Fourteenth, it is called מלכות רומי הרשעה Malchúth (or Málchus) Rómi barescháa, that is, the godless Roman Empire, concerning which the following is written in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 17. col. 4.: דרשו זל כל המתנאה נידון : that is, our Sages, of blessed memory, have taught in figurative terms that everyone who acts with pride shall be judged by fire, since it is said (Lev 6:9): The burnt offering shall burn; and this (burnt offering) signifies the Malchúth Romi barescháa, that is, the godless Roman Empire, which is proud and exalts itself; but it will in the end be judged by fire, as it is said: The burnt offering shall burn. Furthermore, the following is read there: לעתיד לבא מלכות רומי הרשעה על די שמתנאה ומעלה את עצמה והוא : that is, in the future the Malchúth Romi barescháa, that is, the godless Roman Empire, which is proud and exalts itself, as it is written (Obad 1:4): Though you exalt yourself like an eagle and set your nest among the stars, shall be punished with fire. All of this is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 127. col. 1., in the Parascha Zav, but in place of Malchúth Romi barescháa, it reads there מלכות רומי Malchúth Romi, that is, the Roman Empire.

Fifteenth, it is called מלכות זדון Malchúth sadón (or Málchus sadon), that is, the arrogant or haughty kingdom, or also ממשלת זדון ממשלת זדון Memschéleth fadón (or Memschéles sódon), that is, the arrogant dominion, or the proud rule. The name Malchúth fadón appears in the book Zerór hammór, in the Cracow printing (for in the Venice printing a blank space was left in its place), fol. 4. col. 1., on the words of David in Ps 124:2-5, where the following is written: רמז המשורר אלו המלכויות במקום אחר באומרו לולי ה' שהיה לנו בקום עלינו אדם זה רמז לגלות בבל וגו': 'אזי חיים בלענו בחרות אפם בנו כנגד גלות מדי וגו': 'אזי המים שטפנו כנגד גלות יון וגומר: אזי עבר על נפשנו המים הזידונים כנגד מלכות אדום שהיא מלכות זדון כי די זדון לכך השיאן וזהו המים הזידונים ואמר גם כן אזי עבר על נפשנו לפי שדעתם גם כן להעבירנו על דת ולצוד נפשותינו כמו שראינו בעינינו בגירוש פורטוגל, that is: The Psalmist signified these four kingdoms also in another place, when he says (Ps 124:2): "If the Lord had not been with us, when men rose up against us"; this signifies the Babylonian captivity, etc. (The following words, v. 3: "Then they would have swallowed us alive, when their wrath was kindled against us"; these concern the Median captivity, etc. (And the words, v. 4: "Then the waters would have drowned us"; these point to the Greek captivity, etc. (But the subsequent words, v. 5: "Then the proud waters would have gone over our soul"; these concern the Edomite kingdom, which is the Malchúth fadón, that is, the arrogant kingdom, as is said of it (Obad 1:3): "The pride of your heart has deceived you"; and this is the proud water. He also says (namely David, in the cited v. 5) "it would have gone over our soul" because their (understand: the Christians') intention is likewise to make us fall away from our religion and to ensnare our souls, as we have seen with our own eyes in the expulsion from Portugal.

In the book Toledóth (or Tóledos) Jizchak, the following is read concerning this matter at fol. 75, col. 1, at the end of the Parascha Tasria, on the words of Lev 13:2, "When a person has on the skin of his flesh a swelling, or a scab, or a bright spot, such that it might become the plague of leprosy on the skin of his flesh": א"ל שאת זו בבל וגו' ספחת זו מלכות מדי וגו' בהרת זה יון ומו' יהיה בעור: בשרו לנגע זו מלכות זדון שהשם יתברך מלקה אותו בצרעת זאת השד שלה שנאמר מדוע נסחף אבירך נסחף כמו ספחת: that is, our (Sages,) of blessed memory, say: the swelling signifies Babel (that is, the Babylonian Empire) ע"כ; the scab, the Median Empire ע"כ; the bright spot, Greece (or the Greek Empire; but the words:) "such that it might become the plague of leprosy on the skin of his flesh" signify the Malchúth fadón, that is, the arrogant empire, for the holy and blessed God will smite it with leprosy, together with its prince (namely the chief devil Sammaël), as it is said (Jer 46:15): "Why are your heroes smitten with sores?" as the foolish Jews understand it, for whom the word nischaf means the same as nispach, whereas it has no such meaning anywhere, and the true meaning of this passage is: "Why have your heroes been swept away?" Concerning this punishment of leprosy, however, with which God is to afflict Christendom in the future, a more detailed account will be given below in the chapter of the second part at pages 138, 139, 140, and 141. As for the aforementioned name Malchúth sadón, Rabbi Menasse ben Israël also writes in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 46, col. 2, on the words of Mal 3:15, "Therefore we count the proud happy," as follows: הזידון הם אומות העולם הנקראים מלכות זדון, that is, these proud ones are the nations of the world, who are called Malchúth sadôn, that is, the arrogant empire. And Christians are also sometimes called the nations of the world, as can be seen in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, where it is stated at fol. 27, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajéra: נקמתן של אומות העולם ביד ישראל שנאמר ונתתי את נקמתי באדום ביד עמי ישראל, that is, the vengeance that will be executed upon the nations of the world will come about through Israel, as it is said (Ezek 25:14): "I will take my vengeance upon Edom through the hand of my people Israel." And this is also clearly seen in the aforementioned book Nischmath chájim, fol. 82, col. 1, in the last line, in the 23rd chapter of the second Maámar, as well as in the Polish Siddúrim, fol. 67, col. 2, under the title Józer leschábbath ríschon ácher happésach, in the Commentario; and fol. 80, col. 2, under the title Józer leschábbath chamíschí ácher happésach, likewise in the Commentario, notwithstanding that otherwise by "the nations of the world" almost universally all peoples who are outside of Judaism are understood.

Regarding the name Memschéleth sadôn, that is, the arrogant dominion, this name is found in Rabbi Mosche de Mireado's commentary on the Psalms, fol. 104, col. 1, on the words cited shortly before from Ps 124:3-5, where he states that the words of vv. 3-4 are to be understood as referring to the Babylonian, Median, and Greek monarchies, and he continues: וכנגד הגלות הארוך הזה אמר אזי עבר על נפשנו המים הזידונים כי המלכות הזאת נקראת ממשלת זדון ומלך לצד עלאה ימלל רשע וגוי that is, And with regard to this prolonged captivity, he says (namely King David): "Then the proud waters would have gone over our souls," that this kingdom (understand: the Roman, by which the whole of Christendom, as has been demonstrated above, is meant) is called Memschéleth sadón, i.e., the arrogant dominion, and the wicked man speaks against the Most High, &c. Here we thus see clearly that what in the words cited shortly before from the book Zerór hammór is called Malchúth sadón is here, in the commentary on those very same words, called Memschéleth sadón, so that these two names have one and the same meaning. This name is also found in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 87, col. 4, under the title Scháar Kirjáth (or Kirjas) árba, in the 14th chapter, where mention is made of the vengeance that is to come upon Christendom and its supposed ruler Sammaël, and it is stated therein that at that time the Memschéleth sadón, that is, the arrogant dominion, will be suppressed and humbled.

Why this name is used can be seen from Abarbanel's book Maschb mta jeschúa, fol. 60. col. 1., where he writes the following concerning the words of Obad v. 2-3: התחיל הנביא לדבר כנגד אומת אדום הרשעה באמרו: הנה בימים הקדומים ובהתחלת ענינך לא היית מולך בכל העולם כי קטן נתתיך בגוים בזוי אתה מאוד ואמר זה על רומי שבהתחלת ענינה היתה למרעה צאן ואחרי כן נעשתה עיר קטנה והגיע ענינה בהמעלות כל כך

עד שגבה לבה לאמר אני ואפסי עוד או שעל הר שעיר אמר הנה קטן נתתיך בגוים בזוי כי בן היה עם אדום הסמוך לארץ ישראל אמנם כאשר מלכו בארצות איטליא ונתרבו מאד ושמנו להם ראש מלכותם ברומי אז דיין לכם השיאם למשול בכיפה ועל זה אמר ודק לבך השיאך למשול על כל העולם ומדרך המשל אמר שכני בחגוי סלע מרום שבתו ואמר בלבו מי יורידני ארץ ר"ל דמית לשוכן בחגוי סלע ויושב במרום שאומר בלבו מי יורידני ארץ כי היה ענין ממשלתו במעלה רמה ונשאה כל כך שאמדת שאין שיורידך ארץ ולכן אמר האל כנגדה אם תגביה כנשר שעולה לחלק העליון מהאוויר ולא די כנשר אבל שבין כוכבים תשים קנך שהם המזלות המאירים שנצחים שאין בהם הפסד משם אורידך נאום יי' 'עד שאול תחתית that is, the prophet began to speak against the godless Edomite people when he said: behold, in former times, at the beginning of your condition (or state), you did not rule over the entire world; for I made you small (or insignificant) among the heathen, and you were greatly despised; and he said this of the city of Rome, which at the beginning of its condition was a sheep pasture, but was thereafter made into a small city; and the condition of that city advanced through its towers to such a degree that its heart became proud, and it said (from Isa 47:8): I am, and there is none besides me. Or he (namely the prophet) said this of Mount Seir: behold, I have made you insignificant among the heathen, despised; for such was the condition of the Edomite people, who dwelt near the land of Israel. But after they (namely the Edomites) ruled over the territories of Italy, and multiplied greatly, and established for themselves the capital of their kingdom in Rome, then the pride of their heart led them astray to rule under the vault of heaven (that is, over the entire world); therefore he says: the pride of your heart has led you astray to rule over the entire world, you who dwell in the clefts of the rock, in the height of your habitation, and say in your heart: who would cast me down to the ground? That is, you are like one who dwells in the clefts of the rock and abides in the heights, who says in his heart: who would throw me down to the ground? For the condition of your dominion was so very high and exalted that you said there was no one who could cast you down to the ground; therefore God said against it: even if you were to exalt yourself like an eagle that ascends to the highest part of the air, yes, even if you were to raise yourself higher than an eagle and make your nest among the stars, which endure forever and do not perish, I will nevertheless hurl you down from there into the lowest pit, says the Lord. The aforementioned Abarbanel writes the very same thing in his commentary on the prophet Obadiah fol. 255. col. 1.

On this subject of arrogance, the following is also read in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 166. col. 2, in the Parascha Haasinu: יצחק ויעקב אברהם זכור לעבדיך אשר נשבעת להם אעשה כלה בכל הגוים וכי חכור אל תשכח זדון מלכות אדום הרשעה אשר (that is: Remember Your servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom You swore (as is written in Jer 46:28): I will make a full end of all the nations, etc. Remember also, and do not forget, the arrogance of the wicked Edomite kingdom (that is, of the Christians), who look upward and say daily: Where is your God?) And in fol. 44. col. 2 of the aforementioned book, in the Parascha Vajischlach, the following is also written on this subject: כל המתגאה סופו ליפול באש כמו שמצינו בדור המבול שנידונו במעינות רותחים שנאמר בחומן נדעכו ממקומם: סדום דכתיב גאון שבעת לחם: וכתיב ה' המטיר על סדום ועל עמורה גפרית ואש וגו' וכן אדום הרשעה בגובה לבה עתידה ליפול באש שנ' על אדות תרד (that is: Everyone who is arrogant will in the end be judged by fire, just as we find concerning the generation of the Flood, that they were judged by boiling springs, as it is said (Job 6:17): When it became hot, they vanished from their place. Of Sodom it is written (Ezek 16:49): Pride, fullness of bread. And it is written (Gen 19:24): Then the Lord rained fire and brimstone, etc. Likewise, wicked Edom will also fall into fire on account of its arrogance, as it is said (Isa 34:5): It shall come down upon Edom. And it is written (Dan 7:11): Until (the beast) was cast into a burning fire.) Something concerning this has also been mentioned above, under the fourteenth name that the Jews give to Christendom.

Sixteenth, they also call it המים הזידונים Hammájim halvedónim, that is, the proud water, as can be read in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 62. col. 2., where, concerning the words (Ps 124:5) "Then the proud waters would have gone over our soul," the following is written: קרא מלכות אדום המים הזידונים לפי שעיקר אמונתם הוא שהם נטבלים במים, that is, He (King David) called the Edomite kingdom Hammájim halvedónim, that is, the proud water, because the chief work of their faith consists in their being baptized with water. And this name is also found in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 4. col. 1., and in Rabbi Mosche de Mircádo's commentary on the Psalms, fol. 103. col. 4., on Ps 124:4, as may be seen under the preceding fifteenth name, where the words from both of these books are to be found.

Seventeenth, it is called by them מלכות עכ"ם Malchúth (or Malchus) Achum (which word Achum is an abbreviation of עובדי כוכבים ומזלות óvede cochavim umazzalóth), that is, the kingdom of the servants (or worshippers) of the stars and the planets; although they know that we do not worship any celestial bodies, yet because they formerly called the idolatrous pagans by this name, we too must bear this name, since we are regarded by them as idolatrous people, and they make use of this name quite frequently so that a Christian who reads the matter may not know that Christendom is meant by it. Or alternatively (because the abbreviation עכ"ם Achum, according to the indication of the highly learned Dr. Wagenseil, p. 120, in his refutation of Rabbi Lipmann's Carminis or poem, עובדי כריסטוס ומרים Övedé Christus u-Mir-jam, that is, worshippers of Christ and Mary, is said to signify, as has already been indicated above in the 16th chapter, p. 713, at the thirty-third name which they give to Christians): Malchúth óvede Christus u-Mirjam, that is, the kingdom of the worshippers of Christ and Mary. It is also called by this name alone, עכ"ם Achum, with the omission of the word Malchúth that is otherwise placed before it.

Concerning the name Malchúth Achum, it is found in the book Lef árjeh fol. 17. col. 4., where it is written as follows: באחרית הימים תעקר מלכות העכ"ם לגמרי: ויהי אמתה בעקב ע"ש בגין של שעק"ב יהיה מלא ועשו הוא יהיה חסר ונשאר ע"ש ורקב that is: In the last days the Malchúth Achum, that is, the kingdom of the worshippers of stars and planets (or venerators of Christ and Mary), will be utterly extirpated, and his hand (namely Jacob's) held the heel of Esau (as is to be read in Gen 25:25, whereby the Vav of the name עשו is signified), since the name יעקב Jaacob will be complete (and יעקוב Jaacob will be written with the Vav Cholem), but the name עשו Esau will be deficient, and עש Asch (which means a moth that devours garments, in place of עשו Esau) and a rottenness will remain. And in Berefchith rábba it stands at fol. 3. col. 3. in the second Parafcha, upon the words of Gen 1:2, "And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep," as follows: רבי שמעון בן לקיש פתר קרא במלכויות: והארץ היתה תהו זו מלכות בבל וגו': 'ובוהו זו מלכות מדי וגו': 'והשך זו מלכות יון וגו': 'על פני תהום זו מלכות עכ"ם שאין לה חקר וגו' that is: Rabbi Schimon ben Lákisch expounded this passage concerning the kingdoms (or monarchies), and said that the words "And the earth was without form" signify the Babylonian kingdom, etc.; the words "and void" point to the Median kingdom, etc.; the words "and there was darkness" bear a signification pointing to the Greek kingdom, etc.; and the words "upon the face of the deep" signify the Málchus Achum, which cannot be fathomed, etc. But in the disputation of Rabbi Nachman with Brother Paulus, in which this foolish exposition of Scripture also appears at page 56, in place of Malchúth Achum one reads מלכות אדום Málchus Edom harefcháa, that is, the godless Edomite kingdom; and in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 49. col. 1. numer. 48. one reads מלכות הרשעה Málchus harefcháa, that is, the godless kingdom. Likewise, in the aforementioned Berefchith rábba, fol. 59. col. 1. in the 65th Parafcha, it stands as follows: אין אדם יודע מה בלבו של חברו דכתיב אני ה' חוקר לב וגו' ומלכות עכ"ם: that is: A man does not know what is in the heart of his companion (or fellow man), as it is written (Jer 17:10): "I the LORD search the heart," etc.; and likewise he does not know when the Malchus Achum will fall, as it is written (Isa 63:4): "For the day of vengeance is in my heart." This is also to be found in the Medrafch Kokéleth fol. 33f. col. 2.

The name Achum עכ"ם, however, appears on its own in the aforementioned Beresbit Rabbah, fol. 91, col. 3, in the 99th Parashah, with these words: פנחס בשם רבי שמואל בר נחמן אמר מסורת היא שאין עכ"ם נופלת אלא ביד בניה של רחל דבי that is: Rabbi Pinchas has said in the name of Rabbi Samuel, the son of Nachman, it is a (oral) tradition (or teaching) that Achum will not fall except through the hands of the children of Rachel. This is what is written (Jer 49:20): The least of the flock shall drag them away.

Eighteenth, it is also simply called המלכות Hammalchúth (or Hammálchus), that is, the Kingdom, as can be seen in Rabbi Isaac Karo's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, which is called Toledóth (or Tóledos) Jizchak, fol. 20, col. 2, in the Parashah Lech lechá on Gen 14:1, where one reads as follows: אמרו זל כלך שנער זו בבל : אריוך מלך אלסר זו מדי : כדר לעומר מלך עילם זו יון : ותדעל מלך גויים : that is, Our sages, of blessed memory, say: the King of Shinar signifies Babel (or the Babylonian Kingdom); the King of Ellasar, Media; Chedorlaomer the King of Elam, Greece; and Tidal the King of Nations, the Malchúth (or Málchus), that is, the Kingdom, by which the Roman or Christian Empire is understood. In my copy, however, a Jew has written in the margin, after Malchúth, the word הרשעה harescháa, so that one might know that Christendom is to be understood thereby, which, as was noted above on page 765 under the eleventh name they give it, is called Malchúth harescháa, that is, the godless Kingdom. Likewise, in Pesikta rábbetha (or rabbesa), fol. 27, col. 2, it reads as follows: המלכות היא מכתבת טירוניא מכל אומרה, that is, The Malchúth or Kingdom issues tyrannical decrees over all peoples. In the Prague Machsor, however, in the second part, fol. 54, col. 2, in the commentary, one reads in its place: מלכות אדום כותבת טירוניא על כל האומות, that is, The Malchúth Edom, or Edomite Kingdom, issues tyrannical decrees over all peoples. And in the Talmudic tractate Rosch baschána, fol. 19, col. 1, the following is found: המלכות גזרה שלא יעסקו בתורה : ושלא ימולו את בניהם ושיחללו שבתות מה עשה יהודה בן שמוע וחבריו הלכו ונטלו עצה ממטרוניא אחת שכל גדולי רומי מצויים אצלה אמרה להם בואו והפיגו בלילה הלכו והפיגו בלילה אמרו אי שמים לא אחיכם אנחנו ולא בני אם אחת אנחנו מה נשתנינו מכל אומה ולשון שאתם גוזרים עלינו גזירות קשות וביטלום ואותו היום : that is, The Malchuth or Kingdom had once issued a decree that they (namely the Jews) should not study the Law, nor circumcise their little sons, but should desecrate the Sabbath. What did Jehúda ben Schamóa and his companions do? They sought counsel from a distinguished woman at whose home all the great lords of Rome were present, and she said to them: come and cry out in the night. So they went and cried out in the night, and said: for God's sake, are we not your brothers? Are we not children of one mother? (for Jacob, from whom we descend, and Esau, from whom you descend, were two brothers, and both were sons of Rebecca.) In what way are we distinguished from all peoples, that you issue such harsh decrees against us? Thereupon they (namely the Roman lords) revoked the decree against us. They (the Jews), however, made that day into a feast day.

Nineteenth, they call it גברת ממלכות Gevéreth mamlachóth (or Gevéres mamlóchos), that is, the Mistress over the Kingdoms, and the Babylonian empire is called by this name in Isa 47:5. That Christendom is thus named by the Jews can be seen in the first part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 31, col. 2, in the Commentario, where the following is written: גברת ממלכות זהו אדום הרשעה, that is: By Gevéreth mamlachóth, that is, Mistress over the Kingdoms, the godless Edom is understood, which is now the dominant (or ruling) kingdom, whose dominion has spread throughout the entire world. This is also found in the handwritten Machsor held in the Nuremberg Library, as the highly learned Mr. Wülfer indicates in his annotations on the Jewish Theriaca, paginâ 324. And in fol. 15, col. 1 of the first part of the aforementioned Prague Machsor, the following is likewise found in the Commentario: גברת ממלכה הוא אדום שמהגבר במלכותו עד שתופיע מלכותו של הק"ב, that is: The Gevéreth mamlácha, that is, Mistress of the Kingdom, is Edom, which (Edom) is mighty in its kingdom, until the kingdom of the holy and blessed GOD shall shine forth. In the Polish Siddurim, there is also found at fol. 49, col. 3, in the Commentario on the prayer that begins שני זיתים נכרתים Schené séthim nichbrathim, under the title Józer leschábath rischon dachanúcca, the following: מלכות אדום נקראת גברת ממלכה, that is: the Edomite kingdom is called Gevéreth mamlácha, the Mistress of the Kingdom. So too does Abarbenel write in his commentary on the Prophet Jeremiah, fol. 148, col. 1, on Cap. 49, in the following manner: אחרי שבאו מזרע אדום למלוך באיטליא ונתמלאה כל הארץ מאוכלוסי אדום גדלה ממשלת רומי בידי האדומיים עד שנעשת גברת כל הממלכות, that is: After those of the lineage of Edom (or Esau) came to rule in Italy, and the entire land was filled with Edomite peoples, the Roman dominion grew great through the Edomites, so that it became a Gevéreth col hammamlachóth (or hammamlóchos), that is, a Mistress over all Kingdoms.

Twentieth, they also call Him הבל המומלך Habbél hammúmlach, that is, the Bel to whom the royal dominion has been given; and this is found in the first part of the Praser Machsor, fol. 31, col. 2, under the title Musaph schel rosch haschána jom rischon, in the prayer which begins: הכל המומלך על מה אסיכה מלכי, that is: Why does the Bel reign, to whom the royal dominion has been given? From whom did he receive the dominion? In the commentary, however, the following is written concerning this: הכל המומלך כלומר מלכות הרשעה שעובדת בל בעבודה זרה שנקראת בל By Bel hammúmlach, that is, the Bel to whom the dominion has been given, one is to understand the Malchúth barescháa, or the godless kingdom (by which Christendom is meant, as was indicated above on p. 756 and 757 under the eleventh name), which serves the idol that is called Bel; by which idol the godless Jews understand Christ, as has been demonstrated above in the second chapter, paginâ 80 and 81, under the ninth name that they give to Christ.

Twenty-first, they call it שבט הרשע Schevet haréscha, that is, the Scepter of Wickedness, or also מטה רשע Mátteh réscha, that is, the Staff of Wickedness; the former is taken from Ps 125:3, and the latter from Ezek 7:11. The name Schevéth haréscha appears in the book Toledóth (or Tóledos) Jizchak, fol. 44, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajechi Jaacob, where the words of Gen 49:10 are expounded as follows: לא יסור שבט הרשע ומכות ויסורין ומי שישים חקים רעים על יהודה עד כי יבא שילה, that is, the Schevet haréscha, that is, the Scepter of Wickedness, together with the plagues and chastisements, and he who ordains evil laws against Judah, shall not depart until Shiloh (that is, the Messiah) shall come. Now they lament concerning Christendom that it torments and plagues them, and causes evil laws and edicts to be issued against them, as was shown above in Chapter 16, paginâ 671, and in this Chapter 17, shortly before, paginâ 769; so that by the aforementioned Scepter of Wickedness, Christendom is understood. Rabbi Aben Ezra, in his commentary on the words Schéveth haréscha, understands by them the heathen of the lands, by which Christendom is also included. The name Mátteh haréscha is found in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 58, col. 1, under the title Músaph schel rosch haschaná jom schéni, in the prayer which begins: אשה לך בציון שם וגו' Aseh lechá bezjion schem &c., where they pray against Christendom in the following manner: תקום גוים תוכית לאמים תשבור מטה רשע: מושל המלוכה, that is, Avenge Yourself upon the heathen, punish the peoples, break the Mátteh réscha, that is, the Staff (understand: the dominion, as is explained above in the commentary) of Wickedness, which rules.

Twenty-second: they call the same עקר Eker, that is, a native or a child of the land who comes from foreign parents but is born in the land; or, according to another opinion, a gentile who is begotten of the lineage of a newly converted person. This word derives from עקר Akár, which means "to uproot," and concerning this it is written in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 149, col. 4, on Lev 25:47, as follows: ועל דרך המדרש לעקר זו מלכות רומי וקראוהו עקר על שם שעתידי הק"ב לעקרה שנאמר היתד נשמה ויהיבת ליקידת אשא וזהו שאמרו במדרש וכי תשיג יד גר ותושב גר זה נבוכד נצר מלך בבל. ותושב זו מלכות מדי ונמכר לגר תושב עמך זו מלכות יון או לעקר משפחת גר זו מלכות רומי הוציא לנו המדרש מן לעקר הכתוב הזה רמז ארבע מלכיות: That is, in an allegorical or figurative sense, עקר Leéker, that is, "to the native," signifies the Roman Empire, and it is called

Eker because the holy and blessed GOD will uproot it, as is said (Dan 7:11): "And his body perished and was cast into the fire." And this is what is reported in the Midrash: "When the hand of a stranger or sojourner among you acquires something"; the stranger signifies Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon; the sojourner signifies the Median Empire; the words "and he is sold to the stranger or sojourner among you" signify the Greek Empire; and the words "or to the Eker, that is, the native who is of the stranger's lineage," signify the Roman Empire. The Midrash has thus drawn from this verse an allusion to the four kingdoms or monarchies. According to the foolish teaching of the rabbis, therefore, the Roman Empire, or Christendom, must be understood by the word Eker, because Eker derives from Akár, that is, "to uproot," in that they hope it will be entirely uprooted and exterminated, so that not a single Christian will any longer be found upon the whole face of the earth.

Twenty-third, they call it ים Jam, that is, the sea, or also שְׂבִיבֹלֶת Schibbôleth (or Schibbôles), that is, a flood of water. The name Jam, or sea, is found in Rabbi Mosche de Mircado's commentary on the Psalms, fol. 81, col. 2, on the words of Ps 96:11, "Let the sea move with its fullness," where the following is written: מַלְכוּת אֱדוֹם הַנִּקְרָאת יָם תִּרְעַשׂ מִמָּקוֹמוֹ וְתִגְדֹּל הַתְּשׁוּעָה לְיִשְׂרָאֵל: that is, the Edomite kingdom, which is called the sea, shall be moved from its place, and the salvation of Israel shall be made great. The same is also to be found in the aforementioned book, fol. 79, col. 2, on Ps 93, and fol. 81, col. 4, on Ps 97.

The reason for this opinion, however, can be gathered from Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 125, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajikra, where, on the words of Isa 57:20, "The wicked are like a troubled sea that cannot be still, and whose waves cast up mire and filth," the following is read: מה הים הזה הגלים שבתוכו מתגאים ועולים וכיון שהגיע כל אחד מהם לחול הוא נשבר וחברו רואה אותו שנשבר ומתגאה גם זו ועולה ואינו חוזר בו כך הרשעים רואין אלו את אלו מתגאין ואינן חוזרין That is: just as the waves in the sea are proud (or rise up) and climb on high, yet each one, when it reaches the sand, is broken; and even though its companion (meaning the wave that comes after it) sees that it has been broken, it is nonetheless proud and climbs on high and does not turn back into itself: so the wicked see one another pursuing pride and rising up, and they do not turn back into themselves. For this reason they are compared to the sea, and have no rest in the world, for they cannot sit still.

The name Schibboleth is found in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 103, col. 2, where it is prayed: כף שכולת יכריע לשקול, that is, "May the scale of the flood of waters outweigh in the weighing," and in the Commentario thereon it is written as follows: כף עוונתה של אומה הרשעה שנאמר אל תשטפני שכולת מים, that is, "(To be understood here is) the scale of the sins of the godless people (that is, of the Christians, or of Christendom, as has been demonstrated in the preceding Chapter 16, paginâ 689 and 690, under the 17th name they give us,) as (Ps 69:16) says: that the flood of waters may not drown me; and they (the Christians) are called thus because they drown the Israelites like a flood of waters."

Twenty-fourth, they call it עדינה Adina, that is, the Voluptuous One, she who indulges her pleasures, which name is given to the Babylonian kingdom in Isa 47:1, 8; and this is found in the second part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 79. col. 1, under the title Józer lejóm schevii schel Pésach, in a prayer which begins 'ויושע' תפול: Vajóscha Schoschánne phérach &c., where they pray as follows: 'צרה בעדינה מאנוש לאבד וגו' that is, Let dread overtake the Adina, or Voluptuous One, so that she perishes and no person remains &c. And in the commentary upon it, it is noted: 'זה אדום' that is, the Adina signifies Edom. Furthermore, they pray in a prayer which begins 'אשורי שמרה וגו' Aschurái schamárta &c., as may be seen in the aforementioned Machsor, second part, fol. 82. col. 1, in the following manner: 'תמחץ ושיחתה כלה' that is, Crush the Adina and reduce her to nothing; and in the commentary upon it, it is written: 'זה אדום הרשעה' that is, The Adina is the wicked Edom. So also in Schemoth (or Schembos) rabba fol. 107. col. 1, in the 15th Parascha, one reads: 'ועתה שמעי' נא זאת עדינה היושבת לבטח: 'מה הק"ב' עתיד לעשות לה אשכיר חצי מהם ולא זאת בלבד 'אלא שעתידי לדרכן שנאמר פורה דרכתי לבדי': 'והוא עתיד לדרן במנעלו לכל גדולי אדום שנ' 'עלי' 'עתה שמעי' that is, Now hear this, thou Adina, that is, Voluptuous One, who sittest so securely. What will the holy blessed GOD do to her (the Adina)? (He will fulfill upon her what He said in Deut 32:42.) I will make my arrows drunk with blood. But He will not do this alone; rather, He will also tread her down, as it is said (Isa 63:3): I tread the winepress alone. So also will He tread all the great ones of Edom with His shoe, as it is said (Ps 60:10): Over Edom will I cast my shoe.

The reason why Christendom is called by this name by the Jews is found in the second part of the aforementioned Prague Machsor, fol. 11. col. 1, where, in a prayer beginning 'וגו' עשה זכור את אשר עשה וגו' Sechôr eth ascher asá &c., they pray: 'שכח שם עדינה', that is, "Make the name of Adina to be forgotten"; upon which the Commentario states as follows: 'שכח שם עמלק מן העולם הוא נקרא עדינה על שם' 'שמתענת מן ממון ישראל' that is, "Make the name of Amaleck to be forgotten from the world; and he is called Adina because he delights himself with the goods of the Israelites." And in the prayer book printed in Amsterdam, which the Jews call the Polish Siddurim, it is stated at fol. 60. col. 1. under the title Józer lebasáka schenija, in a prayer beginning 'צרת אהור וקדם צרת' Achor vakédem zárta, said to GOD: 'בריחך עדינה כחשה' that is, "Adina saps your covenant," that is, your confederates; upon which the Commentario reads: אדום הרשעה נקראת, that is, "The wicked Edom is called in Esaia in the 47th chapter Adina, that is, the Voluptuous One, because it delights itself." But in a handwritten Commentario on the Machsor I have read: עדינה, that is, "By Adina is meant Rome (that is, the Roman Empire), which delights itself at the expense of the Israelites." It ought, however, rightly to be turned around, and the Jews should be called Adina, because through their wanton and godless fleecing and scraping, as well as their unconscionable deceit, they refresh themselves in their shameful idleness with the sweat and blood of poor Christians, and thereby pursue pleasure and excess, instead of eating their bread in the sweat of their brow.

Twenty-fifth, they call it צר Zor. The word צר Zor means the city of Tyre in Holy Scripture, as can be seen in 2 Sam 5:11, Josh 19:29, and other places; but in those passages of Holy Scripture where not צור Zor with the Vau Cholem, but rather צר Zor without the Vau Cholem is written, the Jews understand it to refer to Christendom. Hence, in the book Cád hakkémach, fol. 48, col. 1, the following is read: כתיב כאשר שמע למצרים יחילו כשמע צור, וזה מפורש שבדמיון גאולת מצרים תהיה גאולתינו העתידה שהרי צור מלכות אדום היא לפי שהוא חסר ואומר צר כתיב. ודרשו ז"ל כל צר שבמקרא חסר ויו במלכות הרשעה הכתוב מדבר וכל צור מלא בצור. that is, it is written (Isa 23:5): they shall tremble at the report (or cry) of Tyre, as at the cry of Egypt; and this is explained to mean that our future redemption shall be like the redemption from Egypt; for behold, Tyre signifies the Edomite kingdom, because it is written defectively (namely, without the Vau Cholem). And our sages, of blessed memory, have taught that wherever צר Zor appears in Scripture without the Vau Cholem, Scripture speaks of the wicked kingdom; but wherever צור Zor is found, it refers to the city of Tyre. The same is also found in the aforementioned book, fol. 57, col. 4, and in the booklet Afkáth (or Afkas) Róchel. So also in the book Pesikta rabbetha (or rabbesa), fol. 32, col. 4, the following is taught on this matter: אמר רבי אליעזר כל צור מלא בצור הכתוב מדבר וכל צר חסר במקרא: that is, Rabbi Elieser has said that wherever Zor is written fully, Scripture makes mention of the city (or the region) of Tyre; but wherever Zor is found written defectively in Scripture, it makes mention of Romi harefcháa, that is, wicked Rome. And this is also found in Berefchith rábba, fol. 55, col. 3, at the end of the 61st Parascha, where only רומי Romi, that is, Rome, stands in place of Romi harefcháa, that is, wicked Rome; and in Schemóth rábba, fol. 103, col. 3, at the end of the 9th Parascha, where Malchúth harefcháa, that is, the wicked kingdom, stands for Rome, or wicked Rome; as also in the Jalkut Schimóni on the prophet Isaiah, fol. 45, col. 3, numero 291, in which passage אומות זאת Umma foth (or fós), that is, this (understand: the Christian) people, is written in place of Rome or the other aforementioned names. But in the Jalkut chadäsch, fol. 186, col. 1, numero 103, the following is read: כל צור : האמור בתורה מלא בצור הכתוב מדבר וכל צר חסר בעיר חייבת דהיינו רומי הכתוב מדבר: that is, wherever in the Law Zor is written fully, Scripture makes mention of the city of Tyre; but wherever it is found defective (or incomplete), Scripture speaks of the wicked city, which is Rome. In a handwritten commentary on the Machsor I have also found the following: פירשו רבותינו כל צר שבמקרא חסר : that is, Our... ר'רומי הרשעה ורומי נקראת צר שנאמר מי יעץ זאת על צר המעטירה

Our Rabbis have taught that wherever Zor appears incomplete in Scripture, the godless Rome is to be understood thereby, and that Rome is called Zor, as it is said (Isa 23:8): Who has devised such a counsel against Zor the crowning city?

Twenty-sixth, they call it עוצית Uzith (or Uzis), that is, the Uzite, and in the Prague Machsor, in the second part, fol. 71. col. 2., in the Commentario, the following is written concerning it: עוצית זה אדום שנאמר שישו בת אדום יושבת בארץ : that is, Uzith signifies Edom, as it is said (Lam 4:21): Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom, you who dwell in the land of Uz. It is also written (Gen 36:19): The children of Esau, and v. 28: The children of Dishan were Uz and Aran. The very same is also to be read in the Polish Siddurim, fol. 102. col. 2. and fol. 103. col. 1., in the Commentario under the title Haggada schel Pessach. Now since Uzith means as much as Edom, and by Edom Christendom is understood, it follows plainly that by Uzith Christendom is also to be understood. It is called thus, moreover, because Uz was a part of the land of Edom, which is mentioned in Job 1:1 and Jer 25:20, and which without doubt received its name from Uz, a descendant of Esau, who is mentioned in Gen 36:28; for the Christians, in the opinion of the Jews, as has been demonstrated above in the 16th chapter, p. 635. &c., are regarded as the children of Esau. So too does Rabbi Joseph Albo write in his Sepher Ikkarim (or Ikkorim), fol. 162. col. 2., in the 42nd chapter of the Maamar revii, or fourth part, concerning the words of Lam 4:22, "Your iniquity, O daughter of Edom, He will visit upon you," that by the daughter of Edom who dwells in the land of Uz is to be understood that people which is today called the Edomite people, that is, Christendom, when he states as follows: דאמר הכתוב כי אחר הגלות הזה האחרון אשר לא יוסיף השם יתברך עוד להגלות את בת ציון יפקוד על אדום וכדי שלא יובן זה על אומת אדום הקדומה שהיתה יושבת אז בהר שעיר אמר בת אדום יושבת בארץ עוץ כי היושבת בהר היתה עוודה ליבטל קודם גלות בית שני כמו שמלכות יון הקדומה : that is, Scripture says that after this last captivity, after which the blessed God will no longer bring the daughter of Zion into captivity, (God) will visit Edom. And so that this should not be understood as referring to the ancient Edomite people, which dwelt on Mount Seir, (Scripture) says: O daughter of Edom, you who dwell in the land of Uz; for that same (daughter of Edom) which dwelt on Mount Seir had to be destroyed before the captivity (which took place at the time of the second Temple), just as the ancient Greek kingdom came to an end in the world, and was left to the Kittites, who are of Greek stock, and who are today called the Edomite people.

