solomon also writes in his commentary on the word Behemoth: העתיד לסעודת: That is: This is the one who is appointed for the future banquet.

The third dish will be from the great bird Bar júchneh, which was also mentioned above in the eighth chapter of the first part, among the great birds. Concerning this, the following is read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 83, col. 1, in the Parascha Beschállach: צריך אתה לדעת: כי כשם שהמן היה מאכל גופני קיום תולדות האור העליון ונתן למקבלי התורה כדי לזכך שכלם ולעלות השגתם בידיעת השם יהברך כן מצינו מאכלים גופניים קיימים והם בעלי חיים מעותדים לעתיד לבוא ושתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות מהם סעודה לצדיקים ואולי כי גם הם מתולדות האור העליון ועל כן הם קיימים ואלו הם דג ששמו לויתן עוף ששמו בר יכני ונבראו שניהם ביום המישי ונקרא בר יוכני לפי שהוא מוכן לסעודת הצדיקים וגו' that is, You should know that, just as the manna was a bodily, enduring food that came from the highest light and was given to those who received the law, so that their understanding might be purified and their comprehension in the knowledge of the blessed God might be elevated, so too we find bodily, enduring foods, namely those creatures which are appointed for the time to come; and the holy, blessed GOD will prepare a meal for the righteous from them, and they will perhaps also come from the highest light, which is why they are also enduring (and last so long). These are the fish called Leviathan and the bird called Bar júchne, and both were created on the fifth day (of the creation of the world). The bird, however, is called Bar júchne because it is מוכן muchan, that is, prepared and appointed, for the meal of the righteous. On this matter, the book Shulchan arba fol. 9, col. 2, at the beginning of the fourth chapter, may also be consulted. Elias likewise writes in his Tischbi fol. 41, col. 1, concerning the word Juchneh as follows: נמצא באגדה כי יש עוף גדול הנקרא בר יוכנה והפליגו בגודל ביצתה במסכת בכורות. גם שמעתי שעתיד הק"ה לעשות ממנו סעודה לצדיקים עם הלויתן ושור הבר: that is, In the Aggada it is found that there is a great bird called Bar júchneh, and something remarkable is reported concerning the size of its egg in the Talmudic tractate Bechoroth (fol. 57, col. 2). I have also heard that the holy, blessed GOD will prepare a meal for the righteous from it, together with the Leviathan and the Schor habbar, or wild ox. Aben Esra expresses himself in his commentary on Dan 12:3 as follows: בגלות יהיו בבוא הגואל כי עליהם כתוב כימי העץ ימי עמי ואז יתענגו בלויתן וביו ובהמות: that is, The righteous who died in the exile or captivity will come back to life when the Redeemer comes, for concerning them it is written (Isa 65:22): "The days of my people shall be as the days of a tree." Then they will delight in the Leviathan, and the (bird) Sis, and the Behemoth. From this it is evident that the great bird called Bar júchneh is also called Sis, concerning which Sis a discussion was given in the eighth chapter of the first part.

The fourth dish will consist of fat geese, concerning which the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Bava bathra fol. 73, col. 2.: אמר רבה בר בר חנה : זימנא חדא הוא קא אזלינן במדברא וחזינן הנהו אוויזי דשמטי גדיפיהו משמנייהו וקא נגדי נחלי דמשחא מתותייהו אמינא להו אית לן בגוייכו חלקא לעלמא דאתי הדא דלי גדפא והדא דלי דמא : that is, Rabba, the grandson of Channa, said: we went once into a wilderness and saw geese whose feathers were falling off on account of their fatness, and streams of fat flowed from beneath them; whereupon I said to them, do we have a portion among you in the world to come (when the Messiah will reveal himself)? Then one of them lifted up its wing, and another lifted up its foot, as if they wished thereby to give us to understand: this is your portion in the world to come, as Rabbi Solomon expounds it.

These aforementioned dishes are said to have a special effect, concerning which the following is read in the book Shulchan árba fol. 9, col. 2. at the beginning of the fourth chapter: מעלת המאכלים האלה עצומה מאד לחדד השכל ולזכך : הלב כענין המן שזכו בו דור המדבר שהיא כצפיחית בדבש והיה מתולדת האור העליון : that is, the excellence of such dishes is very great, for sharpening the understanding and purifying the heart, just as the manna did, of which the generation of the wilderness was found worthy, which was like a cake with honey and came from the highest light.

Regarding the wine that is to be drunk at this meal, it is supposed to be very old. In the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 40, col. 2, the following is read concerning old wine: תנו רבנן פעם אחת חש רבי במעיו אמר כלום יש אדם שיודע יין תפוחים של גוים אסור או מותר אמר לפניו רבי ישמעאל ב"ר יוסי פעם אחת חש אבא במעיו והביאו לו יין תפוחים של גוים של ע' שנה ושתה ונתרפא אמר לו כל כך היה בידך ואתה מצערני בדקו ומצאו גוי אחד שהיה לו שלש מאות גרבי יין של תפוחים של ע' שנה ושתה : that is, our Rabbis teach that the Rabbi once had stomach pains and asked whether there was anyone who knew whether the apple wine of the Gojim, or heathens, was forbidden or permitted to drink; whereupon Rabbi Ishmael, the son of Rabbi Jose, answered him: my father once had stomach pains, and when apple wine of the Gojim was brought to him that was seventy years old, and he drank of it, he was healed. Thereupon the Rabbi said to him: you had so much within your knowledge, and yet you let me suffer pain? Then they searched and found a Goi, or heathen, who had three hundred pails of apple wine that was seventy years old, and when he drank of it, he was healed. This apple wine was indeed old; however, the wine that the Jews hope to drink is supposed to be far older still, for it is said to have grown from the beginning of the world and to lie preserved in its clusters, whose berries are like barrels, in Paradise. Concerning this wine, the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 99, col. 1: מאי עין לא ראתה אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי זה זה יין :

that is, what do the words (Isa 64:4) "No eye has seen it" mean? Rabbi Jehóscha, the son of Levi, said: they signify the wine that has been preserved in its clusters since the six days of the creation of the world. And in the Chaldean translation of the words of Eccl 9:7, the following is read concerning it: עתיד מרי עלמא למימר לכל : דהווי כפן ושתי בלב טב חמרא דאצטנע לך בגן עדן חלף חמרך דמזגתא לעניא וחשניא : that is, Solomon said through the spirit of prophecy from God: the Lord of the world will say to every righteous person individually, go and eat with joy your bread, which will be given back to you in return for the bread that you shared with the poor and the needy who were hungry; and drink with a glad heart the wine that is preserved in Paradise, in return for your wine that you poured out for the poor and those who suffered want. Likewise, in the Chaldean translation of the words of Cant 8:2, the following is written concerning the same: אדברך מלכא משיחא ואעלנך לבית מוקדשי ותאלף יהי למדחל מן קדם י"י ולמהך : בארחתיה ותמן נסעוד סעודתא דלוייתן ונשתי חמר עתיק דאצטנע בענבוהי מן יומא דאתברי : that is, I will lead you, O King Messiah, and bring you into my Temple, and you shall teach me to fear God and to walk in His ways. There we will also hold the meal of the Leviathan and drink old wine that has been preserved in its clusters from the day on which the world was created, and eat of the pomegranates and fruits that are prepared for the righteous in Paradise.

From such wine the patriarch Jacob is also said to have drunk, for the Chaldean translation of Jonathan renders the words of Gen 27:25 as follows: ואמר קריב לי ואכול מציא דברי בגין דתברכינך נפשי וקריב ליה ואכל ולא הוה חמרא גביה ואזדמן ליה מלאכא ואיייתי מן חמרא דאצטנע בענבוהי מן יומי שרוי עלמא ויהביה ביד יעקב : that is, And he (namely Isaac) said (to Jacob, whom he took for Esau): my son, bring me here of the venison, that my soul may bless thee; and he brought it to him, and he ate. But he had no wine with him, and an angel came to him and brought of that wine which has been preserved in its grapes since the beginning of the world, and gave it into Jacob's hand, and Jacob presented it to his father, and he drank it. Concerning the aforementioned meal and such wine, one may also consult the Jalkut chadäsch, fol. 142, col. 2, numero 35, from the book Médrasch néelam, where, among several other things, one reads: רוב העולם סובלין הגלות באהבה בשביל סעודה זו : that is, Most people willingly endure the exilium, or captivity, on account of this meal.

The aforementioned combat that will take place between the Leviathan and the great ox, as well as the meal just mentioned, are described in a Pentecost prayer beginning אקדמות מילין וגו' Akdamóth (or Akdómos) míllin &c., in the Prague Machsor, in the second part, fol. 113, col. 1. 2., under the title Józer lejóm ríschon schel schevuóth (or schevíús), as follows.

The sport with the Leviathan and the ox that dwells in the high mountains, when they will fight and battle one another. The Behemoth (or ox) will thrust mightily with his horns, and the fish will leap boldly against him with his fins. His Creator will draw near to him in glory with His sword (and slay him), and will prepare a meal and banquet for the righteous. They will sit at tables made of agates and carbuncles, and rivers of balsam will flow before them. They will make merry and drink themselves drunk from full cups of sweet wine, which has been kept in the winepress since the beginning of the world.

Concerning this meal, the following is also read in the booklet Othióth Rabbi Akkiva fol. 18, col. 1. 2. 3., on the letter Capb: כ"ף שהוא מכח (כ"ף זה כף השבועה. כ"ף שהוא מכח זו על גב זו בשמחה רבה בסעודתן של צדיקים לעולם הבא ועומד) (הקב"ה (ומרקד לפניו בסעודה וכל צדיק וצדיק מהלכת עמו שמינה כרובי רבבות מלאכי שרת ועמודי ברק סביב להן וניצוצין של זוהר מקימות להן וויקוקי זיו מבהיקים את פניהם וזיקי אור מקרינין את עפעפיהם ורוחות מתננשין לפניו ועננים מזילים לנגד פניהם והרים מרקדים לפניו. ועל אותה שעה אומר ישעיה ה' דמה ידך. נהו רמה ידך מלמד שעתיד ישעיה לומר לפני הקדוש ברוך הוא בסעודתן של צדיקים כגון ערן כשערן שהוא שהוא מרקד לפניו רבונן של עולם רמה ידך לא יבאו רשעים ויראו בטובתן של צדיקים. משיב הקדוש ברוך הוא ואומר ישעיה בני יבאו ויראו בשמחתם ובטובתם וילבשו בושם וכלמה שנאמר יחזו ויבושו קנאת עם. משיב ישעיה ואומר לפניו רבונן של עולם לא יבאו ולא יראו. אומר הקדוש ברוך הוא מי מכריע בינינו שנעשה כדברו. משיב ישעיה ואומר לפניו רבונן של עולם תבא כנסת ישראל הגדולה ותכריע בינינו ונעשה. מיד קורא הקב"ה למטטרון שר הפנים ואומר עברי לך והבא לי כנסת ישראל כדי שתכריע בינינו. ומיד הולך מטטרון ומביא כנסת ישראל לפני הקדוש ברוך הוא ולפני ישעיה וכיון שרואה כנסת ישראל את הקדוש ברוך הוא אמרה לפניו רבונן של עולם למה קראת אותנו. משיב הקדוש ברוך הוא ואומר לה בתי מפני שאני אומר יבאו רשעים ויראו בטובתן של צדיקים. משיב יבאו ויבושו שנאמר ותראה אויבתי ותכסה בושם. באותה שעה באין רשעים לפתח גן עדן ועומדין להסתכל בטובתן של צדיקים ורואים כל הצדיקים כל אחד ואחד בפני כבודו בלבוש מלכות ובכתר מלכות ובעדי מרגליות של מלכים. וכל אחד ואחד יושב כמלך על כסאו של זהב ולפני כל אחד ואחד שולחן של מרגליות וביד כל אחד ואחד כוס של זהב מרוקם באבנים טובות ומרגליות שהוא מלא כס חיים וכל מעדני גן עדן מונחים לפניו על השולחן ולפני כל אחד ואחד עומדים שלשה מלאכי השרת לשמשן וקרני הדר על ראשיהם וזיקים וברקים יוצאים אז מפייהם וזיו פניהם הולך מסוף העולם ועד סופו כזיו החמה שנאמר ואהביו כצאת השמש בגבורתו. ושמים ושמי השמים פותחין את דלתותיהן וממטירים עליהם טללי בושם אפרסמון טהור שריחו הולך מסוף העולם ועד סופו. ואלף אלפים מלאכי השרת עומדים לפניו ואוחזים בידיהם כנורות ונבלים ומצלתיים וכל כלי שיר ומרגנים לפניו בסעודה. וחמה ולבנה וכוכבים ומזלות מימינו ומשמאלו ומרקדים לפניו עמו. וכיון שהרשעים רואים כל אותה גדולה ומלכות וכל אותה הפארת וכבוד מגביהין את קומתן מאה מאה מפני כבודן של צדיקים להסתכל בהן ויהיו שואלים עליהם לומר כי אלו שכל אותו הכבוד וכל אותה גדולה עשה להם הקדוש ברוך הוא. משיבים מלאכי השרת ואומרים לפניו הללו עמו

של הקדוש ברוך הוא שעסקו בתורתו ובמצוותיו והביאום לגן עדן ליתן להם שכר טוב וחלק טוב. מיד נופלים רשעים על פניהם ופוחזים את פיהם בשבחו של הקדוש ברוך הוא ושל טוב. צדיקים ואומרים אשרי העם שככה לו אשרי העם ש"י אלהיו: That is: The letter Caph signifies the hand of שבועה Schevúa, that is, of the oath-swearing (in the edition printed at Venice in the year 306, that is, 1546, however, the word שכינה Schechina, that is, the divine Majesty, stands in place of the words of the oath-swearing): the hand which, out of great joy at the meal of the righteous in the world to come, strikes upon the other hand. At this meal the holy blessed GOD will arise and dance before them (namely, before the righteous); and with each individual righteous person the divine Majesty will walk, accompanied by many tens of thousands of ministering angels, and pillars of lightning will be around them, and sparks of radiance will surround them, and shining little sparks will make their faces gleam, and fiery flashes will cause their eyebrows to radiate. The winds will gather before them, and the clouds will let water flow toward their faces, and the mountains will dance before them. Of that same time Isaiah speaks (Isa 26:11): "LORD, Thy hand is lifted high." What do these words, "Thy hand is lifted high," signify? They signify that Isaiah will say to the holy blessed GOD, when He is dancing in Paradise at the meal of the righteous: "O Thou LORD of the world, Thy hand is lifted high; let not the wicked come, that they might see the good fortune of the righteous." But the holy blessed GOD will answer and say: "My son Isaiah, they shall come and see their joy and their blessed estate, so that they may be covered with shame and disgrace," as it is said in the cited verse 11: "They shall see it and be put to shame, because of the zeal for Thy people." Thereupon Isaiah will give answer and say to Him: "O Thou LORD of the world, they shall not come and see it." But the holy blessed GOD will say: "Who shall give the verdict between us, so that we do according to his word?" And Isaiah will answer Him and say: "O Thou LORD of the world, let the great congregation of Israel come, so that it may give the verdict between us, and we will act accordingly." Thereupon the holy blessed GOD will immediately call upon Metatron, the prince of the countenance, and say to him: "My servant, go and bring me the congregation of Israel, so that it may give the verdict between us." Then Metatron will straightway go and bring the congregation of Israel before the holy blessed GOD and before Isaiah. Now when the congregation of Israel sees the holy blessed GOD, it will say to Him: "Thou LORD of the world, why hast Thou had us called?" Thereupon He will answer and say to her: "My daughter, it is for this reason: because I say that the wicked shall come and see the blessed estate of the righteous" (but since Isaiah does not want this, thou shalt give the verdict in the matter as to what is to be done). Thereupon she will say: "They shall come and be put to shame," as it is said (Mic 7:10): "And

mine enemy shall look on, and shame shall cover her." At that same hour the wicked will come before the gate of Paradise and stand there to behold the good fortune of the righteous, and they will see all the righteous, each one in his own glory, clothed in a royal garment and a royal crown and royal adornment of pearls, and each one sitting like a king upon his golden throne, and before each one a table of pearls, and in the hand of each one a golden cup set with precious stones and pearls, full of the spice of life, and all the delights of Paradise laid before them upon the table, and before each one three ministering angels standing to wait upon them, and rays of glory upon their heads. Then lightning and thunder will go forth from their mouths, and the radiance of their faces will go, like the radiance of the sun, from one end of the world to the other, as it is said (Judg 5:31): "But they that love Him must be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might." The heavens and all the heavens of heavens will also open their doors and rain down upon them dew of spice and pure balsam, whose fragrance will go from one end of the world to the other. A thousand times a thousand ministering angels will also stand before them, holding in their hands flutes, fiddles, cymbals, and all manner of musical instruments, and will play before them at the meal. The sun and the moon, as well as the stars and planets, will also dance before them at His (namely, God's) right and left sides together with Him. Now when the wicked see all this glory and such royal estate, and all such splendor and such honor, they will raise their bodily stature up to a hundred cubits in honor of the righteous, so that they may behold them; and they will ask after them and say: "Who are these, that the holy blessed GOD shows them such honor and glory?" Then the ministering angels will answer and say to them: "These are the people of the holy blessed GOD, who have studied (and devoted themselves to) His law and His commandments, and they have been brought into Paradise so that they may be given their reward and a good inheritance." Thereupon the wicked will fall upon their faces and open their mouths and praise the holy blessed GOD together with the righteous, and say (from Ps 144:15): "Happy is the people that is in such a case; happy is the people whose GOD is the LORD." These are the words from the booklet Othioth Rabbi Akkiva.

Regarding dancing, at which GOD Himself is also supposed to appear and dance along, this has already been treated in the first chapter of the first part, pagina 48 and 49. As for the wicked, who will stand before Paradise and behold the glory of the righteous, it is also written thus in Shemóth rábba fol. 116, col. 1, in the 25th Parascha: עֵדֶן וְאוֹכְלֵי: פְּנֵי הָאֵלֹהִים וְיִסְכְּפוּ שָׁנָה עֲבָדֵי יֵאָכְלוּ וְאַתָּם תִּרְעֹבוּ: that is, In the future He (namely GOD) will make peace for them (the righteous), and they will sit in Paradise and eat, and the nations will see their custom and their manner, as it is said (Isa 65:13): Behold, my servants shall eat, but you shall be hungry.

After the meal, King David is to give thanks to God for it, and the following is read concerning this in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 119, col. 2: עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות סעודה לצדיקים ביום שיגמול חסדו לזרעו של יצחק לאחר שאוכלין ושותין נותנין לו לאברהם אבינו כוס של ברכה לברך ואומר להן. איני מברך שיצא ממני ישמעאל. אומר לו ליצחק טול וברך אומר להם איני מברך שיצא ממני עשו. אומר לו ליעקב טול וברך אומר להם איני מברך שנשאתי שתי אחיות בחייהן שעתידיה תורה לאוסרו עלי אומר לו למשה טול וברך אומר להם איני מברך שלא זכיתי ליכנס לארץ ישראל לא בחיי ולא במותי. אומר לו ליהושע טול וברך אומר להן איני מברך שלא זכיתי לבן דכתיב יהושע בן נון בן בנו יהושע בנו. אומר לו לדוד טול וברך אומר להן אני אברך ולי נאה לברך שנאמר כוס That is: The Holy Blessed God will in the future prepare a meal for the righteous on that day on which He will show His mercy to the seed of Isaac. After they have eaten and drunk, our father Abraham will be given the cup of thanksgiving in order to give thanks; but he will say: I will not give thanks, because Ishmael came forth from me. Then they will say to Isaac: Take it (the cup) and give thanks; but he will answer: I will not give thanks, because I brought forth Esau. After that they will say to Jacob: Take it (the cup) and give thanks; but he will answer: I will not give thanks, because I married two sisters during their lifetimes, which the Law afterward forbade on my account. Thereupon they will say to Moses: Take it (the cup) and give thanks; but he will answer: I will not give thanks, because I was not found worthy, neither during my life nor after my death, to enter the land of Israel. Then they will say to Joshua: Take it (the cup) and give thanks; but he will answer: I will not give thanks, because I was not deemed worthy of a son, as it is written (Num 14:6): Joshua the son of Nun, and (1 Chr 7:27) it is said: whose son was Nun, whose son was Joshua. After this they will say to David: Take it (the cup) and offer the thanksgiving; and he will say to them: I will give thanks, and it is fitting for me to give thanks, as it is said (Ps 116:13): I will lift up the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord. The very same thing is also to be found, with some variation, in the book Shulchan árba fol. 10, col. 2. How much, however, this cup of David will hold is found in the Talmudic tractate Jóma fol. 76, col. 1. in these words: כסא דדוד לעלא דאטי : That is: The cup of David in the world to come will hold two hundred and twenty-one Log, as it is said (Ps 23:5): כסי רייה Cosi revajah, That is: my cup is full; for the word revajah amounts to that number. One Log, however, holds as much as six eggshells of a hen. It must therefore be a reasonably large cup.

Since there could be an objection raised against what has been reported concerning the aforementioned feast, namely that the Jews perhaps do not understand it so plainly, according to the letter, I must indeed confess that there are some who have wished to understand it not literally, as the words read, but in a spiritual manner, among whom is also Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, who in his book Nischmáth chájim fol. 48, col. 1. in dem 17. Capitel des ersten Máamar expresses himself as follows: ראיתי מי שהאמין שהסעודה הזאת ובשרו של לוינת הכל כפשוטו ממש וכמו שהקדוש ברוך הוא נתן לישראל במדבר המן לחם אבירים המזכך את הלב כך לעתיד לבוא יאכלו מן הדגים מבשרו של לוינת מן העופות הבר יוכני ומן החיות הארציים הנקראת בהמות שהם מאכלים דקים וזכים להיותם הכנה לזכך הגוף והחומר ולחדד השכל כדי שבנקל ישיגו ידיעת הבורא ויתבוננו בנפלאות הטבע והמלאכים עד שיגיעו לידיעת השכלים היותר עליונים והספירות הנעלמות • אמנם לא מחשבותי מחשבותיהם שכבר העידו ולא כחשו המקובלים שענין הסעודות האלו הכל משל ורמז לסעודה השכלית שהיא לנפש והיא החכמה הרמה והסודות המופלאות אשר שם ישיגו הנפשות הנכבדות ואשר במ That is: I have seen one who believed that such a feast and the flesh of the Leviathan are to be understood literally, according to the letter, and that just as the holy and blessed GOD gave the Israelites in the wilderness the Manna, the bread of the Mighty (that is, of the angels, concerning which one may read in Ps 78:25), which purified the heart, so too in the time to come men shall eat of the fish, from the flesh of the Leviathan, of the birds from the Bar júchne, and of the earthly beasts from the Behemóth, which shall be delicate and pure foods, suited to purify the body and the (earthly) matter, and to sharpen the understanding, so that one may readily grasp the knowledge of God and comprehend the wonders of nature and of the angels, until one attains to the knowledge of the highest angels and of the hidden Sephiróth. But my thoughts are not as their thoughts (and I do not concur with them): for the Kabbalists have already testified and acknowledged that the matter of such feasts is a pure allegory, and signifies a spiritual feast belonging to the soul, namely the highest wisdom and the wondrous mysteries, which the glorious souls shall there comprehend and in which they shall take delight beyond all measure. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse ben Israel.

Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon was of the same opinion, having mentioned in his Commentario on the Mishna of the Talmudic Tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 118, col. 4, at the end of the Talmud printed in Amsterdam, the erroneous and confused opinions of many Jews, and thereafter writing on fol. 119, col. 1 as follows: כת סוברת כי הטובה היא גן עדן וכי הוא מקום שאוכלים ושותים בו מבלי עמל הגוף ובלי יגיעה ושיש לשם בתיים מאבנים טובות ומטות מוצעות במשי ונהרות משוכות יין ושמנים מבושמים והרבה דברים מזה המין וגו' . 'וכת שניה הסבור ותחשוב שהטובה המיוחדת הוא ימות המשיח מהרה יגלה וכי באותו הזמן יהיו בני אדם כלם מלאכים כלם חיים וקיימים לעד ויגביהו בקומתם וירבו ויעצמו עד שיושיבו כל העולם לעד לעולם ואותו המשיח כפי

מחשבתם יחיה בעזר השם יתברך. וכי באותן הימים תוצא הארץ בגדים ארוגים ולחם אפוי מחשבתם יחיה בעזר השם יתברך. That is: (One party holds that happiness consists in Paradise, and that it is a place in which one eats and drinks without bodily labor and without toil, and that there stand houses of precious stones and beds prepared with silk, and streams of wine and fragrant oil flow there, and many more things of the like. The other party, however, supposes and imagines that the hoped-for happiness consists in the days of the Messiah, who is to reveal himself speedily, and that at that same time all people will be angels, and all will live in eternity, and will be taller in bodily stature, and will beget many children and multiply, so that they will inhabit the entire world forever. Likewise, that the Messiah, according to their thinking, will remain alive with the help of the blessed God; and that in that same time the earth will bring forth woven garments and baked bread, and many more things of the like, which are impossible.) Beyond this, he also makes himself heard on this matter in his book Jad chasaka, in the second part, fol. 297, col. 1, in the 12th chapter, numero 4, under the title Hilchoth Melachim, as follows: לא נתאוו החכמים והנביאים ימות המשיח לא כדי שישלטו על כל העולם ולא כדי שירדו בכותרים ולא כדי שינשאו אותם העמים ולא כדי לאכול ולשתות ולשמוח אלא כדי שיהיו פנויים בתורה וחכמה ולא יהיה להם נוגש ומבטל כדי שיזכו לחיי העולם הבא כמו שביארנו בהלכות תשובה That is: The sages and the prophets did not desire the days of the Messiah in order that they might rule over the entire world, nor in order that they might have power over the Cutheans, nor for the reason that the nations might exalt them, nor to the end that they might eat and drink and be merry; but rather so that they might have time to attend to the Law and its wisdom, and that there be no one to afflict and hinder them, so that they might become worthy of the world to come (that is, of eternal life), as we have explained in the Tractate on repentance. The like is also to be found in his book Babo Móse pagina 160.

Notwithstanding all of the foregoing, there are other Jews, and indeed the majority of them, who hold that everything is to be understood properly and simply according to the literal sense, among whom is Rabbi Bechai, who writes in his book Cad hakkemach fol. 32, col. 4. under the title Oth cheth (or Os ches) in the following manner: דרשו ז"ל עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות סעודה לצדיקים והסעודה ההיא יש לנו להאמין אותה סעודה ממש גופנית כי המאכלים והם מוכנים מששת ימי בראשית והם מן הדגים (ומן העופות בר יוכני ומן הבהמות בהמות בהררי אלף ואולי יהיו מהולדת האור העליון כענין המן במדבר ובהכלית העלוי והדקות יותר כי שפע החכמה וההשגה לקבל המושכלות ההיה בהם יותר מכל הזמנים כולם אחר הסעודות האלה That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught that the holy blessed God will in the future prepare a meal for the righteous; and we must believe that this meal will be a proper bodily meal, since the foods are pure and have been prepared since the six days of creation; and these, as regards the fish, will come from the Leviathan, and as regards the birds, from the Bar juchne, and as regards the cattle, from the Behemóth, which is upon a thousand mountains. They will perhaps also derive from the highest light, just as the Manna in the wilderness derived from it, and will be of the most glorious and refined kind, since the influxus, or inflowing of wisdom and of the capacity to comprehend intelligible things, will be present in those (righteous ones) after these meals more than at any other time. The aforementioned Rabbi Bechai also makes himself heard on this matter in the following manner in his book Shulchan árba fol. 9, col. 3. in the fourth chapter, saying: ואם יסגור לב איש מתחכם להתחכם ולהקשות על דבר זה ויאמר כי דברי חכמינו"ל מיוסדים על אדני החכמה ועל זיו השכל וכולם נכוחים למבין והם לא דברו ולא אמרו דבר זה אלא דרך משל וסעודת לויתן אינה גופנית אלא דרך משל על מעלה השכלית וצורך החיים נשיב ונאמר כי יש עלינו בהכרח להאמין כי כפשוטן הדברים בסעודה גופנית מלבד מעלה השכלית שהרו אמרו בפרק הספינה אמר רבי יוחנן עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות סעודה לצדיקים מבשרו של לויתן שנאמר יכרו עליו חברים ואין כירה אלא סעודה שנאמר ויכרה להם כרה גדולה ואין חברים אלא תלמידי חכמים שנאמר חברים מקשיבים לקולך השמיעני • והשאר אוצרים אותו ועושים בו סחורה בשוקי ירושלים שנאמר יחצוהו בין כנענים • וכבר ידעת לדברי רז"ל שהולכים בלשונם אחר לשון התורה וכשם שיש בתורה מאכלים המותרים והאסורים את זה תאכלו ואת זה לא תאכלו וכתוב מבשרם לא תאכלו ואין לומר שהוא משל חס ושלום אלא כפשוטו ממש כן כשאמרו כבאן מבשרו של לויתן יש לנו לומר בודאי שאינו משל אלא כפשוטו ממש • וכן אמרו עוד עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לעשות סוכה לצדיקים מעורו של לויתן וגו' והשאר פורשו הקדוש ברוך הוא בחומות ירושלים וזויו מבהיק מסוף העולם ועד סופו שנאמר והלכו גוים לאורך • מכל זה יתבאר בפירוש כי הדברים כפשוטן בבשרו ממש ובעורו ממש • בבשרו ממש למאכלם של צדיקים שהטריחו עצמם בתורה ובמצווה ועורו ממש להבהיק דירותם כדי שיתפרסם מעלתם That is: But if someone who fancies himself clever should close his heart, be presumptuous, and raise objections against this matter, and should wish to say that the words of the Sages, of blessed memory, are founded upon the pillars of wisdom and the radiance of understanding, and are all right to one who is rational, and that they spoke and said this in no other way than as a parable, and that the meal of the Leviathan is not bodily but is to be understood as a parable concerning spiritual excellence and the bundle of the living (which is mentioned in 1 Sam 25:29), then we wish to answer him and say that we must necessarily believe that the words are to be understood according to their plain sense, as referring to a bodily meal, alongside the spiritual excellence. For in the chapter Hassefina (that is, in the fifth chapter of the Talmudic tractate Báva bábra, fol. 75, col. 1.) it is reported that Rabbi Jochanan said that the holy blessed God will prepare a meal from the flesh of the Leviathan for the righteous, as it is said (Job 40:25): The companions יכרו עליו jichru aláv, that is, will hold a meal from it, for the word כרה Kérah means nothing other than a meal, as it is said (2 Kgs 6:23): And he prepared for them a great כרה Kérah, that is, meal. By the companions, however, no one else is meant than the disciples of the Sages, as it is said (Song 8:13): The companions hearken to your voice; let me hear (them). But that which remains (of the Leviathan) will be stored up, and trade will be conducted with it in the markets of Jerusalem, as it is said (Job 40:25): The merchants will divide him among themselves. Now you know from the words of our Rabbis, of blessed memory, that in their discourses they follow the manner of expression of the Law; and just as in the Law certain foods are permitted and forbidden (and it is said in Deut 14): These you shall eat, but those you shall not eat; and (ibid. v. 8) it is written: Of their flesh you shall not eat, and one cannot say that this is a parable (which be far from us), but that it must be understood properly and literally: so too must we say that what they have reported here concerning the flesh of the Leviathan is certainly not a parable, but must be understood plainly and properly. Likewise it is further said (in the cited tractate Báva báthra fol. 75, col. 1.) that the holy blessed God will in the future make a hut or tent for the righteous from the hide of the Leviathan, etc. But whatever remains of it, the holy blessed God will spread out upon the walls of Jerusalem, and its radiance will shine from one end of the world to the other, as it is said (Isa 60:3): And the nations shall walk by your light. From all of this it is clearly evident that the words concerning the flesh and the hide of the Leviathan are to be understood literally and properly. Concerning its flesh, they are to be taken literally, as that which will serve the righteous as food, those who have labored in the Law and the commandments; and concerning the hide, they are likewise to be understood literally, from which their dwellings shall be illuminated, so that their glory may be revealed among the nations, showing how they served the holy blessed God and held fast to His Law, etc. From all of this it is sufficiently evident that Rabbi Bechai wishes everything to be understood literally, and entirely rejects the opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon. It may likewise be gathered from the book Avodáth hakkódesch fol. 55, col. 4. in the 43rd chapter, under the title Chelek haavóda, that Rabbi Meir understands everything according to the literal sense. But let this suffice on the matter.

Chapter XVI.

In Which Is Set Forth What the Jews Teach Concerning the Resurrection of the Dead.

The Jews generally believe that the dead will rise again, and whoever denies this is considered a heretic; they hold it to be a chief article of their faith, on account of which the thirteenth article thereof (as may be seen in the daily prayer books under the title Shacharit, where all thirteen articles are found) reads as follows: אני מאמין באמונה שלמה שיהיה תחיית המתים : that is, I believe with a perfect faith that the resurrection of the dead will take place at that time which shall be pleasing to the Creator, blessed be His name, and praised be His memory forever. Accordingly, Rabbi Menasse ben Israel also writes in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 39, col. 2. at the beginning of the 15th chapter of the first Maamar as follows: אמונת התחייה היא עיקר מעיקרי תורתנו והאומר אין תחיית המתים מן התורה הוא מין ואפיקורוס ואין לו חלק לעולם הבא : that is, The belief in the resurrection of the dead is one of the chief articles of our law; and whoever says that the resurrection of the dead cannot be proven from the law (namely, the books of Moses) is a heretic and an Epicurean, and has no share in the world to come (or eternal life.) Shortly thereafter he further expresses himself on this matter in the same place, saying: וכתובים מצינו שאמונת התייה המתים היא הכרחית לתורה האלהית ונפקא מינה שהאומר אין תחייה המתים מן התורה יצא מכלל המאמינים וכפר בתורה הנביאים : that is, We find in the law, in the Prophets, and in the Hagiographa (by which the remaining books of Holy Scripture are understood) that the belief in the resurrection of the dead is necessary in the divine law, and it follows from this that whoever says that the resurrection of the dead cannot be established from the law has departed from the community of believers and denies a chief article as well as the law itself.

In the book Menórath (or Menóras) hammāór, at fol. 66, col. 1, at the beginning of the second chapter, under the title נר רביעי חלק שלישי Ner revii chélek schelischí, the following is also read: כל הכופר בתחיית המתים או באחד מכל הנסים הכתובים בתורה כאלו כופר בכל התורה כולה ואין לו חלק לעולם הבא כדגרסין בריש פרק חלק דף צ' תנו רבנן אלו שאין להם חלק לעולם הבא האומר אין תחיית המתים לפיכך אין לו חלק לעולם בתחיית המתים לפי שמדותיו של הקדוש ברוך הוא מדה כנגד מדה : that is, whoever denies the resurrection of the dead, or any one of all the signs written in the Law, does as much as if he denied the entire Law, and has no share in the world to come, as we learn (in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin) in the (eleventh) chapter, which is called Chélek, fol. 90, col. 1, that our Rabbis teach: these are those who have no share in the world to come: he who denies the resurrection of the dead, etc.; therefore he shall never have any share in the resurrection of the dead, since the holy and blessed God is accustomed to repay like with like. Rabbi Saadías also expresses himself on this matter in his book, which is called Sepher haëmunóth vehaddeóth, fol. 36, col. 2, under the title Maamar Schevii techiáth hamméthim, as follows: מי שכוֹפֵר בתחיית המתים לא יחיה: לימות המשיח אע"פ ששאר מעשיו טובים כי שכוֹפֵר בדבר מונעין אותו ממנו: that is, whoever denies the resurrection of the dead shall not rise at the time of the Messiah, even if his other works are good; since like is repaid with like. Whoever denies a thing shall likewise have no part in it. That the resurrection must necessarily be believed is also to be seen in the Sepher Ikkarim, or book of the principal articles of Rabbi Joseph Albo, fol. 151, col. 1, at the beginning of the 35th chapter, in the fourth Máamar. In what manner, however, the Jews prove it from the five books of Moses, and from the prophets, as well as from the Hagiographa, this is to be found in the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmáth chájim, in the 15th and 16th chapters of the first Máamar, where all the proofs are brought forward. Some of these are also indicated in the previously cited passage of the book Menoráth hammāór, fol. 66, col. 1-2, in the second chapter, under the title Ner revii chélek schelischí, and in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin, fol. 90, col. 2.

Since the resurrection of the dead is not taught in the five books of Moses in clear and explicit words, I do not consider it unnecessary to indicate here what, in the opinion of Rabbi Bechai, may be the reason why this has not been done. He writes in his commentary on the aforementioned five books of Moses, fol. 225, col. 3, in the Parascha Haalinu ... concerning this matter in the following manner: ודע כי רבים יתמהו וישאלו למה לא נזכר ענין תחיית המתים בתורה בפירוש כיון שהוא עיקר גדול ופנה גדולה בתורה, וכמה פרשיות בתורה יאריך בהן הכתוב ויכפול אותן ואין בהן צורך כל כך ואם כן למה יקצר הכתוב בענין הזה וימסור עקר גדול לרמז מועט. ותשובת הדבר הוא הענין שכתבתי לך פעמים כי דרך התורה לקצר בעניינים הנעלמים וכל מה שהוא נעלם יותר יקצר בו הכתוב יותר ואין הדבור בו אלא ברמז ובקצרה, כי כן תמצא במעשה בראשית שקצר בענין האור הראשון והאריך ביום שלישי בבריאת האילנות והצמחים וכן תמצא בודד עליו השלום שאחזו הדרך הזה ודבר מן האורה בקצרה הוא שאמר עוטה אור כשלמה, וקצר גם כן במים העליונים והאריך במים התחתונים, קצר במים העליונים הוא שאמר המקרה במים עליותיו, כי עליותיו שהם העולמות שברא קרה אותן בתוך המים. והאריך במים התחתונים הוא שאמר התהום כלבוש כסיתו על הרים יעמדו מים מגעתך ינוסון וגו': 'יעלו הרים וגו': 'גבול שמת בל יעברון וגומר. המשלח מעיינים בנחלים וגו': 'זאת ועוד אחרת שכל היעודים שבתורה הנאמרים על ידי משה אינן אלא יעודים גופניים שאפשר לבני אדם להעיד עליהם בזמן קרוב כדי לקבוע בלב אמתת נבואתו של משה ומהחזק היעודים ההם הגופניים יתאמתו אצלם העניינים השכליים הנעלמים ולכך קצר בהם מתוך העלמתן זה טעם העלמת

ענין תחיית המתים. גם ענין העולם הבא שלא נזכר בתורה בפירוש גם כן מתוך העלמהו כי התורה נתנה להמון ודעת ההמון לא יכילו הענינים השכליים וכן תמסור התורה אותם אל רמז קטן ודק יעברו ההמון עליו והיחיד המשכיל יתעורר אליו: that is, Know also that many wonder and ask why the matter of the resurrection of the dead is not explicitly mentioned in the Law (of Moses), seeing that it is a great foundation and a chief article of the Law, and the Scripture is expansive in many passages of the Law and sets them down twice, which would not otherwise be so necessary. If this is the case, then why is the Scripture so brief in this matter, and teaches a great article (of faith) with only a small indication? The answer to this is that which I have written to you several times, namely, that it is the custom of the Law to be brief in hidden (and secret) matters, and the more hidden a matter is, the more briefly the Scripture treats it, and mentions it in no other way than through an indicium, or indication, and briefly. For thus you find in the work of creation that it makes mention of the first light in few words, while it is expansive on the third day concerning the creation of trees and plants of the earth. Thus you also find in David, upon whom be peace, that he followed this same manner and spoke of the light briefly when he says (Ps 104:2, to God): "You who clothe yourself with light as with a garment"; and likewise he used few words concerning the upper waters, but treated the lower waters at length. He made brief mention of the upper waters when he says (in the cited second verse): "He beams together (or joins) in the waters His high chambers (or His halls)"; for he had joined His halls, which are the expanses that He had created, together in the water. But concerning the lower waters he treated at length, and this is what he says (Ps 104:6, 7, 8, 9, 10): "You cover them (namely the earth) as with a garment. The waters stand over the mountains. At Your rebuke they flee, etc. The mountains rise up high, etc. You have set a boundary which they shall not cross, etc. You let springs well up in the valleys, etc." This (is the answer that is to be given to the aforementioned question.) There is also yet another (answer that can be given, namely) that since all the promises that are in the Law and were declared by Moses are nothing other than bodily promises, concerning which the children of men are able to bear witness in near (and short) time (that they are true), so that they may hold fast in their hearts the truth of the prophecy of Moses, and through those same bodily promises the spiritual hidden things are confirmed and established among them: and for this reason he treated them briefly on account of their hiddenness. This is the reason for the concealment (and suppression) of the matter of the resurrection of the dead. The matter of ôlam habba, that is, the world to come, namely eternal life and blessedness, of which no explicit mention is made in the Law, is likewise constituted on account of its hiddenness: for the Law was given to the multitude (of the uncomprehending people); but the understanding of the multitude of the (uncomprehending) people is such that they cannot grasp spiritual things; therefore the Law teaches these things (only) through a small and subtle indication, which the multitude of the (unlearned) people passes over (without grasping it), but a person of understanding is thereby awakened to reflect upon the hidden meaning of the Law and to comprehend its purpose. These are the words of Rabbi Bechai. Such an answer may also be employed against the Jews when they wish to have the doctrine of the Holy Trinity proven from the Old Testament in clear and explicit words.

Regarding the time when the dead are to be raised, the Jews teach that this will occur in the time of the Messiah. For this reason, Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel expresses himself in his commentary on Isaiah, fol. 35, col. 1, on the words of Isa 18:3, as follows: האופן השני מהפירושו הוא שרצה בזה הנס הפליאה העצומה אשר יעשה השם יתברך באחרית הימים בזמן קבוץ הגלויות והוא גם תחיית המתים שבאמצעותו יכירו וידעו כל יושבי תבל אמתת אלהות השם יתברך: that is, the second manner of interpreting these words is that he (namely the prophet) intended to indicate the exceedingly great miracle which the blessed GOD will perform in the last days, at the time of the gathering of the Jews who are in exilio or in misery, which will be the miracle of the resurrection of the dead, through whose mediation all inhabitants of the world will recognize the truth of the blessed God. And in his preface to Isaiah he teaches at fol. 3, col. 2, as follows: השרש היידי הוא שיהיה זמן התחייה זמן קיבוץ הגלויות או קרוב אליו: that is, the fourteenth foundation is this: that the time of the resurrection will be at the time of the gathering, or near to that same time. We thus see from this that the dead are to rise in the time of the Messiah, after the Jews will have gathered to him from all four corners of the world. So too writes Rabbi David Kimchi in his commentary on the words of Isa 66:5, "But he will appear to your joy," in the following manner: על שכר הנפשות או לפי שהם עתידים לחיות בתחיית המתים לימות המשיח: that is, (this is to be understood) of the reward of souls, or because those same persons (who tremble) will be made alive again in the time of the Messiah, at the resurrection of the dead.

The resurrection, according to Rabbi Naphtali's opinion, is to occur forty years after the gathering of the Jews, concerning which he writes in his book Emek hammelech, fol. 42, col. 4. in the 72nd chapter, under the title Schäär ólam battóbu, as follows: קיבוץ גלויות קודם לתחיית המתים ותחיית המתים הוא אחרון שבכולם דכתיב בונה ירושלים יי נדחי ישראל יכנס הרופא לשבורי לב ומחבש לעצבותם בונה ירושלים החלה. ואחריו נדחי ישראל יכנס. ותחיית המתים שהוא סוד הרופא לשבורי לב ומחבש לעצבותם הוא אחרון על הכל. וזמן קיבוץ גלויות עד תחיית המתים יהיה מ' שנה וכל צרות וכל מלחמות יתעוררו על שנתיהם של ישראל באותן המ' שנה ולכן נקראים חבלי משיח

That is: The gathering of the Jews driven into misery shall precede the resurrection of the dead, but the resurrection of the dead shall be the last of all things, as it is written (Ps 147:2-3): The LORD builds Jerusalem and brings together the scattered of Israel. He heals those who are broken of heart and binds up their sorrows. He builds Jerusalem first, and thereafter gathers the dispersed of Israel. The resurrection of the dead, however, which is the mystery of Him who heals those who are broken of heart and binds up their sorrows, is the very last of all things; and from the time of the gathering of those driven into misery until the resurrection of the dead, there shall be forty years, in which forty years all tribulations and all wars shall come upon the Israelites, and for this reason they are called Chefle Maschiach, that is, the birth pangs of the Messiah. These forty years, however, shall occur during the reign of the Messiah. Blessed is he who is delivered from them, etc. The very same is also to be found at fol. 132, col. 2. in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha disér ánpin, in the aforementioned book Emek hamelúch.

So also in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 142, col. 3. numero 38, under the title Malchiach, from the book Médrasch néelam, the following is read: ימות המשיח ותחיית המתים הם שני דברים קיבוץ גלויות יהיה ארבעים שנה קודם לתחיית המתים : that is, the days of the Messiah and the resurrection of the dead are two things. The gathering of those driven into misery will be forty years before the resurrection of the dead. And numero 36, in the same place, from the aforementioned book Médrasch néelam, it is reported: יקומו בשנה הארבעים הגופות מעפרם : that is, in the fortieth year the bodies will rise from their dust. Of this same opinion was also Abarbanel, who in his book Májene jeschuá fol. 82, col. 4, in the 12th Májan, in the 5th Tamar, writes as follows: זאת כלם שהחיה הגאולה כפי זאת : that is, from all of this (which precedes) it follows that the redemption, according to this purpose which is learned from the book through tradition, will occur in the year 5294 after the creation of the world (that is, in the year 1534 A.D.), but the resurrection of the dead in the year 5335 (that is, in the year 1575 A.D.). For when one subtracts 5294 from 5335, 41 years remain. However, Abarbanel erred greatly, for the time he set for the redemption and the resurrection of the dead has long since passed.

Rabbi Bechai, however, teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 221, col. 2, in the Parascha Nizzavim, on the words of Deut 30:15, "Behold, I have set before you today life and good," that from the time of the coming of the Messiah until the resurrection of the dead there will be two hundred and six years, with these words: יתכן לפרש ראה נתתי לפניך היום את החיים : ואת הטוב כי סמך הכתוב פרשה זו לפרשה של מעלה שהיא מדברת בהבטחת הגאולה שזמן תחיית המתים עתיד להיות סמוך לזמן הגאולה מנין ר"א והלכך סמך לפרשת הגאולה ראה נתתי לפניך היום את החיים ואת הטוב ומה אמר שלטה האלף לך שלמה ומאתים לנוטרים את פרי ומאתים ו' שנים על מאתים וגלה לך כי זמן תחיית המתים מאתים ושש אחר ביאת שלמה : that is, it is fitting that one interpret the words "Behold, I have set before you today life and good" in such a way that Scripture has placed this Parascha or section (which begins at the eleventh verse of the aforementioned thirtieth chapter and extends to the end of the same) immediately after the preceding one (which begins at the first verse and ends with the tenth, and which speaks of the promise of redemption), because the time of the resurrection of the dead will be close to the time of redemption, according to the numerical value of the word ראה, rëeh, which means "Behold" (and amounts to 206). For this reason Scripture has placed the words "Behold, I have set before you today life and good" directly adjacent to the Parascha concerning redemption. Hence Solomon also said (Song 8:12): "A thousand belong to you, Solomon, but two hundred to those who keep its fruit"; the two hundred, however, signify six years beyond two hundred. And Scripture has thereby revealed to you that the time of the resurrection of the dead will be two hundred and six years after the coming of Solomon, that is, of the Messiah, who is of the seed of Solomon.

Now let us also examine who will raise the dead, concerning which it must be known that, according to the teaching of some rabbis, God the Lord will raise them, while according to others the Messiah will raise them. Indeed, it is also held that the righteous will raise some, and that those who dwell in the land of Canaan will restore to life their relatives who died outside of it. That this resurrection is attributed to God the Lord by some can be seen in the booklet Afkath (or Afkas) rochel, at the beginning of the fourth part, where it is written as follows: כל ישראל גדולים וקטנים יש להם להאמין שעתידי הקדוש ברוך הוא : that is, All Israelites, both great and small, must believe that the holy blessed God will again make the dead alive and cause them to rise, and will raise them up from their dust, and bring their spirit into them. And in the Sepher Ikkarim, or book of the principal articles of Rabbi Joseph Albo, it is read at fol. 151, col. 2, in the 35th chapter of the fourth Maamar: לפי שזה הדבר רחוק מאד מדרך הטבע יחסו אנשי כנסת הגדולה במטבע ברכות זה הדבר אל גבורת השם יתברך ואמרו אתה גבור לעולם יי : that is, Because this matter (namely, the resurrection of the dead) is very far removed from the course of nature (and is a supernatural work), the men of the great assembly (that is, Ezra and his companions) have, in the formula of the blessings, ascribed it to the power of the blessed God, and said: Lord, You are mighty forever, You who raise the dead. So too does Rabbi David Kimchi write in his Commentario on Isa 26:19 in the following manner:

that : אמר אז בעת הישועה יחיו מתיד כי עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להחיות מתים בעת הישועה : that is, He (namely, the prophet) said, then at the time of salvation, your dead will become alive, because the holy blessed God will raise the dead at the time of salvation (or redemption).

It is also taught in the book Menoráth hammáor, fol. 66, col. 4, in the first chapter, under the aforementioned title Ner revüic bélek schelisché: אמר רבי יוחנן ג. 'מפתחות לא נמסרו ביד שליח ואלו הן מפתח של חיה ושל גשמים ושל תחיית המתים מפתח של חיה דכתיב וישמע אליהם ויפתח את רחמה. מפתח של גשמים דכתיב יפתח יי 'לך את אוצרו הטוב את השמים. ומפתח של תחיית המתים דכתיב וידעתם כי אני יי 'בפתיכם : that is, Rabbi Jochanan said there are three keys which were not given into the hand of any (messenger) whom He (God) sent, namely the key of birth, and of rain, and also of the resurrection of the dead. The key of birth, as it is written (Gen 30:22): And He (the Lord) heard her (namely Rachel) and opened her womb. The key of rain, as it is written (Deut 28:12): The Lord will open unto you His good treasure, the heavens. And the key of the resurrection of the dead, as it is written (Ezek 37:13): And you shall know that I am the Lord, when I open your graves. Concerning this, it is also read in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 113, col. 1, on the words of 1 Kgs 17:17, "And after these things the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick," as follows: בעא רחמי למיתן ליה אקלידא דתחיית המתים אמרו ליה שלש מפתחות לא נמסרו : לשליח של חיה ושל גשמים ושל תחיית המתים יאמרו שהים ביד הלמוד ואחת ביד הרב : that is, He (Elijah) prayed for mercy that the key of the resurrection of the dead might be given to him (so that he might restore the widow's son to life), whereupon it was said to him (by God) that three keys had not been given into the hand of any messenger, namely the key of birth, of rain, and of the resurrection of the dead; and it will be said that the disciple has two of them in his hand (since I have already given you the key of rain, and now also entrust to you the key of the resurrection of the dead at your request), but the third has remained in the hand of the master. Concerning these three keys, one may also consult Bereschith rábba, fol. 66, col. 3, in the 73rd Parascha.

Regarding the Messiah, that he will resurrect the dead, the following is written about this in the book Médrasch míschle, fol. 67, col. 3: שבעה דברים : שנברא קודם לבריאתו של עולם ואלו הן כסא הכבוד שנאמר נכון כסאך מאז מעולם אתה. ומלך המשיח שנאמר יהי שמו לעולם לפני שמש ינון ויתברכו בו כל גוים ואשרוהו. : that is, Seven things were created before the creation of the world, namely the Throne of Glory, as it is said (Ps 93:2): From that time your throne stands firm; You are eternal. And the Messiah, as it is said (Ps 72:17): His name shall endure forever; before the sun, jinnom schemó, his name is atoned (that is, he has been called a son), in him they shall be blessed, and all the heathen shall praise him. But why is he called Jinnon? Because he will raise up those who sleep in the earth. This can also be read in the Aruch, or the Lexicon of Rabbi Nathan, under the word Jenán, and in the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the 32nd chapter. Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon likewise writes in his commentary on the 11th chapter of the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin, as can be seen in the Amsterdam Talmud, fol. 119, col. 1 of the said tractate, concerning a portion of the Jews, in the following manner: אומרים כי ההנהלה היא שיבא המשיח ויחיה המתים וגו': that is, They say that they hold the hope that the Messiah will come and will resurrect the dead, &c. This is also to be found at the end of the same author's book Bábo Móse, paginâ 136.

Rabbi Levi ben Gershom, in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 198, col. 2, in the Parashat Balak, on the words of Deut 34:10, "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses," also lets it be heard thus: ואמנם האמת יהיה המתחייב מהפסוק הזה שלא קם נביא עוד במשה שהיה נביא בישראל לבד אבל יהיה שיהיה עם זה נביא באומות העולם גם כן והוא מלך המשיח כמו שאמרו במדרש הנה ישכיל עבדי יהיה יותר גדול ממשה ויתבאר שנפלאותיו גם כן תהיינה למעלה מנפלאות משה כי משה ישך ישראל לבד לעבודת השם יתברך בנפלאות שחידש והוא ימשוך כל האומות לעבודת השם יתברך באמרו אז אהפוך אל עמים שפה ברורה לקרוא כלם בשם יי' וזה אמנם יהיה באמצעות מופת נפלא נראה בקצות הארץ לכל האומות והוא תחיית המתים: that is, the truth which follows from this verse certainly consists in this: that no prophet has arisen like Moses, who was only a prophet in Israel; but there will be another who is to come, who will also be a prophet of the nations of the world, and who will be the King Messiah, just as it is said in the Midrash (on the words of Isa 52:13), "Behold, my servant shall deal wisely," that he will be greater than Moses; from which it is evident that his miracles too will be greater than the miracles of Moses were, for Moses brought the Israelites to the service of the blessed God only through his miracles which he performed, but the Messiah will bring all nations to the service of the blessed God, as it is said (Zeph 3:9): "Then will I turn to the peoples a pure lip, that they shall all call upon the name of the LORD." This, however, will come to pass through the mediation of the wondrous miracle, namely the resurrection of the dead, which he will cause all nations to behold unto the ends of the earth. Beyond this, the aforementioned Rabbi Levi ben Gershom writes in his cited Commentario, fol. 245, col. 2, at the end of the Parashat Ha'azinu, in the following manner: מצאנו גם כן באליהו ואלישע שהחיו המתים וידמה שזה המופת יהיה נעשה בעת שירצה השם יתעלה להפוך אל עמים שפה ברורה ויראה להם אז זה המופת הנפלא ועל ידי מלך המשיח כדי שידעו כלם כי הוא ה' ויכנעו כולם לעבודתו יתעלה: that is, we find also that Elijah and Elisha raised the dead, and I hold it to be the case that this miracle will be performed at that time when the praised God shall wish to turn to the nations a pure lip; then He will cause them to behold this wondrous miracle through the King Messiah, so that they may all know that He is the LORD, and that they may all submit themselves to the service of the praised God. Beyond this, it is also read in the book Col Bo, fol. 136, col. 1, that Korah, Dathan, and Abiram go every week to the Messiah in Paradise and ask him when he will raise the dead, as may be seen from what has been cited above from this source in Chapter 5 of this second part, at page 305.

That the righteous shall also raise some of the dead is read in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 68, col. 1. in these words: רבי שמואל בר נחמני אמר רבי יונתן עתידין צדיקים שיחיו את המתים שנאמר עוד ישבו זקנים וזקנות ברחובות ירושלים ויאיש משענתו בידו מרוב ימים וכתבי ושמח משענתו אל פני הנער that is, Rabbi Samuel bar Nachmani says that Rabbi Jonathan said: the righteous will in the future raise the dead, because it is said (Zech 8:4): There shall yet again sit old men and old women in the streets of Jerusalem, each one having a staff in his hand on account of the multitude of days. And it is written (2 Kgs 4:29) that the prophet Elisha said to Gehazi: Take my staff in your hand and go, and lay my staff upon the face of the boy. Concerning this, Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his Commentario as follows: כמדובר באליהו ואלישע שהחיו את המתים כך יחיו כל הצדיקים את המתים: that is, Just as it is reported of Elijah and Elisha that they raised the dead, so shall all the righteous raise the dead. But is this not a senseless proof that the righteous will raise the dead? Because old men and women will carry staffs in the streets of Jerusalem on account of their advanced age, they are supposed to raise the dead with their staffs, just as Elisha commanded Gehazi to revive the Shunammite's son with his staff. The reason why old people in Jerusalem will carry staffs is indicated by Scripture itself, when it states that this will happen on account of the multitude of days, that is, of advanced age, in which people are weak, in order to lean upon them, and not at all so that they should raise the dead with their sticks.

That the righteous will raise the dead with their staffs is also taught in the Jalkut chadrasch fol. 142, col. 1. numero 32. under the title Maschiach, from the Sohar, in these words: לא הגרים יעמדו בתחיית המתים אלא הצדיקים עתידים להחיות : that is, The companions of the Jews (who have adopted the Jewish faith) will not rise at the resurrection of the dead; rather, the righteous will raise them with their staffs, which they hold in their hands.

Concerning this resurrection of the dead, which is to be accomplished by the righteous, the following is also read in the book Emek hammelech fol. 42, col. 3. in the 72nd chapter, under the title Schaar olam battobu: עתידים הצדיקים להחיות את הגרים שנתגיירו מאומות העולם והם המתים בימות המשיח דכתיב באומות העולם כי הנער בן מאה שנה ימות והחוטא בן ק' שנה יקלל ומפני שלא נתגיירו קודם ביאת הגואל

לא יקרב אותם משיח ויתביישו ממעשיהם ויעשו תשובה וימותו אחר זה יהיו על ידי הצדיקים : that is, The righteous will in the future raise up those companions of the Jews who, from among the nations of the world, have adopted the Jewish faith; and these are those who will die in the time of the Messiah, as it is written (Isa 65:20) concerning the nations of the world: For when a young man is a hundred years old, he shall die, and the hundred-year-old who sins shall be cursed. But because they did not adopt the Jewish faith before the coming of the Redeemer, the Messiah will not allow them to come to him; therefore they will be ashamed on account of their deeds, and will do penance, and thereafter die. After this, the righteous will raise them up again.

Indeed, every person who dwells in the land of Israel shall henceforth have the power to raise from the dead all his relatives who have died outside the land of Canaan; concerning which it is written in the Sohar, in the Parascha Emor, fol. 37, col. 3. 4. as follows: דע כי יש מסורה קבלה בידינו שתחיית המתים של ארץ ישראל קודם לתחיית המתים של חוצה לארץ ארבעים שנה: אמנם כל מי שנפטר בחוצה לארץ ויש לו אחד ממשפחתו בארץ ישראל שהוא כל כך קרוב לו שחייב באבילותו בין איש לבין אשה יש כח ביד קרובו שבארץ ישראל להחיות כל קרוביו שבחוצה לארץ : that is, Know that we have learned through tradition, or oral teaching, that the dead who are in the land of Israel shall be raised forty years before the dead who are outside of it. But every person who dies outside the land of Canaan and has someone of his kindred in the land of Israel who is so closely related to him that he would be obliged to mourn for him (when he dies), whether that person be a man or a woman (so can he be raised by that same relative), and his relative who is in the land of Israel has the power to raise from the dead all his kinsmen who are outside the land.

Inasmuch as it has been stated here that the dead of the land of Israel will rise forty years before those who are buried in other countries, it is to be known that, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, the dead of the Promised Land are to have a precedence over the others in this regard. For this reason, Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 57, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajechi, as follows: מתי ארץ ישראל חיים תחלה אבל מתי חוצה לארץ : that is, the dead of the land of Israel will be the first to come to life, but the dead outside the land will rise in no other way than through the torment of rolling through the caverns (of the Earth). What manner of rolling this is will be shown in what follows. So too is the following read in the little book Askath (or Alkas rochel, in the fourth part): בהחלה יחיו מתי ישראל ויקדימו לכל שאר המתים שבעולם ולפיכך הנתבר בארץ ישראל יקום תחלה להחיית המתים: וכמה ענינים גדולים הורנו רבותינו ז"ל על מי שזכה להקבר בארץ ישראל ובלבד שיהיה לשם בעת שמת ויהיה דר בארץ. וחוזך מכל הענינים הגדולים והרמים שזכה הדר בארץ ישראל והנקבר בארץ ישראל לתועלת גדולה והוא שתקדים תחייתו

לכל שאר המתים שבחוצה לארץ ועדין הדברים במחלוקת בין החכמים כמה זמן יהיה בין תחייה לתחייה והדברים שתומים דבריהם נכונים למוצאי דעת ואין ראוי להשיב על דבריהם: that is, first the dead of Israel will come to life, and will rise before all the other dead who are in the world; therefore, he who is buried in the land of Israel will be the first to rise at the resurrection of the dead. How many great things have our Rabbis, of blessed memory, taught us concerning him who is so worthy as to be buried in the land of Israel, provided only that he is there at the time of his death and dwells in the land. But besides all those great and excellent things of which he who dwells in the land of Israel and is buried therein becomes worthy, to his great benefit, there is also this: that he will rise before all the other dead who are outside the land. The sages have, however, until now remained in dispute as to how much time will pass from one resurrection to the other, and this matter is concealed; yet their words are true to those who attain knowledge, and it is not fitting to respond to their pronouncements or to bring anything forward against them. These are the words from the book Afkâth rôchel.

In the Jalkut chadasch, at fol. 142, col. 3, numero 41, under the title Maschiach, it is taught from the book Medrasch néeelam how many years the righteous will rise before the others, and the words read as follows: הצדיקים יקדימו בתחית המתים לשאר העולם וכמה יקדימו רבי יהודה בשם רבי אומר י' שנה רבי יקדימו בתחית המתים לשאר העולם וכמה יקדימו רבי יצחק אומר ר"ד שנה : that is, the righteous will precede the rest of mankind in the resurrection. How much time will they then rise before them? Rabbi Jebuda says in the name of the Rabbi: ten years. Rabbi Isaac says: one hundred and fourteen years.

It is also disputed among the rabbis as to when Adam and the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob will rise again together with their wives, and the following is written concerning this in the aforementioned book Afkâth rôchel, in the fourth part: רבי יהושע בן מנסיא אומר שהמתים שעתידי הקדוש ברוך הוא להחיות בתחלה ישיגי חביון הם שנגמרו יחיו מתידי אלו ישיגי חביון אדם הראשון אברהם יצחק ויעקב ואחר כך חזר הקדוש ברוך הוא ומטהר ארץ ישראל מנבלות וטומאות הגוים ומנער אותם מתוכה כאדם המנער שליתו מלכלוכו שנגמרו לאחוז בכנפות הארץ וינערו רשעים ממנה ואז יקים לזרע קדש הנקברים בתוכה שלא קברו מיתתם על סיבת המלואה המשחית כי : 'אין שלטנו בארץ החיים ולעולם אין רוח הטומאה שורה בארץ ישראל וגו' : that is, Rabbi Joshua, son of Menasja, says that those who sleep in Hebron (that is, those who are buried in the double cave at Hebron, which is described in Gen 23:19-20) will be the first to be raised by the holy and blessed God, as it is said (Isa 26:19): "Your dead shall live," by which are to be understood those who sleep in Hebron, namely Adam, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, together with their wives. Thereafter the holy and blessed God cleanses the land of Israel from the carcasses and filth of the heathens, and shakes them out of it, as a man shakes the dirt from his cloak, as it is said (Job 38:13): "That the corners of the earth might be seized, and the wicked shaken out of it." Then He will raise up the holy seed (namely the Jews) who are buried therein and who did not die through the destroying angel (the Sammael), because he has no power in the land of the living and an unclean spirit never dwells in the land of Israel, etc.

Shortly after this, it is reported that first all the dead in the land of Israel will rise, and the following passage comes after it: ואחר כך יקיצו ישני חברון ואם תאמר מפני מה אינם נקדמים למתי ארץ ישראל שהרי שם אדם הראשון ואברהם ויזחק ויעקב אלא כדי שיקיצו ויעוררו על שמחה בראותם בניהם שקמו מקבריהם והארץ מלאה מכמה צדיקים וחסידים הנקברים בארץ ועל כן ירננו כענין שעשה הק"ב באדם הראשון שלא הביא אותו לעולם עד שהיה העולם מלא. ואמרו רבותינו ז"ל בת קול מהפוצצת במערה ואומרת הקיצו ורננו שוכני עפר לבוא אל ארץ מלאה וביניהם יראו וישמחו וירננו על רוב שלום ויהיה העולם בשמחה. ואמר רבי אלעזר אפילו המתים שבחוצה לארץ יקומו תחלה ואחר כך יקיצו ישני חברון לראות העולם כולו בשמחה ברוב אונים ואמיץ כח איש לא נעדר That is: Thereafter, those who sleep in Hebron will awaken. But if you were to ask why they do not rise before the dead who are in the land of Israel, seeing that the first man Adam, as well as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, are there (I answer that this happens) so that they may rise with joy when they see their children, who will have been raised from their graves, and so that the earth may be full of many righteous and pious persons who were buried in it; and for this reason they will sing (and be joyful), just as the holy and blessed GOD did with the first man, whom He did not allow to come into the world until the world was full (of all manner of creatures). Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have also said that a voice from Heaven will spread through the cave (in which they are buried) and will say: awake and sing, you who dwell in the dust, that you may come into a full land, and your children will see you and rejoice and sing on account of the great peace, and the world will be joyful. But Rabbi Eliezer has said that even the dead who are outside the land of Israel will rise first, and only thereafter shall those who sleep in Hebron awaken, so that they may see the entire world in joy and great power, with no person lacking.

Regarding the people who are to rise from the dead, the rabbis are by no means in agreement on this matter. Some teach that only the Israelites, and no other peoples, are to be raised from the dead. Others are of the opinion that the pious among the nations of the world shall also partake of the resurrection; but others hold that even the wicked among the nations of the world will rise again.

That only the Israelites are to expect the resurrection is taught by Rabbi Bechai in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 21, col. 1, in the Parascha Nôach, when he says: אין שום אומה זוכה לתחיית המתים כי אם אנחנו בני שם

That is: There is no people that partakes of the resurrection of the dead, except for us (Jews,) who are the children of Shem. And this is also to be found at fol. 17, col. 4, in the said Parascha. Furthermore, the same author writes in his aforementioned commentary, fol. 229, col. 2, in the Parascha Vesoth habberachá, on this matter in the following manner: זכתי להודיע כי ארבעה דברים הם שלא זכתי בהן שום אומה ולשון אלא ישראל ואלו הן הנבואה והתורה וארץ ישראל ותחיית המתים ונראה לי להוכיחם ולהבואם כלם מדברי משה שגלה על ארבעתם ובכל פסוק ופסוק תמצא מבואר שיזכיר שם יעקב להורות כי כלן לא נתנו אלא לזרע יעקב בלבד. הנבואה הוא שכתוב נביא מקרבך מאחיך כמוני אמר כמיני שאני מזרע יעקב ולמדנו בזה שאין הנבואה מצויה אלא בזרעו של יעקב. כי מפני שהזכיר מאחיך ובני עשו נקראים אחים שנאמר כה אמר אחיך ישראל לך הוצרך להוסיף כמוני כדי לפסול שאר האחים שהם עשו וישמעאל ולהוציאם מן הכלל והא למדת שאין נבואה אלא בישראל. ומה שמצינו בלעם שהיה נביא באומות מקרה הוא היה לו ולא עלה לאותה השגה אלא לכבודן של ישראל ולפי שעה ודרך מקרה וכן הזכיר בלשון מקרה ויקר אלהים אל בלעם. ויקרה 'אל בלעם או מטעם שפירשו ז"ל כדי שלא יהא פתחון פה לאומות העולם ליום הדין לומר לישראל נביאים ולנו אין נביאים אילו היו לנו נביאים היינו חוזרין למוטב. התורה הוא שכתוב תורה צוה לנו משה והזכיר מיד קהלת יעקב כי לא נתנה התורה אלא לקהלת יעקב ואין מי שיזכה בה כי אם יעקב לבדו וכל המתקהל עמו. הארץ הוא שהזכיר כאן עין יעקב אל ארץ שלא נתנה הארץ למורשה אלא לזרע יעקב ולא נתיישבה מעולם אחר שנחברבה ולא תתיישב לעם אחר. תחיית המתים הוא שאמר א: שמיז ירעפו טל מלת שמיז חזרת לעין יעקב ולמעלת זרעו של יעקב ייחס לו השמים שהוא ערבות שעליו. הזכיר למעלה רוכב שמים. ואמר ירעפו טל כי הטל שעתיד להחיות בו את המתים הוא בערבות ושאר האומות אינן זוכין לתחיית המתים כי אם ישראל זרע יעקב והוא שכתוב ורבים מישיני אדמת עפר יקיצו. וידוע כי מלת רבים ענינה על ישראל כענין שכתוב ורבים מעמי הארץ מתיהדים כן דרשו רבותינו ז"ל בספרי. אמר רבי סימאי יקרא אל השמים מעל זו נשמה. ואל הארץ זה הגוף. לדין עמו למי שהוא מדיין לעמו. מכאן לתחיית המתים לישראל ע"כ. וכן מצינו ישעיה עליו השלום שהתנבא על אומות העולם ואמר מתים בל יחיו רפאים בל יקומו וחזר והתנבא על ישראל ואמר יחיו מתים בבלתי יקומו הקיצו ורגנו שוכני עפר כי טל אורות

That is: It is known that there are four things of which no people or tongue is worthy, except the Israelites, and these are: prophecy, the Law, the land of Israel, and the resurrection of the dead. I wish, however, to demonstrate and explain all of them from the words of Moses, who revealed all four of them, and in each and every verse you will find it clearly stated that he makes mention of the name of Jacob, in order to teach that they were given to none other than the seed of Jacob alone. Concerning prophecy, it is written (Deut 18:15): "A prophet like me shall the Lord your God raise up for you from among you, from among your brethren." He (namely Moses) said: "like me," because I am of the seed of Jacob, and thereby taught us that prophecy is found nowhere except among the seed of Jacob. For since he mentioned "from among your brethren," and the children of Esau are called brethren, as it is said (Num 20:14): "Thus says your brother Israel," he was therefore compelled to add "like me," in order to exclude the remaining brethren, namely Esau and Ishmael, and to shut them out from the general category. See, you have thus learned that prophecy exists only in Israel. That we find, however, that Balaam was a prophet among the nations, this happened to him only by chance, and he attained to that level of comprehension for no other reason than for the honor of the Israelites, and for a certain time, and derech mikreh, that is, by chance or by an encounter. Thus (the Scripture, Num 23:4) uses the word mikreh, or chance: וִיקָר וגו'. And God encountered Balaam. (And v. 16 of the same:) וִיקָר וגו'. And the Lord encountered Balaam. Or it occurred for the reason that our rabbis, of blessed memory, have explained it: so that the nations of the world might have no excuse on the day of judgment, and might not say: the Israelites had prophets, but we had no prophets; if we had had prophets, we would have turned to the better. Concerning the Law, it is written (Deut 33:4): "Moses commanded us the Law," and immediately thereafter it is mentioned: "(an inheritance of) the congregation of Jacob." For the Law was given to none other than the congregation of Jacob, and no one is worthy of it except Jacob alone and whoever joins himself to his congregation. Concerning the land, it is mentioned here (v. 28 of the cited chapter 33) (when it is said:) "The eye of Jacob shall be directed toward the land," for the land (of Israel) was given as an inheritance to none other than the seed of Jacob, and it has never been inhabited since it was destroyed, nor will it be inhabited by any other people. Concerning the resurrection of the dead, it is said (in the aforementioned verse 28): "Moreover his heaven shall drip with dew," and the words "his heaven" refer to the eye of Jacob, and on account of the excellence of the seed of Jacob, the heaven is attributed to him, which is called Aravóth (or Arovós), of which mention is made above (v. 26 of the said chapter 33) (when it is said:) "He who rides upon the heaven." And it is stated that "(his heaven) shall drip with dew," because the dew with which God will raise the dead is in the heaven called Aravóth. The remaining nations, however, are not worthy of the resurrection, except only the Israelites, the seed of Jacob, and this is what is written (Dan 12:2): "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." Now it is known that the word "many" is understood to refer to the Israelites, just as it is written (Esth 8:17): "And many of the peoples of the land became Jews." Thus our rabbis, of blessed memory, have expounded (the words of Ps 50:4) "He calls to the heavens above and to the earth, that He may judge His people," in the book Siphre. Rabbi Simai said: (the words) "He calls to the heavens above" signify the soul. (And the words that follow:) "and to the earth" signify the body. (But the subsequent words:) "that He may judge His people" signify Him who judges His people. From this it is proved that the dead of the Israelites will rise again. Thus far (are the words from the book Siphre.) So we also find that Isaiah prophesied concerning the nations of the world and said (Isa 26:14): "The dead shall not live; the departed shall not rise." Thereafter he prophesied again (v. 19) concerning Israel and said: "Your dead shall live, and my body shall rise. Awake and be joyful, you who lie in the earth, for your dew is a dew of green herbs," whereby he makes clear that no dead shall rise except the Israelites.

The very same thing is also to be found shortly thereafter in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 8, col. 1. under the title Oth Aleph, where the following is likewise taught: לעתיד לבוא יבטל ההספר בביטול יצר הרע ותמחה הדמעה מעל כל פנים ויזכר כל ישראל לתחיית המתים שהיא המעלה שהראה הקדוש ברוך הוא למשה ממה שרשו ז"ל עד היכ האחרון אל תקרי הים אלא היום האחרון זה תחיית המתים שהיא המעלה המיוחדת וזהמשותרת לישראל בלבד ולא לעם אחר that is, In the time to come, the mourning will come to an end when the evil inclination ceases, and the tears will be wiped from all faces, and all Israelites will be made worthy of the resurrection of the dead, which is that excellence which the holy blessed God showed to Moses, in that our rabbis, of blessed memory, expound the words (Deut 34:2) עד הים האחרון Ad hajám baácharon, that is, unto the uttermost sea, as follows: read not hajám, but rather האחרון היום ha-jóm baácharon, that is, unto the last day, in which the resurrection of the dead takes place, which is that excellence which belongs to the Israelites alone and is appointed for them, and comes to no other people. In the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 59, col. 2., in the Commentario on the prayer which begins עשה פלא לחיים וגו' Aséh péle lechájim &c., one reads: מהים אלה אומות העולם שישארו בקבר שנאמר רפאים כל יקומו that is, By the dead are understood the peoples of the world, who remain in their graves (and will not be raised), as it is said (Isa 26:14): The deceased will not rise. So too it is written in the Jalkut chadash fol. 60, col. 1. numero 10. under the title Geschamim as follows: תחיית המתים לישראל וגשמים בין לישראל בין לאומות that is, The resurrection of the dead belongs to the Israelites, but rain belongs both to the Israelites and to the peoples.

Furthermore, in the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 72, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajéschef, from the Medrasch Ruth, on the words of Ruth 4:7, "This was the testimony in Israel," the following is taught: בישראל ולא בשאר האומות שלא נתן להם מצוה זו ועליהם כתיב: יאבדו מארעא ומתחות שמיא אלה שלא נתן להם תקומה לא בעולם הזה ולא בעולם הבא דכתיב מתים כל יחיו וגו' That is: In Israel (it was a testimony), but not among the remaining nations, for this commandment (namely, the removing of the shoe and giving it to another when one did not wish to inherit a property, as can be seen in the cited passage Ruth 4:7) was not given to them by God. And of those same nations it is written (Jer 10:11): They must be destroyed from the earth and from under heaven; for He gave them no resurrection, neither in this world nor in the world to come, as it is written (Isa 26:14): The dead shall not live again, etc. On this matter, the aforementioned Rabbi Menáchem's book Taáme mizvóth, fol. 17, col. 2, and the book Jesod Schirim, fol. 26, col. 2, may also be consulted. Likewise, in the book Zijóni, in the Parascha Kórach, one reads: גוף מן הגוי עובד עבודה זרה בחייו טמא ובמותו טהור למה בשביל שהתאבד נשמתו That is: The body of an idolatrous Goi (Christian or pagan) who practices idolatry is unclean during his lifetime and clean after his death. Why? Because his soul perishes, and the body returns to dust as it was before. Now, since the soul is entirely annihilated, it will no longer be reunited with the body.

That others, by contrast, hold the opinion that the righteous among the nations of the world will also rise from the dead is evident from the book Avodáth hakkódesch, in which at fol. 54, col. 4, at the end, and fol. 55, col. 1, in the 42nd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, the following is written: מה שאמרו חסידי אומות העולם יש להם חלק לעולם הבא ואם הוא כמו שאמרנו שהוא העולם הבא שאחר התחייה איך יזכו לו חסידי אומות העולם וכבר אמרו שתחיית המתים אינה אלא 'לצדיקים גמורים. יש לומר כי חסידי אומות העולם הם אשר קיימו כל תורת בני נח שהן ו מצוות שנצטוו ואחר שקיימו תורתם הנה קנו המדרגה ההיא כמו שהצדיקים הגמורים הם אשר קיימו כל תורת משה ע"ה אלה בתורתם הואיל וקיימוהו ככו שנצטוו כלם יקנו המדרגה בעולם הבא: כפי תורתם. ואם כן למה לא יאמינו שיזכו אל תחיית המתים הואיל וקיימו תורתם That is to say: Our rabbis say that the righteous among the nations of the world have a share in the life to come; but if it is as we have said, that the life to come is that which follows the resurrection, how then can the righteous among the nations of the world partake of it, given that our rabbis say that only those who are perfectly righteous will rise from the dead? To this it must be answered that those who are the righteous among the nations of the world are those who have observed the entire law of the children of Noah, namely the seven commandments that were enjoined upon them. Since they have kept their law, they attain that same degree, just as those who are perfectly righteous, who have observed the entire law of Moses (upon whom be peace), have attained it. These attain the degree according to their law, and those according to their law, in that they have kept it as it was commanded to them. They all receive the degree in the life to come, according to their law. If this is so, then why should we not believe that they will partake of the resurrection of the dead, seeing that they have kept their law?

That according to another opinion not only the righteous but also the godless nations of the world will rise again is likewise to be seen in the book Afkáth róchel, in the fourth part, under the title Sod techiáth hammethím, where the following is read: כל הגוים עתידים לקום ולעמוד בדין והק"ב ינקום נקמת עמו מהם לעולמים על כל הרעות אשר עשו לנו ודוקא המתים שמחו בחוצה לארץ אבל אותם שמתו

That is: All Gójim (or heathens) will rise again and stand before the judgment, and the holy blessed God will avenge Himself upon them in eternity on behalf of His people, on account of all the evil they have done to us. This, however, concerns only those Gójim who died outside the (promised) land, for those who died in the land of Israel do not rise again, as it is said (Isa 26:14): The deceased will not rise again. So also in the 34th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer the following is read on this matter: מתים כל יחיו אלו הגוים שהן כנבלת הבהמה שיקומו ליום הדין אבל לא יחיו that is, (the words of Isa 26:14) "The dead will not live" signify the Gójim, who are like the carcass of cattle, who will rise at the day of judgment but will not live (that is, remain alive). At the end of the aforementioned 34th chapter, the following is further written on this matter: יחיו מתיך אלו ישראל שמתו בטוהים: נבלתי יקומון אלו עכ"ם שהן כנבלת הבהמה שיקומו ליום הדין אבל לא יחיו that is, (the words of Isa 26:19) "Your dead will live" signify the Israelites, who, trusting in His (namely God's) name, will rise again. (And the following words) "My carcasses or corpses will rise" signify the idolaters, who are like the carcass of cattle and will rise at the day of judgment but will not live.

Isaac Abarbanel also teaches in his preface to his commentary on Isaiah, fol. 3, col. 1, that a portion of all the peoples of the world will rise again, in these words: הנה הנביא ישעיה ביאר שגם מהאומות יקומו בתחיית המתים בכל פלגי הארץ ומהווה רוצה לזכר שיקומו בכל מחוז אנשים מיוחדים לפרסם אמונת השם ואמתות כי הם יהיו עדים נאמנים באמתת אלהות השם ית' וזה ענין אמרו בנבואה ה"א הוא ארץ צלצל כנפים That is: Behold, the prophet Isaiah has made clear that from among the nations as well, people will rise at the resurrection of the dead in all the provinces of the earth and its borders; that is, that in every district certain persons will rise to proclaim the faith in God and the truth thereof, for they will be faithful witnesses to the divinity of the blessed God; and of this he speaks (namely the prophet Isaiah) in the eleventh prophecy, when he says (Isa 18:1): Woe to the land that is shadowed with wings, as will be explained there. Immediately following this, the text continues: 'ובנבואה הכ' אמר על זה ועשה ה' צבאות לכל העמים משתה שמנים משתה שמרים. וכבר דרשו חז"ל בפרקי ר' אליעזר על זה 'יחיו מתיך נבלתי יקומון שאמרו שכל המתים עולים לתחיית המתים חוץ מדור המבול שנפאים כל יקומו. מתים כל יחיו אלו הגוים-שהם כנבלת בהמה יקומו אבל לא יחיו. ובנבואה הכ"ז אמר בדברו על התחייה כמו שיתבאר שם כל הנקרא בשמי ולכבודי בראתי וגו' כל הגוים נקבצו יחדיו ויאספו לאומים ולפי שהקמים בתחייה יפרסמו אמתת אמונת ה' ית' ויגלו ענשם בגיהנם לכן אמר יתנו עדיה ויצדקו וישמעו ויאמרו אמת אתם עדי נאם ה' ועבדי אשר בחרתי That is: And in the twentieth prophecy he speaks of this (Isa 25:6): And the Lord of hosts will prepare for all peoples a feast of rich food, a feast of well-aged wine. So our sages, of blessed memory, have expounded the words (Isa 26:19): Your dead shall live, my corpses shall rise, in the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, and have said that all the dead will rise at the resurrection of the dead, with the exception of the generation of the Flood, as it is said (Isa 26:14): The departed shall not rise, the dead shall not live. These are the Gójim (or heathens), who are like the carcass of cattle; they will rise, but will not remain among the living. And in the twenty-seventh prophecy he says, when speaking of the resurrection, as will be explained there (Isa 43:7): All who are called by my name, and whom I have created for my glory, etc. (And in v. 9 he continues:) All the heathens will come together, and the peoples will assemble. And because those who rise at the resurrection will proclaim the truth of faith in the blessed God and will reveal their punishment in hell, he therefore says (in the cited v. 9 and v. 10): Let them bring forth their witnesses, and they shall be held to be truthful; then it will be heard, and men will say: it is true. But you are my witnesses, says the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen. The words "you are my witnesses" he speaks of the peoples of the world, and the words "and my servant whom I have chosen" of the Israelites.

Further, some rabbis teach that not all Israelites or Jews, but only the righteous among them, and not the godless, have the resurrection to hope for. On the other hand, however, others hold that the godless Israelites too shall be raised, and they reject the contrary opinion. That according to some opinions only the righteous shall rise, I demonstrate from the following: Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, in his Commentario on the Talmudic Tractate Sanhedrin, as may be seen in the Amsterdam Talmud, fol. 120, col. 1 of that Tractate, writes as follows: תחיית המתים הוא יסוד מיסודי משה רבינו ע"ה ואין דת ולא דבקות בדת יהודית למי שלא יאמין זה אבל הוא לצדיקים וכן הוא לשון בראשית רבה גבורת גשמים לצדיקים ותחיית המתים לצדיקים בלבד. ואיך יחיו הרשעים והם מתים אפילו בחייהם. וכן : אמרו רשעים אפילו בחייהם קרואים מתים צדיקים אפילו במיתתן קרואים חיים : that is, the resurrection of the dead is a foundation (or chief article) of the foundations of Moses our teacher, upon whom be peace; and he who does not believe this has no religion, nor does he belong to the Jewish religion: but this resurrection pertains only to the righteous. And thus it is said in Bereschith rabba: the power of rain belongs to the righteous, and the resurrection of the dead is due only to the righteous. How indeed should the godless be made alive again, who are already dead even during their lifetimes? Thus also (our rabbis) have said: the godless are called dead even while they yet live; but the righteous are called living even in their death.

Rabbi Isaac Abubabb also expresses himself in his book Menorath hammaor, fol. 65, col. 4, in the first chapter, under the title Ner revij, chelek schelisch, as follows: אמר רבי אבהו גדול יום הגשמים יותר מיום תחיית המתים דאלו תחיית המתים

לצדיקים ולא לרשעים וגשמים לצדיקים ולרשעים. לפי שתחיית המתים הוא דבר הבא לגוף האדם כפי שלמותו ואין זוכים בו לעתיד לבוא אלא הצדיקים אבל לרשעים הוא להם לגריעון ופחיתות ולדאבון כדכתיב ורבים מישני כדמת עפר יקיצו אלה לחיי עולם ואלה לחרפות That is: Rabbi Abbu has said (as may be seen in the Talmudic tractate Taanith, fol. 7, col. 1) that the day of rain is greater (or more heartfelt) than the day of the resurrection of the dead; for the resurrection of the dead belongs to the righteous, and not to the wicked; but rain is for the righteous and the wicked alike, since the resurrection of the dead is a matter that pertains to the body of man according to his perfection, and only the righteous will partake of it in the time to come; but for the wicked it is a diminishment and a reduction, and a sorrow, as it is written (Dan 12:2): "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Rabbi Saadias reports on this matter in his book, which he calls Sepher haëmunoth vehanddeoth, fol. 36, col. 2, under the title Maamar schevij, techiath hammethim, the following as well: אם ישאל שואל מי ומי יחיו מן האומה בעת הישועה אשיב ואומר כל צדיק ובעל תשובה כי מי שימות מבלי תשובה הוא האומה בעת הישועה אשיב ואומר כל צדיק ובעל תשובה כי מי שימות מבלי תשובה הוא That is: If someone should ask which are those who will rise from the people of Israel at the time of redemption, I give in answer, and say, that every righteous person, and one who has done penance, will rise; for whoever dies without penance is one of those who will be punished, &c. Rabbi David Kimchi likewise agrees with this, when he writes in his commentary on the words of Isa 26:19, "Your dead shall live," as follows: אמרו רבותינו ז"ל כי תחיית המתים לצדיקים ולא לרשעים That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the resurrection of the dead belongs to the righteous and not to the wicked. Rabbi Joseph Albo teaches on this matter in his Sepher Ikkarim, fol. 28, col. 2, in the 23rd chapter of the first Maamar, likewise as follows, and says: אמרו רבותינו יש מרבותינו שאומרים שאינה אלא לצדיקים גמורים That is: As for this resurrection, there are some among our rabbis who say that it belongs only to those who are perfectly righteous. And in fol. 147, col. 1, in the 31st chapter of the fourth Maamar, he writes: תחיית המתים לצדיקים גמורים בלבד That is: The resurrection of the dead belongs solely to the perfectly righteous.

That the wicked will not rise again is shown by Rabbi Bechai in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 33, col. 4, in the Parascha Chaje Sara, with these words: הרשעים אין להם לא תורה ולא חכמה ואינן יודעין ומכירין מעשיו של הק"ב ונפלאותיו והם מתים כמיתת הבהמות ותחיות ונשמתו אובדת כאבדן גופם ומזה אמר שלמה ע"ה ונר רשעים ידעך. כי המשיל נפש הרשע לנר. ובאר שהיא תלויה בגופו That is: the wicked have neither law nor wisdom; they neither know nor recognize the works of the holy blessed God, nor His wonders, and they die like cattle and beasts; their soul perishes just as their body perishes. Concerning this, Solomon also, upon whom be peace (Prov 13:9), said: the light of the wicked shall be extinguished; for he compared the soul of a wicked person to a light, and thereby made plain that it is attached to the body, just as the flame of a light is attached to the oil, and is extinguished when the oil runs out. The same is taught by Rabbi David Kimchi in his commentary on the Psalms, on the words of Ps 1:5, "Therefore the wicked shall not stand in judgment," etc., where he writes: שהולכים הרשעים בדרך רע בעולם הזה לא יקומו במשפט ר"ל ביום הדין והוא יום המיתה לא תהיה להם תקומה וחטאים גם כן והוא הדין הלצים בעדת הצדיקים שבמותם לא תהיה להם תקומה והרשעים That is: since the wicked walk in the evil way in this world, they shall not stand in judgment, that is, on the day of judgment, namely on the day of death. They shall not rise again; nor shall the sinners. And it is likewise with the mockers in the congregation of the righteous, who after their death shall not rise again, for the soul of the wicked perishes together with their body on the day of death.

That others, by contrast, reject this opinion and teach that even the wicked Israelites or Jews will rise again, can be seen in Abarbanel's aforementioned preface to his Commentarium on the Prophet Isaiah, where he writes at fol. 3, col. 1 as follows: השרש הששי הוא בחמר התחייה רוצה לומר מי ומי הקמים בתחייה האם יהיו כל בני אדם שנבראו מששת ימי בראשית עד אותו זמן בתחייה וזה בלתי אפשר כי לא תכיל אותם הארץ ואם לא יקומו כלם אבל קצתם מי יהן ואדע מי ומי ההולכים בתחייה ההיא ואם יהיה זה במקרה ובהזדמן והנה הגאון והרב הגדול המימוני והרמב"ן וכן הרב רבי חסדאי ותלמידיו כלם נמנו וגמרו שלא יקונו בתחייה כי אם הצדיקים בלבד מאומתנו ויסייעו בזה ממה שאמרו ז"ל ג'נ'ר 'גבורות גשמים לצדיקים ולרשעים אבל תחיית המתים לצדיקים בלבד והוא דעת זר לפי שהכתוב אמר ורבים מישני אדמת עפר יקיצו אלה לחיי עולם ואלה לחרפות לדראון עולם ואם בתחייה לא יהיו כי אם הצדיקים אין ספק שמספר יהיו ונער יכתבם ואיך יאמר עליהם ורבים כל שכן שהכתוב צווח אלה לחיי עולם ואלה לחרפות לדראון עולם וישעיהו אמר ויצאו וראו בפגרי האנשים הפושעים כי הוא המורה שגם מהרשעים יקומו לקבל עונש. ואתה תראה האמונה הזאת נשרשת בכל האומות כאילו טבע האמת מקובל בפיהם ואמנם מש"חזל גבורות גשמים לצדיקים ולרשעים תחיית המתים לצדיקים בלבד לא כווננו בזה לשלול התחייה מהבלתי צדיקים כי אם להודיע ענין תועלת והשכר הנקנה בה שלא תהיה כגבורה הגשמים שיהנו מהם כצדיק כרשע וכן יגדלו ויציצו התבואות לרשע בבוא הגשמים כמו לצדיק לא תהיה כן התחייה כי תועלתה ושכרה תהיה לצדיקים לא לרשעים כי הנה הצדיקים יזכו ויקבלו שכר והרשעים יפרסמו עונשם ותגלה רעתם בקהל. וגם נוכל לומר שאותו המאמר שהביאו מכ"ר שהוא לרבי אבהו וכא במסכת תענית בפרק קמא לא קבלוהו כל החכמים שהרי אמרו שם עליו ופליגא דרב יוסף דאמר רב יוסף מתוך ששקולה כתחיית המתים לפיכך קבעוה בתחיית המתים ואתה תראה שסתם התלמוד תופש עיקר דברי רב יוסף That is: The sixth root treats of the matter of the resurrection, that is, who those persons are who will rise again, whether all human beings who have been created from the six days of creation up to the time of the resurrection of the dead will rise again. This, however, is impossible, for the earth could not contain them (and would be too small for that purpose). But if not all of them, but only a portion of them, will rise again, I would very much like to know who those persons are who will come forth at that resurrection, and whether this will happen by chance and accidentally. Behold, the great Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, and Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman, as well as Rabbi Chasdai and their disciples, have all maintained and taught that at the resurrection no one other than the righteous of our (Jewish) people will rise again, and they have been confirmed in this by what our Rabbis, of blessed memory, said in Bereschith rabba, that the powers (that is, the benefits) of rain are apportioned to the righteous and to the wicked alike, but that the resurrection of the dead belongs to the righteous alone. This, however, is a strange opinion; for Scripture says (Dan 12:2): "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." But if only the righteous were to partake of the resurrection, there is no doubt that they would be so few in number that a boy could write them down. How then could Scripture say of them, "and many (shall awake)"? Still less could Scripture cry out: "Some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Likewise Isaiah says (Isa 66:24): "And they shall go forth and look upon the corpses of the men who have transgressed against me," by which he teaches that the wicked also will rise again to receive their punishment. You also see that this belief is rooted among all peoples, as though the nature of this truth were received by tradition in their mouths. But when our Sages, of blessed memory, said that the powers of rain are apportioned to the righteous and the wicked alike, while the resurrection of the dead belongs to the righteous alone, their intention therein was not to deny the resurrection to the unrighteous, but rather to make known the nature of the benefit and the reward that is obtained through it, namely, that it will not be like the power of rain, which both the righteous and the wicked enjoy. For when the rains come, the fruits grow and flourish for the wicked just as for the righteous. With the resurrection, however, it is not so constituted; for its benefit and reward will be apportioned to the righteous and not to the wicked: for behold, the righteous will be found worthy to receive their reward, while the wicked will have their punishment made manifest, and their misfortune will be disclosed before the assembly. We may also say that those words which they adduce from Bereschith rabba as proof were spoken by Rabbi Abhu, which also appear in the tractate Taanith, in the first chapter (fol. 7, col. 1), and that not all the Sages accepted them; for behold, it is said there in opposition that Rabbi Joseph disputed and contended against them: for Rabbi Joseph said that, since the power of rain is equal to the resurrection of the dead (inasmuch as through rain that which has withered and is, as it were, dead is revived again), for this reason it was placed alongside the resurrection of the dead. So you also see that the Talmud straightforwardly takes the words of Rabbi Joseph as its foundation, just as I have also explained in the book Zédek olamim. On this point, one may also consult the aforementioned Abarbanel's book Májene jeschúa, fol. 77, col. 2-3, in the 11th Majan, in the 9th Támar, where, in addition to the above, he further adds: ועוד שאם לא יקומו רק הצדיקים איך יהיו שלשה כיתות ליום הדין של צדיקים גמורים ושל רשעים גמורים ושל בינוניים כדברי הברייטא : That is: Moreover, if only the righteous are to rise, how then can there be three groups on the day of judgment, namely that of the wholly righteous, and that of the wholly wicked, and that of the middling, as the Barájetha reports. By which he means to say that if the wicked are to appear before the judgment, they must also rise again.

Although Rabbi Bechai, as mentioned just before, teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 33, col. 4, that the wicked die like cattle and their souls perish together with their bodies, he nevertheless expresses himself in the contrary sense in the aforementioned commentary, fol. 229, col. 3, in the Paráscha Vesóth habberachá, writing as follows: הודע לך כי כל ישראל יחיו בין רשעים בין צדיקים לקבל שכר ורשעים לקבל עונש כי ביון שקיימו המצוות או עברו : that is, Know that all Israelites, both the wicked and the righteous, will rise again. The righteous, so that they may receive their reward; the wicked, however, so that they may receive their punishment: for since they have kept or transgressed the commandments with body and soul, they will likewise deserve to receive the reward or punishment with body and soul.

Regarding the aforementioned words of Abarbanel, that it would be impossible for all people to rise from the dead, since the world could not contain them and would be too narrow for that purpose: Rabbi Saadiah does not agree with him on this point, for he has worked out the matter in his Sepher haëmunóth vehaddeóth, fol. 36, col. 2, 3, under the title Maámar schevii, techiáth hammethím, calculating how much space each person who will be resurrected will have, and he teaches that each one shall have a space of two hundred and eighty-eight cubits. This, however, is a foolish calculation, just as Abarbanel's opinion is foolish, that the earth will not be able to contain all people.

On the above, it is read in the Talmudic tractate Kethuvóth (or Kessívos) fol. 111, col. 2, that, according to the opinion of Rabbi Eliezer and others, the idiots, or common and unlearned people, who have not studied the law, will not rise again; and the words there read as follows: אמר רבי אלעזר עמי הארצות

אינן חיים שנאמר מתיים בל יחיו וגו' 'תניא נמי הכי מתיים בל יחיו לכל תלמוד לומר רפאים בל יקומו במרפה עצמו מדברי התורה הכתוב מדבר וגו' 'כל המשתמש באור תורה אור תורה that is, Rabbi Eliezer has said: the common unlearned people will not come back to life, because it is said (Isa 26:14): "The dead will not live again," etc. The tradition (in the Barájetha) reads likewise: "The dead will not live again." Perhaps this is to be understood of all (the dead)? No, for it further stands written (in the cited verse 14): "The repháim, that is, the departed, will not rise up," and Scripture speaks of him who is merápeh from the words of the law, that is, who withholds himself from them and desists from them, etc. (for the word repháim derives from רפה Raphá, which means to let go, to desist, and to cease, because in the dead the vital force ceases). Everyone who makes use of the light of the law, the light of the law will make alive again; and everyone who does not make use of the light of the law, the light of the law will not make alive again. The very same is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimóni on Esaïam, numero 298. According to this teaching, therefore, no unlearned person shall have a share in the resurrection. Others, however, teach on the contrary that the unlearned will also rise again, as may be sufficiently seen from what is indicated in what follows concerning the means by which the resurrection is to take place.

Furthermore, it is also read at the end of the 38th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, concerning the Cutheans or Samaritans, that they shall have no share in the resurrection; the words on this matter read as follows: האוכל פת כותי כאלו אוכל בשר חזיר ואל יתגייר אדם כותי ואין להם חלק בתחיית המתים שנאמר לא כותי כאלו אוכל בשר חזיר : לכם ולנו לכנות בית אלהינו לא בעולם הזה ולא בעולם הבא that is, whoever eats of a Cuthean's (or Samaritan's) bread does just as much as if he were eating pork. Likewise, no Cuthean person shall be received when he wishes to convert to the Jewish faith. They also have no share in the resurrection of the dead, as it is said (Ezra 4:3): "It is not fitting for you and us to build the house of our God, neither in this world nor in the world to come." What kind of people the Cutheans are, and why they are also called Samaritans, has been indicated above in the 16th chapter of the first part, pag. 633, under the third name that the Jews give to Christians; and there are still people of that kind to be found to this day in Shechem and in other places of that region, as can be read in the travel account of Rabbi Benjamin, printed in Amsterdam in the year 451 according to the Jewish reckoning, that is, in the year 1691 A.D., printed in Judeo-German, fol. 52, col. 2, and fol. 56, col. 1, and fol. 57, col. 1, that in Shechem more than one hundred, in Ashkelon three hundred, and in Damascus four hundred such people were living at the time when the aforementioned Rabbi Benjamin was there. Moreover, those who reside in Shechem wrote, approximately thirteen years ago, several letters to the highly learned and renowned Mr. Job Ludolf, Counselor to His Imperial Majesty and my most gracious patron, which were subsequently printed. But since the Jews have always been the bitterest enemies of the Samaritans, as can be seen from John 4:9, that they had no dealings with them even in the time of Christ, and since the Samaritans also entirely reject the Talmud and hold only to the five books of Moses, it is truly no wonder when the Jews, out of sheer hatred and envy, teach that the Cutheans will not rise again.

Rabbi Saadia presents in his aforementioned book, which is called Sepher haëmunôth vehaddeôth, fol. 34, col. 2, under the title Maamar schevîi, techiâth hamméthim, the question of whether those people who have been devoured by wild beasts will also rise again, and writes about it in the following manner: אם ישאל שואל על מי שאכלוהו החיות איך יחייה והוא כבר נשתנה אל גופות אחרים נשיב כי האומר המאמר הזה אומר כי הגופים הנאכלים הם כלים ומשתנים אל הגופים אשר נכנסו עליהם וראוי שנשיבהו אל שני הדברים יחד בשרש אשר אנחנו קהל המיחדים מאמינים בו ונודיעהו כי אין לגוף מן הברואים לכלות גוף אחר בשום ענין אפילו אם ישרפהו באיש לא יוכל לכלותו לעולם כי לא יוכל לכלות הדברים עד שישובו לא דבר כי אם מי שבראם לא פדבר ושמן נמצאים אבל כל הברואים אינם יכולים כי אם להפריד חלקי הגוף בלבד עד שהוא כשהיא בוערה בגוף מן הגופים אין דרכה כי אם להפריד אבריו וישוב החום אשר בו אל מוצא האש והלחות והקור אל מוצאיהם ותשאר העפריות אפר מבלי שיבלה מחלקי היסודות. וכאשר העשה האש הנראית לעין כן תעשה האש אשר בבעלי חיים בדבר הנאכל וכאשר יאכל החי חפוח על דרך הדמיון יפרדו חלקיו ויגב האויר מחלקיו מה שדרכו לגב מחלקי החפוח תמיד ומה שאלו לא מצא לגב מחלקי החפוח היה מונב מגוף החי ההוא תמיד עד שלא ישאר בו כי אם העפריות בלבד. וכמו שהאמדם בהפוח הנאכל כן המאמר באדם הנאכל כי האויר מגב החלקים אשר משלשה היסודות מגוף החי אשר אכלו וישאר החלק העפרי ויורד למטה. ואין הפרש ביניהם אלא שהחלקים אשר שבו אל האויר מן הפוח הנאכלים כבר התערבו ביסודות השרשיים והחלקים אשר עלו אל האויר מגוף האדם הנאכל הם שתרים בלהי מתערבים ביסודות השרשיים להיותם מוכנים לעת הפקידה כאשר הקדמנו. וכאשר העברתי הדברים האלה על לבי סרו מעלי הספקות ההם והתאמצה אמונתי בדעת הזה. והחזקתי בו ואמרתי that is, if someone were to ask how the one who has been devoured by wild beasts will come back to life, given that he has already been transformed into other bodies, we answer that the one who raises such a question holds the view that the devoured bodies perish and are transformed into the bodies into which they have entered. We must, however, answer him on two points at once, from the foundational principle (or chief matter) in which we believe, we who are the community of those who confess the one God; and we wish to make known to him that no body among the creatures has the power to reduce another body to nothing by any means whatsoever: even if one were to burn it in fire, one can still never annihilate it; for no one can annihilate any things such that they become utterly nothing, except for the one alone who created them out of nothing and caused them to exist. All creatures, however, can do nothing other than merely separate the parts of a body, so that fire, which burns a given body, does nothing other than divide its members, and the heat that is within it returns to the source of fire, and the moisture and cold likewise return to their source, so that only the dust, namely the ash, remains, and nothing of the parts of the elements is annihilated. Just as fire, which is seen with the eyes, does this, so also does the fire that is within living creatures do the same with that which is eaten by them. And when, for example, a living creature eats an apple, its parts are separated, and the air dries from its parts what it is accustomed to dry from them, until nothing but the dusty matter remains. Just as it is with the apple that is eaten, so also is it with the man who is devoured, for the air dries out those parts which belong to the three elements from the living body of the one who devoured him, and the dusty part remains and sinks downward. Nor is there any difference between them, except that the eaten parts which return from the apple to the air are mixed with the original elements, whereas those parts which ascend into the air from the devoured human body are preserved and not mixed with the original elements, because they are prepared for the time of the visitation, as we have stated previously. And when I take these things to heart, such doubts depart from me, and my faith in this view is strengthened, and I hold fast to it and say: praised be the Almighty. These are the words of Rabbi Saadia.

Regarding the place in which the dead are to rise, Abarbanel teaches in his commentary on Isa 18, fol. 35, col. 1, that the resurrection will take place in all lands of the world, when he says: לפי שתהיה התחיה בכל פאות היישוב לכן בכל גלילות הארץ וגם בארץ צלצל כנפים מעבר לנהרי כוש יחרדו מאד מזה וישלחו בים צירים לארץ בני ישראל כי ידעו כי מציון תצא תורה ודבר ה' מירושלים ולזה יקראו בשם ה' כי בראותם מתייהם קמים מקברותיהם קוראים בשם ה' ומפרסמים אמתת אמונתו ולמהו גם כן אחד that is, Since the resurrection will take place in all quarters of the world, therefore in all the regions of the earth, as well as in the land that is shadowy at its wings, on the banks of the rivers of the land of the Moors, they will tremble greatly over this, and will send messengers by sea into the land of the children of Israel, because they will know that the Law will go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Therefore they will call upon the name of the Lord, for when they see their dead rising from their graves, calling upon the name of the Lord and proclaiming the truth of faith in Him, they will likewise learn from them to all call upon the name of the Lord and to serve Him with one accord.

There is perhaps the possibility, however, that Abarbanel understood this only with respect to those peoples who are outside of Judaism; for most of the Rabbis teach that the bodies of Jews who die and are buried outside the land of Canaan must be rolled through the earth, through tunnels made for that purpose, into the land of Canaan beneath the Mount of Olives, where the souls will first return into their bodies, and they will go forth from the mountain, which will open itself. Yet there have also been some Rabbis who taught that those Israelites who die and are buried outside the Promised Land will rise in those lands in which they are buried, concerning which Rabbi David Kimchi writes in his commentary on Ezek 37:12 as follows: מחלוקת יש בדברי ר"ז על המתים בחוצה לארץ. מהם אמרו כי בחוצה לארץ יעלו מקברותיהם ומהם אמרו מקברותיהם יעלו לארץ ישראל בגלגול ודרך מחילות והפסוק הזה מוכיח כי בחוצה לארץ יהיו כמו מתי ארץ ישראל שהרי אמר פתחתי את קברותיכם והעליתי אתכם מקברותיכם ואחר כך והבאתי אתכם אל אדמת ישראל: That is: In the words of our Rabbis, of blessed memory, there is a dispute concerning the dead who are outside the land (of Israel). Some of them say that they will rise from their graves outside the land; others, however, say that they will go from their graves, through the rolling and the way of the tunnels, into the land of Israel. But this verse demonstrates that they will be restored to life outside the land, just as the dead in the land of Israel; for behold, he says: I will open your graves and will cause you to come up out of your graves. And thereafter it follows: And I will bring you into the land of Israel.

In the booklet Schene chuchoth léket, number 18, under the title Maschiach uthbechiáth hamméthim, it is written that the resurrection will take place in the land of Galilee, where the words from the Sohar read as follows: כל המתין יקומו: בארעא דגליל בגין דתמן זמין מלכא משיחא לגלאה: that is, all the dead will rise in the land of Galilee, because the Messiah will be revealed there.

That they must be rolled through underground caverns all the way to the land of Israel is indicated by Rabbi Elias in his Tischbi fol. 6, col. 2. under the word Gilgul, with these words: דעת רבותינו זכרונם לברכה כי בתחיית המתים לא יהיו רק הנקברים בארץ ישראל והנקברים בחוצה לארץ אינם חיים אלא דרך גלגול מחילות רוצה לומר שיתגלגלו תחת הקרקע עד חוץ ארץ ישראל ושם יהיו וזהו נקרא גלגול מחלות: that is, our rabbis, of blessed memory, hold that only those who are buried in the land of Israel will rise at the resurrection of the dead, but those who are buried outside the land (of Israel) will rise in no other way than through the rolling through the caverns, that is, they will be rolled underground all the way into the midst of the land of Israel, and will rise there, and this is called Gilgul mechillóth (or mechillos), that is, the rolling through the caverns. Rabbi Bechai likewise writes about this in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 57, col. 3. in the Parascha Vajechi, as follows: מתי ארץ ישראל חיים תחלה לימות המשיח אבל מתי חוצה לארץ אינם חיים אלא על ידי צער גלגול מחילות: that is, the dead of the land of Israel will be the first to rise at the time of the Messiah, but the and lift the four corners of the earth on high, and make many tunnels in the earth for each and every righteous person who is outside the land, all the way to the land of Israel, and bring me each and every righteous one, the righteous N. son of N., the pious N. son of N., the wise N. son of N., who have given themselves over daily (unto death) for the sake of the holiness of my name, so that they may not be tormented, and so that they may come into the land of Israel; and I will revive them." Thereupon each and every angel and each and every seraph, as well as each and every prince and host, will go forth and run into all four parts of the world, and will lift the four corners of the earth on high, and shake the wicked out of it, as it is said (Job 38:13): "That the corners of the earth might be seized and the wicked shaken out of it"; and they will make many tunnels in the ground of the earth for each and every righteous person who is outside the land of Israel, and will bring them through the tunnels into the land of Israel, to the Holy Blessed God in Jerusalem. Then the Holy Blessed God will Himself arise and revive them and set them upon their feet.

In the book Pesikta rabbetha, fol. 1, col. 4, the following is also taught concerning this matter: אמר רבי אלעזר בשם רבי סימאי האלהים עושה להם מחילות בארץ והם מתגלגלים כנאדיות כנאדות ובאין לארץ ישראל that is, Rabbi Eliezer has said in the name of Rabbi Simai: God will make tunnels in the earth for them (namely, for the righteous who are buried outside the land of Canaan), and they will be rolled along like leather sacks, and will come into the land of Israel. Likewise, in the Jerusalem Talmud, in the tractate Kilaim, in the last chapter, at the end, it is stated that they will be rolled along through the tunnels beneath the earth like wine barrels.

On the other hand, it is reported in the book Avodath (or Avodas) bakkodesch fol. 53, col. 1, in the 40th chapter under the title Chélek haavodah, that the dead who have died outside the land of Canaan will stand upon their feet and travel through the caves, and the words read as follows: צדיקים שבחוצה לארץ נעשות להן מחילות ועומדין על רגליהן והולכין עד ארץ ישראל ושם חיים כי הרוח תנתן בהם שם לפי שהיא קדושה וטהורה לא חוצה לארץ שהוא טמאה והוא שכתוב הנה אני פותח את קברותיכם והעליתי אתכם מקברותיכם עמי והבאתי אתכם אל אדמת ישראל וגו' ואחר כך יתחיים: that is, For the righteous who are outside the land, caves will be made for them, and they will stand upon their feet and travel into the land of Israel, and there they will come to life, for the Spirit will there be given into them, because it is a holy and pure land, but not outside the land, because the other lands are unclean. And this is what is written (Ezek 37:12): Behold, I will open your graves and will bring you, my people, up out of your graves and bring you into the land of Israel, etc. And thereupon follows (v. 14): And I will give my Spirit into you, that you shall live again. From this it is evident that, according to this opinion, the bodies of the deceased travel underground into the land of Canaan without soul or life, and only there will they receive the soul and life. But how is a body supposed to be able to walk in which there is no life? This is indeed a wholly unreasonable matter: for Rabbi David Kimchi writes quite correctly in his commentary on Ezek 37:12, when he states: לא יתנועע האדם בלא רוח חיים, that is, a person cannot move without the spirit of life.

Those who die in the Promised Land, however, are to be entirely exempt from such rolling, as is taught in the little book Afkáth róchel in the fourth part, where the words read as follows: המתים אשר בארץ ישראל הם לא יתגלגלו ממקומם: that is, the dead who are in the land of Israel will not be rolled, but rather their spirit (or soul) will descend to them in the place where they lie, and will enter into them, and they will become alive.

That the souls are first to re-enter their bodies in the land of Israel, having been rolled there from all other lands beneath the earth, can be seen in the book Pesikta rabbetha fol. 2, col. 1., where it is written as follows: וכמה הם ימות המשיח שלש מאות וששים וחמשת אלפים שנים הם ימות המשיח • ומהי ארץ ישראל בני ישראל חיים בהם ואכלים אותם וכל הצדיקים שבחוצה לארץ באים במחילות לתוכה וכיון שהם באים לתוכה מיד הקב"ה נותן להם את נפשותיהם והם עומדים ואוכלים אותם עמהם שנים: ששנאמר רוקע הארץ וצאצאיה נותן נשמה לעם עליה: that is, How long then do the days of the Messiah last? Five thousand, three hundred and sixty years are the days of the Messiah, and the children of Israel who have died in the land of Israel shall live again in those same days and enjoy those same years. But the righteous who are outside the land shall come into it through the tunnels; and when they come into it, the holy blessed GOD will immediately give them their souls, and they shall enjoy those same years together with them, as it is said (Isa 42:5): He who stretched out the earth and its produce, who gives the soul to the people upon it. Something similar is also to be found at fol. 1, col. 4. of the same work. So too in the book Emek hammelech fol. 42, col. 3., near the end of the 72nd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam battóhu, one reads as follows: המתים שבחוצה לארץ יבנה הקב"ה גופם ומתגלגלים תחת הארץ עד ארץ ישראל ושם יקבלו נשמתם ולא בחוצה לארץ הלא הוא דכתיב ואמרת אליהם הנה אני פותח את קברותיכם והעליתי אתכם מקברותיכם עמי והבאתי אתכם אל אדמת ישראל • מה פתחי אתרי קברותיכם: that is, The holy blessed GOD will build the bodies of those who have died outside the land of Israel, and they shall be rolled beneath the earth all the way to the land of Israel, and there, but not outside the land, they shall receive their souls. And this is what is written (Ezek 37:12): Therefore prophesy, and speak to them: behold, I will open your graves, and will bring you, my people, out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. What is written after this (v. 14)? And I will put my Spirit in you, that you shall live again. But how long the soul will wait in the land of Canaan for the resurrection is indicated in Jalkut chádäsch fol. 142, col. 3. numero 36., under the title Maschiach, with these words: ארבעים שנה קודם התחית המתים: that is, Forty years before the resurrection of the dead, the soul waits in the land of Israel.

Concerning the reason why those Jews who die outside the land of Canaan must be rolled through the earth into that same land, the following is read on this subject in the aforementioned place in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 42, col. 3.: ולמה יתגלגלו המתים שבחוזה לארץ תחת מחילות ארץ ויקבלו נשמתם בארץ ישראל: 3.: והק"ב מוריד הטעם הוא שהק"ב נשבע לישראל בירושלים שלא יגלה אותם עוד עולמית. והק"ב מוריד ירושלים של מעלה למטה מיטמי מרומים עם בית המקדש בנוי ולא תהרס לעולם לפיכך אין מקבלים נשמתם אלא במקום הקיים לעולמים כדי שתהיה הנשמה קיימת בגוף לעולמים דכתיב והנשאר בציון והנותר בירושלים קדוש יאמר לו. מה קדוש ה' צבאות הוא חי וקיים לעולם ולעולמי עולמים אף הצדיקים נקראים קדושים וחיים וקיימים לעולם ולעולמי עולמים: that is, Why then are the dead who are outside the land (of Israel) rolled through the caverns of the earth, and receive their souls in the land of Israel? The reason is that the Holy Blessed God will swear to the Israelites in Jerusalem that He will never again allow them to be led away captive into misery. And the Holy Blessed God will cause the city of Jerusalem to descend from the highest heaven, built with the Temple, and it shall never more be destroyed. For this reason they receive their souls nowhere other than in a place that endures for eternity, so that the soul may remain in the body for eternity, as it is written (Isa 4:3): And whoever shall remain in Zion and be left in Jerusalem shall be called holy. Just as the Holy Lord Zebaoth lives and endures throughout all eternity, so too shall the righteous be called holy, and they shall live and endure throughout all eternity. On this subject one may also consult the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 53, col. 1. 2. in the 40th chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda.

It is also said that the aforementioned rolling shall not occur without pain, which is why Jacob and Joseph were to be buried in the land of Canaan, so that they might be spared such torment. That it occurs with great pain is taught in the Sohar in the Parascha Emór, fol. 30, col. 1. 2. with these words: הנה נודע: שכל המתים של ישראל נשמתיהם עולות דרך ישר: וההוא חופאה קלישא כנ"ל מקבלא לון ואפילו ישראל המתים בחוזה לארץ חס גם כן נכנסים דרך שם רק שיש להם צער גדול על: That is: Behold, it is known that all the souls of the deceased Israelites travel upward by the straight path, and that thin covering, mentioned above, receives them. Indeed, the Israelites who die outside the land also go by the same path, only that they suffer great pain when they are rolled in laborious fashion from one Kelipha to another, and from one prince to another (that is, from the domain of one of those devils and rulers of the seventy nations, of whom mention was made in the 18th chapter of the first part, into the domain of another), until they arrive at the holy place. So too is it read in the Talmudic tractate Kethubóth (or Kesúvos) fol. 111, col. 1: צער הוא גלגול לצדיקים, That is: the rolling is painful for the righteous.

That Jacob and Joseph wished to be buried in the land of Canaan so that they would not have to endure this pain is read in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 8, col. 4 numero 1. under the title Avóth and veimmahóth as follows: יודעין היו יעקב ויוסף שהם צדיקים גמורים ושמתים שבחוצה לארץ אינם חיים לעתיד. ולמה הטריחו לישא אותם ממצרים אלא שלא יקבלו צער גלגול מחילות: that is, Jacob and Joseph, who were entirely righteous, knew full well that those who die outside the land (of Israel) will come back to life in the future; why then did they go to the trouble of having themselves carried out of Egypt (into the land of Canaan for burial, as can be seen in Gen 47:29 and 50:25)? (They did so) in order that they would not have to endure the pain of rolling through the tunnels. And in the aforementioned Jalkut chádasc, fol. 142, col. 3. numero 12., under the title Maschiach, the following is written: יעקב ויוסף נהיראו מצער גלגול מחילות לכן ציוו: להוליכם אחרי מותם לארץ ישראל: that is, Jacob and Joseph feared the pain of rolling through the tunnels, and therefore commanded that after their death they should be brought to the land of Israel. As for what further reason there may have been why Jacob did not wish to be buried in Egypt, Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary on the words of Gen 49:29, "and bury me not in Egypt," that Jacob intended thereby to indicate: סופה להיות עפרה כנים ושאינן: that is, the dust of Egypt will at some point be turned into lice, and likewise those who die outside the land (of Canaan) will come back to life only through the pain of rolling through the tunnels; and also so that the Egyptians would not make an idol of me. This, however, is once again a foolish doctrine, for how can a body in which there is no life suffer pain?

That those who are rolled through underground passages into the land of Canaan will emerge from beneath the Mount of Olives is taught in the Chaldean translation of the Song of Solomon, cap. 8, v. 5, with the following words: אמר שלמה נביא כד יחון מיתא עתיד לאתבזעא טור משחא וכל מיתא דישראל עתידין למפק מתחותיה ואפילו צדיקא דמיתו בגלותא עתידין למיתא אורח כוכיא מלרע לארעא ונפקין מן תחות טור משחא ורשיעא דמיתו ואתקברו בארעא דישראל עתידין למחיהון רמין היכמה דרמי גבר אבנא באלא: that is, the Prophet Solomon has said: when the dead shall rise, the Mount of Olives will split apart, and all the dead of the Israelites will come forth from beneath it. Indeed, even the righteous who died in exilio, or in misery, will travel the path of the underground caverns and emerge from beneath the Mount of Olives. The wicked, however, who died and were buried in the land of Israel, will be hurled forth as a man hurls a stone with a sling. Concerning this, the following is also read in the book Avodáth (or Avódas) bákkodesch, fol. 53, col. 2, in the 40th chapter under the title Chélek haavóda: המאור הקדוש רבי שמעון בן יוחאי עליו השלום כתב בזה הלשון: כל אינון דגופא דילהון בארעא מסאבא אינון גופא בלא רוחא עד די יתגלגלון תחות ארעא וימטון לארעא דישראל ויפקון מתחות הר הזיתים ותמן יקבלון נשמתא ולא ברשו אחרא כדי that is, the great luminary, Rabbi Shimeon ben Yochai, upon whom be peace, has written (concerning this matter) in these words: all those whose bodies lie in an unclean land (namely, outside the land of Israel) are a body without spirit, until they are rolled through underground passages and arrive in the land of Israel and emerge from beneath the Mount of Olives; there, and not under any other dominion, will they receive the soul, so that they may be sustained in life in the world to come.

In the book Pesikta rábbetha, the following is also written concerning this matter at fol. 55, col. 2: לאילו שנבלעו ברבלתה הק"ב עושה להם סחילות מחילות להם מלמטן והם מחלדין בהם עד שהם באים תחת הר הזיתים והק"ב עומד עליו והוא נבקע להם עולים מתוכו כמו שזכריה אומר ועמדו רגליו ביום ההוא על הר הזיתים אשר על פני ירושלים : that is, for those who were swallowed up (or slain) in Ribletha, the Holy Blessed God will make tunnels and caverns for them below (in the earth), and they will pass through them until they come beneath the Mount of Olives, which is near Jerusalem. Then the Holy Blessed God will stand upon it, and it will be split apart for them, and they will come forth out of it, just as Zacharias says (Zech 14:4): And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which lies before Jerusalem toward the east; and the Mount of Olives shall be cleft in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, ע"כ.

Regarding the means by which the resurrection is to take place, the Rabbis teach that it will occur through a dew and the sound of a trumpet. Concerning the dew, it is written in the 34th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer as follows: לעתיד לבוא מוריד הקב"ה החרות טל ומחייה המתים שנאמר יחיו מתיך אלו ישראל: that is, in the future the Holy Blessed God will cause a dew of resurrection to descend and will awaken the dead, as it is said (Isa 26:19): "Your dead shall live," namely the Israelites who died trusting in His name, ע"כ. And in the Sépher Ikkarím of Rabbi Joseph Albo, in the 35th chapter of the fourth Máamar, fol. 152, col. 1., the following is read: אמרו רבותינו ז"ל שיש טל שעתיד הקב"ה להחיות בו את המתים נראה שהתחיה ההיא כשיודיד הקב"ה טל על הארץ יהיה כה הטל ההוא ככה טפת זרע הזכר לתת הצורה והעפר ההוא כטבח הכנה שבו : that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the Holy Blessed God will in the future awaken the dead through a dew; and from this it is to be understood that the resurrection will take place when the Holy Blessed God causes the dew to fall down upon the earth. The power of that dew will also be like the power of the male seed, giving form or shape; but that dust (upon which the dew will fall), by virtue of the disposition or preparation that is within it, will be like the female seed, providing the matter. Something similar is also to be found in Abarbanel's preface to his commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, fol. 2, col. 4.

Where this dew shall come from, the Talmud teaches in the Tractate Chagiga, fol. 12, col. 2, where the following is read concerning one of the seven firmaments which, according to the opinion of Resch Lakisch, exist, namely concerning that one which is called ערבות Aravóth or Aróvos: ערבות שבו צדק משפט וצדקה גנוי חיים וגנוי שלום וגנוי נשמתן של צדיקים ורוחות ונשמות שעתידות להבראות וטל שעתיד הקב"ה להחיות בו מתים: צדק ומשפט דכתיב צדק ומשפט מכון צדקה דכתיב וילבש צדקה כשריון. גנוי חיים דכתיב כי עמך מקור חיים וגנוי שלום דכתיב ויקרא לו ה' שלום. וגנוי ברכה דכתיב ישא ברכה מאת ה'. נשמתן של צדיקים דכתיב והיתה נפש אדוני צרורה בצרור החיים את ה' אלהיך. רוחות ונשמות שעתידות להיבראות דכתיב כי רוח מלפני יעטוף ונשמות אני עשיתי. וטל שעתיד הקב"ה להחיות בו מתים דכתיב גשם נדבות תניף: that is, in (the firmament) Aravóth are righteousness and justice, and righteousness, the treasures of life, and the treasures of peace, and the treasures of blessing, as well as the souls of the righteous, and the spirits and souls which are to be created in the future, together with the dew through which the holy blessed God will raise the dead. Righteousness and justice, as it is written (Ps 89:15): Righteousness and justice are the foundation of Thy throne. Righteousness, as it is written (Isa 59:17): And He puts on righteousness like a breastplate. The treasures of life, as it is written (Ps 36:10): For with Thee is the fountain of life. The treasures of peace, as it is written (Judg 6:24): And he called it (namely the altar) the LORD of peace. The treasures of blessing, as it is written (Ps 24:5): He shall receive the blessing from the LORD. The souls of the righteous, as it is written (1 Sam 25:29): So shall the soul of my lord be bound up in the bundle of the living with the LORD thy God. The spirits and souls which are to be created in the future, as it is written (Isa 57:16): For a spirit shall go forth from before Me, and the souls I have made. As also the dew through which the holy blessed God will raise the dead, as it is written (Ps 68:10): Thou givest, O God, a plentiful rain to Thine inheritance, and that which is parched (or wearied) Thou dost refresh.

From the end of the 34th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, it is taught that this dew will flow from the head of God, in these words: מאיזה מקום הוא יורד מראשו של הקב"ה ולעתיד לבוא מנער שער ראשו ומוריד טל תחיית המתים שנאמר אני that is, From what place does that (dew)

descend? From the head of the Holy Blessed God, and He will in the future shake the hair of His head and let the dew of resurrection fall down, and raise the dead, as it is said (Song 5:2): I sleep, but my heart wakes, for my head is full of dew.

Such dew is also said to fall twice daily upon the souls of the righteous in Paradise, and this is written in the book Avodáth hakkódesh, in the 29th chapter under the title Chélek haavóda, fol. 46, col. 2, as follows: כל זה הכבוד והמעלה והעדון מיוחד לנפשות הצדיקים בגן עדן של מטה ששני פעמים בכל יום יורד עליהם אצילות טל חיים מעל רישא דמלכא טור ראש דברך אמת והוא הטל שעתיד הק"בה להחיות בו את המתים: that is, All this glory, and excellence, and delight (of which mention is made in the foregoing) is prepared for the souls of the righteous in the lower Paradise, for the dew of life falls upon them twice every day from the head of the King, and this is the mystery (of the words Ps 119:160): The sum of Your word is truth. And this is the dew through which the Holy Blessed God will raise the dead.

What concerns the ignorant or unlearned deceased Jews: these are to be resurrected by a special dew, concerning which the following is read in the Jalkut cháadasch fol. 141, col. 4. numero 25. under the title Maschiach: עמי הארצות עתיד הק"בה להחיותם בטללי שינה פירוש כשרוכרים התלמידים וישנים על הספר : that is, the Holy Blessed God will resurrect the unlearned through the dew of sleep; that is, God preserves the saliva (or drool) which flows from the mouth of the studying disciples when they fall asleep over the book, and makes a dew from it, and thereby raises up the dead who were unlearned. Concerning this, one may also consult the Prague Machsor, in the first part fol. 24, col. 1-2 under the title Musaph schel rosch haschaná jom rischón, in a prayer which begins בבקרך עולם Olam bebókrach berósch haschaná, and in the commentary thereon.

Concerning the resurrection of the dead through the sound of the trumpets, the following is taught in the little book Othíórh (or Otios) Rabbi Akkiva, fol. 17, col. 3.: כיצד הק"בה מחייה את המתים לעולם הבא מלמד שנוטל הק"בה שופר גדול : בידו שהוא אלף אמה באמתו של הק"בה ותוקע בו וקולו הולך מסוף העולם עד סופו . בתקיעה ראשונה העולם כולו רועש . בתקיעה שניה העפר מתפרד . בתקיעה שלישית עצמותיהן מתקבצין . בתקיעה רביעית אברים מתחממין . בתקיעה חמישית עורותיהן מתקרמים . בתקיעה ששית רוחות ונשמות מתכנסות לגופיהן . בתקיעה שביעית חיים ועומדים על רגליהם בלבושיהם שנאמר ה' צבאות יגן עליהם ואכלו וכבשו אבני קלע ושתו המו כמו יין ומלאו כמזרק כוויות מזבח והושיעם ה' אליהם ביום ההוא כצאן עמו כי אבני נזר מתנוססות על : That is: How then does the Holy Blessed God resurrect the dead in the world to come? We are taught that the Holy Blessed God will take a great trumpet, which is a thousand cubits long according to the cubit of God (which, as was reported above in the first chapter of the first part, paginà 5., is far larger than other cubits are), into His hand, and will blow upon it, and that the sound thereof will go from one end of the world to the other. At the first blast, the entire world will be set in motion. At the second blast, the dust (into which the bodies of the dead have been transformed) will be separated. At the third blast, their bones will be gathered together. At the fourth blast, the limbs will be warmed. At the fifth blast, their skin will be covered over. At the sixth blast, the spirits and souls will be brought into their bodies. At the seventh blast, they will become alive and stand upon their feet with their garments, as it is said (Zech 9:15-16): "The LORD of hosts will protect them, and they shall devour and tread down the sling stones; and they shall drink and make a noise as from wine, and be filled like the bowl, and like the corners of the altar. And the LORD their God will save them in that day as the flock of His people; for the stones of the crown shall be lifted up upon His land."

We must now also consider from what the human body shall be prepared at the resurrection of the dead. It is to be known that, according to the erroneous teaching of the Rabbis, this is to occur from a certain bone that was present in the spine of every deceased person and is incorruptible, called לוז Lus, or also רקב תרווד tarvad rakaf. Concerning this, the following is written in the Jalkut chadâsch fol. 142. col. 1. numero 29, under the title Maschiach: כל בתחיית המתים מתי חוצה לארץ יברא להם הקב"ה גוף שלם מעצם קטן שאינו נרקב ולא יקבלו שום נשמה מתי חוצה לארץ עד שיתגלגלו לארץ ישראל ושם יתן בהם נשמה That is: At the time of the resurrection of the dead, the Holy and blessed GOD will create for all those who have died outside the land (of Israel) a complete body from a small bone (of the spine) which does not decay, and they will receive no soul until they have been rolled into the land of Israel, and there He will place the souls into them. And in the fourth column, at numero 44, the following is read: אותו עצם הגוף אינו נרקב והקב"ה ירכך אותו בטל וממנו יתבני הגוף That is: That same bone does not decay, and the Holy and blessed GOD will soften it through the (aforementioned) dew, and from it the body will be built. In the third column, at numero 37 under the said title Maschiach, the following is also taught from the Sohar: 'והאי דכתיב ב'ת בתואל הארמי דרשו על האי עצם קטן הנקרא לוז שממנו יתבנן הגוף לעתיד שהעצם הזה הוא רמאי ומהו רמאותו שאינו נהנה מתאות עולם הזה כשאר האברים ולכן הוא זוכה שממנו יתבני יהכני הגוף בתחיית המתים ולא ירקב בקבר ולכן קורא אותו בת בתואל הארמי That is: (Our Rabbis) have interpreted the words בת בתואל הארמי Bath Bethuél haarámmi, that is, the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian, which are written (Gen 25:20), as referring to this small bone called Lus, from which the body will in the future be built, because this bone is rámmai, that is, deceptive. In what, then, does its deceptiveness consist? Because it does not enjoy the lusts of this world as the other members do; therefore it is worthy that the body at the resurrection of the dead shall be built from it, and that it shall not decay in the grave; for this reason it is called Bath Bethuél baárámmi. According to the foolish opinion of the Rabbis, therefore, the word ארמי Arámmi, which means a Syrian, must, through a transposition of the letters, signify as much as רמאי rámmai, that is, deceptive.