Twenty-seventh, they call it חיה רביעית Chaja reviiith (or reviis), that is, the fourth beast. Therefore Abarbanel teaches in his commentary on the 35th chapter of Ezekiel, fol. 202, col. 1, as follows: אדום הוא החיה הרביעית אשר הגלנו ובגלותו אנחנו היום הזה, that is, Edom is the Chaja reviiith, that is, the fourth beast, which led us away captive, in whose captivity we also remain to this very day. It is called by this name because in the prophet Daniel, in the 7th chapter, mention is made of four great beasts, which signify four kingdoms, and in the seventh verse, concerning the fourth beast, it is said that it is very strong, has iron teeth, and devours and crushes all around it, by which all Jews understand the Roman Empire. Therefore Rabbi Saadias writes in his commentary on the words of Dan 7:7, "And behold, the fourth beast": אדום זה, that is, this signifies Edom. With this Rabbi Jebuda Leva also agrees in his book Nezach Jisrael, fol. 26, col. 2, in the 16th chapter, when he states: חיה רביעית היא אדום, that is, the fourth beast signifies Edom. And at fol. 27, col. 1, in the 17th chapter, the same author teaches still more on this subject. So also in the first part of the Prague Machzor, fol. 36, col. 2, it is written in the commentary as follows: חיה רביעית חיה רביעית הוא עשו שנאמר ואח חיה רביעית, that is, the fourth beast signifies Esau (that is, Christendom, which is sometimes called Esau, as has been demonstrated above in connection with the fourth name that the Jews give to it), as it is said (Dan 7:7): "And behold, the fourth beast." And immediately following comes: האומה הרשעה שהיא החיה הרביעית היה נשרפה באש, that is, the godless people (by which Christians are meant, as was indicated above in the 16th chapter), which is the fourth beast, will be burned in fire.

Twenty-eighth, they call it חית קנה Chajath (or Chajas) kaneh, that is, the beast of the reed, or the beast in the reed. This name is found in Ps 68:31, where it is written: Rebuke the beast in the reed, concerning which Rabbi Salomon Jarchi notes in his commentary: הוא עשו שנמשל כחזיר היער הדר בין הדקנים, that is, this is Esau (understand: Christendom), who is compared to a wild boar that dwells among the reeds. Likewise, in the commentary on the Psalms called Rav venaki, the following is written on the aforementioned words, "Rebuke the beast in the reed": גער חית השדה הוא עשו שנמשל לחזיר היער, that is, rebuke the beast of the field, that is, Esau, who is compared to the wild boar. And in the second part of the Prague Machzor, fol. 66, col. 1, the Jews pray in a prayer beginning רנן ושירים Appik renen veschirim, under the title

Józer lejom schéni schel Pésach, as follows: יְשִׁבִי נוֹף כְּגֵר חַיִּת קִנֵּה נֶעַר, that is, just as He (namely, God) rebuked (or destroyed) the Egyptians, so may He also rebuke (or destroy) the Chajath káneh, that is, the beast in the reed; which words are explained in the commentary as follows: כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּעֱרַת בְּמִצְרַיִם לַהֲרוֹג כמו שגערתם כך גער באומה הרשעה שנקראת חית קנה שנ' גער חית קנה (O God!) rebuked (or destroyed) the Egyptians, so also destroy the godless people, which is called Chajáth káneh, that is, the beast in the reed. Thus the name Chajath káneh, or the beast in the reed, is explained by úmma bareschúa, that is, the godless people, just as this also occurs in the Polish Siddurim, fol. 91, col. 2, under the title Józer leschabbáth Náchamu, as can be seen in the text and commentary there. By the godless people, however, Christendom is understood, concerning which reference may be made above in Chapter 16, paginâ 689, at the seventeenth name they give to Christians. On this matter, the same may also be read in the first part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 61, col. 1, in the commentary under the title Músaph schel rofch haschána jom schéni, in the prayer beginning לעזרה אנוסה Anúsa leésra.

So also in Schemóth (or Schemós) rábba fol. 124. col. 3., in the 35th Parascha, the following is found: כל האומות עתידין להביא דורון למלך המשיח ומצרים מביאה תחלה וגו' מיד כל המלכויות שומעות והן מביאות שנאמר ממלכות הארץ שירו לאלהים. ואחר כך מלכות אדום נושאה קל וחומר בעצמה ואומרת ומה הללו שאינן אחיהם קבלו מהם אנו על אחת כמה וכמה. ואף היא מבקשה להביא דורון למלך המשיח אומר לו הק"ב גער חית קנה that is: All nations will bring gifts to the King Messiah, and Egypt will bring them first, etc. Immediately thereafter all kingdoms will hear of this and bring (their gifts) forward, as it is said (Ps 68:33): "Ye kingdoms of the earth, sing unto God." After this, the Edomite kingdom (that is, Christendom) will draw a conclusion a minori ad majus, that is, from the lesser to the greater, within itself, and will say: if they (the Jews) have accepted (gifts) from these, who are not their brothers, how much more will they accept such from us (as their brothers)! And it will also wish to bring a gift to the King Messiah; but the Holy, blessed God will say to it: Rebuke (or destroy) the beast in the reeds. Concerning this, something is also to be found in the book Sefer Abraham fol. 37. col. 2., and regarding this name one may likewise see in the book Cad bakkemach fol. 20. col. 4. that הרביעית חיה Chaju barevijth, that is, the fourth beast, and Chajáth hakkaneh, that is, the beast in the reeds, are taken as one and the same.

Concerning the reason why it is called thus: this can be seen from what was reported above on pages 436 and 437 regarding the origin of the city of Rome, where I indicated that the angel Gabriel, or, as some would have it, Michael, on account of the sin which King Solomon committed by taking the daughter of the heathen king Pharaoh as his wife, is said to have planted a reed into the sea, to which so much clay and earth attached itself that a firm piece of land eventually arose from it, upon which the city of Rome was built. Now, since the Roman Empire takes its name from the city of Rome, and Rome is said to have been built upon that very spot where the angel planted the reed, and since it ruled far and wide throughout the world in ancient times, the entire Roman Empire, and thereby all of Christendom, is called after this reed Chajath kaneh, that is, the beast in the reed, or the beast of the reed. Concerning this reed, the following is also read in the book Kol bochim, fol. 56, col. 2, on Lam 4:21: בשעה שלמה את בת פרעה ירד גבריאֵל ונעץ קנה בים והיה שירד כח מהגבורה העליונה ונעץ אותו קנה דהיינו סמאל נעצו ונטעו ונתן לו חלק שישאב מן הים הקדוש של מעלה מלכות ועל ידי כן היה משפיע כח ואומץ לאומתו שעליה. על ההיא השפעה נבנה כרך גדול שיצא ממנה that is, when Solomon had taken Pharaoh's daughter as his wife, the angel Gabriel came down and planted a reed into the sea, that is, a power descended from the highest authority and planted that same reed: that is, Sammaël (who is said to be the supreme devil and to rule over the Christians) planted and set it, and a portion was given to him so that he might draw a kingdom from the supreme holy sea; for this reason he imparted power and strength to his people through an influentz upon it. Through that same influentz a great city (that is, Rome) was built, from which came the one who destroyed the Temple for the second time, the Temple which Solomon had built. Something on this subject can also be read in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 99, col. 1, number 24, under the title jamim tolim.

Twenty-ninth, they call it חזיר מיער Chasir mijâar, that is, the swine from the forest, or the wild boar, or also simply חזיר Chasir, that is, the swine, or חיה Chajath (or Chajus) jaâr, that is, the beast of the forest, or also חזיר הבר Chasir habbâr, that is, swine, or likewise the wild boar. The name Chasir mijâar appears in Rabbi Bechai's book Cad hakkémach, fol. 19. col. 4., where he writes as follows: וזאת יקרא דומה לשעם אחר לפי שארבע מלכויות נמשלים לארבע חיות וכל הנביאים יחדיו מזכירן כל החיות בשמם חוץ מן החיה הרביעית שלא יזכירה בשמה לעולם כי כן עשה דניאל הזכיר כל חיה וחיה חוץ מזו שאמר וארו חיוי רביעיה דחילה ואימתי ותקיפא יתירא ושנין די פרזל לה וכרכון אכלא ומדקא ושאר אברגלה רפסה ואין בספר תקנה וממשלתה ולא מצינו מי שיזכר אותה בפירוש כי אם אסף שאמר יכרסמנה חזיר מיער העין תלויה כי כן הם עובדי התלויה וגילה לנו בכחוב הזה על שם החיה ועל עבודתה ועל בית ממשלתה שהיא רומי, that is: Furthermore, it (namely the Edomite kingdom, that is, Christendom) is called Duma for another reason, because the four kingdoms (or monarchies) are compared to four beasts, and all the prophets together mention all the beasts by their names, except for the fourth beast, of which they never make mention by its name. For thus did Daniel, who makes mention of all of them except this one, when he says (Dan 7:7): And behold, the fourth beast was terrible and dreadful and exceedingly strong, and had great iron teeth, devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped the residue with its feet. He described its strength and dominion at great length, yet we find no one who makes clear mention of it except Asaph, who said (Ps 80:14): A Chasir mijáar, that is, a wild boar, will root it up (namely the vine). The letter Ayin is suspended (above in the word מיער mijaar), for thus do they (meaning the Christians) worship the hanged one (Jesus). And he (namely Asaph) has revealed to us the name of the beast together with its significance, with respect to its worship and the place of its dominion, which is Rome. We see from this, therefore, that Christendom is called Chasir mijáar, and that the letter Ayin, which is suspended above in the word Mijaar, is meant to signify the crucified Christ.

The aforementioned Rabbi Bechai also reports the following on this subject in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 46, col. 1, 2, in the Parascha Vajischlach: ובאומה הזאת סתם הכתוב ענינה ולא פירש לנו את שמה, וכן מצינו שהנביאים זכירו גודל ממשלתה תמיד אבל לא זכירוה בשמה. וכן מצינו בדניאל שהמשיל המלכיות האחד כאריה והשני בדוב והשלישי כנמר ולא הזכיר שמה של חיה רביעית רק שהגיד בה דחילה ואימתני ותקיפא יתירא ושנין די פרזל לה אכלה מדקה ושאר אברגלה רפסה, וכן ישעיה ע"ה הזכיר משא בכל משא מצרים משא מואב ובשאב להזכיר זאת אמר משא משא דומה אלי קורא משעיר שומר מה מלילה וגו': 'ובמקום אחר הזכירו פריץ חית הוא שאמר לא יהיה שם אריה ופריץ חיות כל יעלה' לא תמצא שם והלכו גאולים. וכן מצינו בירמיה הנביא שהזכיר המלכיות כולן חוץ מן המלכות הרביעית הזאת הוא שאמר על כן הכם אריה מיער זאב ערבות ישדדם נמר שקד על עריהם כל היוצא מהנה יטרף ולא תמצא בכל התורה כולה שיזכיר החיה הזאת בשמה כי אם משה רבינו עליו השלום ואסף המשורר שהזכירה יותר מפורש שפירש שם האומה ושם עירה שהיא רומי הוא שאמר יכרסמנה חזיר מיער חמנא הע"ן תלויה וישאר לך ר"מ ומפני זה כשהזכיר כאן האלוף העשירי אלוף מגדיאל שהוא רומי על רומי בפי מדרש רבותינו ז"ל הוסיף ביאור ואמר אלוף עירם שאותיותיו מיער כלומר אלוף מגדיאל זה חזר מיער ואמיתתו מעיר. על שם הכתוב והאביד שריד מעיר שהוא עיר רומי. וכן הזכיר ישעיה ע"ה כי שמה מעוז לגל קריה בצורה למפלה וזה אמור. על רומי ואותיותיו גם כן רע"ם ועליו אמר דוד ע"ה וירעם בשמים יי' ועליו יתן קולו בחד ונחלי אש שעתיד הקדוש ברוך הוא להאבידה. וכן התנבא עליה דניאל עד די קטילת חיותא והובד גשמה ויהיבת ליקידת אשא: that is: Scripture has kept the nature of this people (namely, the Christians) concealed and has not clearly revealed their name to us. Thus we also find that the prophets always report the greatness of its dominion, yet they do not mention it by name. So we find in Daniel (Dan 7:4 etc.) that he compared the first kingdom to a lion, the second to a bear, the third to a leopard, but he did not mention the name of the fourth beast; he only noted that it was terrible and frightful and exceedingly strong, and had iron teeth; that it devoured and crushed, and trampled the remainder with its feet. Likewise, Isaiah, upon whom be peace, mentioned (Isa 13:1): This is the burden concerning Babylon.

(And Isa 19:1:) This is the burden concerning Egypt. Isa 15:1: This is the burden concerning Moab. But when he came to make mention of this (people or beast), he said (Isa 21:11): This is the burden concerning Dumah. One calls to me out of Seir: Watchman, what do you say of the night? etc. And in another place he calls it a ravenous beast, and this is what he says (Isa 35:9): There shall be no lion there, and no ravenous beast shall come upon it, nor shall one be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there. Likewise we find in the prophet Jeremiah that he makes mention of all kingdoms except this fourth kingdom, and this is what he says (Jer 5:6): Therefore a lion out of the forest shall strike them down, and a wolf from the wilderness shall destroy them; a leopard shall lie in wait by their cities, to tear in pieces all who go out from them.

You will find in the entire Law, however, no one who mentions this animal by name except our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace, and the singer Asaph, who makes a clearer mention of it, in that he has plainly indicated the name of the people and the name of their city, which is Rome; and this is what he says (Ps 80:14): "The wild boar out of the wood doth waste it"; and if you find the letter Ayin in the word מיער mijaar suspended above, so that (with the omission of that letter Ayin,) רומי Romi (that is, Rome) remains. Therefore, when he (namely Moses) here (Gen 36:43) makes mention of the tenth prince, the prince Magdiel (which, according to the figurative interpretation of our Rabbis, of blessed memory, is an allusion to Rome), he adds an explanation and says: the prince עירם Iram, whose letters (of the word Iram) are the letters of the word מיער mijaar (merely transposed in the Hebrew language); thereby indicating that the prince Magdiel is the wild boar. Scripture also bears witness (Num 24:19) concerning this name with its letters, (in that it is written there:) "And shall destroy him that remaineth מעיר Meir, that is, of the city," which is the city of Rome. For the word מעיר meir has in Hebrew exactly the same letters as the word מיער mijaar, and when the letter Ayin is cast away, only the three letters מיר MIR remain, which, transposed, make רמי Romi, that is, Rome. In this same manner the prophet Isaiah also says (Isa 25:2): "Thou hast made מעיר Meir, that is, of the city a heap of stones, and a fortified city into a ruin," which is said of Rome. And the letters (of the word מעיר meir) are also (in the Hebrew language) the letters of the word ירעם jiram (which means, He will thunder), of which David, upon whom be peace, says (Ps 18:14): "The LORD thundered in the heavens, and the Highest gave His voice with hail and coals of fire"; for the holy and blessed God will bring that same city of Rome to ruin. Thus also Daniel (Dan 7:11) prophesied against it: "Until the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame."

Regarding the letter Ajin, which in the aforementioned word mijaar stands above the other three letters, something on this subject can also be read in the commentary of the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai, fol. 153, col. 4, in the Parascha Bechykkothái. And in the book Schéva tal, fol. 78, col. 4, under the title Schaar Schevii sod galuth schechina, it is written on this matter as follows: כתיב יכרסמנה חזיר מיער הע 'של יער תלויה למעלה בזה טז'ר להזות ולרמוז על צור הידוע חמי כי אותיות מ'י'ר מורה על רמי that is: It is written (Ps 80:14): A Chasir mijáar, that is, a wild boar shall root it up. The letter Ajin in the word jaár is suspended above in such a manner, מ'י'ר (so that only the three letters M, J, and R remain), in order thereby to point and to allude to the well-known Zor (that is, Christendom, which is called Zor, as was indicated shortly before in connection with the twenty-fifth name they assign to it); for the letters מ'י'ר (which, rearranged, make Romi, that is, Rome) carry a signification pointing to the idolatrous (Christians). So too can be found above on page 730 what is written on this matter in the book Zéda ledérech, fol. 17, col. 4.

Regarding the claim that Moses and Asaph alone indicated the name of the fourth beast, the following is also written in Médrasch Tillim, fol. 37. col. 3. on Ps 80: לא פרש נביא בשביל מלכות רביעית אלא משה ואסף. משה אמר את החזיר כי מפריס: פרסה הוא מה החזיר פורס טלפיו כלומר ראו שאני טהור כך עשו הרשע גונב וגזל וחומס חזיר מיער: ומראה כאילו הם דינים של אמת: that is: No prophet has clearly indicated the fourth beast except Moses and Asaph. Moses said [Deut 14:8]: The swine, which parts the hoof. Just as the swine parts its hooves, as if to say: see that I am clean, so does the wicked Esau [that is, Christendom] steal, rob, and plunder, and presents it as though these were righteous judgments [or verdicts]. Asaph said: A wild boar will root it up. This may also be looked up in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 33. col. 2. numero 112. and fol. 144. col. 4. numero 536. as well as on the Psalms, fol. 115. col. 4. numero 830. Precisely the same is also found in Bereschíth rábba fol. 58. col. 2. at the beginning of the 65th Parascha, except that in place of עשו הרשע Esau haráscha, that is, the wicked Esau, one reads there מלכות הרשעה Malchúth barescháa, that is, the wicked kingdom. It is likewise found in Bamidbar rábba fol. 146. col. 4. in the 13th Parascha, where in place of Esau haráscha or Malchúth barescháa, the text reads מלכות אדום Malchúth Edom, that is, the Edomite kingdom; from which it is evident that these three names have the same meaning. Furthermore, in the aforementioned Bereschíth rábba, fol. 57. col. 1. in the commentary Mattenóth Kebúnna, one reads: עשו נקרא חזיר מיער that is: Esau is called a wild boar. And in the Medrasch Tillim it is stated at fol. 53. col. 1. on Ps 120: חזיר מיער זה עשו הרשע that is: (The words) A wild boar will root it up signify the wicked Esau. This is also found at fol. 57. col. 1. in the Medrasch Schemuel, as well as in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Psalms, numero 829. And in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim at fol. 118. col. 2., in the commentary of Rabbi Solomon as well as in that of Rabbi Shemuel ben Meir, it reads as follows: חזיר מיער זה חזיה שכתוב בו אכלה ומדקה ושאר אברגלה רמסה דהכו : של חזיר : that is: The wild boar is that beast of which it is written (Dan 7:7): It devoured and crushed, and trampled the remainder with its feet, and this is the nature of the swine.

Regarding the name Chasir, or swine, the following is written in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 186. col. 2., in the Parasha Vajär Baluk: חזיר נמשלה לחזיר : שנ' יכרסמנה חזיר מיער : that is, You already know that this godless people (namely, Christendom) is compared to a swine, as it is said: A wild boar out of the wood shall root it up. The same is also to be found in Rabbi Solomon's commentary on Gen 26:34. And in the Jalkut Shimoni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 144. col. 4. numero 535., on the words of Lev 11:7, "And the swine," the following is read: את החזיר זו מלכות הרביעית והוא גרה לא יגר שאינה מקלסת אלא : that is, The swine signifies the fourth kingdom, which does not chew the cud, for it does not praise God, but rather despises and blasphemes Him, and says (from Ps 73:25): Whom have I in heaven? and I have no delight in thee upon earth. This is also read in the book Ner Mitzva fol. 55. col. 4. Furthermore, fol. 145. col. 1. in the aforementioned Jalkut Shimoni on the Five Books of Moses, numero 536., the following stands: ואת החזיר זו מלכות הרביעית והוא גרה לא יגר שאינה מגדלת לצדיקים : ולא דייה שאינה מגדלת אלא הורגת : that is, The swine signifies the fourth kingdom, which does not chew the cud, for it raises up no righteous persons. But it is not content merely with not raising up righteous persons; it also kills them. And this is likewise to be read in the book Netzach Yisrael fol. 31. col. 3., at the end of the 21st chapter. In Rabbi Bachya's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 132. col. 2., on the names of the animals mentioned in Lev 11:4-7, the following is also written: דרשו רז"ל את הגמל זו מלכות בבל וגו' : 'את השפן זו יון : 'את הארנבת זו מדי' : 'תוג' : that is, Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, teach in allegorical fashion: the camel signifies the Babylonian kingdom, ע"כ.; the coney, the Greek kingdom, ע"כ.; the hare, the Median kingdom, ע"כ.; and the swine, the kingdom of the fourth captivity, ע"כ. Concerning this name, the following is also read in the small Jalkut Reuveni, numero 85, under the title Othioth Aleph Beth, from the book Megulle Amykkoth: בזיון הגדול של עשו הוא שנתנה לחזיר לכן ע"ץ של חזיר מיער תלויה רשו על עשו : that is, It is a great disgrace to Esau that he is held to be like a swine; therefore the letter Ayin in the words Chasir mijáar is suspended above, which is a reference to Esau, whose name in the Hebrew language also begins with the letter Ayin.

The name Chajáth jáar, that is, the beast of the forest, by which the wild boar is understood, appears in the Machsor printed in folio at Wilmersdorf, in the first part, fol. 280, col. 2, under the title ליל שמרים: לליל התקדש חג Lelél letischah beáf. The name Chásir habbár, however, is read in the thick Tephilla, fol. 40, col. 4, under the title Sülach leschabbáth rischon, in a prayer which begins: Escórcha dodí meérez Jarden &c., and is to be found below in the second chapter of the second part, p. 105 and 106.

We will now also examine why Christendom is called Chasir, or swine, by the Jews. It should be known that the root word, or stem, חזר Chasar, in the Chaldean as well as in the Rabbinic language, means to return, to go back, and also to wallow; and a pig is called Chasir from this, because even after it has been washed, it immediately returns to the mud and wallows in it. But in the Conjugation Hiphil, החזיר Hechesir means to give back; and it is read in Medrasch Kobeleth fol. 313, col. 2, that the Roman authority once demanded that the Jews should send a rabbi to it, whereupon they sent Rabbi Meir, and the following is recorded thereafter: שאלו אותו למה נקרא שמו חזיר אמר להם שהוא עתיד להחזיר, that is: they asked him why it (namely the Roman Empire) is called Chasir, that is, swine; but he answered them that it is because it will lehachásir, that is, give back, the kingdom to its master (that is, to the one to whom it belongs, namely God). And this same passage appears once more shortly thereafter in the same place. So also in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 145, col. 1, numero § 36, it is read: ואת החזיר זו מלכות ואת הרייעת וגו' למה נקרא שמה חזיר שמחזרת עטרה לבעלה הוא הוא דכתיב ועלו מושיעים בהר ציון לשפוט את הר עשו והיתה ל"י המלוכה, that is: the words "and the swine" signify the fourth kingdom, etc. Why is it called Chasir, that is, swine? Because it machaséreth, that is, gives back, the crown to its master. But in Abarbanel's book Rosch amaná, it is written at fol. 18, col. 2: אמרו ז"ל למה נקרא שמו חזיר: ששם הקב"ה להחזירו לישראל, that is: our Rabbis, of blessed memory, say: why is it called Chasir or swine? Because the Holy and Blessed God will give it back (that is, the swine), that is, permit it to be eaten, as what follows clearly demonstrates. Furthermore, in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 137, col. 3, in the Parascha Schemini, the following is found: כבר ידעת מה שדרשו רבותינו ז"ל למה נקרא שמו חזיר שעתיד הקב"ה להחזירו: ובויקרא רבה למה נקרא שמו חזיר שמחזיר עטרה ליושנה, that is: you already know what our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught in figurative terms. Why is his name called Chasir or swine? Because the Holy and Blessed God will give it back to us. And in Vajikra rabba (it is read:) why is his name called Chasir? Because it will restore the crown to its former state and give it back. This last passage is also found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 132, col. 2, in the Parascha Schemini. And shortly before this, in the aforementioned second column, it is read: במדרש תנחומא למה נמשלה מלכות זו לחזיר שעתיד הקב"ה להחזיר עליהן מדת הדין, that is: in the Medrasch Tanchuma (it stands:) why is this kingdom compared to the Chasir or swine? Because the Holy and Blessed God will machásir, that is, cause to come upon them (namely the Christians), the attribute of judgment.

Thirtieth, they call it פריץ החיות Periz hachajoth (or hachajos), that is, the ravenous beast, which name is taken from Isa 35:9, concerning which Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary, as can be seen in the large Bible printed in Venice in the year 285 according to the Jewish reckoning, that is, in the year of Christ 1525, in folio, as follows: עשו חזיר מיעד אין לך פריץ בחיות that is, (This signifies) Esau, who is the wild boar; for there is no beast so ravenous as the wild boar. Rabbi Bechai likewise states in his book Cad hakkemach, fol. 31. col. 4. as follows: בסוף הפרשה הזכיר לא יהיה שם אריה ופריץ that is, At the end of the Parashah he says (namely the prophet Isaiah, in the passage cited:) There shall be no lion there, and no ravenous beast. This is Edom, which is compared to a swine. And in fol. 20. col. 1. of the aforementioned book Cad hakkemach one reads: כבר תבטחנו ישעיה הנביא ע"ה: i.e., The prophet Isaiah, upon whom be peace, has already plainly assured us concerning the downfall of this kingdom, namely the Edomite kingdom, and has called it Peritz chajoth, the ravenous beast.

Thirty-first: they call it שממית Semamith (or Semomis), that is, a spider; hence it is named in the Medrasch Mischle, fol. 73, col. 1, over the words Prov 30:28. "The spider taketh hold with her hands and is in kings' palaces," which is read thus: שממית בידים תתפש וגו' זו אדום אומתא דשיעתא דכל קימא חמן משתכחא: that is: the words "The spider taketh hold with her hands, etc." signify Edom, the godless people, among whom every covenant is forgotten. And in the second column it is further written there as follows: שממית בידים תתפש, זו אדם שאין ככל השרצים שנראה כשממית, וכן כתיב ואת עשו שנאתי: והיא בהיכלי מלך, שההריב מקדשו של מלך מלכי המלכים הקדוש ברוך הוא, that is: "The spider taketh hold with her hands." This spider is Edom; for among all vermin there is none so hated as the spider. Thus it is written (Mal 1:3): "But Esau I have hated." As for the words "and is in kings' palaces," they likewise refer to Edom, for it has destroyed the Temple of the King of kings of all kings, the holy and blessed God. This is also found in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Proverbs of Solomon, fol. 145, col. 3, num. 963, and in the Jalkut Chádasch, fol. 38, col. 2, num. 23, under the title Babel; but in both places, instead of Edom, one reads מלכות רביעית Malchúth revíith, that is, the fourth kingdom. On the other hand, in the book Cad hakkémach, fol. 20, col. 1, where this passage also occurs, it reads Edom again.

Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 138, col. 1, in the Parascha Schemini, on the aforementioned words Prov 30:28, the following as well: קרי' המקדש ולמה קרי' שמיית זו עשו הרשע ששם בית המקדש ולמה קרי' בסמך לפי שסימה עיני אביו בלקיחת נשיו שנאמר ויקח אשה את יהודית וסמך ליה ותכהין עיניו מראות, that is: the spider is the godless Esau, who laid waste the Temple. But why is it (namely the word Semamith) also read with the letter Samech? Because he (Esau) blinded his father's eyes (the Hebrew word for blinding being סימה Simmá, written with a Samech) when he took his wives, as it is said (Gen 26:34): "And he took to wife Judith." And immediately thereafter it follows (Gen 27:1): "And his eyes (namely Isaac's) were dim." In the Polish Siddurím, fol. 65, col. 2, under the title Józer lerschábbath ríschon ácher happésach, the commentary reads as follows: שמיית זה עשו שאין בכל השרצים שנואה כשמיית וכתוב ואת עשו שנאתי וכתוב בוי אתה מאד ומה שמיית מלא ארס אף עשו הרשע מלא ארם על ישראל, that is: the spider signifies Esau, because among all vermin none is so hated as the spider; and it is written (Mal 1:3): "But Esau I have hated." It is likewise written (Obad 1:2): "Thou art greatly despised." And just as a spider is full of venom, so too is the godless Esau full of venom against the Israelites. From this we can see who is meant by the spider, which is mentioned in the Selichóth under the title Lejóm chamíschí schebén rosch haschána vejóm Kíppur, in a prayer beginning עלמא מרי שמע מרי Ta schemá Mare alma, in the old Prague printing, fol. 67, col. 2, where the Jews pray: שמיית אכלתני לגרשני וברגליה רפסה, שארית, that is: the spider devours me to drive me out, and with her feet she tramples the remnant. In the Judeo-German translation of the Selichóth printed at Amsterdam, these words are rendered as follows: Edom, which is like a spider, has devoured me to drive me out; me and the remnant it has trodden underfoot.

Thirty-second, they call it נחש Nachásch (or Nóchosch), that is, a serpent; and נחש בריח Nachásch bariach, that is, the long (or straight) serpent; and also נחש עקלתון Nachásch akaláthon (or akalólōn), that is, the crooked serpent; which names are taken from Isa 27:1. The name Náchasch, or serpent, appears in Abarbanel's commentary on the Prophet Amos, on chapter 5, fol. 249, col. 3, in these words: דרשו בשוחד טוב כאשר ינוס האיש מפני הארי זה בבל ופגעו הדוב זו מדי' ובה הבית זו יון שהיה הבית קיים בימיהם ונשכו הנחש זה אדום הרשעה שנאמר עליה קולה כנחש ילך, that is: In the Medrasch schóchad tobb, our rabbis have explained the words of Amos 5:19 in an allegorical manner. (The words) "As when a man flees from a lion" signify Babel (or the Babylonian Empire). And (the words) "and a bear met him" signify Media. (And the words) "and when he came home" signify Greece (or the Greeks), in whose time the Temple still stood. (But the words) "and a serpent bit him" signify the godless Edom, as it is said (Jer 46:22): "Her voice shall go forth like a serpent." This is also found in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Prophet Amos, fol. 79, col. 3, numero 545, but instead of Edom barescháa, that is, the godless Edom, it reads there אומה הרשעה Umma barescháa, that is, the godless people. And in the Médrasch Megílla, shortly after the beginning, fol. 337, col. 4, on the words of Jer 5:6, it is written as follows: אמר רבי יוחנן על כן הכם אריה מיער זו בבל • זאב ערבות ישדום זו מדי נמר שקד על עריהם • זו יון כל היוצא מהנה יטרף זו אדום ובא הבית זה יון שהיה הבית קיים ונשכו הנחש זה אדום • יון כל היוצא מהנה יטרף זו אדום ובא הבית זה יון שהיה הבית קיים ונשכו הנחש זה אדום • שנאמר קולה כנחש ילך, that is: Rabbi Jochanan said: (the words) "therefore the lion out of the forest shall smite her" signify Babel. (And the words) "and a wolf of the deserts shall destroy them" signify Media. (The words) "a leopard shall watch over their cities" signify Greece.

(But the words) "All who go out from there, he will tear apart" signify Edom. (And the words of Amos 5:19) "And when he came home" signify Greece (or the Greek Empire), during whose time the Temple remained standing. (But the words) "And a serpent shall bite him" signify Edom, as it is said (Jer 46:22): "Her voice shall go forth like a serpent." So too is it read in the book Maschmía jescháa fol. 30, col. 2: על מלכות אדום אמר נחש עפר לחמו, that is: Concerning the Edomite kingdom, he (namely the prophet Isaiah, Isa 65:25) said: "The serpent's food shall be dust." And this name can likewise be found in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 38, col. 2, no. 22, under the heading Babel, as also in the book Emek hammelech fol. 129, col. 3.

Regarding the name Náchasch bariach, that is, the plain or straight serpent, the following is written in Abarbanel's commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, on cap. 65, v. 25, fol. 93, col. 4: פשט הכתובים נוטה יותר למה שפירשתי ראשונה שזכר שם ושארית זולתי לאומת אדום והוא אשר דברתי אליכם שתהיה נקמת השם יותר באומת אדום משאר האומות ולא תזכה אותה האומה המקוללת אל מה שיזכו האומות האחרות ולכן אמר עליו בלבד ונחש עפר לחמו ועל זה אמר בבראשית רבה לעתיד לבא הכל מתרפאין חוץ מן הנחש והגבעונים נחש עפר לחמו וגו' וגו' that is: The plain or literal sense of the words of Scripture inclines rather toward what I explained at the outset, namely that he (the Prophet Isaiah) makes mention of the condition of the four kingdoms, that of all (peoples, at the time of the Messiah) the name and the lineage shall remain, except for the Edomite people. And this is what I have said to you, that the vengeance of God shall come more upon the Edomite people than upon the other peoples, and that this accursed people shall not be worthy of that which the other peoples shall be worthy of. For this reason he speaks of it alone: The serpent's food shall be dust. For this reason it is reported in Bereschith Rabba: In the future, all shall be healed, except the serpent and the Gibeonites. From where is it proven that the serpent shall not be healed? Because it is said: The serpent's food shall be dust, etc. For behold, they had their intention herein not upon a serpent that is among the creeping animals and vermin, but upon Edom, which is Náchasch bariach, that is, the plain serpent. And in his commentary on the Prophet Amos, cap. 5, v. 19, he writes at fol. 149, col. 3, as follows: הכוונה במשל הארי הדוב והנחש: להודיע שיום עונש השבטים יהיה חשך ולא אור בגלותם שיחמידו בו זמן ארוך בידי אשור אבל מלכות יהודה חלף מרעה אל רעה פעם מפני הארי שהוא נבוכד נצר ופעם מפני הדוב שהוא פרס ומדי ופעם בידי יון שהיתה ממשללה בפני הבית ופעם בידי אדום שהוא נחש בריח that is: The intention (or purpose) of the figurative speech concerning the lion, the bear, and the serpent is directed toward making known that the day of punishment of the tribes should be darkness and no light in their captivity, and that they should remain for a long time under the power of Assyria; but the kingdom of Judah should go from one misfortune to another, at one time on account of the lion, which was Nebuchadnezzar, and at another time on account of the bear, which was Persia and Media; at another time it should be under the power of Greece, whose dominion was before the Temple; but at yet another time it should be under the power of Edom, which is Náchasch bariach, that is, the straight (or plain) serpent, which does not hear the voice of the enchanters.

Regarding the name Nachasch akalathon, that is, the crooked serpent, the aforementioned Abarbenel writes in his commentary on Esaiam, fol. 44, col. 3, on cap. 27, v. 1, in the following manner: עתה יבאר הנביא מה שהשיבו האל יתברך על חרבן האומות וענין כל מה שהרעו לישראל ולפי שהם ברשעתם כבעלי חיים הטורפים והשרצים הגדולים הממיתים לכן קראם נחש בריח ונחש עקלתון ואין ספק אצלי שלאדום יישמעאל קרא כן שאחד מהם הוא נחש מתפשט מן הקצה אל הקצה שהוא ישמעאל המושל ברוב יישוב בני אדם ולכן קראו בריח רוצה לומר מבריה מן הקצה אל הקצה ואת אדום קרא : that is, "Now the prophet explains what the blessed God has answered him concerning the destruction of the nations, and the matter of all the harm they have done to Israel. And because they in their wickedness are like the tearing beasts, as well as the great creeping things that kill, he has therefore called them the straight serpent and the crooked serpent; and I do not doubt at all that he called Edom and Ishmael (that is, the Christians and the Turks) by these names, since one of them is the serpent that stretches from one end to the other, and this is Ishmael, who rules over the greater part of the inhabited world; he has therefore called him Bariach (which derives from barách, meaning to flee), that is, one who causes flight from one end to the other. Edom, however, he has called Náchasch akalathon, that is, the crooked serpent, because he is crooked (and perverse) in his works, etc." The very same thing is also found in his book Maschmia jeschúa, fol. 16, col. 3.

Thirty-third, the same is called Livjathan (or Livjoson), that is, the Leviathan, as may be read in the book Caphtor uphérah, fol. 137, col. 1, where it is written: לֹוִיתִן זֶה אֲדָוִם וּבִהְמוֹת בְּהַרְרֵי אֵלֶּף זֶה מַלְכוּת יִשְׁמַעְאֵל, that is: The Leviathan is Edom, and the cattle upon a thousand mountains (of which Ps 50:10 speaks) is the Ishmaelite (or Turkish) realm.

Thirty-fourth, the same is called שַׁחַל וּפְתָן Scháchal vaphéthen or vaphésen, that is, the lion and the adder-serpent, and this occurs when they pray the 91st Psalm on the evening at the end of their Sabbath, as may be seen in the large Tephilla, fol. 82, col. 3, under the title Máarik lemozaë schabbath, wherein v. 13 reads: Upon Scháchal vaphéthen, that is, the lion and the adder-serpent, thou shalt tread. That Christendom is understood by this among the malicious Jews is clearly to be seen in the commentary of the large Machsor printed at Venice, inasmuch as it is there indicated that this is to be understood in this way because the first three letters of the three words שַׁחַל וּפְתָן Al Schachal vaphéthen, which mean "upon the lion and the adder-serpent," form עֶשָׂו Esav, by which name Christendom is customarily called on many occasions, as has been sufficiently demonstrated above.

Thirty-fifth, they call it עֵגְלָה מְשׁוּלֶשֶׁת Egla meschulléscheth (or meschullésches), that is, the three-year-old calf, or the three-year-old cow; and this name is taken from Gen 15:9, concerning which it is written in the Chapters of Rabbi Elieser, in the 28th chapter, as follows: רַבִּי עֲקִיבָא אוֹמֵר הָרָאָה הַקָּ"ב לְאַבְרָהָם אֲבִינוּ בֵּין הַבְּתָרִים מַלְכוּת מוֹשְׁלִין וְאוֹבְדִין שְׁנֵאמַר וַיֹּאמֶר אֵלָיו קַח לִי עֵגְלָה מְשׁוּלֶשֶׁת זֶה מַלְכוּת זֶה מַלְכוּת יוֹן וְגו' that is: Rabbi Akkiva says that the Holy and blessed God showed Abraham, between the pieces (which are mentioned in Gen 15:10), the kingdoms, how they rule and perish, as it is said: Bring me a three-year-old cow; this is the fourth kingdom, which is the Edomite kingdom, since it threshes like a cow. And a three-year-old goat; this signifies the Greek kingdom, Ἑλλάς. It also stands in the book Marteh Abaron, fol. 16, col. 2: עֵגְלָה מְשׁוּלֶשֶׁת הִיא אֲדָוִם, that is, The three-year-old cow is Edom. And concerning this, more may be read above at page 754, under the eighth name they give to Christendom, from the Machsor.

Thirty-sixth, they call her שַׁעִיר Säir, that is, a goat. The Jews imagine that Christians must bear their sins, just as the goat mentioned in Lev 16:22 carried the sins upon itself into the wilderness, as will be shown in greater detail in the second chapter of the second part. For this reason they also call Christendom a goat, as can be seen in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 2, where it is written: אָמְרוּ רַבּוֹתֵינוּ ז"ל וְנִשָּׂא הַשַּׁעִיר, that is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, say, (the words of Lev 16:22) that the goat shall bear (all their transgressions upon him into the wilderness), signifying Esau. So also in the Jalkut Schimoni on Isaiah, fol. 58, col. 1, near the end of numeri 366, on the aforementioned word of Leviticus, one reads:

הרשע, אין שׂעיר אלא עשו הרשע, that is: The name Sair, or goat, signifies no one other than the wicked Esau. And in the little book Schechéchath (or Schechéchas) Léket, under the title Maschiach utechiath haminéthim, num. 3, the following is found: הק"בה נוטל כל עונותיהם של ישראל ונותנם על עשו הרשע, that is: The holy and blessed God takes all the sins of Israel and lays them upon the wicked Esau. Since Christendom is understood by the name Esau, the goat likewise signifies the same.

Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman also teaches this in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 91, col. 3, in the Parascha Acharé moth, where he writes the following concerning the chief devil Sammaël: הוא העילה לכוכבי החרב הדמים והמלחמות והמריבות והפצעים והמכות והפירוד והחרבן והכלל נפש לגלגל מאדים וחלקו מן האומות עשו שהוא עם היורש החרב והמלחמות ומן הבהמות השעירים והעזים ובחלקו עוד השדים הנקראים מזיקין בלשון רבותינו ובלשון הכתוב שעירים כי כן יקרא הוא ואומתו שׂעיר, that is: He is the cause of the stars of the sword, and of blood, and of wars, and of quarrels, and of wounds, and of blows, and of division, as well as of devastation; in short, he is the soul of the planet Mars. Among the nations, however, Esau belongs to him as his portion, who is the people that inherits the sword and wars; and among the animals, the he-goats and she-goats are his portion. Also included within his portion are the devils, who in the language of our Rabbis are called Massikim (that is, injurers) and in the language of Scripture are called Seirim; for thus he himself and his people (namely, Christendom) are also called Sair, that is, a goat or a devil (for the Hebrew word signifies both). This is also found in the book Toledóth Jizchak, fol. 76, col. 1, in the Parascha Acharé moth, and in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parascha Acharé moth, and in his book Cad hakkémach, fol. 24, col. 3; and from this it is plainly to be seen that Christendom is called Sair, that is, a goat and a devil, concerning which more is also to be found below in the 2nd chapter of the second part.

Thirty-seventh: the same is called כלב Kelef, that is, the dog, and Rabbi Mosche de Mircado writes in his commentary on the Psalms, on the words of Ps 22:21, "Deliver my soul from the sword, my only one from the power of the dog," in the following manner: רמז לאדום כנוצר בתנחוני כי במדי אמר נפשי כי היא מלה המורה על נפש החיונית ונפש הבהמית כי הגורה ההיא היתה נגד הגוף בלבד כידוע. אך בכלב אמר יחידתי כי אדום מבקשים להרוג הנשמה הנקראת יחידה וזה בבקשם לבטל ממנו עול תורה ומצוות לכן אמר יחידתי המורה על הנשאר אחר המות כי היא יחידה בעולמה. That is: He (namely, King David) has (with the word "dog") pointed to Edom, as has been mentioned. Note also that when speaking of the Medes he says נפשי nafschi, that is, my soul, for this word denotes the vital and the animal soul, since that decree (or that persecution by the Medes) was directed only against the body, as is well known. But of the dog he says יחידתי jechidathi (or jechidôsi), that is, my only one or my singular one, for Edom seeks to kill the soul, which is called jechida, that is, the only one, and this comes about in that they (namely, the Edomites, that is, the Christians) seek to cast from us the yoke of the Law and the commandments; therefore he says "my only one," which signifies the soul that remains after death, for it is the singular one in its world. So too it is read in the Sepher gilgulim fol. 43. col. 2: עמלק הוא הכלב, that is, Amalek is the dog; but Christendom is also called Amalek by the Jews, as has been demonstrated above at p. 748 &c. It is, however, no wonder that they call Christendom a dog, for they call all Christians dogs, as has been shown above in Chapter 16, p. 713 and 714.

Thirty-eighth, it is called סמאל Sammaël, which is the name of the chief devil, who, according to Jewish teaching, is supposed to rule over Christendom; just as the preceding names, the serpent, the simple serpent, the crooked serpent, the Leviathan, the goat, and the dog, are likewise names by which the said Sammaël is called, as shall be clearly demonstrated in the immediately following Chapter 18 of this first part. That Christendom is also called Sammaël may be seen in the great Jalkut Rubeni, fol. 49. col. 4. in the Parascha Toledôth, and in the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 87. under the title מלאך Málach, as well as numero 33. under the title Sammaël, where it is written as follows: המלחמה בגלות רביעית תהיה עם סמאל הוא עשו ותהיה המלחמה קשה ועזה כענין חמות וגר עמלק, that is: The war in the fourth captivity will be waged against Sammaël, that is, against Esau, and it will be a hard and mighty war, according to the content of what is written in Deut 25:19: You shall blot out the memory of the Amalekites. This war, however, is to be waged against Christendom, as may be read at length in Chapter 14 of the second part. So also in the book Emek hammelech fol. 67. col. 2. at the end of Chapter 21, under the title Schâar dikna kaddischa, one reads: לילית עם סמאל הם מלכות אדום הרשיעה, that is: Lilith (or Lilis, who is said to be the wife of Sammaël) and Sammaël are the godless Edomite kingdom. Against this, Sammaël is also called Esau and Edom, as may be seen in the immediately following Chapter 17.

Why the Christian world is called by the name of Sammaël, as its supposed prince and ruler, and conversely why Sammaël is called by the name of the Christian world: this can be gathered from Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 22. col. 1., in the Parascha Lech lecha, where he writes as follows: ידוע מדרך הקבלה גם חכמי המחקר מסכימים בזה כי הדבר הנדבק נקרא על שם הנדבק בו גם הנדבק נקרא על שם הדבק וכן מצינו שכחו של ישראל נקרא ישראל וזהו שכתוב מבקשי פניך יעקב סלה מכאן כי הדבק נקרא על שם הדבר הנדבק והנדבק על שם הדבק: that is, It is known from the Kabbalah, and the Theologi, or theologians, likewise agree therein, that the thing which cleaves to another is called by the name of that to which it cleaves; and also that the name of that which cleaves to it is given to the thing to which something cleaves. Thus we find that the power of Israel (that is, God) is called Israel, and this is what is written (Ps 24:6): Those who seek Your face, O Jacob! Selah. From this it is proven that the thing which cleaves to another is called by the name of that to which it cleaves, and that the name of that to which something cleaves is given to that which cleaves to it. Something similar is also to be found at fol. 16. col. 2. in the aforementioned Bechai's commentary, in the Parascha Bereschith. And at fol. 112. col. 4. in the Parascha Ki tissa, as well as at fol. 188. col. 1. in the Parascha Mattoth, he teaches that the name of God was given to Moses and others for this same reason. Since, then, the Christian world, as noted, is the people of the chief devil and his own portion, and he is to rule and sustain them, and, according to this erroneous and accursed teaching, the Christian world must cleave to Sammaël, the name of the one is therefore given to the other.

Thirty-ninth, she is called אויב Ojef, or צורר Zorer, or צר Zar; they also call her the enemy, that is, the enemy. The name Ojef appears in the book Medrasch Tillim fol. 12. col. 2. on Ps 13:1-2, with these words: אמר הק"ה לכה לכה ארבעה פעמים עד אנה אמרתי עד אנה מאנתם לשמור. עד אנה ינאצוני. ועוד אנה לא יאמינו בי. עד מתי לעדה הרעה הזאת כך אני עתיד למסור אתכם ביד ארבע מלכויות ואתם אומרים ארבעה פעמים עד אנה. עד אנה תשכחני נצח עד אנה תסתיר את פניך ממני. עד אנה אשית עצות. עד אנה ירום אויבי עלי. עד אנה תשכחני בבבל: that is, the holy and blessed GOD has spoken: since I have said to you four times, "How long?", so shall you also say four times, "How long?" I said (Exod 16:28), "How long do you refuse to keep?" and (Num 14:11), "How long does this people blaspheme me? and how long will they not believe in me?" and also (Num 14:27), "How long shall I endure this evil congregation?" Thus I will hereafter deliver you into the power of the four kingdoms (or monarchies), and you shall then also say four times, "How long?" "Will you forget me forever? How long will you hide your face from me? How long shall I take counsel? How long shall my Ojef, that is, enemy, exalt himself over me?" (Ps 13:2). The words "How long will you forget me?" are to be said in Babel; the words "How long do you hide yourself?" in Meden; the words "How long shall I take counsel?" in Greece; and the words "How long shall my enemy exalt himself over me?" in Edom (that is, the Roman Empire, or Christendom). Thus Edom is here called the Ojef, or enemy. And in the book Zerór hammór it stands at fol. 159. col. 2. in the Parascha Haasinu, on the words of Deut 32:27, "If I did not fear the wrath of the Ojef, that is, the enemy," written thus: הוא מלכות אדום, that is, that same (enemy) is the Edomite kingdom. And at fol. 60. col. 1. the words of verse 42 of the cited 32nd chapter, "From the head shall the Ojef, that is, the enemy, be avenged," are interpreted as referring to Edom, that is, Christendom, and it is stated: הוא נקרא אויב דכתיב האויב תמו חרבות לנצח, that is, the same is called Ojef, that is, the enemy, as it is written (Ps 9:7), "O you enemy! are the devastations then completed forever?" So also in the book Toledóth Jizchak fol. 36. col. 1. in the Parascha Vajischlach it is read: עשו הוא האויב הגדול התמידי לכל ישראל עד המשיח, that is, Esau is the greatest and everlasting Ojef, or enemy, of all Israelites, until the Messiah shall come. And more on this subject has been indicated above in the 15th chapter, p. 602, from the aforementioned book Zerór hammôr fol. 125. col. 2, 3, as well as from Abarbanel's book Maschmia Jeschúa fol. 7. col. 2.

Regarding the name Zórer: it appears in all printed Machsors under the title Músaph lejóm ríschon schel rosch haschána, in a prayer that begins: אלא די בצדק Ella dei bezédek, in which they invoke God as follows: שועה תעיר לשלם וגמול that is, "Awake from your sleep, to repay the Zórer," that is, the enemy. Who, however, is to be understood by this enemy is taught in the commentary on it in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 36, col. 2, where the word Zórer is explained by עשו Esau, that is, Esau, who signifies Christendom. Christendom is likewise called by this name in the Selichóth (or Selichós) in a prayer that begins Ajeh col nifleotécha, of which the substance may be seen above in the second chapter, at the eleventh name given to Christ, on page 89.

Regarding the name Zar: it appears in a prayer in the large Tephilla, fol. 44, col. 3, under the title Józer leschábbath baggádol, which reads as follows: שואה that is, "Devastation and desolation (of which Zeph 1:15 is to be read, shall come upon our adversaries.) Let the Zar, that is, the enemy, fall into the pit, so that we may live through the rain of salvation." Who, however, is to be understood by such a Zar or enemy is clearly to be gathered from what immediately follows, in that they invoke God to punish Christendom as He punished the Egyptians.

Fortieth, she is called הצייד Hazájad, that is, the Hunter, and this appears in the Selichoth, in a prayer which begins: שעה נאסר אשר שמה נשאר אשר נמסר Scheélh néar aschéh nimsar, under the title Leschibha éser betámmus, with these words: יד הצייד שלה יד that is, And Hazájad, that is, the Hunter has laid his hand upon it. Who, however, is to be understood by this Hunter may be seen from the Commentario on it in the old Selichóth printed in folio at Prague, where over the word hazájad it is written: זה איש יודע ציד that is, this is the one who understands the hunt (or who comprehends hunting), by which Esau is meant, of whom this is read in Gen 25:27; by Esau, however, Christendom is to be understood.

Forty-first, the same is called נבל Nával, that is, the Fool or Simpleton, and Rabbi Bechai writes in his book Cad hakkémach fol. 20. col. 4. on the words of Ps 7:22, or according to some Ps 7:23, "Arise, O God, and plead your cause: remember the reproach which the Fool inflicts upon you daily," in the following manner: קרא מלכות אדום נבל והוא שהזכיר בכתוב שלמעלה אל תתן לחית: in the following manner: נפש תורן והוא החיה הרביעית שהתפלל עליה נער חית קנה וגו' ועליו שהזכיר משה ע"ה: that is, He (namely King David) has hereby called the Edomite kingdom Naval, that is, a Fool (or Simpleton); and this is that of which he made mention in the preceding verse (Ps 7:19, or according to others Ps 7:20), when he says: "Do not give the soul of your turtledove to the beast," which is the fourth beast, against which he prayed (Ps 68:31): "Rebuke the beast in the reeds, etc." Against the same, Moses also, upon whom be peace (Deut 32:21), declared: "I will provoke them to anger with a foolish people."

Forty-second, it is also called קרנות עשר Keranóth éser, that is, the ten horns, which name is taken from Dan 7:7, where it is written that the fourth beast, which, as has been indicated above, is supposed to signify the Roman Empire, has ten horns, and for this reason Christendom is likewise so named. That it is called thus can be seen in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 84. col. 2., under the title Schácharis schel jom kippur, in a prayer which begins איומה Ajúmma bachár, wherein the Jews pray as follows: קרנות עשר יעקר שתולים: that is, He (namely, GOD) will uproot the ten horns, in order to honor those who are planted in His house (that is, the Israelites). These words are explained in the Commentary as follows: קרנות עשר פירוש מלכות הרשעה שהיא: קרן לשון מלכות ופשוטו מלכות הרשעה מכנה בשם קרנות ע"ש דכתיב בדניאל ז' ואלו חיויא רביעאה וגו' וקרנין עשר לה וגו' והיא מלכות הרשעה אחרון: that is, the ten horns signify the Malchúth barescháa, or the godless kingdom; for the word "horn" signifies a kingdom. According to the plain (and literal) sense, however, the godless kingdom is called by the name "horns," because it is written in Dan 7:7: And behold the fourth beast, etc., and it had ten horns, etc., by which the godless kingdom in (this) last captivity is to be understood. And in the second part of the aforementioned Machsor, they pray at fol. 66. col. 2. in a prayer which begins Appik rénen veschirim, under the title Józér lejóm schéni schél Pésach, in the following manner: קרנות עשר שברתי לאומים תחתן הדברתי: that is, I will break the ten horns and bring the nations under you. These words are explained in the Commentary upon them in the following manner: קרנות עשר: זו מלכות אדום דכתיב בדניאל וקרנין עשר לה: that is, the ten horns signify the Edomite kingdom, for it is written (Dan 7:7): and it had ten horns. And the aforementioned Commentary continues further: כשישבר הק"בה קרנא ומלכות, עשיר של עשוי אז ידבר עמים תחתו, that is, when the holy and blessed GOD will break the horn and the tenth kingdom of Esau, then He will bring the nations under us.

Forty-third, it is called דומה Duma, which means a silence, and derives from דום Dum, which signifies to be still or to be silent; and this name is taken from Isa 21:11, where it denotes a region, and it is written: "This is the burden concerning Duma," upon which Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary: דומה היא אדום, that is, Duma signifies Edom. The reason for this opinion is taught by Rabbi Beebai in his book Cad hakkemach, fol. 19, col. 4, in the following manner: כנה מלכות אדום בלשון דומה לפי שישאל שריון בגלות בינם ואין גולה את אזנם קצם חמנם וקרא הכתוב לצור שהיא רומי דומה ואיפשר לומר שקראה דומה מפני שכל גליות שגלו ישראל נתגלה הקץ שלהן והיו יודעים זמן כל אחד ואחד אבל הגלות הזה של אדום אין מי שמגלה זה הקץ. ועוד נקרא דומא לטעם אחר לפי שארבע מלכויות נמשלים לארבע חיות וכל הנביאים יחדיו מזכירים כל החיות בשמם חוץ מן החיה הרביעית דומה לטעם זה: שלא יזכרה בשמה לעולם וגו' that is, He (namely the prophet Isaiah) has called the Edomite kingdom by the word Duma, because the Israelites dwell in captivity among them (meaning the Edomites, that is, the Christians), and there is no one who reveals to them their end and the time (of their captivity); and Scripture has called Zor, that is, (the city of) Rome, Duma. It may be, however, that it was called Duma for the reason that the end of all the captivities through which the Israelites were led away captive had been revealed, so that they knew the duration of each one (how long it was to last). But as for the end of this Edomite captivity, there is no one who reveals it. It is also called Duma for yet another reason, because the four kingdoms are compared to four beasts, and all the prophets make mention of all the beasts by their names, except for the fourth beast, of which they never make mention by its name, etc.

Rabbi Isaac Abarbenel writes in his Commentary on Isaiah, fol. 38, col. 1, concerning the cited words of Isaiah as follows: הנה הנבואה הזאת אפשר לפרשה כפי דרך חז"ל על זה הגלות שאנחנו בו שהוא גלות אדום וקראו דומה לפי שאנחנו בו דוממים ושותקים כי לא נדע מתי קץ הפלאות כמו שהיו יודעים בגלות מצרים שהגביל הקב"ה ומאה ד' מאות שנה וכן גלות בבל שהבטיחם ירמיהו למלאות לחרבות ירושלים ע' שנה אפקוד אתכם וגלותנו לא נתבאר קצו. או יהיה דומה מלשון תקוה ותוחלת כמו דום לה 'התחולל לו להגיד שאפילו יתמהמה הגלות נחכה לו that is: Behold, this prophecy can be interpreted, according to the manner of our sages of blessed memory, as referring to this captivity in which we find ourselves, which is the Edomite captivity; and he (the prophet) called it Dumah, because we are silent and still within it, for we do not know when the end of the wonders will come, as it was known in the Egyptian captivity, whose duration the Holy and Blessed God had set at four hundred years. So it was also with the Babylonian captivity, in that Jeremiah promised them (namely the Jews, Jer 29:10): When the seventy years (of the desolation of Jerusalem) are completed, I will visit you. But the end of our (present) captivity is not yet known. Or else Dumah signifies a waiting and an expectation (from דָּמָם, Damám, which means to wait), as it is said (Ps 37:7): Wait upon the LORD and be patient toward Him; thereby indicating that, even though the captivity endures long, we ought nonetheless to wait upon Him.

Forty-fourth, the same is called הַב הַב Haf, that is, "Give," which name is taken from Prov 30:15. Therefore Rabbi Abraham writes in his book Zerôr hammór, fol. 120, col. 2, in the Parascha Chykkáth, concerning Edom, that is, Christendom, as follows: כְּתִיב לַעֲלוֹקָה שְׂתִי בְנוֹת הַב הַב כִּי כָךְ דֶּרֶכָם לִשְׂאוֹל מִיִּשְׂרָאֵל מְסִים וְאַרְנוֹנוֹת וְלַעֲלוֹם הֵם שׂוֹאִלִים הַב הַב וְהַעֲלוֹכָה הִיא רִמּוֹ לִיצֵר הָרַע הוּא אָדוֹם, that is: It is written (Prov 30:15): The leech has two daughters, (who say) Haf, that is, "Give"; for such is their (the Christians') custom, to demand tribute (or taxation) and toll from the Israelites, and they demand forever (and say) Haf, that is, "Give." The leech, however, signifies the evil nature, which is Edom. Concerning this, something may also be read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 220, col. 4, in the Parascha Nizzavím. Thus the Jews also pray in their Selichóth, under the title לְצוֹם גְּדָלְיָה Lezóm Gedálja, in a prayer which begins: אַחֲזוּי מַעֲבֵר הַנֶּהָר Esrachí meéver hannháar, in the following manner: הֲזֹל עִמָּךְ מֵהַב הַב כִּי עֲלִיךְ מִשְׁלִיכִים יֵהָב, that is: Deliver your people from the Haf (that is, from Christendom), for upon You they (the Israelites) cast their burden.

Forty-fifth, the same is called מַדְהֶבָה Madbéfa, which name is taken from Isa 14:4, where it is said of Babylon; and it derives from the Chaldean word דֶּהַב debäf, which means gold, and is interpreted by some as gold-greedy or gold-gathering, but by others as gold-tax or tribute. Rabbi David Kimchi writes in his commentary on this passage as follows: הוּא תוֹאֵר לְבַבֵּל שֶׁהִיָּתָה בַעֲלַת הַזָּהָב, that is: This is a surname of Babylon, which had much gold; for it had taken tribute from all lands. That Christendom is also called by this name is clearly to be seen in the Selichóth under the title לֹיָוִם שְׁכֵלִישְׁתִּי Lojóm schelischí, in a prayer which begins אֲיֵהָב עוֹל נִפְלֵאוֹתֶיךָ Ajéh col nifleothécha, wherein they pray as follows: גְּלֵאִיתִי נִשּׂוֹא עוֹל מִדְּהֶבָה נֶאֱמַת מְדוּד וְהָבָא הַכֶּאֱה רַבָּה, that is: I am weary (or sick) of bearing the yoke of the Madbéfa, which says: measure and bring much. And immediately thereafter mention is made of the Christians, against whom they complain to GOD that these same compel and force them to abandon Him and to accept the Hanged One, that is, Christ, in His place, as may be seen above in the second chapter, paginâ 89, at the eleventh name they give to Christ, where the words that follow upon it are likewise to be found. In the old Prague Selichóth, the aforementioned words are explained in the commentary as follows: טורה עלי לישא עוד עול אומה שנקראת מדהבה על שם שתמיד שם שמתמיד, that is: It is burdensome to me to bear any longer the yoke of the people that is called Madhêfa, because it always says: measure out a heaped measure, and bring money into our treasuries. In the Polish Siddûrim, however, it is to be seen quite plainly at fol. 77, col. 1, under the title Józer leschábbath revûi ácher happésach, in the commentary on a prayer which begins אלהי בך אהבק Elobái bechá echavék, inasmuch as the word Madhêfa is there explained by אומה הרשעה úmma hareshchaa, that is, the godless people, by which the Christians are understood, as has been demonstrated above at paginâ 689 in the 16th chapter. The malicious Jews are therefore vexed that they must pay protection money and toll money to the Christian authorities, and would gladly be freed from it; but where do they obtain such money, if not from the bitter sweat and blood of poor Christians, whom they seek, wherever they can, to cheat and defraud by cunning means?

Forty-sixth, it is called המדקיר Hammádkir, that is, the Stabber, or Piercer, and this appears in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 82, col. 2, under the title Józer lejóm schevûi schel Pésach, in a prayer that begins 'אשור שמרת וגו' Aschur schamáarta &c., wherein the Jews pray: ראה כי גברה יד המדקיר, that is, See that the hand of the Mádkir, that is, of the Piercer, holds power; and in the Commentario on this passage one reads: המדקיר מלכות הרשע המדקרים, that is, the Madkir or Piercer is the godless kingdom (that is, Christendom, which, as has been demonstrated above at paginâ 756 under the eleventh name they give it, is called the godless kingdom), which pierces (with its swords).

Forty-seventh, it is called, in the first part of the Prague Machsor fol. 61, col. 1, and in the Frankfurt edition fol. 43, col. 1, under the title Mulaph...

Músaph lejóm schent schel rosch haschaná, in a prayer that begins אנוסה לעזרה Anúsa leésra, בשני ברזל Schinne bársel, that is, the Iron Teeth, inasmuch as it is said: משני ברזל שועתי, that is, I have cried out from the iron teeth. This name derives from the fact that in Dan 7:7, concerning the fourth beast, by which the Jews understand the Roman monarchy, it is said that it was terrible and dreadful and exceedingly strong, and had great iron teeth. Finally, forty-eighth, the Jews sometimes give Christendom in their books the name פרס Páras, that is, Persia, or יון Javan, that is, Greece, or בבל Bavel, that is, Babylon, or ארם Aram, that is, Syria, or כוש Cusch, that is, the land of the Moors, or מואב Moab, or some other such name, and this is done to the end that Christians who read it should not notice that the matter which is written against them in this concealed manner concerns them.

Regarding the name Páras, that is, Persia: it appears in the great Basel Bible, in Rabbi Solomon Jarchi's Commentary on Isa 63:1, where he writes the following concerning the words, "Who is this that comes from Edom?": נתנבא הנביא על שאמר הק"ה שעתיד לעשות נקמה בפרס הוא עצמו בכבודו הורג את שר שלהם תחלה כענין שנאמר כי רותה בשמים חרבי ואחר כך על פרס תרד, that is: The prophet prophesies that which the holy blessed GOD has said, that He would take vengeance upon פרס, that is, Persia (which was to be called Edom), and that He Himself would slay their (namely, the Christians') prince (meaning Sammaël, who, as has already been noted more than once, is supposed to be the prince and ruler of the Christians), according to the content of what is said in Isa 34:5: "For my sword is drunk in heaven, and afterward it will come down upon Paras," that is, Persia. Here, in place of Paras or Persia, Edom ought to stand, for in Isaiah one reads: "And behold, it shall come down upon Edom." Likewise, in the Chaldean translation of Jonathan, the words of Gen 15:12, "And behold, terror and great darkness fell upon him," are translated in the Amsterdam edition, in quarto, with the threefold Targum, as follows: והוה שמשא קריבא למטמע ושינתא עמיקתא אתרמיית על אברם והא ארבע מלכוון קימין למשעבדא ית בנוי אימתא דא היא בבל קבלא דא היא מדי סגיא דא היא יון נפלה דא היא פרס, that is: And as the sun was just about to set, a deep sleep fell upon Abraham, and behold, the four kingdoms arose to bring his sons into servitude. The word "terror" signifies Babel. As for the words "great darkness," the word "darkness" signifies the Medes, and the word "great" signifies Greece, but the word "fell" signifies Paras, that is, Persia, which likewise was to be called Edom once again. The very same is also found there in the Targum Jeruschalmi, or the Hierosolymitan Chaldean translation; but in the great Basel Bible, that same Targum Jeruschalmi has Edom in place of Paras, just as in Bereschith rabba, fol. 41. col. 1., in the 44th Parascha, Edom is likewise read in this very same matter. In the book Zerór hammór, which was printed in Venice in the year 327 according to the Jewish reckoning, that is, in the year of Christ 1567, there stands at fol. 108. col. 4. in the Parascha Haasinu: ואומרו פרס ומדי וגו' that is, the people of Persia and Media, by whom the Christians are meant, as can be clearly seen above in Chapter 10, p. 506.

Further, it stands in Vajikra rabba fol. 146. col. 4., in the 13th Parascha, concerning the names of the animals mentioned in Lev 11:4-7, written as follows: משה ראה את המלכויות בעסיקן את הגמל זו בבל וגו' את השפן זו מדי וגו' את משה ראה את המלכויות בעסיקן את הגמל זו בבל וגו' ואת החזיר זו פרס וגו' that is, Moses saw the kingdoms in their nature. The camel signifies Babel, etc. The rabbit, Media, etc. The hare, Greece, etc. and the swine, Paras, that is, Persia. However, it ought also to be called Edom and not Persia, for the name "swine" is given by the Jews to Christendom, and not to Persia, as has been indicated above on page 783, etc.; for this reason it is also noted in the Commentario Matthenóth Kehúnna concerning the word Paras: על מדבר על מלכות רביעית that is, here one speaks by means of a byname of the fourth kingdom. By which fourth kingdom Christendom is understood, as has been reported above on pages 737 and 738 in connection with the second name that is given to it. Concerning this, something further may also be found in Pocokii Notis miscellaneis, pages 326 and 327.

Regarding the name Javan, that is, Greece: this name is found in the commentary of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, as well as in the commentary of Rabbi David Kimchi on the Prophet Isaiah, on the words of Isa 34:5, "For my sword is drunk in heaven, and it shall come down upon Edom," in the great Basel Bible; and Rabbi Solomon writes on this passage in the following manner: רותה בשמים חרבי להרוג שרים שלמעלה אחר כך תרד על יון למטה that is: My sword shall be drunk in heaven, to slay the highest princes (that is, Sammaël and his like), and thereafter it shall come down upon Javan, that is, Greece. Rabbi David Kimchi, however, expresses himself on this matter in the following way, stating: על מי תרד ההרב הזאת מן השמים על יון וגו' that is: Upon whom shall this sword come down from heaven? Upon Javan, that is, Greece. Thus in these two commentaries Javan is placed in the position of Edom, for from the word Edom, which stands expressly in Isaiah, Greece has been made; but in the old Venetian print it will read differently. In this same manner, in the exposition of Rabbi Meir Arama on the Psalms, which is called Meir Tebillôth, on Ps 80:14, one reads: יכרסמנה חזיר מיער הוא יון that is: A wild boar shall tear it asunder; this (wild boar) signifies Javan, that is, Greece, even though by the wild boar Christendom is understood, as may be seen above on p. 778 etc.

Regarding the name Babel, it is read in the Bench Book (fol. 15. col. 1.) under the title Semirôth lejôm Schabbath, in a prayer that begins בת עם לבן יקרא דרור וגו' Derôr jikra lebên im bath, &c., in which the Jews pray as follows: דרוך פורה בתוך בצרה וגם בבל אשר גברה נתון ונתן צר בואף ועברה that is: Tread the winepress in the midst of Bozra (that is, Rome, as was indicated above on p. 731), as well as in Babel, which has become mighty. Destroy my enemies in fury and wrath. That Babel here is to be understood as Edom, that is, Christendom, is clearly evident from Isa 63:1-3, where the treading of the winepress in Edom is mentioned. Likewise, in the Prague Machsor, in the second part, fol. 79. col. 1., the word Adina is explained as Edom, by which Christendom is understood, but in the Wilmersdorf Machsor, in the first part, fol. 196. col. 2., it is explained as Babel.

The name Aram, that is, Syria, is frequently read in place of Edom in the Rabbôth printed at Wilmersdorf; and in Bereschith rabba fol. 40. col. 4., in the 43rd Parascha, on Gen 15:9, it is written in the following manner: עגלה משולשת זו מדי וגוי ואיל משולש זו יין וגוי ותור וגוזל זו ארם חור וגוזל לא זו בבל וגוי ועז משולשת זו מדי וגוי ואיל משולש זו יין וגוי ותור וגוזל זו ארם חור וגוזל לא זו בבל וגוי, that is: The three-year-old heifer signifies Babel, &c.; the three-year-old she-goat, Media, &c.; the three-year-old ram, Greece, &c.; Vetôr vegôfal, that is, but the turtledove and the young pigeon, Aram, that is, Syria. It is a turtledove, but a gaslan, that is, a robber. The word gaslan, which means a robber, thus alludes to and plays upon the word gôfal, which means a young pigeon. Likewise, immediately thereafter, fol. 41. col. 1., Aram is found twice in place of Edom, and in Vajikra rabba fol. 146. col. 3. 4., it is found six times in both the text and the Commentario in place of Edom.

Regarding the name Cusch, that is, the land of the Moors, it appears in the thick Tephilla fol. 44. col. 3. under the title Jôzer leschabbath haggadôl, in a prayer which reads as follows: שמע לבוש כשמע מצרים משא דומה כמשא מצרים נפרעת בתכלית קץ עשירית מפתרוס בתכלית סכת עשירית באדום תפרע בתכלית קץ עשירית Cusch, that is, the land of the Moors, be heard, as the cry of Egypt was (when it was visited with the ten plagues). The burden of Duma (that is, of Christendom, as was noted above on p. 797 at the 43rd name given to it) shall be like the burden of Egypt. You (O God!) have taken vengeance upon Pathros (that is, Egypt) through the end of the tenth plague; take vengeance also upon Edom through the end of the tenth horn. That Cusch is here placed in the position of Edom is clearly indicated by what immediately follows, for what is meant by the name Cusch is shown by the two subsequent names Duma and Edom.

Concerning the name Moab, it is found in the aforementioned large Basel Bible, in the commentary of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi on Zech 13:7, where after the words "Strike the shepherd" it is written: את מלך מואב הרשעה, that is, the king of the wicked Moab; but in the large Venice Bible, which was printed in the year 307 according to the Jewish reckoning, that is, in the year 1547 according to our calendar, it reads מלכות הרשעה Malchuth bareschâa, that is, of the wicked kingdom, which signifies Christendom, as has been demonstrated above in this chapter. But let this suffice on the matter.

Chapter XVIII.

In which it is reported how many peoples, according to the teaching of the Jews, exist in the world alongside them, and who governs those peoples; and in which particular treatment is given to the chief devil Sammaël, who is said to rule over Christendom and to be its prince.

According to the teaching of the Jews, there are 70 peoples in the world besides themselves, as can be read in Rabbi Bechai's book Cad bakkemach, fol. 56, col. 4, where he writes as follows: ידוע כי ע' אומות יש בעולם ויצאו כלם איש היו כלם יוצאי ירכו של נח ומשם נפרדו הגוים/ לע' אומות שכן 'כתיב ומאלה נפרדו הגוים בארץ וגו' ועל זה אמר משה רבינו בהפרידו בני אדם וגו' 'שהם ע' : למספר בני ישראל שהם ע' נפש וגו' that is, It is known that seventy peoples are in the world, all of whom descended from seventy men, who themselves all sprang from the loins of Noah, and from there the heathens were divided into seventy peoples (who are called אומות, Ummóth or Ummós, that is, peoples, and אומות העולם, Ummoth or Ummos haolam, that is, peoples of the world, as well as עמים, Ammim, which likewise means peoples); for thus it is written (Gen 10:32): And from these the peoples of the earth were divided, etc. Concerning this our teacher Moses also speaks (Deut 32:8): When he divided the children of men, etc., who were 70 in number, according to the number of the children of Israel, of whom (as can be seen in Exod 1:5) there were seventy souls, etc. The aforementioned Rabbi Bechai likewise teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 10, col. 2, in the Parascha Noah, on the words of Gen 10:1, "This is the genealogy of the children of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth," and says the following: מן הכתוב הזה עד פרשת ויהי כל הארץ שפה אחת הדברים אחדים תמצא שבעים איש בנוק כלן תולדות של נח וכתיב בסוף הפרשה אלה משפחות בני נח לתולדותם בגוייהם ומאלה נפרדו הגוים בארץ אחר המבול ומכאן יש ללמוד כי שבעים אומות יש בעולם וכל אומה ואומה יש לה לשון בפני עצמו: That is, From this verse up to the words (Gen 11:1), "And the whole earth had one language and one speech," you will find seventy men carefully enumerated, all of whom were of Noah's lineage, and it is written at the end of the (tenth) chapter (v. 32): "These now are the generations of the children of Noah, according to their generations, among their peoples, from whom the peoples divided upon the earth after the flood"; and from this it is to be learned that there are seventy peoples in the world, and that each people has its own distinct language.