Of the incorruptibility and indestructibility of this bone, the following is written in the little book Afkáth Róchel, in the fourth part: אף על פי שהעצמות נמוחו עצם אחד נשאר באדם שאינו מתכלה לעולם ואינו מתרקב והוא עצם התחתון שבשדרה וקורין לו ר"ל תרווד רקב ואומרים עליו שהוא חזק מאד כפטיש יפוצץ סלע וגו': ואמרו מעשה באדם אחד שרצה לנסות את תקפו והכה עליו במרוב והוא לא נעשה בו פגם ושם כלל ועל זה באדם אחד שרצה לנסות את תקפו והכה עליו במרוב והוא לא נעשה בו פגם ושם כלל ועל זה That is: Although the bones decay, there is nevertheless one bone in man which never decays nor rots, and that same bone is the lowest bone in the spine, which our Rabbis, of blessed memory, call Tárvad rákaf; and they say of it that it is very strong (and hard), and just as a hammer shatters a rock, &c. They also recount a story of a man who wished to test its strength and struck it with a hammer, yet no mark whatsoever was made upon it (by the striking, on account of its hardness). Upon this bone the holy and blessed God will in the future build the structure of the body, and restore it to its original form.

In the book Bereschúth rábba, fol. 25, col. 4, in the 28th Parascha, the following is also read: אדריאנוס שחיק עצמות שאל את רבי יהושע בן חנינה אמר לו: מהיכן הק"ב מציץ את האדם לעתיד לבוא אמר לו מלוז שדרה. אמר לו מנין אתה יודע אמר לו איתיהיה לידי ואנא מודע לך. טחנו ברחים ולא נטחן. שרפו באש ולא נשרף. נתנו במים ולא נמחה. נתנו על הסדן והתחיל מכה עליו בפטיש נחלק הסדן ונבקע הפטיש ולא חסר כלום : that is, (the Emperor) Adrianus, whose bones must be ground to dust (in Hell), asked Rabbi Jebóschua, the son of Channinæ, and said to him: from what will the holy, blessed God resurrect man in the time to come? Thereupon he answered him: from the (bone) Lus, which is situated in the spine. At this, (the Adrianus further) asked him: how do you know this? And he gave him the answer: bring me one, and I will demonstrate it to you. (When one was brought,) they wanted to grind it in a mill, but it could not be ground. They threw it into the fire to burn it, but it was not burned. They placed it in water, but it was not softened. They laid it upon an anvil, and one struck it with a hammer, whereupon the anvil split apart and the hammer shattered, yet the bone lacked nothing. This may also be looked up in Vajikra rabba, fol. 150, col. 3., in the 18th Parascha.

Furthermore, it is also taught on this subject in the book Scháare Zédek fol. 24, col. 4.: דע כי יש עצם אחד נתהוה בגוף אדם ונקרא לו לוח שהוא עצמו של אדם והוא : עיקרו ושורשו. הימנו נתהוה האדם בעצום הטפה וכשמת האדם אינו נפחת ואינו נמוח ואילו יכניסהו באש אינו נשרף. כריחים אינו נטחן. בפטיש אינו מתפוצץ והוא העצם הקיים לעולמים. והוא מקבל עונג ועדנים אחר מיתת האדם הצדיק ועליו נאמר ועצמותיך יחליץ. והוא העצם המקבל העונש ברשעים ועליו נאמר ותהי עונותם על עצמותם. והעצם הזה עיקר שרשו נעשה That is: Know that there is one bone formed in the human body, which is called Lus, and which is the substance, the essential nature, and the origin of man. From it, man is created through the substance of the seed; and when man dies, it does not diminish and does not perish. If one puts it into fire, it does not burn; in the mill it is not ground; with a hammer it is not shattered; and it is a bone that endures eternally. It also receives the delight and the pleasures after the death of the righteous man, and of it is said (Isa 58:11): And He shall make thy bones strong. It is also the bone that receives the punishment in the case of the wicked, and of it is said (Ezek 32:27): And their iniquities shall be upon their bones. The essential nature of this bone, and its origin, comes from the substance of the heavens; and from it every human body receives strength, and power, and permanence.

Although it has been stated that this bone endures forever and eternally, the rabbis nonetheless teach that if someone does not bow during the prayer that begins מודים אנחנו לך שאתה הוא יי אלהינו וגו' Módim anáchnu lach scheátta hu Adonái Elohénu etc., which is prayed by Jews every morning, that bone will transform into a serpent. Concerning this, the book of Zijóni fol. 23, col. 2. contains the following passage: סיפור השמים נשאר עצם אחד שאינו כלה. יש אומרים: שהוא עצם התחתון שבשדרה וקראוהו רז"ל תרווד רקב וגו': וזהו שנאמר וינאץ השקד. וזהו העצם שנשאר עד התחייה ואז טל התחייה חל עליו. ומאן דלא כרע במודים נעשה מאותו עצם נחש בריה מקולקלת: that is, from the element of heaven one bone remains (from the decayed human body) which does not decay. Some say it is the lowest bone in the spine, and our rabbis have called it Tárvad rákaf etc. And of this it is said (Eccl 12:5): "When the almond tree blossoms." This is also the bone that remains until the resurrection of the dead, at which point the dew of awakening falls upon it. If, however, someone does not bow during the prayer Módim, then from that bone a serpent is produced, which is a corrupted creature.

How the human bodies will be formed from this bone at the resurrection is indicated in the last-cited passage of the book Zijóni, immediately following the preceding section, in these words: בעת התחייה ירטב העצם בטל התחייה ונעשה: כשאר בעיסה ויתפשט לכאן ולכאן ונימתחו מהוט כל האברים וכל הגידים ועור ובשר ויתגלגלו עד: that is, at the time of the resurrection, this bone will be moistened by the dew of the awakening, and will become like leaven in dough, and will spread itself here and there; and from it all the limbs, as well as all the nerves, together with the skin and the flesh, will extend themselves; after which they will be rolled all the way to the land of Israel, and there they will receive their spirits (or souls) in the pure land. In the little book Afkát róchel, the following is also read concerning this in the fourth part: אמרו רז"ל שעתיד הקב"ה להוריד טל מאור של מעלה ויכנס למטה בתוך העפר והעצם כעיסה וזה העצם בתוך העפר הוא כשאר שבעיסה שמתפשט לכאן ולכאן וימתחו מתוכו כל אברים ועצמות ובשר ועור מלמעלה ומתגלגלים הגופות מתחת העפר בגלגול עד ארץ ישראל ושם יקבלו רוחותם מפני שהיא ארץ קדושה וטהורה דכתיב הנה אני פותח את קברותיכם והבאתי אתכם אל אדמתכם ואחזק כח וחייתם: that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the holy blessed God will in the future cause a dew to fall down from the uppermost light, which will sink down here below into the earth and will reach that bone, whereby it will be moistened like dough. This bone, however, will be in the earth like leaven in a dough, for it will spread itself here and there, and from it all the limbs and nerves, together with the bones, as well as the flesh and the skin from above downward, will extend themselves; the bodies, however, will be rolled beneath the earth all the way to the land of Israel, where they will receive their spirits, because it is a holy and pure land, as it is said (Ezek 37:12): Behold, I will open your graves and will bring you into your land. After this it is written (v. 14): And I will give my Spirit into you, so that you shall live again. Concerning this, the book Avodath hakkódesh fol. 53, col. 1, in the 40th chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, may also be consulted.

Regarding the state in which the dead will rise, they are to rise not only with clothing, but also with the infirmities and defects of the body that they previously had during their lifetimes. Concerning the clothing, the following is read in the Talmudic tractate Kethuvóth (or Ketúvos) fol. 111, col. 2: אמר רבי חייא ברבי יוסף עתידים צדיקים שיעמדו במלבושיהו קל וחומר מהטה מה חטה שנקברת ערומה that is, Rabbi Chija, the son of Rabbi Joseph, said that the righteous will rise with their clothing, and proved this by means of an argumentum à minori ad majus, that is, by a proof from the lesser to the greater, drawn from wheat. Just as wheat is buried naked and comes forth with many garments, so much more will the righteous, who are buried with their clothing, rise clothed. The same is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin fol. 90, col. 2. In the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, the following is likewise taught on this subject in the 33rd chapter: רבי אליעזר אומר כל המתים עומדים בתחיית המתים ועולין בלבושיהו. ממי את למד מזרע הארץ קל וחומר מחטה מה חטה שנקברת ערומה ויוצאה בכמה לבושים צדיקים שנקברו בלבושיהו על אחת כמה וכמה. ולא עוד אלא ממי את למד מחנניה מישאל ועזריה שירדו לתוך כבשן האש בלבושין ועלו בתכריכיהו שנאמר וסרבליהו לא התהרו. ועוד ממי את למד משמואל הנביא שעלה עוטה מעיל that is, Rabbi Eliezer says that all the dead will rise at the resurrection of the dead and will come up (out of their graves) with their clothing. From where do you learn this? From the seed of the earth; and how much more from wheat: just as wheat, which is buried naked, comes forth with many garments, so much more will the righteous, who were buried with their clothing, rise clothed. From where do you learn this further? From Hanania, Misael, and Azaria, who fell down into the fiery furnace and came back up with their clothing, as it is said (Dan 3:27): and the hair of their heads was not singed. From where do you learn it further still? From the prophet Samuel, who (as is to be read in 1 Sam 28:14) came up clothed in a mantle. Concerning this resurrection with clothing, one may also consult the booklet of Rabbi Jehuda Sabdāa, Michtáf battechtā, in the second chapter.

This foolish opinion caused, in ancient times, the wealthy Jews to bury their dead in very splendid garments, since they held that they would rise again in those same garments. Concerning this, Rabbi Saadiah writes in his little book called Sepher haēmunoṯ vebaddeōṯ, fol. 36, col. 2, under the title Máamar Schevūi techlūth hamméthim, as follows: אמרו עוד כי המתים יעמדו בתכריכיהם אמרו עתידים הצדיקים לעמוד בלבושיהם ואין השבת בגדיהם יותר קשה אצל השכל מהשבת גופותיהם ורוחותם כאשר פשט באומה הפליגו בתכריכיהם עד שהביא זה הדבר לידי רעה גדולה שכל מי שלא היתה ידו משגת הניח מתו ובורח עד שהקן רבן גמליאל וצוה שילבישוהו שני בגדי פשתן מכוהצין ונהגו כל העם אחריו, That is: They (namely the rabbis) have further said that the dead will rise in their burial garments, and have stated that the righteous will rise in their clothes; and the restoration of their garments is no harder for reason to comprehend than the restoration of their bodies and their spirits (or souls). After this opinion had spread among the people (of Israel), they exceeded all measure with their burial garments (and made them far too splendid and costly), so that this matter brought about a great evil; for everyone who did not have the means (to clothe his dead so magnificently) left his dead lying there and fled, until Rabban Gamaliel made the ordinance and commanded that the dead should be dressed in two bleached linen garments, which all the people thereafter followed.

Regarding the defects of the bodies with which they are to rise, there is found in the aforementioned Sepher haēmunoṯ vebaddeōṯ of Rabbi Saadia, fol. 36, col. 3., under the cited heading, concerning this matter, among other questions, a question and answer of the following content: השאלה החמישית כי שימות מהם והוא סוניא או מכושל מאבריו או בשאר הפגעים והכונין מה יהיה מענינו. ואומר שיהיה החלה במום ההוא שיברוהו בני אדם שהוא הוא ואחר כן ירפאהו הבורא ותהיה אות גמורה כמו שאמרו רבותינו עומדין במומין ואחר כן מתרפאין. ועל כן הקדים אני אמית ואחיה מחצתי ואני ארפא וכבר אמרו אז תפתחנה עיני עורים ואזני חרשים תפתחנה אז ידלג כאיל That is: The fifth question. If one of them (namely, the Israelites) dies who was blind, and had a defect in his limbs, or was otherwise afflicted with an injury and impairment, what will be his condition (at the resurrection)? To this I answer that such a person will rise with that same defect, so that people may recognize that he is that same person; but thereafter the Creator will heal him, and this will be a perfect sign, just as our Rabbis have said: they rise with their defects and are thereafter healed. For this reason (God foretold at Deut 32:39 the words:) I kill and make alive, I wound and I heal. It is likewise reported (Isa 35:5-6): Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap like a deer, and the tongue of the mute shall sing. In the book Majene jeschua, fol. 78, col. 2., in the 12th Majan, in the 9th Tamar, one likewise reads: יקומו במצבם ובמחמתם באותו מצב שמתו ובמחמתם That is: They will rise in that very same condition, and with their defects, in which they died. And in the little book of the aforementioned Rabbi Jehuda Sabdaa, Michtaf battechia, it is written in the eleventh chapter: מבוואר כי בתחיית המתים יעמדו באותו ענין שהיו בשעת מיתה ר"ל: That is: It is clear that the dead, at the resurrection, will rise in that very same condition in which they were at the time of death, that is, that they will rise blind, and lame, and hunchbacked, as they were.

So also in the booklet Othioth Rabbi Akkiva, Venice printing from the year 306, that is, 1546 according to our calendar, fol. 3, col. 2. 3. in the letter Aleph, concerning the aforementioned words of Deut 32:39, "I wound and I heal," the following is taught: כשם שאדם נפטר במצב מן העולם הזה כך חוזר במצב לעולם הבא. מי שנפטר חגר חוזר חגר. מי שנפטר סומא חוזר סומא. מי שנפטר חרש חוזר חרש. מי שנפטר אילם חוזר אילם. מי שנפטר גבן חוזר גבן. מי שנפטר דק חוזר דק או תכלול בעינו או גרב או ילפת או מרוח אשך ואחר כך יושב הקדוש ברוך הוא כרופא ומרפא אותם בפני כל באי עולם that is, just as a person dies from this world with his bodily infirmity, so also does he return in the world to come with his infirmity. Whoever died lame (or limping) returns also lame. Whoever died deaf returns also deaf. Whoever died mute returns also mute. Whoever died hunchbacked returns also hunchbacked. Whoever died withered returns also withered. Or whoever had a film over his eye, or had a dry or moist scab, or is ruptured (returns likewise): thereafter the holy blessed God sits as a physician and heals them before all people who come into the world, as it is said (Isa 57:19): "Peace, peace be to him who is far off and to him who is near, says the Lord, and I will heal him."

Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel makes himself heard in the preface to his commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, fol. 3, col. 1. 2., on the condition of man at his resurrection, as follows: השרש השביעי באיזה אופן יקומו המתים כי מאחר שהיה הגוף האנושי משתנה תמיד מיום אל יום כפי המזונות והדברים היוֹרדים עליו מחוץ ובפרט השתנות האדם מהילדות אל הנעירות וממנו אל הבחורות ואל הזקנה והשישיות ראוי שנדע באיזה מצב מהם יקומו האנשים בהחייה אם כצביוןם וקומתן ובחורותן או בזקנתן

היורדת על פי מדותם או איך יהיה זה והיתה התשובה בזה שבאותו אופן ומצב שהיה האדם במותו יקום בתחייתו אם בחרו ואם זקן עד שאמרו חכמים ז"ל שאפילו במומיהם שהיו להם בשעת המיתה יקומו והיה זה כדי שיהיו יותר ניכרין לבני אדם ויהפיעלו יותר מדבריהם כי זהו 'ענין' והשיב לב אבות על בנים ולב בנים על אבותם ועל זה אמר הנביא ישעיהו בנבואה הב ובלע ההר הזה פני הלוט הלוט על כל העמים ר"ל שיגלה הקב"ה אותם המכוסים בעפר הארץ ובלע ההר הזה פני הלוט הלוט על כל העמים ר"ל שכמו שנסתרו שמה כך יקומו: that is, the seventh foundation consists in the manner and condition in which the dead will rise; since the human body changes continually from one day to the next, according to the food and those things which come upon it from without, and in particular since man changes from childhood into boyhood, and from that into youth, and into the settled state of maturity, as well as old age and the state of advanced age, it is fitting that we know in which of these conditions men will rise at the resurrection: whether this will occur with their comeliness and in their bodily stature and in the condition of their youth, or of their old age, such as befits them according to their individual qualities, or how this will come to pass. The answer to this is that man will rise at his resurrection in that very state and condition in which he was when he died, whether he was young or old; so much so that our Sages, of blessed memory, have said that they will rise even with the defects they had at the time of their death. This will happen so that they may be the more recognized by men, and that those men may be moved all the more by their words; for this is the meaning of the words (Mal 4:6): "He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers." Concerning this, the Prophet Isaiah also said in his twentieth prophecy (Isa 25:7): "And He will destroy on this mountain the face of the covering that is cast over all peoples": that is, the Holy and Blessed God will uncover those who are covered and veiled with the dust of the earth; therefore mention is made of the covering and the veiled, in order to indicate that just as they are hidden there, so also shall they rise.

The rabbis also teach that the very same body which has died will rise again, in which they are not wrong; and on this subject there is written in the little book Abkath rochel, shortly after the beginning of the fourth part, the following: הרי לך מכל המקומות שיש להאמין שהקב"ה עתיד להחיות המתים ולנער אותם מעפרם ויקומו אותם הגופות ממש כפי אשר נכנסו יקומו כדי להאמין שהם אותם אשר מתו בתחלה והקב"ה יבנה אותם בנין גוף כאשר בתחלה וראיה לזה מתי יחזקאל. ואם תאמר מוטב יחזקאל מצא דבר על שיבנה שהרי הבקעה מלאה עצמות היתה ומתוך יסוד יוכל לקיים בנין. אבל אותם בעפר היום כמה שנים והעצמות נמחו ושבו עפר ולא נראה מהם שרש וענף הרי הקב"ה יקים בנין אחר מן העפר כענין בנין אדם הראשון דכתיב וייצר ה' אלהים את האדם עפר מן האדמה הרי שאינו אותו אשר מת אלא אחר ברא הקב"ה כדוגמתו של ראשון אשר מת וזה בנין אחר חדש אשר הקים מן העפר אל יעלה בלבך הדבר כי אדם אחר הוא שבנה אלא אותו ממש הוא שיקים ויבנה מהיסוד הראשון. ואף על פי שהעצמות נמחו עצם אחד נשאר מאדם שאינו מתכלה

לעולם ואינו מהרקב והוא העצם התחתון שבשדרה וקורין לו ר"ל הלזו רקב וגו' ועל זה העצם That is: Behold, from all the passages of Holy Scripture it is evident that one must believe that the holy blessed God will in the future bring the dead back to life and raise them up from their dust, and that those very same bodies will certainly rise again and come forth just as they went in, so that one may believe that they are the very same ones who previously died. And the holy blessed God will build for them the structure of the body as before, which is proven by the dead of Ezekiel (of whom mention is made in Ezek 37:1 and following). But if you wish to object and say: it is well and good (and I grant what concerns the dead of whom Ezekiel makes mention), Ezekiel found something upon which the body could be built, for behold, the plain was full of bones, and through the means of a foundation a structure can be erected. But as for those who have decayed for many years, whose bones have dissolved and turned to dust, and of whom neither root nor branch (that is, nothing at all) will be seen, the holy blessed God will raise up another structure from the dust, just as it happened with the structure of the first man, as it is written (Gen 2:7): "And the Lord God formed man from the dust of the ground." Therefore it will not be the same body that died, but the holy blessed God will create another one that will be like the former one that died, and it will be another new structure which He will raise up from the dust. (If you were to raise such an objection, I warn you) not to let such a thought enter your mind, that He will build a different man, but rather He will certainly raise up that very same body which existed before and build it from the original foundation. And even if the bones have decayed, one bone of a person nonetheless remains which never decays or rots, and it is the lowest bone in the spine, which our rabbis, of blessed memory, call Tarvad rakaf, and so on. Upon this bone the holy blessed God will in the future build the structure of the body and restore it to its former form.

Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel also teaches the following on this subject in his preface to his commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, fol. 2, col. 3. 4.: השרש השני שלא תהיה תחיית המתים בבחינת הנפש בלבד שתשוב להתקשר בגוף ושיהיה גוף אחר זולתי הנפסד שהיה ראשונה כמו שחשבו חכמי הנוצרים כי אם היה הדבר כן היה זה גלגול נפשות בגופות אחרים או הויה מחודשת לא תחיית המתים שכבר מתו אמנם האמונה התורנית היא שישב להתרכב הגוף הראשון מאותם היסודות שהיו בו באיכויותיהם וכמותם וכמוזג הראשון והנשמה שהיתה בו בראשונה ועל זה אמר בנבואה ה'א' כי כה אמר ה' אלי אשקטה ואביטה במכוני ר"ל שישקוט הנביא מהחיית העולם הזה שהוא רמז למות ואז ישוב להביט במכוני שהוא גופו That is: The second fundament consists in this, that the resurrection of the dead will not take place merely with respect to the souls, such that the soul would be reunited with a body and that it would be a different body than the one that had decayed, which was there before, as the wise men among the Christians maintain; for if the matter were to stand thus, this would be a transmigration of souls into other bodies, or a new existence, but not a resurrection of the dead who have died. The belief of the Law, however, consists in this: that the former body, composed of those very same elements of which it consisted, with their qualities and their quantity, as well as the former temperament, together with the soul that was previously in it, shall be reassembled; and concerning this he (namely Isaiah) said in the eleventh prophecy (Isa 18:4): "I will sit still and look upon my dwelling place," by which the Prophet meant that he would be at rest from the tumult of this world, which signifies death, and thereafter he would see his dwelling place, namely his former body, again, etc. On this subject one may also consult his book Ma'jane jeschua fol. 77, col. 2. in the eleventh Ma'jan, in the ninth Tamar, as well as the book Avodáth hakkódesch fol. 52, col. 4. and fol. 53, col. 1. in the 40th chapter under the title Chélek haavoda.

Since the beginning of this passage has already reported, in the first chapter of this second part, that according to the Jews' erroneous teaching, souls are supposed to be transferred from one body into another, but that at the time of the resurrection they must be reunited with their bodies, a dispute is conducted among the Rabbis, and the question is raised: since a soul can only be in one body at a time, will all the bodies in which the soul has been present rise again, or should only one of those bodies be raised, and which one will it be? It is therefore to be noted that those who previously among the Jews denied and rejected the transmigration and passage of souls from one body into another had raised, among other objections or objections against it, this one as well: that the transmigration of souls is a pure fiction, because at the resurrection of the dead a soul cannot be in many bodies at once, but must be in only one alone. This objection can be read in Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 163, col. 1, in the 15th chapter of the fourth Máamar, where four objections against the absurd teaching of the passage of souls into various bodies are to be found, of which this is the fourth. The aforementioned Rabbi Menasse answers this objection, however, in the 16th chapter that follows, fol. 164, col. 1, 2, in the following manner: ואמנם בהתר הטענה הרביעית השיב הרב דון יצחק אברבנאל שראוי שנאמין שבעת תחיית המתים הקומנה הנפשות בגופים הראשונים אשר ישבו בהם כי הדין הוא בעצם לנפש עם הגוף הראשון לגמול אותם כפי מעשיהם אם בשכר ואם בעונש ויהיו אלה לחי עולם ואלה לחרפות ולדראון עולם. ואמנם הגופים אשר באו בהם כדי לזכותם בהם או כדי להענישם בהם איך היה הדין בהם בהיותם כלי הרצון האלהי הנה באמת הדין בשכר ועונש הוא לנפש עם הגוף הראשון לא עם השאר. עד כאן הרב הנזכר אולם דרכי המקובלים רחוק ממנו. ראה נא במדרשו של הרש"י בראשית עמוד ש"א והראה איך הגוף לבד אשר בן זכה יקום בתחייה והשאר כלא היו ז"ל שם אמר רבי חזקיה אי תימא דכל גופין דעלמא יקומון ואתערון מעפרא אינון גופין דאתנטעו בנשמתא חדא מה תהא מינייהו

• אמר רבי יוסי אינון גופין דלא זכו ולא אצלחו הרי אינון כלא הוו כמה דהוו עץ יבש בהאי • עלמא הכי נמי בההוא זמנא . וגופא בתראה יקום דאינטע ואצלח ונטל שרשין כדקא יאות עליה כתיב והיה כעץ שתול על מים ועל יובל ישלח שרשיו ולא יראה כי יבא חום והיה יהיה עליהו רענן וגומר . ועל ההוא גופא קדמהא כתיב והיה כערער בערבה ולא יראה כי יבא טוב דא תחיית המתים . עד כאן דברי הרשב"י . אמנם עדיין צריכים אנו להודיע כי עדיין יש להקשות אם האדם זכה ועשה מצוות מכל מצוות השם אשר תעשינה בכל הגופים נראה שיש . עול בדבר שלא יקומו כל הגופים שזכו . אכן כפי דעת חכמי הקבלה התשובה היא מבוארת הם אמרו שהנשמה תתחלק לניצוצות והחלק הוא בכל דמיון המדליק נר מנר וכל ניצוץ יכנס בגוף כפי כנין הגופים אשר נבנו לזאת הנשמה וכולם יקומו לזמן התחייה . ולפי זה כל גוף וגוף יקבל גמול כפי מעשיו וכן כל ניצוץ וניצוץ בשכר ועונש המגיע לכל אחד ואחד . וזהו בכלל סוד העיבור אשר רמזתי לך במה שקדם . ונראה דכך הוא דעת המקובלים דאי לא תימא הכי היאך אפשר שימצאו דור וחמשת בזמן אחד והכתיב בשיכה סימן ה' והקימונו עליו שבעה רועים ושמנה נסיכי אדם . וארז"ל במסכת סוכה מאי נינהו שבעת רועים דוד באמצע שת וחנוך ומתושלח בימינו אברהם יצחק ויעקב משמאלו . ומאי נינהו שמנה נסיכי אדם ישי שאול That is: In resolving the fourth objection, Rabbi Don Isaac Abarbanel answered that it is fitting for us to believe that at the time of the resurrection of the dead, souls will rise with the first bodies in which they dwelt and resided, for the judgment is essentially exercised upon the soul together with the first body, so that they may be recompensed according to their works, either with reward or with punishment, and that some (namely the righteous) may enter into eternal life, and others (namely the wicked) into shame and eternal contempt. But as for the bodies into which they (successively) entered, so that they might be made righteous in them or punished in them, how should judgment be exercised upon them, seeing that they were vessels of the divine will? Behold, the judgment with reward or punishment is thus certainly carried out upon the soul together with the first body, and not with the remaining bodies. Thus far are the words of the said Rabbi. But the ways of the Kabbalists are very far removed from him (that is, they are by no means in agreement with him). Consult the Medrasch of Rabbi Schimon ben Jochai, of blessed memory, on the first book of Moses, in column 311, and you will see how only that body in which a person became righteous and pious will rise at the resurrection of the dead, while with the remaining bodies it will be as though they had never existed. There Rabbi Chiskia stated: if you were to say that all bodies in the world shall rise again and be awakened from the dust, what then will become of those bodies that were planted (that is, created) on account of a single soul? Rabbi Josi said: those bodies that were not righteous and pious, and did not prosper, are as though they had never existed; and so it will be with them at that time as well. But the last body will rise again, which was planted and prospered and spread its roots as was fitting. Of it is written (Jer 17:8): He is like a tree planted by the water, which stretches its roots toward the brook; it does not feel the heat when it comes, but its leaves remain green, etc. Of the preceding body, however, it is written (ibid., v. 6 of the said 17th chapter): He will be like a heath (or, according to others, like a tamarisk tree, or like a tree that is entirely bare) in the wilderness (or plain), and will not see when good comes, which good is the resurrection of the dead. Thus far are the words of Rabbi Schimon ben Jochai. We must, however, make known that one may still object against this: if a person had some merit and observed some commandments from among all the commandments of God that are to be kept, in all the bodies, it seems that it would be unjust if not all the bodies that had (through their good works) acquired some merit were to rise. The answer to this, according to the opinion of those who understand the Cabbala, is entirely clear: they say that the soul is divided into sparks, and that such a division is altogether like lighting one candle from another; and also that each spark enters into a body according to the number of bodies that were built for that soul, and that all of them will rise at the time of the resurrection of the dead. According to this teaching, therefore, each and every body will receive its recompense according to its works, and in like manner each and every spark will experience its reward or punishment that befalls each one; and this is comprised within the mystery of Ibbur (which is a kind of transmigration of souls, of which treatment was also given in the first chapter of this second part), which I indicated in what preceded; and it appears that this is the opinion of the Kabbalists. For if you do not speak thus, how could it be possible that David and the Messiah should be found at one and the same time (given that the soul of Adam passed into David, and from David comes into the Messiah, and these three have only one soul)? For it is written in Mic 5:5: And we will raise up (or appoint) against him seven shepherds and eight princes of men. Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, however, said in the Talmudic tractate Succa (fol. 52, col. 2): Who are those seven shepherds? David is in the middle, Seth, Enoch, Methuselah at his right hand, and Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob at his left hand. But who are those eight princes of men? Jesse, Saul, Samuel, Amos, Zephaniah, Hezekiah, Elijah, and the Messiah. It is therefore certain that this will come to pass through the Ibbur. We see, then, from all of this that, according to Abarbanel's opinion, the first body, and according to Rabbi Chiskia's teaching the last body, which conducts itself righteously, will rise again, while according to others every body in which a soul has resided will rise.

The rabbis also teach that after the resurrection, people will eat and drink and perform other bodily functions. The aforementioned Abarbanel expresses himself on this matter in his frequently cited preface to his commentary on the Prophet Esaias, fol. 3, col. 2, as follows: השרש השביעי שהקמים בתחייה יאכלו וישתו: וישתמשו בחושיהם כדעת הרב המיווני כי לא יהיו איבריהם וחושיהם לבטלה. וכבר באר זה הנביא ישעיה בנבואה הל"ה באמרו למען תינקו ושבעתם מישור תנחומיה למען המוצו והתענגתם מזיו כבודה: ואמר וראיתם ושל לבבכם ועצמותיכם כדשא תפרחנה, That is: The fourth fundamental principle consists in this, that those who rise at the resurrection of the dead will, according to the opinion of Maimon, eat and drink and make use of their senses, for their limbs and senses will not be in vain. The Prophet Esaias made this clearly known in his thirty-fifth prophecy, when he says (in chap. 66, v. 11): "For you shall suck and be satisfied from the breasts of her consolation; for you shall suck and delight yourselves from the brightness of her glory." Rabbi Saadias also writes on this matter in his Sepher haēmūnōth vebaddeōth, fol. 36, col. 3, under the title Maamar schevii Techiāth hammēthim, in the following manner: והששית אם יאכלו וישתו וישאו נשים ואמר: כן כמו שבן הצרפית אשר החיהו הכורא על ידי אליהו ובן השונמית על ידי אלישע אכלו ושתו ויתכן שנשא נשים, That is: The sixth (question consists in this) whether those (who rise from the dead) will eat and drink and take wives. I say yes, just as the son of the (widow) of Zarpath (of whom one may read in 1 Kgs 17:22), whom the Creator brought back to life through Elias, and the son of the Shunammite (who is mentioned in 2 Kgs 4:32 etc.), whom God raised up through Elisa, ate and drank and without doubt took wives.

The rabbis also dispute and argue greatly among themselves as to whether those who rise from the dead will die once more, or whether they will remain alive forever. Concerning this disagreement, Rabbi Joseph Albo in his Sepher Ikkarim fol. 152, col. 1., in the 35th chapter of the fourth Maamar, where he treats of the means by which the dead are to be raised, namely the aforementioned dew, provides the following instruction and writes: וזמנם יהיה: זה על איזה דרך שיהיה אם אותן המתים אחר שיהיו יאכלו וישתו ויולידו וימותו כדרך העולם או לא יהיה כן כבר ביארנו שהדבר הזה נחלקו בו גדולי האחרונים כי הרמב"ם ז"ל ורבים אשר אתו מחכמי ישראל אומרים שהמתים אחר שיחיו ישתמשו בכל הרגשותיהם החושיות כמנהג העולם ואחר ימותו וישבו לעפר. והר"מ ז"ל אומרים שאחר התחייה יחיו המתים מה שאפשר להם לחיות כפי טבעם ואחר יודכך גופם כאלוהו ויתקיימו בגוף ונפש ומן אז והלאה לא ישתמשו במורגשיהם ולא יאכלו ולא ישתו ולא ימותו ויתקיימו תמיד בלי אכילה ושתייה וגם יראה שהוא דעת קצת רבותינו ז"ל שאמרו מתים שעתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להחיות אינם חוזרים לעפרם. וזה הדעת גם כן אף על פי שיראה זר כבר אפשר שתבא האמונה בו כי כבר יצויר מציאותו אצל השכל והעיד עליו הנסיון במשה שנתקיים ארבעים יום וארבעים לילה בלי אכילה ושתייה אף על פי שמשה לא נתקיים תמיד בגוף כי מת בבוא עתו: That is: But let this come to pass in whatever manner it may (that the dead become alive again), and whether the dead, after they have risen, may eat and drink and beget children and die, according to the custom of the world, or whether it may not be so; we have already explained that the foremost among the later (rabbis) are in dispute on this matter; for Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, of blessed memory, and many of the sages of Israel who agree with him, say that the dead, after they become alive again, will make use of all their sensory faculties according to the custom of the world, and will thereafter return to their dust (and die). But Rabbi Mosche Haccoben and Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman, of blessed memory, state that the dead after the resurrection will live as long as it shall be possible for them to live according to their nature; thereafter their body will be purified, as happened with Elijah, and they will remain steadfastly in body and soul. From that time onward, however, they will no longer make use of those things that fall under the senses, and will no longer eat, nor drink, nor die, but will remain forever without eating and drinking. It also appears that this was the opinion of some of our rabbis, of blessed memory, who said that the dead whom the Holy and blessed God will raise will not return to their dust (and die). This opinion, though it may seem strange, can nonetheless be believed; for that it may be so, the understanding comprehends, and experience attests it in the case of Moses, who was forty days and forty nights (on Mount Sinai, as is to be read in Exod 34:28) without eating and drinking, even though Moses was not sustained in the body forever, for he died when his time had come.

Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 221, col. 3, in the Parashah Nizzavim, concerning the opinion of the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, in the following manner: דעת הרמב"ם ז"ל בענין תחיית המתים כי בני תחיית המתים יאכלו וישתו ויולידו כי הכלים שבהם לא יהיו לבטלה ויחיו ימים ארוכים ואחרי התחייה ימותו ויבאו לחיי העולם הבא הוא שמזכירין ז"ל תמיד מזומן לחיי העולם הבא הוא עולם הבא שאחר התחייה שעליו אמרו ר"ל העולם הבא אין בו לא אכילה ולא שתייה אלא נפשות בלא גופות שאם היו גופות הנה הכלים לבטלה כיון שאין משתמשין בהן בפעולות גופניות שהן אכילה ושתייה ותשמיש. ואם תאמר אין תימה בזה שהרי מצינו הפליאה במשה ואליהו שעמדו זמן בגופות בלא אכילה ושתייה כן תהיה הפליאה בבני העולם הבא שיתקיימו בגופות כקיום משה בגוף בהר סיני או כקיום אליהו אי אפשר לומר כן לפי שאם נתבטלו הכחות הגופניות ממשה ואליהו היה זה לפי שעה ואין בזה כלים לבטלה שהרי קודם הפליאה הוצרכו לכלים גם אחר הפליאה הוצרכו להם לא שבו אליהם ריקם אבל בבני העולם הבא שאין שם לא אכילה ולא שתייה שיבא הקב"ה עולם חדש ויהיו שם בגופות והכלים פועל בטל זה מן הנמנע כי אין מפועל חכם שיפעל דבר לבטלה. ולכך יש לכל משכיל להאמין שאין בפני העולם הבא גופות אלא נפשות בלבד זה כלל דעת הרב ז"ל והעולה מתוך דבריו. אמנם לא כן דעת חכמי התלמוד ויודעי הקבלה כי הם סוברים שאין מיתה אחר התחייה מנה שכתוב בלע המות לנצח ומה שדרשו ר"ל מתים שעתיד הקב"ה להחיות שוב אינן חוזרין לעפרן. ועל העולם שאחר התחייה אמרו ר"ל בברכות מרגלא בפומיה דרב העולם הבא אין בו לא אכילה ולא שתייה ולא קנאה ולא תחרות אלא צדיקים יושבין ועטרותיהן בראשיהן ונהנין מזיו השכינה והמאמר הזה יורה בוראי שיש שם גופות וזהו שאמרו אין בו לא אכילה ולא שתייה שאם לא היו שם גופות אין צריך לומר שאין בו לא אכילה ולא שתייה לנפשות ועל כן נאמין שיהיו בני העולם בגופות יתבטלו מהם הכוחות הגופניות כהתבטל

הכוחות ממשוה ואליהו ותתעלה נפשם על גופם כענין במשה ואליהו. ואפ' תקשה עוד ותאמר שיהיו הכלים לבטלה אין לבטלה מאחר שהם מקבלים השכר והתענוג בגוף ובנפש יחדו כשם שהשתדלו בקיום המצוות וטרחו בהן כאחד בגוף ובנפש שהרי אין הקב"ה מקפח שכר כל בריה ואינו רואה שיהיה הגוף עשוק במשפטו אלא רוצה הוא שיגמלוהו שכר בתענוג שאין לו סוף ושיהיה נעתק מעולם התחייה אל העולם הבא בגוף ובנפש. וכן דרשו ר"זל הקב"ה משיבועם מזיו שכינתו לעולם הבא שנאמר אשבעה בהקיץ תמונתך כלומר שיזכו להיותם שבעים מזיו השכינה בגופותם כקיום הנפש בעולם הזה באכילה ושתיה וכן דעת הרמב"ן ז"ל בשער הגטול וגו'. That is: the opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, of blessed memory, in the matter of the resurrection of the dead, consists in this: that those who are raised from the dead will eat and drink and beget children, since their vessels (that is, their bodily members) are not to be in vain, and that they will live for a long time, but after the resurrection will die again and enter the olam habbá, that is, the life of the world to come (and blessedness); and this is that of which the Sages, of blessed memory, continually make mention when they say of someone that he is appointed to the life of the world to come; and by olam habbá, or the world to come, is understood that life which will exist after the resurrection, concerning which our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: In the world to come there is neither eating nor drinking, but souls are without bodies; for if bodies were there at that time, the vessels would be in vain, since human beings will not use them for bodily acts, namely eating and drinking and cohabitation. But should you wish to say (and object) that one need not wonder at this, since we find a miracle in the case of Moses and Elijah, who remained in their bodies for a time without eating and drinking, and that such a miracle would likewise occur with the children of the world to come, who would subsist in their bodies just as Moses subsisted in his body on Mount Sinai, or as Elijah (of whom one reads in 1 Kgs 19:8) was sustained: (to this I reply) one cannot speak thus, for when the bodily powers ceased in Moses and Elijah, this happened only for a time, and in this matter the vessels were not in vain, since they had need of them both before and after the miracle, and the vessels were not idle. But that the children of the world to come (in which there is neither eating nor drinking, since the Holy and Blessed God will create a new world) should be in that world with their bodies, and the vessels should be an idle work, is impossible; for a wise craftsman makes nothing in vain. Therefore every person of understanding must believe that the children of the world to come will have no bodies, but only souls. This is the substance of the opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Majmon, of blessed memory, and that which follows from his words. But this is not the opinion of the Sages of the Talmud and of those who understand the Kabbalah, for they hold that after the resurrection there is no more death, since it is written (Isa 25:8): He will swallow up death forever. And because our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught that the dead whom the Holy and Blessed God will raise will not return

again to their dust (and be transformed into it through death), our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have also said in the (Talmudic tractate) Berachóth: There was a pearl (that is, a splendid teaching) in the mouth of Rab (when he said): In the world to come there is neither eating nor drinking, neither envy nor strife, but the righteous sit with their crowns upon their heads and enjoy the radiance of the divine Majesty; and this saying teaches with certainty that bodies will be present therein. And this is what they mean when they say that there is no eating or drinking therein; for if bodies were not present therein, it would not be necessary to say that souls do not eat or drink therein (since it is well known that souls take neither food nor drink). Therefore let us believe that the children of the world to come will have their bodies, in which the bodily powers will cease, just as the bodily powers ceased in Moses and Elijah; and their soul will be exalted above their body, as happened with Moses and Elijah. But if you further object and wish to say that the vessels will be in vain, (I reply) that they will not be in vain, since they receive the reward and the delight with the body and the soul together, just as they strove together with body and soul to keep the commandments and labored therein; for the Holy and Blessed God cuts off the reward of no creature, and does not look on while the body is oppressed in His judgment, but wills that the reward be repaid to it with an endless delight, and that the person be translated with body and soul from the world of the resurrection into the world to come. Thus our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have also explained it (when they state): He satisfies them with the radiance of His Majesty in the world to come, as it is said (Ps 17:15): I shall be satisfied when Your image awakens; as if (David) wished to say that they (namely those who are raised) will be worthy to be satisfied with the radiance of the Majesty of God in their bodies, just as the soul in this world is sustained by eating and drinking. And this is the opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman, of blessed memory, in his book Toráth (or Tóras) אדם adam, in the chapter on recompense (which is called Scháar bagemúl). These are the words of Rabbi Bechai.

Regarding the teaching and opinion of the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, it is to be found in his book Jad chasáka, in the first part, fol. 49, col. 2, under the title Hilchóth (or Hilchos teschúva, in the 9th chapter, numero 2), as well as in his little treatise on the resurrection of the dead, which is called Máamar téchiáth hammethím (or techiás hammélim), fol. 128, col. 3, and fol. 129, col. 3, in the Amsterdam edition in quarto, printed at the back of the book of the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche, which is called Séphers mizvóth. His erroneous teaching is, however, also refuted in the book Schené luchóth habberíth (or lúchos hábberis), fol. 20, col. 3, 4, and in the book Avodáth (or Avódas) hakkódesh, fol. 55, col. 2, 3, in the 43rd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda.

Likewise, Rabbi Saadiah also denies, in his Sepher häemunóth vehaddeóth, fol. 36, col. 2, under the title Máamar schevíí teciáth hamméthim, that those who rise from the dead will die again; the same is likewise to be found in the aforementioned book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 56, col. 2, in the cited 43rd chapter.

Those who rise from the dead shall also recognize their relatives and friends, concerning which Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel writes in his aforementioned preface to his commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, fol. 3, col. 2, as follows: השרש השמיני שהקמים בתחייה יכירו קרוביהם ואוהביהם כי להיות ההכרה מפועל הכחות הגשמיות הנה כשישובו לעולם בגופם ונפשם תומלם הכרתם וההכרה ההיא תהיה סבה להתפעלות בני אדם כשישובו לעולם בגופם ונפשם תומלם הכרתם וההכרה ההיא תהיה סבה להתפעלות בני אדם, That is: The eighth foundation consists in this, that those who rise at the resurrection shall recognize their relatives and friends; for since recognition derives from the operation of the bodily faculties, their recognition will be perfect when they return to the world in body and soul; and that same recognition will be the cause of a greater affection among men, for on that account they will rise with their defects (of the body, which they had previously), as has been explained. Rabbi Saadiah likewise expresses himself on this matter in his Sepher häemunóth vehaddeóth, fol. 36, col. 3, under the frequently cited heading Máamar schevíí teciáth hamméthim, as follows: ה' אם יכירו אנשי ביהם וקרוביהם מן החיים ואומר כי הנביאים יהחייב לעמת זה שיכירו קצתם את קצתם וכשיתחייב שיכירו בני האדם קצתם את אדם אל שבתו, That is: The fifth (question) is whether those (who rise) will be recognized by their household members and their relatives who are still living; I answer that, if it is concluded (and held) that men will recognize the prophets, and shepherds, and princes, it follows thereby that they will also recognize one another, and that every man will be joined to his tribe.

At the time of the resurrection, there will also no longer be any kings and princes among men, concerning which Abarbanel in his aforementioned preface to Esaiam fol. 3, col. 2. teaches as follows: השרש הי"ב שבדור התחיה לא יהיו עוד מלכים ולא שרים בין בני אדם אבל יהיו כלם שוים כמו שהיו בתחלת הבריאה כדור אדם כי לא יצטרכו למלכים לא לענין המלחמות לפי שיהיה שלום בארץ באין מחרדי ולא לענין המשפט כי המשפט לאלהים הוא והיה ה' למלך על כל הארץ וכבר נבא גם זה ישעיהו באותה פרשה שנית באמרו כי מציון תצא תורה ודבר ה' מירושלים ושפט בין הגוים והוכיח לעמים רבים וכתתו חרבותם לאתים וגו' ולא ישא גוי אל גוי חרב ולא ילמדו עוד מלחמה ואמר על זה רבים וכתתו חרבותם לאתים וגו' that is, the twelfth fundamental principle is that at the time of the resurrection there will no longer be any kings and princes among men, but they will all be equal to one another, as they were at the beginning of creation in the time of Adam; for they will have no need of kings, neither on account of wars (to conduct them), since there will be peace upon the earth and no one will frighten another, nor on account of judgment, since judgment will belong to God and the Lord will be King over the whole earth. This was also prophesied a second time by Esaias in that same Parascha (namely in the 2nd chapter), when he says (vv. 3-4): For from Zion the law will go forth, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And He will judge among the heathen and rebuke many peoples; then they will beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into sickles, &c., for no people will lift up a sword against another, and they will henceforth learn war no more. Concerning this he also said at the end of the Parascha (or of the 2nd chapter), v. 22: Cease from the man who has breath in his nostrils, for of what account is he?

The bones of human beings shall also sing a hymn of praise to the LORD God at the resurrection, concerning which the following is taught in Jalkut chadasch fol. 14, col. 1. numero 51. under the title Maschiach from the Sohar: גדולה השירה שיאמרו עצמותיו של אדם בתחיית המתים יותר ממה שאמרו ישראל על הים שהרי ישראל לא הזכירו את השם אלא לאחר שלש תיבות סי' כמוך באלים ה' אבל לעתיד כתיב כל עצמותי האמרנה ה' מי כמוך והיינו בתחיית המתים שיתקרבו העצמות יחד: that is, the hymn of praise which the bones of man shall sing at the resurrection of the dead will be greater than that which the Israelites sang at the sea, for behold, the Israelites did not mention the name Jehovah until after three words (in that they said, as is read in Exod 15:11:) Mi camócha baélím Jéhova, that is, Who is like unto thee among the gods (or the mighty ones), O Jehovah? But concerning the time to come it is written (Ps 35:10): All my bones must say, Jehova mi camócha, that is, LORD, who is like unto thee? And this shall come to pass at the resurrection of the dead, when the bones shall come together.

Chapter XVII.

In Which Is Shown What the Jews Teach and Believe Concerning the Last Judgment.

The Jews teach that God the Lord judges mankind at three distinct times: first, every year on New Year's Day, which falls on the first day of the month of Tishrei, or September of the civil year; second, when the soul of a person is separated from the body by temporal death; and third, in the future, when the great and terrible day of the Last Judgment shall come. For this reason, Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his book Nischmáth chájim fol. 44, col. 1. 2., in the 17th chapter of the first Maamar, in the following manner: גם כפי דעת הרמ"בן לאחר התחייה יהיה יום הדין הגדול והנורא וכפי מה שכתב בספר הגמול שלו יש לו להקדוש ברוך הוא שלשה מיני דינין בעולמו. הדין הראשון בכל שנה ושנה ביום ראש השנה אשר בו נדונין בני אדם איזו לחרב איזו לשלום איזו לרעב איזו לשובע ובריות בו יפקדו להזכירם לחיים ולמות. השני הוא לנשמה אחר פרידתה מן הגוף שאם זכתה יורשת גן עדן ואם לאו יורדת לגיהנם והעולם הזה נקרא מהרמ"בם עולם הבא ומהרמ"בן עולם הנשמות. השלישי יום הדין הגדול אחר שיחיו המתים שבו כל האדם נדון כפי מעשיו. עליו אמרו בפרק קמא דראש השנה בית שמאי אומרים ג' כתות ליום הדין אחת של רשעים גמורים ואחת של צדיקים גמורים ואחת של בינוניים. צדיקים גמורים נכתבים ונחתמים לחיי העולם הבא. רשעים גמורים נכתבים ונחתמים לאלתר לגיהנם שנאמר ורבים מישיני אדמת עפר יקיצו אלה לחיי עולם ואלה לחרפות ולדראון עולם. בינוניים יורדים ומצפצפין ועולין שנאמר והבאתי את השלישית באש ועליהם אמרה חנה ה' ממית ומחיה מוריד שאול ויעל. ובית הלל אומרים ורב חסד מטה כלפי חסד ועליו אמר דוד אהבתי כי ישמע ה' וכו' 'עד דלותי ולי יהושע. וכן פירש רש"י ז"ל שלש כתות ליום הדין יום מועד הוא לדון הכל הוא שכתוב עליו יום ה' הגדול והנורא. וכן קיימו וקבלו הגאון רבי סעדיה ורבי חסדאי ושאר החכמים כלם שהתכלית הפלא העצום מהתחייה יהיה לעמוד בדין ולקבל כל אחד ואחד גמול מעשיו הטובים או ליענש על חטאתו: וזהו זה שהיות העובד הגוף והנפש יחד בחבור אחד לא הסבול שורת הדין שהנשמה לבדה תקבל שכר עבודתה מבלי גוף. ולכן כאשר הנשמות ישובו להתקשר בתחיית המתים עם גופותיהם אזי יבאו ויראו אל פני האדון ה' צבאות ויעמדו לדין לתת לאיש חסיד כמפעלו ליתן That is: According to the opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman as well, after the resurrection of the dead there shall be the day of the great and terrible judgment; and according to what he wrote in the treatise on Gemul, or retribution (in his book Torath haadam fol. 89, col. 3. 4.), the holy and blessed God has three kinds of judgments in His world. The first judgment is held every year on New Year's Day, and in it a verdict is pronounced over mankind: who shall be given over to the sword (and be subject to war), who shall enjoy peace, who shall suffer hunger, and who shall eat their fill; and in it mankind is visited, so that mention is made of them for life and for death. The second judgment is rendered over the soul after it has been separated from the body: for if it is worthy, it inherits Paradise; but if not, it descends into Hell; and this world (that is, such a state of souls) is called by Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon the world to come, but by Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman the world of souls. The third judgment is held on the day of the great judgment, after the dead are made alive again, in which every person is judged according to his works. Concerning this, it is reported in the first chapter of the Talmudic tractate Rosch haschana (fol. 16, col. 2.) as follows: those of the house (or school and sect) of Schammai say that there will be three groups of people on the day of judgment: one of those who are entirely wicked (that is, who have done more evil than good, as can be seen in the Tosephoth at the last-cited place in the Talmud); another of those who are entirely righteous (that is, who have done more good than evil); and the third will consist of those who are middling (who are neither entirely righteous nor entirely wicked, but have done as much good as evil). The entirely righteous will be written up and sealed (or recorded) for the life of the world to come (that is, for eternal life). The entirely wicked will immediately be written up and recorded for Hell, as it is said (Dan 12:2): "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." But the middling descend (into Hell) and cry out (over the punishment they must endure) and come back up again, as it is said (Zech 13:9): "And I will bring that third part through the fire." Of these also did Hannah speak (1 Sam 2:6): "The Lord kills and makes alive; He brings down to the grave and brings up again." But those of the house (and school) of Hillel say (that such middling persons do not descend into Hell) and that the very merciful God deals with them according to His mercy (and causes the scale, on which on one side the good works and on the other the evil works are weighed against each other, to tip and outweigh on the side of the good works). And of this did David speak (Ps 116:1-6): "I love the Lord, because He has heard my voice and my supplications, etc." down to (the words of v. 6): "I was brought very low, but He saved me." Thus also did Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, of blessed memory, interpret it: that on the day of the (great) judgment there will be three groups, and that such a day will be an appointed day to judge all (mankind); and this is the one of which it is written (Joel 2:31 and Mal 4:5): "(Before there comes) the great and terrible day of the Lord." This was also confirmed by Rabbi Saadias, together with Rabbi Chaldai and all the other sages, and they learned through tradition that the purpose of the mighty wonder of the resurrection of the dead is directed toward standing before judgment, and that each and every one shall receive the recompense of his good works, or be punished on account of his sins; for since the body and soul of the one who serves (God) are together in one bond, the order of judgment does not permit that the soul alone should receive the reward of its service without the body. Therefore, when the souls at the resurrection of the dead are reunited with their bodies (and joined together again), they will then come and appear before the face of the Lord, the Jehovah of hosts, and stand before judgment, in order to grant the pious person good things according to his works, but to repay the wicked person evil according to his wickedness. Shortly thereafter, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel expresses himself further at fol. 45, col. 1. as follows: וכן קיימו כל המפרשים שהדין הראשון הוא לגוף: וזהו הכליתי בלבד בעולם הזה. והשני לנפש בלבד בעולם הגשמות והשלישי לנפש ולגוף יחד והוא הכליתי That is: Thus have all the other commentators also confirmed that the first judgment is held over the body alone (and over bodily matters) in this world; that the second is rendered over the soul alone in the world of souls; but that the third concerns both body and soul together, and that this is the purpose of the resurrection of the dead.

As for what concerns the judgment over physical things, which, as mentioned, is to be held on New Year's Day, the following is written about it in the aforementioned Talmudic tractate Rosch haschana fol. 16, col. 1.: בארבעה פרקים העולם נדון בפסח על התבואה בעצרת על פירות האילן. בראש השנה כל באי העולם עוברים לפניו כבני מרון שנאמר היוצר יחד לבם המבין אל כל מעשיהם. ובחג נידונין על המים: that is, At four fixed times the world is judged: at Easter over the grain; at Pentecost over the fruits of the trees; on New Year's Day all who come into the world pass before Him (namely, GOD the LORD) like lambs (that is, as can be seen in Rabbi Solomon's commentary on the aforementioned tractate Rosch haschana, fol. 18, col. 1., like sheep when they are counted so that the tithe may be taken from them, which pass one after another through a small gate so that they cannot run out all at once, concerning which the said Rabbi Solomon's exposition on Lev 27:32 may also be read); but at the Feast of Tabernacles they are judged concerning water. Shortly thereafter, the following further appears in the same place: תניא הכל נידונים בראש השנה וגזר דין שלהן נחתם: ביום הכפורים. דברי רבי מאיר. רבי יהודה אומר הכל נידונין בראש השנה וגזר דין שלהן נחתם כל אחד ואחד בזמנו. בפסח על התבואה בעצרת על פירות האילן בחג נידונין על המים ואדם נידון בראש השנה וגזר דין שלו נחתם ביום הכפורים. רבי יוסי אומר אדם נידון בכל יום שנאמר ותפקדנו לבקרים. רבי נתן אומר אדם נידון בכל שעה שנאמר לרגעם תבחננו: that is, We have learned in a Barajetha that all (people) are judged at the beginning of the year, and that the decree of judgment is sealed on the Day of Atonement. These are the words of Rabbi Meir. Rabbi Jehuda says that all (people) are judged at the beginning of the year, and that each decree of their judgment is sealed at its appointed time: at Easter (they are judged) over the grain, at Pentecost over the fruits of the trees, at the Feast of Tabernacles over water; but man is judged at the beginning of the year, and the decree of his judgment is sealed on the Day of Atonement. Rabbi Jose says that man is judged every day, because it is said (Job 7:18): Thou visitest him every morning. Rabbi Nathan says that man is judged every hour, because it is said (in the aforementioned chapter 7, v. 18): Thou triest him every moment.

Regarding the future day of the great and terrible judgment, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse proves from many ancient books that it will certainly come to pass, when he, in the cited passage, fol. 44, col. 2 and fol. 45, col. 1, breaks forth into these words: וכאשר עיינתי בדברי רבותינו זכרונם לברכה: למצוא חפץ האמת יגעתי ומצאתי מורגל בפיהם היום הדין הזה. וכן יונתן בן עוזיאל על פסוק שופך דם האדם באדם דמו ישפך תרגם מרי עלמא עתיד לאתפרעה מיניה ליום דינא רבא וכל גם על פסוק כי לא ינקה ה' את אשר ישא את שמו לשוא ותרגם ארום לא מזכי ה' ביום דינא רבא ועל פסוק נקה לא ינקה פוקד עון אבות וכו' תרגם ודלא הייבין לא מזכי ביום דינא רבא גם בספר קהלת על פסוק מה שהיה כבר הוא וגו' תרגם מה דהוה מן קדמת דנא כבר הוא דאותי מה דעתיד למהוי בסוף יומיא כבר הוא וליום דינא רבא דעתיד ה' למהבע חשיכא ומסכנא מן ידוהי דרשיעא דדדיף ליה. ועל פסוק כי את כל מעשה האלהים יביא במשפט על כל נעלם תרגם ארום ית כל עובדא ה' יעיל ליום דינא רבא וכו': ובספר תהלים על פסוק לא יקומו רשעים במשפט תרגם לא יזכון ביום דינא רבא. וכן רבו מלספור המקומות אשר בהם מזכיר יום הדין הגדול והנורא הזה. גם במדרשי רבותינו תמצא מפורש ומבואר באר היטב ענין האמונה הזאת. הם אמרו במסכת חגיגה פרק א' על פסוק ויאמר שמואל אל שאול למה הרגזתני להעלות אותי. רבי אלעזר כי הוא מטי להאי קרא בכי ומה שמואל הנביא היה מתיירא מיום הדין אנו על אחת כמה וכמה. וכן פירש ידידיה האלכסנדרי שחשב שהגיע זמן התחייה והגמול עוד אמרו במדרש בראשית רבה אמר רבי שמעון בן אלעזר אינו לנו מיום הדין אינו לנו מיום התוכחה. בלעם חכם של גויים לא היה יכול לעמוד בתוכחת אבותיו שנאמר ההסכן הסכנתי לעשות לך כה ויאמר לא יוסף קטון של שבטים היה ולא יכלו אחיו לענות אותו כי נבהלו מפניו. לכשיבא הקדוש ברוך הוא ויוכיח עם כל אחד ואחד לפי מעשיו על אחת כמה וכמה שנאמר אוכיחך ואערכה לעיניך. גם במדרש שוחר טוב על פסוק לא יקומו רשעים במשפט גזרו אומך אלה הם ארבע מלכיות שאין להם הקמת רגל ליום הדין. ובמזמור ל"א על פסוק יבושו יובחלו מאור כל אויבי אמר רבי יוחנן לעתיד לבוא הקב"ה דן את הרשעים ומחזירן לגיהנם לכך נאמר ישובו יבושו. וכן במזמור ק"ט על פסוק על כן אהבתי תורתך מזהב ומפז אמרו כך אמר דוד אוהב אני תורתך יותר מכל זהב ופז למה לפי שאין עומד לא הממון והזהב והפז ביום הדין. ובמזמור ק"נ פן יאמר זכיתי לבי וגו' מי יוכל לומר ביום הדין זך אני טהור אני מעווני אין אדם יכול לעמוד וכה"א ומי מכלכל את יום בואו ומי העומד בהראותו ומי יוכל לעמוד ביום הדין. גם במדרש משלי אמר רבי ישמעאל בא וראה כמה קשה יום הדין שעתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לדון את כל העולם בעמק יהושפט וכיון שתלמידי חכמים באים לפניו ואומר לפניו כלום עסקת בתורה אמר הן אמר לו הקדוש ברוך הוא הואיל והודית אמור לפניי שקרית ומה ששנית. מכאן אמרו: כל מה שקרא אדם יהא תפוש בידו ומה ששנה יהא תפוש בידו שלא תשיגהו כלימה ליום הדין. היה רבי ישמעאל אומר אוי לאותה בושא אוי לאותה כלימה וגו'. וכן דעת הרמב"ן הוא שמזה הדין הגדול אמרו במשנה בפרק חלק דור המבול אין

להם חלק לעולם הבא אבל עומדין בדין. ובמכילתא אמרו אם תזכו לשמור את השבת תנצלו מגזרת פורענויות ומיומו של גוג ומחבלו של משיח ומיום הדין הגדול: that is, after I had also looked into the words of our Rabbis, of blessed memory, in order to find the pleasing truth, I applied myself with diligence and found that they are accustomed to make much mention of this day of judgment. Thus Jonathan ben Uziel also translated the words (Gen 9:6), "Whoever sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed," in his Chaldean rendering as: "The Lord of the world will take vengeance upon him on the day of the great judgment," etc. Likewise he translated the words (Exod 20:7), "For the Lord will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain," as: "For the Lord will not hold him guiltless on the day of the great judgment." And the words (Num 14:18), "He leaves no one unpunished, and visits the iniquity of the fathers," etc., he rendered as: "And those who do not repent He will not hold guiltless on the day of the great judgment." In the book of Ecclesiastes he also translated the words (Eccl 3:15), "That which has been is now," etc., as: "That which was before this time is now that which is to come; what will happen at the end of days has already happened, and on the day of the great judgment the Lord will require an account from the wicked man who has oppressed the poor and needy." And the words (Eccl 12:14), "For God will bring every work into judgment, including every hidden thing," he rendered as: "For the Lord will bring every work before the day of the great judgment," etc. Likewise in the book of Psalms he translated the words (Ps 1:5), "The wicked shall not stand in the judgment," as: "They shall not be found innocent on the day of the great judgment." And thus there are countless passages in which he makes mention of the work of this day of the great and terrible judgment. You will also find the matter of this article of faith set forth wholly clearly and plainly in the Midrashim (that is, the allegorical or figurative expositions) of our Rabbis. They said in the (Talmudic) tractate Chagiga, in the first chapter (fol. 4, col. 2.), concerning the words (1 Sam 28:15), "But Samuel said to Saul, Why have you disturbed me by bringing me up?", that Rabbi Eliezer, when he came to this verse, wept and said: "If the prophet Samuel feared the day of judgment, how much more must we fear it." And Jedidja of Alexandria explained it in the same way, that Samuel had thought the time of the resurrection and of recompense had arrived, and that this was why he was afraid. Furthermore, they report in the Midrash Bereshit Rabbah that Rabbi Simeon the son of Eliezer said: אוי לנו מיום הדין (woe to us because of the day of judgment! woe to us because of the day of reproof!). Balaam, the wisest among the Gentiles, could not withstand the reproof of his donkey, as it is recorded (Num 22:30) that she said to him: "Have I ever been accustomed to do this to you?" and he said, "No." Joseph was the youngest among the tribes, and his brothers could not answer him, for they were dismayed before his face. When then the Holy One, blessed be He, shall come and reprove every single person according to his works, how much more shall each one be dismayed, as it is said (Ps 50:21): "I will reprove you and set it in order before your eyes." In the Midrasch Schochar Tov (which is a figurative exposition of the Psalms) it is also recorded, concerning the words (Ps 1:5), "The wicked shall not stand in the judgment," that by these wicked ones the four Monarchies are to be understood, which on the day of judgment will not be able to stand upon their feet. And in the 31st Psalm (there in the said book Midrasch Schochar Tov, fol. 25, col. 3.), concerning the words (Ps 6:11), "Let all my enemies be put to shame and greatly terrified," it is recorded that Rabbi Jochanan said: "In the time to come the Holy One, blessed be He, will judge the wicked and cause them to be turned back into hell; therefore it is said: they shall turn back and be put to shame." Likewise it is recorded there in the said Midrash, in the 119th Psalm, concerning the words (Ps 119:127), "Therefore I love your commandments above gold and above fine gold," that David spoke thus: "I love your commandments more than gold and fine gold. Why? Because wealth, and gold, and fine gold cannot stand on the day of judgment." And in the 143rd Psalm (there) it is recorded, concerning the words (Prov 20:9), "Who can say, I have made my heart clean?" as: "Who can say on the day of judgment, I am pure, I am clean from my transgression? No man can stand." And thus the Scripture says (Mal 3:2): "But who can endure the day of His coming? And who can stand when He appears? And who will be able to stand on the day of judgment?" Rabbi Ishmael also said in the Midrasch Mischle (which is a figurative exposition of the Proverbs of Solomon): "Come and see how severe the day of judgment is, on which the Holy One, blessed be He, will judge the entire world in the valley of Jehoshaphat. And when the disciples of the wise come before Him, He will say to each one: 'Did you also study in the Law?' and he will answer yes. Then the Holy One, blessed be He, will say to him: 'Since you have done so, tell me what you have read and what you have repeated.' From this they (namely the Rabbis) have said: whatever a man has read, by that he will be held accountable; and whatever he has repeated, by that he will be held accountable, so that no shame may befall him on the day of judgment." Rabbi Ishmael said: "O woe to that shame! O woe to that disgrace!" etc. Likewise Rabbi Moses bar Nachman is of the opinion that mention is made of this great judgment in the Mishnah (of the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin), in the chapter Chelek (which is the eleventh chapter), where it is said: "The generation of the flood (that is, the people who lived at the time of the flood) have no share in the world to come (or eternal life) and do not stand in the judgment. The people of Sodom have no share in the world to come, but they do stand in the judgment." And in the book Mechilta it is said: "If you are faithful to observe the Sabbath, you will be delivered from the decree of punishments, and from the day of Gog, and from the birth-pangs of the Messiah (that is, from the sufferings which one must endure at the time of the Messiah), as well as from the great judgment."