From these seventy peoples, the following is also read in the Medrasch Tillim, fol. 10. col. 2., on Ps 9: שלשה אלה: אמר לה מנה ובניו העמדותי שבעים אומות שנאמר: that is, He (namely God) said to her (to Rebecca): from Noah and his sons I have established seventy peoples, as it is said (Gen 9:19): "These are the three sons of Noah." How (did this come about?) From Japheth came fourteen, from Ham thirty, and from Shem twenty-six, which together make seventy. From these the islands of the Gentiles were divided. In the small Jalkut Rubéni, under numero 1., beneath the title Ummoth (or ummos), the following is also found from the Medrasch: 'אנשים כולם היוצאי חלציו: אומרים שנה ראה בעיניו יד אלפים ות' that is, it is said that Noah saw with his own eyes fourteen thousand and four hundred people, all of whom had come from his loins. From his three sons the seventy peoples were likewise begotten, namely from Shem twenty-six, from Japheth fourteen, and from Ham thirty.

Just as there are seventy peoples in the world, so too there are said to be seventy מלאכים Malachim, that is, angels, who are also called שרים Sarim, that is, princes, who govern these seventy peoples and are set over them. Concerning this, the following is taught in the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 20, col. 4, in the Parascha Noah: מתולדות בני נח שהיו ע' איש נפרדו הגוים ויצאו מהם אומות ע' איש ללשונם בגוי' שרים למעלה ממונים ע' אומות למטה וכל אחד ואחד מן השרים יסד לאומתו וללשונו וזנה השרים האלה חלק האומות לא כאלה חלק יעקב כי יוצר הכל הוא וכשט שהוא אלהי השמים ואלהי האלהים עליון על כלם כן לשוננו עליון על כל הלשונות ועל כן חלקנו צורנו ויסדנו שהוא יסוד לשון הקדש הוא אלהי ישראל, that is: From the lineage of the sons of Noah, who consisted of seventy men, the gentiles were divided (and separated from one another), and from them came seventy peoples, each according to its language. You already know that above there are seventy Sarim, that is, princes, who govern the seventy peoples here below, and that each of those princes is the foundation of his people and of its language. Behold, those princes are the portion of the peoples; but the portion of Jacob is not constituted in the same manner as theirs, for the Creator of all things, who is the God of heaven and a God above all gods and exalted above them all, is (Jacob's) portion. Likewise, our language is exalted above all languages; therefore the God of Israel is our portion, our rock, and our foundation, which is the foundation of the holy language.

Furthermore, the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai writes on this matter in his said commentary, fol. 85, col. 2, in the Parascha Beschállach, as follows: דע והתבונן כי כסא הכבוד הוא משפיע ברכה וכה לשבעים מלאכים הסובבים את הכסא שהם ממונים על שבעים אומות והם שרים עליהם מנהגים אותם, that is: Know and understand that the Throne of Glory bestows blessing and power upon the seventy angels who surround the Throne, who are appointed over the seventy nations and are their princes, who govern them. On this matter, see also in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 43, under the title קליפות Kelifoth (or Kelifos), from the book Scháare Zédek, fol. 2, col. 3, as follows: שבעים שרים ממונים על ע' אומות ואותם ע' שרים, סובבים חוץ לכסא הכבוד, that is: Seventy princes are appointed over the seventy nations, and those same seventy princes surround the Throne of Glory. And more on this matter can be found in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 52, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajéra, as well as in Abarbanel's book Markéveth hammischne, fol. 18, col. 3-4, and fol. 19, col. 1. The aforementioned Rabbi Menáchem also teaches on this matter in his book Taame Mizvóth (or Mizvos), fol. 29, col. 2, as follows: השם יתברך וישׂראל הם אחד, שנ' כי חלק יי עמו כי כל האמות הפקידם תחת מלאך ושר מה שאין כן בישראל שלא השליט עליהם מלאך ושר רק השם הנכבד שנאמר חלקי יי אברהם נפשי, that is: The blessed God and Israel are one, as it is said (Deut 32:9): For the LORD's portion is His people. For He has placed all nations, each one under an angel and a prince, which is not the case with Israel, since He has given no angel or prince dominion over them; rather, He alone rules over them, as it is said (Lam 3:24): The LORD is my portion, says my soul.

Regarding the proof that such angels or princes are set over the aforementioned peoples, this proof is drawn from Dan 10:13, 20, as can be read in Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 145, col. 3, in the Parascha Acharé moth, where he writes thus concerning the peoples of the world: ועוד שיש להם שרים כענין שנאמר שר פרס ושר יון והם שרים עליהם, that is: Beyond that, they also have princes, as it is said (Dan 10:20): the prince of Persia, the prince of Greece; and these are angels of the Most High, who are princes over them. The same is also to be found in the Zijóni, fol. 72, col. 2, in the aforementioned Parascha Acharé moth.

Regarding the number, that there are supposed to be seventy nations and just as many angels who rule over them: the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai writes about this in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 56, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajiggasch, on the words of Gen 46:27, "All the souls of the house of Jacob who came into Egypt were seventy souls," in the following manner: 'היו שבעים זולתי יעקב שכן פתח ויהי כל נפש יוצאי ירד יעקב ע' נפש ועמו ע' וכן פתח אספה לי שבעים איש מזקני ישראל ועם משה ע' וכן סנהדרין גדולה במקדש שבעים ועם הנשיא שעל גביהו ע' וכן באמות העולם ע' ועם ישראל ע' וכל זה דוגמא של מעלה, כנגד שבעים מלאכים הסוכבים כסא הכבוד ועם ה' אלהי ישראל ע' הם נקראים בית דינו, that is: There were seventy without Jacob, for it is written thus (Exod 1:5): "And all the souls who came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy, and with him seventy-one." Likewise it is also written (Num 11:16): "Gather unto me seventy men from among the elders of Israel," and with Moses they were seventy-one. So too the great Synedrion, or the high council in the Temple, consisted of seventy men, and with the prince who was set over them they were seventy-one. In the same manner there are seventy nations of the world, and with Israel seventy-one. And all of this is a likeness corresponding to the seventy angels who are above and surround the throne of glory, who together with the Lord, the God of Israel, make seventy-one, and they are called His council. Exactly the same is also to be found there at fol. 162, col. 2, in the Parascha Behaalotecha.

The seventy angels, however, are said to have been signified by the seventy palm trees mentioned in Exod 15:27, concerning which Rabbi Menachem of Recanati teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 74, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajeschef, in the following manner: יש כבוד למעלה מכבוד והתחתונים רמז לעליונים ושבעים נפש רומזים לשבעים מלאכים הסובבים כסא הכבוד תמרים הם ע' הממונים על האומות וזה שנ' 'ישם שתיים עשרה עינות מים ושבעים תמרים' that is: there is a glory above glory, and the lower things have a signification pointing to the higher things. The seventy souls, however (of which mention is made in Exod 1:5), have a signification pointing to the seventy angels who surround the throne of glory and are set over the nations, and this is what is said (Exod 15:25): "There were twelve springs of water and seventy palm trees." Concerning this, Rabbi Bechai also writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 82, col. 4, in the Parascha Beschallach, as follows: ושבעים תמרים הם ע' מלאכים הסובבים כסא הכבוד וממונים על ע' אומות שבעולם כל אחד ואחד that is: the seventy palm trees signify the seventy angels who surround the throne of glory and are set over the seventy nations of the world, and each one is appointed over his own people.

Regarding the time when the aforementioned seventy angels were appointed over the seventy peoples: this is said to have occurred at the time of the division, during the construction of the Tower of Babylon, concerning which the following is written in the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 41, col. 3, 4, in the Parascha Noach, on the words of Gen 10:5, "By these were the coastlands of the nations divided": בפסוק ויה' נרמז כי בדור הפלגה נתן לכל אומה חלקה מן הארץ ושר אחד למעלה עליה ובין כולם שבעים והם שנצבים ענפים מן האילן העליון שבעים שרים הסובבים כסא הכבוד והם הנקראים בשיר השירים השומרים הסובבים בעיר כי על ידיהם באים הגזירות של מעלה והם שומרים ומליצים כל אחד על אומתו ונשאר ישראל חלק י"י מן האומות שנ' 'כי חלק י"י עמו כי יעקב בחבל לו יה וכתוב חלקי י"י אמרה נפשי, העם בחר לנחלה לו. ומן הארצות ארץ ישראל שאין עליה' that is, in this verse it is indicated that at the time of the division (of the peoples at the building of the Tower of Babylon) each people was given its portion of the earth, as well as a prince set over it from above, so that among them there are seventy (princes), who are seventy branches from the uppermost tree, and seventy princes who surround the throne of glory; and these same are called in the Song of Solomon (Song 3:3) the watchmen who go about the city, for through them the decrees come from above, and each one of them guards his people and is its advocate. Thus Israel remains as God's portion from among the peoples, as it is said (Deut 32:9): "For the LORD's portion is His people." (So also it stands at Ps 135:4): "For the LORD has chosen Jacob for Himself." And (Lam 3:24) it is written: "The LORD is my portion, says my soul." (So also Ps 33:12 is read:) "The people whom He has chosen as His inheritance." But of the lands, He has chosen for Himself the land of Israel, over which there is no prince and ruler except the praised and blessed God; and this is the mystery (of the words of Dan 9:19): "For Your city and Your people are called by Your name."

These seventy angels are also said to be the gods of those peoples over whom they are appointed, concerning which it is written in the book Maaréchet ha'elabúth (or Maaréches ha'elóbus) fol. 265, on the second side, in the text called Scháár hasché'm, as follows: מע' ענפי האילן משתלשלים שבעים שרים ע' שרים הממונים על ע' אומוות והשרים האלה הם הנקראים אלהי העמים השם הנכבד הוא אלהי האלהים והוא שרן של ישראל הם עמו ונחלתו that is: From the seventy branches of the tree hang the seventy princes who are appointed over the seventy peoples, and these same princes are called the gods of the peoples; but the glorious God is a God of gods, and the prince of the Israelites, and they are His people and His inheritance. Rabbi Menachem Zijoni also teaches concerning this in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 105, col. 1, in the Parascha Haasinu, in the following manner: דע כאשר הובדלו ע' לשונות לע' אומות בזמן הפלגה איש איש ללשונו למשפחותם לגויהם נתן השם ית' חלק לכל אומה ואומה מכדור הארץ שהם שבע אקלימים כפי מאמר חוברי שמים וכל אקלים נחלק לעשרה שהם ע' נתייחדו אז הגוים והארצות כל אחד לשר ידוע והם נקראים אלהי עמים וכן נחלקו ע' אומות לע' שרים ולא מצא האל ית' חלק בכולם לפי שהוא טהור על כן אינם בני גילו ומין במינו אבל יעקב חבל נחלתו that is: Know that at the time of the dispersion, when the seventy languages were distributed among the seventy peoples, and each people was separated according to its language, according to their families and according to their nations, the blessed God gave to each and every people a portion of the globe of the earth, which, according to the statement of the observers of the heavens (or astrologers), consists of seven climates, and each climate is divided into ten parts, which according to the seven climates makes seventy parts. At that time each people and land was assigned to a certain prince, and these same princes are called the gods of the peoples. Thus the seventy peoples were divided among the seventy princes, and the blessed God found no portion among all of them, because He is pure; therefore they are not children of His likeness, and no kind of His kind; but Jacob is the portion of His possession, and a pure one found another pure one; and thus it is said (Ps 135:4): For the Lord has chosen Jacob for Himself. For this reason they are also called Elohim, that is, gods, as can be seen in the small Jalkut Rubéni, under the title Sachúth (or Sóchus), number 5, and in the Zijóni, fol. 49, col. 4; and the Jews are forbidden to curse them, as may be read in the Jalkut chádasch fol. 78, col. 1, number 32, under the title Chattaim. They are also called Elohim acherim, that is, other gods, in Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 59, col. 3, in the Parascha Jethro.

These seventy princes are also supposed to be God's council, and God is supposed to have spoken the words of Gen 11:7, "Come, let us go down and confuse their language there," to them; concerning which, in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 162, col. 2, in the Parashah Behaalothecha, it is written as follows: אמר הק"ב לשבעים מלאכים הסובבים כסא that is: The holy blessed God said to the seventy angels who surround the throne of His glory, "Come, let us confuse their language"; and these same are the council of the holy blessed God. So too in that which was indicated shortly before from the aforementioned Bechai, fol. 56, col. 1, from the Parashah Vaggash, it may be seen that they are supposed to be God's council.

Concerning the confusion of languages, the following is read in the little book Pirke Rabbi Eliezer, in the 24th chapter: רבי שמעון אומר קרא הק"ה לשבעים מלאכים הסובבים כסא כבודו ואמר להם באו ונבלבל את לשונם. ומנין שה"קבה ירד אליהם שנאמר הבה נרדה ארדה אין בתיב אלא נרדה ומנין שהפיל גורלות ביניהם שנאמר בהנחל עליון גוים ובנפל גורלו של הק"ה על אברהם ועל זרעו שנאמר כי חלק יי' עמו אבי הק"ה חבל וגורל זה שנפל עלי רצתה נפשי שנאמר חבלים נפלו לי בנעימים וירד הק"ה ושבעים המלאכים הסובבים כסא כבודו ובלבל את לשונם לשבעים גוים ולשבעים לשון כל אחד ואחד that is: Rabbi Simeon says: the Holy and Blessed God called to the seventy angels who stand round about the throne of His glory, and said to them: Come, and let us confuse their language. But from where is it proven that the Holy and Blessed God descended to them? Because it is said (Gen 11:7): Come, let us go down. It is not written: I will go down, but rather: let us go down. But from where is it proven that He cast lots among them? Because it is said (Deut 32:8): When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance. At that time the lot of the Holy and Blessed God fell upon Abraham and his seed, as it is said (Deut 32:9): For the Lord's portion is His people. The Holy and Blessed God said: in this portion and lot which has fallen to me I take delight, as it is said (Ps 16:6): The lot has fallen unto me in pleasant places. But the Holy and Blessed God descended with the seventy angels who surround the throne of His glory, and confused their language into seventy peoples and seventy languages, each one into a people with its own script and language, and He set an angel over each and every people, etc. In the Chaldean translation of Jonathan on Gen 11:7-8, the following is also found concerning the confusion of languages: אמר יי' לשבעין מלאכיא דקיימין קומוי אתון כדון ונחות ונערבבה תמן לישנהון דלא ישמעון אינש לישן חבריה ואתגלי מימרא דיי' 'עלוי קרתא ועמיה שבעין מלאכיא כל קבל שבעין עממא וכל חד וחד לישן עממה ומישם כתיבה בידיה וכדרינן מלהון על אנפי כל ארעא לשבעין לישנין ולא הוה ידע חד מה דיימר חבריה והוּו קטלין דין לדין ופסקו מלמבני קרתא: that is: God spoke to the seventy angels who stand before Him: come now, and let us go down and confuse their language there, so that no one may understand his companion's language. And the Word of the Lord appeared over the city, and with it the seventy angels, corresponding to the seventy peoples, and each one had the language of his people and the record of its script in his hand, and He (namely God) scattered them from there over the whole earth into seventy languages, and the one did not know what the other said, and they slew one another, and they ceased to build the city.

Mordecai is said to have understood all seventy languages, concerning which the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Megilla fol. 15. col. 2: מרדכי מיושבי לשכת הגזית היה והיה יודע בשבעים לשון that is, Mordecai was one of those who dwelt in the court built of hewn stones (in which the judges of the great Sanhedrin, or council, resided), and he understood the seventy languages. Something on this subject is also to be found in the tractate Shekalim fol. 7. col. 1. Likewise, in the tractate Sota fol. 36. col. 2. and in Rabbi Bachya's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 21. col. 1., in the Parashat Noach, it is read of Joseph that he too understood the said seventy languages. And in the Maase Book it is stated in chapter 143 that Rabbi Channina also knew such languages, which he had learned from a spirit that had dwelt with him in the form of a frog. Likewise, it is reported in chapter 193 of the aforementioned Maase Book that another person learned the aforesaid seventy languages, as well as the languages of animals and birds, from the Leviathan, the king of the fishes, and immediately thereafter spoke with two ravens, one of which is said to have revealed to him a great treasure.

These seventy princes are also said to move the Globos caelestes, or celestial spheres, concerning which the following is written in Abarbanel's book Majene jeschua, fol. 69, col. 4, in the second Tamar of the eleventh Majan, where these princes are discussed: הרא"ב פירש בענין השרים האלה שהם הכוכבים המזלות כי יש לכל אומה ולשון ולכל עיר ועיר מזל מושל לו משפיע עליו כפי ההשגה הכוללת ויותר נראה דעת הרמב"ן בפירוש התורה שהשרים האלה הם שכלים נפרדים נקראים מלאכים ומניעיהם את הגלגלים וגו': that is, Rabbi Aben Ezra has interpreted the matter of these princes as follows: that they are the stars and planets, since every people, every language, and every city has a constellation that rules over it and exerts its influence upon it, as is generally understood. However, I find the opinion of Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman, in his commentary on the Law (or the five books of Moses), more satisfactory: that such princes are Intelligentiae separatae, or separated spirits, which are called spiritual angels and which move the (celestial) spheres, &c. For this reason they are also called the souls of these spheres in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 206, col. 1, in the Parascha Schöpfungetim, with these words: כבר הודענו כי יש למזלות שרים ינהיגו אותם הם נפשות לכדורי הגלגלים, that is, We have already shown that the constellations have princes who govern them, and these are the souls of the spheres. Likewise, in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 9, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschith, one reads: המלאכים הם נפש לגלגלים, that is, The angels are the soul of the spheres.

Further, it is said of the aforementioned seventy princes that each one provides for his people, gives them their sustenance and rest, and that on New Year's Day judgment is held over them and their subject peoples, as also that they were all once bound. That each one provides for his people and procures their sustenance is written in the book Avodath (or Avodas) bakkodesch, in the twelfth chapter of the third part, which is called Chelek battachlich, fol. 70. col.

2., as follows: כשישראל עושין רצונו של מקום אין הנהגתם על ידי אמצעי כי אם בכבודו ובעצמו מנהיגם ומשגיח בהם ואם לשאר האומות יש שרים וכל אומה מתנהגת ומושגחת על ידי השר שלה הכל מכח עם אדני שהוא הצרכן הגדול המפרנס ומחלק להם כדי פרנסתם והם מפרנסים שאר האומות שהם ממונים עליהם, that is: When the Israelites do the will of GOD, they are not governed through an intermediary, but GOD governs them Himself and provides for them. Although the other peoples also have princes, and each people is governed and provided for by its prince, yet all of this happens through the power of the name of the Lord, the great Sustainer (or Preserver), who maintains them and distributes to them their sufficient sustenance, whereupon they in turn nourish the other peoples over whom they are appointed. In the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 1., under the title Nedibbim, the following is also read on this matter: כולם הם ע' ומקיפים חוץ לפרוכת להשליך, לאומות העולם פרנסה, that is: There are seventy of them (namely the princes) in all, and they surround the curtain on the outside, in order to cast sustenance to the peoples of the world (and to procure it for them). Therefore it is taught in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 100. col. 1., in the Parashah Acharé moth (or mos): ידוע שהקדוש ברוך הוא מחלק פרס לע' שרים של מעלה והם יחלקו לעבדיהם שהם: אותם, that is: It is known that the holy blessed GOD distributes gifts among the seventy supreme princes, and that they distribute these among their servants, who are those peoples that stand under their dominion. In the book Emek hammélech, fol. 173. col. 3., at the end of the thirteenth chapter, under the title Scháar ólam habbería, the following is also found on this matter: כנגד ע' שרים אלו יש ע' שרים בסטרא אחרא שהם שרי אומות: וכל אחד משפיע לאומתו הי"ד עליונים של קליפה הם של שער וי"ג גלויים אליהם באמונתם הי"ד מזרחיים הם פרס ומדי וי"ג אומות נכללים באמונתם ושל דרום הם ישמעאל וי"ג אומות נכללים באמונתם והצפונים הם בבל וי"ג אומות נכללים באמונתם וכשהם לוחמים למטה לוחמים גם למעלה אלו השרים, that is: Corresponding to these seventy princes (who guard the chariot and are holy angels) there are seventy princes on the other side, who are the princes of the peoples, each of whom provides for his people; and the fourteen chief ones of such husks or shells (that is, of these seventy spirits, who are called husks by the Kabbalists, the princes) are from Seir, and thirteen (peoples) adhere to their faith. The fourteen toward the rising of the sun are the (princes) of Persia and Media, and thirteen peoples are comprised under their faith. Those toward the south are the (princes) of Ishmael (that is, of the Ishmaelites, or Turks), and thirteen peoples are devoted to their faith. Those toward the north are the (princes) of Babel, and thirteen peoples are contained under their faith. Now when those (peoples) wage war down below, these princes also wage war above.

That these seventy princes provide peace to the peoples subject to them is written by Rabbi Bechai in his book Cad hakkémach, fol. 42. col. 4. under the title Oth (or Os) Mem, in the following manner: הכוכבים חלק האומות חלק ישראל ששאר האומות חלק הכוכבים מפני ששאר האומות חלק הכוכבים והמזלות ולא כאלה חלק יעקב כי יוצר הכל הוא לקחם לחלקו ית' לנך השמירה חלה בהם י'ותר מכל העמים וכענין שכתוב כי כל העמים ילכו איש בשם אלהיו ואנחנו נלך בשם ה' אלהינו לעולם ועד ולכן אמר דוד בבאן שומר ה' את כל אוהביו ואמר זה על ישראל כי האומות יש להם שרים למעלה ממנוים עליהם והם המשיפיעים להם טובה ושלוה והם השומרים הסובבים בעיר ואין הקב"ה שומר שלהם אבל למי שהוא שומר לישראל שהם אוהביו כי that : ישראל בלבד הם אוהביו מכל האומות כי הם זרעו של אברהם שנשבה במדת האהבה is, since the remaining peoples (who exist alongside the Jews) are the portion of the stars and planets, but the portion of Jacob is not constituted like those, for the Creator of all things has taken them (namely, the descendants of Jacob) as His blessed portion, therefore the protection (of God) remains over them more than over all peoples, just as it is written (Mic 4:5): For all peoples shall walk, each one in the name of his God, but we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and evermore. Therefore David says here (Ps 145:20): The Lord protects all those who love Him; and he said this concerning the Israelites, for the peoples have princes above who are set over them, who provide them with good things and peace, and those same princes are the watchmen who go around the city; but God is not their (that is, the peoples') protector. Whom then does He protect? The Israelites, who love Him; for the Israelites alone love Him among all peoples, since they are the seed of Abraham, who is renowned for the virtue of love. Hence it is read in the Sohar printed at Sulzbach, in the Parascha Schemoth col. 17, on the words of Eccl 7:16, "And a wicked man who lives long in his wickedness," as follows: דא סמאל דאוריך שקט : דא סמאל דאוריך שקט that is, this (wicked one) is the Sammaël, who prolongs peace and quiet life for Edom (that is, for Christendom).

That the nations, together with their subject peoples, are judged on New Year's Day is taught in the book Schääre ora, printed at Mantua, fol. 65, col. 1, as follows: והאמני כל האומות והשרים שלהם הנקראים אלהים כולם באים בראש השנה: להיותם נדונים לפני יי' ית' ואם לא נהגו האומות כהוגן אזי לוקין השרים שלהם וגורעים להם השפע והטובה שהיה יי' ית' נותן להם, וכשלוקה השר של האומה נופלת האומה וזהו שאמר הנביא יפקוד יי' על צבא המרום במרום ועל מלכי האדמה באדמה וזהו שאמרו ז"ל אין אומה נופלת אלא אם כן נופל שרה תחלה והטעם כי כפי הדין שיפסקו על שר של אותה האומה כך מקבלת אומתו לטוב ולרע וגו' וכל מה שאומות העולם פושעים לוקין על פשעם השרים שלהן וזה שאמר שרו של אבימלך מלך פלשתים ואחשף גם אנכי אותך מחטו לי מחטו לי חסר אלף כלומר שאמר לו השר דע כי משעה שחטאת שלקחת את שרה אשת אברהם דנו אותי בבית דין של מעלה ומכניסים בי מחטים וקוצים ואני בצער גדול , כי אלהים זה שדבר עם אבימלך היה שרו של אבימלך היה, that is: Know and believe that all nations, together with their princes, who are called Elobim (that is, gods), come at the beginning of the year (or on New Year's Day) to be judged before the blessed God; and when the nations have not conducted themselves properly, their princes are struck, and the abundance (of sustenance) and the good which the blessed God had given them is diminished (or taken away). When also a nation's prince is struck, the nation falls; and this is what the prophet says (Isa 24:21): The Lord will punish the host on high in the heights, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And this is what our sages of blessed memory have said: No nation falls unless its prince falls first. The reason is that according to the judgment which is pronounced over a nation's prince, that nation likewise receives good or evil, etc. Whatever sins the nations of the world commit, their princes are struck on account of those sins; and this is what the prince of Abimelech, king of the Philistines, said (Gen 20:6): Therefore I also withheld you, לי מהטו mecható li, that is, from sinning against me. And לי מהטו mecható li is written without Aleph (and not מהטאו mecható) in order to signify thereby that the prince said to him: Know that from the hour in which you sinned and took Sarah, the wife of Abraham, I was condemned in the heavenly court, and they have pierced me with מחטים וקוצים mechatím vekózim, that is, with needles and thorns, so that I have suffered great pain. For the Elohim (that is, GOD) who spoke with Abimelech was the prince of Abimelech. It is thus foolishly proven here that Abimelech's prince or angel was pierced with needles, because the word mecható, which means "to sin," corresponds fairly closely in pronunciation to the word mechatím, which means "needles." And shortly thereafter the same passage continues: ועתה התבונן כי כל אומה ואומה משבעים אומות נדונת כל השנה בבית דין שלה והוא השר של אותה אומה ונקרא אותו השר על זה אלהים. ובראש השנה נדונים כל השרים הנקראים אלהים וכל האומות שלהם בבית דין של יה"ו שהוא אלהים אמת. נמצאו אלהי האומות גם הם נדונים. ואע"פ שהם דנים את האומות. וזהו סוד שאמר הכתוב כי יה"ו אלהים, that is: Consider now that each and every nation among the seventy nations is judged throughout the year by its own authority, namely its prince; for this reason that same prince is called Elohim (that is, a GOD). At the beginning of the year, however, all the princes who are called Elohim (that is, gods), together with all their peoples, are judged in the court of GOD, who is the true Elohim (that is, GOD). Judgment is thus held even over the gods of the nations themselves, although they judge the nations; and this is the mystery of what Scripture says (Deut 10:17): For the Lord your GOD is a GOD of all gods, that is, He is a judge who judges the gods of the nations.

That they were all once bound is attested in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 17. col. 3. numero 129, under the title Abraham, where one reads as follows: רבי חנינא בן פפא אמר כל מה שהיה אברהם אבינו עוקד את יצחק למטה היה הק"ב כופת את שריהם של אומות למעלה והיו כפותים עד שחטאו ישראל בימי ירמיהו והותרו אלו הכפותים וזהו שנאמר : כי סירים סבוכים that is, Rabbi Channina, the son of Papa, has said: just as our father Abraham bound Isaac down here below (when he wished to sacrifice him, as is to be read in Gen 22), so too did the holy and blessed GOD bind the princes of the nations up above, and they remained bound until the Israelites sinned in the time of Jeremiah, whereupon those who had been bound were set loose again; and this is what is said (Nah 1:10): "For the thorns are entangled with one another." This is also to be found in the Jalkut Shimoni on the Prophet Nahum, fol. 82. col. 4. numero 1, though with somewhat altered wording. Indeed, at the time when Isaac was bound, others are said to have been bound as well, concerning which the aforementioned Jalkut chadasch fol. 81. col. 4. numero 22, under the title Jitzchak, contains the following: כשעקד אברהם את יצחק אז כל ברואי מעלה ומטה נתעסקו בעקידת כל בעלי דינין מאדם נעקד לפני צדק מיכאל כהן גדול של מעלה עקדו לגבריאל ואריה שבמרכבה עקד את השור ועלה על המזבח החיצון : that is, when Abraham had bound Isaac, all creatures above and below were occupied with binding all adversaries. The (planet) Mars was bound before the (planet) Jupiter. Michael, who is high priest up above (in heaven), bound Gabriel; and the lion that is upon the chariot bound the ox, and ascended upon the outermost altar.

Since now the oft-mentioned seventy princes, who are supposed to rule over the seventy peoples, as has been shown, are angels, it is to be known that they are not good but evil angels, and are to be regarded as nothing but devils. Therefore Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman writes, in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 59, col. 3, in the Parascha Jethro, concerning the heathens and how they fell from one idolatry into another, in the following manner: אחר כך חזרו לעבוד את השדים שהם רוחות כי גם מהם יש ממונים על האומות שיהיו הם אחר כך חזרו לעבוד את השדים שהם רוחות כי גם מהם יש ממונים על האומות שיהיו הם : that is, Thereafter they (namely the heathens) turned to the service of devils, who are spirits; for some of these also are set over the peoples, so that they may be lords of that land (which is subject to them) and do harm to their enemies.

For this reason they are also called שרי הטומאה Sáre battúma, that is, princes of impurity, and מלאכי חבלה Maláche chabbalá (or chabbólo), that is, angels of destruction. The name Sáre battúma, that is, princes of impurity, is found in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 121, col. 2, in the 152nd chapter, under the title Schaar Kirjath (or Kirjas Arba), where the destruction caused by the sin of Adam is treated, and the following passage occurs: ואפילו אויר ארץ העמים נתקלקל : גם כן בצבא שרי הטומאה שהם מטה ולקח כל אחד חלקו וארצו תאמר אשר חלק ה' להם : that is, Yes, even the air of the land of the peoples has been corrupted by the host of the Sáre battuma, that is, the princes of impurity, who are properly the idols, and each one has taken his portion and his land, for it is said (Deut 4:19): Which the LORD your God has distributed among them.

The name Maläche chabbála, that is, Angels of Destruction, appears in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 99, col. 2, num. 25, under the title Jamim tobim, with these words: כגוונא דמי המבול כתיב בהו ותנה התיבה בחדש השביעי כן בחדש תשרי שישראל : עוסקין במצוות הרבה יש מנוחה למלאכי חבלה שהם שרי האומות שנמשלו למים של מבול : that is, just as it is written of the waters of the Flood (Gen 8:4): "And the ark came to rest in the seventh month," so too in the month of Tischri (that is, in September) there is great rest for the Maläche chabbála, that is, the Angels of Destruction, who are the princes of the nations, who are compared to the waters of the Flood. So too is it taught in the little book Afkath (or Afkas) rochel, fol. 5, col. 2, of the Augsburg printing, as follows: כשמפיל הק"ב את סמאל למטה : יפלו עמו כל מלאכי חבלה ויהיו לכלה דכתיב כי אעשה כלה בכל הגוים אשר הדחתך שמה : that is, when the holy and blessed God will cast Sammael down, all the Maläche chabbála, that is, the Angels of Destruction, will fall with him and come to nothing, as it is written (Jer 30:11): "For I will make a full end of all the nations to which I have driven you"; and the same judgment applies to their princes as well.

These are also called קליפות Kelifoth (or Kelifos), that is, shells or rinds, though a single one is called קליפה Kelifa, as can be seen in the book Scheva tal, fol. 23, col. 3, where mention is made of that which God made in the beginning, and where the following is taught: ובו נכללים הקליפות וכחות הטומאה ע' שרים המשפיעים : that is, Among these are also comprehended the Kelifoth, and the powers of impurity, the seventy princes who bestow abundantly upon the seventy idolatrous nations (and have their influence over them). And in fol. 80, col. 3 of the aforementioned book Scheva tal, the following is read concerning the seventy nations: הם מקבלים מיטב השפע משידהם : that is, These receive the finest abundance (and the most excellent gifts) from their princes, who are the outermost Keliphoth or shells, which dwell outside the holy sphere, for the wicked walk round about. So too it is written in the book Maarébeth ha'elabúth (or Maaréches ha'elobús) fol. 60, col. 1, as follows: הקליפות שהם שרי האומות סביב : הארץ : that is, The Keliphoth, which are the princes of the nations, round about the earth.

They are called Keliphóth, that is, shells or rinds, because they are on the outside around the heaven, just as a shell is around a fruit. Therefore, in the book Scháare Zédek, fol. 2. col. 4., the following is read: דוד יתברך שוכן בתוך : הפנימי והשרים מקיפים כסאו כרמון הפרי הקליפות : that is, the blessed Lord dwells in the inner palace, and the princes surround His throne, just as the shells surround the fruit. And in the great Jalkut Rubéni, it is taught at fol. 70. col. 2. in the Parascha Vajéschef, from the aforementioned book Scháare Zédek: שבעים שרים ממונים על שבעים אומות ואותן שבעים שרים סובבים חוץ לכסא הכבוד והם נקראים קליפה: that is, seventy princes are appointed over the seventy peoples, and those same seventy princes are the mystery of the shells. Shortly thereafter it is also reported in the same place that these seventy princes surround the chariot, and that they are all called קליפות חיצונים Keliphóth chizoním, that is, the outward shells.

Since, as was just mentioned a short while before, these seventy princes are devils, they are also called in the book Schéva tal, fol. 41. col. 3. צד הטומאה Zad battúma, that is, the impure side, and כחות הטומאה Cochóth (or Cóchos) battuma, that is, the powers of impurity; for it stands there: that is, the Keliphoth are the side of impurity. And shortly thereafter follows: ח'ו' אז כשישראל חוטאים: that is, when the Israelites sin (God forbid), then the Keliphoth, which are the powers of impurity, receive the best of the abundant outpouring, and impurity gains the upper hand.

Furthermore, they are also called צללים Zelalim, that is, Shadows, and נדיפים Nedífm, that is, Princes, as well as השומרים הסבבים בעיר Haschchómerim bassoffém baïr, that is, the Watchmen who go about in the city. The name Zelalim is found in Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 177, col. 2, in the Parascha Schelách-lechá, where the following is read: אמרו במדרש שיר השירים ונסו הצללים אלו שרי אומות העולם: that is, In the Médrasch Schir Haschirim (that is, in the allegorical commentary on the Song of Solomon) it is said (concerning the words of Song 2:17), "And the Zelalim (that is, Shadows) flee away": these are the princes of the nations of the world, and their angels, who are the shadow over them. The same is also to be read in the Zijoni, fol. 82, col. 4. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 166, col. 1, in the Parascha Schelách lechá, concerning the words of Num 14:9, "Their shadow has departed from them," the following is written: יכנה הכח שיש להם: that is, The power which they (namely, the nations) have above is called by the name Shadow, because it protects the people over which it is set, just as the shadow protects from the sun. Furthermore, in the book Cad Hakkémach, fol. 49, v. 4, under the title Oth Samech, the following is also read: צמח במדרש שיר השירים רבה רמז: that is, In the Médrasch rábba on the Song of Solomon it is said that the word Shadow, in the words of Song 2:17, "And the Shadows flee away," signifies the princes of the nations of the world; for the power that governs a nation is called Zel, that is, Shadow.

The name Nedifim appears in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 207, col. 2, in the Parascha Schóphetim, where he teaches as follows: באר דוד ע"ה ואמר כי לא יבטח בדם הידוע ולא בנדיבים שהם שבעים שרי האומות : that is, David, upon whom be peace, has explained it and said that one should not place one's trust in the well-known man (by whom the Rabbi understands Christ) nor in the Nedifim, who are the seventy princes of the nations.

The name Haschómerim hašófefim bâir, that is, watchmen who go about in the city, is found in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 41, col. 3, in the Parascha Nóach, where he writes the following concerning the words of Gen 10:5, "From these the islands of the heathen were spread abroad, etc.": בפסוק זה נרמז כי בדור הפלגה נתן לכל אומה חלקה : מן הארץ ושר אחד למעלה עליה וכן כולם שבעים והם שבעים ענפים מן האילן העליון שבעים שרים הסובבים כסא הכבוד והם הנקראים בשיר השירים השומרים הסובבים בעיר כי על שם : that is, in this verse it is indicated that at the time of the division (at the building of the Babylonian tower) each nation was given its portion of the earth and one prince set over it from above, which princes number seventy in all, and these are the seventy branches of the uppermost tree, the seventy princes who surround the throne of glory, and these are called in the Song of Solomon (Song 3:3) the watchmen who go about in the city; for through them come the supreme decrees and counsels, and each one of them guards his people and is its advocate.