Although all of the foregoing makes it clear that the ancient Jews taught that God will hold a great day of judgment in the future and will judge all people without distinction, Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel is nevertheless of an entirely different opinion, and he expresses himself in his book Májene jescbúa, fol. 47, col. 4, and fol. 48, col. 1, 2, 3, 4, under the title Májan schemini, támar schevit, on the words of Dan 7:10, "The judgment was held (or seated itself), and the books were opened," to the following effect: לביאור זה ראוי לדעת שהרמב"ן כתב בשער הגמול אשר לו שיש אצלנו ג' דינים הדין האחד הוא בעולם הזה ביום ראש השנה מדי שנה בשנה ועליו אמר שלשה ספרים נפתחים בראש השנה אחד של צדיקים גמורים ואחד של רשעים גמורים ואחד של בינוניים וגו' והדין הזה הוא בלבד לגוף בעיניים הגשמיים והרעב והדבר והחרב כמו שנזכר בתפלת מוסף של אותו היום. והדין השני הוא בצאת הנשמה מן הגוף שהיא נידונה כפי מעשיה אשר עשה אם לזכות לירש גן עדן ואם לחובה לרשת גיהנם ואם היה בינוני יהיה נטרד מן העונג ימים אחדים עד אשר יזכר נפשו מעונותיה מתוך היסורים אז השם יתברך יטה כלפי חסד וירחמול עליה וידינה לכף זכות. והדין הג' הוא לעתיד לבוא למתים שיקומו בהחייה וישפוט ה' כל הקמים מי הוא חייב ומי הוא זכאי וישכיר את הצדיקים ויעניש את הרשעים והוא יום הדין הגדול שקרא הנביא יום ה' הגדול והנורא ועליו אמר הכתוב כי ידין ה' עמו. והנביא אמר נצב לריב ה' ועומד לדין עמים ושמואל היה מתיירא כשהעלהו הבעלת אוב שמה היה נקרא לדין וכמו שדרשו חז"ל על למה הרגזתני להעלות אותי. ואמרו במכילתא על זה אם תזכו לשמור את השבת תנצלו מגזירת פורעניות ומימו של גוג ומגוג ומחבלו של משיח ומיום הדין הגדול. ומזה הדין אמרו בפרק קמא של ראש השנה בית שמאי שנאמר אומרים שלש כתות ליום הדין של צדיקים גמורים ושל רשעים גמורים ושל בינוניים וגו' ושעל דין זה אמר כאן דניאל דינא יתיב וספרין פתיחו זהו דעת הרמב"ן והוא עצמו דעת הגאון רבי סעדיה שקדמו ברעות האלה וגם רבים מחכמי עמנו שהיו לפניו ולאחריו. אבל אחרי בקשת המחילה מכבוד תורתם אין רוחי נוחה בדבריהם ואין דעתי סובל דבר זה לפי שאם רצו בדין השלישי הזה בענין שאד הדינן שישב הקב"ה ופלא ומאזני משפט בידו לשקול ולפלא זכויות כל אדם ועונותיו ולפסוק הדין זה זכאי וזה חייב הנה לא ידעתי דין הג' ההוא כי כיון שכבר בשעת המיתה נדון ונגזר אם לזכות אם לחובה בין שיהיה מתן שכרו וענשו מיד בעולם הנשמות כדעת הרב הגדול המיימוני שהוא הטוב והיושר בעיני אלהים ואדם או שנאמר שתהיה נפשו ערוכה בכל ושמורה בגן עדן ולא תקבל שכרה עד אלה דור לזמן התחייה ולא נתקיים בה ביומו תתן שכרו כדעת הרמב"ן אין ספק בין להא ובין להא שכבר נגמר הדין לכל אדם במותו אם לגמול אם לעונש ולמה אם כן יכנס באחרית הימים פעם אחרת בדין שלישי ואם אחרי הדין הג' ההוא עשה מצוה או עבירות לשידון עליהם. או אם אפשר שמי שנמצא זכאי באותו דין השני אחרי מותו ימצא חייב באותו דין השלישי האחרון. או בהפך שמי שנתייב בשני יזכה בשלישי. זה בלתי אפשר כי הם הימים אשר אין בהם חפץ לא לזכות ולא לחובה כדבריהם ז"ל ומלבד שהסבא לא תסבלוה הנה עוד לא נמצא בכתוב ולא בדבריהם ז"ל דבר מורה עליו לפי שמה שאמר כי ידין ה' עמו עינינו שינקום נקמתן מאויביו וכן נצב לריב ה'

ועומד לדין עמים כבר באר הדין ההוא שהוא הריב שיריב את קובעיהם נפש וביאור זה הדין ומשפט פעמים יאמרו על פסק דין וגזרת המשפט אשר יגזור הדיין כמו דני אלהים. דין לא דנו. ושפטתי בין איש ובין רעהו. ופעם יאמר דין ומשפט על העונש אשר יענש בו הרשע. כי לפי שהוא נמשך משורת הדין וגזרת המשפט יקרא בשמו. וכבר זכרו זה המדקדקים והביאו מזה השמוש לא ידון רוחי באדם. ויהי כל העם נדון. ובענין המשפט ובאלהיהם עשה ה' שפטים כאשר נשפטתי את אבותיכם ורבים ככה. ומזה המין הוא מה שנבא יואל וקבצתי את כל הגוים והורדתי אל עמק יהושפט ונשפטתי שם עמהם על עמי ועל נחלתי ישראל אשר פזרו בגוים ואת ארצם חלקו וגו' וכענין הייעוד הזה שבזמן ביאת משיחנו יעשה ה' ית' נקם בכל הגוים אשר הרעו לישראל וגם המתים יקיצו ויעורו משנתם כדי שיקבלו עונשם לעיני החיים. ואחשוב שלכן אמר אל עמק יהושפט לא שכל הגוים מכל פנות העולם יבאו ויתחברו שמה כי לא תכיל אותם הארץ אבל לפי שהיה המשפט הזה שזכר קבלת העונש המופלג באיזה מקום שיהיה יקרא עמק יהושפט מפני שיעמיק שם משפטן וענשן וזהו יום הדין הגדול הנזכר בדבריהם ז"ל במאמר הנביא הנה יום בא בוער כתנור וקראו יום ה' הגדול והנורא לפי שבו יתגלה משפטו וענשו לא שישב על כסא דין לראות איזהו זכאי ואיזהו חייב. אמנם מה שאמרו שממואל היה מתירא שמה נקרא לדין לא כווננו על הדין הגדול לעתיד לבוא כי הוא היה נאמן נביא לה' ולא נפל מכל דבריו ארצה ואיך יטעה בחשבוננו להיות מן הזמן ההוא עד התחייה כשלושת אלפים שנה. וגם כי לדעת הרב התנחני יהיה יום הדין אחר התחייה ואם שמואל עדיין לא חיה ולא קם מקברו בתחייה איך יחשוב שהיה נקרא לדין. אבל הם כווננו לומר כי לפי שהיה זה בתוך שנים עשר חדש לקבורתו חשב שמה נקרא לדין באותו דין שני שהאדם נידון בהפרד נפשו מגופו שהוא באותם שנים עשר חרש ואמנם הבריאה שבא בפרק קמא של ראש השנה ג' תחת ליום הדין שפירשן והרמב"ן גם כן על אותו הדין השלישי אשר אמרו חוץ ממעלת כבוד תורתם לא נאמרה הבריאה הזאת כי אם על הדין שנעשה לכל אדם במותו. וכן פ"י הדבר טורדוס הלוי בחדושו למסכת ראש השנה שכתב ז"ל שלש תחת ליום הדין זהו מיד אחר המות הנה שכן אדם נתן כפי סעיפי וכן פירשה בעל הספר המכתב בפרושו לאותה גמרא. והמופת החותך על זה שונה בימינו ז"ל לא מצאנו כי אם שניה ב' דיינין הא' של ראש השנה באותם ג' ספרים הנפתחים והשני בבריאה הזאת. ואם יפרשוהו על הדין הג' לא יהיה לנו אם כן לדבריהם פסק 'באותה ליום הדין ליום הדין השני הנעשה להם אחר המות והוא זה מאד. ושוב שנאמר שהב' דיינין אשר זכרו הם הראשון והשני אשר זכרתי לפי שלא קיימו שזנה ה"ס אנה האדם אחרי מותו כי אם פעם אחר ולא ישנה לו ואמנם החיין העתיד לבוא יגיש קצת שמי שבעה התחיה ה' יחפוץ למען צדקו שיראו בני אדם כולם בעוניהם הגשמיים שכן הצדיקים ועליהם אמר המלאך לדניאל והמשכילים יזהירו כזוהר הרקיע להגיד שאותם הקמים יהיו פניהם נארים ומזהירים כספירים לאות על דביקותם בזיו השכינה וסיראו גם הרשעים בעונשם דעליהם אמר ישעיה ויצאו וראו בפגרי האנשים הפושעים בי וכו'. ועל שתי הכתות נאמר לדניאל ורבים מישני אדמת עפר יקיצו אלה לחיי עולם ואלה לחרפות ולדראון עולם וכמו שיתבאר עוד אחרי זה. ולא נזכר בזה שום דין ולא במקום אחר שזכרה התורה התחייה נזכר בכתוב בלשון דין ומה שקראוהו חז"ל יום הדין ענינו יום המשפט והנקמה אשר ועשה ה' לעיני כל בשר באופן שיכירו וידעו כל יושבי תבל ושוכני ארץ כי יש אלהים שופטים בארץ ויאמרו דאן צדיק כי טוב כי פרי מעלליהם יאכלו. אוי לרשע רע כי גמול ידיו יעשה לו. זאת היא אמתה הפנה הזאת וכבר הרחבתי בה המאמר בביטול כל הטענות אשר זכר הרמ"ב בזה המאמר צדק עולמים אשר לו. ותצא לנו מזה שאמר כאן דניאל דינא יתיב וספרין פתיחו לא כיון לדבר מתחיית המתים כי עדיין לא נתבארה לו ענינה כי אם במראה הרביעית וכמו שיתבאר בעזרת השם אבל הדין שזכר כאן הוא העונש שיעניש הק"ב את האומות ויבטל ממשלתם בזמן ביאת

משיחנו. והשלטנות והממשלה שתקבל האומה כי כל זה נכלל בשם הדין. וכן תמצא שאמר אחרי זה עד די אתה עתיק יומיא ודינא יהיב לקדישי עליונים כי אמר דינא יתיב על השלטנות והכבוד שיתן לישראל ואותו קרא בשם דין. והוא המוכיח שענין הדין הוא השכר וגם כן העונש אשר יבא על האויבים ולפי שיהיה ביום ועונשם כפי מעשיהם ודבריהם הרעים לכן אמר דינא יתיב וספרין פתחו רוצה לומר הנה עתה בעולם כל האלים גבר ולית דין ולית דיין לפי שאין ה"ב משגיח בעולמו בהשגחתו הפרטית ועזב את הארץ להנהגת השרים העליונים. אבל כי יקום אל האחד במשפט ידו ימשכו עניני העולם כפי שורת הדין וספרי המעשים הראשונים יפתחו לפניו והוא על דרך וכל מעשיך בספר נכתבים. או שיהיו הספרים ספר הזכות וספר החובה וימשך מזה מה שיזכור אחריו מהרבן האומות והשחתתם וגאולת האומה די לא תתחבל

That is: For the explanation of this, one must know that Rabbi Moses bar Nachman (in his book Toráth adam) wrote in the chapter on retribution that there are three kinds of judgment. The first judgment is in this world, every year at the beginning of the year, and that he (namely the prophet Daniel) spoke of it when he said that three books are opened at the beginning of the year: the first is for the entirely righteous, the second for the entirely wicked, and the third for those of middling conduct, etc.; and this judgment concerns only the body, in bodily matters, and hunger, and pestilence, and the sword, just as is to be seen in the additional prayer of that day (which is called in Hebrew Músaph schel rosch haschána). The second judgment is when the soul departs from the body, and it is judged according to its deeds: either it is declared innocent (or righteous) and inherits Paradise, or it is held guilty (and wicked) and inherits Hell. But if the person was of middling conduct (and did as much good as evil), he is kept away from the delight of Paradise for a certain time and withheld from it, until he purifies his soul from its sins through punishment; whereupon the blessed God deals with that soul according to His goodness, has mercy upon it, and judges it on the side of innocence. The third judgment, however, will come in the future upon the deceased, who will rise again at the resurrection of the dead; and the Lord will judge all who rise, which of them is guilty or innocent, and will reward the righteous but punish the wicked; and this is the day of the great judgment, which the prophet called the great and terrible day. Of this same day the Scripture also said (Deut 32:36): "For the Lord will judge His people." And the prophet (Isaiah) reported (Isa 3:13): "But the Lord stands up to contend, and has risen to judge the peoples." And that Samuel feared, when the sorceress brought him up (as is to be seen in 1 Sam 28:7 etc., since he was of the opinion) that he might perhaps have been summoned before the judgment, just as our sages of blessed memory interpreted the words (v. 15 of the same passage): "Why have you disturbed me by bringing me up?" Of this it is also said in the book Mechilta: If you are righteous and keep the Sabbath, you will be delivered from the decree of punishment, and from the day of Gog and Magog, and from the sufferings which must be endured in the time of the Messiah, as well as from the day of the great judgment. Of this judgment it was also said in the first chapter of the Talmudic tractate Rosch haschána (fol. 16, col. 2): those of the house (and school) of Shammai say that there will be three groups of people on the day of judgment, namely the entirely righteous, and the entirely wicked, and those of middling conduct, etc.; and that Daniel here made mention of this judgment (when he says): "The judgment seated itself, and the books were opened." This is the opinion of Rabbi Moses bar Nachman; and it is likewise the opinion of the excellent Rabbi Saadia, who preceded him (Rabbi Moses) in these views, as well as of many sages of our people who lived before and after him. But, begging pardon of the honor of their learning, my mind is not at ease with their words, and my understanding cannot tolerate this matter: for if by this third judgment, in the manner of the other judgments, they meant that the Holy Blessed God will sit with the scales of justice in His hand to weigh and balance every person's merits and sins against one another, and to pronounce the verdict that this one is righteous and that one is guilty, then I do not know how such a third judgment could be; for since the person has already been judged at the hour of death, and the verdict has been passed over him, whether he is declared righteous or guilty, whether his reward or punishment is given immediately in the world of souls, according to the opinion of the great Rabbi Moses bar Maimon, which is the best and most upright in the eyes of God and men, or whether we should say that his soul is well ordered in all things and preserved in Paradise, and does not receive its reward until the thousandth generation, at the time of the resurrection, and the commandment (Deut 24:15) "You shall give him his wages on the same day" is not fulfilled in him, according to the opinion of Rabbi Moses bar Nachman: there is no doubt in either case that the judgment over every person at his death, whether to reward or to punishment, has already been concluded. If that is so, why should he enter again in the last days into a third judgment for a second time? Does he then, after the second judgment, perform a commandment of God or commit sins, that he should be judged for them? Or is it possible that one who was found righteous in that second judgment after his death should be found guilty in that third and final judgment? Or conversely, that one who was condemned in the second should be acquitted in the third? This is impossible, for in those times one has no inclination either toward righteousness or toward wickedness, as our rabbis of blessed memory say. Beyond the fact that reason cannot tolerate it, nothing is found either in Scripture or in the words of our rabbis of blessed memory that teaches such a thing: for what Scripture says (Deut 32:36), "For the Lord will judge His people," means that He will take vengeance on His enemies. Likewise (the words of Isa 3:13 are to be understood when he says): "The Lord stands up to contend, and has risen to judge the peoples"; and he (namely the prophet Isaiah, in vv. 14-15 of the same passage) has already explained that judgment, that it is the contention with which He will contend against those who rob their souls. To explain this: the words Din and Mischpat (which otherwise mean judgment) are sometimes used of the verdict of the court, or the judicial sentence which the judge pronounces; thus (Gen 30:6 reads that Rachel said): "God has judged my cause" (that is, He has settled the dispute between me and my sister). And (Jer 5:28 is written): "They do not plead the cause." And (Exod 18:16 records that Moses said to his father-in-law Jethro: when they have a matter, they come to me) "that I may judge between a man and his neighbor." Sometimes the words Din and Mischpat also mean the punishment with which the wicked person is punished, for since the punishment proceeds from and follows upon the order of the court and the judicial sentence, it is also called Din and Mischpat. The grammarians have already noted this, and have cited from this usage (of the word Din or Dun) the words (Gen 6:3): לא ידון רוחי באדם Lo jadón ruchí baádam, that is, "My spirit will not punish mankind." And the words (2 Sam 19:9): ויהי כל העם נדון Vajehí col haám nádón, that is (as it is understood here), "And all the people were punished." And in this sense the word Mischpat is found (Num 33:4, where it is read): "And the Lord had also executed שפטים Schephatím, that is, judgments or punishments, upon their gods." (As also Ezek 20:36, where it is written): "As I pleaded (that is, punished) your fathers"; and there are many such passages (in which the words Mischpat and Schaphát are taken in this sense). Of this kind is also what Joel prophesied (Joel 3:2, when he says): "Then I will gather all the nations and bring them down into the עמק émek, that is, the valley of Jehoshaphat, and I will contend with them there (that is, punish them) on account of my people and my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and have divided their land," etc. And the substance of this promise is that the blessed God, at the time of the coming of our Messiah, will take vengeance on all nations that have done evil to Israel, and that the dead also will awaken and be roused from their sleep, so that they may receive their punishment before the eyes of all the living. I also hold that he (namely the prophet Joel) said "into the émek or valley of Jehoshaphat" for this reason: the word émek comes from עמק Amák, meaning "to be deep," because God will there search out their judgment and their punishment deeply (that is, exercise it sharply). And this is the day of the great and terrible judgment, of which mention is made in the words of our rabbis of blessed memory, in connection with the declaration of the prophet (Mal 4:1): "Behold, a day comes that shall burn like an oven"; and he called it (v. 5) the great and terrible day of the Lord, because on that day the Lord's judgment and punishment will be revealed: not, however, that He will sit upon the throne of judgment to see who is righteous or who is guilty. As for what was said (by our rabbis) that Samuel feared he might perhaps have been summoned to judgment, they did not thereby have in view the future great judgment, for he was a faithful prophet of the Lord, and none of all his words fell to the ground (that is, he said nothing that was not fulfilled); how then could he have erred in his reckoning, when from that time until the resurrection of the dead there were some three thousand years? And even if, according to the opinion of Rabbi Moses bar Nachman, the day of judgment were to come after the resurrection, and Samuel had not yet come back to life or risen from his grave at the resurrection, how could he have thought that he would be summoned to judgment? But their (namely the aforementioned rabbis') intent was to say that, since this occurred within the twelve months after his burial, he thought he might perhaps have been summoned to judgment, namely to that second judgment by which a person is judged when his soul is separated from his body, which takes place within those twelve months (immediately after a person's death). As for the Barajetha that appears in the first chapter of the Talmudic tractate Rosch haschána, namely that there will be three groups on the day of judgment, which Barajetha Rabbi Solomon Jarchi and Rabbi Moses bar Nachman also interpreted as referring to that third judgment of which they make mention, I say, without prejudice to the honor of their learning, that this Barajetha speaks of nothing other than that judgment which befalls every person when he dies. Todoros Levi, of blessed memory, also explained the matter thus in his novellae and annotations on the tractate Rosch haschána, where he wrote that the three groups on the day of judgment are those immediately after death, when every person is judged according to his works. The author of the book Michtam likewise interpreted it thus in his commentary on that Gemara. This is also a clear proof of the matter, that in the words of our rabbis of blessed memory we find nothing other than that a person is judged in two judgments: one at the beginning of the year through those three opened books, and the other as mentioned in this Barájetha. But if they wish to interpret it as referring to the third judgment, then, given that interpretation, there is according to their words no proof in the faith for the second day of judgment that is exercised upon them after death, which is highly absurd. It is therefore better to say that the two judgments of which they (namely the rabbis) make mention are the first and the second that I have described, since they have affirmed that the Holy Blessed God judges a person after his death only once and not twice. As for the future judgment, I hold it to be true that God, at the time of the resurrection, will, for the sake of His righteousness, have willed that all people see with their bodily eyes the reward of the righteous; and of these the angel said to Daniel (Dan 12:3): "But the wise shall shine like the brightness of the firmament," meaning thereby that the faces of those who rise will shine and gleam like sapphires, as a sign of their cleaving to the radiance of the divine Majesty; and that they will also see the wicked in their punishment, of whom Isaiah said (Isa 66:24): "And they shall go forth and look upon the corpses of the men who have transgressed against me," etc. Of both these groups it is also said to Daniel (Dan 12:2): "And many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt," as will be further explained hereafter; and no judgment is mentioned therein, nor is any mention of judgment in Scripture made in any other place where the law of the resurrection is spoken of. That our sages of blessed memory called that day (the day of the resurrection) a day of judgment means a day of punishment and vengeance, which God will exercise before the eyes of all flesh, in such a way that all inhabitants of the world and dwellers on earth will recognize and know that God is a judge on earth, and will say (from Isa 3:10-11): "See that it is well with the righteous, for they enjoy the fruit of their works. Woe to the wicked, it goes ill with him, for he is repaid according to his works." This is the truth of this principal matter, and I have already refuted at length in my book Zédek olamim all the arguments that Rabbi Moses bar Nachman adduces on this subject. It follows from this that when Daniel says here (Dan 7:10): "The judgment was held (or seated itself), and the books were opened," he did not intend to speak of the resurrection of the dead, for its nature was not explained to him until the fourth vision, as will be elucidated with God's help; rather, the judgment of which he here makes mention signifies the punishment with which the Holy Blessed God will punish the nations at the time of the coming of our Messiah and will destroy their dominion, as well as the rule and sovereignty that the (Jewish) people will receive, for all of this is comprehended under the name of judgment. Thus you also find that he says further on (in the said seventh chapter, v. 22): "Until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High"; for he used the word "judgment that was given" of the dominion and glory that God will give to Israel, and called it by the name of judgment; and this proves that the word "judgment" signifies both the reward (of the Jewish people) and the punishment that will come upon the enemies. And because their judgment and their punishment will be according to their evil works and words, he therefore says: "The judgment was held (or seated itself), and the books were opened," meaning thereby: behold, now in this world whoever is the strongest has the upper hand, and there is no judgment and no judge, because the Holy Blessed God exercises no particular providence in His world and has left the earth to the governance of the supreme princes. But when God rises up and His hand takes hold of judgment, then the affairs of the world will proceed according to the order of justice, and the books of the earlier deeds will be opened before Him; and this is in the manner of (that which is written): "And all your deeds are written in a book." Or the books may be the book of innocence and the book of guilt; and from this it follows what he will mention afterward concerning the destruction of the nations and their ruin, and the deliverance of the (Israelite) people, which shall not be destroyed. These are the words of Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel, which were also cited by Rabbi Menasse ben Israel in his book Nischmath chajim, in the above-mentioned seventeenth chapter of the first Maamar, fol. 45, col. 1-2 and fol. 46, col. 1, with the exception of a few things that stand at the end.

We see, therefore, from this teaching of Abarbanel, that he was of the erroneous opinion that by the day of the Last Judgment nothing else is to be understood than the punishment and the vengeance which God will cause to befall all peoples who are outside of Judaism, and the glory into which He will then place the Israelites; likewise that he held the false belief that God would at that time judge no one, and would not pronounce sentence either to eternal life or to eternal damnation according to the works done in this world, and that the punishment at that time would fall only upon the peoples of the world, but not upon the Jews. However, Rabbi Menasse ben Israel rejects this opinion of Abarbanel in his oft-mentioned book Nischmath chajim, in the last-cited chapter, fol. 46, col. 1-2, and maintains that on the day of the Last Judgment not only the peoples who were not adherents of the Jewish religion, but also the Jews themselves, shall be judged and sentenced either to salvation or to damnation; and that it will be a universal day of judgment, and he expresses himself on this matter as follows: ויוצא לנו מדברי הרב שאין יום הדין אחר הדין שאחר. והוא הדעת השני שמצאתי בזה התחיה ומה שנקרא יום הדין ר"ל יום המשפט והנקנה כאמור. והוא הדעת השני שמצאתי בזה הענין. וגם רוחי לא נוחה הימנו כי היום הדין הזה מקובל באומה וכך נקרא בפי הכל כאילו טבע האמת יכריח לאמתו. והגם שפירש כפי דעתו ענין שמואל הנביא למה הרגזתי והמקומות שזכרתי מכל מקום דברי רבי ישמעאל הנזכרים למעלה כמה קשה יום הדין שעתיד הק"ב לדין את כל העולם כולו בעמק יהושפט וכו' אינם סובלים פירוש אחר. אשר על כן יצאתי בעקבי המקובלים ומצאתי בספר הכוונות להר"צחק לוריא ז"ל. ואם תאמר מאחר שעברו על הנשמה הזאת יום הכיפורים ויסורים ממרקים ושבעה ערוון עלוהי כדאיתא בזוהר פרשת נשוא ואחר כך גלגולים למה לה לחזור ולהיותה נידונת ביום הדין הגדול. וישלומר כי יום הדין הגדול אינו אלא לאומות העולם. ואם תאמר אם הוא לאומות העולם איך נתרגז שמואל כאשר העלהו בעלת אוב. ואמרו ז"ל שההרגזה היתה שהלך להביא משה רבינו עלי השלום שיבא ויעיד שלא מרד על התורה וזה אלהים ראיתי עולים מן הארץ. ויש לומר כי אותו מעשה היה תוך י"ב חדשים וחשב שמאחר שלא עברו עלי י"ב חדשים בי עדיין לו לתת איזה דין וחשבון ולכך הלך והביא משה רבינו ע"כ. והוא דעת זר מאד שיום הדינא יהיה אלא לבד לאומות העולם לא שערותו הראשונים ואם קבלה נקבל. אבל הוא נגד מה שהרשיעונו ח"ל שהוא יום

מועד לכל חי. וכן אמר רבי ישמעאל עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לדין את כל העולם ולהת לאיש כדרכיו וכפרי מעלליו. וכן יונתן בן עוזיאל אשר כמוהו כמעט לא היה ולא נברא העיר על המצוות אשר לבני ישראל נתנו ודלא תייבין לא מזכי ליום דינא רבא כנזכר. אשר על זאת לבי אומר לי שיום הדין הגדול והגורא אמת הוא ואין ראוי להכחישו וכך מקובל באומה ובו יענשו סתי העולם ופושעי ישראל ועליו העיד מלאכי באמרו אמרתם שוא עבוד אלהים וכו' אז 'נדברו יראי ה' איש אל רעהו וכו' והיו לי אמר ה' צבאות ליום אשר אני עושה סגולה וכו' ושבתם וראיתם בין צדיק לרשע וכו' כי הנה היום בא בוער כתנור והיו כל זרים וכל עושי רשעה קש ולהט אותם היום הבא ועסותם רשעים כי יהיו אפר תחות כפות רגליכם וכו' זכרו תורת משה עבדי וכו' ולמדנו מאלו הפסוקים שיום הדין יהיה כללי לכל בני העולם. ולכן כפל ועתה אנחנו מאשרים זרים גם נבנו עושי רשעה והזדים הם אומות העולם הנקראים מלכות חזר וכפל ושבתם וראיתם בין That is: זרון ועושי רשעה הם פושעי ישראל בגופך. וכן From the (cited) words of the Rabbi (Abarbanel) it follows that after the resurrection there is no day of judgment; and that the day which is called the day of judgment signifies a day of punishment and vengeance, as has been stated; and this is the second opinion which I have found on this matter. My mind, however, is not satisfied with it, for this day of judgment is known among the (Israelite) people through tradition, and is so called in the mouths of all, as though the nature of truth compelled them to believe in its truth. And even though Abarbanel interpreted the affair of the prophet Samuel (who, as is to be read in 1 Sam 28:7, said to Saul) "Why have you made me restless?" and the passages of which I made mention, according to his own opinion, the above-mentioned words of Rabbi Ismael (which read as follows): "How severe is the day of judgment, on which the Holy One, blessed be He, will in the future judge the entire world in the Valley of Jehoshaphat, etc." nevertheless admit of no other interpretation. For this reason I have followed in the footsteps of the Kabbalists, and have found in the book baccavvanôth (or baccavvónos) of Rabbi Isaac Luria, of blessed memory, (that it is written therein as follows:) If you wish to say, why should the soul (of a Jew) be judged again on the great day of judgment, seeing that the Day of Atonement (on which all sins are forgiven) and the chastisements which wash away (transgressions), and the seven times (of which Dan 4:13, or according to some v. 16, is to be read), as it stands in the Sohar in the Parascha Naso, have passed over it, and after this it has been transferred from one body into another (whereby it has also been cleansed of the transgressions committed)? I answer that the day of the great judgment will be only for the peoples of the world (and not for the Jews). But if you wish to object: if it is only for the peoples of the world, why then was Samuel so disturbed when the sorceress had caused him to come up? Know then that our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the disturbance was this: that he went to fetch our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace, so that he might come and bear witness that he had not rebelled against the Law, and this is what the words (1 Sam 28:13) אלהים ראיתי עלים מן הארץ (I saw gods ascending out of the earth) signify. One must also say that this event took place within the twelve months (after his death), and that he thought, since the twelve months had not yet elapsed, that he still had to render some account; for this reason he went and caused our teacher Moses to come. Thus far are the words of Rabbi Isaac Luria. It is, however, a strange opinion that the day of judgment should be only for the peoples of the world, to which the earlier (teachers) did not assent and give their approval, if we accept the tradition; rather, it is contrary to what our sages, of blessed memory, have instilled in us, that it is an appointed day for all the living. Thus also Rabbi Ismael said: the Holy One, blessed be God, will in the future judge the entire world, and give to each one according to his ways and according to the fruit of his works. In this same manner Jonathan ben Uziel also, whose equal has scarcely existed nor been created, bore witness (and wrote) concerning the commandments which were given to the children of Israel (in his Chaldean translation of the words of Num 14:18, as follows:) And those who do not repent, He does not hold guiltless on the day of the great judgment, as has (already) been stated above. So that my heart tells me, above all of this, that the day of the great and terrible judgment is true and is not to be denied; and thus it has been learned among the (Israelite) people through tradition. On that day the people of the world and the sinning Israelites will also be punished, of which Malachi bears witness when he says (in ch. 3, v. 14): It is in vain that one serves God, etc. (And v. 16:) Then those who fear the LORD spoke with one another, etc. (And v. 17:) And they shall be, says the LORD of Hosts, on the day on which I will make (only) a special possession, etc. (And v. 18:) And you shall return and see what difference there is between the righteous and the wicked, etc. (And ch. 4, v. 1:) For behold, the day comes which will burn like an oven, and all the proud, together with all those who act wickedly, shall be (like) stubble, and the coming day will set them ablaze. (And v. 3:) And you shall tread down the wicked, for they shall be (like) dust under the soles of your feet, etc. (And v. 4:) Be mindful of the Law of Moses, my servant, etc. From these verses we learn that the day of judgment will be common to all people of the world. For this reason (namely, the prophet Malachi in ch. 3, v. 15) indicated the matter in a twofold manner (and said:) And now we call the proud blessed; even those who act wickedly are built up. The proud, however, are the peoples of the world, who are called the proud kingdom; and those who act wickedly are the Israelites who sin with their bodies. Thus he also repeated it a second time (v. 18, saying:) And you shall return and see what difference there is between the righteous and the wicked; and between him who serves God and him who does not serve Him, etc.

That God will also judge the Israelites in the future is likewise taught in the Médrasch Tillim, on the thirty-first Psalm, fol. 25, col. 4., with the following words: רבי יהושע בן לוי אמר לעתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא דן את ישראל ומזכן ונותן לצדיקים דימוס שיכנסו לגן עדן ומכניס את הרשעים לגיהנם. וחוזר ומוציא אותן ומכניס לגן עדן ואומר להם הרי מקום לצדיקים ועוד מקומות פנויים שלא תאמרו אלו היינו עושים תשובה לא היה לנו מקום פנוי בגן עדן עם הצדיקים. ומוציא את הצדיקים מגן עדן ומכניס לגיהנם ואומר להם הרי מקום הרשעים ועוד מקומות פנויים שלא תאמרו אלו נתחייבנו לא היה לנו מקום פנוי בגיהנם אלא הרשעים ירשו גיהנם שלכם ושלם הוא שאמר הכתוב תחת בשתכם משנה ירשו ואתם יורשים גן עדן שלכם ושלם. ולפי שהן מתביישין אמר דוד אל אבושה. ולמי היא That is: Rabbi Jehóscha ben Levi said: the holy and blessed God will in the future judge the Israelites and acquit them, and will give the righteous a decree that they may enter Paradise, but the wicked He will cause to go into Hell; after that He will cause them to come out again and enter Paradise, and will say to them: see, this is the place of the righteous, and in it there are still empty places, so that you may not say: if we had done penance, we would have had no empty place in Paradise among the righteous. He will also cause the righteous to go out of Paradise and lead them into Hell, and say to them: see, this is the place of the wicked, and there are still empty places in it, so that you may not say: if we had been wicked, there would have been no empty place in Hell; but the wicked shall possess your place and their place in Hell, and this is what Scripture says (Isa 61:7): Instead of your shame they shall possess a double portion, and you shall inherit your place and their place in Paradise. And because they will be ashamed, David said (Ps 31:2): Let me not be put to shame. Who then are those who must be ashamed? The wicked, as is stated (in the aforementioned Ps 31:18): The wicked must be put to shame and be silenced in Hell.

To return now to Rabbi Menasse ben Israel: shortly after the foregoing, at fol. 47, col. 1, 2. and fol. 48, col. 1., he resolves certain doubts raised by Abarbanel, in these words: ועתה אחרי אשר יצאנו מהמבוכה הזאת והוכחנו שיום הדין יהיה כללי לכל בני העולם ראוי להתיר הספקות אשר העיר הרב יצחק אברבנאל ודרכי יצחק לוריא בספר הכוונות שלו וזהו כי אם הנפשות כבר קבלו עונשם בדין השני ועברו שבער גיהן על הנשמה ואחר כך כמה גלגולים למה לה לחזור להיותה נדונת ביום הדין הגדול. ואשיב ואומר כי הדין הכולל הזה והדרישה והחקירה לא יכון באלו שכבר מימים רבים שהו וקבלו שכרם או עונשם אבל מאלו שקרוב ליום התחיה נפטרו לעולם שיאחר דינם.

That is: Now that we have emerged from this confusion and have demonstrated that the day of judgment shall be common to all people of the world (and shall concern them all), it is fitting that I resolve those doubts which Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel, as also Rabbi Isaac Luria in his book called Sepher haccavvanóth, have raised, which consist in this: if the souls have already received their punishments in the second judgment, and the seven times have passed over the soul, and it has thereafter been transferred many times from one body (or place) into another, why should such a soul be judged again on the day of the great judgment? To this I answer and say that this general judgment, and the examination and inquiry which shall take place therein, is not to be understood of those who died long ago and have already received their reward or punishment, but of those who shall die close to the day of the resurrection, so that their judgment shall be deferred until the resurrection, so that all may see the righteousness of divine judgment. And our sages of blessed memory have informed us that even while the wicked are still upon the earth, the second judgment of the twelve months is decreed against them. Just as after death it is immediately sealed and decreed over the wicked that they shall receive their punishment in Hell for twelve months, so too shall all those who die shortly before the day of judgment be judged and punished there in body and soul before the eyes of all people, and the punishment of the wicked in Hell shall last twelve months; but the righteous shall straightway be appointed to eternal life and separated from the wicked, those to eternal life, but these to shame and disgrace. Those, however, who have already received their punishment or their reward on the day of the second judgment after death shall certainly not come a second time into the third judgment, for the holy and blessed God is very merciful, and proceeds according to mercy, and does not plague and grieve the children of men of His own will. Hereby the mighty question which these two Rabbis have raised is quieted and settled (that is, resolved and answered). That our Rabbis of blessed memory have said that those Israelites who sin against their bodies, and the transgressing nations of the world, descend into Hell and are punished therein for twelve months, is certain and true, and they speak of the day of the resurrection; and of them it is said (Mal 4:3): "And you shall tread down the wicked, etc."

This, however, as I have said, is to be understood as referring to the transgressing Israelites who will die shortly before the resurrection, and not, as Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman supposed, that those who died long ago and have already received their punishment should come into hell a second time; for this would be contrary to the justice and mercy of God, which is mighty over us. This opinion in this matter seems to me to be true, and worthy that every one who is called by the name of an Israelite should receive it with a cheerful countenance. According to this, then, the purpose of the resurrection is that the righteous, with body and soul, with their bodily senses, shall see the retribution of the wicked; and this is what he (the prophet Malachi) says: "And you shall return and see what a difference there is between the righteous and the wicked" (Mal 3:18). And just as Isaiah said: "And they shall go forth and look upon the corpses of the men who have transgressed against me" (Isa 66:24). The wicked shall also see with their bodily eyes the reward of the righteous and their recompense, and among those (righteous) the spiritual reward shall be fulfilled, of which they spoke together in this world. My heart also tells me that at that time every one shall know his children, and relatives, and acquaintances, and that they shall rejoice together over their great prosperity. May the merciful God, who (as is read in 2 Sam 14:14) considers that the banished one should not be utterly banished from Him, be pleased to cleanse and wash away the stains of sins through the transmigration of souls from one body into another, and through purgatory, so that nearly all of them may be set aright before the coming of the great and terrible day, and that all may rejoice and delight themselves, just as our Sages, of blessed memory, have said that all Israelites have a share in the world to come (that is, eternal life). For how could a father rejoice when he sees his dear son amid flames of fire in severe punishment (or torment)? And how could he not have compassion on him, or on his wife, whom he loved as himself, when those who love one another during their lives are not separated from one another in their death? It is, however, true that the holy blessed God, according to His great mercy, will cleanse and purify nearly all souls, so that they may become worthy of eternal life, and of this it is said that all Israelites have a share in the world to come. From this sum, however, those three kinds are excluded of whom our Sages, of blessed memory, make mention, namely the transgressing Israelites, just as Isaiah said in the aforementioned 66th chapter, v. 24: "Who have transgressed against me," etc. But since I know that the wisdom of Rabbi Isaac Lurja has overcome nearly all the high mountains (that is, that he was almost wiser and more learned than all the greatest and most eminent rabbis), and I have already sworn by the words of the Kabbalists, whose eyes have seen all that is worthy, I have resolved in my heart that my opinion, which I hold in my thoughts, is precisely the same true opinion that Rabbi (Isaac Lurja) held when he said that the day of judgment would be only for the nations of the world, and not for the Israelites; and by this he meant to say that at that time the Israelites, through the transmigration of souls (from one body into another) and the purifying chastisements (through which sins are washed away), will be in a fit condition to be worthy of some portion of the portions of the world to come; therefore their spirit will not be punished for eternity, since they have already received their punishment. And thus the judgment and the vengeance shall come upon the nations of the world, but the few among the transgressing Israelites who died in their wickedness and did not repent of their sins, but persisted in their rebelliousness, shall be regarded as though they had never existed, and therefore he made no mention of them. But if you were to ask and say how it will go with those who will die shortly before the resurrection, and who have not yet received their punishment through the transmigration of souls or through chastisements, and are not counted among the transgressing Israelites, I answer that justice requires that, in place of the long duration of their judgment, they shall receive so intense and singular a punishment in a short time that the quality or nature of the punishment shall stand in place of the quantity or length of time, so that they may become worthy of the world to come (or blessedness). These things, however, are hidden and sealed, and blessed is he who knows them. My words, however, are correct and right, and worthy that every upright and understanding person should receive them. Here end the words of Rabbi Menasse.

Because he had said that the soul shall be judged together with the body, which is also true, I must here report what kind of parable on this subject is written in the Talmudic Tractate Sanbedrin fol. 91, col. 1. 2., and the words there read as follows: אמר לו אנטונינוס לרבי גוף ונשמה יכולין לפטור עצמן מן הדין כיצד גוף אומר נשמה חטאת שמיום שפירשה ממני הריני מוטל כאבן בקבר ונשמה אומרת גוף חטא שמיום שפירשתי ממנו הריני פורחת באויר כצפור. אמר לו אמשול לך משל למה הדבר דומה למלך בשר ודם שהיה לו פרדס נאה והיו בו בכורות נאות והושיב בו שני שומרין אחד חגיר ואחד סומא. אמר לו חגיר לסומא בכורות נאות אני רואה בפרדס בא והרכיבני ונביאם ונאכלם. רכב חגיר על גבי סומא והביאום ואכלום. לימים בא בעל פרדס אמר להן בכורות נאות להיכן הן אמר לו חגיר כלום יש לי רגלים להלך בהן. אמר לו סומא כלום יש לי עינים לראות. מה עשה הרכיב חגיר על גבי סומא ודן אותם כאחד אף הק"ב מביא נשמה וזורקה בגוף ודן אותם כאחד שנאמר יקרא אל השמים מעל ואל הארץ לדון עמו. That is: Antoninus said to the Rabbi: the body and the soul can free themselves from judgment. How can they do so? The body can say: the soul has sinned, for from the time it departed from me, I have lain like a stone in the grave. But the soul can say: the body has sinned, for from the day I departed from it, I have flown through the air like a bird. Then the Rabbi answered him: I will set before you a parable, to what the matter is comparable. It is comparable to a king of flesh and blood who had a beautiful garden, in which there were fine early-ripening fruits, and he placed two guardians in it, one of whom was lame and the other blind. Then the lame man said to the blind man: I see fine early-ripening fruits in the garden; come here and let me sit upon you, and we will fetch them and eat them. Thereupon the lame man sat upon the blind man's back, and they fetched them and ate them. Some days later the master of the garden came and said to them: where have the fine early-ripening fruits gone? Then the lame man said to him: do I then have feet with which I can walk? But the blind man said: do I then have eyes with which I can see? What did the master do? He had the lame man sit upon the blind man's back and judged them both together. So too will the Holy and Blessed God cause the soul to come and place it in the body, and judge them both together, as is stated in Ps

50:4: He will call to the heavens above, and to the earth, that He may judge His people. The words "He will call to the heavens above" signify the soul (since the soul has come from heaven), and the words "and to the earth, that He may judge His people" signify the body, because the body was created from the earth.

Regarding the time at which the Last Judgment is to be held, the Rabbis teach that it will occur shortly after the resurrection of the dead. For this reason, Rabbi Joseph Albo writes in his Sepher Ikkarím, in the 31st chapter of the fourth Máamar, fol. 147, col. 1, in the following manner: שלשה כיתות ליום הדין וכו' צדיקים גמורין נכתבים ונחתמים לאלתר לחיי העולם הבא שמזה יורה היות העולם הבא מדרגה באה לאדם אחר יום הדין הגדול שהוא אחר תחיית המתים לפי המקובל באומה: That is: There are three groups on the day of judgment, etc. The wholly righteous are immediately inscribed and sealed unto the life of the world to come (that is, of eternal blessedness), which teaches that the world to come is a degree or step to which a person attains after the day of the great judgment, which, as the Israelites have learned through tradition, comes after the resurrection of the dead. Likewise, at the beginning of this chapter, from what has been drawn from the book Nischmáth chájm, it may be seen that Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman was also of this opinion.

Regarding the place in which the Last Judgment is to be held, the Jews are of the opinion that it will take place in the valley of Josaphat, since it is written in the Prophet Joel, Joel 3:12: "The nations will rise up and come into the valley of Josaphat, for there I will sit to judge all the heathen round about." Hence it is written in the book Médrasch Mischle, fol. 68, col. 4, as follows: עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לדון את כל העולם כולו בעמק יהושפט: that is, "The holy, blessed God will judge the entire world in the valley of Josaphat"; and it follows thereupon how God will examine the Jews concerning that which they have studied in the Law. How Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel, however, interprets and wishes to understand the words of the Prophet Joel is to be seen from what has been set forth above in this chapter from his book Májene jeschúa, fol. 48, col. 2.

In what manner God will judge the nations of the world in the future is read in the book Pesikta rábbetha, fol. 61, col. 4, where, concerning the words of Zech 10:8, "Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Zion," the following is written: אמר רבי חנינה בר פפא אין הכתוב מדבר אלא כנגד אותה שעה שהקדוש ברוך הוא דן את כל אומות העולם לעתיד לבוא באותה השעה מביא הקדוש ברוך הוא את כל הגרים שנתגיירו בעולם הזה ודן את כל האומות בפניהם ואומר להם מפני מה הנחתם אותי ועבדתם את עבודה זרה שאין בה ממש ואומרים לפניו רבונו של עולם אם באנו לפתחך לא קבלתנו אומר להם יבאו הגרים שנתגיירו מכם ויעידו בכם. מיד מביא הקדוש ברוך הוא את כל הגרים שנתגיירו והם דנים אותן ואומרים לפניהם מפני מה הנחתם אותי ועבדתם עבודה זרה שאין

בה ממש ואומרים לפניו רבונו של עולם יתרו לא כומר של עבודה זרה היה וכיון שבא לפתחו של הקדוש ברוך הוא קיבלו ואנו לאו עובדי עבודה זרה היינו וכיון שבאנו לפתחו של הקדוש ברוך הוא קיבלנו. מיד מתביישים כל הרשעים מהתשובה הגדולה ונפטרין והולכים מן העולם, that is, as it is said: שנאמר ובאחת יבערו ויכסלו מוסר הבלים עץ הוא (Jer 10:8). Therefore it is said: "Rejoice and be glad."

Rabbi Chananja, the son of Papa, said: Scripture speaks (here) of nothing other than that time in which the holy blessed God will judge all the nations of the world in the future. At that same time, the holy blessed God will cause all foreigners who have accepted the Jewish faith in this world to come, and before them He will judge all the nations, and say to them: Why have you left me (unhonored) and served idols, in which there is nothing? Then they will speak to Him: O Lord of the world! If we had come to your door, you would not have received us. But He will answer them: Let those among you who have accepted the Jewish faith come and bear witness against you. Then the holy blessed God will immediately cause all those who have accepted the Jewish faith to come, and they will judge them, and say to them: Why have you left him (unhonored) and served idols, in which there is nothing? And they will say to him (namely God): O Lord of the world! Was not Jethro a priest of idolatry? But after he came to the door of the holy blessed God, He received him. Have we then not also served idols? And when we came before the door of the holy blessed God, He received us. Thereupon the wicked will immediately be put to shame by the answer of those who have accepted the Jewish faith, and judgment will be rendered, and they will depart from the world, as it is said (Jer 10:8): In this one thing they (namely the idolaters) are senseless and foolish, for wood is a vain instruction. Therefore it is said (in the aforementioned passage, Zech 10:8): Rejoice and be glad.

How Esau will conduct himself, and what shall befall him when he is judged, is found in the Jalkut Schimoni on the prophet Obadiah, fol. 80, col. 2. numero 1, where, concerning the words of Obad 1:4, "Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle," the following is read: לעתיד לבוא כשהקדוש ברוך הוא דן את עשו הרשע מה: עשו עושה מתעטף בטליתו ובא ויושב אצל יעקב שנאמר ואם בין כוכבים שים קנך ואין כוכבים אלא יעקב שנאמר דרך כוכב מיעקב וכתוב הבט נא השמימה וספור הכוכבים ויעקב אומר אחי לא תהא כיצא בי שנאמר אחי דברך מות אחי קטבך שאול גזירות שהיית גוזר עלי לעבוד אלילים אלו הייתי עושה נתייבתי מיתה בידי שמים ואם אעבוד אתה הורג אותי כיון שירד עשו לשאול נשתייר יעקב לעצמו שנאמר והיה בכל הארץ נאם ה' פי שנים בה יכרתו. ויגועו והשלישית יותר בה ואין שלישיית אלא ישראל שנאמר ביום ההוא יהיה ישראל שלישיית. That is: When the holy, blessed God shall in the future judge the wicked Esau, what will Esau do? He will cover himself with his Talles (by which is understood that cloth which the Jews wrap around their heads in their synagogues or schools) and go and sit beside Jacob, as it is said (Obad 1:4): "And though thou set thy nest among the stars." By the stars, however, no one is understood but Jacob, as it is said (Num 24:17): "There shall come a star out of Jacob." And it is written (Gen 15:5): "Look now toward heaven, and count the stars." Then Jacob will say to him: "My brother, thou must not be like me," as it is said (Hos 13:14): "O death, I will be thy pestilence; O grave, I will be thy destruction." If I had complied with those severe decrees which thou didst issue against me, that I should practice idolatry, I would have been guilty and God would have punished me with death. But if I did not comply with them, thou didst kill me. Now when Esau had descended into hell, Jacob alone remained, as it is said (Zech 13:8): "And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third part shall remain therein." By the third part, however, no one is understood but Israel, as it is said (Isa 19:24): "In that time shall Israel be the third part." (And it is written in Obad 1:6:) "How are the things of Esau searched out?" (And in v. 7 it is read there: "They shall make thy bread a wound under thee. The same thing is also to be found in the aforementioned Jalkut Schimóni on Jeremiah, fol. 68, col. 2, numero 333, and by the names of Esau and Jacob, Christians and Jews are understood. As for how things will go in the future judgment for the Roman Empire and the other kingdoms that preceded it, this can be seen in the aforementioned Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 50, col. 3, numero 316, as well as in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 2, col. 1, 2.

A person must also give an account when he torments an irrational animal, and concerning this it is written in Sépher chasidim, fol. 11, col. 3, numero 44 as follows: אם עשה צער לבהמה בחנם כגון שמשים עליה משאוי יותר מכדי הראוי ומכה אותה והיא אינה יכולה ללכת בא לדין על שצער בעל חיים. וכן המושכים אוני החתולים להשמיע צעקתם הם חוטאים. גם דרשו חכמים ביום הוא אכה כל סומ בתמהון ורוכבו בשגעון ורכב בעורון עתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא לתבוע עלבון סוסים מרוכביהם על שהכו אותן במגפיים שקורין ספורוני בלעז: that is, if someone inflicts pain upon an animal without cause, as for example when one loads upon it a greater burden than it can bear, and strikes it, and it cannot go forward, that person comes before judgment, because he has tormented an animal. Likewise, those who pull cats by the ears so that their cries may be heard also sin. The Sages have also interpreted the words (Zech 12:4), "On that day I will strike all horses with bewilderment and their riders with madness," as follows: the Holy, blessed God will demand satisfaction for the dishonor done to horses from those who ride upon them, because they have spurred them with their spurs. Concerning this, the cited Sépher chasidim, fol. 56, col. 3, numero 666 may also be consulted.

In Bereschith rábba, fol. 25, col. 1, in the twenty-sixth Parashah, it is read that wolves and dogs, as well as barren trees, will also have to give an account at the Last Judgment. Concerning the wolves and dogs, the following is written there: נתן אומר אפילו זאב וכלב that is, Rabbi Nathan says that a wolf and a dog too (will have to give an account). And this is explained in the commentary on it, which is called Matténóth kebúnna, as follows: אם פגעו באדם שלא כדין חשבון שמים סופן ליתן חשבון that is, when they attack a person, and this does not happen according to the judgment of God, then they must give an account. As for the barren trees, the following is read concerning them in the passage that follows: אמר רבי אחא אף אילני סרק עתידין ליתן דין וחשבון רבנן אמרי מן הכא כי האדם עץ השדה מה האדם נותן דין וחשבון אף עצים נותנין דין וחשבון: וְהָעֵץ לְמַדְבָּרָא that is, Rabbi Acha has said that barren trees too will in the future have to give an account, and our Rabbis prove this from the fact that (since it is said in Deut 20:19:) for man is like a tree of the field. Just as man must give an account, so too must the trees give an account. From this one can once again observe the subtle understanding of the highly enlightened Rabbis.

Chapter XVIII.

In which the reason is reported why the Jews show themselves so steadfast in their religion and accept the Christian faith so little, and how one ought to proceed with them so that they may be converted in greater numbers than has hitherto occurred.

Though very many Jews live here and there among Christians, it nevertheless happens very rarely that any of them converts to the Christian faith, as experience attests. Indeed, even among those few who do come over to us, there are sometimes such ill-bred and wicked people that, after they have stayed among us for a time, they fall back into their former blindness and take up again the Jewish error and false faith, which could be demonstrated with sufficient examples if necessity required it. That so very few Jews acknowledge the crucified Jesus as the true Messiah, Savior, and Redeemer, and are willing to believe in Him, has many causes that hold them back and hinder them, some of which originate on the part of the Jews, and some on the part of the Christians themselves.

As for the causes and impediments that are found on the side of the Jews, there are in particular four of them that keep the Jews in their great unbelief. The first is their great, unspeakable hatred toward Christ the Lord, the holy Evangelists and Apostles, the New Testament, the Christian religion, and all Christians, to which they are instructed, trained, and raised from childhood. The second is their great stubbornness, blindness, and hardness of heart in spiritual matters. The third is the contempt among the Jews and the cursing with which they are accustomed to curse those who convert. And the fourth is the danger that they may be killed by the Jews.

Regarding the first cause, namely the great hatred toward our most beloved Savior Christ, it has been reported in detail in the second, third, fourth, and fifth chapters of the first part, in what manner the most holy and most innocent Jesus is blasphemed, dishonored, and reviled in the most terrible fashion by the godless Jews, and that the Talmud and other accursed Jewish books teach of Him that He was conceived through adultery, and that He committed great idolatry and sorcery, and is said to have led people into idolatry, but that finally after His death He descended into the abyss of hell, which is called צואה רותחת (Zoah rotháchath), that is, the boiling filth, where He must endure unceasing torment. Through such accursed and damnable teaching, originating from the father of all lies and sworn enemy of Christ, the Devil, which is instilled sharply into the Jews from their youth with particular earnestness and zeal, they conceive such a bitter hatred toward Christ that they cannot even bear to hear His name. How much less, then, will they acknowledge and receive Him as the true Messiah and Savior of the world, and honor Him as such? Hence it is also no wonder that they hold the holy Evangelists and Apostles, and the New Testament which was written by them, in the utmost contempt and disparagement, as reported in the seventh chapter of the first part, and drag the Christian religion through the mud so mockingly and shamefully, as was shown in the tenth chapter of the aforementioned first part. It has likewise been reported at length in the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth chapters of the aforementioned first part, as well as in the first and fourth chapters of this second part, how greatly the malicious Jews hate all Christians and dishonor and revile them in manifold ways; and that they teach that the chief Devil Sammaël is our ruler and overseer, from whom we have our souls, and likewise that we are damned. How then should the Jews, who hold all of this to be true, easily come to desire and long to embrace our religion and join themselves to us, so long as they remain stuck in this erroneous delusion and are not convinced of the untruth of their lying rabbinical teaching?

Regarding the second cause, namely the great stubbornness, blindness, and obduracy of the Jews, one reads here and there in Holy Scripture that they have always been a stiff-necked people, as was demonstrated above at the beginning of the second chapter of the first part. They are also called blind in Isa 42:18-19, and in Jer 5:21 they are addressed as follows: "Hear, you foolish people, who have no understanding; who have eyes and see not; who have ears and hear not." Just as the Jews of former times were stubborn and blind, so too have their descendants followed in their footsteps in this regard, and have at all times sufficiently demonstrated their stubbornness, to the extent that they have endured great adversity, indeed even the most painful death, rather than embrace the Christian religion.

So that my account may be sufficiently proven, I will confirm it from the Jews' own books. In the little book Schévet Jehuda, at fol. 32, col. 2, and fol. 33, col. 1, in the 28th chapter, the following story is described: בערי יון כפי מה ששמעתי מקדמוניב יצאה גזרה מאת המלך להעבירים על דת ועמדו כלם מקטנם ועד גדולם על קדושת השם וכאשר ראה המלך כי לא יכול להם נהייעץ מה לעשות ויצאה שיגרשם מבתיהם אל השדה שלשה ימים ולא ימצא להם שם שום מזון ולא מים לשתות ועמדו כלם ולא אכלו ולא שתו שלשה ימים לבד קטנים ונערים שלא יכלו לסבול והיו בורחים מבית אבותיהם והולכים לבתי היונים וכי לא יכול המלך להביאם לדהו וראה גבורתם להעמיד אמונתם נכמרו רחמיו ולפייס את העם גזר עליהם גזירות אחרות וצוה שלא ידורו בתוך העיר קוסטאנטינא

אלא שידורו בעיר כנגדה נקראת פירא וגזר על מקצתם שלא יהא להם אומנות אלא עבור וגו' : that is, as I have heard from the ancients, there was (on one occasion) in the cities of Greece a decree issued by the king that the people (namely the Jews) should be brought to the (Christian) religion; but they all, from the smallest to the greatest, remained steadfast in the sanctification of the name of God (and in their faith). When the king saw that he could not overcome them, he took counsel as to what should be done, and it was resolved that they should be driven from their houses for three days into the open field, where they would find no food and no water to drink. But they all remained steadfast and ate and drank nothing for three days, except for the young children and boys who could not endure it and took to flight, leaving the houses of their fathers and going into the houses of the Greeks. But since the king could not bring them to his religion, and saw their courage in maintaining their faith, he took pity on them, and, in order to pacify the people, issued other decrees, and commanded that they should not dwell in the city of Constantinople but should reside in the city opposite it, which is called Pera; and he ordained concerning some of them that they should practice no other trade than the tanning of leather, and should set up their workshops for that trade around the sea.

Further, in the aforementioned book Schevet Jebuda, fol. 44, col. 1. numero 34, the following is read: באחת מערי אשכנז קמו הנוצרים וקבצו היהודים ואמרו להם
 שאם יקבלו עליהם תוך ג' ימים דת ישו הרי טוב ואם לאו דעו נאמנה כי כולם ימותו בחרב
 אין המלט נקבצו היהודים ובשק ואפר ותענית צעקו אל ה' ואחר ג' ימים ראו שלא נענו מן
 השמים הסכימו כולם למות אמרו הבחורים שבהם אנחנו נבקש להנקם מצרינו ואחר כך נמות
 על קדושת השם הגדול ובבוקר נקבצו כל הנוצרים למקום ועד שופטיהם והיו ממתינים שם
 שיבאו היהודים להתנצר ויקח לו כל אחד מהם אחד אל ביתו ללמדו הותם ועיקרם קסו אנשים
 בחורים מבחורי ישראל וחרבם תחת לבושם והלכו לפתח מקום הועד ולא השאירו מן הנוצרים
 פליט וקודם בואם צוו לנשותיהם שידליקו אש בד' מקומות העיר וכי אין איש מכבה הבערה
 : That is: The Christians once rose up in a city in Germany and had all the Jews assembled, and said to them that if they were willing to accept the faith in Jesum within three days, it would be well; but if not, they should know for certain that they would all perish by the sword and would not escape. Thereupon the Jews gathered together and cried out to the Lord with sackcloth and ashes and fasting. But when, after three days, they saw that they had not been heard by God, they all agreed together that they would die. And the young men among them said: we will seek to take revenge upon our enemies, and thereafter die for the sanctification of the great name of God. Now when all the Christians, down to their judges, had assembled in the place of meeting and were waiting there for the Jews to come in order to become Christians, and for each one of them to take one of the Jews into his house to teach him their religion and their principal articles: the young men from among the youths of Israel set out, with their swords concealed beneath their garments, and went to the gate of the place of assembly, and left not a single one of the Christians alive. But before they had gone there, they had commanded their wives to set fire to four places in the city; and since there was no one to extinguish the blaze, for they were all in the place of assembly, the entire city was burned, and the Jews along with those Christians.

There follows in the cited folio 44, col. 1. 2, numero 35 another story, with these words: גם מפי חכם מקובל בא מצרפת שמעתי כי בעיר אחת נקראת בודון נגזרה גזירה והוא כי הדליקו אבוקה של ששון ושמן אותה ברחוב העיר והכריזו ואמרו כל יהודי שיבא ויתנצר קודם כבוי האבוקה יקבלו אותו וכל מי שיבא אחר כך ישרף באש וכולם עמדו על קדושת השם ונשפרו הם ובניהם והיה ביניהם איש גבור חיל וחכם ואהוב מאד לשר העיר ושלה השר לקרוא לו ולבקש ממנו שיתנצר ויעשה לו כבוד ושררה אשר כמוה לא נשמע אמר לו האיש היהודי ומה כבוד העשה לי שידמה ויערוך למה שיעשה לי אדון הנשמות כאשר לא אתנצר והשר כעס מאד והתחיל לחרף לו ולדתו אחר הדברים אמר לו האיש היהודי אין לבי להתנצר אבל אפשר שבראותי האש הגדולה אשר בו ישרפוני אפחד ואשוב מדרכי לכן אדוני השר צוה ויעשו ברחוב אש גדולה ולך עמי סמוך לאש אולי בעת ההיא יתן האל בלבי את אשר ברצונך אמר השר טוב הדבר מאד וצוה שידליקו אש גדולה מאד והלך עמו שם והאיש היהודי כי ראה עצמו סמוך למדורה והוא איש זרוע תפש השר והשליכו באש והוא עליו ומתו שניהם, That is: I have also heard from the mouth of a wise Cabbalist who had come from France, that in a city called Bodon a decree had been issued (once against the Jews), and that they (namely the Christians) had lit a wax torch and set it up in the street of the city, and had proclaimed and declared that they would receive any Jew who came and became a Christian before the torch had burned down, and that all those who came only afterward should be burned; yet they all remained steadfast in the sanctification of the name of God (and in their religion) and were burned together with their children. There was, however, among them a strong and clever man who was greatly beloved by the prince of the city, and the prince sent for him and demanded of him that he become a Christian, promising to give him great honor and authority, the like of which had never been heard of. Then the Jewish man said to him: what honor will you do me that will be equal to what the Lord of Souls (namely God) will do for me if I do not become a Christian? At this the prince was very angry and began to revile him and his religion. After this the Jewish man said to him: it is not my intention to become a Christian; yet it might well happen that when I see the great fire in which I am to be burned, I might become afraid and turn away from my way of life (and my religion). Therefore, let my lord the prince command that a great fire be made in the street, and let him walk with me close to the fire: perhaps God will then put into my heart that which the prince desires. The prince answered him: that is very good, and commanded that a great fire be made, and went there with him. Now when the Jewish man, who had very strong arms, saw that he was close to the burning pyre, he seized the prince and threw him into the fire, and himself upon him, and they both died.

Further, in the aforementioned little book Schévet Jebúda fol. 44, col. 22. numero 36, immediately following the preceding account, the following story is read: באחד מערי אשכנז גזרו גזירה שכל היהודים ימירו דת תוך ג' ימים ואם לאו שישפרו כלם נאספו העניים והתענו ב' ימים והסכימו שאם לא יענו תוך ג' ימים לא ישיבאו כלם לבית הכנסת וישחטו זה לזה ולא מיד ערלים וכל מי שלא יהיה לו אכזרות לב יתחנן לשמש הקהל שישחטנו הוא וכן נעשה והם שחטו נשיהם וילדיהם ראשונה ונשאר השמש לבדו והעביר סכין על צוארו ומת בבוקר יום רביעי באו הנוצרים לפתחי היהודים לדעת מה כוונתם ולא מצאו איש ולא אשה בבית כלם לכם לבית הכנסת ומצאום כלם שחוטים הלכו אל המלך והגידו לו הדבר והוא צוה שלא ינתנו לקבורה אלא שישליכום לכלבים על פני השדה ויש לקצת אשכנזים בקבלה שכפה עליהם הר אחד ונשארו שם קבורים. זכות הקדושים האלה וכאלה יעמוד לזרע ישראל That is: In a city in Germany it was once decreed that all Jews must change their religion within three days and become Christians, or else, if they refused, they would all be burned. Thereupon the poor gathered together and fasted for two days, and unanimously resolved that if they were not heard within three days, they would all go together into their synagogue or school and cut one another's throats, and not be put to death by the hands of the uncircumcised (Christians); and that anyone who did not have the heart to do this should ask the servant of the congregation to cut his throat for him. And so it came to pass; they first killed their wives and children, and the servant (of the synagogue) remained alone at the last, and drove the knife through his own throat so that he died. On the morning of the fourth day the Christians came to the doors of the Jews to find out what they intended to do, but they found neither man nor woman in their houses. They then all went to the synagogue and found them all killed together. Thereupon they went to the king and told him the matter, and he commanded that they should not be buried but should be thrown out into the field for the dogs. There are, however, some German Jews who have learned through tradition or oral teaching that a mountain, which fell upon them, covered them, and that they remained buried in this manner. May the merit of these and similar holy ones stand before the seed of Israel in all places where they are. Amen.

Furthermore, in the aforementioned booklet Schévet Jebúda, fol. 77, col. 1., the following is written: שנת ק"עט נועצו לב יחדיו המתועבים אשר בארץ אניוב ופט"ו וצואת ובריטאניא על בני עמנו להמיר כבודם והחזיקו באמונתם וקדשו שם שמים ונהרגו יוֹתֵר מֵחֲמֵשׁ מֵאוֹת: that is, in the year 179 (that is, in the year 1419 A.D.), the abominable ones (Christians) who were (in France) in the region of Anjou, and Poictou, and Britannia conspired together against our people (namely the Jews), that they should change their honor (that is, accept another, understand Christ, as their God). However, they held steadfastly to their faith, and sanctified the name of God, and more than five hundred were killed. Likewise, at fol. 59, col. 1. numero 43. in the aforementioned booklet Schévet Jehúda, it is read that fifteen thousand Jews allowed themselves to be burned for the sake of their faith; and many more such accounts could be adduced from the said booklet Schévet Jehúda.

In the book Shalsbelet hakkabála, fol. 95, col. 1–2, it is recorded that a king in Portugal, by the name of Immanuel, had it proclaimed throughout his kingdom that all Jews must either apostatize within a short time or leave his land, whereupon the Jews declared that they wished to depart. The following then continues: וכשמוע המלך כי הולכים הם וידע שרוב העושר והחכמה היו בין היהודים ואם ילכו ישאר מלכותו כמצולה שאין בה דגים. שלח לקרוא כל הבעלי בתים ואמר להם כי רצונו לתת להם אניות וציידה לדרך. עד כי בדברים טובים הכניסם בחצריו הגדול ויביאום לפניו והתחיל לדרוש להם בדברים טובים שימירו. וכראותו כי אין רצונם להמיר לקח כל הבחורים ויביאם אל בית תפלתו ויורוק מים עליהם וישם שם כל אחד מהם כרצונו ויחלקם בבתי הנוצרים ללמד להם תורתם ויבא אחר כך אל הזקנים ויעש להם כזה. ורבים הטילו עצמם בבורות שיחין ומערות וימותו במיתות משונות ויהרגו זה לזה למען לא ימירו. That is: But when the king had heard that they were departing, and knew that the greatest wealth and the most wisdom were among the Jews, and that if they were to leave, his kingdom would remain like a deep body of water in which there are no fish, he sent word and had all the heads of their households summoned, and told them that he intended to provide them with ships and provisions for the journey, until by fair words he had brought them into his great courtyard. There they were led before him, and he began to request of them with kind words that they apostatize (and become Christians). But when he saw that they were unwilling to apostatize, he took all the young boys and had them led into his church, and had water sprinkled over them (that is, had them baptized), and gave each of them a name according to his own pleasure; and he distributed them among the houses of Christians, so that they might be instructed in their law (and in their religion). Afterward he came also to the elders and dealt with them in the same manner. Many of them, however, threw themselves into pits, ditches, and caves, and died in various ways, and killed one another themselves, so that they would not have to apostatize.

In the purely Hebrew booklet Mikvéh Jisraël, printed in Amsterdam, the following is written at fol. 51, col. 2, numero 62 concerning the Jews who in Spain allowed themselves to be put to death on account of their religion:

ומה נאמר מהגלות הגדול מאנשי ספרד גוי אכזרי שמעתים בכל יום ומיום המימים חקנים ונערים ולא ישאו פנים לזקן. אהה על רשעה כזאת. אהה על אכזריות בלתי טבעית כזאת. וכל

זה הוא בעכור ששומרים ומקיימים תורת משה הנתונה בנסים ונפלאות. על כן הם ממיתים אותם בכל מקום אשר דבר המלכות האכזרית מגיע. וגם בשאר מדינות אנו רואים בכל יום That is: דבר נפלא שמתמיהים עליהם בני אדם שנשרפים חיים על קדושת שמו יתברך What shall we also say of the great exilio, or misery, which exists among the Spaniards, a cruel people? who every day kill poor innocent old and young alike, and hold the old in no regard. Ah, what manner of godlessness is this! Ah, what manner of unnatural cruelty is this! And all of this comes to pass because they (namely the Jews) observe and keep the Law of Moses, which was given through signs and wonders. For this reason they are put to death in every place to which the cruel command of the King reaches. Likewise we see in the remaining lands every day a wondrous thing, at which people marvel: that they are burned alive for the sanctification of the blessed name of God.

From all of this it is thus clearly to be seen, and rationally to be judged, how deeply the Jewish faith is rooted in the hearts of the Jews, such that they would rather endure the most painful death, indeed even put themselves and their children to death in the most cruel manner, than forsake their religion and adopt the Christian one. For this reason one ought not to wonder when they persist so stubbornly in their error and refuse to depart from it.

Regarding the third reason why so few Jews accept the Christian religion, namely because converts are greatly despised and cursed by the Jews, a converted Jew has written the following in his book, written in the Hebrew language and called Sépher amana, at the beginning of the ninth chapter, pagina 115 and 116: זהו דבר זה מונע וגורם שאין היהודים מאמינים במשיח הנשלח לפי שהיהודים קוראים לאותו איש או אשה המאמינים במשיח ומקבלין עליהן בריתו ותורתו משומד או משומדת כלומר אין לאותו איש חלק בעולם הבא ואין לנשמתו כפרה לעולם ועד. וטוקים לפניו וקורין לבניו ממזרים ולאשתו טמאה ונדה. ואין אוכלין עמו ואין שותין עמו ומחרימין ומנדין אותו ומקללין אותו בכל יום ערב ובוקר ג' פעמים כמין ולמשומדים אל תהי תקוה ומדמין אותו למין ואפיקורוס ומבזין אותו ואת בני משפחתו ואין מתחתנין לו ולבני משפחתו אם לא שיש לו ולבני משפחתו ממון ביותר וגומר:

That is: Behold, this is what hinders and causes the Jews not to believe in the sent Messiah, because they call any man who believes in the Messiah and accepts his covenant and law a Meschúmmad, that is, one who is destroyed, and any woman who does the same a Meshummedet, that is, one who is destroyed, by which they mean to say that such a person has no share in eternal life and that his soul shall receive no atonement for all eternity. They also spit upon him and call his children Mamserim, that is, bastards or whoreson children, and his wife they call teméa venídda, that is, an unclean woman who has her monthly infirmity. They neither eat nor drink with him, and they place him under the ban and curse him daily, morning and evening, three times, in the prayer (which begins:) Velammeschümmadím al tebí thíkva, that is, the Meshummadim, or the destroyed, shall have no hope; and they regard him as a heretic and Epicurean, and despise him and those who are of his kindred, and they do not intermarry with him, nor with those who are of his kindred, unless he or his relatives happen to be very wealthy, etc. These are the words of the aforementioned book, which is called Sepher amaná. That a Jew who accepts the Christian faith is called a Meschúmmad has been shown above in the 16th chapter of the first part, paginâ 725 and 726. That such a person is likewise cursed daily three times by the Jews has been noted in the second chapter of this second part, paginâ 107 and 108.

That they also call the children of a convert mamsérim, that is, whoreson children, is entirely certain and true, and a convert told me that a Jew had come to him in a town hall, in a city where he lives, which I may not name, and had asked him how many mamsérim, or whoreson children, he had with his wife, while also otherwise greatly insulting him; and when that same man brought charges against the Jew before the mayor on account of such grave injuries and slanders, the Jew denied everything, and although the good convert had two Christians as witnesses who had heard it, the Jew nonetheless got away unpunished. So far do the Jews sometimes go in their utmost contempt for the Christian religion, that they boldly dare to do whatever they please.

Regarding the fourth reason, namely the danger to life, on account of which Jews are prevented from embracing the Christian religion: it has been demonstrated above in the third chapter of this second part, from page 194 to 201, with sufficient testimonies, that it is not only permitted but also commanded to Jews to put to death anyone who falls away from their religion; indeed, that they are also accustomed to kill anyone who merely lets it be known that he wishes to become a Christian, and this has been confirmed there with the citation of various examples. Concerning such desperate godlessness of the Jews, and their murderous disposition toward one who has converted, and how they further conduct themselves toward such a person, the following is also read in the Sepher amana cited just previously, immediately following what came before: ועומדין על נפשו ומתירין את דמו כלומר מי שיהרג אותו אין לו דסין ואין צריך לתשובה ומעלין עליו כאלו הביא קרבן ומברכים אותו ואומרים עליו זכר צדיק לברכה. אבל על זה המאמין במשיח הנשלח אומרים עליו לאחר מותו שם רשעים ירקב. ואם יארעו לו שום פגיעות רעות אופרים עליו כן יאברו אויבי יי'. 'ומשמחים במפלתו ומפקירן את ממונו וכהאי גוונא בזיויים וזלזולים עושים לו הרבה עד אין מספר: וכשזוכרין אותו אומרים ימח שמו וזכרו. כפרתנו יהיה זה המשומד. אוי לו ולנשמתו. אוי לאביו ולאטו שגידלו גדולה זו. אוי לאמו שהרתה אותו. אוי לרבו שלמרו תורה. וכל מחשבותם עליו לרעה ולא לטובה: that is, they (namely the Jews) also seek his life, and permit his blood (to be shed), so that whoever kills him incurs no blood-guilt or charge of murder, and that person has no need to do penance for it, and it is reckoned to him as though he had offered a sacrifice. That person is also given a blessing, and (when mention is made of him) it is said of him (from Prov 10:7): "The memory of the righteous shall be a blessing." But of the one who believes in the sent Messiah, they say after his death (the following words from the same passage, Prov 10:7): "The name of the wicked shall rot." And when any evil misfortunes befall that person, they say of him (from Judg 5:31): "So must the enemies of the Lord perish," and they rejoice over his downfall, and declare his money and goods forfeit (so that anyone who wishes may take them), and inflict upon him many such acts of contempt and disparagement that are beyond counting. And when they make mention of him, they say: "May his name and memory be blotted out. This Meshummad shall be our cappóro, that is, our atonement (and shall bear our sins). Woe to him and to his soul! Woe to his father and his mother who raised him! Woe to his mother who conceived him! Woe to his teacher who taught him the Law!" And all their thoughts toward that person are directed to evil and not to good. Since, therefore, one who wishes to convert from Jewish unbelief to the Christian religion is in great danger of his life, it is easy to appreciate how difficult it is for anyone among them to venture to come over to us.

That it is accepted by the one who kills such a person as though he had offered a sacrifice to God is irrefutably true from what was reported above in the third Cap. of this second part, paginâ 203, where it was proven from Jewish books that they teach: כל השופך דמן של רשעים כאילו הקריב קרבן, that is, whoever sheds the blood of the wicked does just as much as if he were offering a sacrifice. Likewise, in the second Capitel of the first part, from paginâ 68 to 72, it was shown in what manner the malicious Jews curse the one whom they hate, and say of him: the name of the wicked shall rot; or, his name and memory shall be blotted out. And in the 15th Capitel of this second part it was given to be understood how they are accustomed to say that this or that person shall be their כפרה Cappóro, that is, their atonement, and shall take upon himself their sins and the damnation thereby deserved. Therefore there is all the less reason to doubt what the one who wrote the aforementioned book, which is called Sepher amanâ, brings forward and sets forth against the Jews. But with this, let enough be said concerning the reasons on the Jews' side as to why so few of them convert to the Christian religion.

Regarding the causes and obstacles found on the Christians' side, on account of which so few Jews convert and embrace the Christian religion, there are six of them: first, the great disunity in religion that exists among Christians themselves; second, the scandalous and godless life that prevails among many Christians; third, their negligence and sluggishness in instructing Jews toward their conversion; fourth, the excessive freedom that is granted to the Jews; fifth, their promotion to positions of honor and office; and finally, sixth, the abandonment of those who have converted, in that one does not come to their aid with the necessary assistance.

Regarding the first cause, namely the disunity in religion that is, alas, found in such manifold forms among Christians, it is entirely certain that this constitutes no small obstacle to the Jews' placing themselves under the banner of Christ. And it has been given to me as an answer, when I myself have spoken with Jews concerning their conversion, that the Christians ought first to come to agreement among themselves on their disputed points of religion and become of one mind, and thereafter they would also see what they had to do; for as long as Christians differ so greatly from one another in their doctrine and are opposed to one another, and one party condemns the other, they cannot know which party they ought to embrace, even if they were already willing to adopt the Christian religion. Although I do not doubt that such an answer was given to me for no other reason than to throw in my face the great controversy in religion that hovers among Christians, it is nonetheless reasonable to judge that the discord found among us causes the Jews much reflection and a great doubt concerning the truth of the Christian religion, and consequently turns them away from it.

Regarding the second cause, namely the godless and offensive life of many Christians, it is cause for lamentation that such great and terrible vices are rampant among Christians, of which the Turks, and even the idolatrous heathens still dwelling in darkness, would be ashamed. For this reason, a Jew in his disputation, which he held with the learned Arminian, Philippus van Limborch, did not hesitate to write concerning the Christian religion and Christians: Quinimò nulla religio, nulla secta, quæ tot vitiis conspurcata sit, that is, "Indeed, there is no religion, nor sect, which is besmirched with so many vices," as may be seen on paginâ 313 of the aforementioned Philippus van Limborch's book, printed at Gouda in the year 1687, which is entitled Amica collatio de veritate Religionis Christianæ cum erudito Judeo, that is, "A Friendly Conversation with a Learned Jew concerning the Truth of the Christian Religion." For this reason, the Jews also commonly call Christians האומה הרשעה haúmma barescháa, that is, the godless people, and אומת אדום הרשעה Ummáth Edom barescháa, that is, the godless Edomite people, or רשעים reschéím, that is, the godless; but the whole of Christendom they call מלכות הרשעה Málchuth barescháa, that is, the godless kingdom, and מלכות אדום הרשעה Málchuth Edom barescháa, that is, the godless Edomite kingdom, etc., as has been reported above in the 16th chapter of the first part, paginâ 689, under the seventeenth name which they give to Christians, and in the 17th chapter of the aforementioned first part, from paginâ 756 to 762, under the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth names by which they designate Christendom. They also call us enemies of God and of His law, as has been demonstrated in the 15th chapter of the said first part, paginâ 604. Since the Jews, alas, still see daily that all manner of godless conduct is carried on among Christians, it is easy to appreciate that they are thereby greatly offended, and conceive an aversion to the Christian religion, which they judge by the life and conduct of Christians, and are on the other hand hardened and confirmed in their false faith. But those people who give such offense to the obdurate Jews ought to take to heart the words of our most precious Savior Christ in Matt 18:7, where He says: "Woe to the man through whom offense comes!" and to consider the teaching of the holy Apostle Paul, where he says in 1 Cor 10:32: "Give no offense, neither to the Jews nor to the Greeks." If this were to happen, the Jews would, through the observation and contemplation of our pious conduct, gradually be moved to let go of the bitter hatred which they bear toward us, and would be far more inclined to embrace the Christian faith. The Jews, however, ought to consider that, even though great sins and vices are practiced among Christians, and many godless people are found among them, not all are of such a mind, since there are many pious Christians; and just as one cannot say that the teaching of Moses was therefore false and untrue because many of the children of Israel acted contrary to it and did not live according to it, so too one cannot say that the teaching of Christ is false, nor attribute to it the fact that many sins and vices occur among Christians; and therefore they must not allow themselves to be deterred from the solely saving teaching of Christ and the Christian religion by the wicked lives of many nominal Christians.

Regarding the third cause, namely the laziness of Christians in instructing Jews toward their conversion, it is undeniable that if capable, learned men, skilled in the Hebrew and Chaldean languages and well-versed in theology and the rabbinical books, were appointed to instruct the Jews in a pleasant and friendly manner, to set before them clearly and thoroughly the terrible errors found in their religion, and conversely to convince them of the truth of the teaching of the New Testament with powerful proofs, then by such means many could be brought to the knowledge of Christ and of saving faith. In this manner, Raymundus Martini, as can be seen in the preface to his Pugio fidei, converted several thousand in Spain and Africa, among whom were many rabbis; and Hieronymus de Sancta Fide converted even more in Italy to the Christian faith. Likewise, through this same means, under the Visigoth king Sisebut, some 90,000 were brought to faith in Christ and to the acceptance of His teaching. Through this means as well, the highly learned Mr. Edzardi, Licentiatuſ Theologiae, in Hamburg, has for many years moved no small number, through his Christian and most praiseworthy zeal and his forceful teaching, to join themselves to the Church of Christ.

Regarding the fourth cause and obstacle, namely the excessively great freedom that is granted to the Jews, it is certain that through this freedom they not only attain great arrogance and wealth, but are also further hardened and strengthened in their false faith. Their excessively great freedom consists, first, in the fact that they are permitted to engage in trade with all manner of goods, which is, of all the ways of life that people are accustomed to pursue and sustain themselves by, the most profitable and advantageous of all, and at the same time the most comfortable, through which they scrape together great sums of money and property with little effort and in almost pure idleness, while in the process deceiving Christians, as much as is ever possible for them, in a shameful and unconscionable manner. In this way they live splendidly, eat and drink the best of everything, and boast among themselves that they are great lords, while Christians are their servants, who must provide their sustenance through their own bitter sweat. That trade yields the greatest profit is taught by the Talmud itself, in the tractate Jevammoth, fol. 63, col. 1, where it is written as follows: אין לך אומנות פחותה מן הקרקע, That is: there is no meaner occupation than agriculture. And shortly thereafter it follows: מאה זוזי בעיסקא כל יומא בשרא וחמרא מאה זוזי בארעא מלחא וחפורא, That is: if someone has one hundred half quarter-thalers (that is, twelve and a half thalers) in trade, he can enjoy meat and wine every day. But if he applies one hundred half quarter-thalers to the land (and to agriculture), then he must content himself with eating only salt and cabbage.

Secondly, their excessive freedom consists in this: that they are permitted to lend money at usury, by which means they bring many a Christian to ruin in all his possessions and goods, draw these to themselves, and thereby become rich and are confirmed in their erroneous faith. For since it is read in Deut 28:1 etc. that if the Israelites would obey the voice of God and keep His commandments, they would then be blessed in all manner of ways, and among which blessings is also included that which is mentioned in verse 12 concerning lending, in these words: "And you shall lend to many nations," they draw from this the following erroneous conclusion: that they must be obeying God's will and commandments, and must be pious people and pleasing to God, because they lend to other nations, and consequently that they must possess the true faith, from which they ought not to depart.

Therefore, the convert Antonius Margarita expresses himself in his little book, which is called The Whole Jewish Faith, in the 15th chapter, paginâ 132 and 133, after he has stated that it is not right to permit the Jews to practice usury, as follows: Since, however, usury is permitted to the Jews, they only grow more and more arrogant with each passing day, boasting with their stiff-necked pride and saying: "We must surely still be to this day the chosen people of God, yes, His most beloved people, as it stands in the 2nd book of Moses at chapter 19 (vv. 5-6), and it is not true what the Christians say, that God has rejected and forsaken us; the Christians must themselves bear witness to us that we are the true children of God, because they give us idle sustenance and usury. Moreover, all their authorities willingly submit themselves to our servitude, and thereby confess that they, together with their subjects, are strangers and not children of God as we are; for all those who deal with us in usury give such testimony of themselves." And this is certainly and truly the case, that the blessing of God from usury still rests upon us, as God speaks in the 5th book of Moses at chapter 28 (v. 12): "You shall lend to many peoples," etc. For this reason I wish to admonish a Christian authority, and to entreat it most earnestly before God to uphold the Christian faith, that it should henceforth no longer be of assistance to the Jews in such usury, giving them neither protection nor shelter, indeed neither letter nor seal, nor rendering them any legal support; for otherwise they boast greatly against us and our faith, that the Christians must be their servants, etc. If this is further overlooked, what does one do other than make oneself guilty of the blasphemy of Christ and of the Christian faith, which is committed by the Jews daily, and that one only strengthens them in their blindness and hardness of heart? I know this for certain: if one were only to abolish usury among the Jews, as has been stated, which cannot in any case be sustained from Scripture but is knowingly contrary to nature, God, and one's neighbor, and were to drive the Jews to labor, dealing with them out of mercy and brotherly love, yet without usury, and not according to the Law and their transgressions from the 5th book of Moses at chapter 28, but as the Gospel allows, yet so that they would have to work, then they would for the first time truly recognize their long captivity and the wrath of God, and reflect: "How is it now that we are such a poor people before all other peoples? We have no scepter, no כֹהֵן Côhen, priest, or prophet, indeed not a single village, but must sustain ourselves by heavy labor." They would thus come to themselves and gradually arrive at a knowledge of the Christian faith. These are the words of the aforementioned Antonius Margarita.

Further, the same author writes in his aforementioned book, paginâ 229 and 230, where he describes how difficult it is to convert a Jew, on this matter in the following manner: I have presented only one such proposal, by which one might entice and move the Jews toward the Christian faith, namely, if God would grant that a Christian authority would take from them the freedom to practice usury and compel them to work, which two things are the cause of all their hardheartedness and blindness; for they boast greatly of these two things and say: in these two things we have certain experience and knowledge that we are still God's chosen people and have not been entirely forsaken by Him, as the Christians claim; rather, He still confirms His blessing upon us, so that all peoples serve us, the idle sustain us, indeed all must acknowledge us as God's chosen people and must regard themselves as strangers who are not God's people, for the reason that they borrow from us and allow us the usury. If one were to deal with the Jews according to the content of the curse in Deut 28, and above all were to put into practice upon them these two aforementioned things, then I know that they would come to themselves, look rightly into the Scripture, open their eyes, and would rightly behold the cornerstone which is the foundation of all the prophets, which they and their fathers have rejected, according to Ps 118. Then a Christian sermon and admonition would accomplish more benefit among them than all the aforementioned extensive writing.

Thirdly, their excessively great freedom consists in this: that they are permitted to build synagogues, to assemble in them, and to practice their supposed worship, in the course of which they engage in a most ungodly manner, with cursing of the Christian high authorities and of all Christians, and indeed with dreadful blasphemy against our most gracious Savior Christ, as has been reported at length above in the entire second chapter of this second part, and in the second chapter of the first part, paginâ 81. etc., under the tenth mocking name that is given to Christ.

Fourthly, their excessive freedom consists in this: that they are permitted to write, teach, and even publish in print all manner of godless things against Christ, the Christian religion, and Christians, as this my work clearly demonstrates in many places, whereby they are powerfully strengthened in their unbelief and in their hatred of the Christian religion. Beyond this, they are also, fifthly, granted permission to have their own judges among themselves, who must be rabbis, and who pass judgment on all disputes and legal proceedings arising among them, settling, resolving, and laying them to rest, which occurs to the utmost disgrace and contempt of the Christian authorities; for they do not regard those authorities as worthy enough that judgment over their disputes should be rendered by them, and they consider it a desecration of the name of God and an exceedingly grave sin when one Jew brings charges against another before those authorities, as has been reported in detail above in the ninth chapter of this second part, pagina 472 etc. This also causes them to persist stubbornly in their false faith, and they conclude from it that, because they are permitted and allowed to have their own judges even in the midst of their worst enemies the Christians, this is an infallible sign of the continuing and steadfast grace and love of God toward them, and that God has not entirely cast them off, even though He has driven them out of the promised land on account of their sins and scattered them here and there throughout the world.

Over such freedom of the Jews, Uriel Acosta, who was descended from parents forced from the Jewish into the Christian religion in Portugal, was himself raised in the Christian religion and in scholarly studies, was advanced to a church office, but subsequently apostatized to Judaism, and who at Amsterdam took his own life out of despair on account of the many tribulations caused him by the Jews, expressed the very greatest astonishment. For in his posthumous writing, which he called Exemplar humanæ vitæ, that is, a model of human life, and which is printed after the aforementioned Philippus van Limborch's well-known friendly conversation on the Christian religion that he held with a Jew, he writes at p. 353 as follows: Unum inter multa miror, & verè mirandum est, quomodo possunt Pharisei inter Christianos agentes uti tantâ libertate, ut etiam judicia exerçant; & verè dicere possum, quòd si Jesus Nazarenus, quem Christiani adeò colunt, hodie concionaretur Amstelrodami, & placeret Phariseis illum denuò flagris cedere, propterea quòd traditiones illorum impugnaret, & hypocrisim objiceret, hoc liberè facere possent: that is, among many things I marvel at one, and it is indeed truly very much to be marveled at, concerning the Pharisees (that is, the Jews who hold the traditions or oral teachings and the Talmud as the Word of God alongside the books of Moses), who, dwelling among Christians, enjoy such great freedom that they even exercise judicial authority; and I can say in truth that if Jesus the Nazarene, whom the Christians so greatly venerate, were preaching today in Amsterdam, and it pleased the Pharisees to scourge him again because he spoke against their ordinances and held their hypocrisy before them, they could do so freely. This Jew himself, therefore, expressed great astonishment at the freedom of the Jews, that they are permitted their own judges; yet he went too far against the city council of Amsterdam and slandered it here, as though it did not concern itself with defending the honor of Christ, which is, however, untrue.

Sixth, their excessive freedom consists in this: that they are permitted to receive and circumcise Christians who come over to them and wish to become Jews, which, as far as I know, occurs nowhere in all Christian lands except in Holland. And in the year 1681, during which time I resided in Amsterdam, there were three such godless scoundrels there, one of whom was a Studiosus from Prague, whom the Jews of said Prague had without any doubt led astray in his faith and seduced into such an abominable act. Through such permission, however, the Jews are also strengthened in their erroneous faith, in that they draw from it the conclusion that Christians must be convinced in their consciences that the Jewish faith is good, for otherwise they would not permit such a thing. One may also be assured from this, they say, that God still holds the Jewish religion in esteem, since He so arranges it that even among Christians, in the very midst of Christendom, there are found those who adopt it without hindrance. Finally, seventh, their excessive freedom consists in this: that they are permitted to take on Christians who perform all their necessary work for them on their Sabbaths and feast days, on which even the most trivial task is forbidden to them, and who serve them during such times. For through this they come to the arrogant notion that they are great lords and that Christians are their servants; as indeed they regard all Christians, of high and low estate, as their servants. Indeed, the one who wrote the old Nizzáchon did not scruple to state at pagina 243 that those Christians who do not serve them are deserving of death, and to prove this from Isa 60:12, as was indicated above in the 14th chapter of the first part, pag. 576 and 577. Beyond this, they are also hardened in their Jewish unbelief through such service rendered by Christians, in that they persuade themselves that their religion must be good, since God grants them the grace that they are served in such a manner while they themselves are permitted to be idle.

Regarding the fifth cause and obstacle, namely their elevation and advancement to positions of honor, it is entirely certain and true that the Jews conclude from this as well that they are still loved by God and are His cherished people. This is clearly evident from the words of the Jew in the above-cited amica collatione de veritate Religionis Christianae, that is, the friendly conversation on the truth of the Christian religion, which the Arminian Philippus van Limborch held with a learned Jew in Amsterdam, at pagina 103, which read as follows: Quod si aliquando in aliquâ regione præter solitum patimur, id nostris actualibus peccatis imputandum, præsertim quando ob nimium luxum captivitatem obliviscimur, superbire incipimus, ab legis amore paulatim deficere, gentium mores præter rationem affectare, horum pænis, adauctis laboribus luere oportet: aliter uno vel altero seculo gentibus permisceremur, nostri generis obliti. Cum hoc tamen ut filii à Deo semper tractamur, nec sumus semper adeo abjecti, ut plurimi Christiani non nobis invideant. Ferè omnes Reges Christiani nostris hominibus pro principalioribus officiis agendis utuntur, ficuti Turcarum atque Persarum Imperatores, & omnes eorum Proreges, qui absque Judæis nihil efficiunt:

Et quotquot magna ibi negotia ab Regibus, suis legatis agenda sunt, non nisi Judæorum interventione, optatum finem obtineant. Tandem singuli Judæi pro ratione vel divitiarum, vel officii autoritatis, vel alterius ordinis dignitatis, in toto orbe terrarum suam habent æstimationem; Et ne longius abeamus, in hac civitate satis cum honore, Regum Hispaniæ, Portugalliæ, Daniæ, Ducis Hanover, Et aliorum Principum, Judæi Legati, quos Residentes appellant, existunt. Non igitur est semper adeò miseranda captivitas, quo ad temporalia pertinet, ut in Ægypto: nec sumus servi emptitii, neque in toto orbe alicui nationi infervimus; sed Deus nos ut filios protegit Et c. That is: When we at some point suffer in some region beyond the usual measure, this is to be attributed to our actual sins, especially when, on account of excessive abundance, we forget our captivity and begin to grow proud, to gradually fall away from love of the Law, and to desire the customs of the nations without reason; for these things we must pay the penalty through increased hardships. Otherwise, forgetting our lineage, we might within one or another century become mingled among the nations. Yet despite all this, we are always treated by God as children, and we are not at all times so despised that very many Christians would not envy us (on account of our good fortune). Nearly all Christian kings make use of our people for the performance of the most distinguished services, just as the Turkish and Persian emperors, together with all their viceroys, do, who accomplish nothing without the Jews. All great royal affairs as well, which are to be transacted there by their ambassadors, reach their desired end by no other means than through the mediation of the Jews. Finally, all Jews individually, throughout the entire world, have their honor, whether according to their wealth, or their distinguished service (with great lords), or some other rank of dignity; and that we need not go far afield, in this city (Amsterdam) there are Jews who, with sufficient honor, serve as envoys of the King of Spain, Portugal, Denmark, the Duke of Hanover, and other princes, and who are called Residents. The captivity is therefore not always so pitiable, as regards temporal matters, as it was in Egypt; and we are not purchased slaves, nor do we serve any nation throughout the entire world, but God protects us as His children, Et c. These are the words of the aforementioned Jew.

Rabbi Menasse ben Israel also writes about this in his little book Mikveh Jisraël, written in the Portuguese language and thereafter translated into German, which was translated from German into Hebrew at Amsterdam in the year 1698 and printed in sedecimo, in chapter 18, fol. 54, etc., from number 66 to 68, in the following manner: ועוד יש לנו דבר טוב וקיים ויסוד חזק והוכחה גדולה על מה שיש לנו צרות רבות שהוא לטובתנו ולהצלחתנו כי מישורו אמר בספר ויקרא כ"ו פסוק מ"ד ואף גם זאת בהיותם בארץ אויביהם לא מאסתי ולא געלתים לכלותם להפר בריתי אתם כי אני ה' אלהיהם. ודבר זה אנו רואים בעין שאנחנו נמאסים בעיני הגוים על שיש לנו השם

יהודים אף על פי כן רבים מאתנו יש להם חן וחסד בעיני שרים ומלכים ורוכסים והיה להם כבוד גדול ועושר רב בשפניא ופורטוגאל ואינגלטירא. בראשון השרים היהודים משפחת אברבנאל שהיו בחצר המלך שפניא. כמו השר שמואל אברבנאל ואשתו היקרה בענפ"ענירא היו בחצר משנה המלך דון פיטרו ד'ע טול"עדו בעיר נאפ"ליש והיו אומנת את בת משנה המלך ד'אנא לענור ד'ע טול"ערו ער שנשאה להרוכס הגדול כא"סמוס ד'ע מיר"יקיש דוכס טושקאני והרוכסת ההיא כבדה לאשת אברבנאל לעיני כל השרים והיועצים וקראה אותה בשם אם. וגם אברהם קא"לוני הייה נכבד בארץ איטליא כאחד מן השרים כמו שנמצא סזה בספר ימות עולם שחבר ט"אמש נאר"סוני. וגם אצל הישמעאלים היו גדולים מיהודים כמו יעקב אב"ניאש שהיה שר ופקיד על העיר טיב"אריא. וגם בענ"יאסי קוס"טוס אנא"גאש ושאר השרים אשר היו נכבדים בין הגדולים. וגם במצרים היו יהודים נעשים ס'ראף בא"שים שהוא כמעט שר ופקיד על כל המדינה. והבכירה והשלום האחרון אשר נעשה בין סול"טאן סע"לים ובין ווענעציאני שהוא כהיום ע"ה שנה נעשה על ידי השר דון שלמה רופא שהיה משולח לענ"ציאה בשררה גדולה ובכבוד גדול ונתקבל בחבורת שרי וענ"ציאה אישר לא נראה ככבוד הזה עד היום ההוא מעולם. ואיזה כבוד וגדולה נדמה אל כבוד השר יוסף נאס"י כהיום מאה שנים שירוע לכל אדם שנעשה דוכס על נאס"יא ושר על מ"ילא ושבעה האיים. וזוה השר ודוכס יוסף נאס"י כתב הסופר פאמ"אנו סטר"אדא בספר מלחמות ארצות וגליות התחתיות (ר"ל ארצות הולנד"דיא). ובארץ באר"בריאה היו השרים רו"טעס לעולם עקסק"עועס מן פע"ס ושארור"אנטע וזשאורו'אנטע)והם מיני שררה (ובשנת שס"ט לאלף הששי בימינו היה השר שמואל פאלעצע שלוח מן מול'אי ס'ראן מלך מארו'קא לשרי הולנד'יא. וכאשר בא אל עיר ה'אג ומת שם: וילך אחרי השר מויר'יץ עם כל שרי המדינה לבית הקברות. וגם במלכות הגדולה מלכות פרס היה חדש מקרוב יהודי אחד וקראו אותו השר אליעזר והוא היה פ'יזיר והוא שני למלך. וגם אחיו נקרא יעקב ה'יאי. וזה כ"ד שנה בא לעיר ה'ל'עפא בשבעים גמלים טעונים משי ואחר כך נסע לירושלים והיה מחלק צדקה הרבה לעניים. ועוד היום כבוד הנזכר הוא אל דור יאן כל כך עד שהדוכס פרי'דריך ממדינת הולש'טיין שלח אלו'טו ברי'גמאן באגרת שלום אל השר היהודי דור יאן שישתדל מן המלך פרס למלא את שאלתו אם יצטרך לאיזה דבר. והיהודים קבלו את השליח בכבוד גדול ובאהבה יתירה ומתנות רבות וכתבו תשובה על אגרת הדוכס ה'נל והיו החתומים עליו י"ב יהודים וכולם היו מכונים בשם ה'יאי שהוא שם שררה בלשונם והעתק הכתב ההוא הראה לי החכם הרופא מוס'פיא. וחדוש היותר גדול הוא שכבודם נתפשט והולך עד אי'נדיא כמו שכתב הסופר דיר'עט בספרו הנקרא ספר האוצר שחבר בלשון צרפת בדף ש"ב שאותם היהודים יש להם סוחרים בעיר קו'שין הקונים שם סחורות בעבורם ושולחין אותן להם. וגם הסופר יאן הוגענס לינש'אט בספרו צורת אינ'דיא פרק מ"ך כתב שיש שם ר"ל בקו'שין בתי כנסיות ליהודים ויש מהם יועצים למלך. וגם מרדכי מיי'זיל מפראגא נעשה לשר מהקיסר מטי'אס ונשא חותם הקיסר. וגם היה אחד יעקב בר שבע שמ'ילס שר ונכבד גדול בעיני הקיסר פרדיננדעס. וגם אני המעתיק לא אחשה מלספר שבימינו שנת ת'ל לאלף הששי שלח המלך סולט'אן סאל'ימון אל שרי מדינות הולנד'יא את הארון משה בר יהודה ב'יבירי עם בנו יהודה ב'יבירי לדבר עם שרים ה'נל בעבורו דברי שלום ולכרות עמהם ברית בעבורו. וקבלוהו שרי הולנד'יא בעיר ה'אג בכבוד גדול ומשם נסע לכאן אמשטרדם ועשו לו יועצי המקום כבוד גדול ובימים מועטים נפטר והלך לעולמו וכבוד גדול עשו לו במותו ויקבר בבית החיים של ק"ק ספרדים. וגם שרי המלחמה הממונים על המלחמות הים עשו לו כבוד גדול וישלחו שלש ספינות מלאות שרים וחשובים לבושי בגדים שחורים וילכו אחר

המטה זוגות זוגות עד קברו. ואחריו לקח יהודה ביבירי את ממשלת אביו והיה שתי שנים בהולנד'יא אחרי מות אביו ואחר נסע לקונשט'נטינא וימת שם בימים מועטים. וגם הארון גר'ונימוס נר'ניש ד'ע קא'שטע והיה נקרא שמו בישראל משה קר'ריעל ז"ל והיה לו כבוד גדול בין שרי הולנד'יא ועל פיו יצאו כאן כל עסקי המלך פור'טוגאל. וגם הפחת עמנ'ואל ד'ע בעלמו'נטי י"צ על פיו יוצאים כל עסקי המלך שפ'ניא. ואף שבפורט'וגאל ובשפ'ניא אין יהודי אחד יושב בפרהסיא עם כל זה מנשאים המלכים האלה את היהודים וזו ודאי השגחת השם ב"ה היא. וגם איש אחד ושמו רבי יוסף ברבי דניאל טול'עדאני בא לכאן משולח מן הקיסר מא'רוקא אל שרי המדינות רול'נדיא ועל פיו יצאו כל עסקי הקיסר ה'נל ואביו רבי דניאל היה לו ליועץ וכהיום נתן הקיסר ה'נל ממשלה הזאת להשר חיים טול'עדאני אחיו של רבי יוסף ה'נל ושלח אותו למלך ברי'טניא היא אינגלא'טירא ולשרי מדינות הולנד'יא בעבור עסק גדול. וגם ידוע מהכבוד הגדול אשר היה להשר וארון יצחק די'שיידא ז"ל בק"ק המ'בורג שעל פיו יצאו כל עסקי המלך שווי'דא. וגם ידוע מהכבוד הגדול שהיה להקצין רבי אליה עמ'ריך ז"ל בחצר הדוכס הגדול והחסיד של ברנר'נבורג בעיר קל'יווא והכבוד שהיה לו בין יועצי הול'נדיא והארון חביב הכבוד הגדול של הקצין והחסיד זקן ונשוא פנים רבי לי'פמן שיש לו אצל דוכסי ושרי הנובר ועוד כהנה וכהנה אשר כמעט אין שר ודוכס קטן או גדול שאין מקורב אצלו יהודי להועץ עמו על עניניו ועסקיו. מכל ה'נל ניכר לעין כל שהוא מעשה ה' וההשגחתו הפרטית עלינו לקיים מרן שהבטיחנו ואף גם זאת וגו' ; 'ומה אושר מאותם שעלו לגדולה על-- על ידי תורתם וחכמתם כי רבים המה. הא' היה הרמב"ם ז"ל שהיה רופא נאמן למלך מצרים סאלא'דינו. ואחריו היה משה אמן רופא למול'ראן בא'יאזוה. ואליה מונ'טלטו היה רופא להמלכה צרפת מא'ריא ד'ע מע'דיקיס ואצל היועץ שהיה לה בעיר פא'רובא היה מלמד פילוסו'פיא. אליהו קרע'טנעס ר' אליהו הבחור ורבי אברהם ד'ע באל"מאס למדו עם הממונים לשון הקודש. וספרי הדקדוק של אליהו ה'נל היו חשובים בעיר רומא מאד. דוד ד'ע פ'אמיס היה חשוב ונכבד מאד בעיני אפיפיור סיק'סטוס החמישי ברו'מא. פי"קא מעראנ'דולה לקח לביתו מלמדים יהודים כי היה מודה שנפשו קצרה. ובפרט מצרכי הבית שהיו מוטלים עליו ועוד בכל יום אנו רואים שרבים ונכבדים מהאומות יש להם אהבה וחשק פנימי לשאול וללמוד ממנו דת תורתנו הקדושה. שמזיה נראה לעין שהקדוש ברוך הוא לא עזב אותנו. ואם אחד רודף אותנו בא אחר שהוא חכם ומבין הדבך ביותר ואוהב אותנו ומקרב ומכבד אותנו, ומעולם לא היו בני ישראל בלי ישועה ה' בכל צרתם כמ"ש ויעקב לישועתך קויתי ה'. ואם רוכס או מלך אחד שונא אותם ומגרשם יש אחר שאוהב אותם ומקרב. כמו שעשו הרבה משרי אי'טליא והמלך הגדול של מדינה דענ'מרק והרוכס של סא'פייאן כי יודעים הם על ידי חוש הנסיון That is: We also have yet further a good and firm matter, and a strong foundation, and a great proof that the many tribulations which we endure happen for our benefit and for our deliverance; for Moses said in Lev 26:44: "And yet for all that, when they are in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them; for I am the Lord their God." We also see this with our own eyes, that we are despised among the nations because we bear the name Jews. Yet even though this is so, there have been many among us who have enjoyed grace and favor with princes, kings, and dukes, and who have enjoyed great honor and possessed much wealth in Spain, Portugal, and England. First there were the great lords, the Jews of the Abarbanel family, who resided at the court of the King of Spain, just as the Lord Samuel Abarbanel and his excellent wife Benvenida were at the court of the Viceroy Don Pedro de Toledo in the city of Naples, where the lady (of the Abarbanel household) served as nurse and guardian of the Viceroy's daughter, Donna Eleonora de Toledo, until she was married to the great Duke Cosimo de' Medici as Duke of Tuscany; and that same Duchess honored Abarbanel's wife before all the great lords and councillors, and called her mother. Abraham Kalorne was also honored in Italy as one of the foremost lords, as is found recorded in the book which Thomas Garson wrote, entitled the Description of the World. Likewise among the Ishmaelites (that is, the Turks) there were distinguished Jews, such as Jacob Abnias, who was a prince and commander in the city of Tiberias, as well as Benjasi, Susinus, Anagas, and the other prominent persons who were honored among the great. In Egypt too, Jews were made Sherif Bassis, which signifies nearly the same as a commander over an entire country. The last treaty and peace concluded between Sultan Selim and the Venetians, 75 years ago, was brought about through the distinguished Don Solomon, who was a physician, and who was sent to Venice with great magnificence and honor, and was received by the company of the great lords of Venice in a manner such as had never been seen until that time. And what honor and magnificence can we compare to the honor that befell the distinguished Lord Joseph Nasi a hundred years ago, as is known to all men, who was made Duke of Naxos and Prince of Melos and the seven islands, concerning which prince and duke, Joseph Nasi, Famianus Strada wrote in his book on the wars of the Low Countries, that is, the provinces of Holland. In Barbary there were also the lords Rotes Exeques of Fez, and Scharodante (which are kinds of distinguished offices). And in the year 369 of the sixth millennium (that is, in the year 1609 A.D.), in our own time, the Lord Samuel Paleze was sent by the King of Morocco, Mulai Sidan, to the Lords States of Holland; and after he arrived at The Hague, he died there, and Prince Maurice together with all the great lords of the land accompanied him to the place of burial. In the great kingdom of Persia there was also, not long ago, a Jew who was called the Lord Eliezer; he was a Vizier, which is the second rank after the king. His brother was likewise called Jacob Haja. Twenty-four years ago he came to the city of Aleppo with seventy camels laden with silk, and thereafter traveled to Jerusalem and distributed much alms among the poor. Even to this day the aforementioned David Jan holds such great honor (in Persia) that Duke Frederick of Holstein sent an envoy by the name of Otto Brigmann with a letter of greeting to the Jewish lord David Jan, requesting that he endeavor to assist his envoy, should he have need of anything, in obtaining the fulfillment of his request from the King of Persia; and the Jews received that envoy with great honor, exceptional affection, and many gifts, and wrote a reply to the said Duke's letter, which was signed by twelve Jews, all of whom bore the name Haja, which in their language is a princely title; and the learned physician Musaphia showed me a copy of that letter. An even greater novelty is this: that their honor has spread and extended as far as India, as Duret wrote in his book called the Treasury, composed in the French language, at page 302, that those Jews have their factors in the city of Cochin, who purchase goods there on their behalf and send them to them. Jan Hugens Lindschot also writes in his book on the Description of India, in chapter 44, that there, namely in Cochin, the Jews have synagogues, and that some of them are councillors to the king. Furthermore, Mordechai Meisel of Prague was made a great lord by Emperor Matthias and bore the Emperor's seal. There was also one named Bar Sheba Schmiils, who was a distinguished lord and greatly honored by Emperor Ferdinand. Nor can I, the translator of this little book, remain silent about the fact that in our time, in the year 430 of the sixth millennium (that is, in the year 1670 A.D.), the Emperor Sultan Solymán sent the Lord Moses, son of Jehuda Biberi, together with his son Jehuda Biberi, to the Lords States of Holland, to speak with the said Lords States on his behalf concerning peace, and to conclude a treaty with them on his behalf; and the Lords States of Holland received him at The Hague with great honor. From there he traveled here to Amsterdam, and the city council showed him great honor; but he died within a few days, and great honor was shown to him after his death, and he was buried in the burial ground of the Spanish (or Portuguese Jewish) congregation. The high military officers appointed over the war at sea also showed him great honor, and sent three ships full of distinguished lords dressed in black garments, who walked in pairs after the coffin all the way to his grave. After him, Jehuda Biberi assumed his father's authority and remained in Holland for two years after his father's death, whereupon he traveled back to Constantinople, where he died after a short time. The Lord Hieronymus Nunes de Costa, of blessed memory, who was called Moses Kuriel among the Israelites, also enjoyed great honor among the Lords States of Holland, and all the affairs of the King of Portugal (whose resident he was) were conducted here in Amsterdam through him. Likewise, all the affairs of the King of Spain are conducted through the word (or command) of the Lord Immanuel de Bellmonte (whom his Rock and Redeemer preserve); and although not a single Jew lives openly in Portugal or Spain, these kings nonetheless elevate Jews, which certainly comes about through the providence of the blessed God. There also came here one named Rabbi Joseph, son of Rabbi Daniel of Toledo, as an envoy from the Emperor of Morocco to the Lords States of Holland, and the said Emperor's affairs were conducted through him, while his father Rabbi Daniel served as the Emperor's councillor. To this day the said Emperor has given this authority to the Lord Chaim of Toledo, the brother of the said Rabbi Joseph, and has sent him to the King of Britain, that is England, and to the Lords States of Holland, on account of an important matter. The great honor is also well known that the Lord Isaac Descheira, of blessed memory, enjoyed in the holy congregation of Hamburg, through whom all the affairs of the King of Sweden were conducted. It is likewise known what great honor the Lord Rabbi Elias Emmerich, of blessed memory, enjoyed at the court of the great and pious Elector of Brandenburg in the city of Cleves, and how he was honored by the councillors of Holland. What has most recently come to pass is pleasing, namely the great honor which the pious, aged, and highly esteemed Lord Rabbi Lipmann enjoys with the dukes and princes of Hanover. There are yet more such instances, so that there is scarcely a small or great prince or duke who does not have a Jew come to him to take counsel with him concerning his affairs and business. From all that has been stated, it is plain before everyone's eyes that this is a work of God and of His particular providence over us, in order to confirm what He promised us (when He says in Lev 26:44): "And yet for all that, when they are in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away," etc. What shall I also say of those who have become great through their learning and wisdom? For there are many of them. First there was Rabbi Moses bar Maimon, of blessed memory, who was the faithful physician and personal doctor of Saladin, King of Egypt. After him, Moses Amon was the personal physician of Sultan Bajazet. Elias Montalto also served as physician to the Queen of France, Maria de' Medici, and at her council which she held in the city of Padua he taught philosophy. Elias Krentens, the student Elias, as well as Rabbi Abraham de Balmis, taught certain cardinals (or bishops) the Hebrew language, and the books of grammar of the said Elias were held in high esteem in the city of Rome. David de Pomis was very highly regarded and honored by Pope Sixtus the Fifth in Rome. Pico, Count of Mirandola, took Jewish teachers into his house, for he acknowledged that he was too weak (to advance in the matter without assistance), particularly on account of the necessary affairs of his household that lay upon him. Moreover, we see daily that many distinguished persons among the nations have an inner love and desire to ask us about our holy law and to learn it from us; so that from this it is clearly evident that the holy blessed God has not forsaken us. And when one persecutes us, another comes who is wise and understands the matter better, who loves us and draws us near and honors us. The children of Israel have also never, in all their distress, been without the salvation of the Lord, just as Jacob said (Gen 49:18):

"Lord, I wait for your salvation." And when a duke or king hates them and drives them from his land, there is another who loves them and receives them, just as many princes in Italy have done. The great King of Denmark and the Duke of Savoy have also done this, since they know through experience and proof that in all the lands where the Israelites dwell, great commerce is carried on. These are the words of the aforementioned little book Mikveh Jisraël, from which, as also from what the Jew who entered into a friendly disputation with Philippo von Limborch brought forward, as mentioned previously, it is as clear as sunlight that the elevation and advancement of the Jews to positions of honor, and indeed the great intercourse of Christians with them, strengthens them in their unbelief and error, and that they are thereby kept from inquiring whether the Christian religion might not be better than their own, and are hindered from conversion.

As for the sixth cause and impediment, namely the abandonment of converts and the refusal of necessary assistance, it is no wonder that a Jew who might otherwise have an inclination toward the Christian religion is deterred by this as well, when he considers how miserably this or that person who has adopted the Christian religion must get by, and in what great poverty and affliction he must spend his life together with his family. It is well known to everyone that Jews do not learn trades, nor do they otherwise accustom themselves to hard labor by which they might support themselves; and there are also many among them who have no means to carry on a business or a trade from which they might earn their necessary livelihood. As long as they remain Jews, alms are distributed to them abundantly by the wealthy Jews, so that they need not suffer hunger. But when such a poor wretch becomes a Christian and does not know how to support himself, he must often endure hunger and hardship together with his wife and children, and there is no one who seeks to lend him a hand as a suffering brother in need and to help him from their abundance. I myself know such a poor man who is a good, devout, and zealous Christian, and who has often complained to me with great sorrow that things go very badly and miserably for him, that he often has no bread for himself and his many poor children at home, and that he knows no way to earn any, since no one gives him any work by which he might obtain a piece of bread. He also gave me to understand that he would gladly work from morning until evening, as much as he possibly could, if only he could receive two batzen or half a kopfstück in wages for the day, but that he knows of no opportunity to find even that. How then should the Jews, who hear of this and similar things, not be moved to aversion toward the Christian religion, when they learn that Christians are so merciless, and when they consider by contrast that among the Jews no one is left in want and distress?

Now that the obstacles have been identified up to this point, explaining why so few Jews convert to the Christian religion, we also wish to consider how the matter might be remedied, so that more of them than has hitherto been the case may be moved to accept the teaching of the Gospel. To bring this about, however, one must not compel them through threats of fire and sword, or other cruel acts of violence, as has happened here and there in former times; for by such means their hatred toward the Christian religion and toward Christians is only increased, and they come to think that the faith of the Christians must be worthless and wrong, since Christians commit such cruelties, and in this way our faith is dishonored and Christ is disgraced. Our most beloved Savior says, "Blessed are the meek" (Matt 5:5). And the holy Apostle Paul says in the Epistle to the Galatians: "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, gentleness" (Gal 5:22). And in the same Epistle he teaches: "Dear brothers, if a person should be overtaken by a fault, help him back to the right path with a spirit of gentleness" (Gal 6:1). Furthermore, he says in the Epistle to the Colossians: "Put on therefore, as God's chosen, holy, and beloved, heartfelt compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, patience" (Col 3:12). The same is likewise read in the First Epistle to Timothy (1 Tim 6:11) and in the Epistle of James (Jas 3:13). For this reason, one must deal with the Jews with friendliness, gentleness, and patience, so that one may win them over thereby. But should anyone fall into the mistaken notion that such commanded friendliness and gentleness need not be practiced toward the Jews, that person must know that they cannot be excluded from it; for the aforementioned Apostle Paul writes thus in the Second Epistle to Timothy: "A servant of the Lord must not be quarrelsome, but friendly toward everyone, apt to teach, able to bear with the wicked; and with gentleness to instruct those who are contrary, in case God might perhaps grant them repentance leading to the knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim 2:24-25). The aforementioned Apostle Paul also exhorts Titus, in the Epistle to him, with these words: "Remind them (namely, the hearers) to be subject and obedient to rulers and authorities, to be ready for every good work, to slander no one, not to quarrel, to be gentle, showing all meekness toward all people" (Titus 3:1-2). From this it is clearly seen that one ought to be friendly toward all people, with no one excepted, and to instruct the contrary with gentleness, and in this way bring them to conversion and to the knowledge of the truth. Therefore it is entirely wrong, and contrary to the teaching of the holy Apostle, when one wishes to compel them by force, indeed by fire and sword, to embrace the Christian faith.

The great injustice of such violent proceedings was also sufficiently acknowledged by Pope Innocent III himself, when the Jews, who had been persecuted and oppressed in this improper manner, came to him with humble entreaties for protection and assistance. In response, as can be seen in Mr. Wülfer's annotations on the Jüdischer Theriak, page 171, he issued the following decree: Ex Christianae pietatis mansuetudine, praedecessorum nostrorum, felicitis memoriae, Calixti, Eugenii, Alexandri, Clementis, & Coelestini, Romanorum Pontificum, vestigiis inhaerentes, ipsorum petitionem admittimus, eisque protectionis nostrae clypeum indulgemus. Statuimus enim, ut nullus Christianus invitos, vel nolentes eos ad Baptismum per violentiam, venire compellat. Sed si eorum quilibet sponte ad Christianos fidei causa confugerit, postquam voluntas ejus fuerit patefacta, sine qualibet efficiatur calumnia Christianus; veram quippe Christianitatis fidem habere non creditur, qui ad Christianorum Baptisma non spontaneus, sed invitus cognoscitur pervenisse, &c. That is: Out of the gentleness of Christian piety, we follow in the footsteps of our predecessors, Calixtus, Eugenius, Alexander, Clement, and Celestine, former Roman Popes of blessed memory, and we receive their (namely, the Jews') petition and shield them with the buckler of our protection. For we decree that no Christian shall compel them, against their will, by force to be baptized. But if any one of them should voluntarily, for the sake of the faith, come over to the Christians, then, once his will has been made manifest, he may be made a Christian without any reproach; for it is not believed that he who is known to have come to Christian baptism not of his own free will but under compulsion truly holds the Christian faith, &c. Likewise, Pope Clement III forbade the coercion of Jews into the Christian religion in nearly the same words, as can be found in the Jus Canonicum, in the Decretals of Pope Gregory IX, Book 5, Title 6, Chapter 9. And in the said Jus Canonicum, in the first part of the Decretum, at Distinction 45, cap. 5, it is recorded that the Fourth Council of Toledo issued the following ordinance: De Judaeis autem praecipit sancta Synodus, nemini deinceps ad credendum vim inferri (cui enim vult Deus miseretur, & quem vult indurat.) Non enim tales inviti salvandi sunt, sed volentes, ut integra sit forma justitiae: That is: Concerning the Jews, the holy synod commands that henceforth no one shall be compelled by force to believe (for God has mercy on whom He will, and whom He will He hardens). For such people are not to be brought to salvation against their will, but with their will, so that the form of justice may be complete. Thus the coercion of Jews into accepting the Christian religion is declared unjust and earnestly forbidden, even according to the praiseworthy pronouncements of the aforementioned Popes Innocent and Clement, as well as of the aforementioned Council.

It is indeed true that through harsh persecutions, very many Jews in former times adopted the Christian religion, for in the aforementioned little book Schévet Jehúda, fol. 29, col. 2, numero 19, the following is written: בשנת הגירוש

הנזכר נאנסו ב 'קהלות גדולות נאפוליש וטראנה לשימירו דת והמירו רובם וסבת השמד לא that is, in the year of the aforementioned expulsion (of the Jews from England), two large communities at Naples and Trana were compelled to change their religion, and the majority of them apostatized; the cause of the persecution, however, I have not found, etc. And at fol. 31, col. 1, numero 21, the following is read in the same place: שנת חמשת אלפים וארבעים ושש ליצירה קם
 מלך אכזר ושמו פיליפו בן פיליף וגרש כל היהודים אשר במלכותו ונתאכזר מאד נגד היהודים
 ולקח כל אשר להם בכספם וזהבם וטלטל וקרקע ונתגרשו בערום ועריה וחסר כל. והיו היהודים רבים כחול באותם מלכויות עד שאמרו שהיו כפלים כיוצא מצרים וגומר. וקצת המירו that is, in the year 5046 after the creation of the world (that is, in the year 1286 A.D.), there arose (in France) a cruel king by the name of Philippus (pulcher), son of Philippus, who expelled all the Jews who were in his kingdom and showed himself exceedingly fierce toward them, and took all their silver and gold and all their movable goods, so that they were driven out naked and bare, in the most extreme want. There were in those kingdoms as many Jews as the sand, so that it was said there were twice as many of them as had gone out of Egypt, etc. Some of them, but very few, apostatized from their religion; the community of Toulouse, however, apostatized entirely.

In addition, at fol. 45, col. 2, and fol. 46, col. 1, number 39, the following account is found: בעיר רומא קמו פתאום יושבי הארץ וחרב פיפיות בידם וקהל גדול והשוב היה שם בימים ההם ויאמרו להם אם תקבלו דת הנוצרים אחינו אתם ותקבלו ממנו בכל
 יום כבוד ותועלת ותחיו עמנו חיים ערבים גם כגן עדן נשב יחדיו ואם לאו תדעו נאמנה
 שהעברה כלכם בחרבותינו אלה ואין מציל מיהינו היהודים נפלו לפניהם והתחננו מאד ונתנו
 ונדדו להם כל ממונם ונכסיהם שניחום בדתם ולא הועיל ובשלשה ימים יצאו מכלל הדת
 מרומי ומן הסביבות חמשה עשר אלף נפשות ולא נמלטו כי אם יחידים אשר ברחו למרחקים
 כי שמעו בהיותם בסביבות רומי את כל אשר נעשה בעיר ואחרים נמלטו בשוחד עצום בהחבא
 וברחו לעיר הגדולה אפריש נאפוליש ושם נחמו מאויביהם ולימים מועטים גם שם עבר עליהם
 That is: In the city of Rome, the inhabitants of the land had (at one time) suddenly risen up, with sharp swords in their hands, at which time a great and distinguished community of Jews was there, and they said to them: if you are willing to accept the Christian religion, you shall be our brothers and shall receive honor and benefit from us every day, and shall also lead a pleasant life with us; we shall sit together in Paradise as well. But if you are unwilling to do so, you shall know for certain that you shall all be put to death by these swords of ours, and no one shall rescue you from our hands. Then the Jews fell down before them and pleaded earnestly for mercy, and offered them all their money and goods so that they would leave them in their religion, but it was of no avail; and within three days, 15,000 souls had fallen away from their faith in Rome and the surrounding localities, and only a few individuals escaped, those who had fled far away, since they, while still in the vicinity of Rome, had heard everything that had taken place in the city. Others, however, had been saved secretly through large gifts, and they fled to the great city of Naples, where they were comforted on account of their enemies. But after a short time, the misery came upon them there as well. More of the same kind can also be found in the aforementioned little book Schevet Jehuda, fol. 59, col. 2, number 46, and fol. 60, col. 1, number 48, as well as fol. 77, col. 1.

Nevertheless, nothing was accomplished by this compulsion that would have redounded to the honor of Christ or the growth of the Christian Church, for all such forced converts remained fervent Jews in their hearts, even though outwardly and with their mouths they presented themselves as Christians, so that nothing was made of them but sheer hypocrites and mouth-Christians, as can be judged from what is read in the aforementioned little book Schévet Jehúda fol. 23, col. 1. 2. numero 11., where the words read as follows: חמשת אלפים ומאתים וחמשים היו גזרות כוללות בארץ שאבויה ופיאמוני ולונברדיא ושיזיליה ולא נמצא כתוב פרטי הגזירות וסבתם. גם בפלורנציא היה שם שמד וגירוש ויצאו מן הכלל עם רב מן היהודים וגם אחר שיצאו לא נחו במאמר האל ובגוים ההם לא הגיעו ואחר בקשו רבים ללכת אחר ה' למלכויות אחרות וכאשר הבינו שכונתם ללכת להתייהד קמו עליהם לאלפים ולרבבות ולקחו נכסיהם וממונם למלך. ומהיהודים אשר בסרדיניא נהרגו רבים בדרך ומאותם הנשארים בפרווינציא אחר השמד נוהגים היו יהדות בהצנע ובפרט הנשים. אבל היה ענין הנשים במקרה כי שואלין להן למה ידליקן נר ערב שבת וכן שמביאין ירקות

In the year 5250 (after the creation of the world, that is, in the year 1490 A.D.), the Jews in Savoy and Piedmont, and in Lombardy, as well as in Sicily, were generally persecuted; however, nothing particular or specific is found concerning those persecutions and their causes. Likewise, the Jews in Florence were persecuted and expelled, and a great many of them fell away from their religion. But after they had fallen away, they had, by the command (and dispensation) of God, no rest or peace among those peoples, and many of them thereafter sought to follow God the Lord into other kingdoms. When it became known, however, that their intention was to depart and to take up the Jewish faith again, the Christians rose up by the thousands and tens of thousands and took their money and goods before the king. Of those Jews who were in Sardinia, many were killed along the way. And of those who remained in Provence after the persecution, many, and especially the women, kept the Jewish religion in secret. The women, however, explained what they had done as though it had happened by chance. When they were asked why they lit candles on the eve of the Sabbath, and brought herbs and varieties of delicacies to the table on the Sabbath night, they gave the answer that they had seen their mothers accustomed to doing it in that manner.

Thereupon the following continues in that same place: באותם ארצות היה בשנה ההיא שנה השמד דבר כבד מאד בכל אותם העמים ומהאנוסים לא מת אחד. וזכו ראו הגוים הדבר ההוא הכבד אמרו בלבם כיון שהדבר עלינו הוא ולא על האנוסים נצרה שילכו למקום אשר יחפצו. אז יצאו מהאנוסים עם רב להציל את נפשם אבל רבים נשארו באותם ארצות כי היו יראים שמא התחבולה היא מן העמים לדעת מה שבלבם ונשארו באותם ארצות לאלפים והם באותם מקומות נוהגים היו יהדות ואף על פי שהיו חוקרים עליהם לא נמנעו משמירת תורת משה עליו השלום כל אפשרותם - לימים קמו עליהם חוקרים והשחיתו והתחילו לשרוף ולקחת נכסיהם עד שקם מלך אחד וחמל עליהם וצוה שלא ימצא שום חוקר במלכותו ולא That is: In those same (aforementioned) lands, in that same year in which the persecution took place, there was a very severe plague among all those peoples, yet among the forced converts not a single one died. When the Gojim, or Christians, had seen the severe plague, they said among themselves: since the plague is upon us and not upon the forced converts, we will therefore command that they may go wherever they wish. Thereupon a great multitude of people departed from those same lands to save their lives; many, however, remained therein, because they had feared that the peoples might be employing a cunning stratagem in this, in order to discover what they had in mind; and they remained in those same territories by the thousands, and practiced the Jewish religion in those same places. Although the Inquisitores (that is, those who conducted investigations in matters of religion and inquired whether anything was being done contrary to it) were set against them, they were nonetheless not deterred from observing, to the fullest extent possible, the Law of Moses, upon whom be peace. Some short time thereafter the Inquisitores rose up against them and dealt wickedly with them, and began to burn them and to seize their goods, until a king arose who took pity on them and commanded that no Inquisitor or examiner, nor anyone else who falsely accused them of a misdeed, should be found in his kingdom, since they (namely, those who had been forced) were acting faithfully.

Furthermore, the following is read concerning this matter in the oft-cited booklet Schévet Jehúda, fol. 32, col. 2, numero 27: שנת חמשת אלפים וק"ף היו גזרות: כוללות ברוב ספרד וביותר גדולות בחכמה ובמנין כי קמו גויי הארצות פתאום עליהם להרוג ולשלול שלל ולבזו בז אם לא יצאו מכלל הדת ורבים מהשרירים עמדו על נפשם ודתם וקבלו עליהם לעמוד על כל מה שיגזרו עליהם ותורת אמת במקומם והדרה ונהרגו רבים על קדושת השם. וכן היה במלכות ארגון ליסא מאיורקה ברצלונה לירידה. ובאותם מקומות מקצת מהם יצאו מכלל הדת מרוב המצוקות והאימות כי נלאו מאד ועם כל זה נצח ישראל לא ישקר ולא יכזב וכל אותם האנוסים שמו פניהם לבקש דרך להציל את נפשם וגזרו עליהם גלות ללכת : that is, in the year 5150 (after the creation, and in the year 1390 A.D.), there were general persecutions against the greatest, the wisest, and the most numerous (communities of Jews) in Spain; for the common people of the land rose up suddenly against them, to kill and to plunder them, if they would not apostatize from their religion. Many of those who remained, however, stood firm in their hearts and in their faith, and resolved to endure everything that might be decreed against them, and that the true Law (of Moses) should remain in its place and in its honor; and many of them were killed for the sanctification of the name of God. It went likewise in the Kingdom of Aragon, Lislá, Majorca, at Barcelona, and Lirida. In those same places, however, some fell away on account of the many tribulations and the fear, for they had been made very weary.

"Yet the Strength of Israel (namely God) will not lie, nor repent" (as is to be read in 1 Sam 15:29), and all of those compelled ones resolved among themselves to seek a way to save their souls, and appointed the misery upon themselves that they would go in the lands of their enemies from one people to another until they found a secure place to keep their Law, and God helped them, etc.

Furthermore, it is read in the aforementioned little book Schévet Jebúda fol. 65, col. 2. that one by the name of Verlorius, who was presumably someone who had voluntarily become a Christian, addressed a king of Spain who intended to compel the Jews to the Christian religion in the following manner: שמעתי שכוונת אדוננו להכריחם על דת הנה מה טוב ומה נעים אם היה עולה ותדע אדוננו כי האנוסים יותר יעבדו את דתם הראשונה אחר האונס ממה שהיה קודם האונס. ושמעתי כי אנוס אחד כשהיה בא לבית תפלתו והיו מרימים גויית מושיענו היה מכה על לבו ואומר אוי מי שרואה וזה ואוי מי שמאמין בזה. ובעיר שביליא אמר חוקר אחד אל הדוכס אם הקצר.. אדוננו לדעת איך האנוסים שומרים שבת נלך ונעלה אל המגדל. עלו אל המגדל ואמר לו שא נא עניך וראה בית פלוני היא בית אנוס ובית פלוני בית אנוס וכן רבים ולא הראה מאחד מהם עם כל היקף החורף שיצא משם עשן והוא מפני שלא הדליקו אש להיותו יום השבת. עוד נודע אצלנו כי אנוס היה בספרד שהיה אוכל כלי השנה לחם שלא תחמיץ כדי שיוכל לאכול כן בספרד ולא יקומו עליו והיה אומר שאסטומכא שלו אינה סובלת חמץ. ויום טוב שתוקעין שופר הולכין אל השדה ובתוך הקנים וקוצים חוקעין כדי שלא ישמע הקול חוצה. ואיש מוכן יש להם ששוחט ומוליד לבתיהם. ומהם מי שימול בהחבא ומהם מי שמל את עצמו כי לא בטח באדם מיראה הדבר. ומהם מי שמביא ספר תורה של משה בתוך שק של פלפלין וכן בשאר מצות שלהם ומה יועיל לאדוננו ומלכנו כאשר ישפוך על היהודים מים קדושים ויקראוהו בשמנו פידרו או פאבלו והם שומרים את דתם כעקיבא וטרפון אין תועלת בהתנצרות אלא שמנהגים על הנוצרים האמתיים ולא יראו כי כבר הוחזקו למראית העין לנוצרים: תדע אדוננו שאין ספק בו כי That is: I have heard that our Lord has resolved to compel the Jews to the (Christian) religion. Oh, how good and how pleasant it would be if it turned out well! But let our Lord know that the compelled Jews will practice their religion after the compulsion more than they did before the compulsion; and I have heard that one who was compelled, when he came into our church and the body of our Savior was elevated, struck his breast and said: Woe to him who sees this, and woe to him who believes in this! An inquisitor or investigator in the city of Seville also said to the Duke: if the Lord wishes to know how the compelled ones keep the Sabbath, let us go up to the tower. When they had gone up to the tower, he said to him: See, this house is the house of a compelled one, and that house is the house of a compelled one, and there are many such houses, and you cannot see smoke coming from a single one of them, even though it is a hard winter; and this comes from the fact that they have made no fire, because it is the Sabbath day. Beyond this, it is known among us that there was a compelled one in Spain who ate unleavened bread the whole year through, so that he might eat it thus in Spain and no one would rise up against him, and he gave as his excuse that his stomach could not tolerate leavened bread. On the feast day (namely the new year's day) on which they blow the horn, they go out into the field and blow on the hills and in the valleys, so that the sound cannot be heard outside. They also have an appointed man who slaughters and brings (the meat) to their houses. Some among them are circumcised in secret; others circumcise themselves, for they trust no one, out of fear that the matter might be revealed. Some of them carry the book of the Law of Moses in a pepper sack, and in the same manner they handle their remaining commandments (keeping them secretly). What good will it then do our Lord and King when holy water is poured over the Jews (and they are baptized) and a Jew is called by our name Peter or Paul, if they nonetheless keep their religion like Akkiva and Tarpon? There is no benefit in their becoming Christians; rather, they raise themselves up arrogantly above the true Christians and have no fear, since they are already regarded outwardly as Christians. Let our Lord also know that, beyond all doubt, Judaism is one of the incurable diseases.