Among the aforementioned princes, Sammaël is said to be the foremost at the present time; for this reason, in the book Schené luchóth habberith (or lúchos hábberis) fol. nun, he is called the head of the princes. So too in the Rabbóth (or Rábbos), in Devarím rábba, fol. 247. col. 2. in the Parascha Vesóth habberachá, the following is read concerning him: הוא ראש משהדים עתה : that is, he is מלאך, that is, the wicked angel Sammaël is the head of all devils. And shortly thereafter in the same place follows: אין לך רשע בכל : that is, there is no wicked one among all the devils like Sammaël. He is also named in the book Emek hammélech fol. 83. col. 2. in the ninth chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, the following is further written concerning him: מלך מלכים על כל שרי המושחית, that is, a king of kings over all the princes of destruction. And fol. 85. col. 2. in the 16th chapter, under the aforementioned title Scháar Kirjáth arba, the following is further written concerning him: כל התחתונים העליונים השמאליים : כולם תחת ממשלת סמאל מלך : מלכותן ואצילותיה מתפשט על כל השדים ועל כל החיילים (that is, the impure) side stand under the dominion of Sammaël, the king of kingdoms, and his emanatio, or outflowing, extends over all the princes and over all the hosts, all of whom run at his command, etc. So too one reads in the book Scháare óra fol. 48. col. 3.: ראש כל הכתות רעות הוא סמאל: that is, Sammaël is the head of all evil hosts. In the Jalkut chádascch, it is likewise taught fol. 109. col. 3. numero 74., under the title Keschafim: שר של עמלק הוא ראש: that is, the prince of Amalek (namely Sammaël, as will be shown below in this chapter) is the head of the Keliphòth, or husks.

Regarding the origin of the name Sammaël, the following is written in the 30th chapter of the second part of the book Mórèb nevochím, fol. 109. col. 1. in the Commentario Schem tof: הנכונה מהדרך הנכונה: that is, Sammaël is so named (from סמא Simmé, which means to blind) because he blinds man and turns him away from the right path. And this is also found there in the Commentario Ephodí. Rabbi Isaac Karo teaches the following on this matter in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, Toledóth Jizchak fol. 76. col. 1. in der Parascha Acharé moth (or mós): רע שסמאל יחדיו שמו על ענינו: שהוא סם המות ועוד שעומד לשמאלו של אדם ועוד נגזר מלשון סמיא לפי שמקבל שוחד ונחב.

יצר: that is, Know that the name of Sammaël indicates his nature; for he is Sam hammáveth (or hammóves), that is, a poison of death (or a deadly poison). He also stands at the left side of man (which is called Semól). Furthermore, he is named from the word Sáme (which means a blind man) because he accepts bribes, for it is written (Exod 23:8 and Deut 16:19): The bribe makes blind. More of the same kind is also to be found in the Parascha Acharé móth. That he accepts bribes, however, will be treated in what follows.

Otherwise, in the Jewish books, yet other names are given to Sammaël. First, he is called שטן Satan, as may be read in the book Móre nevochím, in the 30th chapter of the second part, fol. 109. col. 1., where it is written as follows: הנה: that is, Behold, it has already been explained to you that Sammaël is Satan. And in the Commentario Schem tof on this passage, the following is taught: נקרא סמאל שטן בעבור שמשטין האדם מדרך טובה לדרך רעה: that is, Sammaël is called Satan because he leads man astray from the good path onto the evil one.

Second, he is called יצר הרע Jézer hará, that is, the evil inclination; hence it stands in the small Jalkut Rubéni, num. 57. under the title Sammaël: יצר הרע: הוא, that is, the evil inclination is the Sammaël. More on this will appear in what follows.

Third, he is called מלאך המות Málach hammáveth (or hammóves), that is, the Angel of Death, and it is written of him in the Talmudic Tractate Bäva Bätbra fol. 16. col. 1. as follows: הוא שטן הוא יצר הרע הוא מלאך המות הוא שטן דכתיב ויצא

השטן מאת פני ה' הוא יצר הרע כתיב הקם רק רע כל היום הוא מלאך המות דכתיב רק את נפשו שמור, that is, He is the Satan, he is the evil inclination, he is the Angel of Death. He is the Satan, as it is written (Job 2:7): Then the Satan went forth from before the LORD. He is the evil inclination. There (Gen 6:5) it is written: Only evil all the day. But here (Job 2:6) it is written: Yet preserve his soul (that is, spare his life). He is the Angel of Death, for it is written (in the cited passage, Job 2:6): Yet preserve his soul. Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat also teaches on this matter in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 32. col. 3. in the Parashah Bereschith, as follows: וכשהוא מסיתה נקרא יצר הרע כשמחטיא, נקרא שטן כשהורגו נקרא מלאך המות, that is, When he leads someone into error, he is called Jézer bará, that is, the evil inclination.

When he brings a charge against someone, that the person has incurred guilt (or that he has sinned), he is called Satan (that is, an adversary). But when he takes someone's life, he is called Málach hammáveth, that is, the Angel of Death. These three names are also given to him in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139. col. 1. in the Parashah Acharé moth.

Fourth, he is called נחש הקדמוני Náchasch hakkadmóni, that is, the ancient serpent, and נחש בריה Náchasch bariach, that is, the straight or base serpent, or also simply נחש Náchasch, that is, the serpent. The name Náchasch hakkadmóni, that is, the ancient serpent, appears in the book Zijóni, fol. 85, col. 4, in the Parascha Kórach, with these words: נחש הקדמוני הוא סמאל that is, The ancient serpent is Sammaël. Likewise, in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 46, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajischlach, it is said of Jacob: לפי שהיה מאחר בדרך נשכו נחש הקדמוני הוא שטן הוא יצר הרע הצד ציד הוא סמאל that is, Because he had tarried on the way, the ancient serpent bit him, which is the Satan, the evil inclination, the hunter, and Sammaël. The name Náchasch bariach, that is, the base serpent, is found in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 84, col. 3, at the beginning of the 14th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, where the words read as follows: סמאל נקרא נחש בריה וגו' ולילית נקראת נחש עקלתון that is, Sammaël is called the base serpent, etc., but Lilith (or Lilis) is called the crooked serpent. This also appears at fol. 22, col. 2, in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, in the 35th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóbu, though with somewhat altered wording; as also in the book Párdes rimmónim, fol. 185, col. 4, under the title Scháar bechelé temuróth. The name Náchasch, that is, the serpent, is read in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 143, col. 2, in the Parascha Ki téze, where it is written as follows: השונא הוא רמו לסמאל הוא נחש הוא שטן הוא יצר הרע שהטעה לאדם הראשון that is, That hater (or enemy, of whom mention is made in Prov 25:21) signifies Sammaël, who is the serpent, the Satan, and the evil inclination, who seduced the first man and lures all creatures after him through his smooth words, which are smoother than oil, in human affairs and lusts. He is likewise called by this name in the Jalkut chádascb, fol. 87, col. 2, number 78, under the title Jaacob, and in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 140, col. 2, in the Parascha Mezóra.

Fifth, he is called רוח הטומאה Rúach battúma, or רוח מסאבא Rúach mostaba, that is, the unclean spirit; and the former is found in the book Zerór hammôr, fol. 111, col. 1, where one reads: רוח הטומאה הוא יצר הרע הוא מלאך המות, that is, the Rúach battúma, or unclean spirit, is the evil inclination and the angel of death. The latter, however, is found in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 149, col. 1, in the Parascha Kedoschim, with these words: ולא תטעו אחר פעולת נחש הקדמוני הנקרא רוח מסאבא, that is, Do not err after the work of the ancient serpent, which is called Rúach meskáva, that is, the unclean spirit.

Sixth, he is called לויתן Leviáthan; concerning this, in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 84, col. 3, in the 14th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, it is written as follows: ראה מה שאמרו חכמים ז"ל חכמי האמת בבבא בתרא פרק המוכר את הספינה עתיד גבריאל לעשות קינניא עם לויתן הוא סמאל שנא 'תמשוך לויתן בחכה, that is, See what the sages, of blessed memory, the theologians or divines, have said in (the Talmudic tractate) Báva báthra (fol. 74, col. 2, and fol. 75, col. 1), in the chapter (which begins) "Whoever sells a ship": Gabriel will in the future conduct a hunt with the Leviathan, that is, with Sammaël, as it is said (Job 40:20): Can you draw out the Leviathan with a hook? He is also called, in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, fol. 121, col. 2, in the 151st chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, and fol. 130, col. 1, in the 11th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser áhpin, לויתן נחש בריה Leviáthan náchasch báriach, that is, Leviathan the straight serpent, and לויתן נחש עקלתון Leviáthan náchasch akalláthon, that is, Leviathan the crooked serpent.

Seventh, he is given the name אשמדאי Aschmedaí, concerning which Elias writes in his Tischbi as follows: יש אומרים שאשמדאי הוא סמאל, that is, some say that Aschmedaí is Sammaël.

Eighth, he is called עזאזל Asasel, concerning which Rabbi Lipmann teaches in his Sépher Nizzáchon, num. 87: עזאזל הוא השטן, that is, Asasel is Satan. And immediately following this comes: ואמרין נמי בפרקי דרבי אליעזר סמאל הוא עזאזל, that is, we also say in the Chapters of Rabbi Elieser that Sammaël is Asasel.

Ninth, he is called השר Haschôr, that is, the Ox, and in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 113. col. 1., in the Parascha Ki tiffa, the word רוש rosch (Deut 32:33), which there signifies gall, is interpreted from him, which, through transposition of the letters and the change of the Aleph into a Vav Cholem, makes Schor, and it is taught there: השור הוא סמא"ל, that is, That same (gall) is the Ox, who is the Sammael. The very same also stands in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 160. col. 3., in the 65th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ápin. And in the small Jalkut Rubéni, under number 4., beneath the title Zúra ufarzu, one reads: סמא"ל נראה לפעמים בדמות שור למעלה או כחזיר ובפרט בשעת: מגיפה נראה כשור שחור: that is, The Sammaël shows himself at times in the form of an ox, or of a swine, from above; but especially he appears at the time of plague (when severe sicknesses break out) as a black ox. The like is also to be seen in the aforementioned small Jalkut Rubéni, under number 17., beneath the title Náchasch, and in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 130. col. 1., under the title Scháar réscha &c., in the 11th chapter. And in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 59. col. 2., in the Parascha Beschállach, it stands: סמא"ל מתלבש בדיוקנא דשור: that is, The Sammaël clothes himself in the form of an ox. He is also said to have bellowed from the molten calf (which is mentioned in Exod 32:4), concerning which the following is read in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 157. col. 2., under the title Egel: סמא"ל נכנס בעגל והיה גועה להתעות את ישראל שנאמר ידע שור קונו: that is, The Sammaël entered into the calf and bellowed, to lead the Israelites astray, as it is said (Isa 1:3): An ox knoweth his master. Concerning which, the 45th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Elieser may also be consulted.

Tenth, he is called הכלב Hakkélef, that is, the Dog, and it is written concerning this in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 119. col. 3. in the Parascha Vajikra as follows: ואוי כלם באים לפני הקב"ה אבל הקב"ה מחלק אותם לקרבנות: סמא"ל: that is: Verily, all offerings come before the holy blessed God, and He distributes them among His hosts; the impure offerings, however, He gives to the Kélef, that is, the Dog, who is the Sammaël. This is also to be read in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 41. col. 4. under the title Beth hammikdasch. And in the book Emek hammélech there is found fol. 37. col. 1. in the 65th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam battóhu, the following as well: הכלב הוא סמא"ל שר בהמות יצר הרשעים: that is: The Dog is the Sammaël, the Prince of the wicked wild beasts. And in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 145. col. 3. in the Parascha Ki téze, concerning the words of Deut 23:18, "You shall bring no harlot's wages nor dog's money into the house of the LORD your God," it is taught: אמר ומחיר כלב על יצר הרע הנקרא כלב כאמרו: מיד כלב יחידתי that is: The dog's money is said of the Jézer hará, that is, the evil inclination, which is called the Dog, as is stated (Ps 22:21): "My only one from the dog." Concerning this, something is also to be found in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 80. col. 1. numero 6. under the title Jézer tof vejézer hará, and in the small Jalkut Rubéni num. 9. under the title Kélef.

Eleventh, he is called חזיר Chasír, that is, a swine, for which reason it is written thus in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 38. col. 4. numero 36: כח של עשו הוא כלב הזיר, that is, The power of Esau (that is, of the angel who governs Esau, or Christendom) is the dog and the swine; of which more shall be shown below, and the reason for this name is to be found above under the ninth name, because he is said to show himself at times in the form of a swine.

Twelfth, he is called חמור Chamór, that is, a donkey, and the donkey is written thus in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the 5 Books of Moses, fol. 212. col. 1. in the Parascha Ki téze, on the words of Zech 9:9, "poor, and riding upon a donkey": חמור דא סמאל, that is, This donkey is the Sammaël.

Thirteenth, he is called השעיר Hassáir, that is, the hairy one, as can be seen in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 119. col. 2. numero 92, where the words read as follows: השעיר שהוא כחו של עשו מעורר תגר עם איש חלק הוא יעקב, that is, The hairy one, who is the power of Esau, stirs up strife with the smooth man, Jacob. And in the book Emek hammelech he is called, at fol. 87. col. 1. in the 25th chapter, under the title Schaár Kirjáth árba, איש שער איש חצן, that is, the hairy and arrogant man.

Fourteenth, he is called שעיר עזים Sëir issim, that is, a he-goat, and therefore it stands in the book Maaréchet haëlahúth f. 60. c. 2. as follows: נחש הקדמוני נקרא שעיר עזים, that is, The ancient serpent is called a he-goat.

Fifteenth, he is called עורב Oref, that is, a raven, for in the book Megálle amykkóth fol. 10. col. 4. in the fortieth Ofan it is read thus: עורב הוא שר של אדום, that is, the raven is the prince of Edom.

Sixteenth, he is called עשו Esav, that is, Esau, wherefore in the book Zerór hammór fol. 45. col. 2. in the Parascha Vajischlach, on the words of Gen 33:1, "And he looked, and behold, Esau came," it is written: זה סמאל וסיעתו, that is, this was the Sammaël and his company. Thus he is also called by that name in the same work, fol. 100. col. 1. in the Parascha Acharómoth. He is also said to have shown himself in the form of Esau, concerning which the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 62. col. 2. in the Parascha Vajischlach, from the Sohar, reads as follows: כי חמא יעקב לסמאל מקטרגא בהאי לילה חמא ליה: בהאי דיוקנא דעשו ולא אשתמודע עד דסליק צפרא כיון דסליק צפרא ואשגח ביה חמא לידא באנפין סתימין ואתגלין אסתכל בהווא דיוקנא דהוה כדיוקנא דעשו והו' ראי' פניך כראות פני אלהים דחמי דאנון בדיוקנא דאתחזי ליה סמאל: that is, when Jacob had seen the accuser Sammaël during that same night, he saw him in the form of Esau and did not recognize him until the dawn broke; and when he had looked upon him, he saw him with a concealed face. But after it was revealed, he gazed upon that form, which was the form of Esau, and this is what is indicated by the words of Gen 33:10,

"I saw your face as one sees the face of God." For he saw that he had the very form in which Sammaël had appeared to him.

Seventeenth, he is called אדום Edom, which is also the name of Esau, and this is found in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 8, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschbith, in these words: אמר הוא ישופך ראש מכאן רמו ענין נחש הקדמוני וגו' הוא סמאל הוא עשו that is: It is said (Gen 3:15): She shall bruise thy head. Here the work of the ancient serpent is signified, ע"כ. And that same one is the Sammaël, it is Esau, it is Edom. The name Edom means Red, and in the book Emék hammélech, fol. 84, col. 1, in the eleventh chapter under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, it reads as follows: דגל סמאל הרשע וכל שריו וחיילו דמות אש אדומה וכחותם וכל מיני אצילותם אדומים הוא אדום סוסו אדום מלבושו אדום שדהו אדום כליו אדומים ולעתידי יקח לו הקב"ה לבושו שנ' מדוע אדום ללבושך וגו' that is: The banner of the wicked Sammaël, and of all his princes and his armies, has the form of red fire; likewise all kinds of their emanation (or their outflow) are red. He is red, his horse is red, his garment is red, his field is red, his vessels are red; but in time to come the holy and blessed God will take his garment from him, as it is said (Isa 63:2): Why then is thy garment so red, ע"כ.

Eighteenth, he is called עמלק Amalek, concerning which the aforementioned book Zerór hammór, fol. 146, col. 2, in the Parascha Ki tēze, reads as follows: וזכור את אשר עשה לך עמלק שהוא רמו על יצר הרע שנקרא עמלק הוא עשו אבי אדום that is: Remember what Amalek did to thee, who is a signification of the Jézer hará, that is, the evil inclination, which is called Amalek, and who is Esau the father of Edom.

Nineteenth, he is called גלית הפלשתי Goljath happelisti, that is, Goliath the Philistine, and it stands in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 97. col. 1. in the Parascha Beschállach: גלית הפלשתי הוא יצר הרע הוא נחש הוא סמאל הוא מלאך המות that is, Goliath the Philistine is the Jézer hará (or the evil inclination), he is the serpent, he is the Sammaël, he is the angel of death, he is the Amalek. And in the book Maarécbeth haeläbúth it is read at fol. 214. col. 1. in the Chájath: יצר הרע הוא נחש הוא סמאל הוא עמלק הוא פלשתי הוא מלאך המות that is, The evil inclination is the serpent, it is the Sammaël, it is the Amalek, it is the Philistine, it is the angel of death.

Twentieth, he is called המן Haman, concerning which it is written in the book Emék hammélech fol. 35. col. 1. in the 62nd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam battóhu, as follows: הוא יעדר קטאת יי' צבאות בלבו על איש צר ואויב המן הרע that is, He (namely the Messiah) will kindle the zeal of the Lord of hosts in his heart against the adversarial and hostile man, the wicked Haman, who is the godless Sammaël, the crooked serpent.

Twenty-first, he is called קץ כל בשר Kez col básar, that is, the end of all flesh, which words appear in Gen 6:13, and therefore it is read in the book Párdes Rimmónim fol. 169. col. 1.: קץ כל בשר הקליפה סמאל נקרא that is, the end of all flesh is the Kelifa, that is, the husk, of the Sammaël, who is thus named. This is also to be found in the book Avodáb (or Avódas) bakkódesch fol. 52. col. 3. in the 39th chapter of the second part. In the book Schené luchóth habberíth, however, he is called at fol. 232. col. 1. קץ הימים Kez bajámim, that is, the end of days.

Twenty-second, he is called אל נכר El néchar, that is, the foreign god, wherefore in the book Zerór hammór fol. 141. col. 1. in the Parascha Schóphetim it is written thus: לא תשתחוה לאל נכר זהו רמז לסמאל הוא נחש הקדמוני that is, (the words of Ps 81:10) "You shall not worship any foreign god" signify Sammaël, who is the ancient serpent. He is also called in the book Maarébeth baëlabúth fol. 213. col. 2. in the Chájat אל אחר El ácher, that is, the other god.

Twenty-third, he is called שרף מעופף Sáraf meósef, that is, the fiery flying serpent, as can be seen in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 180. col. 4. in the Parascha Bálak, where he is called המקטרג הגדול שיש לישׂראל בשמים הוא שר המדבר שרף מעופף ונפש גלגל מאדים that is, the great accuser whom the Israelites have in heaven, who is the prince of the wilderness, the fiery flying serpent, and the soul of the Sphæra or sphere of the (planet) Mars.

This Sammaël, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, seduced Adam and Eve in Paradise out of pure envy and jealousy, and brought about their fall, because he begrudged them the great honor that God had shown them. Concerning this, the following is written in Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 24, col. 4, and fol. 25, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschíth: סמאל הרשע קשר עם כל צבאות מעלה על רבו משום דאמר קב"ה ורדו בדגת הים אמר היאך אוכל להחטיאו ולגרשו מלפני ירד עם כל חילותיו ובקש לו בארץ חבר כמוהו ומצא נחש היה לו דמות גמל רכב עליו והלך לו אל האשה אמר לה אף כי אמר אלהים לא תאכלו מכל עץ הגן אמר אבקש יותר הוסיף כדי שתגרע היא אמרה לו לא מנענו אלא מעץ הדעת אשר בתוך הגן אמר לא תאכלו ממנו ולא תגעו בו פן תמותון הוסיפה שני דברים אמרה מעץ העץ ולא אמר להם אלא מעץ ואמרה ולא תגעו בו פן תמותון מה עשה סמאל הרשע הלך ונגע באילן הזה והלך צוח ואומר אל תבואני רגל גאווה ויד רשעים אל תנידני רשע אל תגע בי, הלך ואמר לאשה הרי נגעתי באילן ולא מתי אף את נגעי בו ולא תמותי הלכה האשה ונגעה באילן ראתה מלאך המות בא כנגדה אמרה אולי עכשיו אני מתה והק"ב עושה לו אשה אחרת ונותנה לאדם הריני גורמת לו שיאכל עמי אם נמות שנינו נמות ואם נחיה נחיה לקחה מפירות האילן ונתנה לאדם בעלה נתפקחו עיני שניהם וקהו שיניו אמר מהו זה שאכלתי That is: The wicked Sammaël had formed a conspiracy with all the upper hosts against his Lord, because the Holy and Blessed God had said (to Adam and Eve, Gen 1:28): And have dominion over the fish of the sea; and he said, how can I bring it about that he sins, and drive him away from before Me? Then he came down with all his hosts and sought for himself on earth a companion like unto himself, and found the serpent, which had the form of a camel; he mounted upon it and rode upon it, and betook himself to the woman (Eve), and said to her: Is it so that God has said (you shall eat of every tree of the garden?) and he thought, I will ask more, and add something to it, so that she may take away from it. Then she answered him: He has only forbidden us the tree of knowledge, which is in the midst of the garden, and has said, you shall not eat of it, nor touch it, lest you die. She added two words to it (namely מפרי העץ Mipper haëz, that is, of the fruit of the tree, whereas He, namely God (Gen 2:17), had only said to them מהעץ Meëz, from the tree); and she also said (that God had spoken): You shall not touch it, lest you die (whereas God had said nothing about touching it). What did the wicked Sammaël do? He went and touched the tree. Then the tree cried out and said: Let not the foot of pride (that is, of the proud one) come to me, and let not the hand of the wicked move me; O you wicked one, touch me not. Thereupon he went to the woman and said to her: I have touched the tree and have not died; touch it also, and you will not die. When the woman had gone and touched the tree, she saw the angel of death coming toward her, and said: Perhaps I shall now die, and God will create another woman and give her to Adam; behold, I will cause him to eat with me; if we die, we shall both die, but if we live, we shall both live. Then she took of the fruits of the tree and gave thereof to her husband Adam, and the eyes of them both were opened. But when his teeth became blunt, he said to her: What is this that you have given me to eat, that my teeth have become blunt? Even so have the teeth of all creatures become blunt. All of this is to be found at greater length in the Talmud printed at Amsterdam, in the Tractate Avoth of Rabbi Nathan, fol. 1, col. 2, and in the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the 13th chapter, as also in the Sepher habbábir, fol. 12, col. 3, 4; in which last book it is taught that Satan had pushed Eve against the tree by force, and because she had touched it in such a manner and had not died, he said to her: just as you did not die from touching it, so you will also not die if you eat of it; and thereupon she ate of the fruit and gave some of it to her husband as well.

So it is also read in the Médrasch Schemuël fol. 55. col. 3. 4. in the twelfth Parascha, that she gave all the animals to eat of it, except for the bird Phœnix, which did not wish to eat of it, and the words read as follows: הכל שמעו לחיה ואכלו מאותו האילן ה"ה וחון גם לאישה עמה ויאכל וגם האכילה לבהמה ולחיה ולעופות חוץ מעוף אחד ששמו חול ה"ה ואומר עם קני אגוע וכחול ארבה ימים כחול כתיב ר' ינאי אמר אלף שנים הוא חי לאחר אלף האור יוצא מקניו ומאכלתו ונשתייר כ' כביצה וחזור ומגדל

איברים הוא חיה: that is, all obeyed Eve and ate of that same (forbidden) tree. This is what is written (Gen 3:6): And she gave also to her husband with her, and he ate. She also gave the cattle, the wild animals, and the birds to eat of it, except for one bird called Chol, that is, Phœnix. This is what is written (Job 29:18): I thought, I shall die in my nest, and I shall multiply my days as the Chol (that is, according to the foolish Jews' opinion, as the bird Phœnix, whereas it ought to mean: as the sand, for Chol in the Hebrew language means sand, and signifies no such bird). It is written: as the Chol, &c. Rabbi Jannai has said: he lives a thousand years; after the thousand years, a fire goes forth from his nest and consumes him, and something like an egg remains therein, and his limbs grow back, and he comes to life again. This is also found in the Jalkut Schimóni on Jobum fol. 152. col. 1. numero 517, and in the book Emek hammelech fol. 83. col. 1. in the 8th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba. Rabbi Salomon Jarchi also writes of this in his commentary on the aforementioned words of Job 29:18, "And will multiply his days as the Chol," as follows: עוף ושמו חול ולא נקנסה עליו מיתה שלא טעם מעץ הדעת ולבסוף אלף שנה that is, there is a bird called Chol, and it was not punished with death, because it did not eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; but after a thousand years it renews itself and becomes young again.

Regarding the aforementioned envy and zeal, the following is written in the commentary of the aforementioned Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 29, col. 2, in the Pascha Bereschith, from the Medrasch Ruth: כשברא הקב"ה לאדם הראשון מכבוד בית המקדש בנאו מעפר בית המקדש נטל וברא אותו כיוון שברא אותו ועמד על רגליו באו כל הבריות להשתחוות לו מה עשה הקב"ה נטלו משם והכניסו לגן עדן ועשה לו עשר חופות כדוגמת עשר חופות שעתיד ה"ה לעשות לצדיקים בגן עדן לעתיד לבא ומלאכי השרת היו יורדין ועושין שמחה לפניו נתן לו חכמה עליונה וכשיד סמאל משמי מרום ראה מעלתו של אדם ומלאכי השרת משמשים לפניו בחופותו וירע לפניו : that is, when the holy blessed God wished to create the first man, He built him from the Temple, and took of the dust of the Temple, and created him. After He had created him and he had stood upon his feet, all creatures came to bow down before him. What did the holy blessed God do: He took him away from there and placed him in Paradise, and made for him ten wedding canopies, after the likeness of those ten wedding canopies which He will make for the righteous in Paradise in the time to come; and the ministering angels came down and made merry before him, and God gave him the highest wisdom. But when Sammaël came down from heaven and saw Adam's glory, that the ministering angels served him at his wedding, it displeased him. What did he do? He took a serpent that had the form of a camel, rode upon it, came down, and seduced him, until he had transgressed the commandment of his Creator.

In the booklet Othioth (or Otios) Rabbi Akiva, at fol. 6, col. 3–4, this matter is also treated, and it is reported that God showed great honor to Adam and Eve, made for Adam twelve wedding-canopies of pure precious stones, adorned Eve, and united her with Adam in Paradise in the company of all His angels. And the following passage comes after this: זימן הק"ה שניהם לסעודה על מעדני גן עדן וערך לפניהם שולחנות של מרגליות וכל מרגליות ומרגליות היו מאה אמה ארכה וששים אמה רחבה וכל מיני מעדנים מונחים לפניהם שנ' תערוך לפני שולחן חשין מלאכי השרת וצלו לו : that is: The holy and blessed God invited them both to a meal of the most delicate foods (and the finest delicacies) of Paradise, and prepared before them tables of precious stones, and each precious stone was a hundred cubits long and sixty cubits wide, and all manner of delicacies were set before them (as it is said in Ps 23:5): "You prepared a table before me." The ministering angels also hastened and roasted meat for him and cooled wine for him. But when the serpent came and saw the honor that had been shown to them both, it cast its eyes upon them and conceived a zeal and envy against them. The like can also be read in the book Schené Luchóth habberíth (or Lúchos habberis), fol. 18, col. 3, in the Wilmersdorf printing; and in the Sobar printed at Sulzbach, in Bereschíth, col. 106, in the Sepher habbábir; and in the book Jesód Schirím, fol. 12, col. 2; and in the Amsterdam Talmud, in the tractate Avóth of Rabbi Nathan, fol. 1, col. 3; as well as in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrín, fol. 59, col. 2.

The aforementioned Sammaël is said to have been one of the Seraphim before his fall, concerning which the following is taught in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 3, under the title Sammaël, from the Sobar: קודם שחטא אדם הראשון היה : that is, Before the first man had sinned, Sammaël was one of the Seraphim and had six wings; but he fell away from his Lord, Éc. After he had led Adam into sin, however, God cast him out of heaven; hence it stands in the Jalkut Schimóni, fol. 8, col. 4, numero 27, that after Adam's fall the following came to pass: הביא שלשתן ונתן עליהם גזר דין מתשע קללות ומות והפיל את סמאל ואת כת שלו ממקום קדושתן מן השמים וקצץ רגליו : that is, He (namely God) caused all three of them to come before Him, and pronounced upon them a judgment of nine curses and death, and cast Sammaël together with his host from the place of his holiness, from heaven; and He cut off the serpent's feet, and decreed concerning it that it must shed its skin once every seven years in great pain. This may also be read in the Sobar printed at Sulzbach, in the 107th column.

What transpired at that time between the angel Michaël and Sammaël is written in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 1, in the Parascha Achare móth, in the following manner: אמרו במדרש שהק"בה הפילו ולכה שלו מן השמים היה אוהו בכנפיו של מיכאל להורידו עמו ופלטו הק"בה that is, in the Médrasch it is said that the holy and blessed God cast him down (namely Sammaël) together with his host from Heaven, and that he had seized Michaël's wings in order to drag him down with him, but God delivered him; for this reason Michaël is called the Escaped (or the Delivered).

The rabbis also write of this Sammaël that he lay with Eve and begot Cain, concerning which one reads in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 3. col. 3. numero 12. under the title Adam as follows: חנה נתעברה מסמאל ועבדה את קין וגו' ונראתה חנה: that is, Eve became pregnant by Sammaël and conceived Cain, etc. When Eve then saw Cain's form and perceived that he was not of the lower (creatures) but of the upper (creatures), she said (Gen 4:1): I have gotten a man from the LORD. Likewise it stands in the aforementioned Jalkut chadasch fol. 4. col. 4. numero 43. as follows: אמת סמאל על חנה אטיל בה זונהמא ואתעברת ואולידת ית קין נחזו דייליה: that is, Sammaël lay with Eve and cast into her a filthiness, from which she became pregnant and bore Cain, whose form was not like that of other human beings. Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 31. col. 1. 2. in the Parasha Bereschith, on the words of Gen 4:1, "And Adam knew his wife Eve," the following as well: דע כי קין נולד מן הזונהמא והטפה שהטיל הנחש בחנה אמנם בלתי זרע אדם שנתערב באותה הזונהמא לא היה יכולת לרוח ההוא ללבוש גוף אדם ולצאת לאויר העולם וזרע האדם המציא לו מקום להתלבש בו ועל כן נעשה הורג כד"א משרש נחש יצא צפע וגו' כי מדת הדיון שופעת עליו. וכן תרגום יונתן בן עזיאל ע"ה ואדם ידע את חנה אתמיה דחנה מתעברא מן סמאל מלאכא נעדיאת וילידת ית קין חנה דמי לעילא ולא לתמאי ואמרה קניתי: that is, Know that Cain was born of the impurity and the drop which the serpent cast into Eve; yet since without the mingling of Adam's seed with that impurity it would not have been possible for that spirit to be clothed in a human body and to come forth into the air of the world, Adam's seed provided it a place in which to be clothed; for this reason he (Cain) became a murderer, as it is said (Isa 14:29): Out of the root of the serpent shall come forth a basilisk, etc. For the attribute of judgment exerts its influence (or its influx) over him. And thus Jonathan, the son of Usiel, upon whom be peace, has also translated it: And Adam knew his wife, who had conceived by the angel Sammaël and had become pregnant, and she bore Cain, who resembled the upper beings and not the lower, and said: I have gotten the man, the angel of the LORD. The like is also to be found in the aforementioned Jalkut chadasch fol. 5. col. 2. numero 52. under the title Adam, and in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 22. col. 1. in the Parasha Bereschith from the book Pelia, as well as in the book Schené luchóth habberíth fol. 136. col. 1. and in the book Jesód Schirim of the Cracow printing, fol. 16. col. 2. and in the Sohar at the 168th column of the Sulzbach printing, but most extensively in the book Avodáth hakkódesch, in the 14th chapter of the fourth part, which is called Sithré Thóra, fol. 119. col. 3.

It is also taught in the tractate Avóth of Rabbi Nathan, fol. 1, col. 2, in the Amsterdam Talmud, that the serpent had wanted to take Eve as his wife, where the words read as follows: מה חושב נחש הראשון באותה שעה: אמר אלך ואהרוג את אדם ואשא אשתו ואהיה מלך על כל העולם כלו ואלך בקומה זקופה ואוכל כל מעדני עולם: אמר ליה הקדוש ברוך הוא אתה אמרת אהרוג את אדם ואשא את חוה לפיכך איבה אשית אתה אמרת אהיה מלך על כל העולם לפיכך ארור אתה מכל הבהמה: אתה אמרת אלך בקומה זקופה לפיכך על גחונך תלך: אתה אמרת אוכל כל מעדני עולם לפיכך עפר תאכל כל ימי חיך; that is: What was the first serpent thinking at that moment (when it seduced Adam? It thought:) I will go and kill Adam and take his wife and be a king over the entire world; I will also walk with an upright body and eat all the delicacies of the world. Then the holy blessed God said to it: you have said, I will kill Adam and take Eve as my wife; therefore I will set enmity (between you and the woman). You have said, I will be a king over the entire world; therefore you shall be cursed above all cattle. You have said, I will walk with an upright body; therefore you shall go upon your belly. You have said, I will eat all the delicacies of the world; therefore you shall eat dust all the days of your life.

Because Sammaël is said to have lain with Eve, the discharge and the monthly period of women is said to have been caused thereby, concerning which the following is written in the book Máor hakkaton fol. 59. col. 1.: מאז שבא נחש על חוה מקור נפתח ונפתש טומאת זיבה ונדה בעולם that is: From the time that the serpent lay with Eve, the fountain was opened, and the impurity of the discharge and of the monthly female sickness spread throughout the world. The following is likewise read there on this matter: מיום שבא נחש על חוה הטיל that is: From the time that the serpent lay with Eve, the fountain was opened unto sin, unto the monthly period of women, and unto the discharge.

The blemish that is seen in the moon is also said to derive from Sammaël, concerning which Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 140. col. 2., in the Parashah Metzora, as follows: הכתם שנמצא בירח שאינו סר ממנו לעולם הוא הוזהמא שהטיל הנחש הקדמוני בירח העליון that is: The blemish that is found in the moon, which never departs from it, is that filthiness which the ancient serpent cast into the uppermost moon. In the future, however, that same filthiness will depart, as it is said (Zech 13:2): "And the unclean spirit I will drive from the earth."

The rabbis also write many other things about this Sammael, and mention among other things that he causes all quarreling, concerning which it is written in the Small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 53, under the title Sammael velilith, as follows: כתב הרמ"בן ספירה שמינית שבטומאה נקרא שמו סמאל : קבלנו כי הוא מעורר מדנים ומבלבל כל ישיבות וכל הנאצלים ממנו כלם שקרנים ואינם עומדים בדיבור ומעוררים מלחמות : that is, Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman has written that the eighth Sephira in the realm of impurity is called Sammael. We have also learned through tradition that he stirs up quarrels and confounds all the academies, and that all those who receive an influence or influx from him are liars, do not keep their word, and also stir up war.

He is also supposed to be the adversary of the Jews at all times, and concerning this it is written in the Jalkut chádāsch fol. 118, col. 4, no. 79, as follows: סמאל הוא לעולם מקטרגן של ישראל וכשנותנים לו שעיר ביום הכפור נעשה סניגור : that is, Sammael accuses the Israelites at all times, but when they give him a goat on the Day of Atonement, he becomes their advocate. So too it is read in the book Scháaré óra, which was printed at Mantua, fol. 26, col. 1: סמאל עומד : that is, Sammael stands continually against the Israelites and accuses them. That he does not accuse them on the Day of Atonement, however, is addressed in the Jalkut chádāsch fol. 100, col. 3, no. 1, under the title Jamim noráim, as follows: והשנה שס"ד בגימטריא שס"ד : that is, the word Hassátan yields, by Gemátria, 364, but the year has 365 days, by which it is demonstrated that Satan rules on every day of the year except the Day of Atonement, on which he has no mouth with which to accuse. His mouth is thus to be stopped so that he cannot bring charges against them, since the gift that is given to him holds him back from doing so, which gift is said to have been given to him already in ancient times.