Although the Jews were expelled from Spain in the year 1492 A.D. and from Portugal in the year 1496, and those who remained were compelled to convert to the Christian religion, those who were thus forced to convert nevertheless continued to propagate the Jewish religion among themselves, and instructed their children in it and held them to it, so that even to this day many secret Jews are found among them, some of whom from time to time quietly leave the country and betake themselves either to Holland or to other places where they can openly practice their religion without fear. I myself saw some such people in Amsterdam in the year 1680, who had at that time come there from Portugal. For this reason, that Jew who, as mentioned above, held a conversation with Philippo von Limborch concerning the Christian religion, writes on pagina 102 concerning those who are descended from ancestors forced from the Jewish to the Christian faith and who dwell in Spain and Portugal, in the following manner: Omnia monachorum claustra atque monialium Judæorum plena: Canonici, Inquisitores, Episcopi plurimi ex Judæis procedunt: non pauci in corde judaizant, & propter ea bona temporalia, Christianismum simulant, ex quibus aliqui resipiscunt, & ut possunt, effugiunt. In hac civitate, & plurimis aliis regionibus, monachos habemus, qui idololatriam rejecere, Augustinianos, Franciscanos, Jesuitas, Dominicanos. Sunt in Hispania Episcopi, & gravissimi monachi, quorum parentes, fratres, & sorores, in hac, & aliis civitatibus, ut Judaismum servare possent, inhabitant, That is: All the cloisters of monks and nuns in Spain and Portugal are full of Jews; the majority of canons, Inquisitores, and bishops are of Jewish descent, and there are not a few who are Jews in their hearts and pretend to be Christians on account of the temporal goods they enjoy, among whom some repent and take flight as best they can. In this city (Amsterdam) and in many other lands, we have monks who have rejected idolatry, namely Augustinians, Franciscans, Jesuits, and Dominicans. In Spain there are bishops and distinguished monks whose parents, brothers, and sisters dwell in this and in other cities so that they may be able to maintain the Jewish religion.

From all of this it is plain to see how little was accomplished by such compulsion in former times, and from this it may be reasonably judged that, if one were to try at the present time to force the Jews into the Christian religion by such means, the matter would not turn out any better or more successfully; rather, out of sheer stubbornness, they would either prefer to take one another's lives themselves, or allow themselves to be killed by Christians, than become Christians. Or, if they were already to outwardly profess the Christian faith out of fear of death and other adversity, they would nonetheless remain Jews in their hearts, and thus all the effort and labor expended would be in vain and for nothing. One need not be at all surprised at this, however, for how can it be possible that a person could so quickly adopt another religion, of whose truth he is not convinced in his conscience by compelling grounds? Conscience is a delicate thing, which cannot be compelled but must be persuaded. The one who is to be converted must be shown by clear and irrefutable grounds that his religion is false, but that the other, which he is to adopt, is true and built upon the word of God. When this is done, and he truly grasps the truth of the matter that is set before him to believe, and accepts it, then one may be assured that one will have in him a true and steadfast Christian, and not a hypocrite. Faith comes from preaching, as the holy Apostle Paul teaches in the Epistle to the Romans, Rom 10:17, and those who are to be brought from their erring ways onto the right path of salvation must be kindly instructed, not compelled by cruelty.

That kindness must be used toward the Jews for their conversion is also commanded in the Jus Canonicum, in the first part of the Decretals, in the 45th Distinction, cap. 3, with these words: Qui sincera intentione extraneos à Christiana religione ad fidem cupiunt rectam perducere, blandimentis, non asperitatibus debent studere, ne quorum mentem reddita ad planum ratio poterat revocare, pellat procul adversitas: that is, those who with sincere intention desire to bring to the true faith those who are not devoted to the Christian religion must endeavor to deal with them in a gentle and not in a harsh manner, so that adversity does not drive away the mind of those whom the clearly presented reason (on account of which they ought to convert) could have turned away (from their error). In this, Christ the Lord, as well as the holy Apostles, shone forth by their example, for through their gentle, gracious, forceful, and penetrating teaching, and not through compulsion (which, however, would have been very easy for Christ, as the eternal and almighty Son of God, to carry out), they brought the unbelieving to conversion and to the true faith, of which the history of the New Testament gives sufficient testimony.

Now if one wishes, as is right, that more Jews be converted than has hitherto been the case, one must seek and endeavor to clear out of the way all the aforementioned obstacles, as much as is ever possible; and it would be desirable, first of all, that the divisions in religion among Christians could be settled, for thereby a great obstacle to the conversion of the Jews would be removed from their path, since they conclude from such discord and from the mutually contradictory teachings of the Christians that the religion must be false.

Secondly, it would be highly necessary that the godless life of many Christians, among whom all manner of abominable sins and vices openly run rampant, be abolished and brought to an end, so that the Jews might no longer be offended thereby, as has happened hitherto, and provoked to hatred against us. For as long as this does not occur, and they see all manner of evil taking place, they form the impression that the Christian religion must be worthless, because such great godlessness is practiced among Christians.

Thirdly, it is necessary that learned theologians, well-versed in the Hebrew language and the Rabbinical books, be appointed, who may engage in diligent and gentle discourse with the Jews concerning religion, present to them forcefully and emphatically, and demonstrate from the Holy Scripture of the Old Testament, as well as from the Rabbinical books themselves, that the Christian religion is true and the Jewish religion, on the other hand, false: for in the books of the Jews many things are found which serve to uphold the Christian faith and to refute Jewish errors, as may be seen in Raymundi Pugione fidei, and in Galatinus's book de arcanis veritatis Religionis Catholicae, as well as in Philippus Mornaeus's book de veritate religionis Christianae. One must, however, not place too much trust in what stands in such books, but rather open the Rabbinical books themselves and look to see whether this or that passage is actually to be found therein, for here and there in Galatinus and Mornaeus one reads things that I have not been able to find in the Rabbinical books in which they are supposed to appear. If one were now to present such a matter to a Jew and could not prove it, one would be laughed at.

In such a religious dialogue with the Jews, one must thoroughly demonstrate to them that Christ the Lord, whom we Christians confess, is the true Messiah promised by God, and true God and man in one person, and that everything evil which is read about Him in the Talmud and other Jewish books consists of nothing but slanders and blasphemies that were fabricated against Him out of pure hatred. Furthermore, one must also set before their eyes all the remaining principal articles of the Christian religion, as well as the worthlessness of the Talmud and the teachings of their rabbis that run contrary to ours, in such a manner that they are convicted in their consciences of the truth of our doctrine and may assent to it. In addition, one must also make clear to them that everything evil which their rabbis teach about Christians, namely that we are governed by the chief devil Sammaël and receive our souls from him, along with other things they assert about us, is false and untrue. For such a task, however, no persons should be appointed other than those who, as mentioned above, are well educated; otherwise nothing whatsoever will be accomplished, and all those who know from experience what disputing with Jews entails will agree with me on this point: for when a Jew has studied even a little, and there are many such people among them, he will give so much trouble to one who is not versed in the Hebrew language, and will bring forward so many evasions against that person's proffered proofs, that the latter cannot hold his ground against him. If, moreover, someone who understands little disputes against them and advances poor and wretched proofs in support of this or that point against them, as has happened in the past, as is found in the Jews' books, such as in Rabbi Lipmann's Sepher Nizzáchon and the old Nizzáchon and other books of that kind, this only serves to bring the Christian religion into contempt: for the Jews thereby come to think that no better proofs can be produced on our side, and that consequently our religion is false.

Fourthly, it is necessary that one deprive them of the aforementioned excessive freedoms, by which they are strengthened in their unbelief. Instead of the trade which they carry on with their shops and the selling of all manner of goods, whereby they lead a soft and easy life and acquire great sums of money and property through the deception of poor Christians, almost in idleness, one ought to compel them to all manner of labor and let them earn their bread in the sweat of their brow. For why should such avowed enemies of Christ and of all Christians lead a more comfortable life than most Christians? Let them, in order to earn their bread, till the fields, hew wood and stone, and perform other heavy labor; thus their arrogance, to which they are now so greatly given, will pass away. Georgius Nigrinus gives, in his book which he calls Judenfeind, at pagina 164, the advice that one should make them chimney-sweeps and cloaca-cleaners, knackers, and flayers; but such work might be altogether too disgusting for the delicate and pleasure-loving Jews, and contrary to their sense of respect, since they imagine themselves to be the foremost people among all peoples, and all of them together to be royal children and great lords, as has been demonstrated above in the 14th chapter of the first part from pagina 569 to 578; why, then, should one treat them in so contemptible a manner? Nigrinus must not have been acquainted with the Jews' distinguished lineage, otherwise he would have written very differently.

Concerning the abominable usury which they practice without shame: it has indeed been earnestly forbidden in the Imperial Recesses, for in the reformation of good Policey established at Augsburg in the year 1530, titulo 27, the following is written: Whereas in certain places in the Empire of the German Nation, Jews practice usury and lend not only against high bonds, sureties, and personal pledges, but also against stolen and pilfered goods, and through such usury burden the common, poor, needy, and unwary people more than anyone can sufficiently reckon, ruining them miserably and grievously: we set, ordain, and will that Jews who practice usury shall be housed, kept, or protected by no one in the Holy Empire; that likewise they shall have neither peace nor safe conduct within the Empire, and that no court shall assist them in collecting such debts, under whatever guise the usury may be concealed. Yet so that they may still have sustenance for their bodies, whoever wishes to tolerate Jews among him shall keep them only on the condition that they refrain from usury and forbidden usurious trade, and support themselves through honest commerce and manual labor. These are the words of the ordinance established in the Imperial Recesses. But where is a Jew who abides by it? They oppress poor Christians with their practiced usury so severely that they flay the marrow from their bones, and they deceive them in all their dealings. Likewise there is not one among them who performs even the least manual labor, and one will never see a Jew who chops or splits so much as a single log of wood in his own house; rather, all their work must, to the shame and mockery of the Christian religion, be done by Christians.

When one reads the 28th chapter of the 5th book of Moses, one finds that it is not fitting for Christians to pay usury to Jews, but rather that, on the contrary, the Jews ought to pay usury to the Christians: for from the 15th verse to the end of the chapter it is declared how it was proclaimed to them that they should be cursed in all places if they would not obey the voice of God; among which curse is also contained that which is written in the 43rd and 44th verses, in these words: "The stranger that is among you shall rise up above you higher and higher, and you shall come down lower and lower. He shall lend to you, and you shall not lend to him." And in the 64th verse it is read: "For the Lord shall scatter you among all peoples, from one end of the earth to the other." Since now God the Lord has driven out the wicked and stiff-necked Jews from their land on account of their disobedience and their abominable sins, and has scattered them throughout the entire world, and has allowed the curse that was threatened against them to come upon them all, it is therefore not right that they should, among the Christians with whom they dwell as people cast out by God, rise up above them and lend them money at usury, and in such a manner pass their time in idleness and conduct themselves like great lords, while the Christians are oppressed by their manifold extortions and must borrow money from them against the payment of a shameful rate of usury; for such a thing is directly contrary to what stands in the aforementioned words of God (Deut 28:15, 43-44, 64).

The converted Ferdinand Heß also makes mention, in his Juden-Geissel, in the third part, in the 5th chapter, of the aforementioned words of Deut 28:44, and states that if things were now going as they should, the Jews would have to borrow from others; and he continues as follows: It would therefore be well for a proper authority to be obligated to uphold this pronouncement more earnestly, and not to permit the godless Jews to engage in the terrible usury practiced upon poor Christians, by which poverty is so greatly sucked dry and ruined. Should they not rightly be driven to learn a trade? For where they are permitted to continue thus in their hardened way of life, they will, the longer it goes on, become ever more arrogant and proud. And shortly after this he writes further: It would therefore be useful and necessary, indeed godly, to eradicate the godless usury from all lands and cities, to clip the wings of the stubborn Jews somewhat thereby; perhaps, if they were not thus kept in their roguish way of life, some among them might then well convert and become godly Christians.

Regarding the freedom of the Jews with respect to their synagogues or schools, it would be desirable that this not be permitted to them, since in these places they blaspheme Christ the Lord in a most horrible manner, and this occurs three times every day in a prayer which begins: עלינו לשבח לאדון הכל וגו' Olénu leschabbéach liádon baccól, etc., that is, "It is our duty to praise the Lord of all things," etc., in which He is called הבל וריק Héfel varik, that is, a vanity and a nullity, and אל לא יושיע El lo joschía, that is, a God who cannot redeem, as has been reported in detail above in the first part, in the second chapter, pagina 81, etc., under the tenth mocking name which they give to Christ. Likewise, in their prayers contained in the Selichóth and the Machsor, they mockingly call Him Molech, Bel, and Baal, which are names of pagan gods, and Talui, that is, one who was hanged, and יהוס ערוה וזמה Jichum érvah vesimmah, that is, one who was conceived through shame and vice, as well as נצר נאפוף Nézer náafuf, that is, an adulterous branch, and נצר נתעב Nézer nitaf, that is, an abominable branch, as has been clearly demonstrated above in the aforementioned first part, in the second chapter, under the eighth, ninth, eleventh, twentieth, twenty-first, and twenty-second blasphemous names given to Christ. Furthermore, all Christians are cursed in the most terrible manner in manifold ways in the Jews' synagogues, as has been shown in detail and with more than sufficient proof in the second chapter of this second part. The legal scholar Brunnemannus teaches in his Commentario in Codicem, lib. 1. tit. 9. de Judæis & cælicolis on legem 11 as follows: Judæi jubentur ritus suos citra contemptum Christianæ Religionis observare, alias amissuri permissa, nisi ab illicitis temperaverint: that is, "The Jews are commanded to observe their customs without contempt for the Christian religion; otherwise they shall forfeit that which is permitted to them, if they do not refrain from unlawful things." But what greater contempt of the Christian religion can there be than when our Savior Christ, as the foundation of our faith, is blasphemed in so horrible a manner? Therefore I give all pious Christians cause to consider whether the Jews have not, through such blasphemies, forfeited the great grace which the high Christian authorities have hitherto shown them by permitting the construction and maintenance of their synagogues; and whether for this reason all of these ought not to be taken from them, and their public so-called divine worship entirely and forever forbidden? If this were to happen, they would better reflect that they are in exilio, or misery, and would consider that the curse of God hangs over them, and would in this way be more readily moved to abandon their error.

Regarding the fact that the Jews, in such an impudent manner, write, teach, and publicly release in print whatever they wish against our most precious Savior, the Christian religion, and Christians, consisting of all manner of blasphemous and defamatory things, right in the midst of Christians: it would not only be very necessary that all of this be forbidden to them under penalty of the severest punishment, but it would also be praiseworthy and beneficial that one take away from them all those books in which such things are contained, and not leave a single one of them in their hands; and furthermore, that one compel them to compose entirely different prayer books, since their current ones, which they use, contain, as mentioned above, blasphemies against Christ and the Christian religion, as well as a great many horrible curses against all Christians. For as long as they retain such books in their hands and read them, they will be incited and stirred up to hatred against Christ and everything Christian, more and more with each passing day. In particular, one ought to tear from their hands all books in which the Christian religion is disputed against and the Jewish religion is in turn confirmed; and one should appoint people who understand the Hebrew language to inspect the houses of the Jews from time to time in a completely unexpected manner, and to search diligently whether any such books might still be found among them, which would likewise need to be observed in their synagogues, in which they also always keep books.

Regarding the freedom that is granted to the Jews, namely that they are permitted to have their own judges among themselves, who pronounce their verdicts on the disputes and legal proceedings arising among them, and settle and resolve these where possible: it would be desirable that this not be allowed, since it is a species dominii, that is, a kind of lordship, and it only makes them proud and hardens them in their unbelief. For this reason, Brunnemannus writes very aptly in his aforementioned Commentario on the Codicem, lib. 1. tit. 9. De Judæis & cælicolis, über legem 15., when he breaks out in the following words: Judæi non debent habere proprios judices, scilicet seniores, sed adire debent ordinarios judices; non enim ipsis permittendum est, ut propriam rempublicam habeant, sed sunt subditi & servi Imperii Romani. Præstaret igitur eos ita tractare, ut sentirent se servos esse. That is: the Jews shall not have their own judges, namely the elders, but must go before the ordinary judges; for one must not permit them to have a commonwealth of their own, but they are subjects and servants of the Roman Empire. It would therefore be better to deal with them in such a way that they would feel that they are servants.

Regarding the freedom that is permitted to Jews in Holland, namely to circumcise someone who wishes to convert from the Christian faith to Jewish error and to receive him into the Jewish community: it would be good if this were not allowed there, because, as mentioned above, the Jews are in this way confirmed and hardened in their false faith. And it is praiseworthy that this is otherwise knowingly permitted nowhere among Christians. Beyond that, it is also very commendable that the Jews are forbidden by Imperial Law from persuading a Christian to their religion, for in the 18th lege Codicis de Judæis &

cælicolis it is written on this matter as follows: Si Judæus pertrahere Christianum ad Religionem suam ausus fuerit, proscribitur, & sanguinis pœnam sustinet: that is, if a Jew dares to draw a Christian to his religion, that person is declared an outlaw and must suffer the penalty of blood. Concerning which still more is to be found in the same place. Yet the Jews do this secretly nonetheless, seeking to lead Christians astray in their faith and to bring them over to their religion. And thus the Jews of Prague will also, without any doubt, have dealt in this manner with the aforementioned student, whom they subsequently sent to Amsterdam in order to have himself circumcised there. Likewise, a Jewish woman from Berlin came here to Frankfurt am Main in the year 1698, who had been fully resolved to become a Christian and had for that purpose received instruction from a distinguished and very learned gentleman of the clergy; but since she had acquaintances in the Jewish quarter, they did not rest until they had turned her away from her good intention and caused her to slip away secretly and abscond. For this improper act, those who instigated it would still have their well-deserved punishment to face.

Regarding the freedom that Jews enjoy, whereby Christians serve them on their Sabbaths and feast days, as well as at other times, it would be highly necessary to forbid this strictly and under penalty, so that no Christian henceforth performs even the slightest service for any Jew, at whatever time it may be; because through this the malicious Jews not only become ever more arrogant the longer it continues, and regard themselves as great lords while regarding Christians as their servants, in that they are permitted to be idle while poor Christians perform their work, but also because they are strengthened in their religion in this manner, in that they imagine themselves to still stand in great favor with God, since their enemies, among whom they dwell, must serve them.

This matter also, that Christians should serve the Jews, runs directly contrary to that curse which was laid upon the Jews in Deut 28, should they not obey God; for in verse 48 of that same passage it is written thus: "And you shall serve your enemy, whom the Lord shall send against you, in hunger and in thirst, in nakedness and in want of all things; and he shall put an iron yoke upon your neck, until he has destroyed you." The said enemy, however, is described in the following verses 49 and 50 thus: "The Lord shall bring a nation against you from far away, from the end of the world, as swift as the eagle flies; a nation whose language you cannot understand. A fierce nation," etc. And by this the Jews understand the Romans to be meant, concerning which Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 150, col. 2, in the Parascha Tavó, as follows: אמר ישא ה' עליך גוי מרחוק כי

באו אספסיינוס וטיטוס בנו עם חיל גדול מרומיים בארץ ולכדו כל ערי יהודה הבצורות והצרו להם מאד כאשר ידוע בספרים שלכדו גם חומות ירושלים ולא נשאר רק בית המקדש וחומה העזרה והיו אוכלים בשר בניהם ובנותיהם. וכאשר נלכדה גם היא או נתקיים ונסחתם מעל האדמה ואז שבו הרומיים לארצם ובידם גלות ירושלים וביד עמים רבים אשר אתם מיון That is: The Scripture says (v. 9): "The Lord shall bring a nation against you from far away," for Vespasian came with his son Titus, with a great Roman army, into the land, and they took all the fortified cities of Judah and afflicted them greatly; just as it is known from the books that they also conquered the city walls of Jerusalem, and nothing remained except only the Temple and the wall of the forecourt, and that they (namely, the inhabitants of the city of Jerusalem, out of hunger) ate their sons and daughters.

After the forecourt (along with the Temple) was also taken, that which is written in v. 63 was fulfilled: "And you shall be driven out of the land." Then the Romans returned to their own land, and the captive Jews of the city of Jerusalem were in their hands, and in the hands of many peoples who had come from Greece, Egypt, Syria, and many other nations, which had rendered aid to the Romans; and that which is read in v. 64 was confirmed: "The Lord will scatter you among all peoples." Likewise, Abarbanel in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 397, col. 2, in the Parashah Favó, as also in his book Májene jeschúa, folio 58, col. 3, explained the words "a brazen people" as referring to the Romans. By the Romans, however, the Jews understand Christians collectively, as was demonstrated above in the 16th chapter of the first part, at paginâ 632 and 633, under the second name by which Christians are called by the Jews. According to the aforementioned curse, then, the Jews are supposed to serve the Romans and all Christians among whom they dwell in hunger and thirst, in nakedness and every kind of want; but the matter has been turned upside down, for it is the Christians who serve the Jews in hunger, thirst, and want, while the Jews, through their godless usury and cruel extortions, find themselves in great wealth and abundance of all the necessities of life.

O how good it would be if that which is read and commanded in the Jus Canonicum, in the Decretalibus Gregorii of the ninth, in the 5th book, in the 6th title, in the 8th chapter, were observed, in these words: Ad hæc omnibus Christianis, qui sunt in jurisdictione vestra, penitus interdicatis, & si necesse fuerit, districtione ecclesiasticâ compellatis eosdem, ne Judæorum servitio se assidue pro aliqua mercede exponant &c. That is: Furthermore, you shall utterly forbid all Christians who are under your authority, and if necessary compel them by ecclesiastical strictness, that they not continually expose themselves to the service of Jews for any wage, etc. How praiseworthy, and how supremely beneficial and useful for the preservation of the honor of the Christian religion and for all Christians, it would also be if one were to diligently and zealously abide by that prohibition which is found under the aforementioned title, in the 13th chapter, issued by Pope Innocentius the Third, and which reads as follows: Inbibemus ergo distractè, ne Judæi de cætero nutrices vel servientes habeant Christianos, ne filii liberæ filiis famulentur ancillæ, sed tanquam servi à Domino reprobati, in cujus mortem nequiter conjurarunt, se saltem per effectum operis recognoscant servos illorum, quos Christi mors liberos, & illos servos effecit, That is: We therefore strictly forbid that Jews henceforth have Christian wet nurses or other Christians who serve them, so that the children of the free woman may not render service to the children of the handmaid, but rather that they, as servants rejected by the Lord, to whose death they wickedly conspired together, may recognize at least through the actual performance of their works that they are the servants of those whom the death of Christ made free, while making them servants. If Christians were restrained from all Jewish service by a renewed and severe prohibition, how quickly would the Jews, puffed up with their stinking pride, let go of their arrogance, and thereupon reflect that the curse of God rests upon them, and consider why this is so, and through such reflection be moved to conversion. But let this be enough on the subject of the excessive freedom of the Jews and how it is to be withdrawn from them.

Fifth, regarding the elevation and promotion of Jews to positions of honor, it would be desirable that this no longer take place, because, as has been demonstrated above in this chapter from their own books, they are thereby strengthened beyond measure in their erroneous religion, and regard this as an infallible sign that they are still God's beloved and dear children. Let one consider, for God's sake, what has been reported at length above in the first chapter of the first part concerning their horrible blasphemies against God the Father, and immediately thereafter in the second, third, and fourth chapters concerning their abominable slanders and blasphemies against God the Son, our sole Redeemer and Savior, and in the following sixth chapter concerning their dreadful blasphemy against God the Holy Spirit. Let one weigh how wantonly they dishonor, revile, and despise the New Testament, the holy Evangelists and Apostles, and all the Saints, the Christian religion, the holy Sacraments, the Christian Church, our feast and holy days, and Christians as a whole, as has been powerfully demonstrated in the seventh, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and following chapters up to the nineteenth chapter of the aforementioned first part; likewise how unspeakably they curse and execrate us, according to the content of the second chapter of this second part, and let one then consider within oneself whether such a godless person, who in so shameful and malicious a manner strips all honor from God and His Christian Church, is worthy of being promoted to any position of honor, or of being honored in any way whatsoever. In the Imperial Recesses, in the Reformation of good polity established at Augsburg in the year 1530, titulo 1, §. 5, it is stated that whoever commits the blasphemy mentioned in the preceding §. 1, 2, namely blasphemy against God, the most holy humanity of Christ, Mary His mother, and the saints, and is not punished in body or life on that account, shall be considered dishonorable and shall be regarded as such by men, and may also be declared dishonorable on that basis. All of which was subsequently repeated, by virtue of the said Imperial Recesses, in the Police ordinance established at Frankfurt in the year 1577, titulo 1, §. 7. Now, there are surely no worse blasphemers of God, despisers of Christ and His blessed mother, and of all the Saints, under the sun than the Jews. Therefore they are all to be regarded as dishonorable, and not worthy of being promoted to any positions of honor, or of having even the least honor shown to them by Christians. Hence it also follows that they are regarded in law as disreputable; on this account Gilhaufen writes in his arbore judiciaria civili, in the first chapter of the first part, numero 72, in the following manner: Judei sunt infames, viles, abjectæ, & humiles personæ, that is, the Jews are dishonorable, base, contemptible, and lowly persons. If one now wishes that more Jews convert to the Christian faith and promote the honor of Christ and the Christian Church, as everyone is obligated to do, then it is highly necessary that those things be omitted by which the Jews, by their own admission, are confirmed and maintained in their erroneous faith, among which the promotion of them to positions of honor, and likewise the honor otherwise shown to them, is by no means the least.

Sixth, regarding the matter that Jews are deterred from accepting the Christian religion because converts are very often left entirely without support and in the deepest poverty among Christians: this is not very surprising, for enduring hunger and hardship is exceedingly bitter and unbearable to a person. If they had learned a trade, or were otherwise accustomed to heavy labor, or had the means to start and carry on a business or commerce, they could see to their own sustenance themselves. The first two of these things are entirely absent among them, and the third is to be found among only a few; therefore it is necessary that one lend such people a helping hand and assist them forward, so that they can begin and pursue something by which they may secure their livelihood. But so that no Christian need be burdened with contributing money toward this, although every person is obligated to contribute according to his means toward such a work that redounds to the honor of God, I would hold, without presuming to dictate, that the matter could be helped in the following manner. In the Imperial Recesses, as was already mentioned shortly before, in the reformation of good Policey established at Augsburg in the year 1530, titulo 1, on blasphemy, §§ 1 and 2, and titulo 2, § 1, the blasphemy of God, of the humanity of Christ, of the Virgin Maria, and of all the Saints is strictly forbidden, and it is commanded that such blasphemers shall be punished criminally with their lives or with the removal of certain of their members. The very same is also to be found in the aforementioned Imperial Recesses of the reformation of good Policey issued at the said Augsburg in the year 1548, titulo 3, § 1, and in the Policey-Ordnung established at Frankfurt in the year 1577, titulo 3, § 1, as well as in the criminal court ordinance of Emperor Carolus the Fifth, in the 106th title. Since, now, the Jews blaspheme, revile, and despise our most innocent Savior Christ Jesus, and His holy Mother, together with all the Saints, in the most terrible manner, as has been mentioned and sufficiently demonstrated above, they could therefore also well be punished in the aforementioned manner; as indeed Jews who have poured out blasphemies against Christ have already on several occasions been executed by the sword, concerning which Carpzovius in pract. Crim. part. 1. quest. 45. numero 55. may be consulted. It is also recorded in the ninth part of the Theatri Europei, pagina 995, col. 2., that a Jew at Cracow in the year 1663 was adjudged by the court to be worthy of death on account of blasphemous words poured out against the divinity of Christ.

Since all Jews would have to be executed in this manner, given that they can all be accused and convicted of blasphemy on the basis of their prayer books, I am of the opinion that their blasphemies must also be distinguished from those blasphemies committed by Christians, that is, by people who know that Christ is true God and man in one person, and who commit such acts willfully and against their own conscience. The Jews, by contrast, blaspheme out of pure ignorance, since from youth they are badly instructed, as though Christ the Lord had led a wicked life and defiled Himself with grievous sins, as has been shown in the second and third chapters of the first part, which is why they hate Him in the extreme. Christ the Lord Himself, moreover, when He hung on the cross, attributed the evil deeds committed against Him by the Jews to their ignorance and prayed for them, as may be read in Luke 23:34, where He said: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"; and yet not only was He greatly blasphemed by them at that very moment on the cross, as may be seen in Matt 27:39 and Mark 15:29, but He had also previously been forced to hear many words of blasphemy and abuse from them, when they said of Him that He drove out devils through Beelzebub, the chief of the devils, as may be read in Matt 12:24 and Luke 11:15, and that He had Beelzebub, as is written in Mark 3:22 and John 7:20. I would therefore hold that one ought to proceed more leniently with the Jews in this matter, and that instead of punishing them in body and life, one should punish them in their goods and money, which they have scraped together through godless usury and shameful deceit, taking most of it from them, and applying a good portion of it toward the maintenance of those Jews who accept the Christian faith. In this way, the poor converts could be assisted, and all obstacles arising in this matter could be entirely removed from those who, out of fear that they would suffer want if they were to become Christians, might be deterred, and they could thereby be all the more encouraged toward their conversion.

Regarding the grave insults, humiliations, contempts, and curses, and indeed the very danger to body and life, which those who either wish to convert to the Christian religion or have already converted, as mentioned above, must fear from malicious Jews: there is indeed a sharp prohibition against this in the Imperial Laws, in the third lex of the Codex de Judaëis & Coelicolis, in these words: Judæis volumus intimari, quòd si quis post hanc legem aliquem, qui eorum feralem sectam fugerit, & ad Dei cultum respexerit, saxi aut alio furoris genere (quod nunc fieri cognovimus) ausus fuerit attentare, mox flammis dandus est, & cum omnibus suis participibus concremandus, That is: We wish it to be made known to the Jews that if any one of them, after this law, dares to attack someone who has abandoned their destructive sect and turned to the service of God, with stones or in any other violent manner (which we have learned is now occurring), that person shall immediately be thrown into the fire and burned together with all his accomplices. Yet the Jews, on account of their abominable hatred toward converts, are so brazen and reckless that they insult, despise, and revile them in every way they can and may, and indeed, in order to make them hated among Christians, speak all manner of evil against them. They also curse them, together with all of Christendom, daily in a prayer which is called ברכת המינים Birchát (or Birchas) hammínim, that is, the cursing of heretics, and which begins as follows: Velammeschummadím, (or Velammalschíním) al tehi tikvah, vechól hammínim keréga jovédu etc., That is: The apostates (or slanderers) shall have no hope, and all heretics must perish in an instant, etc. This matter has been treated at length above in the second chapter of this second part, paginâ 107. etc. It would therefore be necessary that the Jews be once again most strictly forbidden to injure or curse, in any manner whatsoever, whether secretly or openly, in word or deed, any of those who convert; and that they be earnestly commanded to omit henceforth the aforementioned curse-prayer entirely, along with other godless things in their prayer books. If this were done, and the first person who acted against it were punished in an exemplary manner, the others would take it as a warning and leave it off in the future; and thus this cause as well, which holds one or another back from conversion, could be averted and removed from the path.

To conclude this work, I wish from the bottom of my heart that the dear God (who, as may be read in Deut 7:6 and Ps 135:4, chose the Jewish people of old as a people of His own possession from among all the peoples that are upon the earth, and caused the Messiah and Redeemer of the human race to come forth from them, but afterward rejected and cast them off for a time on account of their unbelief, as it is written in Rom 11:20, through whose fall salvation came to the Gentiles, as is taught in Rom 11:11) would in grace have mercy upon the blind and hardened Jews, whose salvation and blessedness the holy Apostle Paul so fervently desired in Rom 9:3-4; that He would remove the veil of Moses which hangs before their hearts, take away from them, according to the prophecy of Ezekiel in Ezek 36:26, the heart of stone out of their flesh and give them a heart of flesh, illuminate their understanding, which is utterly and entirely darkened in spiritual matters, with the rays of His boundless goodness and mercy, and fulfill among them the words of the aforementioned holy Apostle Paul in the Epistle to the Romans, Rom 11:25-26; so that they may recognize Christ the Lord, as the sole Savior and Redeemer promised by God in the Old Testament and sent in the fullness of time, with true faith, receive the consoling teaching of the New Testament, and serve together with us the eternal triune Creator of Heaven and Earth, God Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, in this transient life, in the unity of faith, in such a manner that we here, as brothers in Christ, walk with one another in sincere conduct, and that after this earthly existence we may all in eternal blessedness praise and glorify God continually in unspeakable joy and glory.

Index of the Contents of Part II of the Discovered Judaism.

A.

What the flesh of an animal slaughtered by a Christian is to be considered. pp. 616, 617. Punishment of a Jew who eats from carrion. 617. How such a person is brought back to order. ibid. It is, to be sure, forbidden to Jews in some places in their books to sell carrion to a Goi or Christian as good meat. 630. Yet in other places in their books it is, on the other hand, permitted under certain conditions. 632, 633, 634, 635. In Hebrew it is called נבלה (nefela). 631. The unclean spirit is said to dwell upon it, and why this occurs. ibid. It is said to have an influence from the devil. 637. And to be struck by him. 638, 639, 640. For this reason it is to be given to Christians to eat, who are also said to derive from the devil. 638, 639, 640. How carrion resembles the idolatrous peoples. 909.

Abaye had a lamb accompany him to the privy, and why. 449.

Abarbanel laments that the Jews are falsely accused by Christians of child murder and of eating their blood. 226. He denies that all people shall be judged on the Last Day. 957 to 966. How Rabbi Menasse ben Israel refutes this. 966, 967, 968. How Abarbanel rejects the teaching of R. Mosche bar Nachman and others concerning the Last Judgment, and defends his own. 961 to 965. How, on the other hand, R. Menasse ben Israel refutes Abarbanel's opinion. 966, 967, 968.

The merit of deceased saints is said to bring about forgiveness of sins for the Jews. 277, 278. They are said to intercede before God on behalf of the living. 279. They are invoked by the Jews. 280.

Christ is called an idol, and indeed the contemptible one. 127.

Idols will be completely eradicated at the time of the Messiah. 777.

Idolatry, the renunciation of it and abhorrence of it, is regarded as the observance of the entire Law. 292.

Idolatrous peoples come into hell. 253. 257. 258. They will walk over the bridge of hell and fall into it. 258. How long they must remain in each dwelling of hell. 356. They are like the carcass of cattle. 909.

Idolatrous person is called a pig. 3. Jews are forbidden to rescue such a person from death. 189. 190. The reason for this prohibition. 190. 191. 192. Indeed, he is to be killed. 201. 204. 215. The Jews' objection against this. 201. 202. Refutation of the same. 202.

Abimelech's prince and presiding angel is said to have kept Abimelech from sinning, and to have been pierced with needles on his account. 802. 803.

Abraham is said to have revealed the doctrine of the transmigration of souls from one body or place to another. 25. He is said to have been thrown into a fiery furnace in Chaldea. 61. To have chosen the Exilium under the 4 monarchies for his descendants. 262. 344. What conversation he had with GOD concerning the sins of the Israelites. 275. 276. GOD swore to him that no circumcised person comes into hell. 286. 339. He sits before the gates of hell and lets no circumcised person enter. 286. 340. He desired from GOD an eternal seed. 294. What GOD answered him. ibid. He is said to bring certain of the damned out of hell. 343. 361. He rescued his father Terah from hell. 359. 360. What teacher he had. 375. He was thrown into a fiery furnace. 378. On which day he was circumcised. 503. On account of the blood of his circumcision, the sins of the Jews are forgiven on the Day of Atonement. ibid.

Renunciation of idolatry and abhorrence of it is regarded as an observance of the entire Law. 292.

Absalom, where he is in hell. 341. Is said not to be tormented there, and why. 342.

Ahab, where he sits in hell. 342. Is said not to be tormented. ibid.

Achtariel is one of the three angels who receive the prayers of the Israelites and weave crowns from them. 393.

Adam is said to have had all 600,000 souls of the Israelites attached to him. 16. Also to have seen them all. 16. 17. From what he was created. 17. Gave David 70 years from his own years. 17. His soul passed into David and will come into the Messiah. 25. 730. 731. Lost his glorious soul on account of sin. 26. Caused death. 81. 82. The whole world sinned when he sinned. 82. He saw by means of a certain light from one end of the world to the other. 313. He sits at the gates of Paradise among those who have repented. 320. 321. What teacher he had. 375. Devils are said to have been created from his seed. 412. He is also said to have mingled with she-devils and to have begotten devils. 412. 414. 415. 422. 423. How long this lasted. 413. Why he did not wish to lie with Eve for 130 years. 412. 413. He lay with Lilith against his will. 413. 414. Who was his first wife. 417. 418. From whom Adam and Eve learned the burial of the dead. 444. 445. He is said to have had a book in which all his generations were described. 673. 675. 676. Who gave him this book, what was written in it, and how long people possessed it. 676. GOD is said to have shown him all the souls that would come into the world. 676. His soul, which is called Neschama, is said to have passed into Enoch. 722. How long he was created large, and how he was afterward made smaller. 822. 824. Six things were taken from him, which are to be restored to mankind at the time of the Messiah. 823. 824. 825. 826. In what these consist. 823. When he will rise again together with Eve and the patriarchs. 902. 903.

The Emperor Adrianus, what kind of conversation he held with R. Joshua concerning the angels who are said to be created every day. 372. How he laid waste to the city of Jerusalem, and how it was named Aelia after his name. 867.

Offense, which is given to the Jews by the Christians. 991.

Afika, a hero in Jerusalem, what great deeds he performed. 382.

Abasuerus is said to have lain with a she-devil, believing he was lying with Esther. 452. 453.

Ajak אַיָּק, what kind of Kabbalistic transposition of the alphabet this is. 378.

Akkiva, a Talmudic teacher, how he rescued a damned man, who was also named Akkiva, from hell. 357. 358. 359.

Alans, what kind of people they are. 736.

Alcoran, contains many Jewish fables, and whence this comes. 444. 445.

Alexander the Great came before Paradise, and how it went for him. 321. 322. He is said to have enclosed the peoples called Gog and Magog behind an iron wall in high mountains. 733. 734. 735.

A person should go neither by day nor by night alone, and why? 451.

Giving alms brings salvation and protects against sudden death. 287. 288.

Alpiel, the angel, is said to be set over the fruit-bearing trees. 280.

Amalek signifies Christendom. 780. 781. It is to be utterly exterminated. 784. 785. 786. 791.

It is commanded to pursue, make war upon, and exterminate the Amalekites. 205. God has sworn to exterminate them from this world and the world to come. 265. Their souls are to become devils. 428.

Amen: on account of the speaking of it, the wicked will in the future be rescued from hell. 362. 363.

A magistrate in Swabia, how he had a quarter of meat spat upon by Jews, and what came of it. 643. 644.

Countenance: the Prince of the Countenance is Metatron. 396. 401.

The countenances of the righteous, how they will shine in the future. 826.

Aniel, the angel, is said to be set over the birds. 379.

Antichrist, is said to be Armillus. 705. According to Abarbanel's opinion, the Messiah, the son of Joseph, is said to be the same. 747.

Apple wine is said to relieve abdominal pain. 878. A Gentile is said to have had 300 buckets, who was 70 years old. 878.

An Arab told a Jew that the Messiah had been born. 653. 654.

Aravoth is one of the seven firmaments. 927. 928. What is contained therein. 928.

Armillus, how he is said to be born from a marble statue of a virgin. 705. 708. 709. 711. Who will be the Antichrist. 705. Description of him. 705. 708. 709. 710. He will present himself to the Christians as their Messiah. 705. 706. 708. And they will believe in him. 706. How he will demand of the Israelites that they regard him as a God, and what kind of war will arise between him and the Israelites. 706. How long such a war will last. He will kill the Messiah, the son of Joseph. 706. 710. He will also conquer Egypt. 708. Finally, he will be killed by Menachem, the son of Ammiel, that is, the Messiah, the son of David. 709. With whom he will wage war. 714. How he will perish along with his entire army. 714. 715.

Poverty makes one blessed. 289. Is the greatest plague. ibid. Is said to suit the Jews very well. ibid.

Asiel is said to be a prince of hell. 333.

Physician of the Jews: see Jewish Medicus.

Medicine: no Jew may take it from a Cuthean, Goi, idolater, or Epicurean, though with conditions. 227. 228. That whose effect is uncertain may be tested on Christians in order to learn something. 230.

Asa and Asael were holy angels. 430. What they said to God against the creation of the first man, and what happened to them as a result. 430. Why they were no longer able to ascend into heaven. 387. 430. How they obtained bodies, took wives, and begat giants. 430. Where they dwell, and how they are bound in chains. 439. They teach men sorcery. 439. They also taught Balaam the same. 440. And they are said to have instructed Solomon in foreign wisdoms. 441.

Resurrection of the dead, when it will occur. 772. 819. After it, there will be no more death. 819. It is an article of faith among the Jews. 890. 896. He who denies it has no share in eternal life and is a heretic. 890. 891. 910. 911. How the Jews prove it from Holy Scripture. 891. Why it is not clearly taught in the 5 Books of Moses. 891. 892. It is to occur at the time of the Messiah. 893. 894. And to take place 40 years after the gathering of the Jews. 894. 895. Abarbanel's error concerning this. 895. According to the teaching of R. Bechai, it is to occur 206 years after the coming of the Messiah. 893. 896. 897. The resurrection of the Israelites will occur before the resurrection of the other nations. 901. When the righteous will rise before others. 902. When Adam and the patriarchs together with their wives will rise. 902. 903. Disagreement among the rabbis concerning the resurrection of the dead. 903. 904. According to some, only the Israelites are to be worthy of it. 904. 905. 906. 907. And all are to rise. 906. Others teach that the pious among the nations of the world will also rise. 908. Others are of the opinion that even the godless among the nations of the world who did not die in the land of Israel will rise. 908. 909. Abarbanel teaches that people from all nations will rise, and to what end. 909. The generation of the Flood is not to rise. 910. Some hold that only the righteous among the Jews, and not the godless, will rise. 910. 911. 912. 915. Others, however, teach on the contrary that the godless Israelites will also rise. 913. 914. 915. R. Bechai contradicts himself on this point. 915. According to some opinions, the unlearned are not to rise. 915. 916. Others, however, teach that they too will rise. 916. The Samaritans are not to rise. 916. Isaac Abarbanel teaches that if all people were to rise, the earth would be too small for them and could not contain them. 913. What Rabbi Saadiah writes about this, and how much space each person who rises will have. 915. How the aforementioned R. Saadiah answers the question of whether those who are devoured by wild beasts will rise again. 917. 918. Where the dead will rise. 918. 919. 920. The dead of the land of Israel are to rise first. 920. 921. The souls are to re-enter their bodies at the resurrection in the land of Israel. 923. 924. 926. 933. How long the souls will wait for the resurrection. 924. The resurrection, however, is to occur by means of a dew. 906. 927. 928. 929. 933. The dead are to rise with their garments. 934. 935. And with the defects of their bodies. 935. 936. 937. 948. Also in the condition of the age at which they died. 937. 938. The very same body that died will rise. 938. 939. 940.

The rabbis' teaching on the resurrection of those bodies in which souls have been successively transferred. 940. 941. 942. 943. After the resurrection, people are to eat, drink, and perform other bodily functions. 943. 945. 946. The rabbis' disagreement as to whether those who are resurrected will die once more. 944. through 948. Those who are resurrected will recognize their friends and relatives. 948. 949. After the resurrection there will be no more kings and princes. 949.

The resurrection of the dead is attributed by some rabbis to GOD. 896. 922. By others to the Messiah. 897. 898. 899. By others to the righteous. 899. 900. And they are said to be able to raise them with their staffs. 899. 900. Every person who dwells in the Promised Land is said to be able to raise his relatives outside of it. 900. The resurrection will occur through a dew. 927. 928. 929. And through the sound of a trumpet. 927. 929.

The extermination of the enemies of GOD, what this means. 110. seqq.

B.

The builders of the Tower of Babylon, how they were punished. 32. 429. Babylonian man, how he was killed by Rabbi Schela. 212. 213.

The ban on those Jews who accuse one another before the Christian authorities. 473. As also on a Jew who bears witness against another Jew that the latter is indebted to a Christian. 479. 480.

Bar Cochaf or Bar Cosiba, how he presented himself as the Messiah and was anointed as king. 654. 655. Why he was called Bar Cochaf. 655. When this occurred. 655. How long he reigned. 655. Why he was called Bar Cosiba. 654.

Bar Juchne, a great bird, is said to be eaten at the future banquet of the righteous. 877. Why it is called by this name. 877. It is also called Sis. 877.

Mercy toward idolaters and the nations of the world is forbidden to the Jews. 190. 191. As also toward enemies, the wicked, and the ignorant. 191.

Tree of Life in Paradise, and its description. 311. How long it is. 817.

Trees, how many different kinds there are in Paradise. 311. Are good for medicine, and fragrant. 311. What angels are appointed over the trees. 380. Trees will in the future bear fruit every day. 835. Even the barren trees will then bring forth fruit. 831. 835. Magnificent trees will grow in the Temple, as happened in former times. 836. Fruit-bearing trees will also grow beside a river of the Temple. 836.

Cups set with precious stones and pearls, which the righteous will have in Paradise. 883. How much David's cup will hold in the future. 885.

Bedargon, what a wondrous form of devil it is. 436. 437. It dies when it strikes a person, whereas the person dies when he strikes it. 436.

Burial of children causes sins to be forgiven. 275.

Lodging of strangers brings salvation. 288.

Bones of men shall at the resurrection sing a hymn of praise to God. 949. 950. And indeed more so than the children of Israel did at the sea. ibid. The little bone from which the bodies of the dead are formed at the resurrection. See Lus.

Killing converted Jews is permitted by the Jews, indeed even commanded. 194. 195. 196. Examples thereof. 197. 198. 199. They are to be damned for eternity. 356. Their souls are to become devils. 428. A converted Jew is called by the Jews meschummad, that is, "the Exterminated," but a converted Jewess is called meschummedeth or meschummedes, that is, "the Exterminated one." 988. How a converted man's wife is further called reméa venidda, that is, "an Unclean one." 988. The children of a converted man are called mamserim, that is, "whorish children." 988. How the Jews further conduct themselves toward converts. 989. 990. They curse them daily. 1029. Converted Jews are left without help, whereby other Jews are deterred from conversion. 1006. It is necessary that one assist them in their maintenance, and how this may be accomplished. 1027. 1028. To protect them against the Jews' blasphemous and abusive words, as well as acts of violence, is very necessary. 1029.

The conversion of very many Jews under the Visigoth king Sisibuto. 992. How Raimundus Martini, Hieronymus de sancta fide, and Mr. Ezardi in Hamburg brought about the conversion of many Jews. 992. 993. The conversion of the Jews, how it is to be promoted. 1016. through 1039. And how it is hindered: see Jews.

The robbing of a Goi or Christian is, to be sure, forbidden to the Jews in certain places in their books, because the name of God is thereby profaned. 585. 586. But on the other hand it is also permitted according to the teaching of some rabbis. 589. 590. Jews admit that they practice this vice. 591.

Mountains will dance before the righteous in the time to come. 881. 882.

Mount Sinai is said to have ascended into heaven at the giving of the Law. 246. It is said that in the time to come it will sing a hymn of praise together with Mount Thabor and Carmel. 847.

Shaming: whoever shames his neighbor has no share in eternal life. 353.

Circumcision, how highly it is regarded. 286.

One who is circumcised does not go to hell. 259. 285. 286. 339. 340.

Conjuring of angels was customary among the Jews. 380. How some inhabitants of Jerusalem wished to make use of it, and what followed from it. 381. What Chanameel accomplished thereby, and what happened as a result. 382.

Visiting the sick, what it brings about. 290. He who does not observe it is considered a murderer. ibid.

Fraud is indeed regarded in the Jewish books as a great sin. 574. And it is forbidden to practice it in buying and selling, measuring, weighing, and reckoning, and even in mere words, against Christians and Jews alike. 574. 575. 576. 630. Notwithstanding this, it is on the contrary also permitted to practice it against a Christian. 577. 578. And it is forbidden to Jews only against their neighbor, namely against one another. 577. The Talmud permits fraud even to the pious. 578. 579. Examples of Jewish frauds in words. 579. Fraud in accounting is also permitted in a certain manner. 580. Examples of frauds committed by Talmudic teachers. 580. 581. What the convert Ferdinand Heß writes concerning the fraud of the Jews. 581. 582. What the convert Samuel Friedrich Brenz reports about it. 582. What a rabbi, according to the testimony of Dietrich Schwaben, employed as fraud against a Christian and his wife. 582. 583. What kinds of frauds the Jews employ with written documents, and examples thereof. 583. 584.

Bileam prophesied concerning Christ. 266. From whom he learned sorcery. 439. 440. He is said to have been one of Pharaoh's counselors. 439. He fought against Moses in the land of the Moors. 440. What he did further thereafter. 440. He was a prophet by accident, and to what end. 905.

Birbath hamminim, what kind of prayer it is, and what it is further called. 107. 108. 114. It is prayed three times daily. 107. Against whom it was composed. 114. 115. 119. 120. In it, not only baptized Jews but also all Christians are cursed. 108. The Jews do indeed deny this and interpret it differently. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. Their false pretense is, however, refuted. 114. through 121. When and where it was composed. 117. 118. 119. 120.

Bithur, a city in which the false messiah Bar Cochab, or Bar Cosiba, was anointed king. 655. How many Jews were killed therein. 656. How populous it was. 656.

The leaves of the trees of Paradise, how sweetly they smell. 314.

The blood of the Messiah, the son of Joseph, shall atone for the people of God. 721.

Devils are said to eagerly eat blood. 458. The reason why one should not eat blood. 619. 620. The devil is the father of those who eat blood. 620. A dew of blood will fall upon the earth shortly before the coming of the Messiah, and the entire world will be full of blood for three days. 702. God has permitted the Jews to shed the blood of the nations. 200. 201. The blood of Christian children, and the purposes for which the Jews are said to use it. 222. 223. 224. 225. Abarbanel denies it. 226.

The leech is called Hell. 325. 326.

Boaz, why he laid his hand upon Ruth's head. 409.

The goat was in ancient times required to bear the sins of the Jews. 154. The same is said to have been given as a gift to Sammael, the chief devil. 155. And it is said to have signified Esau together with his descendants, who are now held to be the Christians. 158. Proof that the Jews teach that Christendom is the goat that bears their sins. 159. 160. 161.

The goat that is sent into the wilderness on the Day of Atonement, and how it atones for sins. 504. 505.

Evil nature and disposition will in the future be entirely eradicated. 819. 820. 821.

An evil spirit, how it dwelt with Rabbi Channina in the form of a frog, and who begat it. 406.

Evil will in the future cease entirely. 369.

Bozrah is said to signify Rome. 693. 694. 695. 799. 800. And indeed it will be laid waste and destroyed like Sodom and Gomorrhah. 799. 800.

Bragadino was flayed alive by the Jews. 219.

The letter that King Solomon sent to the Queen of Sheba. 442. 443.

The bread of the Goyim, that is, of the Christians and other peoples, in what manner it is permitted or forbidden for Jews to eat it. 614. 615. 616. The bread of the Samaritans is forbidden for Jews to eat. 916.

The word "brother" is set in opposition among the Jews to the word Goi. 593. 594. 602.

Whether Christians are the brothers of the Jews. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610.

The book that Adam received from the angel Raziel, what kind of book it was, and how the matter came about. 675. 676. A book was found among the Roman treasures, and what was written therein. 678. 694. Books in which blasphemies against Christ and the Christian religion are contained shall be taken from the Jews. 1022.

No covenant shall be made with idolaters. 204.

Ark of the Covenant: see Ark of the Covenant. Jews are to be sureties for one another. 285. 508. Repentance is to be of no benefit to Christians for salvation. 268. Repentance; what use it is on the Day of Atonement for the forgiveness of sins. 504. 505. It atones for all transgressions. 505. When the Jews do repentance, the Messiah is to come. 670. 671. 672. What a great act of repentance the Jews performed in the year 1500 A.D.. 671. 672.

C.

Kabbalah, that is, the traditiones and oral teachings are to be considered equal to the Law and held in equally high regard. 437. Carolus Calvus, Roman Emperor, was poisoned by a Jewish medico by the name of Sedechia. 233. Chardaniel, the angel, is said to be set over the firmament. 380. How tall he is, and what occurs when he speaks. ibid. The Chaldean and Syriac languages are, according to some teachings, not understood by the angels. 390. 391. Others say they do understand them, but pay no heed to them. 392. 393. 394. Chanameel, how he conjured the angels and what followed from it. 382. Rabbi Chananja is said to have reigned at Rome in the place of Emperor Lupinus, in his likeness, for 6 months. 152. 153. And to have had a thousand princes put to death each month, and thereafter to have been taken up into heaven. 153. Rabbi Channina, how he came to acquire many hens, and sold them as goats, and what further transpired in connection with this. 596. 597. Charon, an evil spirit, how he was captured and imprisoned in a pit by Moses. 466. 467. Chefle hammaschiach: see Tribulations. Chitteer are the Romans. 266. Christians are to be exterminated. 99. 105. 705. They are Edomites. 104. Jews pray to God for their annihilation. 106. 108. 109. 122. 130. 137. 143. 162. 184. 185. They are to bear the sins of the Jews. 150. 151. 154. 160. 161. They are called the people of Tyre. 172. 179. 181. 186. And swine. 177. The crushing and devouring people. 178. The descendants of Seir. 182. The children of Edom. 738. 743. Heretics. 754. The Edomite people. 778. Chitteer. 789. Cutheans. 138. 473. 798. Christians are not regarded by the Jews as neighbors. 192. They are to observe no Sabbath or day of rest whatsoever. 206. 207. 208. They are also, on pain of death, to study not the Law of Moses but only the seven Noahide commandments. 299. They are all to be damned. 259. 260. 264. 266. 267. 485. 486.

486. 786. 787. Reason for this. 267. 485. 486. An objection that the Jews can raise. 267. Answer thereto. 268. Repentance shall profit them nothing. 268.

Christians should gladly accept gifts. See: Gifts. Whether they are brothers of the Jews or not. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. They descend from Esau, who is called Edom. 609. Therefore all the punishments prophesied against Edom shall come upon them. 609. They have no holiness within them. 619. Why all foods are permitted for them to eat. 619. Christians are said to be idolatrous people. 620. They must also serve the Jews. 634. Dogs are preferred over Christians. 635. 636. GOD is to stir them up in the future to war against Gog and Magog, that is, the Ishmaelites. 738. 739. 740. In order to take Jerusalem. 740. 741. Christians who venerate the Cross are called idolaters. 777. Christians are said to be enemies of GOD and of His law. 778. As also adversaries of the Israelites. 789. In the future they will be deemed by GOD unworthy of adopting the Jewish faith, which other nations, however, will adopt; they are called the accursed people. 779. They shall all be killed at the time of the Messiah. 780. 783. 784. 785. 788. 789. 791. Because they are said to descend from the power of the ancient serpent. 785. Who will kill and exterminate them. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. Christendom is called the kingdoms of Seir. 130. Esau. 105. 264. 283. Madbefa. 125. The barking enemy. 167. The calf. 167. The Adina, or the voluptuous one. 167. 180. 181. 184. 808. The tearing beast. 171. Zor. 172. 180. Uzith. 177. The beast in the reeds. 178. 182. 767. 781. The ravaging beast from the forest. 179. 184. The arrogant kingdom. 108. 181. Seir. 184. The kingdom of the wicked. 795. The enemy. 187. The godless kingdom. 261. 805. 794. 797. The godless Roman Empire. 266. 298. The godless Edom. 738. The Edomite kingdom. 767. 771. 779. The hunter. 166. The fourth kingdom. 781. 790. Christendom will, on account of its pride, descend into hell. 485. The ten Egyptian plagues shall come upon it. 794. 795. 796. 797. It shall be destroyed by fire. 797. 838. Reason for this. 797. 798. It shall be judged by the sun. 798. Christendom shall, according to the teaching of the Jews, perish utterly like Sodom and Gomorrah. 798. 799. 800. How this downfall of Christendom was prefigured. 800. 801. It shall be struck with leprosy. 804. All nations shall in the future fall away from it. 805. Why it is compared to a Chasir, that is, a pig. 850.

Christ, how He is blasphemed by the Jews in their synagogues or schools. 1021.

Chutriel, an infernal spirit that strikes the damned. 342. Cofér, the Jews' name for a rural official, town, and chancery scribe, and why. 472. Constantine the Emperor, how he punished the rebellious Jews. 867. Cuthean sometimes signifies Christendom. 138. 473. 798. It is often used in place of the word Gojim. 190. Cutheans are killed when they cross the river Sabbation. 213. 557. Cuthean also sometimes signifies the Samaritans. 916. Eating their bread is forbidden to the Jews. 916. They are not to be received into the Jewish religion, nor to have any part in the resurrection. 916.

D.

Dalkiel, an infernal spirit that strikes the damned. 343. The thanksgiving after the meal held in Paradise, and why Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and Joshua will not wish to offer it in the future. 884. 885. The dancing of the angels before Adam. 17. God is said to dance in the future with the righteous in Hell, which will be purified. 368. 369. And at the meal in Paradise. 881. 882. 883. The wild beasts, birds, creeping things, and the devils are said to have danced before Solomon. 441. 442. The devils are said to dance on the horns of oxen, and when this is to occur. 450. They are also said to dance before the women who return from a burial. 450. Mountains will dance before the righteous. 882. The sun, moon, and stars will also give thanks at the meal in Paradise. 883.

David, King of Israel, received 70 years from Adam. 17. His soul is said to have been the soul of Adam, and in the future it will pass into the Messiah. 25. 730. 731. He will offer thanks to God after the meal held in Paradise. 884. 885. How large the cup will be that he will use for this purpose. 885.

David's son, namely the Messias, will in the future deliver the wicked from Hell. 364.

David Almasser, a sorcerer in Meden, how he presented himself as the Messias, and what befell him. 663. 664.

David Eldavid, who was also called David Elroi, what kind of deceiver and false Messias he was. 664.

David the Rubenite, how he came to Rome in the year 1534 to Pope Clement the Seventh, and presented himself as an envoy of a Jewish king. 520. 521. How he also traveled to the King of Portugal, and what his business there was. 520. 521. Seduced a royal Secretary into the Jewish faith. 521. Was taken prisoner in Spain, where he died. 522. 523. What Rabbi Abraham Perizol writes about him. 522. 524. 525. This David was a deceiver. 526.

GOD will in the future make seven coverings or canopies of pearls and precious stones for the Messiah, from each of which 4 rivers will flow. 871. Seven shall also be made for each of the righteous. 872.

Deliel, the angel, is said to be set over the fish. 380. What princes he has under him. ibid. To purchase something from thieves is forbidden, and why? 586.

Theft: see Stealing.

Service which Christians render to Jews causes the Jews to be strengthened in their unbelief. 997. The same ought, as running contrary to the Word of GOD, to be entirely forbidden. 1024. 1025. How it is forbidden in ecclesiastical papal law. 1025. 1026.

Things which were in the Holy of Holies are said to be hidden, and are to come to light again at the time of the Messiah. 856 to 859. Seven things are said to have been created before the world. 897. 898.

Dinur, river: see River of Fire.

Doeg, where he sits in Hell. 342. Is not tormented, and why? 342.

Thunder is said to have Gabriel as its overseer. 380.

The Trinity: when the Jews wish to prove it from the Old Testament with clear words, what is to be answered to them. 893.

Duma, a prince of Hell, has many angels under him. 332. Under him stand three other princes. ibid. When he was made prince of Hell. 332. 333. Is set over the souls of the damned. 349.

E.

The northern corner: God is said not to have finished it at the creation, and why? 438.

Precious stones in the castle of King Daniel, above the river Sabbatyon: how brightly they shone. 558. Precious stones are said to have been sawed by angels in the sea for the future gates of Jerusalem. 843. R. Bechai teaches that window frames will be made from them, and gives the reason for this. 843. 844. Precious stones and pearls will in the future lie in great abundance around Jerusalem. 844. 845.

Edom signifies Christendom. 738. 795. It will be destroyed by fire. 797. The reason for this. 797. 798.

Edomites, i.e., Christians, are to bear the sins of the Jews. 150. 151. Edomite Kingdom is the name given to Christendom. 767. 771. 779. Is signified by leprosy. 804. Edomite, that is, a Christian king, is called a hairy or devilish man. 785. Egypt, how large it is. 296. 421. To whom it fell as a portion. 421. That which took place there is said to be a prefiguration of what will happen at the time of the Messiah. 801. Adulterous Branch is what Christ is called. 126. Positions of Honor, which are given to Jews by Christians, make the Jews obstinate in their false faith. 998. What a Jew who held a conversation with Philippus van Limborch writes about this. 998. 999. What R. Menasseh ben Israel reports in his little book מקוה ישראל (Mikveh Jisrael) on this matter. 999. to 1006. The Jews are worthy of no positions of honor, and why? 1026. 1027. Dishonorable, those are held to be in the Imperial Recesses who blaspheme Christ, His holy mother, and the saints. 1026. 1027. For this reason the Jews are considered dishonorable. 1027. Elijah is said to have given false testimony against a Babylonian. 212. 213. Lifts the head of the Messiah in Paradise. 304. Led Rabba into Paradise, and what took place there. 314. Is said to lead out of Hell those whose sins have been atoned for. 361. He also takes upon himself the punishment of certain of the damned, so that they may be rescued from Hell. ibid. What kind of teacher he had. 375. Is the angel Sandalfon. 401. Is said to have been an angel from Heaven. 402. Has appeared to many people as an Arabian merchant or as a knight. 402. 403. How he appeared to R. Jose in a wilderness. 403. Rescued Nahum, the man of Gamzu, from death. 403. 404. How he came to R. Simeon ben Yochai before a cave. 405. Killed a man, and why? 406. Is said to have appeared in the form of a harlot. 406. To have been present on the Day of Atonement. 406. To have been struck with fiery blows and to have appeared as a fiery bear. 406. Buried a dead man. 406. How his body was made fit so that he can appear everywhere. 407. Is said to come three days before the Messiah, and what he will do. 696. Why the Jews often call upon God for the coming of Elijah. 697. The rabbis have disputed with him as to which tribe he belongs to. 725. Will slaughter Sammael. 805. Elijah is said to offer sacrifice in the Temple of Jerusalem at all times. 851. From where he obtains the money for this. 851.

Elisha, son of Abuya, where he sits in hell. 343. Shall not be tormented. ibid.

Children of Anak, where they come from. 430.

Angels danced before Adam. 17. Are said to have desired the Law of Moses. 248. When they were created. 296. 326. 370. 371. Are not permitted to leave their place in Paradise. 308. 309. How many stand at the gates of Paradise, and how they shine. 310. How they clothe the righteous who arrive. 310. How many stand in each corner of Paradise and sing. 311. By what the angels are sustained. 318. The word "angel," where it comes from and what it means. 370. The distinction between the angels created on the second and fifth days. 371. God is said to create angels every day from the river Dinur, which then pass away again. 371. 372. 373. Which angels endure forever. 372. 373. From every word of God an angel is also said to be created. 373. Some are said to have been created from water, others from fire and from wind. 373. 374. 388. How many kinds of angels there are and what they are called. 374. Some angels are said to have been teachers of certain human beings. 374. 375. How many angels God has around Him at the very least at any given time. 375. 376. Which angels die, and why they die. 376. Over every single thing an angel is said to be appointed. 376. 377. Over what this and that angel is appointed. 379. 380. How certain angels were conjured, and what followed from it. 380. 381. 382. Angels called Ofannim are said to move the celestial spheres. 383. Why they are called Ofannim. 384. Such angels are said to be the souls of the celestial spheres. 384. What angels are appointed over the sun and moon. 385. Concerning the angels who govern the sun and attend upon it. 385. 386. Angels sometimes take on a human body. 386. Where they obtain it. 387. 388. They are not permitted to remain on earth for 7 consecutive days, and for what reason. 387. 388. They may not carry out two different tasks in a single mission, nor may two of them carry out one task. 388. Human sleep is said to originate from them. 388. 389. Angels intercede for human beings in heaven and are their advocates. 389. Such an angel is called Massal. ibid. Angels are said, according to some teaching, not to understand the Chaldean and Syriac languages. 390. Others teach that they do understand them, but pay no heed to them. 392. 393. The Israelites are envied by the angels on account of the Law. 393. Three angels are said to present the prayers of the Israelites before God, and what they are called. 393. From those prayers they are said to weave a crown. 393. And to place it upon God's head. 394. Three angels are said to have pursued Lilith when she flew away from Adam, and what they were called. 418. How they dealt with her. 418. The angels Asa and Asael, how they sinned, were cast out of heaven, took wives, and begat giants. 430. What angels mingled themselves entirely among human beings. 431. How they took on bodies. ibid. Three companies of angels are said to go before the deceased person, and what they say. 451. Angels, what they do when a person stands before God in judgment. 600. Angels are said to have sawn precious stones for the future gates of Jerusalem. 843. 855. 856. They will wait upon the righteous in Paradise. 883. And make music. 883. In the future they are said to seize the earth at its four corners and shake the wicked out of it. 922.