Regarding the gift which was given to him by the Jews in ancient times, it is said to have been the goat mentioned in Lev 16:21-22, which is called Asasel there in v. 8, and the following is found in the Jalkut chadāsch fol. 101, col. 3, numerô 21, from the Sohar concerning this: כיוון שמקבל סמאל השעיר וישראל מתוודים עוונותיהם ובא סמאל ונעשה כניגור. אומר הקב"ה לכל השבעים שרים הראיתם זה שהוא תמיד מקטרג על בני ועתה בשביל שעיר אחד שהתוודו בני כל עוונותיהם עליו ונתנו לו הוא נעשה סניגור מיד מסכימים כולם שכל העוונות יבאו על ראש אומתו ואלו היו יודעים ; האומות מישעיר זה לא היו מניחים הם ושלום שיביאו לישראל אפילו יום אחד : that is: After Sammaël receives the goat and the Israelites have confessed their sins (onto the goat), Sammaël comes and becomes their advocate or intercessor (before God, and no longer accuses them on account of the gift). Thereupon God speaks to all seventy princes: Have you seen this one, who always accuses my children, and now, on account of a single goat over which my children have confessed their sins and which they gave to him, he has become an intercessor (for them)? Thereupon they all agree together that all the sins (of the Israelites) shall come upon the head of his (namely Sammaël's) people. And if the nations knew about this goat (that through it the sins of the Israelites are laid upon their necks), they would (God forbid) not allow a single Israelite to remain alive even one day longer.

Since, however, it could be objected to the Jews that through such a gift they are serving the devil, Rabbi Isaac Karo teaches in his book Toledōth Jizchak fol. 76. col. 1. in the Parascha Acharē moth, in refutation of this, as follows: השוחד אינו עבודה כי העבודה באהבה ובטוב לבב כי כל מה שיתן העבד למלכו או לרבו הוא כדי לעשות רצונו ולהטיב לו השוחד הוא שיתן אדם למי שירא ממנו שיעשה לו רעה כדי שלא יזיקו וזה רוצה לומר להן שוחד לסמאל והק"ב שולח משולחנו ומזלו לכהן של מאדים בעבור שלא יזק לישראל; that is: A gift is not an act of service, for service is performed out of love and from a willing heart, since everything that a servant gives to his king or his lord is done to the end that he fulfill his will and do good to him. A gift, however, is given by a person to one whom he fears will do him harm, so that he may not injure him; and this is what is meant by giving a gift to Sammaël: and the holy blessed GOD sends from His table and from what is His to the power of the (planet) Mars (that is, to Sammaël), so that he may do no harm to the Israelites. On this subject there is yet more to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139. col. 1. in the Parascha Acharē moth, where he teaches, among other things, that when one gives a gift to the devil, it is just the same as when one throws a piece of food to a dog so that it will not bite one.

Job is said to have been afflicted by Satan for this reason: that he gave him no gift. Concerning this, the Jalkut chadasch fol. 40. col. 2. numero 35. under the title Béth hammikdash, writes the following from the Sohar: באיוב כתיב העלה עולות מספר כולם ועולה כולה לגבוה סלקא ולא היה בה חלק לסמרא אחרא לכך שלט עליו השטן ואי לא היו כל קרבנותי עולות היה נותן לו חלק גם לשטן לא היה יכול לשלוט : That is: Concerning Job it is written (Job 1:5): "And he offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all." A burnt offering, however, ascends entirely to the Most High alone (and God alone is praised thereby), and there was no portion in it for the Sitra achera, that is, the other side (meaning the unclean and evil spirit); for this reason Satan had power over him. But if his offerings had not been pure burnt offerings, and he had given Satan a portion as well, then Satan would have had no power over him.

In the aforementioned Jalkut chadasch, it is also taught at fol. 6. col. 1. numero 72. from the Sohar that Abel likewise gave a portion of his offering to Satan, and the words read as follows: קרבנו של הבל נתקבל לפי שעיקר הקרבן עשה : להק"ב לא נתקבל להק"ב אלא שנתן חלק גם לסמרא אחרא וקין עשה עיקר הקרבן לסמרא אחרא ויהיב חולקיה : that is: Abel's offering was accepted (by God) for this reason: that he made the principal act of his offering to the holy and blessed God, yet also gave a portion to the Sithra achera (that is, to the other side, namely the devil). Cain, however, did the opposite, in that he gave the chief portion of his offering to the other side, and only a portion to the holy and blessed God; for this reason it was not acceptable.

Since Sammael is one of, and indeed the foremost of, the aforementioned seventy princes who are said to rule over the seventy nations, we must now also examine which people is subject to him. It is to be known that Esau, that is, the Christian people, is said to have fallen to his lot, concerning which Rabbi Menachem of Recanati writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 141, col. 2-3, in the following manner: צוה הק"ב ביום הכפור שנשלה שער : במדבר לשר המושל במקומות החרבן הוא הראוי לו מפני שהוא בעליו מאצילות כחו יבא חרבן ושממה כי הוא העילה לכוכבי החרב הדמים והמלחמות והמריבות והפצעים והמכות והפרוד והחרבן הכלל שהוא נפש מאדים וחלקו מן האומות הוא עשו שהוא עם היורש החרב והמלחמות, that is: The holy and blessed God has commanded that on the Day of Atonement we are to send a goat into the wilderness to the prince who rules over the places of desolation, and this is fitting for him, because he is lord over it. From the influence, or the influx, of his power comes devastation and destruction, for he is the cause of the stars of the sword and of blood, and of wars, and of quarrels, and of wounds, and of blows, and of division, as well as of devastation; and, to speak briefly, he is the soul of the planet Martis, and his portion among the nations is Esau, who is the people that inherits the sword and wars. The very same is also found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 1, in the Parashah Acharé moth, and in Rabbi Isaac Karo's book Toledóth Jizchack, fol. 76, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parashah Acharé moth, as well as in the Zijóni printed at Cremona, fol. 66, col. 2, though with somewhat altered wording. For this reason he is called, first of all, שרו של עשו Saró schel Esau, that is, the Prince of Esau. For this reason, the following is read in the book Schené luchóth habberíth (or Luchos habberis), fol. 232, col. 1, in these words: שרו של עשו שהוא סמאל המקטרג הוא יצר הרע הוא שטן : הוא מלאך המות, that is: The Prince of Esau, who is the accuser Sammaël, the evil inclination; he is the Satan, he is the Angel of Death. And in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 46, col. 2, in the Parashah Vajíschlach, it is written: לפי שהיה : מתאחר בדרך נשכו נחש הקדמוני שטן הוא יצר הרע הוא סמאל שרו של עשו : that is: Because he (namely Jacob) tarried on the way, the ancient serpent bit him, which is the Satan, the evil inclination, Sammaël, and the Prince of Esau. Abarbanel also writes in his commentary on the 65th chapter of Isaiah, fol. 93, col. 4, as follows: כבר ידעת שסמאל הוא שרו של עשו, that is: It is already known to you that Sammaël is the Prince of Esau. And this is likewise to be found in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's oft-mentioned commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 59, col. 2, in the Parashah Toledóth Jizchak, and in the Zijóni, fol. 24, col. 1, and in the Small Jalkut Rubéni, number 46, under the title Avóth veímmabóth, and in the Large Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 53, col. 3, and fol. 54, col. 3, in the Parashah Vajéze, and fol. 60, col. 1, in the Parashah Vajischlach, and in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 112, col. 1, number 31, as well as in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 99, col. 2, in the 81st chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba.

Second, he is called ממונה דעשו Memúnneh de-Esau, that is, Esau's overseer, and therefore the following is read in the great Jáلكut Rubéni fol. 60. col. 2. in the Parashah Vajischlach: אית מאן דלא ידע בושת דא איהו ממונא דעשו שהיה יודע מעלתו that is, There is one who cannot feel shame, and such a one is the Memúnneh de-Esau, that is, Esau's overseer, who knew the excellence of Jacob, how glorious he was, and yet was not ashamed before him.

Third, he is called שר של אדום Sar schel Edom, that is, the Prince of Edom, and the following concerning this is found in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 80. col. 4. אמרו חז"ל עתיד הקב"ה לשחוט את היצר הרע דאיהו סמאל שר של אדום: numerô 20. that is, Our sages, of blessed memory, have said that the holy blessed God will in the future slaughter or slay the evil inclination, which is Samael, the Prince of Edom; not that God Himself will kill him, but rather He will hold him by the lock of hair on his head, and Elijah will slaughter him. In the little book Afkâth rôchel it is also taught that God will in the future afflict Christendom with ten plagues, and thereafter follows: ואז יפיל הקב"ה את סמאל למטה שהוא שרו של אדום: that is, Then the holy blessed God will cast down Samael, who is the Prince of Edom.

Fourth, he is called אפוטרופא של אדום Appótropha schel Edom, that is, the provider or guardian of Edom, and this is found in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 46. col. 4. and fol. 47. col. 1. numerô 11. in these words: בא מיכאל שר הגדול אפוטרופא של ישראל ואמר רבונו של עולם אימתי יפקון ישראל מגלותא דאדום שהרי כתבת כאשר יסבלון צרות רבות יגאלו מן הגלות אמר הקב"ה יבא סמאל אפוטרופא של אדום ויטעון עמך אתא סמאל ואמר רבונו של עולם אתה אמרת שיהיו ישראל בגלות אדום עד שיעשו תשובה ועתה הם רשעים אותה שעה גער הקב"ה בסמאל שדבר לשון הרע על ישראל וברח סמאל שלש אלפי מילין. אמר לו הקב"ה למיכאל היה לך לראות תחילת הפסוק ושבת עד ה' אלהיך ואחר כך כי אל רחום וגו': 'אמר מיכאל מרי דעלמא וכי בחנם נקראת אל רחום שתרחם אף על פי שאינם ראויים אמר לו הקב"ה כבר נשבעתי שלא אפרד עד שישובו לפני אפילו כחודה של מחט אני אפתח להם פתח גדול, that is: The great prince Michael, who is the provider of Israel, came (once before God) and said to Him: O Lord of the world! When will the Israelites at last go forth from the Edomite captivity? For behold, You have written that when they shall have endured great distresses, they shall then be redeemed from captivity. Then God said: Let Sammael, who is the Appótropa schel Edom, that is, the provider of Edom, come and dispute with you. When Sammael came, he said: O Lord of the world! You have said that the Israelites shall remain in the Edomite captivity until they repent, but now they are wicked. Thereupon the holy and blessed God rebuked Sammael, because he had spoken evil against Israel, and Sammael fled three thousand miles away. After this, God said to Michael: You ought first to have attended to the words (Deut 4:30), "So you will turn to the Lord your God," and thereafter (to the words of v. 31, "For the Lord your God is a merciful God," etc.). To this Michael answered: O Lord of the world, would You then be called the merciful God in vain, so as not to show mercy upon them, even though they are not worthy of it? Then God said to him: I have sworn that I will not redeem them until they turn to Me even so little as the point of a needle; then I will open a great door for them. The very same thing is also found in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 169. col. 2. in the Parscha Vaethchannán, though in different words.

Fifth, he is called רבא דאדום Rabba de-Edóm, that is, the Lord (or Prince) of Edom, as can be read in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 12, under the title Sachúth (or Sóchus), where, concerning the words of Gen 32:24, "There wrestled a man with him," the following is written: הוא סמאל רבא דאדום ובעא : דאיתיהיב יעקב תחת שיעבודא דאדום ומשום זכותא ברברא דהוי ביעקב לא אתיהיב בידיה that is, This is the Sammael, the Rábba, that is, the Lord (or Prince) of Edom, and he desired that Jacob should be delivered into Edomite servitude. But on account of the great merit that was in Jacob, he was not delivered into his power. This is also to be found in the aforementioned small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 47, under the title Sámmael, and in the large Jalkut Rubéni fol. 60. col. 2, in the Parscha Vajischlach, as well as in the Sóhar chádasch fol. 44. col. 1, in the Medrasch néelam.

Sixth, he is called כחו של עשו Cochó schel Esau, that is, the power of Esau, and כח מלכות אדום Cóach malchúth Edóm, that is, the power of the Edomite kingdom. The former appears in the book Schené luchóth habberith, fol. 234. col. 1. twice, and at fol. 243. col. 1. the following is written concerning Esau: כחו הרע למעלה הוא סמאל הוא השטן הוא היצר הרע, that is, his power above is the Sammael, who is the Satan and the evil inclination. The latter, however, is found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 135. col. 2., in the Parscha Tafria, in these words: אביר יעקב הוא כחו של יעקב אבל בכחו של מלכות, אדום הזכיר אביריך, that is, the Mighty One of Jacob (mentioned in Gen 49:24) is the power (that is, the place) of Jacob, but of the Cóach malchúth Edom, that is, the power of the Edomite kingdom, mention is made (in Jer 46:15) with the words "your mighty ones." And the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai teaches shortly before this that Sammael is called in the plural "your mighty ones," לפי שזה שיהיה שמה כולל כל האברים שתחת ידו, that is, because the prince of that kingdom (namely the Edomite kingdom, mentioned previously) encompasses all the mighty ones who stand under his power.

Seventh, he is called שרו של רומי Saró schel Rómi, that is, the Prince over Rome, or the Roman Prince, or the Prince of the Roman Empire (for Romi also sometimes signifies the Roman Empire, as was demonstrated above in the 17th chapter, p. 729), or also שרו של כך רומי Saró schel kerách Rómi, that is, the Prince of the City of Rome. The name Saró or Sar schel Rómi appears in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 53. col. 4., in the Parascha Mikkéz, with these words: עשרה נכתבו בבית דין של מעלה ונתנו לו לסמאל, הרשע שרו של רומי, that is, Ten have been written down in the highest court and given to the wicked Sammaël, the saró schel Rómi, that is, the Prince over Rome (or the Roman Prince). So too writes Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 89. col. 3., in the Parascha Beschállach, on the words of Isa 34:5, "For my sword is drunk in heaven, and behold, it shall come down upon Edom," in the following manner: זהו שאמרם: ז"ל בספר היכלות על סמאל שר של רומי וכחותיו ושמה לו נקמה לגחנקם ממנו עד שיגיע 'פקוד יי' על צבא המרום במרום שהוא נשחט ומוטל הוא וכל שרי מלכיות במרום כגדיי' וכו', that is, This is that which our sages, of blessed memory, have said in the Sépfér bechalóth concerning Sammaël, the Sar schel Rómi, that is, the Prince over Rome, and his powers, for whom vengeance, to be taken upon him, is held in reserve so long until the time arrives (in which shall be fulfilled what is written in Isa 24:21): "At that time the LORD shall visit punishment upon the high host on high"; for he (namely Sammaël) shall, together with all the princes of the kingdoms who are on high, be slaughtered or massacred and cast down like the young goats and the lambs of the Day of Atonement.

The name Saró schel kerách Rómi, that is, the Prince of the City of Rome, is found in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 37. col. 3. numero 13, and the words there read as follows: עתיד לדחוף שרו של כך רומי ממחיצתו ושחט וגו' כי זבח ליי' בבצרה, that is, He will drive out the Saró schel kerách Rómi, that is, the Prince of the City of Rome, from his paneling (that is, the place of his dwelling), and slaughter him

✠ (according to the prophecy of Isa 34:6): For the Lord holds a slaughter at Bozrah.

Eighth, he is called עמלק Sar Amalek, that is, the Prince of Amalek, concerning which the Jalkut chadasch fol. 109, col. 3, under the title Keschafim, contains the following: שר של עמלק הוא ראש הקליפה ולכן נקרא עמלק אותיות ע"ס that is, the Prince of Amalek is the chief among the Kelifôth (or Kelifos), that is, the husks (by which, as already mentioned above, evil spirits are understood); for this reason he is called Amalek, which consists of the letters of Am kal (meaning either a light people, or a people of one hundred and thirty), because he (Amalek) came with one hundred and thirty armies of Sammaël, for the word Sammaël amounts in numerical value to one hundred and thirty-one, since he has one hundred and thirty armies. And in the book Schené luchôth habberith, one reads at fol. 307, col. 1: עצם גוף הטמא ושרו הוא סמאל that is, Amalek is the impure body itself, and Sammaël is his prince.

Ninth, He is called קליפת אדום ועמלק Kelifâth Edom va-Amaleck, that is, the Kelifa or shell of Edom and Amalek, and one reads this in the book Emek hammelech fol. 130. col. 1., in the 11th chapter under the title Schâar réscha of anpin, with these words: כשודשוד למעלה או כחזיר ובפרט בשעת המגפה בר: מנן נראה לבני אדם כשודשוד שחור ובאמת לא ינצל האיש הרואה אותו וגם שור וחמור כלב סמאל נראה כשודשוד למעלה או כחזיר ובפרט בשעת המגפה בר: מנן נראה לבני אדם כשודשוד שחור ובאמת לא ינצל האיש הרואה אותו וגם שור וחמור כלב סמאל נראה כשודשוד למעלה או כחזיר ובפרט בשעת המגפה בר: that is, Sammaël appears from above as an ox, or as a swine; especially at the time of the plague (or the pestilence), from which may God preserve us, he appears to men as a black ox; and truly, whoever sees him will not be saved. So also do (the names) ox, ass, dog prove, which signify the Kelifa or shell of Edom, Ishmael, and Amalek, that he is a beast.

Tenth, He is called כחו של עמלק Cochô schel Amalek, that is, the power of Amalek, and this is found in the book Maaréchéth ha'êlabûth fol. 257. col. 1., with these words: במלחמת עמלק נשא משה עשר אצבעות ידיו למעלה כנגד עשר הספרות לוחן כלן בעטרה שהיא גבורת ישראל הנלחמת להם וגו' והוצרך משה לכל זה כנגד כחו של עמלק הינן מצד הנחש שהוא לצד שמאל שהוא הפחד ולכן נקרא כחו של עמאל that is, Moses had in the war against Amalek raised the ten fingers of his hands upward, in regard to the ten Sefirôth (or Sefhiros), in order to unite them all in the Crown, which is the power of the Israelites that fights for them, וְעַתָּה. And Moses had need to do all of this in regard to the power of Amalek, who sucks from the side of the serpent, which is on the left side, namely that of fear; for this reason that (power) is called Sammaël, and he is the prince of Esau.

Since it has now been thoroughly demonstrated above in Chapter 17 that the Jews understand by the names Esau, Edom, Romi, and Amalek the Christian world, it is irrefutably true that, according to their godless teaching, the supreme devil Sammaël is the prince and ruler of Christendom. The reason why Sammaël is supposed to have been set over it is indicated in the Sepher habbahir fol. 12. col. 4., where the punishment for the seduction of Adam and Eve is treated, and it is written there as follows: סמאל נענש שנעשה שר מעשו הרשע לעתיד כשיעקור הק"ב מלכות אדם במהרה בימינו ישפל חחילה שג' יפקוד יי' על צבא המרום במרום that is: Sammaël was punished by being made the prince of the godless Esau; but the Holy and Blessed God will in the future, when He uproots the Edomite kingdom (which may happen swiftly and in our own lifetime), humble him first, as it is said (Isa 24:21): "The Lord will visit punishment upon the upper host on high."

It is also written that the Leviathan is the prince of Edom, as can be seen in the book Caphtor upherach fol. 132. col. 1., where it is written: עתיד גבריאל לעשות קניגיא עם לויתן שנאמר תמשוך לויתן בחכה ובחבל תשקיע לשונו הכוונה על זה המאמר עתיד גבריאל לעשות קניגיא עם לויתן רמז בו מלחמה עם לויתן שר של ארומ דכתיב מי זה בא מאדום that is: Gabriel will in the future conduct a hunt with the Leviathan, as it is said (Job 40:20): Can you draw out the Leviathan with a hook, and press down his tongue with a cord? The purpose of these words, that Gabriel will in the future hold a hunt with the Leviathan, consists in this: that thereby the war with the Leviathan, the prince of Edom, is meant, as it is said (Isa 63:1): Who is this that comes from Edom? And in the book Schechechath léket, under the title Maschiach utbechiath hammetbim at numero 15., the following is read from the book Tikkunim: שור וחמור דאינון ממונין דעשו: וישמעאל ייתון רכיבין עלייהו תרין משיחין ושלטי עלייהו that is: Upon the ox and the ass, which are the appointed ones of Esau and Ishmael, the two Messiahs will come riding, and will rule over them. And in the book Maaréchet ha'elabuth it is taught at fol. 76. col. 1.: נחש הקדמוני היא שרו של עשו that is: The ancient serpent is the prince of Esau. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, at fol. 35. col. 4. in the Parashah Toledoth, it is written: השטן הוא שרו של עשו that is: The Satan is the prince of Esau. Likewise it stands in the book Schené luchóth habberith fol. 233. col. 1.: נחש הוא כחו של עשו that is: The serpent is the power of Esau. And in the Jalkut chadasch at fol. 38. col. 4. numerô 36. under the title Babel, taken from the 124th Ofan of the book Megalleh amykkóth, it is written: כה של עשו הוא כלב חזיר that is: The power of Esau is the dog and the swine. This is also to be found, with some variation, in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 52. col. 1. in the Parashah Toledoth. And in the book Emek hammelech one reads at fol. 117. col. 2. under the title Scháar kirjáth árba: הכלב הוא קליפת עמלק that is: The dog is the Kelifa, or shell, of Amalek.

Likewise it is reported in the book Megalléh amykkóth fol. 10. col. 4. in the fortieth Ofan: עורב הוא שר של אדום that is: The raven is the prince of Edom. Furthermore, in the Jalkut chadásch fol. 49. col. 2. numerò 92. it is found: השעיר שהוא כחו של עשו מעורר תגר עם איש חלק הוא יעקב that is: The Sair, that is, the hairy one or devil, who is the power of Esau, stirs up strife with the smooth man, namely Jacob. In all of these cited passages, however, Sammael is understood throughout; he who, as I have indicated above, is called the Leviathan, the ox, the ass, the ancient serpent, the serpent, the Satan, the dog, the swine, the hairy one, and the raven.

Furthermore, there is also found in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 49. col. 3. in the Parascha Toledóth, that the planet Mars is the prince of Esau, in these words: יפת השתתף בשרו של עשו שהוא מאדים that is, Japhet has been associated with the prince of Esau, who is Mars; which is also to be read in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 38. under the title Gilgúlim, and numero 28. under the title Sammael. By Mars, however, Sammael is also understood, as he is called in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 79. col. 4. in the Parascha Beschállach, and in Rabbi Isaac Karo's book Toledóth Jizchak fol. 52. col. 1. in the aforementioned Parascha, the force of the Sphæra or sphere of Mars; and in the aforesaid book Toledóth Jizchak fol. 76. col. 1. in the Parascha Acharé moth, as well as in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 141. col. 3. in the said Parascha Acharé moth, he is called the soul of Mars, concerning which something was also reported above in the second chapter, paginá 104. from fol. 79. col. 4. of Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses.

Here I must also note that, when I stayed in Amsterdam in the year 1681 and had gone with a Portuguese scholar to the then-rabbi of the High-German Jews, by the name of Rabbi David Lida, in order to hold a conversation with him on the subject of religion, he, besides uttering horrible blasphemies against Christ, sought to prove from the book Schené Luchóth habberíth, fol. 243, col. 4, that the chief devil Sammael rules over Christendom, because when the two names Sammael and Edom are written intertwined with one another, the four outermost letters, read crosswise, again form the name Sammael, while the four inner letters form the name Edom, which is supposed to signify Christendom, as was indicated above in Chapter 17, and that the cross signifies that people which holds the Crucified One to be the Son of God and worships Him as a God; and according to his statement, the name Sammael must be written over Edom in the following manner.

on which basis the four outer letters contain the letters of the word Sammael, while the four inner letters contain those of the word Edom, of which something has already been mentioned above in the 16th chapter, p. 646. At this point I reflected for a moment on how I might make clear to him the absurdity of this tasteless proof, and it occurred to me that if one writes the name אַבְרָם Abram (which was the patriarch Abraham's first name, in place of which he was afterward, as may be read in Gen 17:5, named Abraham) beneath the name סַמְאֵל Sammael in such a manner: that the name Sammael likewise comes out through the four outer letters, and the name Abram through the four inner letters when read crosswise (which, to be sure, does not show itself as clearly in Latin letters as it does in Hebrew, since in the Hebrew language the letter Aleph or A can be read not only as an A but also as an E, etc., depending on which vowel is placed alongside it), one could thereby prove against the Jews that the chief devil Sammael is the prince and ruler of Abram and his descendants. Furthermore, I said to him that just as the double cross between the names Sammael and Edom is supposed, according to his interpretation, to signify Christendom, which believes in the crucified Christ, so one could equally say in turn that the same cross between the name Sammael and Abram signifies the godless descendants of the pious Abraham, who crucified the true Messiah. But just as little as the Jews would regard this proof against them as valid, just so little can such a proof directed against the Christians be considered of any weight, since it consists in a tasteless Phantasey.

According to the foolish teaching of many rabbis, this Sammael is also supposed to be the angel who wrestled with Jacob, as is read in Gen 32:24 and Hos 12:4, as has already been briefly indicated above in this chapter on page 839.

1. For this reason, concerning the words of Gen 32:24, "A man wrestled with him," the following is written in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 65, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajéschef: כִּבְרֵי יָדַעַת כִּי הַמַּלְאָךְ הַזֶּה הוּא עֶשָׂו שֶׁל עֵשָׂו, that is: It is already known to you that this angel is the prince of Esau. The same is also to be found in Bereschith rábba, fol. 70, col. 2, in the 77th Parascha, and in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 43, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajischlach, as well as in the book Toledóth Jizchak, fol. 36, col. 1, in the last-mentioned Parascha, and in the small Jalkut Rubéni, number 119, under the title Malach. And in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 45, col. 2, in the aforementioned Parascha Vajischlach, the following stands concerning this: זה סמאל שבא להזכיר עונותיהם של ישראל, that is: This is the Sammael, who came to report the sins of the Israelites. Likewise, in the small Jalkut Rubéni, number 1, under the title שעבוד Schiavúð, the following is read concerning the aforementioned words of Gen 32: הוא סמאל דכא ואדום בעא דאחייתב יעקב תחת שעבודא דאדום, that is: This is the Sammael, the prince of Edom, who desired that Jacob should be delivered into the servitude of Edom. This is also to be found in Sohar chádasc, fol. 44, col. 1. And in the aforementioned small Jalkut Rubéni, number 49, under the title Sammael, the following is taught from the book Gále rásja: סמאל ביעקב שהוא דוגמת אדם הראשון נעשה מלחמה עמו ולא היה יכול לעשות לו רעה שהיה מקיף מימינו אברהם ומשמאלו יצחק חזה סמאל רוצה לפחוד מעל יעקב ולא רצה יעקב עד שהודה בברכתו אשר קנה מעשו ומאותו פעם אבד סמאל כחו שהיה לו בכף ירכו, that is: The Sammael encountered Jacob, who bore the form of the first man, and strove with him; but he could do him no harm, because Abraham surrounded him on his right side and Isaac on his left side. And when the Sammael desired to part from Jacob, Jacob would not permit it until he had consented to his blessing, which he had purchased from Esau. And from that time on, the Sammael caused that the strength which Jacob had within him was lost, and he touched the socket of his hip. The same is also to be seen in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 61, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajischlach. Sammael is also said to have appeared at that time in the form of Esau, as was indicated above on page 825 from fol. 62, col. 2, of the great Jalkut Rubéni.

Others, however, teach that the angel who wrestled with Jacob was the angel Michael, and in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 119, col. 4, numéro 101, the following is written on this matter: אותו המלאך שנתאבק עם יעקב היה מיכאל וכו' והיינו היתה that is: The angel who had wrestled with Jacob was Michael, and his intention was directed toward the honor of God, etc. So also in the book Avodáth hakkodesch, in the fourth chapter of the third part, which is called Chéleck battáchblith, fol. 58, col. 4, the following is read: בספר סודי רזי ויאבק איש יש אומרים שרו של עשו היה ויש אומרים מיכאל היה. אמר רבי טרפון לא היה לו רשות למיכאל לזוז ממקומו עד שנתן לו יעקב רשות ויאמר שלחני אמר לו גנג אתה או קוביוסטוס אתה אמר לו עמוד וראה באו כתות כתות של מלאכי השרת שאומרים למיכאל עלה כי הגיע זמן השירה לומר אמר להם איני יכול מפני זה that is: In the book Sode rase it is written (concerning the words:) "And a man wrestled with him," that some say it was the prince of Esau, while others say it was Michael. Rabbi Tarpon said that Michael had no authority to depart from his place until Jacob gave him permission. And when Michael said "let me go," Jacob said to him: you are a thief, or a dice-player. But when Michael said to him, "stand still and see," there came troops of ministering angels who said to Michael: ascend (into heaven,) for the time to sing the song has come. He, however, answered them: I cannot, on account of this one (namely Jacob, who is detaining me.) This is also found in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 61, col. 1, in the Parashah Vajischlach, and is taken from the Talmudic tractate Chollin fol. 91, col. 2.

The erring Jews must know, however, that this man, who is called an angel in Hos 12:4, was the uncreated Michael and the eternal Son of God, who is called in Gen 48:16 מלאך הגואל Malach haggôél, that is, the angel, the redeemer, and in Gen 31:11 מלאך האלהים Malach haelohim, that is, the angel of God, and in Isa 63:9 מלאך הפנים Malach happánim, that is, the angel of the countenance, and likewise in Mal 3:1 מלאך הברית Malach habberith, that is, the angel of the covenant. That He was God Himself is sufficiently proven, first of all, from the fact that Jacob desired a blessing from Him, saying to Him: I will not let you go unless you bless me. But how could the pious Jacob have sought a blessing from the devil Sammael, or from a created angel, as a mere creature? One reads in Gen 48:16 that Jacob said: May the Malach haggôél, or the angel who has redeemed me from all evil, bless the boys; concerning which it is written in the book Avodáth hakkodesch, in the 12th chapter of the third part, fol. 70, col. 2, as follows: מה שיאמר שזה המלאך אינו מן הנפרדים אמרו יברך את הנערים וחלילה לאבינו הקדוש ע"ה שיבקש מהנפרד שיברך את בניו כי אין ברכה מתבקשת כי אם ממי שבידו ורשותו לברך שהוא היחיד המיוחד ית' והמבקש מזולתו אין אין לו אלוה ועל זה נאמר אותי עזבו מקור מים חיים לחצוב להם בארות בארות נשברים אשר לא יכלו המים That is: That which establishes (and confirms) that this angel was not one of the (Intelligentiis) abstractis (that is, of those angels who were created without bodies) is the statement of that same person (namely Jacob), (in which he declares:) May he bless the boys; and far be it from our holy father, upon whom be peace, that he should have asked of an Intelligentia abstracta, that is, an angel created without a body, that he should bless his sons; for a blessing is sought from none other than the one in whose power and authority it lies to bless, who is the one blessed God; and whoever seeks a blessing from anyone else has no God, and of such a person it is said (Jer 2:13): Me, the living fountain, they have forsaken, and they hew out for themselves cisterns here and there that are broken and hold no water. Since, therefore, no one but God can bless, why should Jacob have sought a blessing from a created angel?

Second, it is proven from this that this angel was God, because Jacob said in Gen 32:30: "And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel, for I have seen God face to face, and yet my life has been preserved." For it was commonly held among the Jews in ancient times that a man who sees the Lord God must die, as is clearly seen in Deut 5:24-25, Judg 13:22, and Isa 6:5; and Jacob rejoiced here that he had seen God and yet had been kept alive. But if he had believed that it had been a created angel, he would have had no cause to say such a thing.

Third, it is established from Gen 35:9-11, where the words read as follows: "And God appeared to Jacob again, after he had come from Mesopotamia, and blessed him, and said to him: Your name is Jacob, but you shall no longer be called Jacob; rather, Israel shall be your name. And so he called him Israel. And God said to him: I am God Almighty." From this it is evident that the man or angel who had wrestled with Jacob, and had blessed him, and had said to him in Gen 32:28, "You shall no longer be called Jacob, but Israel, for you have striven with God and with men," appeared to him again here, blessed him, and said to him that he should no longer be called Jacob but Israel; and also declared therewith that he was God Almighty.

Fourth, it is confirmed by the fact that it is written in Hos 12:4 that Jacob wrestled with the angel and overcame him, and also that he met him at Bethel. But the one whom he met at Bethel says, in Gen 28:13, "I am the LORD, the God of Abraham your father," etc. And in Gen 35:7, 15, he is called God, who revealed Himself to Jacob at Bethel and spoke with him. So also in the Chaldean translation of the fourth and fifth verses of the aforementioned twelfth chapter of Hosea, the following is written concerning this angel: בביתאל אתגלי עלוהי ותמן ומלל עמנא נביא אמר להון הוא יי אלהי צבאות דאתגלי על אברהם : that is, "At Bethel he appeared to him (to Jacob), and there he spoke with us. O you prophet! tell them: he is the LORD, the God of Zebaoth, who appeared to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." Finally, fifth, it is proven from the fact that the aforementioned angel was the Malach baggoël, that is, the angel of the Redeemer, which Rabbi David Kimchi himself acknowledges in his commentary on Hos 12:4, when he writes: אמרו רזל כי המלאך הזה הוא מיכאל : that is, "Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: this angel was Michael, and of him (namely Jacob) said (in Gen 48:16): "The angel who has redeemed me from all evil.'" Likewise, Abarbenel teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 183, col. 4, in the Parascha Mischpatim, on the words of Exod 23:20, "Behold, I send an angel before you," that by this angel Michael and the Málach baggoël are to be understood, where he says: המלאך הנזכר כאן הוא מיכאל השר הגדול והוא המלאך

הגואל ששמו כשם רבו והנקרא מלאך פניו : that is, "The angel of whom mention is made here is the great prince Michael, the Málach baggoël, that is, the angel of the Redeemer, who bears his Lord's name and is called the angel of His countenance."

What the aforementioned Málach baggoël is not a created but an uncreated angel, and is God Himself, is taught by Rabbi Meïr ben Gábbai in his book Avodáth hakkódesh, in the 31st chapter of the third part, which is called Chélek battáchlith, fol. 87, col. 4, in these words: מה שכתוב ויאמר אלי מלאך האלהים בחלום: יעקב ואמר הנני אין זה מן הנפרדים אבל הוא המלאך הגואל אותי מכל רע וזה אמר אנכי האל ביתאל ונקרא מלאך לפד שאבאר במה שיבא בסד : והוא הנאמר בו וירא מלאך יי אליו בלבת אש מתוך הסנה ולפי שהוא מלאך פניו ופני האדם עצמו פרגם בו ואתגלי מלאכא דיי שהו לאמרו וירא אליו יי דנאמר באברהם ויצחק ושוה לאמרו וירא אלהים אל יעקב וגו' והוא : that is, what is written (Gen 31:11: "And the angel of God spoke to me in a dream, Jacob; and I answered, Here am I"): this one is not among those angels who were created without bodies, but he is that angel who rescued him from all evil; for this reason he (namely the angel, Gen 31:13) said: "I am the God of Bethel." He is called an angel, however, through a mystery which I will explain in what follows with the help of God. He is also the one of whom it is said (Exod 3:2): "And the angel of the Lord appeared to him in a fiery flame out of the bush." And since he is the angel of His (understand: God's) countenance, and the countenance (of a man) is the man himself, it (the Onkelos in his Chaldaic translation) rendered it thus: "And the angel of the Lord appeared," which is just the same as if it had been said, "And the Lord (or Jehova) appeared to him," which is said of Abraham and Isaac (Gen 18:1 and Gen 26:2, 24); and it is just the same as if it had been said: "And God appeared to Jacob," etc. This angel is also necessarily the one of whom it is said (Exod 14:19): "Then the angel of God arose." Thus he is also necessarily the angel of the covenant.

Furthermore, the aforementioned Rabbi Meir ben Gabbai writes in the said book Avodath hakkodesh, in the 34th chapter of the fourth part, fol. 136. col. 4., that this angel gave the Law from Mount Sinai, in these words: איפשר לומר עוד כי רבי יוחנן מודה שלא הגיעו הדברות לישראל על יד אמצעי כפשוטן של כתובים והמלאך שהזכיר אינו מן הנפרדים אבל הוא המלאך הגואל והוא שכתוב בו ויסע מלאך האלהים מלאך : that is: One may also further say that Rabbi Jochanan concedes that the Ten Words (that is, commandments) did not come to the Israelites through an intermediary, according to the literal sense of the Scriptures; and the angel of whom he makes mention is not one of those angels who were created without bodies, but rather he is the Malach baggoël, that is, the Angel of the Redeemer; and he is the same one of whom it is said (Exod 14:19): "Then the Angel of God arose"; the angel who is God; and he is the very one who proclaimed the (ten) Words (that is, commandments) to the children of Israel, as it is said (Exod 20:1): "And God spoke." We see, therefore, from the cited words of Rabbi Meir ben Gabbai, that the Angel of the Redeemer is God Himself. Since now the angel who wrestled with Jacob was the Angel of the Redeemer, it follows irrefutably that he too is God. How then do the senseless Jews wish to make the devil Sammaël out of him? It is intended, however, God willing, that the divinity of this angel shall be treated by me at greater length in another book.

We must now also examine what prince the Jews, according to their teaching, are supposed to have, and it is to be noted that, although in the aforementioned book Avodath hakkodesch, in the 4th chapter of the first part, fol. 10. col. 3., the following is read: הנה ישראל אינם נמסרים לשום כח ולשום שר ואל כלל כי אם לי"י that is (Behold, the Israelites are not delivered over to any power, or any prince, or any god whatsoever, except to the Lord alone, according to the content of what is read in Lev 25:55: For the children of Israel are my servants, etc. (as also according to what stands in Deut 32:9:) For the Lord's portion is His people), they nevertheless teach that the angel Michael is their prince; for this reason it is written in the book Schuäre ora, fol. 60. col. 3. as follows: מיכאל הכהן הגדול שהוא נושא הדגל יתברך that is (The blessed Lord has given the high priest Michael, who bears the banner, to the Israelites as their prince), concerning which still more is to be found in the book Zijóni, fol. 31. col. 4. and fol. 53. col. 2. Likewise, Rabbi Joseph ben David Jachjah teaches in his commentary on the prophet Daniel, on the words of Dan 12:1, "At that time the great prince Michael, who stands for the children of your people, shall arise," the following: ה' אומות יש להם בשמים ע' שרים וכן לישראל יש שר אחד והוא מיכאל ואמנם יתחלף שר ישראל בהנהגתו עמו מהנהגת שאר השרים לאומותיהם כי שרי העמים הם אלהיהם ויפעלו בהם כאלוהות ולא ישגיחו מזולת שריהם ואמנם ישראל הם מושגחים מה' ואם מיכאל יפעל בהם יהיה במצות קונו that is (The seventy peoples have seventy princes in heaven; likewise Israel also has one prince, namely Michael. There is, however, a difference between the prince of Israel and the governance of his people, and the other princes with respect to their peoples: for the princes of the peoples are their gods, and deal with them as gods; nor are they provided for by anyone other than their princes. The Israelites, however, are provided for by the Lord; and although Michael rules over them, this nonetheless occurs by command of his Creator, and he does nothing, whether small or great, without permission.)

Why he is called the Prince of Israel is taught in the aforementioned book Avodath hakkodesch, in the fourth chapter of the third part, which is called

Chelek hattachlith, fol. 59. col. 2, as follows: לא נקרא כן כי אם על שהוא תובע צרכיהם ומדבר ומליץ טוב עליהם. אמרו בואלה שמות רכא פרק יח ורבינו הקדוש אומר זה מיכאל לעצמו שנא 'ובעת ההיא יעמוד מיכאל השר הגדול העומד על בני עמך שהוא תובע צרכיהן של ישראל ומדבר אליהם שנ' ויען מלאך יי' ויאמר יי' 'צבאות עד מתי אתה לא תרחם את ירושלים that is (He is called by this name for no other reason than that he demands what they have need of, and speaks on their behalf, and is their advocate. In Shemoth rabba it is said in the 18th chapter: Our holy Rabbi says, this is Michael himself, as it is recorded in Dan 12:1: At that same time the great Prince Michael, who stands for your people, shall arise. And this name Prince is given to him because he demands the necessities of the Israelites and speaks on their behalf, as it is said in Zech 1:12: Then the Angel of the LORD answered and said, LORD Zebaoth, how long wilt Thou then not have mercy upon Jerusalem.)

Regarding the time at which he is supposed to have been made prince of the Israelites, the rabbis write about this in various ways. In the Jalkút chádasch, it is written at fol. 91, col. 4, numero 171, under the title Jacob, as follows: ויאבק איש עמו זה מיכאל באותה שעה בקשו כת של מיכאל לסכן את יעקב עד שנגלה עליהם הק"ה אמר לו הק"ה למיכאל כך עשית כהן שלי בעל מום אמר לו רבונו של עולם הרי אני כהן שלך אמר לו אתה למעלה והוא למטה מיד בקש מיכאל מן רפאל ואמר לו חברי עמוד עמי בצרה ורפא אותו מיד ירד ורפא אותו אמר לו הק"ה מיכאל למה עשית כן לבן בכורי אמר לו רבונו של עולם לכבודך עשיתי פד' כדי שלא יתירא מפני עשו בראותו שגבר על המלאך אמר לו מכל שכן על עשו אמר לו מעכשיו תהא ממונה עליו ועל זרעו וכו' that is: "And a man wrestled with him" - this was Michaël. At that same hour, Michaël's company (that is, the angels who stand under him) sought to put Jacob in danger, until the Holy Blessed God appeared to them. Then God said to Michaël: you have thus made my priest (namely Jacob) defective (in that through the wrestling you injured his hip). To this he replied: O Lord of the World! behold, I am your priest. But God said in response: you are a priest up above (in Heaven), and he is one down here (on earth). Upon this, Michaël immediately entreated Raphaël and said to him: my companion, stand by me in this distress and heal him (namely Jacob in his hip); and he came down at once and healed him. Then the Holy Blessed God said to Michaël: why have you done this to my firstborn son (in that you injured him)? But he answered Him: O Lord of the World! I did it for your honor, so that he would not fear Esau when he sees that he has overpowered an angel, and would thereby think that he would all the more overcome Esau. Whereupon God said to him: from now on you shall be appointed over him and his seed, &c. According to this account, then, he is supposed to have become prince of Israel at the time when he wrestled with Jacob, as is also read in the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 120, under the title Malach.

In the aforementioned Jalkut chádascb fol. 61. col. 4. numero 13, under the title David, mention is made of another time, and it is reported that he was appointed over the Jews only at the time when Solomon had built the Temple. The words read as follows: לא בשטר לא עם כל זה בשטר לא הניחוהו המלאכים ליכנס בשערי ירושלים של מעלה עד שבנה שלמה המקדש ואז מינה הקב"ה למיכאל וששים מלאכים עמו שיהיו אפוטרופוסין לישראל ואז הכניס מיכאל את דוד בשערי ירושלים ועשו מרכבה עם אבות העולם והיינו אבן מאסו הבונים וגו' that is: When David had sinned, the angels, although God had forgiven him, would nonetheless not permit him to enter the gates of the upper Jerusalem until Solomon had built the Temple; and at that time God appointed Michael and sixty angels with him, that they should be the overseers of Israel. And at that same time Michael allowed David to enter through the gates of Jerusalem, and joined him to the fathers of the world, and this is what is said (Ps 118:22): The stone which the builders rejected has become the cornerstone.

In Rabbi Isaac Karo's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, which is called Toledóth Jizchak, there stands at fol. 70, col. 2, in the Parascha Shemini, yet another opinion, and there, concerning the words of Lev 9:4, ה' נראה אליכם Hajóm Jehova nirah aleécbm, that is, "Today the LORD has appeared to you," the following is written: נראה בזאת המלה יש אותיות אהרן ומלת אליכם יש בו אותיות מיכאל שרו של ישראל לומר שלכבוד אהרן נראת שכינה בגלוי להראות לכל שנתכפר עון העגל ורמז עוד שלכבודו הוקם על ישראל היום מיכאל לשר עליהם. In the word Niráh are contained the letters (of the name) אהרן Aharon, and in the word Alecbém, the letters (of the name) מיכאל Michaël, the Prince of Israel, signifying thereby that the Divine Majesty appeared publicly in honor of Aharon, in order to demonstrate to everyone that the sin which had been committed with the molten calf had been atoned for. It is further indicated by this that, in his honor, Michael was appointed on that same day as prince over Israel.

This is what the conceited Jews write and teach concerning their supposed prince Michael and the seventy princes of the seventy peoples. They must know, however, that on account of the sins they have committed they are a people cast off by God, and that they are no longer the Israelite people, and that the name Israel now belongs to the Christian Church and no longer to them; since all true Christians are spiritual Israelites, inasmuch as all believers are called children of Abraham, as can be seen in Rom 4:11-12 and 9:6-8. The Jews themselves must therefore confess that the name Israel no longer belongs to them and has been given to the Gentiles, for in Echa rabbathi fol. 303, col. 1, concerning the words of Lam 2:3, "He has cut off in His fierce anger all the horn of Israel," the following is written: עשר קרנות הן קרנו של אברהם קרנו של יצחק קרנו של יעקב קרנו של יוסף קרנו של משה קרנה של תורה קרנה של כהונה קרנה של לויה קרנה של נבואה קרנו של בית המקדש קרנו של ישראל וי"א קרנו של משיח וכו' וכולן היו נתונים בראשן של ישראל וכיון שחטאו נטלו מהם והד' גרע כתר אף כל קרן ישראל נתנו 'לאומות העולם וכו' that is: There are ten horns: the horn of Abraham, the horn of Isaac, the horn of Jacob, the horn of Joseph, the horn of Moses, the horn of the Law, the horn of the Priesthood, the horn of the Levitical order, the horn of Prophecy, the horn of the Temple, the horn of Israel; some say also the horn of the Messiah, etc., and all of these had been placed upon the head of the Israelites. But after they had sinned, these were taken from them, and this is what is written: "He has cut off all the horn of Israel in His fierce anger"; and they were given to the peoples of the world, etc. This is also found in the Midrash Tillim, fol. 33, col. 1, on Ps 75. Now if this is so, then they are no longer true Israelites; rather, the Gentiles have been received by God in their place, and consequently the aforementioned angel Michael can no longer be their prince. Therefore one must turn the matter around and say that the uncreated angel Michael, the eternal Son of God, whom the Jews reject, is the prince and ruler of the Christians; whereas the chief devil Sammael is the prince of the Jews. That the eternal Son of God is our prince and ruler is clear from the fact that He is the head of the Christian Church, as can be seen in Eph 1:22 and Col 1:18. He is also our advocate before His heavenly Father, as is read in 1 John 2:1, and our King, as is found in 1 Tim 6:15 and Col 1:13. That the chief devil Sammael is the ruler of the Jews, however, is as clear as sunlight from the fact that they do the works of the devil and blaspheme God the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit in the most terrible manner; and that they shamefully dishonor and despise the holy Evangelists and Apostles, the New Testament, the holy Sacraments, and all of Christendom, as has been demonstrated at length up to this point, all of which proceeds from the impulse and instigation of Satan. And just as Sammael is called a serpent, as has been demonstrated in the preceding section, so too are the Jews called a brood of vipers in Matt 3:7 and 12:34, and serpents and a brood of vipers in Matt 23:33. Christ the Lord also said to them in John 8:44, when they sought to kill Him: "You are of your father the devil, and the desires of your father you want to do; he was a murderer from the beginning." Such murderous and bloodthirsty dispositions the Jews still possess to this day, as will be shown below in the fourteenth chapter of the second part, and they wait daily with eager longing for their supposed Messiah to come, so that they may then murder all Christians in the most wretched and cruel manner.

Chapter XIX.

In this chapter, Sammaël is described as the Angel of Death, and it is shown therewith what the foolish Jews teach concerning the dead.

Since in the preceding Chapter XVIII it was mentioned that Sammaël is also called מלך המות Malach hammaveth (or hammoves, that is, the Angel of Death), I must also give the gracious reader instruction as to what the foolish rabbis teach concerning him with regard to this name. It is then to be known that there are said to be two Angels of Death, of whom one is a holy angel and the other a wicked angel; concerning which it is written in the little book Tuf haarez fol. 16. col. 3. as follows: אין המת בארץ ישראל מת על ידי מלאך קדוש That is: he who dies in the land of Israel dies not through the Angel of Death, but through a holy angel. And at fol. 31. col. 4. it is taught therein: יש שני מלאכים ממונים על המותה אחד ממונה על מתי חוצה לארץ ושמו סמאל ואחד על מתי ארץ ישראל ושמו גבריאל וכל אחד ואחד יש לו חיילות רבות וכל חיילותיו נקראים מלאכי מות ושני ממונים אלו הם עבדים למטטרון והק"ב מודיע למטטרון בכל יום ויום מי הם הנגזרים למיתה באותו יום ומטטרון מצווה לסמאל עבדו ליטול הנפשות הנגזרות למיתה באותו יום בחוצה לארץ ומצווה לגבריאל ליטול הנפשות הנגזרות למיתה בארץ ישראל באותו יום ואלו שני הממונים מעולם לא נטלו נשמה אלא שולח כל אחד ואחד מחיילותיו כי יש מלאך אחד לכל נפש ונפש ומדרוגת כל מלאך ומלאך כפי הראוי למדריגת that is: There are two angels who are appointed over death; one is appointed over those dead who are outside the (promised) land, and he is called Sammaël; the other is appointed over the dead of the land of Israel, and he is called Gabriel; and each of these two has many hosts (standing under him), and all the host-angels of each are called Angels of Death. These two overseers, however, are servants of (the angel) Metatron; and the Holy and Blessed God makes known to Metatron every day which souls are appointed to death on that day, and how many there are; whereupon Metatron commands his servant Sammaël to fetch (or take away) the souls appointed to death on that day outside the (promised) land, and likewise gives Gabriel the command to fetch the souls appointed to die on that day in the land of Israel. These two overseers, however, have never themselves taken a soul from the world, but each sends out one from his hosts (to perform this task); for there is one (particular) angel appointed for every single soul, and there are certain ranks (and distinctions) among the angels, according to the rank of the worthiness of the soul which each angel fetches.

And when that angel has taken the soul and delivered it into the hand of his overseer who sent him out, that angel then passes away from the world, since he was created only to fetch a single soul. This may also be read in the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 13, under the title Metatron.

In the Jalkut Chadasb it stands at fol. 31, col. 3. 4, numero 44, from the Zohar, also as follows: אבל נקראו נבלה לכך מלאך המות לכך נקראו נבלה אבל כל המתים בחוצה לארץ מתים על ידי מלאך המות לא מתים על ידי מלאך המות אלא על ידי מלאך של רחמים השולט בארץ ישראל ונקראו מתים וזהו יחיו מתיך אלו המתים בארץ ישראל נבלתי יקומון אלו מתי חוצה לארץ וכי תימא אם כן מאי רבותייהו דמשה אהרן ומרים יש לומר דאף דמיתו בחוצה לארץ לא מיתו על ידי מלאך המות כי אם על ידי מלאך של רחמים דכתיב על פי יי That is: All the dead outside the (promised) land die through the Angel of Death (namely Sammaël, who is properly called the Angel of Death); therefore they are called Nefela, that is, a dead body or carrion; but those who die in the land of Israel do not die through the Angel of Death, but rather through an Angel of Mercy (understand: Gabriel) who rules in the land of Israel, and these are called Methim or Metim, that is, the dead; and this is (the meaning of the words of Isa 26:19) "Your dead shall live"; these are the dead in the land of Israel: "my dead body shall rise again," these are the dead outside the (promised) land. But if you say, if that is so, what advantage then did Moses, Aaron, and Miriam have (over others): one must say that, although they died outside the (promised) land, they nevertheless did not die through the Angel of Death, but through the Angel of Mercy, as it is written (Deut 34:5 and Num 33:38): "According to the mouth (or command) of the LORD." Something on this matter may also be read in the book Shalshelet ha-Kabbalah, Amsterdam edition, fol. 68, col. 2.

Since the death of Moses is mentioned here, I must take this occasion to present what is written about it in Devarim rabba fol. 246, col. 2, 3, 4, in the Parashah Vezóth habberachá, where one reads that Samael had greatly rejoiced over this, because God had told Moses that he would not cross the Jordan into the Promised Land. And it continues thereafter: באותה שעה אמר משה לפני הקב"ה: רבש"ע אם אין אתה מכניס אותי לא"י הניח אותי כחיה ואחיה ולא אמות אמר לו הקב"ה למשה אם לא תמות בעוה"ז היאך אחייך לעה"ב ולא עוד אלא שאתה עושה תורת פלסתר שכתוב בתורתך על ידיך ואין מידי מציל אמר משה לפני הקב"ה רבש"ע אם אין אתה מכניס אותי לא"י הניח אותי כחיה השדה שהן אוכלין עשבים ושותים מים וחיים ורואין את העולם כך תהא נפשי כאחת מהן אמר לו רב לך. אמר לפניו רבונו של עולם אם לא תניח אותי בעה"ז הניח אותי כד' חיות העולם ומהקטן מזונו מלקט בכל יום ולעת הערב חוזר לקינו כך תהא נפשי כאחד מהן אמר לו רב לך אל תוסף דבר וכו'. כיון שראה משה שאין בריה יכולה להצילו מדרך המות באותה שעה אמר הצור תמים פעלו כי כל דרכיו משפט אל אמונה ואין עול צדיק וישר הוא. מה עשה משה נטל את המגלה וכתב עליה שם המפורש וספר השיר עדיין לא מלא לכתוב עד שהגיע הרגע שבו ימות משה. באותה שעה אמר הקב"ה לגבריאל גבריאל

That is to say, in that hour Moses spoke before the Holy One, blessed be He: "Master of the Universe, if You will not bring me into the Land of Israel, let me remain as a living creature, that I may live and not die." The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Moses: "If you do not die in this world, how shall I revive you in the world to come? And furthermore, you would make My Torah a falsehood, for it is written in My Torah through your hand: 'and none can deliver out of My hand.'" Moses spoke again before the Holy One, blessed be He: "Master of the Universe, if You will not bring me into the Land of Israel, let me remain as a beast of the field, which eats grass and drinks water and lives and sees the world; let my soul be as one of them." He said to him: "Enough for you." He spoke before Him: "Master of the Universe, if You will not let me remain in this world, let me remain as one of the four living creatures of the world, the least of which gathers its food each day and at evening returns to its nest; let my soul be as one of them." He said to him: "Enough for you, enough for you; speak no more of this matter," etc. When Moses saw that no creature could save him from the way of death, he said in that hour: "The Rock, His work is perfect, for all His ways are justice; a God of faithfulness and without iniquity, righteous and upright is He." What did Moses do? He took the scroll and wrote upon it the Explicit Name and the Book of the Song, but had not yet finished writing when the moment arrived in which Moses was to die. In that hour the Holy One, blessed be He, said to Gabriel: "Gabriel, go forth and bring the soul of Moses." He said before Him: "Master of the Universe, he who is equal in worth to six hundred thousand, how can I witness his death? And one in whom such things reside, how can I do him harm?" Afterward He said to Michael: "Go forth and bring the soul of Moses." He said before Him: "Master of the Universe, I was his teacher and he was my disciple; I cannot witness his death." Afterward He said to Samael the Wicked: "Go forth and bring the soul of Moses." Immediately he clothed himself in wrath, girded his sword, wrapped himself in cruelty, and went to meet Moses. When he saw him sitting and writing the Explicit Name, and the radiance of his countenance was like the sun, and he himself was like an angel of the Lord of Hosts, Samael trembled before Moses. He said: "Surely the angels cannot take the soul of Moses." And before Samael showed himself to Moses, Moses already knew that Samael was coming. And when Samael saw the distress of Moses, trembling and anguish seized him like a woman in labor, and he found no opening of the mouth to speak with Moses, until Moses said to Samael: "'There is no peace,' says the Lord, 'for the wicked.' What are you doing here?" He said to him: "I have come to take your soul." He said to him: "Who sent you?" He said to him: "He who created all creatures." He said to him: "You shall not take my soul." He said to him: "The souls of all who come into the world are delivered into my hand." He said to him: "I have more power than all who come into the world." He said to him: "What is your power?" He said to him: "I am the son of Amram, who came forth from my mother's womb already circumcised and had no need of circumcision, and on the very day I was born I found the power of speech and walked on my feet, and I spoke with my father and my mother, and I did not even suckle milk. And when I was three months old I prophesied and said that I was destined to receive the Torah from amid flames of fire. And when I walked outside I entered the palace of the king and took the crown from upon his head. And when I was eighty years old I performed signs and wonders in Egypt, and I brought out six hundred thousand in the sight of all Egypt, and I split the sea into twelve parts, and I turned the bitter waters sweet. And I ascended and trod a path through the heavens, and I took hold in the battle of the angels, and I received the Torah of fire, and I stood beneath a throne of fire, and I dwelt beneath a pillar of fire, and I spoke with Him face to face, and I prevailed over the heavenly retinue, and I revealed their secrets to human beings. And I received the Torah from the right hand of the Holy One, blessed be He, and I taught it to Israel, and I waged war against Sihon and Og, the two mighty warriors of the nations of the world, upon whom, since the time of the Flood, the waters had not reached their ankles on account of their height, and I made the sun and moon stand still at the height of the world, and I struck them with the staff in my hand and slew them. Is there anyone among all who come into the world who could do such things? Go, wicked one, away from here; you have no right to say such a thing. Go, flee from before me; I will not give up my soul."

Since it has also been mentioned that Moses spoke immediately after he was born and prophesied when he was three months old, I must, on account of this, also point out that in the little book Ben Sira fol. 2. col. 2. and fol. 3. col. 3. of the Amsterdam printing, it is read of Ben Sira that he likewise spoke immediately after he was brought into the world; and when his mother had marveled at such speech and knowledge, he let the following words be heard by her: שהיתה בשעה שהיה אבי כן עשה בשעה שהיתה אמו כורעת לילד פתח פיו וקרא אבי ממעי אמו ואמר לא אצא עד שיאמרו לי שמי פתח פיו ואמר צא ויקרא שמך אברהם אמר לא כן שמי אמר לו יקרא נקרא שמך יצחק יעקב וכן כל השבטים וכל אנשי הדור ההוא ואמר לא כן שמי עד שנזדמן שם אליהו ז"ל ואמר יקרא שמך ירמיהו שבימך יקים הק"ה אויב שירים ידו על ירושלים. מה הוא יצא בדיבור אף אני יצאתי בדיבור. מה הוא יצא בנבואה ממעי אמו שנאמר בטרם אצרך בבטן דעתך וכו' אף אני יצאתי בנבואה מה הוא יצא בשמו ממעי אמו אף אני יצאתי בשמי משמי אמי וגו' that is: Do not marvel at me, for there is nothing new under the sun; behold, my father Jeremiah did the same. When his mother stooped down to give birth to him, he opened his mouth and called out from his mother's womb, "My father," and said, "I will not come out until my name is told to me." Then his father opened his mouth and said, "Come out; you shall be called Abraham." But he answered him, "That is not my name." Thereupon his father said to him, "You shall be called Isaac or Jacob," and named besides these all the names of the twelve tribes, as well as all the names of the people of that generation (or those who lived at that time), but he said, "That is not my name either," (and this continued) until Elijah, of blessed memory, came to him and said to him, "You shall be called Jeremiah" (from ירים, Jarim, that is, "he will lift up"), because the Holy and Blessed God will raise up in your days an enemy who will lift his hand against Jerusalem. Just as he came forth speaking from his mother's womb, so too did I come forth speaking. Just as he came forth prophesying from his mother's womb, so too did I come forth prophesying. Just as he came forth with his name from his mother's womb, so too did I come forth with my name from my mother's womb, &c. In what follows thereafter, it is further read that he refused to drink at his mother's breast, but instead demanded of her that she give him meat to eat and old wine to drink, which meat he was also well able to chew, since he is said to have brought his teeth with him into the world, as is to be found at fol. 2. col. 2. When he was one year old, his mother is said to have taken him, at his own request, to school, as may be seen at fol. 3. col. 2., where he engaged the rabbi in an extensive conversation. This matter has, however, already been treated above in Chapter 9, p. 488 and 489, where yet other examples of children who are said to have spoken in their mothers' wombs were also adduced. But let this suffice on the matter. We must return again to the description of the Angel of Death, namely of Sammaël.

Although it was mentioned in the preceding section that all those who die outside the Promised Land must forfeit their lives through Sammaël, it is nonetheless written in Vajikra rabba fol. 151. col. 1. in the 18th Parascha that he has no power over the Jews, where the words read as follows: א"ר יוחנן בשם ר' אלעזר בנו של ר' יוסי הגלילי בשעה שעמדו ישראל על הר סיני ואמרו כל אשר דבר ה' נעשה ונשמע באותה שעה קרא הק"ב למלאך המות ואמר לו אף על פי שעשיתי אותך 'קוסמוקרטור על הבריות אין לך עסק באומה זו למה שהן בני הדא הוא דכתיב בנים אתם לה' that is: Rabbi Jochanan said in the name of Rabbi Elieser, the son of Rabbi Jose the Galilean: at the time when the Israelites stood at Mount Sinai and said (Exod 24:7), "All that the LORD has spoken we will do and obey," the Holy Blessed God called the Angel of Death and said to him: although I have made you ruler over the creatures, you shall have nothing to do with this people. Why? Because they are my children; and this is what is written (Deut 14:1): "You are children of the LORD your God." The like is also to be found in the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 120. col. 3. in the Parascha Ki tissa, and in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 189. col. 2. in the Parascha Haasinu. And in Bammidbar rabba one reads at fol. 219. col. 1. in the 16th Parascha: מה עשה הק"ב כמתן תורה הביא למלאך המות אמר לו: העולם כולו ברשותך חוץ מאומה זו שבחרתי לי אמר רבי אלעזר בנו של רבי יוסי הגלילי אמר מלאך המות לפני הק"ב על חנם נבראתי בעולם אמר לו הק"ב בראתי אותך שתהא that is: What did the Holy Blessed God do when He had given the Law? He summoned the Angel of Death and said to him: the entire world is in your power, excepting this people, which I have chosen for myself. Rabbi Elieser, the son of Rabbi Jose the Galilean, said: the Angel of Death spoke before the Holy and Blessed God, "I have been created in the world in vain"; but God said to him, "I have created you so that you should rule over the idolatrous peoples, excepting this people, over whom you have no power." As for how these two contradictory statements can be reconciled with one another, I shall leave that to the over-clever rabbis to worry about.

The angel of death is also said to have no power over anyone as long as one is studying the Law, as is taught in the Talmudic tractate Maccot (or Maccot)

fol. 10. col. 1., where it is written as follows: רב חסדא הוה יתיב וגריס בבי רב ולא הוה קא יכול שליחא למקרב לגביה דלא הוה שתיק פומיה מגירסא סליק יתיב אארזא דבי רב that is: Raf Chasda sat and read in the school of the Raf, and the one who had been sent (to take his life) could not come near him, because his mouth did not cease from reading (in the Law). Then he (namely the messenger and angel of death) climbed up and seated himself upon a cedar tree (that is, a cedar beam) of the school of the Raf; and when the beam broke and he (namely Raf Chasda) fell silent (and ceased reading), the former gained mastery over him. The following is also read concerning King David in the Talmudic tractate Schabbath, fol. 30. col. 2.: כל יומא דשבתא הוה יתיב וגריס כולי: יומא ההוא יומא דבעי למינח נפשיה קם מלאך המות קמיה ולא יכיל ליה דלא הוה פסק פומיה מגירסא אמר מאי אעביד ליה הוה ליה בוסתנא אחור ביתיה אתא מלאך המות סליק ובחיש באילני נפק למחזי הוה סליק בדרגא איפחת דרגא מתותיה אישתיק ונח נפשיה that is: He sat every Sabbath day and read (or studied) the entire day (in the Law). On that very day on which he was to die, the angel of death placed himself before him; but he could not approach him, because his mouth did not cease from reading (or studying). Then he (namely the angel of death) thought: what shall I do with him? Now that man (namely King David) had a garden behind his house, and when the angel of death climbed up into the trees and shook them, David went outside to see (who was doing this), and climbed up a ladder, and the ladder broke beneath him, and he fell silent, and died. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes in his commentary on this passage as follows: הוה יתיב וגריס that is, he sat and studied, so that the angel of death should not draw near to him, for the Law protects against death. On this subject one may also consult the book Menorath (or Menoras) fol. 63. col. 4. and fol. 64. col. 1., in the first chapter under the title Keläl scheni nevi chélek rischon, as well as Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmath chájim fol. 77. col. 1., in the 20th chapter of the second part.

There were also said to be some over whom the Angel of Death had no power, concerning which the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Báva batrá fol. 17. col. 1.: תנו רבנן ששה לא שלט בהן מלאך המות ואלו הן אברהם יצחק ויעקב משה אהרן ומרים דכתיב בהם על פי ה' ולא מתים לא כתיב בה על פי ה' אמר רבי אלעזר מרים נמי בנשיקה מתה דאתיא שם שם ממש ומפני מה לא נאמר בה על פי ה' שגנאי הדבר לומר that is, our Rabbis teach that there were six over whom the Angel of Death had no power, namely Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of whom it is written: בכל beçól, in all things; מכל miccól, from all things; כל col, all (for of Abraham it is read in Gen 24:1: And the Lord had blessed him in all things; and of Isaac it is written in Gen 27:33: And I have eaten of all things. Of Jacob, however, it is reported in Gen 33:11: And I have enough of all things; and by this, according to the interpretation of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, it is signified that they lacked nothing of any good thing). Moses, Aaron, and Miriam, of whom it is written (Deut 34:5 and Num 33:38): By the mouth of the LORD. Rabbi Eliezer said that Miriam also died by a kiss, which is proven from the fact that the little word שם Scham, that is, "there," is found in connection with both Miriam and Moses (for of Moses it is said in Deut 34:5: So Moses the servant of the LORD died there; and of Miriam it is reported in Num 20:1: And Miriam died there). But why is it not said of her: By the mouth of the LORD? Because the matter is shameful to say (namely, that God should have kissed her, just as He caused Moses and Aaron to die by a kiss). Are these not, however, senseless proofs, by which Holy Scripture is maliciously twisted into a perverse meaning?

Of some it is also read that they did not die at all, but came alive into Paradise, concerning which it is written in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 37. col. 4. in the 19th chapter of the second part, which is called Chélek havóda, as follows: תשעה נכנסו בחייהם לגן עדן ולא טעמו טעם מיתה: חנוך ואליהו ומשיח. ואליעזר עבד אברהם. עבד מלך כושי. וחירם מלך צור. ויעבץ בן יעקב. וסרח בת אשר. ובתיה בת פרעה. ויש אומרים: that is: Nine entered Paradise during their lifetime and did not taste the taste of death. Benjamin the son of Jacob, Kesab the son of David, Serach the daughter of Asher, Bitja the daughter of Pharaoh, Elieser the servant of Abraham, Ebedmelech the Moor, and the Messiah, and Elias, as well as Jabetz the son of Rabbi Jehuda the Prince. Some also say Rabbi Jehoscha ben Levi. In the Jalkut chadasch this appears at fol. 57. col. 2. numero 48. under the title Gan Eden, somewhat altered, in the following manner: תשעה נכנסו חיים לגן עדן חנוך אליהו משיח אליעזר עבד אברהם עבד מלך כושי חירם מלך צור יעבץ בן בנו של רבי יהודה הנשיא סרח בת אשר בתיה בת פרעה ויש אומרים הוצא חירם מלך צור; והכנס תחתיו רבי יהושע בן לוי; that is: Nine entered Paradise alive: Enoch, Elias, the Messiah, Elieser the servant of Abraham, Ebedmelech the Moor, Hiram the king of Tyre, Jabetz the grandson of Rabbi Jehuda the Prince, Serach the daughter of Asher, Bitja the daughter of Pharaoh. There are some, however, who say: remove Hiram the king of Tyre and put Rabbi Jehoscha ben Levi in his place. On this matter one may also consult the Talmud in Masséchet dérech érez fóta fol. 20. col. 3.

It is reported, however, at fol. 69, col. 2, numero 194 of the aforementioned Jalkut chadasch, under the title David, that there were thirteen of them, and the words read as follows: טעם מיתה: חנוך אליעזר עבד אברהם מתושלח חירם מלך צור עבד מלך הכושי שהציל את ירמיה הנביא מן הבור בתיה בת פרעה סרח בת אשר ג' בני קרח ואלהן ז"ל ומשיח ורבי יהושע בן לוי: That is: In another Midrash it is written that Hiram did not taste the taste of death, and that there were thirteen who did not taste the taste of death, namely: Enoch, Eliezer the servant of Abraham, Methuselah, Hiram the king of Tyre, Ebed-melech the Moor, who rescued the prophet Jeremiah from the dungeon; Bitiah the daughter of Pharaoh, Serab the daughter of Asher, the three sons of Korah (of whom mention is made in Exod 6:24), and Elijah of blessed memory, and the Messiah, as well as Rabbi Jehoshua ben Levi.

In the booklet Ben Sira, this appears at fol. 15, col. 2 and fol. 16, col. 1, in a somewhat altered form, and the reasons are given there why they did not die. It is read there that King Nebuchadnezzar asked Ben Sira why the Angel of Death has power over all creatures, except over the race of the bird Mileham, that is, the Phoenix (concerning which something was also indicated in the preceding Chapter 18, p. 829). Thereupon it follows that Ben Sira answered him thus: לא דורו של מלחם העוף בלבד אין מלאך המות שולט במ אף דורו של יונדב ויש אומרים אנשים מבני אדם נכנסו בחיים בגן עדן. אמר לו מי הם. אמר לו חנוך וסרח בת אשר. ובתיה בת פרעה. וחירם מלך צור. ואליעזר עבד אברהם. ועבד מלך הכושי. ועבדו של רבי יהודה. ויעבץ. ורבי יהושע בן לוי. וכל זרע יונדב. וזרע מלחם העוף. אמר לו ספר לי למה נמלטו אלה ממלאך המות. אמר לו אני אספר לך. חנוך לפי שהיה צדיק בדורו שלא היה כמותו והוא חי בגן עדן. ואליעזר עבד אברהם הוא בנו של חם בן נח וכששמע קללת אביו פטר עצמו לאברהם והיה צדיק והוא בגן עדן. סרח בת אשר בעבור שאמרה ליעקב יוסף חי. אמר לה יעקב זה הפה שבשרני על יוסף שהוא חי לא יטעום טעם מות. בתיה בת פרעה לפי שגדלה משה רבינו מקטנותו שלא יאמרו ומה היתה שכרה לכך. ועבד מלך הכושי שהציל את ירמיהו מכור הטיט. ועבדו של רבי יהודה הנשיא על שהיה צדיק עני ושפל רוח. ויעבץ גם הוא מן עץ לפי שהיה צדיק מכל דורו. ורבי יהושע בן לוי שהיה גם הוא צדיק גמור ואהוב למלאך המות. פעם אחת אמר למלאך המות הראני גן עדן. אמר לו בשמחה לך עמי. בדרך אמר לו מפחד אני ממך שמא תהרגני בחרבך שלא ברצונך. אם תאהבני ותרצה שאלך עמך תן לי חרבך בידי עד שאלך עמך ותראני גן עדן כטוב עד שאסתכל בחדריו מן השער. אמר לו בטוב. מיד הוליך אותו. מה עשה רבי יהושע עמד בפתח גן עדן עד שהתחיל לראות וקפץ פתאום ונכנס לגן עדן. גם היה סכיניו של מלאך המות בידו והיה בידו שבע שנים עד שאמר לו הקב"ה יהושע בן לוי מסור הסכיניו השב למלאך המות סכיניו וכשקפץ מלפני מלאך המות ונכנס לגן עדן צעק, מלאך המות צעקה גדולה ורצה להחריב העולם ושתקו אל ולאחר שבע שנים והחזירו לו חירם מלך צור והכניסו הקב"ה לגן עדן כפי שבנה בית המקדש חיים מעולם: מתחילה ירא אלקים נעשה חי בגן עדן אלה שנים ואחר כך נתגאה ואמר אל אני שנאמר בן אדם אמור וגו' לפיכך נטרד מגן עדן ונכנס בגהנם. הודו של יונדב בן רכב מפני שכתב כל הדברים שבספר ירמיהו והיה צדיק ומוכיח לישראל והוא חי בגן עדן. הודו של מלחם העוף כשאכלה חוה מעץ הדעת ונתנה גם לבעלה ואכל עמה קנאה בשאר הבריות והאכילה לכל וראתה למלחם העוף ואמרה לו אכול מזה ממה שאכלו חבירך אמר לה לא די לכם שחטאתם לשם יתברך וגרמתם לאחרים שימותו אלא באתם אלי שתשיאוני להפר צוואת הקב"ה ואוכל ואמות איני שומע לך ואז הוכחה לחוה ולכל הבריות. יצתה בת קול לאלתר ואמרה לחוה ולאדם אתם מצוותי לא שמרתם וחטאתם ובאתם למלחם העוף להחטאו אותו ולא קבל ופחד ממני אף על פי שלא that is: The Angel of Death holds sway not only over the race of the bird Phoenix, but there are also those of the race of Jonadab, and, according to some accounts, certain other human beings as well, who entered Paradise while still alive. He (namely Nebuchadnezzar) then said to him: who are they? He answered him: Enoch, and Serab the daughter of Asher, and Bitya the daughter of Pharaoh, and Hiram the king of Tyre, and Eliezer the servant of Abraham, and Ebed-melech the Moor, and the servant of Rabbi Judah, and Jabez, and Rabbi Jehoshua ben Levi, and the entire race of Jonadab, as well as the race of the bird Phoenix. Thereupon the king said to him: tell me the reason why these were delivered from the Angel of Death; and he gave him this answer: I will tell you. Enoch was delivered because he was righteous in his time, for there was none like him; therefore he lives in Paradise. Eliezer, the servant of Abraham, is the son of Cham, the son of Noah: when he heard his father's curse, he gave himself over to Abraham and was righteous; therefore he is in Paradise. Serab the daughter of Asher was delivered from him because she said to Jacob: Joseph is still alive; for this reason Jacob said: this mouth, which brought me the good tidings of Joseph that he still lives, shall not taste the taste of death. Bitya the daughter of Pharaoh was delivered from him because she raised our teacher Moses from his childhood, so that no one might say: what reward then did she receive for this? And Ebed-melech the Moor was free from him because he rescued Jeremiah from the pit of mire. And the servant of Rabbi Judah the Prince was delivered from him because he was righteous, humble, and of a lowly spirit. Jabez likewise is in Paradise, because he was more righteous than all the people who lived in his time. Rabbi Jehoshua ben Levi was delivered from him because he too was a perfect righteous man and was beloved by the Angel of Death. He said to the Angel of Death on one occasion: let me see Paradise. He answered him with joy: come with me. When they were on the way, Rabbi Jehoshua said to him: I am afraid of you; you might kill me with your sword against your will. If you love me and wish me to go with you, give me your sword into my hand before I go with you, and show me Paradise in good faith, until I shall have viewed its chambers from the gate. He answered him: very well, and led him there. What did Rabbi Jehoshua do? He stood at the gate of Paradise, and before he began to look upon it, he leaped suddenly and entered into Paradise. He also had the knife of the Angel of Death in his hand, and kept it for seven years, until the Holy and Blessed God said to him: Jehoshua ben Levi, you have done a great thing; give the Angel of Death back his knife. But when he had leaped away from the Angel of Death and entered into Paradise, the Angel of Death cried out with a great cry and wished to destroy the world; God, however, caused him to be silent, and had it returned to him after seven years. Hiram the king of Tyre the Holy Blessed God allowed to enter Paradise because he had built the Temple, and had at first been God-fearing; and he lived a thousand years in Paradise. But after this he became proud and said: I am a God, for he said: Son of man, say, etc.; therefore he was cast out of Paradise and descended into Hell. The race of Jonadab the son of Rechab was delivered from him because it had written down all the things that are in the book of Jeremiah, and was righteous, and also rebuked the Israelites; therefore it lives in Paradise. And the race of the bird Phoenix was delivered from him because, when Eve had eaten of the Tree of Knowledge and had given some to her husband and he had eaten, she became envious of the remaining creatures and gave all of them to eat, and she saw the bird Phoenix and said to him: eat of this, of which your companions have also eaten. But he said to her: it is not enough for you that you have sinned against the Blessed God and have given others occasion to die; but you also come to me so that you (Eve) might deceive me (or lead me astray) into breaking the commandment of the Holy Blessed God, that I should eat and die; but I will not obey you. Thereupon he rebuked Eve and all the creatures; then a voice came swiftly from Heaven and said to Adam and Eve: you have not kept my commandment, but have sinned, and have come to the bird Phoenix to make him sin as well; but he did not accept it, and feared me, even though I had not commanded him, and he observed it; therefore I have decreed that neither he nor his seed shall ever taste the taste of death. These are the words from the booklet Ben Sira. And a report concerning the bird Phoenix has already been given above in the eighth chapter.