The angel of death, how he was sent by R. Gamaliel to R. Joshua ben Levi, and why it happened. 303.

Enoch was transformed into an angel called Metatron. 397. How this came about, and what transpired in connection with it. 398. 399. He had Adam's soul. 396. He was a cobbler. 399. 400. Also a schoolmaster. 400. And one of the righteous among the nations of the world. 400. His soul is said to have been the soul of the first man, Adam. 722.

Desecration of the name of God is a more grievous sin than murder and robbery. 475. 476.

Ephoh, an angel, what he did. 262.

Epicurean or heretic, how he fell into the depths of the sea, and what befell him. 855.

An earthquake is said to have thrown down the temple which the Jews built on the orders of Julian. 871.

The earth is divided among the nations. 4. How far it is from the firmament. 330. It will in the future be blessed as it was before the fall of Adam. 828.

Sabbatical years are to be observed again in the future. 859.

The redemption of the Jews will come with the fall of the Christians and the destruction of the city of Rome. 97. 690. When it will occur. 100. It is said to depend on repentance. 670. 671. 672. It is hidden from all people. 723. It is to be equal in all respects to the redemption from Egypt. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 808. At what time of year it will occur. 807. 808.

Saving Christians from death is forbidden to Jews. 189. 190. The reason for this. 190. 191. 192. Refutation of the objection that the Jews can raise against this. 192. 193. A Jew, however, is obligated to save another Jew. 193.

Seven things are said to have been created before the world. 897. 898.

The creation of certain things, when it occurred. 296.

The patriarchs are said to have restored the souls corrupted by Adam's fall. 15. How they weep together with the Messiah in Paradise. 304. 305. What befell them is said to have been a prefiguration for their children. 159. 160. 264. 801. When they will rise with their wives. 902. 903.

Isaiah, what kind of verbal dispute he will have with God in the future concerning the wicked. 882. How the Israelite congregation will render its verdict on the matter, and what will follow from it. 882.

Esau has drawn upon himself all the filth of Samael. 28. Bears the sins of the Jews. 159. Is signified by a goat. ibid. Has no share in eternal life. 261. Why he received the blessing of this world from his father and was loved by him. 263. 264. Is said to have spoken with Jacob in the womb and to have sold him eternal life. 264. Denied the resurrection of the dead. 264. His descendants have no share in eternal life. 260. 264. And there are none of them in Paradise. 304. Esau took four wives, just as the devil Samael did. 416. Esau's children are fond of accepting gifts. 481. The Jews are said to be commanded to give them gifts. 482. Esau is called the Unclean One. 482. His descendants do not regard the Jews as brothers. 606. 607. 608. 609. Samael helps his seed to shed blood.

620. Esau also signifies the Christians. 780. 781. Esau is the enemy of the Jews. 786. Esau's seed is to be exterminated. 786. Esau and Jacob are said to be unable to coexist. 786. How Esau will be judged in the future. 977. 978.

The Messiah's donkey, how old it is and who has ridden upon it. 697. How many colors it has. 698.

Eating: whoever gives a righteous man something to eat upholds the entire Law. 292. Eating from carrion is forbidden to the Jews. 617. The punishment for this. 618. Eating with an uncircumcised person, how harmful a thing it is. 630. The Jews are not permitted to eat from food cooked by Christians. 628. 629. One should not eat with the Jews. 645. 646.

Eve was sawed off from Adam. 15. She is said to have lain with the devils for 130 years and to have given birth to devils. 414. 415. The first Eve is said to have been Lilith. 421.

Even maskith אֵבֶן מַשְׁכִּית, a concubine of Sammael. 421. Where she resided. ibid.

Euphrates, the river is said to dry up in the future so that the Jews may pass through it. 746. It is said to be divided into seven parts, and to what end. 746. 747.

Eternal Life: seven kinds of people have no share in it. 598. 599.

599. He who denies the resurrection will have no part in it. 890. 891.

Oath: how the Jews are absolved of it on the eve of the Day of Atonement. 490. 491. On account of such absolution, they are accused of being released from all false oaths that they swear. 491. 492. They are further accused of such absolution because they can have themselves absolved from a vow, oath, or sworn promise by a rabbi or three ordinary Jews. 492. 493. 494. Such absolution from an oath has no foundation in Holy Scripture. 493. 494. Yet it is claimed that it can be proven from Scripture. 493. How such absolution takes place. 494. 495. What the Jews can put forward in their defense against the aforementioned accusation. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. The transgression of an oath, and what a grave sin it is. 495. 496. 500. How GOD has punished the false oath. 496. 497. Also when a Jew swears a false oath to a Goi or Christian. 497. King Zedekiah is said to have been released by the high council from the oath he had sworn to King Nebuchadnezzar. 500. Despite all of this, little weight is to be placed on a Jew's oath. 501. First reason: because they are accustomed to swearing falsely. 501. 502. Second reason: because they believe that on the Day of Atonement all their sins, even the gravest, are forgiven them. 502. through 509. Third reason: because they teach that an oath made under compulsion is no oath at all, and that it is permitted to them to annul in their mind an oath that they swear with their mouth. 509. through 512. Provided it can be done in secret. 512. Such annulment of an oath, the Jews learn from their Talmud. 512. 513. How sternly a Jew is admonished when he swears an oath before a Jewish judge. 514. This indicates that there is fear that a false oath will be sworn. 514. 515.

F.

Transmigration of souls from one body or place to another: see Souls.

Falling sickness in children, and what causes it. 450.

False Messiah: see Messiah.

Swearing falsely: see Swearing.

Fasting on Friday, why it is observed by Christians. 266. 267.

Enemy of the Jews is supposed to be the godless Esau, that is, Christendom. 786. Enemies of the people of GOD are supposed to be those who hate Jews and Gojim, that is, Christians. 110. GOD's enmity toward Christians. 100. Agriculture is regarded in the Talmud as the most menial occupation of all. 992. Rocks are supposed to have the angel Maktúniel as their appointed overseer. 380. The fire of man and of hell, when it was created. 326. 327. The fire of the dwelling of hell is unequal. 331. Where the fire of the lowest hell comes from. 331. How subtle it is. 331. 332. What angel is set over the fire. 378. 379. Christendom is to be judged with fire. 797. 798. The river of fire in hell, called Region and nehár dinur (נהר דינור), where it comes from. 346. 372. It falls upon the heads of the wicked. ibid. Nearly all the righteous are to be purified therein. 346. 366. How the souls of the wicked are brought through it into hell. 347. Every day angels are to be created from it. 371. 372. Fiery lions are in hell, which devour the damned. 341. Fish are eaten by Jews on the Sabbath, and why. 38. What angels are appointed over them. 380. The flesh of an animal slaughtered by Christians is regarded by Jews as carrion. 616. 617. It is also supposed to defile the one who carries it. 616. 617. Such uncleanness is supposed to come from the devil. 617. Christians should not buy meat from Jews, for weighty reasons. 641. 642. 643. Meat that was spat upon by Jews on the orders of an official, what it looked like the next day, and how the ravens refused to eat from it. 643. 644. In the future, 7,000 Jews will fly in the air of the land of Israel. 772. 773. On account of this, the other Jews will murmur against the Messiah. 773. What he will answer them. 773. The curse of the Jews against Christians: see Cursing. The curse against those who calculate the time of the Messiah. 677. 678. Rivers in Paradise, how many there are and what they consist of. 310. Rivers of fire are supposed to be in hell. 345. As also rivers of deadly poison. 345. What rivers will in the future flow from the canopies or heavens that GOD will make for the Messiah. 871. 872. Rivers of balsam will flow in Paradise at the great banquet of the righteous. 880.

"Foreigner," who is meant by this term among the Jews. 607. 609. Whom Abarbanel understands by it. 610.

Foreigners, that is, those who are not Jews, come from the left side. 255. Whatever they slaughter is to be regarded as leprosy. 255.

Kindness must be used in the conversion of the Jews. 1016. 1017.

Freedom, which is given to the Jews, is far too great. 993. Wherein it consists. 992. to 996. To deprive them of it is most necessary. 1019.

Peace: over this the angel Sansaniel is said to be appointed. 380.

A pious man, how it went with him when he doubted the great precious stone from which the door of the Temple is to be made in the future. 856.

Fruitful, magnificent trees will grow in the future along a river that will flow from the Holy of Holies of the Temple. 836. Solomon is said to have planted trees of this kind in the Temple, which God will place in it again at the time of the Messiah. 836.

Fruitfulness of the Promised Land, how great it is. 834. 835.

Princes, which are the eight princes mentioned in Mic 5:5. 943.

A prince in France, how he was forcibly thrown into a fire by a Jew and burned along with it. 983. 984.

Princes, who are angels, rule over the nations of the world. 5. These will in the future accuse the Israelites. 257. They are to lose their power at the time of the Messiah. 801. God casts down their thrones when He punishes the nations subject to them. 801. However, they are to be punished before the nations are punished and overthrown, on account of the sins of the peoples subject to them. 802. 803. They are to be slaughtered in the future. 805. 806.

G.

Gabriel, the angel, will go on a hunt with Satan. 7. And will in the future draw the wicked out of hell. 363. What he will further do with them. 363. 364. He is said to have been Joseph's teacher. 365. And to have been set over fire. 378. 379. And to be from fire. 379. He is also said to have been set over the ripening of fruits. 379. And over thunder. 380. How he, together with Michael, set fire to the Temple in Jerusalem. 383. He alone among the angels understands the Chaldean and Syriac languages. 390. Taught Joseph the 70 languages. 392. He is said in the future to go on a hunt with the Leviathan. 874.

Geese are said to exist from which streams of fat flow. 877. 878.

Galgariel, the angel, is said to have been set over the sun. 385. How many hosts he has under him. ibid.

Gamsu: see Nahum.

Gapim, what it signifies through Atbash. 140.

Garsiel, the angel, is said to have been set over peace. 380.

Prayer of the Jews for the Christian authorities. 95. 96. Also contains something against them. 97. 98. Their prayer when they walk upon what they consider to be holy graves. 277. 278. 279. Prayer atones for sins. 281. Stands in place of sacrifices. ibid. Prayers of the Jews are said to be received by three angels, who are to weave crowns from them and place them upon GOD. 393. 394. This, however, is to be understood only of Hebrew prayer. 393.

Prayer books of the Jews ought to be taken away from them, and they should be ordered to have others made, and why? 1022.

The commandments of the children of Noah are to be seven. 235. What they consist of. 238. How the Jews prove them from Holy Scripture. 238. 239. 240. Some rabbis have added a few more to them. 240. Of the above seven commandments, six are said to have been given to Adam, but the seventh to Noah. 241. Jews have 613 commandments. ibid. The commandment of GOD, why it is observed by the godless peoples of the world. 252. The observance of even a single commandment brings salvation. 291. 292. The commandment: Thou shalt not steal, how the Jews interpret it. 592. 593. How many commandments the Messiah will enjoin upon the nations to keep. 782. 783.

Memory, what kind of angel is appointed over it. 380.

Gehenna, where it comes from. 324.

Gehinnom, what kind of place it was, and how it received that name. 323. 324.

The goats of R. Channinae are said to have carried bears home on their horns. 596. 597. Milk is said to have flowed from goats in the Promised Land. 833.

The spirit of a man who had entered into a woman, what took place in connection with it, and how it was driven out again. 47. to 53. Another example. 53.

The spirits of the wicked become devils after their death. 427.

Promised Land: see Land of Israel.

Vows, how the Jews are absolved from them on the eve of their Day of Atonement. 490. 491. How they can be released from them by a rabbi or three ordinary Jews. 492. 493. 494. 500. Such absolution has no basis in the written law. 493. 494. How it takes place. 494. 495. A vow made under compulsion is no vow. 510. 511.

It is forbidden to purchase stolen goods. 586.

The righteous include both Jews and Gentiles. 110. In what great splendor and glory they will be in Paradise at the banquet. 882. 883. They will also in the future raise certain dead persons. 899. 900. And indeed with their staffs. ibid. What dead persons they will raise. 900. How many years before other people they will rise. 902. The righteous among the Israelites alone shall rise. 910. 911. 912. The condition of the same in the world to come. 947. The righteous shall in the future be led into Hell, and why. 337. 338. 339. 970. They shall also see the retribution of the wicked. 972. Before the righteous, after their death, three companies of angels shall go, and what they say. 451. The righteous shall in the future pass unharmed through the fire that will surround Jerusalem. 846. How many coverings or heavens God will make for the Messiah around each individual righteous person in the future. 871. 872. What kind of banquet will be prepared for them in Paradise. 872. to 883. How far the righteous will walk in Paradise. 309. How beautiful they will be. 310. 311. How they will be transformed. 311. Each one shall possess 310 worlds. 314. How they will be sustained in Paradise, and will know the past, present, and future. 318.

Righteousness and justice, in which firmament of heaven it is located. 928.

No earthly court punishes anyone before the age of 13. 83. The supreme court in heaven, before the age of 20. 816. When it will punish in the future. 816. 817. God's judgments are to come upon mankind at three different times of the year. 950. 951. 952. According to the Talmud, judgment over bodily matters is to be held at four times of the year. 953. See also Last Judgment. What meaning the word "judgment," which in Hebrew is called Din and Mischpat, sometimes carries. 962. 965. A parable concerning the body and the soul, over which judgment will be rendered simultaneously. 974. 975. How judgment over the nations of the world will come to pass in the future. 975. 976. How it will go for Esau. 977. 978.

Rabbi Gerson, how he describes in his little book גלילות ארץ ישראל (gelilot éretz jisráel) the river Sabbatyon and the land beyond it together with its inhabitants. 554. to 560. What gross lies he put forward in doing so. 560. to 563. He was a worthless, godless scoundrel. 563. His aforementioned little book was burned in Poland. 563. 564. His account agrees not at all with the teaching of other rabbis on many points. 564. 565.

Gifts: Christians should gladly accept them, wherein they agree with their ruler the devil Sammael. 480. The Jews admit that they give him gifts. 481. 482. And they are said to be commanded to do so. 482. They do not give them, however, out of a good heart. 483. What they think of one who accepts gifts. 483. 484. How they boast about their gifts and their effect. 484. 485. What they say when a Christian judge accepts no gifts. 483. to 485. What they say when they give a Christian a gift for the New Year, and what they call it. 483. A gift is compared to a stone, and why. 484. What the word schochad, that is, gift, means. 483. Jews may not give gifts to Christians without cause. 486. Rabbis gladly accept gifts. 486. 487. An example of this. 487. Although it is forbidden. 489. The Messiah will accept gifts from all peoples, with the exception of the Christians. 766. to 768. All peoples must also return to the Messiah all the gifts that Jacob gave to Esau. 768.

The generation of the Flood is said to have been punished with boiling springs of water. 799. It shall not rise again. 910. It shall have no share in the world to come, nor shall it stand in judgment. 957.

The Law is the root of the Israelite souls. 13. How many interpretations it has. 13. 16. Has interceded for the souls of the Israelites. 19. 20. A Christian who studies therein is guilty of death. 209. The Jews' cloaking of such an opinion. ibid. Answer thereto. ibid. The Talmud says that the Goi who studies in the Law is to be regarded as equal to a high priest. 209. Rambam also appears to concur with this opinion of the Talmud, although it runs contrary to the opinion of other rabbis. 268. Rambam also says expressly that a Christian shall not study in the Law, but only in the seven commandments of Noah. 209. The Law atones for all sins. 275. How one does as much as if he had kept the entire Law. 287. 288. 291. 292. The Law is expounded in Paradise. 311. The Law of Moses is said to have been offered by God to all peoples for their acceptance, but they were unwilling to accept it, with the exception of the Israelites.

241. 242. Why those peoples were unwilling to accept it. 245. 246. How the Jews prove this. 242. Why God offered it to the peoples. 242. It is said to have been proclaimed in 70 languages and to have been heard throughout the entire world. 242. 243. Elsewhere it is written that this occurred in only 4 languages. 244. How long the Law existed before the creation of the world. 243. 244. The peoples are said to have begrudged the Israelites the Law. 247. God is said to have offered it to the chief devil Sammael. 248. The angels are said to have desired it. 248. How it was written. 255. How the peoples of the world learned it. ibid. Why it was translated into Chaldean. 392. 393. The Metatron is the prince of the Law. 396. Why the Law of Moses makes brief mention of hidden things. 892. 893. It is given to the Israelites alone, and no one else is worthy of it. 904. 905.

Purchasing stolen goods is forbidden. 586.

Gilgul neschamoth גלגול נשמות, what it is. 23. How it is distinguished from ibbur. 87. Gilgul mechilloth גלגול מחילות, what it signifies. 920.

The brightness of the sun and moon, how great it will be in the future. 826. 827. Adam's brightness was taken from him, and is to be restored to mankind at the time of the Messiah. 823 to 826. The brightness of the righteous in Paradise. 883. The brightness of the skin of the Leviathan, how glorious it will be. 889. The brightness of the ministering angels. 310. The brightness of those who will rise from the dead. 964.

Belief in the thirteen articles of the Jewish religion brings salvation. 293.

Like seeks like. 447.

The parable of the body and the soul, which are to be judged together. 974. 975.

Gog and Magog, how long they are to be punished. 354. They are to wage war against the Jews in the future. 732. Rabbi Saadias understands by this the Roman Empire. 732. Rabbi David Kimchi understands it as the enemies of God. 733. Rabbi Abraham Seba understands it as certain peoples whom King Alexander Magnus is said to have enclosed within high mountains. 733 to 735. What manner of savage peoples they are. 735. What Rabbi David Kimchi and Rabbi Benjamin write concerning such enclosed peoples. 735. 736. According to others, Sennacherib is understood by Gog and Magog. 736. Rabbi Samiga understands by this the 70 peoples. 737. Isaac Abarbanel understands it as the Ishmaelites or Turks and the peoples of the East. 737 to 741.

A Gentile (Goi) is not to study the Law: see "Law." A Gentile who studies it is to be regarded as equal to a high priest. 267. 268. A Gentile is not God's portion. 594. Is not regarded as a brother. 593. 594. A dog is to be held in greater honor than a Gentile. 635. A Jew is forbidden to invite a Gentile as a guest, or to a wedding. 644. 645.

Gojim or Heyden (by which Christians are also meant) are said to be born of unclean women, and to be worthy of being exterminated when they are in the power of the Jews. ibid. They are not to observe the Sabbath, and not to rest. 206 to 208. The best among them should be killed. 215. 216. Why the Gojim are rich in this world. 252. Repentance is said to be of no benefit to them. 268. 269. Nor is the study of the Law. 269. They are not to be considered idolatrous people who dwell outside the Promised Land. 621. Gojim are said to rise again, but not to remain alive. 909.

Gold, in what great quantity it is found in the land beyond the river Sabbatjon. 555.

Gosan is said to be the river Sabbatjon. 535. 536. 544. 717. Why it is called Gosan. 544. It is the river Ganges. 554.

GOD is called the highest man. 2. He showed Adam all souls. 16. 17. He charges souls, before they come into the world, not to sin. 18. He does not punish man for his sins before the age of 20. 80. 83. He keeps His enmity against the Christians in His heart. 100. He is said to have permitted the Jews to take the blood, life, and property of other peoples. 200. 201. The Jews' objection against this. 201. 202. Answer thereto. 202. GOD withholds from no creature its reward. 252. 635. 636. GOD is said to have shown Abraham hell and the monarchies. 262. And to have promised him that the sins of his children would be forgiven through the death of the righteous. 285. GOD is said to take counsel daily with the righteous in Paradise. 520. And to make known to them when the time of dew and rain shall be. ibid. He is said to have sworn to Abraham that no circumcised person would come into hell. 339. He is said to preach in Paradise in the future. 362. What shall come to pass as a result thereof. 362. 363. 364. GOD is said to be praised more in hell than in Paradise. 366. How many angels He has around Him at the very least at all times. 375. 376. GOD changed the names of certain angels, and why. 381. GOD is said to have revealed Himself to Abraham, before he was circumcised, through the Chaldean word Mechase, and why. 393. He is said to have left a corner in the north unfinished at the creation. 438. For what reasons GOD is angry with an entire congregation when one person sins. 508.

508. 635. 636. His five fingers are the foundation of the redemptions. 789. He will hold Sammael by the locks of hair when Elijah slaughters him. 805. He is to dance in the future at the banquet of the righteous. 881. He is accustomed to repaying like with like. 891. How God will examine the Jews who have studied the Law on the Last Day. 956. 957. God does not plague and afflict people by His own will. 972. He is to chastise and purify nearly all souls, so that they may become worthy of eternal life. 974.

God's name and throne are incomplete until the race of Esau and Amalek shall have been entirely exterminated. 182. God's speech: into how many voices and languages it was divided when He gave the Law. 243.

God's man, a converted Jew, and how the Jews brought about his death. 197. 198.

The wicked are called the dead. 3. They are punished for their sins, and thereafter attain blessedness. 293. 294. When and how they descend into hell. 347. Wicked Israelites are burned to ashes in hell. 355. How they are raised again and attain blessedness. 355. 356. How they are presently redeemed from hell. 357. to 361. How they will be rescued from it in the future. 361. to 365. The souls of wicked people become devils. 427. 428. Before the wicked man, after his death, three companies of devils are to go forth, and what they say. 451. The wicked die like cattle, and their soul perishes. 912. They will in the future be shaken out of the earth. 922. And cast out of the promised land. 926. The wicked will in the future come before Paradise to behold the happiness of the righteous therein. 882. 883. How high they will raise their bodily stature in order to look upon the righteous. 883. What they will then do further. 883. By the wicked in Ps 1:5, the four monarchies are to be understood. 956. The wicked will in the future be led into Paradise, and to what end this will occur. 969. They shall also see the recompense of the righteous. 972.

Wickedness, which is to exist among the Jews at the time of the coming of the Messiah. 672. 673.

Idols will be entirely exterminated at the time of the Messiah. 777.

The Greek monarchy: what it commanded the Jews to write on the horns of oxen. 804.

One should greet no one at night, and why. 452.

To show favor to Christians and other peoples is forbidden to the Jews. 191. The property of the children of Noah is permitted to the Israelites to take. 586. Guf is said to be a place where souls are deposited after their creation. 12. 16. 674. Elsewhere, however, it is interpreted as a human body. 674.

H.

Hadarniel the angel, how much smaller he is than the angel Sandalfon. 402. Hands should be washed early in the morning, and why. 453. One should not pass unwashed hands over the eyes. 453. Hail, what kind of angel has been appointed over it. 378. 379. 380. Haggadoth, what Rabbi Moses bar Maimon thinks of them. 742. Rooster, which must bear the sins of the Jews on the Day of Atonement, how it is killed. 149. Is called capporo. ibid. Observance of the three meals on the Sabbath exempts one from three severe punishments. 288. Observance of a single commandment brings salvation. 291. 292. Whoever observes a single commandment does as much as if he had kept the entire Law. 292. Trade in goods is considered in the Talmud to be very useful and conducive to harmony. 992. Haniel the angel is said to be appointed over livestock. 380. What princes stand under him. ibid. Hatred of the devils toward mankind, whence it comes. 410. 411. The skin of the Leviathan, how greatly it will shine in the future. 889. The Hebrew language was spoken exclusively before the building of the Tower of Babylon. 778. It is to be spoken again in the future, and in what manner. 778. 779. Hefker, what it means. 587. Privies are loved by the devils; they dwell therein and take their pleasure in that filth. 449. 454. What a dangerous privy there is in Tiberias. 449. Abaye had a lamb accompany him into the privy, and why he did so. 449. How Rabba conducted himself therein and had himself attended upon. 449. 450. How a Jew should address the angels when he goes to the privy. 450. Hypocrite signifies Christendom. 129. There are many hypocrites in Spain and Portugal who are outwardly Christians but Jews in their hearts. 1015. 1016.

Hypocrisy of the Jews before the high authorities. 470. Hypocrisy of the Jews who are compelled to convert to the Christian faith. 1013. 1014. 1015. 1016.

Hieronymus de sancta fide converted many Jews to the Christian religion. 991.

Heaven, how far it is from the earth. 816. 817.

The celestial spheres will in the future no longer revolve as swiftly as they do now. 828.

Job is said to have been a sorcerer and one of King Pharaoh's counselors, but to have converted from the practice of sorcery. 439.

Hiram, the King of Tyre, how he was led into Hell and back out again by a devil, at Solomon's command. 445. He informed Solomon by means of a letter of what he had seen therein. 445.

Shepherds: which are the seven shepherds mentioned in Mic 5:5. 943.

The arrogant ultimately fall into fire. 797.

Tunnels are said to be made in the future beneath the earth, through which those Jews who died outside the Promised Land will be rolled into it. 901. 919. 920. 922. 923. 926. Who will make those tunnels. 920. 921. 922. Elsewhere it is taught that the dead will pass through the tunnels. 922. 923.

Hell, for whom it was created. 258. 259. 260. 266. Nagarsanel is a prince thereof. 250. No circumcised person enters it. 259. 286. It is said to have come with Esau before his father Isaac. 260. 261. The reason for this. 261. 262. God is said to have shown it to Abraham. 262. Jacob is said to have chosen it for his descendants, but afterwards changed his mind. 262. Tribute and toll deliver the Jews from Hell. 286. 287. As does almsgiving. 287. As also the three meals of the Sabbath. 288. And the visitation of the sick. 290. Hell is said to wash away sins. 294. It has seven dwellings. 302. In each dwelling there are said to be 7,000 chambers. 343. How far it is from Paradise. 314. 315. 334. A place therein is said to have been created for every person. 315. Hell, why it is called Gehinnon. 323. 324. How many names it has. 324. 325. What they are called. ibid. Other names thereof. 325. 326. There are said to be two Hells, an upper and a lower. 327. 365. How large Hell is. 327. 328. How many dwellings it has. 302. 328. 329. What they are called. ibid. What is in each dwelling. 330. How deep each of them is. Further description thereof. 345. How long and wide, thick and deep each Hell is. 330. 336. The fire in the said dwellings is unequal. 331. Where the fire of the lower Hell comes from. 331. How subtle it is. 331. 332. A certain angel is said to be set over each dwelling, under whom many other angels stand. 332. What the prince of Hell is called. 332. 333. How many scribes there are in Hell and what they do. 333. How many gates Hell has. 333. 334. How the gates have holes in which the feet of the wicked are stuck. 333. In Hell there is said to be a place called Pachad, which is always dark. 335. What kind of place Zóah rotáchath (צֹאֵה רוֹתַחַת) is therein. 335. 336. A water channel is said to be in Hell, as also a great pit. 336. 337. There is also said to be a place where the wicked can go in and out. 337. The righteous must be purified in Hell just as the wicked, but they do not remain long therein. 337. 338. They also deliver some wicked Israelites out of it. 338. 339. Objection against the claim that Israelites should come into Hell. 339. 340. How many peoples are in each dwelling of Hell. 341. 342. How the wicked are punished in Hell. 341. to 346. The Israelites are not to be punished therein as the other peoples are. 343. The reason for this. 344. In it there is said to be a river called Region or nehár dinur (נְהַר דִּינּוּר). 346. It falls upon the heads of the wicked. ibid. And most of the righteous are said to be purified therein. ibid. When the wicked descend into Hell and how this occurs. 347. They are said to have rest therein at certain times, and when this is. 347. to 352. The punishment of Hell, how long it lasts. 353. to 356. The wicked Israelites are burned to ashes therein. 355. How they are raised again. 355. 356. How the wicked of the present age are delivered from Hell. 357. 358. 359. 361. How they are to be rescued from it in the future. 361. to 365. How a son can deliver his father from Hell. 357. 359. Abraham is said to deliver some from it, as also Elijah.

361. The damned do not know their names therein. 365. In the lower Hell the impurity of souls is not entirely removed. 365. 366. Whether there will be a Hell in the future age. 366. 367. 368. Hell is said to be cleansed and sanctified in the future age and added to Paradise. 368. 369. 467. God is said to dance with the righteous therein. 368. How the Jews can be delivered from Hell. 712. To what end the righteous are to be led into Hell in the future age. 969.

Proud One signifies Christendom. 130. 137.

The High Council at Jerusalem is said to have been put to death because it released King Zedekiah from the oath he had sworn to King Nebuchadnezzar. 500.

Honey, how it flowed in the Promised Land. 833. 834.

Dog is what the Angel of Death, Sammael, is called. 640. A dog is considered equal to an uncircumcised person or Goi. 630. 635. 636. It is said to be more worthy of honor than a Goi or Christian. 635. 636.

Dogs is what the kings of the Christians are called by the Jews. 472.

Jacob chose Hell for his descendants instead of exile, but then changed his mind. 262. He saw Hell open beneath him when he wanted to curse Jacob. ibid. Who his teacher was. 375. How he was able to wrestle with the angel. 386. He prepared himself for three things against Esau, and what those things are. 481. He is said to have drunk wine that is preserved in grapes in Paradise. 879. Three reasons why he wished to be buried in the land of Canaan and not in Egypt. 925. 926.

Hunter signifies Esau and Christendom. 166.

Jasariel, the angel, helps when the stone of the abyss moves from its place on account of a false oath and threatens to flood the earth. 497.

Ibbur signifies a certain transmigration of the soul. 85. 86. 87. The purpose thereof. 86. The souls are to be purified through it. 87. 88. And indeed all souls before the coming of the Messiah. 674. 675.

Jechiel, the angel, is said to be set over the wild animals. 379. What princes stand under him. ibid.

Joshua ben Levi passed through Paradise and described it. 303.

Jehovah, the name of God, is henceforth to be spoken by the mouth of the peoples of the world. 779.

Jehuel, the angel, is said to be set over fire. 379. What angels stand under him. ibid.

Jeroboam, where he sits in Hell. 342. He is said not to be tormented. 342.

His soul is said to pass into the Messiah, the son of Joseph. 722.

Jerusalem, how it was lifted into the air by an incantation. 382. How great it once was. 842. It is to be besieged in the future by the Christians. 741. 743. 744. How great it will be in the time of the Messiah. 839. It will be placed upon Mount Sinai, Tabor, and Carmel. 839. 840. How those who dwell far from Jerusalem will come there in the future. 840. God Himself shall build Jerusalem and cause it to descend from Heaven. 840. 841. 924. It is to be built before the gathering of the Jews. 894. It is to be built three miles high, indeed reaching all the way to Heaven. 841. 842. How people will reach the lofty dwellings. 842. The gates of Jerusalem are to be built of precious stones, which will have been sawn by angels. 842. 843. A multitude of precious stones and pearls will lie scattered around it. 844. 845. With these, people will pay their debts to one another. 845. There will also be a fire around Jerusalem, through which the righteous will pass unharmed. 846. Why the Emperor Adrianus destroyed it and named it Aelia. 867.

Jesus is to be punished in Hell in boiling filth. 119. He is called the Despised One and His name is declared unclean. 124. He is called the adulterous branch. 123. The contemptible idol, as also the Unclean and the Dead. 127.

Jethro is said to have been a sorcerer and one of King Pharaoh's counselors, but to have converted from sorcery. 439.

Jezer hara, that is, the evil inclination, is said to have seven names. 329. It will be entirely destroyed in the future. 819. 820. 821. 906.

Jezer hara, by which Satan is understood, is to be made into a holy angel in the future. 368. 467. 468. How he was once captured, and a hair was torn from his head, and what further transpired in connection with this. 463. 464.

Igéreth is said to be a mother of devils and one of Samael's wives. 416. And the daughter of Machalath. 417. She goes out with many devils on Thursday and Saturday nights. ibid.

Emmanuel, King of Portugal, how he sought to compel Jews to the Christian religion and had many of them forcibly baptized. 986. 987.

Jochanan, the Rabbi, how he deceived a distinguished woman through a fraudulent oath. 513. Johannes Reuchlin's error. 120. Jonah the Prophet is said to have been the Messiah, the Son of Joseph. 724. 725. Jophiel the Angel is said to have been Shem's teacher. 375. Jorkemo, an angel, is set over hail. 378. 379. Joseph, what kind of teacher he had. 375. Why he wished to be buried in the land of Canaan. 925. He is said to have buried three treasures in Egypt. 771. Josiah made the Valley of Hinnom into an unclean place, and why this was done. 323. 324. Where he concealed the Ark of the Covenant, the jar of manna, Aaron's staff, and the anointing oil. 858. Joshua the Rabbi regarded large grapes as calves. 834. He caused them to grow smaller in the following year. 834. Isaac, why he gave Esau the blessing of this world and loved him. 263. 264. He rejoiced that his descendants would come into misery. 283. For what reason he received dim eyes. 480. Isaac Abarbanel: see Abarbanel. Isaac Luria the Rabbi is said to have been the Messiah, the Son of Joseph. 724. 725. 727. He did not wish to reveal this, however, out of humility. 726. What occurred with him such that the Israelites were not redeemed. 726. 727. Why he came into the world. 727. He is said to have been the soul of the Messiah, the Son of Joseph. 727. And to have been able to see the sins of people on their foreheads. 727. And to have known their thoughts. 728. How the souls of the wicked came to him in great numbers so that he might set them right again. 728. When and where he was born, and where he was circumcised. 728. How long he lived, and how Elijah announced his death to him. 728. 729. He is said to come again in the future and redeem the Jews. 729. What opinion he held concerning the Last Judgment. 967. 968. How Rabbi Menasseh ben Israel rejects and refutes this opinion. 968. Yet ultimately reconciles it with his own. 973. 974. Ishmaelites are damned and go to hell. 259. 260. They will march against Rome. 729. They are the enemies of the Jews. 790. They will adopt the Jewish faith in the future. 778. The Ishmaelite kingdom signifies the Turkish Empire. 652.

Israelites, why they multiplied greatly in Egypt. 34. Shall be saved alone. Called children of man (namely, of Abraham). 254. And punished by God in this world on account of their sins. 256. Shall all be saved. 293. 294. 973. How they earn the life to come. 304. They shall not be punished in hell like other nations. 343. And shall come forth unharmed in the future. 344. The reason why they are not punished so harshly. Saved after having endured the punishment of hell. 364. Without them the world cannot subsist. 754. Are compared to dust and sand. 754. And shall exterminate all nations. 754. Israelites, whether they too will be judged at the Last Judgment. 969.

The Israelite community will in the future settle the dispute that will arise between God and Isaiah concerning the wicked. 882.

Jubilee years will be observed again in the future. 859.

A Jew burned his son because he had been reading the Gospel. 199. Another killed his son because he wanted to become a Christian. 199. Another is said to have married the daughter of Aschmedai, the king of the devils, and to have fathered a child with her. 422. How a Jew is to address the angels when he goes to the privy. 450. No Jew may testify against another Jew that he owes a debt to a Christian, on pain of the ban. 479. 480. How a Jew deceived his rabbi. 488. 489. How many servants each Jew will have in the future. 760. 761. 762. In the future, Jews will overpower all nations. 5. How many Jews there are. 13. Jews are indeed forbidden to curse Christians and to wish them ill, yet they do it nonetheless. 90. 91. See also: curse. They pray to God for vengeance against Christians: see: vengeance. They also pray for the extermination of the same. 106. 108. 119. 122. They complain to God that Christians seek to turn them away from their faith. 127. And that Christians have killed many of them. 128. 129. On the seventh day of the Feast of Tabernacles they walk seven times around their almenor, and why this is done. 163. 164. Jews are not permitted to save a Christian from death. 189. 190. The reason for this. 190. 191. 192. They have permission to kill a Christian. 200. and 211. They alone are to observe the Sabbath. 207. 208. They understand the commandment "Thou shalt not kill" as applying only among themselves. 210. The Jews' objection to this. 210. 211. 213. Refutation of the same. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. They have wretchedly murdered many old and young Christians. 218. through 225. And they had the wells in France and Alsace poisoned. 218. 219. They flayed Bragadinum alive. 219. What they say when a Christian dies. 271. Jews as Jews cannot be saved. 271. through 274. In what manner their sins are forgiven according to their own view: see: sins. They are to stand surety for one another. 285. 508. Jews behave hypocritically before the Christian authorities. 470. They may not curse one another. 471. How they refer to the councillors of great lords, a district officer, a town and chancery clerk, as well as a Christian king. 472. They are forbidden to bring accusations against one another before a Christian authority. 272. 473. How they regard this as a grave sin. 474. through 477. Yet it is permitted to them in certain circumstances. 478. 479. They are said to be commanded to give gifts to Christians: see: gifts. How holy and pure they are at the Feast of Atonement. 503. 504. 505. That even the devil himself has had to acknowledge this. 506. How God concealed their sins from Satan when Satan accused them. 506. 507.

Jews: how they are, in their view, atoned through a rooster at the Day of Atonement. 149. 150. Jews are all counted as a single soul. 508. They claim that in certain parts of the world they have their own authorities, princes, and kings. 515. 516. Where these are located. 516. &c. 556. 569. Jews are said to exist in great numbers beyond the river Sabbatjon. 554. A description of the same. 556. 557. 558. There is also said to be an innumerable multitude of Jews in Abyssinia. 569. 570. R. Menasse wishes to prove this from Holy Scripture. 570. In America too there are said to be very many Jews. 571. How they came to be there. 571. 572. What conversations the Jews have among themselves concerning deception, and how they boast of it. 581. 582. Jews are commanded to harm Christians and other peoples as much as is ever possible for them. 604. Jews sometimes omit from their books, out of fear, things that are directed against Christians. 636. Jews are forbidden to invite a Christian as a guest or to a wedding, and why this is forbidden. 644. 645.

Jews are in the future to be driven out of the lands of all peoples. 706. What will further befall them when the Messiah, the son of Joseph, shall have been slain. 707. Jews have no king or prince at the present time. 573. When, from which lands, and where they will in the future be gathered. 744. 745. 746. 747. How long a time they will be occupied with burning the weapons of the slaughtered peoples and with burying the dead. 752. 753. Seven thousand Jews will in the future fly through the air. 772. 773. 774. Jews: whether at the time of their supposed Messiah they will receive people from other peoples into their faith. 774. 775. 776. They will possess precious stones and pearls in great abundance. Under the Emperor Adriano, Constantino, and Juliano they wished to rebuild the Temple in Jerusalem, but were unable to do so. 866. to 870.

Jews are prevented from converting to the Christian religion for many reasons, which stem partly from the Jews themselves and partly from the Christians. 479. On the Jews' side there are 4 reasons. 980. The first reason on the Jews' side is their great hatred toward Christ and the Christian religion. 980. 981. The second is their great stubbornness and obduracy. 981. 982. Examples of their stubbornness in Constantinople. 982. In a city in Germany, which they, together with all its inhabitants, burned down. 982. 983. In Bodo in France, where they all killed themselves in their synagogue. 983. 984. In other places. 985. 986. In Portugal. 986. 987. In Spain. 987. The third reason why so few Jews convert is the contempt and cursing of converts among the Jews. 987. 988. The fourth reason is the danger to the lives of converts. 989. 990. On the Christians' side there are 6 reasons. 990. The first reason is the disunity in religion. 990. 991. The second is the scandalous life of many Christians. 991. 992. The third is the laziness of Christians in instructing the Jews. 992. 993. The fourth reason is the excessively great freedom of the Jews, which consists firstly in trade. 993. Secondly, in the pursuit of shameful usury. 993. 994. 995. Thirdly, in the public exercise of their supposed worship. 995. 996. Fourthly, in the permission that they may teach, write, and print all manner of godless things against the Christian religion. 996. Fifthly, in the concession that they may have their own judges. 996. 997. What Uriel Acosta wrote about this. 996. 997. Sixthly, in the permission that Christians may adopt the Jewish faith. 997. Seventhly, in the allowance that Christians may serve them. 997. 998. The fifth reason on the Christians' side, which keeps the Jews from converting, is their promotion to positions of honor and office. 998. to 1006. The sixth reason is the abandonment of converts and the refusal of necessary assistance. 1006. 1007. The Jews must not be compelled to adopt the Christian religion through cruelty. 1007. 1008. Pope Innocentius and others have forbidden this. 1008. 1009. It is true that in former times many outwardly adopted the Christian faith on account of persecution. 1009. 1010. But they remained Jews in their hearts. 1011. to 1016. Although Jews are forbidden to persuade a Christian to adopt their faith, it nevertheless happens. 1023. Jews are considered dishonorable and unfit for positions of honor and office, and why? 1026.

A Jewess poisoned her little son with poison because he had run into a church several times. 199.

Jewish malice toward high potentates and authorities. 469.

A Jewish Medicus or physician should not be employed by sick Christians, and why? 227 to 234. What the converted Samuel Friedrich Brenz writes about this. 228. The objection of R. Salman Zevi against this. 229. Answer thereto. 229. In what manner it is permitted to a Jewish Medicus to treat a Christian. 229. 230. The rabbinical laws permit him to test a medicine of uncertain effect on a Christian. 230. What the converted Victor von Carben writes about Jewish Medici. 231. What the converted Antonius Margarita reports about them. 231. 232. Pope Paulus forbade Jewish Medici to take a Christian into their Cur. 230. Emperor Carolus Calvus was killed with poison by a Jewish physician. 233. In the Jure Canonico it is forbidden to employ a Jewish Medicus. 233. 234. What great persons have had Jewish Medici. 1005.

Last Judgment, as demonstrated by R. Menasse ben Israel, that GOD will judge all people at that time. 954 to 958. Isaac Abarbanel denies that such a universal Day of Judgment will occur. 957 to 966. How R. Menasse ben Israel refutes Abarbanel's opinion. 966. 967. 968. The teaching of R. Mosche bar Nachman on the Last Judgment. 959. Abarbanel rejects it. 961 to 965. What he understands by it. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. How R. Menasse ben Israel rejects his opinion, as well as that of R. Isaac Lurja. 966. 967. 968. The Last Judgment will also come upon the Israelites. 968. 969. How the aforementioned R. Menasse resolves and answers certain doubts raised by Abarbanel and R. Isaac Lurja. 969 to 974. When the Last Judgment is to be held. 975. Where it is to be held. 956. 975. How it will proceed against the nations of the world. 975. 976. At the Last Judgment, a person must give account if he has tormented an animal. 978. The wolves, dogs, and barren trees must also give account at that time. 978. 979.

Julianus, the godless Emperor, how he sought to have the Temple in Jerusalem rebuilt through the Jews, and what occurred in connection with it. 868. 869. 870. 871.

Juniel, the angel, is said to have been appointed together with Raphael over medicine. 380.

K.

Kaddish: what kind of prayer it is. 360. Through it, a person can be rescued from Hell and elevated higher into Paradise. 359. How long sons are accustomed to pray it for their deceased mother. 361. Why it was composed in the Chaldean language. 390.

Cheese of Christians: Jews are not permitted to eat it. 629.

Cain is the origin of evil souls. 5. The souls of all deceased generations descended from him are said to be devils. 427. He is also said to have begotten nothing but devils. 428. Why he was marked by God. 455. He feared the devils, lest they kill him. 455.

Combat, the future one that will take place between the Leviathan and the great ox. 873. 874. 880.

Canal in Hell, through which water flows. 336.

Kapkapuni, a devil: how many wives he has and what they are called. 425.

Kafriel, the angel, is said to be appointed over love, both good and evil. 380.

Treading the winepress: what it means when the Jews ask God for it. 107. When they ask for it. 121. 126. 165. 166.

Ketef meriri: what kind of devil it is and what its form is. 434. 435. When it holds sway. 435. Whoever looks upon it dies. 435. When schoolchildren were dismissed from school on its account, and when they were not beaten. 435. 436.

Kibar: what kind of city it is. 518.

Children of a converted Jew are called mamserim by the Jews, that is, bastards. 987. An example of this. 988. Why children die. 29. Small children of the godless peoples of the world, as well as of the Jews, whether they are saved. 269. 270. Children are said to be led into Paradise and into Hell before they are born. 315. 316. They have a burning light upon their head in the mother's womb, etc. 316. 317. Why they cry as soon as they are born. 816. 817. The sons of God look upon the daughters of men: how this is to be understood. 388. Children are said to be killed by Lilith. 418. Which children this is to be understood of. 419. Whence it comes that children smile in their sleep, and what one should do in that case. 419. 420. These are called those who suffer violence. 420. Women will in the future bear children every day. 836. 837. How many children each Jew will have at that time. 837. 838.

Child murder committed by Jews. 220 to 225. Isaac Abarbanel denies the same. 226.

The church of the Christians is called by the Jews beth hallezuth or bes ballézus, that is, a house of mockery. 709. And beth hattóref, i.e., a house of shame. 709.

Kitor, a city in Saba. 442. How far it is situated from the Jewish land, and in how much time the queen came from there to King Solomon. 443.

Garments are put on those who enter Paradise. 410. A story that contradicts this teaching. 311. 312. 313. The garments of the rabbis, from what cause they become worn and torn. 446. Garments of fine wool will in the future grow out of the earth in the land of Israel. 828. 829. 830. Refutation of this. 830. Rabbi Moses bar Majemon also rejects this. 886. The dead shall rise again with their garments. 934. 935.

Servants, how many each Jew will have at the time of the Messiah. 760. 761. How this is to be proven. 761. 762. How the peoples of the world will be compelled to be the servants of the Jews. 764.

The king of the Christians is called a dog by the Jews. 472. As also a hairy and diabolical man. 785.

Kings of the Jews beyond the river Sabbatjon, how many there are. 556. 558. How powerfully the supreme king among them rides out. 556. How he mounts his horse. 557. How powerfully he goes to war. 557. When he crosses the river Sabbatjon with his people. 557. King Eliezer there, how long and what kind of hero he was. 557. King Daniel there, how great and what kind of hero he was. 558. What valiant sons he had. 559. The Jews have no king at the present time. 573. What kind of king will arise in Rome in the future, and what he will do. 703.

Kings of the earth are called dragons. 679. And the Jews are to be carried into the land of Canaan. 715. Three godless, tyrannical kings are to reign shortly before the coming of the Messiah. 699. 700. Kings who have fought against Jerusalem will in the future be raised up, and to what end this is to occur. 736. Kings and princes will no longer exist after the resurrection. 949.

The Queen of Sheba, how she was summoned to King Solomon by means of a letter. 442. 443. And with what kind of threat. ibid. How her throne was brought before Solomon. 444.

Kingdoms in which Sammael's concubines reside. 421.

Kingdoms of the Jews in Asia. 516. 525. through 528. 556. In Africa. 569. In America. 571. 572.

Korah, Dathan, and Abiram come to the Messiah every Wednesday, and why. 305. Where they sit in Hell. 342. They are, however, not to be tormented therein. ibid.

Kordiacos, what kind of devil this is. 437.

Powers, what angel is appointed over the granting of them. 380.

Herbs of Paradise are useful for medicine. 313. Angels are said to be appointed over all herbs. 377. How many of these herbs there are. 377. 378.

Visiting the sick delivers one from Hell. 290. He who does not visit them is like a murderer. ibid. The benefit that a sick person receives from being visited. ibid.

Illnesses that befall people suddenly come from evil spirits. 454.

Creeping animals were required to dance before Solomon at his command. 441. 442.

War of Gog and Magog. 679. When it will occur. 732. How the Jews can be saved from it. 712. How it will begin and be conducted. 738. to 741. What Rabbi Moses bar Majemon writes about it. 741. 742. War that is to take place in the future between Armillo and the Israelites. 706. War that will exist in the future between the Christians and the Ishmaelites. 738. 739. 742. 743. 744. How God will wage war against the Christians from heaven. 740. The Messiah, the Son of Joseph, will then also gather the Jews for war. 744. But will lose his life in it. 747. 748. The war, however, will be carried on by the Messiah, the Son of David. 750. 751. How many peoples will perish in the war at that time. 751. to 755.

Cakes are to grow from the earth in the future. 828. 829. 830. Refutation of this. 830. Rabbi Moses bar Majemon also rejects this. 886.

Spheres, or Sphæra, of the heavens, how thick they are. 331. They are said to be alive and endowed with reason. 384. 385. Who moves and governs them. ibid.

Kuschiel, an infernal angel who strikes the damned. 341. Kiss of the golden calf, what it causes to the one who kisses it, and what else occurred on account of it. 465. 466.

L.

The Ark of the Covenant, which King Solomon is said to have had made, and how large it was. 853. What difficulties he encountered when he wished to have the Ark brought into the Temple. 853. 854. Jewish error concerning this Ark of the Covenant. 853. 854. The Ark of the Covenant is said to have been hidden, together with certain other items of the Temple that were in the Holy of Holies. 856. 857. 859. Who concealed it. 858. 859. Where they were hidden. 858. At the time of the Messiah they are to come to light again. 858. 859.

Blasphemers of Christ, His holy Mother, and the saints, how they are to be punished according to the Imperial Recesses. 1026.

Lahatiel, an infernal spirit who strikes the damned. 342.

The Land of Israel, how large it will be in the future. 369. In the Land of Israel, cakes and fine garments will grow in the future. 828. 829. 830. As also wheat as tall as palm trees. 829. And great clusters of grapes. 830. 831. What great clusters of grapes grew there in ancient times. 832. 833. 834. How milk and honey flowed therein. 833. 834. How large the peaches were that grew therein. 834. How fertile it otherwise was. 834. 835. How fertile the currently barren trees therein will be. 831. 833. How large it will be in the future. 838. 848. All impurity will be shaken out of it. 838. 839. In the Land of Israel no unclean spirit shall dwell. 903. No people is worthy of the Land of Israel except the Jews. 904. 905. The Land of Israel is called the Land of the Living. 921. It alone shall be pure, while other lands are unclean. 922. Whoever walks four cubits therein shall be assured of eternal life. 290.

The Land of the Rechabites, where it is, and its description. 516. 517. 518. The land of the tribe of Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, where it is. 518. The land of the tribe of Zebulun, Asher, and Naphtali, where it is, and its description. 518. 519. The land of the ten tribes whom Shalmaneser carried away. 519. The land of the tribe of Issachar, how large it is. 530. The land of the tribe of Zebulun, Reuben, Ephraim, the half-tribe of Manasseh, the tribe of Simeon, and the half-tribe of Judah. 531. The land of the tribe of Moses beyond the river Sabbatyon, how large and fertile it is, and how no unclean animal is to be found therein. 540. How Rabbi Gerson describes it. 555 to 559.

Masks, which the devils are said to wear before their faces, and why. 462.

The life of men, how long it will last at the time of the Messiah. 815 to 818.

Leather locks and bolts, which the treasure house of Korah is said to have had, and how many of them there were. 171.

The body of an idolater is unclean during his lifetime, but clean after his death, and why. 907. From which little bone the body of a person will be created at the resurrection. 930. 931. How the body will be formed from it. 433. 434. The very same body that died will rise again. 938. 939. 940. The body, as well as the soul, shall be rewarded. 947. 952. How the body may in the future excuse itself so as to be freed from the Last Judgment. 974. 975.

Bodies into which various souls have been transferred one after another, how they will rise again. 940 to 943.

The bodily stature of men, what it will be like in the future. 821 to 826. The opinion of Rabbi Moses bar Maimon on this matter. 886.

The reading of the order of the sacrifices in the Bible brings forgiveness of sins. 275. 276. It is held to be equal to the sacrifices. 276. 277. The reading of the words of Deut 6:4 is more pleasing to God than all sacrifices. 277. And it brings salvation. 288. As does likewise the daily reading of Ps 145. 290. 291.

The denier of the resurrection of the dead, what the rabbis teach concerning him. 890. 891.

Leviathan signifies Satan or Sammael and the Lilis. 7. 434. Why it was castrated. 7. 8.

Leviathan, the great fish, when it was created. 296. 877. The male and the female will in the future be set before the righteous to eat. 872. 873. 877. They are called the straight and the crooked serpent. 873. The male is said to have been castrated by God at the beginning, and the female slaughtered and salted, and to what end this was done. 873. The male is said in the future to fight with the great ox Behemoth and to perish, and the righteous will eat of it. 873. 874. 885. What remains is to be sold in the market at Jerusalem. 874. 875. Gabriel is also to undertake a hunt with the Leviathan. 7. And God will help Gabriel. 874. An objection against the rabbis' teaching on the Leviathan. 874. 875. Some rabbis are of the opinion that the eating of the Leviathan is not to be understood literally. 885. 886. 887. Others, however, understand it in a bodily sense. 887. 888. 889. From the skin of the Leviathan, God is to make a tent, and hang the remaining portion of it on the wall of Jerusalem. 889. This skin will shine very brightly. ibid.

Light, through which Adam saw from one end of the world to the other. 313. Light is placed upon the heads of children in their mother's womb, and how long it shines. 316. 317. Light that is beneath the throne of glory: Satan has seen it, and what transpired in connection with it. 806. 807. When Esau's light sets, Jacob's light shall be revealed. 807.

Lilith forced Adam to lie with her, from whom she bore demons. 413. 414. She is a mother of demons and one of Sammael's wives. 416. She is said to have been Adam's first wife, but to have flown away from him by pronouncing the Shem hamphorasch after she had quarreled with him. 417. 418. How God sent three angels after her, and what transpired in connection with it. 418. From what she was created. 418. 419. She is said to have the power to kill young children. 418. Which children this is to be understood of. 419. How many hosts of demons she has under her command, why she is called Lilith, and how she wages war with Machalath. 420. She is the first Eve. 421. She is said to fornicate with men and to bear demons. 424. And to lie with male persons. 426. She is called the Leviathan, which is a crooked serpent. 7. 434. Lilith is harmful to those who sleep alone in a house. 452.

Song of praise shall the bones sing to God at the resurrection, which shall be greater than the song of praise sung by the Israelites at the Red Sea. 949. 950.

Pit is said to be in hell. 336.

Lions, which are fiery, are said to punish the damned in hell. 341.

Reward is withheld from no creature by God. 252. 635. 636. 947. The nations of the world receive it in this life. 252. 253. But the Israelites in the world to come. 253.

Lot, why it was forbidden to him and his wife by the angel to look back, and why she was punished. 455.

Lupinus I., a Roman Emperor, is said to have been burned in place of R. Chananja, and an account of how this came about. 152. 153. He is said to rise again in the future and reign once more, but to be punished. 736.

Lus, a small bone of the human spine, which is also called (תרור רקב) tarvad rākaf, from which the body of a person is said to be created at the resurrection. 930. 931. Description of this small bone. 930. to 933. From it a serpent is said to arise when a person does not bow during the prayer Modim. 932. 933. How human bodies are formed from it. 933. 934.

M.

Maccáthiel, a hellish spirit who beats the damned. 342.

Machalath is said to be a mother of devils and one of Sammael's wives. 416. Why she is called by this name. 420. How many hosts of devils she has under her command, and how she wages war with Lilis. 420.

The Sabbath meal delivers from 3 evil things. 712. From hell. 288. No Jew may attend a Christian's meal, even if he partakes of his own food and his own drink at it. 629. The reason for this. 629. 630. A meal is to be held in the future for the righteous in Paradise. 872. 880. 884. 887. The first dish thereof will be from the two fish called Leviathan. 872. 873. 887. The second from the great ox Behemoth. 875. 887. The third from the bird Bar juchneh. 876. 877. 887. The fourth from fat geese. 877. 878. What effect the foods of such a meal will have. 878. What wine will be drunk at it. 878. 879. 880. On account of such a meal, most are said to willingly endure the Exilium or misery. 880. What splendid tables will be set at it. 880. At such a meal, rivers of balsam will flow. 880. And one will drink oneself drunk from full cups of sweet wine. 880. How R. Akkiva describes the glory of this meal. 881. 882. 883. After the meal, David will give thanks to God the Lord, after others have refused to do so. 884. 885. Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, together with Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, rejects the opinion of those who interpret the above meal in a bodily sense. 885. 886. 887. Nevertheless, most Jews hold that it is to be understood in a bodily sense. 887. 888. 889.

Maktuniel, the angel, is said to have been set over the rocks. 380.

Maltbiel, the angel, is said to have been Elijah's teacher. 375.

A man should not go to his wife unless he has first spoken with her, and what the reason for this is. 452. A headless man, having his eyes and mouth on his chest, was to have been sent as a gift by King Preste Jan to King Eliezer across the river Sabbatjon, but this was advised against. 559.

Manna is said to have originated from the highest light. 876. 877. For what purpose it was given. 412.

Boundary stones will in the future be made in the Promised Land from precious stones and pearls. 844.

Mordecai, a learned Jew from Eisenstadt, how he presented himself as the Messiah. 667.

Marble statue of a virgin is said to be in Rome, and what will happen with it. 559.

Massal of man, what it signifies. 389. 390. What happens with it. ibid. When it was created. 390.

Massikim signifies the devils. 408. Which devils are thus named. 412.

Wall, which is of iron, Alexander the Great is said to have had built, and thereby had the peoples Gog and Magog imprisoned in high mountains. 733. 734. 735.

Mechokék, what it signifies in Gen 49:10. 647. 648.

Medicus: the best medicus, according to the teaching of the Talmud, belongs in hell. 233. The reason for this. ibid. See also Jewish Medicus.

Medraschóth, or figurative interpretations of Scripture: what R. Moses bar Maimon holds concerning them. 742.

Sea will in the future cast forth all the treasure contained within it at Joppa before the Jews, just as it once did for King Solomon in former times. 773. 774.

Mesannahel, the angel, is said to be appointed over the creeping creatures. 380.

Perjury: see Oath.

Menachem, the son of Ammiel, signifies the Messiah, the son of David. 709.

Mennichen, a little Jewish boy, was killed by his mother with poison, and for what reason. 199.

Man: only the inward spirit is to be called man. 1. Every man is said to have an angel in heaven who intercedes for him and is his advocate. 389. Man is not to ask anything of God in the Chaldean or Syriac language. 390. 391. He is also to go neither by day nor by night alone, and why? 451. He is said to be defiled in sleep by the unclean spirits. 453. 454.

Only Jews are to be called human beings, and why. 2. Whence it comes that some are born with defective and deficient limbs. 78. 79. They are not to be punished for sins before the age of 20. 80. 83. Why they die before the age of 13 and 20. 83. All human beings must come into hell in order to be purified. 337. 338. What kind of angel is appointed over human beings. 380. Human beings without heads, whose eyes and mouth are on their chest, and where they dwell. 560. Hideous, misshapen human beings will appear shortly before the coming of the Messia, by whom people will be killed. 700. How long human beings will live at the time of the Messia. 815. 816. 817. Which of them will then be mortal or immortal. 817. 818. They are to have free will to do good or evil. 820. But at the time of the Messia, the choosing of good will be natural to them. 820. And they will be placed in the state in which Adam was before the fall. 820. What kind of bodies they will then have. 821. through 826. Human beings are to eat, drink, and perform other bodily functions after the resurrection. 943. When human beings will be judged. 950. through 953. Human beings who have done both good and evil do not enter paradise until they have been purified from their sins through punishments. 960. After the Last Judgment, human beings will recognize their children and relatives and rejoice with them. 973. When human beings torment an animal, they must hereafter give an account of it. 978. 979.

Meriim, what it signifies. 410.

Messiah takes all the punishments of the Israelites upon himself. 54. The ancient rabbis interpret the 53rd chapter of Isaiah as referring to him. 757. He shall not come until all souls have ceased to pass into other bodies. 84. 88. Whoever denies his coming is damned for eternity. 273. Where the Messiah resides in Paradise. 304. His head shall be held by Elijah when he weeps. 304. Who comforts him in his sorrow. 304. 305. What answer he gives to Korah, Dathan, and Abiram when they question him concerning the resurrection. 305. The Messiah shall in the future redeem the damned from hell. 364. He will in the future remove the impurity of the serpents and destroy the serpent. 468. Into every generation God shall send a spark of the Messiah, and why? 729. He will reveal himself, and thereafter hide himself again. 793. The reason for this. 793.

Messiah has already come long ago, which is demonstrated from the Old Testament. 647. 648. 649. As also from the Rabbinic books. 650. through 655. He is called the Angel of the Covenant and the Face of God. 648. 649. As also the Holy of Holies. 649. 650. And our Righteousness. 650. 724. 812. When all the appointed times within which the Messiah was to have come had elapsed. 650. According to the teaching of the rabbis, he was not to have come until the Roman Empire had extended itself over Israel and the entire world for nine months. 650. 651. Further account of the time of his arrival according to the testimony of the Jews. 651. 652. 690. 691. How long the times of the Messiah are to last. 652. 653. When, according to the opinion of the rabbis, he was born. 653. 654. 758. He is to be called Menachem, that is, Comforter. 654. And to be bound in chains. 758.

Who wanted to be the Messiah: bar Cochab, or bar Cosiba, and deceived the Jews. 654. 655. When this occurred. 655. How likewise a Jew in France put himself forward as the Messiah, on account of which many Jews perished. 657. How one in Persia did the same, and what came of it. 657. to 660. How also one in Spain committed such folly. 660. How one in the Kingdom of Fez, and another in Arabia, presented themselves as envoys of the Messiah. 660. 661. 662. What befell the one in Arabia. 661. 662. How a Jew beyond the river Euphrates, and yet another in Persia, put themselves forward as the Messiah.

663. How David Almusser, a sorcerer in Media, deceived the Jews under the pretense of being the Messiah, and what end he came to. 663. 664. What manner of false Messiah David Eldavid, who is also called David Elroi, was. 664. How the Jews at Worms were once led astray by the hoped-for Messiah. 664. 665. 666. How a Jew in Austria by the name of Rabbi Lemle presented himself as a forerunner of the Messiah. 666. 671. How a Jew, a native of Smyrna, presented himself as the Messiah, and what befell him. 666. How a Jew from Eisenstadt by the name of Mordecai put himself forward as the Messiah. 667.

The Messiah is supposed to come very soon, according to the most recent hope of the Jews. 667. The Messiah of the Jews is supposed, according to some opinions, to sit in Paradise. 668. 815. Others, however, claim that he dwells outside the gates of the city of Rome, among the poor. 668. How this latter view is to be understood. 669. 670. The first reason why the Messiah has not yet come is supposed to be the Jews' impenitence. 670. 671. Refutation of the same. 671. 672. The second reason is supposed to be that not all the souls which are to be created are yet present. 673. 674. The Messiah is supposed to come at the appointed time even if the Jews do not repent. 672. What kind of godless state of affairs will prevail at the coming of the Messiah. 672. 673.

673. If the Jews were to observe even a single Sabbath properly, the Messiah would come. 673. The one who calculates the time of the Messiah is indeed cursed by the Jews, and doing so is forbidden. 677. 678. And those who do so are regarded as fools. 678. This is because the matter is supposed to remain hidden. 678. Notwithstanding this, however, many have calculated such a time and taught that he would come at such and such a time. 678 to 687. How such calculation is excused by some. 687. 688. Refutation of such excuses. 688. 689. 690. The Messiah is not supposed to die. 687. He is supposed to come after the destruction of the city of Rome. 690. Elijah is supposed to come three days before the Messiah. 696. Upon which donkey the Messiah will come. 697. He is supposed to come from Rome. 698. What the first sign of his arrival will consist of. 698. 699. 700. The second sign and its description. 700. 701. The third sign, what its nature will be. 701. 702. The fourth sign. 702. The fifth sign. 702. 703. The sixth sign. 703. 704. The seventh sign. 704 to 708. The eighth sign. 713. 714. 715. The ninth sign. 715. 716. The tenth sign. 716. 717. There are supposed to be two Messiahs, the Son of Joseph and the Son of David. 720. 721. These are compared to Moses and Aaron. 724.

The Messiah, the Son of Joseph, will come before the Messiah, the Son of David. 720. When he will reveal himself. 703. He shall also be called Nehemiah the Son of Chuschiel. 703. How he will engage in war with the Edomite king, and what will follow from it. 704. He shall be slain by Armillo. 706. 710. 720. And shall be raised by the Messiah the Son of David, as well as by Elijah. 715. He will come on account of the Messiah the Son of David. 721. His blood shall atone for the people of God. 721. He is compared to an ox. 721. He shall be of the tribe of Ephraim. 721. 722. 723. And shall have the soul of Jeroboam. 722. He shall also be of the lineage of Jeroboam. 723. For this reason he is also called the Messiah the Son of Ephraim, and likewise by the single name Ephraim alone. 723. 724. He shall be the head over the 10 tribes, which are called Ephraim in the Bible. 723. Why he is called the Son of Joseph. 723. He is also called the Messiah who is our righteousness. 724. And the words of Ps 2:7 are interpreted as referring to him. 723. With what kind of radiant garment God will clothe him. 724. He shall be Joseph himself. 724. He is also said to have already been in the world at various times, for the rabbis teach that he was the widow's son at Zarephath, and the prophet Jonah, as well as Rabbi Isaac Luria. 724. 725. 750. When he will gather the Jews. 744. From which lands he will gather them. 745. 746. Where he will first reveal himself. 747. He shall march with his peoples to Jerusalem. 747. He shall be the Antichrist. 747. And shall perish in the war against the Christians. 747. 748. What the cause of his death will be. 748. 749. He shall be greatly mourned by all Jews. 749. The words of Zech 12:10 and ch. 13:7 are interpreted as referring to him. 749. 750. He shall be not a king, but only the next after the king, the Messiah the Son of David. 748. On account of his death, God will be greatly angered. 749.

The Messiah, the Son of David, how he will come to Jerusalem. 714. He is to come in a cloud. 710. He will restore the kingdom of David to its former state. 720. He will build the Temple. 720. He will gather the Jews. 720. He will ask God for life. 720. He is compared to a donkey. 721. He is to be of the seed of David. 730. He is to be David himself. 724. 725. 730. 731. He will come from those Jews who are among Christendom. 729. 730. Every person who is of the lineage of David shall wish that he might become the Messiah. 731. The Messiah, the Son of David, is to come after the death of the Messiah, the Son of Joseph. 725. 750. He will carry on the war against the Christians and kill Armilus. 750. 751. He will subdue all peoples in the world. 755. 756. And he will rule over them in a bodily manner. 756. From what source the Jews prove such dominion. 757. Refutation of their error. 757. 758. How this Messiah will keep the peoples in his obedience and punish the disobedient. 762. 763. 764. What kind of staff he will have to chastise the peoples, and from where it comes. 764. 765. He will accept gifts from all peoples, with the exception of the Christians. 766. 767. 768. The peoples must then return to the Messiah all the gifts that Jacob gave to Esau. 768. The Messiah will distribute all the treasures of the world among the Jews. 773. 774. What peoples he will accept.

781. How many commandments or laws he will impose upon them to observe. 782. 783. He will kill Sammael and his entire host. 806. And he will cast them into hell along with the peoples. 807. How long he will reign. 809. 810. 811. 812. Whether he will be mortal or immortal, on this point the rabbis do not agree with one another. 812. to 815. When he will come. 813. Who is to reign after him, according to the opinion of those who say that he will die. 812. to 815.

In the days of the Messiah, there shall be neither merit nor sin. 821. He is called the son of Perez. 825. At that same time, six things that were lost through Adam's fall shall be restored. 823 to 826. How long the days of the Messiah will last. 923.

The Messiah shall rebuild the Temple. 720. 849. 850. 859. He shall shatter all the nations of the world. 849. How many coverings or heavens God will make for the Messiah in the future, and what rivers will flow from each heaven. 871. 872. The Messiah shall, according to the teaching of some Jews, raise the dead. 897. 898. 899. He is said to have been created before the world. 898. He will be a prophet to all the nations of the world, and greater than Moses, and will perform greater miracles than he did. 898. He will bring all people to the service of God through the resurrection of the dead. 898.

Metatron brings the souls of the wise rabbis into heaven every night. 20. He is said to have been Moses's teacher. 375. He has the power to move about through all the firmaments. 376. He is one of the three angels who receive the prayers of the Israelites and weave crowns from them. 393. He is the foremost angel and king of all angels. 394. 395. 595. Why he is called Metatron. 395. He is called a king of all kings. 395. 396. The Prince of the Countenance. 396. The Prince of the World, according to some teaching, though others deny this. 396. 397. He is also called the Old One and the Youth, and when this occurs. 397. He bears God's name. 396. 398. He is said to be Enoch. 396. 397. How Enoch was transformed into such an angel, and what took place in the process. 398. 399. He is said to have been a shoemaker. 399. 400. And a schoolmaster. 400. How tall he is. 400. 401. He is said to have once been struck with fiery blows. 401. In the future he will be sent by God to summon the Israelite congregation in order to settle the dispute between God and Isaiah. 882.

Michael will in the future draw the wicked out of hell. 363. What he will further do with them. 363. 364. He is said to have been Moses' teacher. 375. He is the prince of water, and comes from the water. 379. What princes he has under him. ibid. He is said to have set fire to the Temple in Jerusalem together with Gabriel. 383. He is said in the future to sweep out the wicked among the Israelites. 707. And to blow with a great trumpet. 713. 715. 716.

Micah, where he sits in hell. 342. Is not to be tormented. 343.

Milk and honey, how it flowed in the Promised Land. 833. 834.

Michael, the angel, is said to have been set over the wild animals. 380.

Misbirths, where they come from. 79.

"With" sometimes means as much as "and." 89.

Molech, the idol, had children burned to him. 323. 324.

Monarchies will not be able to stand on their feet on the Day of Judgment. 956.

Months are said to no longer exist in the time of the Messiah, but only years, and why. 827. 828.

Moon, how it is addressed by the Jews at the new moon, and what they do on that occasion. 122. 123. What angel is set over the moon. 385. What brightness it will have in the future. 826. 827.

Murders committed by the Jews against adult Christians. 218. 219. 220. As well as against young Christian children. 220. through 225. The Jews' terrible murders committed in Africa, Egypt, and Cyprus. 655.

Land of the Moors, how large it is. 296.

Moses, why he desired to enter the Promised Land. 292. What kind of teacher he had. 375. Why he did not eat when he received the Law. 386. How he freed the Israelites from 5 evil angels. 466. 467. How he imprisoned one of them, namely Charon, in a pit. 466. 467. He is said to come from a wilderness in the time of the Messiah. 698.

Moses bar Maimon, the learned rabbi, was the personal physician of the Egyptian king Saladin. 1005. He rejects the opinion of many Jews concerning various things that are to happen in the future. 886. 887. What he taught concerning the deeds of those who will rise from the dead, and how they must die once more. 945. 946. 948. How Rabbi Bechai and others refute such teaching. 946. 947. 948.

One should not hold one's mouth to a pipe or spring and drink thus, but should draw the water with one's hand. 42.

Mills: into these the souls of adulterers are said to travel. 42.

N.

Naama is said to be a mother of devils and one of Samael's wives. 416. 423. She is said to be Shomron's wife and the mother of Asmodeus. ibid. From this Naama are said to come the she-devils who lie with men. 423.

Calculation of the time of the coming of the Messiah: see Messiah.

At night one should not walk alone on account of the devils. 451.

Nachum, the man Gamzu, what happened to him and how he was rescued by Elijah. 403. 404.

"Neighbor" means among the Jews none other than one who is a Jew. 578. 590. 591.

Nagarlanel, the prince of hell, what he said to GOD, namely that only the Jews should not come into hell. 250. 251.

Na venad, what kind of punishment of souls it is. 42. to 45.

Nebuchadnezzar is said to rise again in the future and rule once more, but to be punished. 736.

Nefela: see Carrion.

The envy of the devils toward men, whence it comes. 410. 411.

New Year's season, how the Jews then pray against the Christians. 123. to 131.

New Moon, how the Jews are accustomed to curse the Christians at that time. 122. 323.

The New Testament is called Tiplúth or Tiplus, that is, a foolishness. 706. Armilus will demand it from the Christians, and what he will say in response to it. 706.

Nigbe bene adam, what kind of devils these are: see Blows of the Children of Men.

The Nile, the river, is said to dry up in the future so that the Jews may pass through it. 746.

Nimrod had Abraham thrown into a fiery furnace, and what followed from it. 378.

Noah, how he is said to have planted a vineyard together with Satan. 628.

Noah's children are to be killed if they fail to observe even one of their seven commandments. 204. And those who refuse to accept them. ibid. Likewise, if they observe and rest on a Sabbath. 207. They are to be saved if they keep their seven commandments. 235. 236. Who is to be understood by Noah's children. 236. Wherein their seven commandments consist. 238. 239. 240. They are called children of the man. 254. How greatly they are to be honored when they keep their seven commandments. 593.

Nuriel, the angel, is said to be appointed over the hailstones. 380.

Walnut trees are beloved by devils as a dwelling place; therefore, it is dangerous to sleep beneath them. 447.

O.

The Christian authorities appear not to be cursed by the Jews. 90 through 97. Prayer on their behalf. 95. 96. Nevertheless, they call upon God for the destruction of those same authorities. 101. 121. 124. 125. 148. 166. 167. 172. 470. 471. Their malice toward them. 469. What Dietrich Schwabe and Samuel Friedrich Brentz write about this. 470. 471. The cursing of Christian authorities is permitted to the Jews. 471. 472. They are forbidden to take legal action against one another before those authorities. 472. 473. How great a sin this is considered to be among them. 474 through 477. Yet it is permitted under certain conditions. 478. 479. The ox, which is called Behemoth, is said to fight with Leviathan. 873. 874. The Mount of Olives is said to split apart in the future, and for what purpose. 926. 927. Ofanniel, the angel, is said to have been appointed over the moon. 385. Ofannim, the angels, are said to move the celestial spheres. 383. Why they are called Ofannim. 384. Olam habbá, what it signifies. 236. 237. 946. Sacrifices: whoever reads and studies the order of sacrifices in the books of Moses will have his sins forgiven. 276. All sacrifices are said to cease in the future, except for the thank-offering, as well as the daily and additional offerings. 859. 860. Elias is said to be offering sacrifices in the Temple at Jerusalem at the present time. 851. 852. Where he obtains the money necessary for this. 851. In the future, sacrifices are to be offered again in the Temple. 859. The ranks of the righteous in the uppermost Paradise, how many there are. 305. 306. 307. And how many there are in the lower Paradise. 307. 308.

P.

Pachad, that is, fear or terror, what kind of place it is in Hell. 335. The Rabbi Papa kept a young devil in his house. 458.

Pope Marcus Florentinus, how he was falsely reported about by Rabbi Salomon Levi. 216. 217.

Paradise, for whom it was created. 260. Came with Jacob before his father Isaac. 260. 261. When Paradise was created. 295. 296. How large it is. 296.

There are said to be two Paradises, namely the upper and the lower Paradise. 296. 297. 318. The difference between the two. 297. Jews contradict one another in their description of its size. 297. 298. How many gates it has. 298. The names of the upper Paradise. 298. 299. The names of the lower. 299. 300. 301. Where it is located. 300. Each is said to have seven dwellings. 301. Description of the seven dwellings of the lower Paradise, as Rabbi Joshua found them. 302. 303. 304. 305. How large they are. 303. How many ranks of the righteous there are in the upper Paradise. 305. 306. And how many there are in the lower Paradise. 307. Each tribe, indeed each righteous person, is said to have a dwelling therein. 308. How far the angels and most of the righteous are permitted to go therein. 308. 309. The pious, who are permitted to go everywhere within it, share with the others from the radiance of their wisdom. 309. Description of the lower Paradise and the glory of the righteous therein. 309. 310. 311. 313. What Rabbi Moses bar Maimon's opinion on this is. 886.

Paradise, how far it is from Hell. 314. 315. A place therein is said to have been created for every person. 315. How those who enter it are received. 317. How many have entered it alive. 317. How many souls of the righteous are preserved therein. 317. 318. How these pass from the lower Paradise into the upper. 318. This does not happen immediately at the beginning. 318. 319. At times the souls are said to come from the upper Paradise into the lower. 319. They are also said to take delight in Paradise during the year of release, and to receive new strength. 320. When people who have done both good and evil come into Paradise. 960. God is said to come into Paradise daily, and to what end this occurs. 320. For what reason the ungodly are to be led into Paradise in the future. 369. Alexander the Great is said to have come before the gate of Heaven, and what took place there. 321. 322. The rabbis' teaching concerning Paradise must be believed in all things. 322. Paradise is said to encompass Hell within itself in the future. 369.

Pearls were sought for Solomon by the devils in the sea. 444. How great a multitude of pearls will be around Jerusalem in the future. 844. 845.

A pledge given by a Jew to a Christian, and lost by the Christian, but found by a Jew, the Jew is not to return to the Christian. 597.

Arrows of the inhabitants of the land beyond the river Sabbatyon, what their nature is. 557. 558.

Horses in the land beyond the river Sabbatyon, how spirited they are, and what they eat and drink. 556. 557. How the king in the said land mounts his horse. 557. How long the Jews there sit on horseback, and how they sit. 557.

A peach of the Promised Land, how large it is said to have been. 834.

The gates of the city of Jerusalem are to be built of precious stones in the future. 842. 843.

Pirgandicus, a pagan king: how he deceived 11 rabbis who, at his request, had drunk pagan wine, and what transpired in connection with this. 622. 623. 624. 625.

The plagues of the land of Egypt are all to come upon Edom, that is, Christendom. 794. 795. 796. As also upon Rome. 796.

The planets are to have princes who move and govern them. 384.

A place is to have been created for every person in Paradise and in Hell. 315.

The trumpet will be blown by God when He gathers the Jews together. 131. From where that trumpet will come. 132. From where the trumpet came that was blown on Mount Sinai. 131. 133. The trumpet will be blown by the Archangel Michael before the coming of the Messiah, and what will follow from it. 713. 714.

Prester John, a king: what he wrote to a pope in Rome. 536. What kind of watchmen he keeps at the river Sabbatyon, and to what end. 555. How close his land is to that same river. 557. What kind of defeat his people suffer when the Jews make war upon him. 557. How his brave men, when challenged to combat by Jews, buy themselves free from fighting with gold. 558. How he sent an embassy across the river Sabbatyon to King Eliezer. 559. What gifts he sent along with it. 559. 560. He is said to have an entire land of people who have no heads, whose eyes and mouth are on their chest. 560.

Prophecy: when it is to exist again among the Jews. 680. The Israelites alone are to be worthy of its gifts. 904. 905.

Pusiel, an infernal spirit who strikes the damned. 342.

Q.

The torment of the godless souls, which is called Na venad, what its nature is. 42. through 54.

A spring flows out of Paradise. 314. A spring that comes from Hell is warm. 314.

R.

A raven cried out at R. Isaac Luria, and why? 36. 37. A raven taught Adam and Eve the burial of the dead. 444. 445. How God rewarded the raven for such instruction. 445.

Rabba, how dearly he sold his fragrant cloak. 314. How he had himself attended when he was in the privy. 449. 450.

Rabbis, ten of whom were killed by the Romans. 139. What their names were. ibid. Why they were killed. ibid. The devils gladly keep company with the rabbis, and why? 444. 446. 447. And they tear the rabbis' garments. 446. Rabbis are fond of taking gifts and allowing themselves to be bribed. 486. 487. Examples thereof. 487. 488. 489. Rabbis hold differing opinions on the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. 503. to 916. Rabbis, what they advised a Jew who had converted to the Christian religion and wished to become a Jew again, to take a large sum of money from Christians and then abscond with it. 589. The rabbis dispute among themselves whether those who rise from the dead will die once more. 944. to 948.

Vengeance is what the Jews petition God for in their prayers against the Christians. 98. 101. 102. 108. 128. 226. In what this vengeance is to consist. 99. 105. Why they do this. 102. to 105. God's vengeance will come upon the Christians more than upon other peoples. 779. Concerning vengeance against the Christians, see also 787. 788. 790.

Rasdiel, the angel, is said to be set over grace and favor. 380.

Raphael, the angel, is said to have been Jacob's teacher. 375. And to be set over medicine. 380.

Rasiel, the angel, is said to have been Adam's teacher. 375.

The counselors of Christian rulers, how they are named by the Jews. 472.

Robbery: see Despoiling. Buying something from robbers is forbidden. 586. Robbery, what a grave sin it is. 475. 476. Raymundus Martini converted many Jews to the Christian religion. 992. The grapevine in the Promised Land, how many grapes it bore at one time, and how large they were. 833. Rechabites, a Jewish people: what land they inhabit, and what their manner of life and conduct consists of. 516. 517. 518. They dwell in Arabia. 553. An account shall man give in the future at the Last Judgment when he torments an animal. 928. The wolves, dogs, and barren trees shall also give an account. 978. 979. Laws shall be reinstated at the time of the Messiah as they were in former times. 859. Litigating before Christian authorities is strictly forbidden to the Jews and punishable by the ban. 472. 473. What a grave sin it is. 474. through 477. Whoever does so is called a traitor. 477. 478. Yet it is permitted under certain conditions. 478. 479. Speech: the doors of the Temple are said to have spoken with Solomon. 853. Ants, how they spoke with one another. 443. Reemim, that is, unicorns, is the name given to the Romans. 172. 173. 179. 796. Region, a river of fire in Hell, whence it comes. 346. It is cast upon the heads of the wicked. 346. Nearly all the righteous are to be purified therein. ibid. The wealth of the Jews, how great it shall be at the time of the Messiah. 768. through 774. Horsemen in the land beyond the river Sabbatjon, how they sit on horseback, and how long they remain seated. 557. Judges from their own people are permitted to the Jews. 996. This ought not to be permitted to them. 1022. 1023. Giants, whence they have their origin. 430. Romans are called Reemim, that is, unicorns. 172. 173. 179. 796. All Christians are understood thereby. 173. 179. When they ruled over the entire world. 651. The Roman Empire shall be judged by fire. 266. It is called the godless empire. 650. 651. 700. The godless Edom. 703. 767. The fourth empire. 781. 790. The Edomite empire. 651. 768. When it spread itself over Israel. 651. It shall reign under the whole heaven for nine months before the coming of the Messiah. 700. 703. It shall in the future be Gog and Magog. 732.

Rome shall feel the vengeance of God. 100. And at the time of the coming of the Messiah it shall be destroyed. 690. 691. 692. 796. 799. 800. Who will destroy it. 691. 692. How the Jews will take possession of it. 691. 692. Account of such destruction. 692. to 695. How little Rome shall be esteemed at that time. 696. It is called Nineveh, the city of blood. 708. It is called Bozra. 693. 694. 695. 799.

Ruchiel, the angel, is said to be set over the wind. 380. What princes he has under him. ibid.

Ruchin is the name given to certain devils, and why? 412.

Rest, when it falls to the lot of the wicked in hell. 347. to 352.

The Christians and other peoples shall not rest. 206. 207. 208.

S.

Seminal flux, whence it comes. 423. 424. From it devils are said to come. 423. 425.

The Sabbath shall not be observed by the Gojim or Christians. 206. 207. 208. Observance of the Sabbath brings about the forgiveness of sins. 282. It is equal to the observance of the entire Law. 282. How it is properly kept. 282. The damned shall not be tormented on it. 347. to 352. Turnus Rufus, what conversation he held with R. Akkiva and with his own deceased father concerning it. 350. 351. 352.

Sabbatjon, a river, and why it is so named. 533. It is said to move great stones during the six days of the week and to be very turbulent, but to rest on the Sabbath. 533. 537. 542. 544. 555. Where this river is located, the Jews do not agree among themselves. 534. 535. They also do not agree among themselves whether it is a river of water or a river of sand and stones. 535. 536. 537. Those who say it is a river of water report that it is the river Gosan or Ganges. 535. 536. 717. And that the pagans hold the water of the same to be holy. 536. 556. How wide this river is. 537. 539. 542. 556. On the Sabbath, a great ring of fire is said to surround it. 537. The sand of this river is also said to move on workdays when carried elsewhere, and to rest on the Sabbath. 537. 538. As to which Jews dwell beyond this river, the rabbis likewise do not agree among themselves; some teach that the tribe and lineage of Moses resides there. 539. to 543. Others teach that the ten tribes dwell there. 543. 544. 717. 718. Others maintain that only a portion of the ten tribes is there. 545. 546. The origin of this river. 542. According to the testimony of Rabbi Gerson in his little book Gelikoth erez Jisrael, it is said to be beyond the wilderness of Calicut. 554. Two days' journey from Sevilia. 554. 559. How it roars. 554. 555. 556. Why Prester Jan had guards posted at it. 555. Its water is wholesome. 556. When the Jews who dwell beyond this river cross over it. 557. How eight Jews made their way across it, and what the king said to them. 560. Contradictory teachings of the Jews concerning the river Sabbatjon. 464. 465. What the Jews write about it is pure fable. 565. How R. Menasse ben Israël took great pains to prove that such a river exists. 566. Refutation of his proof. 566. 567. R. David Gans himself calls into doubt R. Abraham Perizol's account of this river. 568. The Jews could with better justification say that such a river is in Abyssinia. 570. 571.

Sabbethai Zevi, a learned Jew from Smyrna, how he presented himself as the Messiah, and what became of him. 666.

Wet nurses of Christians are not to serve Jews. 1025.

Sagirta, what kind of she-devil she is. 425.

Solomon is said to have had power over the devils and to have called them male and female servants. 416. 440. 444. His throne, how many seats it had. 370. Who sat upon it and beside it. ibid. Solomon is said to have ruled over all creatures. 440. 441. To have learned foreign wisdoms from the devils Asa and Asael. 441. To have sent a letter to the Queen of Sheba by means of a capercaillie. 440. According to the Alcoran, it is said to have been a hoopoe. 443. The contents of that letter. 442. 443. Solomon understood the languages of all creatures. 441. 443. He learned the language of the angels. 443. And caused all wild animals, birds, creeping things, and devils to dance before him. 441. 442. Why he was angry with the capercaillie. 442. Of what his army consisted. 442. 443. How the throne of the Queen of Sheba was brought before him. 444. The devils also fished pearls for him. 444. How he had Hiram, the King of Tyre, led by a devil through all the dwellings of hell and brought back out again. 445. 763. Why he took the daughter of King Pharaoh as his wife. 467. What difficulty he encountered with the doors of the Temple when he wished to bring the Ark of the Covenant inside. 853. 854. Why he was thus grieved by the doors of the Temple. 853. 854. He is said to have had an Ark of the Covenant made. 853. Which is a Jewish error. 853. 854. He is said to have had hidden vaults built beneath the choir of the Temple in order to conceal the Ark of the Covenant therein. 858.

Salomon Molto, secretary to the King of Portugal, how he became a Jew, what befell him, and how he was burned. 521. 522. Why he was burned. 522. 523.

Samaritan bread is forbidden to eat. 916. No Samaritan shall be admitted to the Jewish religion. 926. No Samaritan shall rise from the dead. 916. Where they currently reside. 916. 917. The Jews are bitterly hostile toward them. 917.

Sambatjon: see Sabbatjon.

Sammaël is the name given to the wicked man. 2. He is said to have been castrated. 7. He petitions God that, just as the Jews are set right through the transmigration of souls, so too others might be set right. 60. He brought it about that ten rabbis were killed by the Romans. 139. For this reason he and Christendom must endure a severe punishment in the future. 139. 140. 807. He is said to have received from the Jews in former times a goat as a gift annually. 155. Why he received it. 156. He complained before God that he has no power over the Jews. ibid. He is also called Asasel. 157. 158. He becomes the Jews' advocate, whereas he is otherwise their accuser, when he receives a goat as a gift. 160. 161. God is said to have offered him the Law. 248. He is said to have four wives. 416. Where they reside. 420. 421. The seventy princes are said to stand under him, who govern the 70 nations. 421. Sammaël is said to have received four kingdoms, in each of which he has a concubine; what the kingdoms and concubines are called. ibid. How many princes he has under him. 433. The devils subordinate to him cause people to go astray at night and deceive them. 433. 434. He is called a fool, and the Leviathan, which is a lowly serpent. 434. He is said to arouse in creatures the desire for procreation and the multiplication of the species. 464. 465. How he complained before God that He had given him no power over the Israelites, and what God answered him. 506. What he further said in response. ibid. He is said to be the father of the blood-eaters. 620. And he helps the seed of Esau shed blood. 620. He is called a dog. 640. He is said to be the prince of Esau, that is, of the Christians. 779. 805. 806. He is said to have ridden from Rome upon the serpent and to have seduced Eve. 779. He is to be struck with leprosy. 804. 805. God will take vengeance upon him. 804. He is to be slaughtered. 805. How this will come to pass. 805. 806. The Messiah will kill him along with his army. 806. 807.

Samiel, the angel, over which animals he is appointed. 380.

Samuel, why he was afraid when he was brought up by the sorceress at Saul's request. 960. 963. 967.

Samuel, a converted rabbi, how the Jews had him put to death. 198.

Sandalfon, the angel, is said to be appointed over mankind. 380. And over protection. 380. He is one of the three angels who receive the prayers of the Israelites and make a crown from them. 393. 402. This crown he is said to place upon God's head. 394. He is said to be Elijah. 401. How tall he is. 402. Where he stands. ibid. He is said at the present time to offer sacrifice in the Temple at Jerusalem. 851. From where he obtains the necessary money for this. 851.

Sansaniel, the angel, is said to be appointed over peace. 380.

Sapor, a Persian king, offered to send the Messiah an excellent horse, so that he would not have to ride upon a donkey. 698.

Sarniel, the angel, is said to be appointed over memory. 380.

Saroel, the angel, is said to be appointed over barren trees. 380.

Satan is called the other God. 7. He is said in the future to become a holy angel. 368. 467. 468. When he was created. 409. How he planted a vineyard together with Noah, and what transpired in the process. 627. 628. How it went with him when he saw the light hidden beneath the throne of glory. 806. 807.

Harm: the Jews are to do as much of it as they possibly can to Christians and others. 604.

Shame on account of sins brings about their forgiveness. 275.

Treasures of life, peace, and blessing are said to be in the firmament, which is called Aravoth. 928.

Schafriel, an infernal spirit, who strikes the damned. 342.

Schamchasai, the angel, what he did. 156.

A treasure that is very great and is said to lie in Rome. 769. 770. 771. Of another great treasure that the Jews will receive at the time of the Messiah. 771. Joseph is said to have hidden three treasures in Egypt. 771. The sea is then supposed to cast out all the treasure lying within it for the Jews. 771. 772. 773. They are also to receive every treasure that lies beneath the earth. 774.

Treasury of Korab, how many keys it had. 771. Schechten (ritual slaughter): one must not slaughter an animal together with its young. 35. 36. Slaughtering knives must have no nicks, and why? 34. 35. Shedim is what the devils are called, and why? 408. Which ones are called thus. 413. Schegagoth, what sins it signifies. 503. Schela, a rabbi, how he killed a Babylonian man. 212. 213. Schem hammephorasch was not revealed to Abraham and Isaac, and why? 260. It is said that Lilis spoke it and thereby flew up into the air. 418. Scheol, a dwelling of hell, what goes on within it. 345. Schidda and Schiddim, what it means in Prov 2:8. 424. Schiloh, what it means in Gen 49:10. 648. Schimeon, the rabbi, son of Jochai, why he withdrew with his son into a cave, how long they were in it, and how they came out again. 404. 405. 406. "Blows of the children of men": what kind of devils they are and where they come from. 422. 423. 424. They have no hair on their heads. 423. All manner of plagues, and the leprosy of garments and houses, are said to originate from them. 424. 425. They are said to defile the man from whose seed they come after his death. 425. And to walk with his corpse. 426. How they are driven away from the dead. 425. 426. Human sleep, where it comes from. 389. Is a foretaste of death. 453. Sleeping under walnut trees is dangerous, and why? 447. One should not sleep alone in a house, and why? 452. The serpent, how its hands and feet were cut off and how it cried out. 800. It taught the downfall of Edom. 801. The serpent is said to come forth from the bone of Luz, and when this is to occur. 932. 933. Serpents, what they would have done had they not been tempted. 846. Keys and locks, how many belonged to Korab's treasury. 771. What they were made of. 771. Three keys God is said not to have given to any messenger He sent. 897. Sufferings of the Messiah, which are called חבלי המשיח (Cheble hammashiach), what is to be understood by them: see "Tribulations." Sufferings of the dead who in the future will be rolled beneath the earth into the Promised Land are said to be very great. 901. 924. 925. For this reason Jacob and Joseph wished to be buried in the land of Canaan. 925.

The Scripture of the Word of God is accustomed to making brief mention of hidden things. 892. 893.

School in the city of Dam Efroach, built with precious stones and pearls. 560.

Debts, how they will in the future be paid with precious stones, pearls, and gold. 845.

Sin offering shall in the future no longer exist, and for what reason. 860.

Swearing: Jews are accustomed to swearing falsely. 501. The book called Sepher chasidim (ספר חסידים) can give them occasion for this. 502.

Oath: how Jews are absolved on the eve of their Day of Atonement. 490. 491. How they can be released from it by a rabbi, or by three members of the congregation. 492. 493. 494. Transgression of the oath, what kind of sin it is. 495. 496.

Scorpions are said to be in hell, and what their nature is. 345.

Soul: how it can be possible that David and the Messiah are to be found at one and the same time, given that they share only one soul. 942. How the soul may in the future excuse itself so as to be freed from the Last Judgment. 974. 975. It will in the future be judged together with the body. 974. 975. Which soul the Jews are to receive on the Sabbath in addition to their other souls. 20. 21. 22. On account of this soul they then eat choice morsels. 22. Where such a soul comes from. 22. R. Menasse rejects this teaching. 23. The soul of a human being is said to be divisible into many parts and transferable into many other people. 89. 90. It departs from those who are sleeping. 453. The soul of a Jew who eats carrion: into what kind of animal it passes. 617. The soul of Adam is said to have passed into David and to come into the Messiah. 25. 730. 731. The soul of an idolater perishes after his death. 907. As does likewise the soul of a wicked person. 912. How many Israelite souls there are. 508.

The souls of the peoples who are outside of Judaism are said to derive from the devils. 1. 2. 3. 5. 7. 9. The souls of the Jews, however, are said to originate from the Holy Spirit and from GOD. 2. 3. From what time the souls of the peoples are said to derive from the devils. 5. 6. Where the souls of those peoples reside before they enter into human beings. 8. Where the souls of the devils are. 8. When the souls of the peoples are to be entirely annihilated. 9. The souls of the Jews are said to sparkle and to be a part of the divine essence. 9. 10. 294. They derive from the name Jehovah and the ten Sephiroth. 10. How pleasing they are to GOD. 10. 11. When the souls were created. 11. 12. 18. Where they went immediately thereafter. 12. When and from where the souls are given to children in their mother's womb. 12. How many souls GOD created in the beginning. 12. 13. 14. Souls that are worthy thereof ascend every night into heaven, and what they do there. 13. All souls are said to have been contained within Adam's soul. 13. 14. 15. When they were taken from him. 15. Female souls were separated from the male ones. 15. Those that were corrupted through Adam's fall are said to have been set right again through the patriarchs. 15. All 600,000 Israelite souls are said to have been attached to Adam. 16. GOD is said to have shown him all the souls. 16. 17. 18. They are all said to have been present at Mount Sinai. 17. 18. 19. They take on a body before they come into the world, and are adjured by GOD not to sin. 18. They are said to have fled from their bodies at Mount Sinai out of fear. 19. But to have returned into them again through the intercession of the Law. 19. 20. The souls of the wise ascend every night into heaven. 20. There are five kinds of souls. 21. 22. When a person becomes partaker of them. 21. 22. The souls of the wicked derive from Cain. 22. 23. And those of the pious from Abel. 23. Souls are said to pass from one body into another. 23. Some Jews have denied this. 24. The doctrine of the transmigration of souls is said to derive from Abraham. 25. They pass again into human bodies. 25. And indeed the souls of men again into men. 25. 26. 40. Or into women. 26. 27. The souls of women also again into women. 27. Or into men. 27. 28. Why the souls of women are transmigrated. 28. 29. Jewish souls are also said to pass into heathen bodies. 29. 30. And into all manner of animals, birds, and vermin. 30. to 37. also 56. Signs by which one can know whether souls have been in livestock, wild animals, or birds. 37. 38. They are also said to pass into fish. 38. And into the plants of the earth and the leaves of trees, as well as into stones and other lifeless things. 39. 40. 41. Into water. 41. 42. Into mills. 42. Into devils. 42. The punishment of souls, which is called Navenad, and wherein it consists. 42. to 45. How the souls are hurled about. 44. 45. 50. 51. They endure greater torment outside of hell than in hell. 49. The souls of the righteous are also said to wander about in the world. 54. How often the souls are transmigrated. 55. to 59. A parable concerning this. 56. 57. For what reason and to what end this occurs. 59. 60. 61. The Jews' proof of this doctrine, and its refutation. 61. to 85. Israelites are made righteous through the transmigration of souls. 294. 295.

Souls of the Righteous, how they are received in Paradise. 317. By what they are sustained therein. 317. 318. How they pass from the lower Paradise into the upper, and how long they remain there. 318. This, however, does not happen immediately at first, when they enter the lower Paradise. 318. 319. The souls in the upper Paradise are also said to come down into the lower Paradise at times. 319. The souls of the righteous also run about in Paradise at certain times like chirping birds, etc. 319. And in the Year of Release they receive new strength. 320. The souls of the wicked are said to be able to go out of Hell and back into it again. 337. The souls of both the righteous and the wicked must be purified in Hell. 337. 338. The souls of the wicked are also said to be transformed into devils, just as the souls of the deceased generations of Cain are said to be devils. 427. 428. Likewise, the souls of the generation of the Flood are said to have become devils. 428. These are to be exterminated from the earth in the future. ibid. The souls of the peoples of the world are said to receive their influence from the devils. 527. The souls of clean and unclean animals, where they come from. 637. 638. The souls of those who were present at the building of the Tower of Babylon, where they went. 736. The souls are said to re-enter their bodies at the resurrection only in the Land of Israel. 923.

924. 926. 930. How long the souls in the Promised Land will wait for the resurrection. 924. The souls of the righteous, as well as the souls that are yet to be created, in which firmament they reside. 928. Souls also pass into other bodies by a manner called Ibbur. 85. Why this occurs. 86. They are said to be purified thereby. 88. 674. 675. The souls of parents also pass through the same into their children. 88.

Salvation is said to belong to the Jews alone. 248. 249. 250. 253. By what means a Jew is saved. 285. through 295.

Seir is said to be a place of impurity and the devil. 482. Christendom is called Seir. 184.

Seirim is the name given to the devils, and why. 408. 409.

Shem's teacher, what his name was. 375.

Sennacherib, what he did. 545. Mixed all the peoples of the world together with one another. 609. Is said to be the future Gog and Magog. 736. To whom all seventy peoples will attach themselves. 736. Was Nimrod. 736. How Sennacherib's army perished. 797. Is said to rise again in the future and rule once more, but will be punished. 736.

The pillar that goes from the lower Paradise to the upper one, what it is called and what purpose it serves. 318.

The Shechemites, why they were slain by Simeon and Levi. 204. 205.

The seventy peoples, why they were distributed among seventy devils. 3. Will in the future wage war against the Messiah. 736. Are said to be the Gog and Magog. 737.

Simeon Abel, a Jewish boy, why he was killed by his father. 199.

Sis, what kind of great bird it is. 877.

Sitraáchera, what it means. 388.

A son, how he can rescue his father from hell. 357. 359.

The sun is said to burn the wicked in the future. 366. 367. Is currently enclosed in a sheath. ibid. How its heat is weakened by water. ibid. What angel is appointed over it. 385. It is governed by certain angels by day and by others by night. 385. 386. How many names it has. ibid. How many angels are before and behind it, and why. 386. It is said, through its heat, to cause consumption, burning fevers, plague, etc. among the wicked before the coming of the Messiah, but to do no harm to the righteous. 701. The sun will in the future be turned into darkness. 702. How great its brightness will be. 826. 827.

Foods that are to be eaten at the future meal in Paradise are said to come from the highest light. 876. 877. 878. 887. Their effect. 778. 887.

All foods are permitted to the peoples of the world, and why. 254. 619. Foods of the inhabitants of the land of Calicut. 554. Foods which are forbidden in the Law of Moses, what effects they have. 618. Foods which have been cooked by Christians, the Jews are not permitted to eat. 628. 629. And the eating of such is considered a sin. 629. Foods should not be placed under beds, and why. 644.

Mockers will not be saved. 273.

The language of all creatures was understood by Solomon. 441. Of the birds. 443.

The staff which the Messiah will have, what kind of staff it will be. 764. 765.

The tribe of Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, where they reside. 518. What they are accustomed to doing. 518. The tribe of Dan, why it in former times migrated to the land of the Moors. 527. How the tribe of Naphtali, as well as Gad and Asher, also made their way there. 527. The tribe of Dan is said to have known nothing of the destruction of the First Temple. 529. The tribe of Issachar, where it comes from, and what its condition is. 530. 531. The tribe of Zebulun and Reuben, where they reside, and what their situation is. 531. Where the tribe of Ephraim and the half-tribe of Manasseh dwell, and what kind of heroes they are. 531. Where the tribe of Simeon and the half-tribe of Judah reside, from whom they receive tribute, and to whom they pay tribute. 531. The tribe of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin are scattered throughout the entire world. 532. From the tribe of Judah, Emperor Vespasian brought many people into Spain. 532. 533.

The tribe of Moses is said, according to Eldadon's little book, to dwell in the land beyond the river Sabbatjon. 540. In what their study and teaching consist. 540. Knows nothing of the Talmudic teachers who lived at the time of the second Temple. 540. Speaks nothing but Hebrew. 540. Swears not by God's name. 541. How long these people live, entirely safe and without any danger. 541. Are very wealthy and consist of a great multitude of people. 541. How they sometimes call out to the four tribes who dwell on this side of the river, bidding them show them their dogs, camels, and donkeys. 541. 542. How this tribe of Moses came to be beyond the river Sabbatjon. 542. 643.

The tribe of Simeon and a part of the tribe of Judah, how they were brought behind the dark mountains. 544. 545. After the resurrection, every Jew is to be joined to his tribe. 949.

The ten tribes are said to dwell in Media beyond the river Euphrates. 519. 524. And to have their own kings and princes. 524. 525. Why they cannot come together. 524. Where the tribes of Dan, Zebulun, Asher, and Naphtali dwell according to the account of R. Benjamin, and what their condition is. 518. 519. How large their land is. 519. Where the tribes of Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher dwell according to the little book of Eldad, what wars they wage, and what their condition is otherwise. 527. 528. Disagreement between Rabbi Benjamin and Rabbi Eldad regarding those four tribes. 528. 529. Why the tribes of Naphtali, Gad, and Asher moved to the land of the Moors together with the tribe of Dan. 529. The ten tribes, where they ended up. 543. 544. 545. 568. They are within the dark mountains. 544. 552. Some are covered by a cloud. 546. They are enclosed. 724. Some of the ten tribes are also said to dwell in Ethiopia. 569. And a portion of them is said to reside in America as well. 571. But everything that is written about the happy condition of the ten tribes is a fable. 572. 573. The twelve tribes are in Exilio, that is, in misery. 573. How the ten tribes will return in the future, they who presently dwell beyond the river Gozan in Chalach and Chabor and in Media, and what will take place in connection with this. 716. But this is said to occur at the time of the Messiah. 717. And they will be the first to wage war against the nations of the world. 717. Where they will gather together with the remaining Jews. 718. They will travel to the Holy Land. 723. What stands in the Talmud concerning their return and blessedness. 718. 719. Proof against the Jews that they will not return. 719. 720.

A city in Germany was burned down by the Jews together with all the Christians and Jews who were in it. 982.

Stealing from a Christian is, to be sure, forbidden to the Jews in some of their books. 584. 585. Yet it is also permitted. 586. 587. 588. 589. Examples thereof. 582. 583. 588. Stealing committed by a Jew, as well as by one who is not a Jew, against a Jew, and how it is to be punished. 592.

Stone in the abyss, which moves from its place when a false oath is sworn. 497.

Dying of people before the 13th and 20th year, whence it comes. 83. The dying of young children, how it may be prevented. 274. Certain angels must die, and why. 376. Man must necessarily die, according to the teaching of Rabbi Moses bar Maimon. 812. Rabbi Meir refutes this. 819. The rabbis dispute among themselves whether people will die once more after the resurrection. 944 to 948.

Stars, how many there are. 14.

Voice of God is said to have been heard throughout the entire world when the law of Moses was given. 242. 243. 244. How it was heard from all four parts of the world. 244. What took place on that occasion. ibid. A voice from heaven is said to spread through the double cave for the awakening of the patriarchs. 903. The voice of the serpent, how far it was heard when its hands and feet were cut off. 800. The voice of the trumpets, through which God will raise the dead, is said to go from one end of the world to the other. 930.

The proud descend into hell. 266.

Punishment of hell is unequal. 328. How long it lasts. 337. 338. 353. 354. 355. 356. Punishment of a Jew who steals or robs from another Jew. 592. Punishment of one who is not a Jew and steals or robs from a Jew. ibid. Punishment of a Jew who does violence to a converted Jew. 1029.

A river will in the future flow from the Holy of Holies of the Temple, along whose banks fruitful trees will grow. 836.

Studying the Law of Moses benefits no Goi. 269. No Goi shall study therein: see Law. Studying the Law causes the forgiveness of sins for Jews. 275. 276. Studying the Talmud brings salvation. 287.

The sin of Adam is a cause of death. 81. 82. 819. There are said to have been people who committed no sin whatsoever. 82. In the time of the Messiah there shall be no sin. 821. Nor after the resurrection. 860.

The sins of a person are not punished before his 20th year. 80. Those he commits before his 13th year are reckoned to his father's account. ibid. The sins of Jewish men and women, and how they are atoned for at the Feast of Atonement through the slaughter of a rooster or a hen. 149. 150. How, in the absence of a rooster or a hen, they transfer those sins, in their view, onto the necks of Christians. 150. Christians are supposed to bear the sins of the Jews. 150. through 154. 161. How in former times the sins of the Jews were laid upon a goat. 154. 155. Sins, and how they are forgiven to the Jews according to their teaching. 274. through 277. 281. How they are atoned for. 282. through 285. The sins of people are marked on their foreheads. 455. All sins are forgiven to the Jews at the Feast of Atonement, even the most grievous. 503. through 507. A ridiculous fable concerning this. 506. 507. Such forgiveness of sins is said to occur on account of the blood of the covenant of Abraham's circumcision. 503. Which sins are grave or light. 505.

The Christians are supposed to be the scapegoat of the Jews. 159. 160. How a woman in Erfurt allowed herself to be purchased annually as the Jews' scapegoat. 162. See further: Goat.

Children are supposed to sin together with their parents, and how this comes about. 88. The whole world sinned when Adam sinned. 82.

Sin offerings shall not exist in the future, and why. 860.

Synagogues or schools ought not to be permitted to the Jews, and why. 1021. 1022.

T.

Days, how long they will be in the future. 828. The days of the Messiah, how long they will last. 809. 810. 811.

The Talmud is also found among the tribe of Reuben behind the mountain of Paran. 531. The Talmud of the Jews beyond the river Sabbation is written in the Hebrew language. 540. The Talmud teaches that deception is permitted even to the pious. 578.

Talmudic teachers, what kinds of deceptions they employed in false swearing. 513.

Dancing: see Dancing.

Tarvad rakaf, what kind of bone it is in the human body. See Lus.

Tema, the capital city of the land of the Rechabites. 517.

The Temple in Jerusalem is said to have been set on fire by Gabriel and Michael. 383. In it, magnificent fruits are said to grow, as happened in former times. 836. From the Temple a stream is said to flow. 836. Some rabbis teach that God will build it Himself in the future, and indeed upon three mountains. 847. Of silver, gold, and precious stones. 772. 848. And He will cause it to descend from heaven. 848. 849. 924. And it will remain forever. 849. Others teach that the Messiah will build it. 720. 849. 850. 859. R. Bechai teaches that the Edomites, that is, the Romans, will build it. 850. What kinds of stones and wood are to be used in its construction. 850. 851. 852. Others teach that the Temple was not destroyed and burned, but was hidden away by the devils. 851. 852. And the angel Sandalfon is said to be offering sacrifices in it at the present time. 851. From where he takes the funds for this. 851. The doors of the Temple are also said to have been hidden away. 852. 853. What difficulties Solomon encountered with them, and how he spoke with them. 853. How high the upper Temple is above the lower one. 861. How the Jews prove that the third Temple will be built. 860. 861. 862. 863. Refutation of R. Bechai's teaching on this matter. 863. 864. Proof against the Jews, drawn from Ezra, that no third Temple is to be built. 864. From Chrysostom and others, who teaches how the Jews wished to rebuild it but were prevented by fire from heaven. 864 through 871.

Selling terefa meat to a Christian as clean meat is, to be sure, forbidden to the Jews in certain places in their books. 631. Yet it is also permitted in other places. 632. And the Jews do sell it to Christians. 637. What is to be understood by terefa. 631. How many varieties of it there are. 631. It is said to have an influence from the devil. 637. 638. And it has nothing pure about it whatsoever, which is why a Jew is punished who gives it to another Jew to eat. 638. Because it has been struck by the devil, it is therefore to be given to Christians, who also originate from the devil. 638. 639. 640. And for this reason the Jews are not permitted to eat it. 640.

A devil that was young served in the house of R. Papa. 458. A devil, how loudly he cried out when a hair was pulled from his head. 463. Devils are said to be created through evil deeds, and to bear witness against mankind at the Last Judgment. 8. They are said to be destroyed. 9. What they are called in Hebrew. 408. Why they are called thus. 408. 409. Some devils are said to have been created as devils. 409. When they were created. 409. 410. 412. Why they were created without bodies. 409. 410. 411. From what they were created. 411. 412. Where their souls are and where their bodies are made. 411. Some devils are also said to have been begotten by Adam and born of Eve, and how this came about. 412. 413. 414. Others are said to be begotten by male and female devils. 415. The devils agree with the holy angels in three respects, and with mankind in three respects, and what those respects are. 415. The devils are also said to beget devils with the wives of men, and the men among mankind with the female devils. 421. 422. Some devils are also said to originate from the seminal emission of men, and these are called נגעי בני אדם (nighe bene adam), that is, plagues of the children of men. 422. 423. 424. 426. 427. Devils are said to lie down beside men when they sleep and to be inflamed by them. 422. 423. 426. 427. The devils who come from a man's seed judge that man after his death. 424. They are said to defile the man from whose seed they originate after his death. 425. And to follow the corpse of that man as their father. 426. How one may drive them away and kill them. 425. 426. 427. Some devils are also said to arise from the souls of the wicked. 427. 428. Thus some of those who built the Tower of Babylon are said to have become devils. 32. 429. There are said to be three kinds of devils. 431. Some are said to be holy and wise, like the ministering angels, and to know the past and the future. 431. 432. 459. They also understand the written and oral law. 432. These are said to be called the Jewish devils, and why. 432. Their chief is said to be Aschmedai. 432. There are thus said to be good and evil, believing and unbelieving devils. 432. Which devils perform their prayers. 433. The Jewish devils are marked with the sign of circumcision. 433. And they are set in opposition to the idolatrous devils. 433. Some devils are like cattle. 431. 433. What princes and rulers there are among the devils. 433. Which devils lead traveling men astray by night and blind their eyes. 434. Ketef meriri, what kind of devil it is. 434. 435. 436. The devil Bedar-Bedärgon, what his form is. 436. 437. Whom the devil Kordiacos harms. 437. Some dwell in the air, others in men, others in the depths of the sea. 437. The devils are also said to dwell in the north. 438. 439. They fished pearls for Solomon. 444. They also like to be near the rabbis and tear their garments. 445. 446. Why they like to be near the rabbis. 446. 447. How many are with each rabbi. 446. They come into the synagogues of the Jews on the Sabbath and cause a crush. 446. Weary knees and bruised shins come from them. 446. The devils also like to dwell in walnut trees. 447. And in filth. 447. 448. As well as under the drip of eaves. 448. How on one occasion a devil smashed a barrel of wine, why he did so, and how he was made to pay for it on the rabbis' orders. 448. Devils are said to have no power over things that are sealed, measured, and counted. 448. They are also said to dwell in privies, or in secret chambers. 449. 454. And in wildernesses. 449. The devil who dwells in the privy is said to accompany people when they leave it. 450. Devils are said to dance on the horns of oxen when they come out of a river or pond. 450. Devils can harm anyone who walks alone, especially at night. 451. They cause sudden illnesses. 454. They see the sins of men on their foreheads and have the power to harm them. 455. How they know the past and the future. 455. 456. What their food and drink consist of. 456. 457. 458. They are said to be mortal. 458. 459. Yet not all of them. 460. 461. One hundred of them are said to die every day, and why. 418. Noah is said to have taken some of them into the ark so that they would not all perish. 459. How one devil killed another in Paris. 459. 460. How in another place one killed another. 460. The world is said to be full of devils. 461. 462. And they are said to have masks before their faces so that they cannot harm men. 462. Devils are said to be capable of being caught, bound, and imprisoned by men. 462. 463. 464. A ridiculous fable about an imprisoned devil. 465. 466. Which devils are entirely hairy but have bald heads. 465. Devils are said to have danced before King Solomon at his command. 441. 442. The devils are said to be purified in the future and transformed into holy angels. 467. 468. They are also said to be made subject to the Messiah and to plague the nations at his command. 763.

Female demons lie with male persons. 422. 423. Where they come from. 421. 422. 423. A female demon came to Abasuerus in place of Esther and lay with him. 452. 453.

The Germans are said to descend from the Canaanites. 193. 202. But Abarbanel rejects this. 193.

The Valley of the Son of Hinnom, what kind of place it was. 323.

The dew of life falls every day from the head of GOD. 317. Through it, the dead are to be resurrected and the souls in Paradise sustained. 318. GOD announces in Paradise the time of dew and rain. 320. A dew of blood is to fall shortly before the coming of the Messiah, and the wicked who drink of it will die. 702. Thereafter a wholesome dew is to fall down, to heal the sicknesses that arise from the blood-dew that was drunk. 702. A dew of spices and balsam is to rain down in Paradise upon the righteous. 883. The dead will be resurrected through a dew. 906. 927. 928. 929. 933. This same dew is said to be in the heaven called Aravóth 928. 927. 906. ערבות. The power of this dew. 927. It is to flow from the head of GOD. 928. 929. From it, something is also to fall daily twice upon the souls in Paradise. 928. 929. The unlearned will be resurrected through a different dew, and where that dew comes from. 929.

Animals that are forbidden by the Law to be eaten, from where they receive their spirit or their life. 618. Why they are forbidden to the Jews to eat. 619. Clean and unclean animals, from where they receive their souls. 637. 638.

The gate of the future Temple is said to have been sawn by angels from a great precious stone. 854. 855. 856. What befell an Epicurean who laughed at such an account, and a pious man who doubted it. 855. 856.

The dead, when they shall rise in the land of Israel. 772. 901. 902. On the resurrection and raising of the dead: see Resurrection. The dead are to be raised by a dew. 906. 927. 928. 929. And by the sound of trumpets. 929. The dead who die outside the Promised Land must be rolled through the earth into it, and rise there. 901. 919. 920. 921. 922. 933. 934. And they are to be rolled like leather sacks and like wine barrels. 922. Which dead are to be exempted from such rolling. 923. Why the bodies of the dead must be rolled through the earth as far as the Promised Land. 924. Such rolling is said to be very painful for the dead. 901. 924. 925. The dead who are rolled into the land of Canaan are to emerge from beneath the Mount of Olives. 926. 927.

The dead are to rise with their clothes. 934. 935. What occurred in former times on account of this opinion. 935. The dead are also to rise with their bodily infirmities and defects, but are thereafter to be healed by GOD. 935. 936. 937. 948. Why this shall come to pass. 936. 937. The dead are to rise in the same stage of age at which they died. 937. 938.

Tribulations, which the Jews according to their teaching must endure at the time of the Messiah, are called חבלי המשיח (Cheble hammaschiach), and shall be very great. 711. 894. How they can be delivered from them. 712. How long such a time of tribulation shall last. 712. 713.

V.

A suspect in a matter is not to be believed, even if he swears an oath. 643.

Damned shall be all peoples, except the Jews. 248. through 254. Why they shall be damned. 255. 256. In particular the Christians and Turks. 259. 260. 261. etc. Sins on account of which a person is damned. 272. Those who shall be damned for eternity. 272. 273.

The damned shall be able to go out of Hell and back into it again. 337. How and by whom they are punished in Hell. 340. 341. 342. 343. Abraham shall bring them out of Hell. 343. They shall not be tormented at all times, but shall have rest at intervals. 347. to 352. When they have rest. ibid. The damned, godless Israelites are burned to ashes. 355. How they are raised again and become blessed. 355. 356. Who are damned for eternity. 356. How the damned in the present age have been delivered out of Hell. 357. to 361. How they are to be redeemed from it in the future. 361. to 365. They shall not know their names in Hell. 365.

Cursing of Christians is, to be sure, forbidden to Jews by some rabbis. 90 to 96. Whom they are permitted to curse. 92. 93. Yet they curse us daily and wish us every evil. 98. 107. 108. 119. As also on the Sabbath. 121. At the new moon. 122. 123. During the seven days before New Year's Day. 123 to 128. On the eve of New Year's Day and the Day of Atonement. 128. 129. On the first day of the New Year. 129. 130. On the second day of the New Year. 134. 135. On the second day between the New Year and the Day of Atonement. 135. 136. On the third day between the same. 136. 137. On the fourth day between the same. 137. 138. On the eve of the Day of Atonement. 138. 139. On the Day of Atonement. 141. 142. Where they also curse all the peoples of the world through a prayer. 143. 144. How Rabbi Lipmann seeks to excuse this with cunning. 144. Refutation of his statement. 144 to 148. How they further curse us on the Day of Atonement. 148. At the Feast of Tabernacles. 162. 163. 164. On the 22nd day of September. 165. At the Feast of the Dedication of the Temple. 165. 166. On the Sabbath before the Feast of Purim. 167 to 170. At the Feast of Purim. 170. On the 23rd day of February. ibid. On the first day of March. 171. On the nearest Sabbath before Easter. 171. On the eve of the first day of Easter through the prayer: "Pour out Thy wrath," etc. 173. 174. Refutation of the Jewish objection against this. 174. 175. 176. How they further curse us on the aforementioned evening. 176. 177. On the first day of the Easter festival. 177. On the eve of the same. 177. 178. On the second day of Easter. 178. 179. 180. On the eve of the same. 183. On the eighth day of the Easter festival. 183. On the eve of the same. 183. 184. On the first Sabbath after the Easter festival. 184. On the third Sabbath after Easter. 185. 186. On the Sabbath before Pentecost, as also on the 9th of July. 186. At circumcisions. 186. 187. At weddings. 187. How those who are appointed over burials curse us. 187. 188. All of this is a certain sign that the Jews are not God's people. 188. Cursing of the Christian authorities and of all Christians is permitted to the Jews. 471. 472. The Jews curse the converted Jews three times every day. 988.

Persecution of the Jews in Greece. 982. In Germany. 982. 983. 985. In France. 983. 984. 1010. In Portugal. 986. 1015. In Spain. 987. 1013. 1014. 1015. In England. 1009. In Italy. 1010. In Savoy and Piedmont. 1011. In Sicily. 1011.

Forgiveness of sins, how the Jews obtain it: see Sins.

Shedding of the blood of the wicked is as good as a sacrifice. 203.

Slanderers will not be saved. 272. 273. Shall not study the Law. 273.

Lost property belonging to a Christian is permitted to a Jew, when he finds it, to keep. 593. 594. 597. Its return is forbidden. 594. 595. Is even considered a great sin. 595. 596. Yet with a certain condition. 595. To whom the return of lost property is forbidden. 595. 596. When it is to be returned. 597.

Multiplication of the Israelites in Egypt, from whence it came. 34.

Mixture of things that are not of the same kind, why it is forbidden. 377. Traitor, which one among the Jews is called such. 477. 478. Traitors have no share in eternal life. 478. Assembly of the Jews will take place before the resurrection of the dead. 840. 894. 895. Before that, Jerusalem shall be built. 894. Transmigration of souls from one body or place into another. See: Souls. Death shall atone for sins. 283. 284. And the death of the righteous for other people's sins. 284. 285. The blood of the Messiah shall atone for the people of God. 721. There is no atonement after death. 284. Atonement of the Jews, how it takes place, in their opinion, on the Day of Atonement by means of a rooster. 149. 150. But for Jewesses, by means of a hen. ibid. The Day of Atonement atones for all sins. 503. Even the most grievous. 504. And it shall atone in this world and in the world to come. 504. It is not abolished even when all feast days are abolished. 504. On that day the Jews are cleansed of all sins, like the holy angels, which the devil himself has had to confess. 505. Vespasian had many Jews of the tribe of Judah led into Spain. 532. 533. Cattle, what angels they have as overseers. 377. Four things shall exist of which no people besides the Israelites is worthy. 904. 905. Bird that is exceedingly large and is called Bar juchne or Sis. See: Bar juchne. Birds, what angels they have as overseers. 379. 380. Their language was understood by Solomon. 441. 443.

They are said to have danced before Solomon. 441. 442. Peoples of the world, why they are distributed among princes and devils. 3. They are said to originate from the evil plagues, that is, from the devil. 5. The pious among them have a share in eternal life. 234. 235. Who those pious ones are. 235. How, at the proclamation of the Law of Moses, the peoples of the world trembled, and what they did. 243. 244. They shall all be condemned. 248. 249. through 256. 259. Why they observe one or more of God's commandments. 252. They receive their reward in this world. 252. 253. Why all foods are permitted for them to eat. 254. 255. For what reasons they are condemned. 255. 256. How they learned the Law. 255. 256. Why God does not punish them in this world. 256. They shall in the future descend into hell together with their gods. 256. 257. They are punished more harshly in hell than the Jews, and why. 344. They shall bow before God but obtain no mercy. 365. They will be terrified and ashamed on account of the signs that will appear before the coming of the Messiah, and many of them will secretly adopt the Jewish faith. 702. 703. How many of them will perish in the future. 751. 752. They will be made to drink from 4 cups of horror. 751. According to the teaching of some rabbis, all peoples shall perish and be destroyed. 368. 369. 753. 754. 755. According to others, however, many will remain alive and serve the Jews. 758. 759. What peoples shall serve them, and which shall perish. 760. Also, all peoples of the world shall adopt the Jewish faith at the time of the Messiah. 774. 775. 776. Excepting the Christians. 777. 778. 779. How many commandments they shall be commanded to observe. 782. 783. They shall not rise again. 907. They shall rise again, but not remain alive. 909. In what manner the peoples of the world will be punished in the future. 975. 976.

The peoples thereof shall be ten in each dwelling of Hell. 341. 342. What peoples King Alexander the Great enclosed within high mountains. 733. to 736.

Prefiguration of future events was that which befell the patriarchs. 159. 160. 264. 801.

A foreskin is drawn over the wicked Jews so that they descend into Hell. 340. Abraham attaches a foreskin to them, and from where he takes it. ibid.

Foreskins are said to belong to the chief devil Sammael. 465.

The uncircumcised are damned. 259.

How unclean an uncircumcised person is. 630.

The discord that will exist in the future between God and Isaiah concerning the wicked. 882. Who will render the verdict thereon. 882.

How fruitful the barren trees of the land of Israel will be in the future. 831. 835.

The unlearned shall not rise again, according to the opinion of some rabbis. 915.

Doing wrong to a Goi or Christian through cunning or force is, to be sure, forbidden to the Jews in certain places in their books. 585. Yet it is permitted in other places. 590. 591.

Unclean spirits are said to lie down with people when they sleep and to be inflamed by them. 422. 423. They are said to defile the sleeping. 453. 454. And to linger upon their bodies. 453. As also beneath their beds. 644. In the land of Israel no unclean spirits are said to dwell. 903.

Unclean animals have their spirits or souls from devils. 618. And receive their influence from the unclean spirit. 618. Why it is forbidden to the Jews to eat of them. 618. Why it is permitted to Christians to eat of them. 619.

The impurity of souls is not entirely removed in the lower Hell, but is washed away in the upper Hell. 365. The impurity of flesh that has been slaughtered by Christians, from where it comes. 617. The impurity of an uncircumcised person. 680.

Uriel Acosta, who he was, and what he wrote concerning the Jews' freedom to have their own judges. 995. 996.

W.

One should wash one's hands early in the morning, and why? 453. Also, when one comes from the privy. 454.

Water is said to have the angel Michael as its appointed overseer. 379. One should not drink water at night, and why? 452. The devils are said to drink water. 457.

The road for the Jews in the future is said to pass through the sea. 792.

No one should touch a woman when he comes from the privy, and why? 450.

The wives of the devils commit no adultery with other devils. 422.

Four women are said to be the mothers of the devils and the wives of Sammael, and what their names are. 416. These same women have great armies under them. ibid. When they rule, and where they assemble. ibid. Where they reside. 421.

The women beyond the river Sabbatjon, how chaste they are. 558. They are able to perform all manner of works. 558. Women are said to give birth to children every day at the time of the Messiah. 836. 837.

Christians' wine is forbidden for Jews to drink, but trading in it is permitted. 621. 622. Wine that is sacrificed to an idol is called by the Jews jen nefech (יין נפֿעך), i.e., libation wine. 621. Notwithstanding that the eminent rabbis write that the Gojim, or Christians, do not make such wine today. 621. How Phinehas forbade by a ban the drinking of wine from the Gojim. 621. 622. The wine of the Gojim incites to idolatry. 622. How Dieterich Schwab was punished by the rabbis because he drank wine with Christians. 487. Whoever drinks of the Christians' wine must fast. 622. Jews are permitted to accept Christians' wine in payment of debts. 621. Pirgandicus, a pagan king, how he forced eleven rabbis to drink of his wine, and what transpired in connection with it. 622. to 625. How a Christian can render his kosher wine forbidden for a Jew to drink. 626. How the wine in a jug can be rendered unfit for a Jew to drink. 626. 627. Wine in a vessel that a Christian touches is called by the Jews jen nefech (יין נפֿעך), and they are not permitted to drink any of it. 626. 627. Why it is forbidden for them to drink. 627. Who invented wine. 627. 628. What kind of wine the righteous will drink at the meal in Paradise, which lies stored in the grape berries as in casks. 878. 879. 880. Jacob is said to have drunk of it. 879.

Weeping over the death of an upright and righteous person causes the forgiveness of sins. 274.

Wheat, how tall it will grow in the Promised Land in the future. 829. How large a grain of wheat will be. 829.

World, how large it is. 296. Is to be renewed after the days of the Messiah. 369. There are three kinds of world. 384. The whole world sinned when Adam sinned. 82. The world cannot exist without the Day of Atonement. 504. How long it lasts. 652. 653. 678. When it is to be renewed. 678. 679. Cannot exist without the Israelites. 754. Nor without sacrifices. 851.

Rolling of the dead in caves beneath the earth, how it will occur: see Caves and Dead.

Ram, which was sacrificed in Isaac's place, for what purpose it was used. 132. 133. When it was created. ibid.

Hoopoe is said to have brought a letter from Solomon to the Queen of Sheba. 443. Why Solomon was angry with it. ibid.

Wild animals, what angels they have as overseers. 379. Are said to have danced before King Solomon. 441. 442.

Deserts are beloved by devils as a dwelling place. 449. Winds will in the future bring together the scattered Jews. 715. Clouds shall in the future rise up, which will cause great plagues to Rome. 140. 141. One who dwells in the land of Israel is blessed. 287. Usury, how it is called in the Hebrew language, and why it is so named. 597. 598. One who lends money at usury has no share in eternal life. 599. It amounts to the same as if he denied the exodus from Egypt. 599. And as if he committed all the sins in the world. 599. 600. Those who take usury must in the future bite their own flesh. 599. Jews are not permitted to take usury from one another. 600. 601. Whoever takes no usury does as much as if he kept all the commandments. 600. What a Jew should do who has taken usury from another and has thereby sinned. 600. 601. The Jews would also do well if they took no usury from any Goi or Christian. 601. And usury is said to be driven by the instigation of the devil. 601. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Talmud permits the Jews to take usury from one another, and the same is regarded as a gift. 602. So too it is permitted to them to take usury from Christians and other peoples. 602. 603. How R. Bechai interprets the words stating that the Jews do well when they also take no usury from a Göi. 603. The disagreement among the Jews in the interpretation of the words of Deut 23:20 concerning usury, in that some make it a voluntary matter while others make it a commanding precept. 603. 604. Why it is permitted to take usury from foreigners, and for what reason the law commanded this. 604. How much usury the Talmud permits the Jews to take from a Goi or Christian. 605. They do not, however, comply with it. 605. 606. An objection that can be made against the Jews regarding the usury they take from Christians. 606. Their answer thereto. 606. 607. 608. Abarbanel alone teaches that it is forbidden to the Jews to take usury from Christians. 610. The Jews, however, do not follow him in this. 610. 611. What wicked cunning the Jews employ to obtain great usury. 611. 612. Examples thereof. 612. 613. How greatly the permission of usury hinders the Jews from their conversion. 993. 994. 995. It ought to be forbidden to them according to the ordinance of the Imperial Recesses. 1019. 1020. Such usury is contrary to the curse that God has pronounced against the Jews. 1020. 1021.

Z.

Zaritha, a she-devil, is said to have leprous children. 425. The lepers are said to be descended from her lineage. 425.

Sorcery, which devils teach to men. 439.

Magic knots, who made them in Egypt, and for what purpose they were made. 439.

Zedekiah, the king, is said to have been released by the high council at Jerusalem from the oath which he had sworn to King Nebuchadnezzar. 500. He was punished because he broke that same oath. 512.

The fingernails of those who have plagued the Jews, how long they will grow in the future. 765. 767.

Ten Tribes: see Tribes.

Signs of the coming of the Messiah: see Messiah.

The time for inquiring into the coming of the Messiah is forbidden to the Jews. 677. Yet many have done so: see Messiah.

No Jew may give testimony against another to the effect that he is indebted to a Christian, and this under penalty of the ban. 479. 480.

Zidkiel, the angel, is said to have been Abraham's teacher. 375.

A goat signifies Esau, that is, Christendom. 785.

Zoah rothachath, or boiling filth, what kind of place it is in Hell. 335. 336. What souls are therein. ibid.

Toll and tribute, which the Jews pay, saves them from death. 286. 287.

Zor without Vau signifies the godless empire, that is, Christendom. 792. 795. 797. And Rome. 796.

Zora is said to signify Hell. 266.

Chastisements are said to atone for sins. 282. 284.

The world to come, or the life to come, which is called olam habbá, what is to be understood by it. 236. 237. 238.

Compulsion of the Jews toward the Christian religion is worthless. 1007. to 1016.

Branch: the adulterous branch is called Christ. 126. 1021. As also an abominable branch. ibid.

F I N I S.

'עומד ספר הזה בעזרת השם יתן יהוה ויסיר המסוה למשה מעיני עורים במשיח בנו שנ' לפקח עינים עורים וכו'