Regarding the absurd fable about Rabbi Jehoscha ben Levi, it is also found in that great book of lies, the Talmud, in the Tractate Kethuwoth (or Kesuvos) fol. 77. col. 2, in these words: היה שכיב אמר ליה למלאך המות זיל עביד ליה רעותיה: כי הוה שכיב אמר ליה אחוי לי דוכתאי אמר ליה לחיי. אמר ליה הב לי סכינך דלמא מבעתת לי באורחא יהביה ניהליה כי מטא להתם דליה קא מחוי ליה שוור נפל לההוא גיסא נקטיה בקרנא דגלימיה אמר ליה בשבועתא דלא אתינא אמר קודשא בריך הוא אי אישתיל אשבועתא ניהדר אי לא לא ניהדר. אמר ליה הב לי סכינאי לא הוה קא יהיב ליה. נפקא בת קול ואמרה אמר ליה: When he (namely, Rabbi Jehoscha ben Levi) was about to die, He (namely, God the Lord) said to the Angel of Death: go to him and do his will (in whatever he shall request of you). When the Angel of Death had appeared before him, Rabbi Jehoscha said to him: show me my place (in Paradise); the Angel of Death, however, answered him: very well (come along). Then Rabbi Jehoscha said to him: give me your knife, for you might perhaps frighten me along the way; and he gave it to him. After he (namely, the Angel of Death together with him) had arrived there (that is, before Paradise), he lifted him up (onto the wall of Paradise) and showed him (his place); but he leaped (over the wall) and fell down on that same side; and the Angel of Death seized him by the hem of his coat (or cloak, and wanted him to come back out); whereupon Rabbi Jehoscha said to him: I swear that I will not go. Thereupon the holy and blessed God said: if he has ever sworn an oath and it has been required of him that he dissolve (and annul) it, then he shall go back (out of Paradise); but if not, then he shall not go back. Then the Angel of Death said to Rabbi Jehoscha: give me back my knife then; and when he would not give it to him, a voice came from Heaven and said to him: give it to him, for he has need of it for the creatures (to kill them with it). Thereupon Elijah called out (in Paradise): make room for the son of Levi, make room for the son of Levi.

This fable is set out at somewhat greater length in the book Col bo, fol. 136. col. 4. and fol. 137. col. 1. numero 102. in these words: אמרו ז"ל שרבי יהושע בן לוי צדיק גמור היה וכשהגיע זמנו ליפטר מן העולם אמר הק"בה למלאך המות עשה לו כל מה שיבקש ממך הלך אצלו ואמר לו הגיע זמנך ליפטר מן העולם אלא כל דבר שאתה מבקש ממני אעשה לך. כששמע רבי יהושע כך אמר לו מבקש אני ממך שתראני מקומי בגן עדן אמר לו לך עמי ואראהו לך. אמר לו רבי יהושע תן לי החרב שלך שלא תבהילני בו מיד נתן לו החרב והלכו שניהם עד שבאו אצל חומות גן עדן וכשבאו אצל חומות גן עדן חוץ לחומה לקח מלאך המות את רבי יהושע והגביהו והניחו על חומת גן עדן אמר לו ראה מקומך בגן עדן קפץ רבי יהושע בן לוי מן החומה ונפל בגן עדן ואחז מלאך המות בכנף מעילו אמר לו צא משם נשבע רבי יהושע בשם שאינו יוצא מכאן ולא היה רשות למלאך המות ליכנס שם. אמרו מלאכי השרת לפני הק"בה רבונו של עולם ראה מה עשה בן לוי בזרוע נטל חלקו בגן עדן. אמר להם הק"בה לכו ובדקו אם נשבע קודם לכן והיה מפר שבועתו אף הוא יפר. ויצאו ובדקו ואמרו מימיו לא עבר שבועתו אמר להם הק"בה אם כן לא יצא משם. כיון שראה מלאך המות שלא יכול להוציאו אמר לו תן לי החרב ולא היה רוצה רבי יהושע ליתן לו עד שיצאה בת קול ואמרה לו תן לו הסכין שצריכה לבריות. אמר לו רבי יהושע תשבע לי שלא תראה אותה לבריות בשעה שאתה נוטל נשמתו של אדם שבתחלה בכל מקום שהיה מוצאו שוחטו בפני הכל ואפילו בחיק אמו ובאותה שעה נשבע לו ונתנה לו. והתחיל אליהו מכריז לפני רבי יהושע that is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, say that Rabbi Joshua ben Levi was a perfectly righteous man. When the time came for him to depart from the world, the Holy One, blessed be He, said to the Angel of Death: do for him whatever he requests of you. So he went to him and said to him: your time has come to depart from this world, but I will do for you whatever you desire. When Rabbi Joshua heard this, he said to him: I desire of you that you show me my place in Paradise. He said to him: come with me and I will show it to you. Rabbi Joshua then said to him: give me your sword (or knife), so that you do not frighten me with it. He immediately gave him the sword, and the two of them went on together until they came to the walls of Paradise. When they had arrived at the walls of Paradise, outside the wall, the Angel of Death took Rabbi Joshua and lifted him up and set him upon the wall of Paradise, and said to him: see your place in Paradise! Then

Rabbi Joshua ben Levi leaped from the wall and fell into Paradise; but the Angel of Death held him by the hem of his cloak and said to him: come out! Rabbi Joshua, however, swore by the name of God that he would not go out from there, and the Angel of Death had no power (or permission) to enter. Thereupon the ministering angels said before the Holy One, blessed be He: O Lord of the world, see what the son of Levi has done: he has taken his portion in Paradise by force. Then the Holy One, blessed be He, said to them: go and inquire whether he ever previously swore an oath and then annulled it (and released himself from it); if so, he shall likewise annul his present oath. And they went out and inquired, and said: he has not transgressed an oath all the days of his life. Then the Holy One, blessed be He, said to them: if that is so, he shall not go out again. When the Angel of Death saw that he could not bring him out, he said to him: give me my sword. But Rabbi Joshua would not give it to him until a voice went forth from heaven and said to him: give him the knife, for he has need of it for the creatures (to slay them with it). Then Rabbi Joshua said to him: swear to me then that you will not let the creatures (or people) see it when you take a person's soul; for he (namely the Angel of Death) had previously slain a person wherever he found him, before the eyes of everyone, even in the lap of his mother. Then the Angel of Death swore to him at that very hour, and he gave him back his knife. And Elijah began to call out before Rabbi Joshua and said to the righteous: make room for the son of Levi, etc.

This angel of death is said to walk about in the streets during times of famine and to cause harm to those who encounter him. Concerning this, the following is read in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 104, col. 2, in the Parashah Mishpatim: בזמן שהרעב בעיר לא יראה אדם עצמו ולא יתהלך יחיד מפני שמלאך המות נמצא שם ויש לו רשות לחבל ועל דא כתיב ויאמר יעקב לבניו למה תתראו. כיוצא בו בזמן שהדבר בעיר יסגור אדם עצמו ולא יתראה That is: at the time when famine is in a city, a person should not let himself be seen, nor should he walk alone, because the angel of death is present there and has the power to harm (or to kill); and for this reason it is written (Gen 42:1): "And Jacob said to his sons, why do you look at one another?" Likewise, when plague is in a city, a person should shut himself in and not let himself be seen in the streets, so that power may not be granted to him. Whoever encounters him is harmed, and that person is guilty with respect to his own soul. The same is also found in the aforementioned Rabbi Menachem's book Ta'ame Mitzvot, fol. 24, col. 2, and fol. 25, col. 1.

When this Angel of Death enters a city, the dogs are said to howl. Therefore Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 74, col. 2, in the Parascha Bo el Parób, as follows: אמרו חז"ל כלבים צועקים מלאך המות that is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: when the dogs howl, the Angel of Death comes into the city; but when the dogs play, Elijah the Prophet comes into the city. So also in the commentary of the aforementioned Rabbi Menachem on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 84, col. 2, in the Parascha Bó, it is written on this matter as follows: ארז"ל מלאך המות בא לעיר כלבים צועקים וראיתי שכתב אחד מתלמידי רבי יהודה: החסיד כי פעם אחת היה כלב צועק וזנבו מונחת בין ירכותיו היה מדגל לצדדין מאימת מלאך המות that is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: when the Angel of Death comes into a city, the dogs howl. I have also seen that one of the disciples of Rabbi Jehuda the Pious wrote that on one occasion a dog howled and laid its tail between its haunches, and out of fear of the Angel of Death moved to the side. But when someone came and pushed the dog into the very place from which it had fled, the dog died on the spot. More on this subject is also to be found in the Sépher Chafidim, fol. 79, col. 2, numero 1147.

How the Angel of Death presents himself when he takes a person's life is taught in the Talmudic tractate Avóda fara, fol. 20, col. 2, as follows: אמרו עליו: על מלאך המות שכולו מלא עינים בשעת פטירתו של חולה עומד מעל מראשותיו וחרבו שלופה בידו וטיפה של מרה תלויה בו כיון שחולה רואה אותו מזדעזע ופותח פיו וזורקה לתוך פיו that is: It is said of the Angel of Death that he is full of eyes, and that at the time when the sick person dies, he stands at his head and holds his sword drawn in his hand, from which a drop of gall hangs. When the sick person sees him, he trembles and opens his mouth, whereupon the Angel of Death lets that same drop fall into his mouth, from which he dies, putrefies, and acquires a pallid countenance.

At the end of the little book printed in Prague, which is called Iggéret haviccúach and was composed by Rabbi Schem Tof, an additional sheet is printed, in which the following is written in this manner: כשיגיע זמן פטירת אדם באין אליו ג' מלאכי השרת אחד מלאך המות ואחד סופר ואחד שממונה עמו אומר לו דע כי הגיע קצץ. אמר להם עדיין לא הגיע קיצי מיד יושב הסופר ומחשב לו ימיו ושנותיו מיד האדם פותח את עיניו ורואה את מלאך המות ומזדעזע ונופל על פניו. וחכמים אומרים מלאך המות ארכו מסוף העולם ועד סופו מכף רגלו עד קדקודו כולו עינים ולבושו אש. סכין שלו טיפות יש בו מאחת מת ומאחת מסריח ומאחת פניו מוריקות ואינו מת עד שרואה הקב"ה שני כי לא יראני האדם וחי בחייהו אינן רואין אבל בשעת מיתתן רואין אותו that is: When a person is to die, three ministering angels come to him; the first is the angel of death, the second is the scribe, and the third is appointed over that person (the dying one). This third one speaks to him: know that your end has drawn near. Then the person says to them: my end has not yet drawn near. Thereupon the scribe immediately sits down and reckons up his days and years for him; then the person opens his eyes and sees the angel of death, and trembles, and falls down upon his face. The sages say that the length of the angel of death extends from one end of the world to the other, and that from the soles of his feet to the crown of his head he is entirely covered with eyes, and that he wears a garment of fire; on his knife, however, there are drops, from one of which the person dies, from another he putrefies, and from the third his face turns pale. But he does not die until he sees the holy and blessed God, as it is said (Exod 33:20): for no person shall live who sees Me. During their lifetime people do not see Him, but at the time of their death they see Him.

And in the book Schalschéleth hakkabbalá (or Schalschéles hakabbolo), which was printed in Amsterdam, Rabbi Gedálja writes in fol. 68, col. 2, concerning the condition of the dying person in the following manner: כשמיגיע זמן האדם להפטר מן העולם הזה עומד מלאך המות לרגליו וחרב חדה בידו והאדם פוקח עיניו ורואה כתלי ביתו נשרפים באש ורואה המלאך מלא עינים ומלבושיו אש וגופו של אדם מתחלחל ורוחו משוטט בכל הגוף כאלו לוקח רשות מכל אבריו לצאת מאצלם והאיש רואה לשמור עצמו מהמלאך ולברוח מלפניו ואינו יכול ואז מסתכל בו ומיסר נפשו וגופו כדי. ואז הרוח משוטט שנית בגוף וכל האברים מתנענעים ונתנים זעה. ורוח אדם הראשון הנפטרה שואלת אליו ואומרת אליו אוי לי כי נעבדתי אני יצא מהעולם והוא משיב אני חטאתי חטא אחד that is: When the time comes for a person to take his leave of this world, the Angel of Death stands at his feet with a sharp sword in his hands; the person opens his eyes and sees the walls of his house as though they were burning; he also sees the angel full of eyes, and the angel's garments of fire, and the body of the person trembles with pain, while his spirit runs through the entire body as though it wished to take leave of all his limbs before departing from them. The person would also gladly protect himself from the angel and take flight from him, but he cannot; thereupon he looks upon him and surrenders his soul together with his body into the angel's hands. After this, the spirit runs through the body a second time, and all the limbs move and perspire; but the soul speaks to the spirit of the first man, saying: woe is me, for on your account I must depart from the world. To which the same replies: I committed only one sin and was punished for it, but you have committed many sins.

In the book Nischmath Chajim, it is also indicated at fol. 77, col. 1, 2, in the 20th chapter of the second part, how the Angel of Death examines a person, and what condition a person must be in if he is to die a gentle death; and it is written there as follows: בשעה שאדם נפטר מן העולם לא די שנבהל ממלאך המות שכלו מלא עינים וחרבו שלופה בידו אלא שואל לו כלום עסקת בתורה ובגמילות חסדים והמלכת לקונן והמלכת את חבירך בנחת רוח אם יש דברים הללו זורק אותה טיפה לתוך פיו ויוצאת נשמתו בלא צער כמשוך נימא מחלב. ואם אין בו דברים הללו יוצאת נשמתו מעמו כגרידת that is: In the hour when a person departs from this world, it is not enough that he is terrified by the Angel of Death, who is full of eyes and holds his drawn sword in his hand; rather, that same angel also asks him: have you studied the Law, and devoted yourself to beneficence (or the practice of mercy), and acknowledged your Creator as your King, and allowed your neighbor to be governed with gentleness? If these things are found in him, then he lets the drop (of gall, mentioned previously) fall into his mouth, and his soul departs without pain, as a thread is drawn from milk. But if such things are not found in him, then his soul goes out from his body as thorns are pulled from wool.

Regarding the conversation between the dying person and the first man Adam, and how the dying person sees God, it is written in Bammidbar rabba, fol. 224, col. 4, and fol. 225, col. 1, in the 19th Parascha, concerning the words of Prov 10:3, "The Lord does not let the soul of the righteous go hungry," as follows: זה אדם הראשון שכל הצדיקים שיצאו ממנו נגזרה עליהם מיתה ואינן נפטרים עד שחוזים פני שכינה ומוכיחין אדם הראשון ואומרים לו אתה גרמת לנו מיתה והוא משיבם אני בידי חטא אחד ואתם אין כל אחד מכם שאין בידו יותר מארבע עונות ומנין שחוזים פני שכינה ומוכיחם אדם הראשון שנ' 'אמרתי לא אראה יה יה בארץ החיים לא אביט אדם עוד עם יושבי חלד הצדיקים מענשים מיתה על עבירות קלות שלא יהא אדם הראשון נתפש על ידיהם שנאמר חלד הצדיק לא ירעיב יי נפש צדיק, that is: This (righteous one) is the first man Adam, for death has been decreed upon all the righteous who descend from him. They do not die before they have seen the face of the Divine Majesty and have rebuked the first man Adam, saying to him: you are the cause of our death; but he answers them: I committed one sin, yet among you there is not one who has not sinned more than four times. But from where is it proven that they see the face of the Divine Majesty and rebuke the first man (Adam)? Because it is said (Isa 38:11): "I said, I shall see the Lord no more in the land of the living, I shall behold Adam" (this is how it is to be interpreted according to the meaning of the cited words, even though the text here reads "men," for the word Adam here is not a nomen proprium but an appellativum) "no more, together with the inhabitants of the world." The righteous, however, are punished with death on account of minor sins, so that the first man Adam may not be seized by them, as it is said: "The Lord does not let the soul of the righteous go hungry."

Before that hour (of death) arrives, a person is afraid and wishes to hide; but he cannot conceal himself from him (namely, the Angel of Death). Thereupon he opens his eyes and sees him, and surrenders himself and his soul into the hand of the Angel of Death. From the preceding text of the book Schalscheleth hakkabbala, it is evident that the dying are to surrender their souls and bodies into the hands of the Angel of Death. This is also confirmed by what is read in the little book called Sepher joreh chattaim, printed at Jerd, at number 64, where the words read as follows: קודם שתגיע אותה שעה מתירא האדם ורוצה להסתתר ואינו יכול להחבא ממנו ואז פותח את עיניו ורואהו ומוסר עצמו ונשמתו מיד מלאך המות that is: Before that hour (of death) arrives, a person is afraid and wishes to hide; but he cannot conceal himself from him (namely, the Angel of Death). Thereupon he opens his eyes and sees him, and surrenders himself and his soul into the hand of the Angel of Death. Since, however, this Angel of Death is the chief devil Sammaël, as may be seen from the preceding Chapter 18, it follows from this that all Jews who die outside the Promised Land surrender their bodies and souls at the moment of their death into the hand of the chief devil. What comfort they may then have on their deathbed, and how they might be rescued from the claws of such a terrible bird of prey, is something they must figure out for themselves.

The Jews also customarily pour out the water in the house in which a deceased person lies. The reason for this is indicated in the Sepher Minbagim, fol. 15, col. 2, in these words: רצן: איך וול דיר זאגן ווארום דו מן וואסר אויס גיסט: ווען איין מת איז. מת מצוה. פֿר צייטן האט מן איין האָרן גיבלאָזן ווען איין מת-איז גיוועזי דס מן זאָל וויסן דס איין מת דאָ איז. דען מן זאגט ניש גערן איין ביי-שמועה מיט דעם מול דרום גיסט מן דו וואסר אויס דאז דיא שכנים זעהן דס איין מת איז. א' טייל זאגן דער מלאך המות וועשט זיין מעסר אב אין וואסר. איין טייל זאגן פֿון דעם פסוק וועגן ותמת מרים ולא that is: I will tell you why one pours out the water when there is a deceased person (in the house); for in former times one blew a horn when there was a deceased person, so that it would be known that a deceased person was there, since one does not readily announce an evil report by word of mouth. Therefore one pours out the water, so that the neighbors may see that a deceased person is there. Some say that the Angel of Death washes his knife in the water. Others, however, say it is done on account of the words (Num 20:1-2): And Miriam died there, and the congregation had no water.

Concerning the voice of a dying person, the following is written in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 124, col. 3, numero 53, under the title Mitha (or Misa): כשהאדם הולך מן העולם קולו הולך מסוף העולם ועד סופו ומשוטט בכל העולם עד שנכנס ומיטמר בנביקי הסלעים ובמחילות וכשהאדם צועק נותן קול אותו הקול מעורר נגדו בלשון אשכנז ויידר קלאנג אבל פוסק מיד ואינו נמשך כמו קול האדם לפי שאין לו מקום כל כך שיכל להתפשט that is, When a person departs from this world, his voice travels from one end of the world to the other, and journeys throughout the entire world, until it enters into the clefts of the rocks and into the caves, and conceals itself there. When a person then cries out loudly and lets forth a voice, that same voice lets itself be heard back against him, which in German is called an echo; it comes to an end quickly, however, and does not draw out long, as the voice of a person does, because it does not have enough space to spread itself out. According to the teaching of the foolish Jews, the echo thus originates from the voices of deceased persons.

In the Talmudic tractate Joma, however, it is stated at fol. 20, col. 2 and fol. 21, col. 1 that three voices travel from one end of the world to the other, and the following is read concerning this: ועד מסוף העולם וקול רומי וקול נשמה בשעת שיצאה מן הגוף ויש אומרין אף לידה ויש אומרין אף רידיא ובעו רבנן רחמי אנשמה בשעה שיצאה מן הגוף ובטליה That is: Our rabbis teach: Three voices travel from one end of the world to the other, namely the voice of the Sphæra, or sphere of the sun, the voice of the tumult of Rome, and the voice of souls at the time when they depart from the body. Some say also (the voice) of birth. Others say also (the voice of the angel) Ridja (who is appointed over rain and the moistening of the earth). Our rabbis, however, prayed for mercy concerning the soul when it departs from the body (so that it might no longer occur with such a great outcry), and they brought it about that it ceased and no longer takes place.

In the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, it is read in the 34th chapter that five voices go from one end of the world to the other, in these words: חמשה קולות הולכין מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואין קולן נשמע ואלו הן בשעה שכרתין את עץ האילן שהוא עושה פרי הקול יוצא מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואין הקול נשמע : ובשעה שהנחש מפשיט את עורו אין הקול נשמע : ובשעה שהאשה מתגרשת מבעלה הקול יוצא מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואין הקול נשמע : ובשעה שהאשה עם בעלה בעילה ראשונה הקול יוצא מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואין הקול נשמע : ובשעה שהולד יוצא ממעי אמו הקול יוצא מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואין הקול נשמע : ובשעה שהנשמה יוצאה מן הגוף הקול יוצא מסוף העולם ועד סופו ואין הקול נשמע : ואין : that is, there are five things whose voice goes from one end of the world to the other, and yet that voice is not heard, and they are as follows. At the time when a fruitful tree is cut down, the voice goes from one end of the world to the other and is not heard. And at the time when the serpent sheds its skin, the voice is not heard. And at the time when a woman is divorced from her husband, the voice goes from one end of the world to the other and is not heard. And when a woman is touched by her husband for the first time, the voice goes from one end of the world to the other and is not heard. And at the time when a child comes forth from its mother's womb, the voice goes from one end of the world to the other and is not heard. Likewise, at the time when the soul departs from the body, the voice goes from one end of the world to the other and is not heard. The soul, however, does not depart from the body until it has seen the Divine Majesty, as it is said (Exod 33:20): for no man shall live who sees Me.

Most people are also supposed to die before their time, and the cause of this is indicated in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 124. col. 2. numero 47. under the title Mitha (or Mila) with these words: רוב בני אדם מתים בלא זמנם הוא משום שאינם נזהרים כשמוציאין מת לבית הקברות הם מתערבים בין הנשים ומלאך המות מרקד בין הנשים משעה שמוציאים את המת עד שחוזרים לביתם והיינו מאותה שעה שהטעה לחזה ולכן יהא

האדם נזהר שלא יסתכל בפני הנשים כלל עד שיחזרו לביתם וכשהולך ילך לפניהם ואם אי אפשר ילך אחריהם כדי שעל כל פנים לא יסתכל בפניהם עד חזרתם לגמר לביתם ואם נזהר בזה זוכה לאריכות ימים ומה הטעם שיהיו מפתרין ממלאך המות היו נוהגים בימי חכמי תלמוד: *that is, that most people die before their time comes is owing to the fact that they do not take care, when a dead person is carried out to burial, not to mingle among the women. For the angel of death dances among the women at the time when the dead is carried out, until they return to their houses, and this has been so from the time when he seduced Eve. Therefore a person must take care not to look at the women at all until they have returned to their houses. But when he walks, he should walk before them; if, however, that is not possible, he should walk behind them, so that he by no means looks into their faces until they are fully back in their houses; and if a person takes care in this matter, he earns a long life. For this reason, in order to guard against the accusation of the angel of death, it was the custom in the time of the Talmudic sages to blow with a trumpet (or a horn) when a dead person was carried out. As for the aforementioned dancing of the angel of death among the women, this is taken from the Talmudic tractate Berachoth, where at fol. 51. col. 1. the words read as follows: ת"ר שלשה דברים סח לי מלאך המות אל תטול חלוקך שחרית מיד השמש ותלבש ואל תטול ידיך ממי שלא נטל ידיו ואל תעמוד לפני הנשים בשעה שחוזרות מן המת מפני שאני מרקד ובא לפניו וחרבי בידיו ויש לי רשות לחבל ואי פגע מאי תקנתיה לינשוף מדוכתיה ד' אמות אי איכא נהרא ליעבריה ואי איכא דרפא אחרינא חיזיל בה ואי איכא גודא ליקו אהורי' ואי לא ליהדר אפיה ולימא ויאמר יי' אל דתני: *that is, Rabbi Jehoscha ben Levi said: the angel of death told me three things: do not take your shirt in the morning from the hand of the servant to put it on, and do not wash your hands from one who has not washed his hands, and do not stand before the women when they return from the dead (that is, from the burial of a dead person), because I dance and go before them, holding my sword in my hand, and have the power to do harm. But if he encounters one, what remedy does he have (so that no misfortune befalls him)? He must leap four cubits away from his place. If there is a river, he should cross it. If there is another road, he should take it. If there is a wall, he should stand behind it; but if not, let him turn his face and speak (the words of Zech 3:2): "And the Lord said to Satan, the Lord rebuke you, O Satan," until they (namely the evil spirits) have passed by him.

The reason why he dances, however, is indicated in the Jalkut chádascb fol. 107. col. 4. under the title Keschafim, in these words: כשגזר הק"ב עליו להמית את האדם הוא עצב אלא שמראה עצמו שמח כדי להראות שמקיים מצות השם בשמחה ולכן מרקד לפני הנשים כאלו הוא שמח להראות שמחה לעשות רצון הבורא אבל עיקר רצון שלו That is: When the holy and blessed God issues him the command to kill a person, he is sorrowful, yet he shows himself to be cheerful, in order to demonstrate that he carries out God's command with joy; therefore he dances before the women as though he were merry, so that he may show that he does the will of his Lord with gladness. The chief aim of his intention, however, is that he may hear the lamentation of the women.

The Jews customarily do not leave their dead lying overnight, but bury them promptly. The reason for this is to be found in the Sobar, in the Parascha Emór, fol. 88, col. 2, Sulzbach printing, where the words read as follows: נשמתא לא עאלת קמי הק"בה ולא יכלא למהוי בגופא אחרא עד דיתקבר קדמאה וגו' וכל מה דגופא לא אתקבר צערא היא לנשמתא ורוח מסאבא אזדמן לשריא עלוהי ולאסאבא לההוא גופא. ובגין דההוא רוח מסאבא אזדמן לא לבעי ליה לאינש למיבת ההוא גופא לייליא חד בגין דרוח מסאבא 'אשתכח בליליא ואשתטח בכל ארעא לאשכחא גופא בלא נפשא ולאסאבא ליה והשתאב יחי That is: The soul does not enter (namely into Paradise) before the holy and blessed God, nor can it be in another body (or be transferred into one) until the first body has been buried, etc. But as long as the body is not buried, it causes the soul pain, and the unclean spirit stands ready to take up residence over it and to defile it. Now, since the unclean spirit is prepared (to defile it), a person ought not to desire to leave the body lying overnight, because the unclean spirit appears at night and spreads itself across the entire earth in order to find a body without a soul and to defile it, and such a body becomes greatly defiled.

In the book Zijóni, the following is also read at fol. 101, col. 1: ועוד יש לך לדעת כי קבורת המת נחת רוח לנשמה וכל זמן שהמת לא נקבר אין מכניסין אותו למחיצתו של הק"בה כמו שאמרו חז"ל בפרשת רות... ע"כ ע"ד סוד העיבור כדי שלא לאחר גזירתו של הק"בה, that is: You must further know that the burial of the dead is pleasant to the soul (or brings it rest); but as long as the dead is not buried, it is not brought into the dwelling of the holy and blessed God, as our sages, of blessed memory, have said in the Midrash Ruth (or in the allegorical exposition of the little book of Ruth): As long as the body does not come to its place, the spirit (or the soul) does not come to its place either. There is also yet another reason (why he should be buried promptly, namely) on account of the mystery of the composition of souls (which is called עיבור Ibbur, that is, an impregnation, of which the first chapter of the second part is to treat), so that the counsels of the holy and blessed God may not be delayed; for as long as the body is not buried, the soul does not pass into another body. So also in the first part of the book Avodáth hakkódesh, which is called Chélek hajichud, in the 27th chapter, fol. 45, col. 1, it is thus taught: למדנו עד שכל זמן שהגוף לא נח והוא שלא נקבר גם הנפש לא תמצא מנוח לכף רגלה ואינה זוכה לגן עדנה עד שיקבר ויגנו הגוף בקברו ואז תעלה ותשוב הנפש אל מעונתה: We also learn that as long as the body does not rest and is not buried, the soul likewise finds no rest for itself, and is not fit for Paradise until the body has been buried and laid in its grave; only then does the soul ascend to its rest.

באותה שעה נדון האדם בעולם הזה ובצאת נשמתו מן הגוף השכינה עומדת עליו. אם נמצא בו תורה ומעשים טובים ואשרי לאדם שמתדבק בשכינה ונשמתו זוכה לעלות למקום קדוש ואוי לאותו שמרחיקין השכינה ממנו ולא מתדבקין בה. ובשעה שמוציאין האדם לקבר כל המעשים שעשה בזה העולם כולם מוכנים ומזומנים ועומדים לפניו. ושלשה כרוזים מכריזים אחד לפניו ואחד מימינו ואחד משמאלו ואומרים זה הפלוני מרד בקונו המושל. למעלה ולמטה. ובארבע רוחות העולם. מרד בתורה ובמצוות ראו מעשיו וראו דבריו טוב היה לו שלא נברא וקודם שיגיע לקברו כל המתים חרדים ורוגשים ממקומם בשבילו ואומרים אוי לו לזה שנקבר עם מעשיו הרעים שעשה. וגם כל המעשים שעשה שעומדים עליו בשעת פטירהו מקדימין והולכין לפניו עד הקבר ועומדין על גופו. וגם הנשמה הולכת ומשוטטת עליו ומתאבלת על הגוף שנפרדה ממנו. וכשכבר קברוהו המלאך דומה עומד וגם יוצאים מתחת ידו שלשה ממונים על חיבוט הקבר ושלשה שרביטים של אש בידם ודנין הנשמה והגוף יחד אוי לו על אותו דין אוי לו על מעשיו הרעים. וכמה דינין שדנין האדם כשיצא מזה העולם. הראשון כשנשמתו יוצאת מן הגוף. הב' כאשר מעשיו הולכין לפניו ומכריזין עליו. הג' כשמכניסין הגוף בקבר הד' דיין של חיבוט הקבר. הה' דיין של תולעים ואחר ג' ימים ששוכב הגוף בקבר כריסו נבקעת ומעיו יוצאים שפירשו מפנינו ותפלים המעים עם התנוף שבהם וטורפין אותו על פניו ואומרים לו טול מה שנתת במעים שלך ממה שאכלת ושתיית בכל יום ולא נתת מהן לעני ואביון כולם 'כלו מכל חגים ומועדים שעשית כל יום כפי שנאמר וזריתי פרש חגיכם על פניכם. ואחר ג' ימים דנין הנשמה והגוף יחד. ובשביל כך נמצאת הנשמה למטה בארץ כל ל' יום שאינה הולכת למקומה כאשר נדה שיושבת בחוץ כל ימי נדהה. הו' דיין של גיהנם. הז' שנשמתו הולכת ומטורפת לשוט בעולם ולא מצאה מקום מנוח עד שישלימו ימי עונשה. לו ה' דינין חולפין ובאין על האדם. סימן לדבר הלכתי עמכם בחמת קרי ויסרתי אתכם וגו' ויספתי שבע על חטאתיכם

That is: The person is judged in that very hour (in which he dies) in this world. And when his soul departs from the body, the Divine Majesty stands by him. If the Law is then found in him (that is, that he has kept the Law) and good works, he is blessed, in that he clings to the Divine Majesty and his soul is worthy to ascend to the holy place. But woe to him from whom the Divine Majesty is removed, and who does not cling to it! Also, at the time when the person is carried to the grave, all the works he has done in this world are ready and prepared and stand before him; and three criers call out, one before him, another at his right, and the third at his left side, and they say: this person N. has been rebellious against his Creator, who rules above and below and in the four quarters of the world; he has been insubordinate against the Law and the commandments; behold his works, and consider his words! It would have been better for him had he never been created. But before he reaches his grave, all the dead tremble and stir from their places on his account, and say: Woe to this one, who is buried together with the evil works he has done! All his works also, which he has committed and which stand before him at the time of his departure, go before him as far as the grave and stand upon his body. Likewise the soul goes and runs about over him and is sorrowful on account of the body from which it has been separated. When he is now buried, the angel Duma arises, and there go forth under his authority three who are appointed over the beating of the dead that takes place in the grave (and which is called Chibbut bakkefer), and they have three fiery rods in their hands and judge the soul and the body together. Woe to him on account of that judgment! Woe to him on account of his evil works! How many judgments, then, are held over a person when he departs from this world: The first is when the soul departs from the body. The second is when his works go before him and cry out against him. The third is when the body is laid in the grave. The fourth is Chibbut bakkefer, that is, the beating in the grave. The fifth is the judgment of the worms. And after three days, when the body lies in the grave, his belly is torn open and his bowels come out of his abdomen; the entrails are then taken together with the filth that is within them and struck into his face, and it is said to him: take what you put into your entrails from what you ate and drank each day, and from all your feasts and festivals which you observed every day you gave nothing at all to the poor and the needy; as it is said (Mal 2:3): And I will spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your feasts. After the three days, however, the person is judged in his eyes, hands, and feet, which committed the sins, until the thirtieth day; and throughout all these thirty days the soul and the body are judged together; for this reason the soul is found down here on earth for all thirty days and does not go to its place (where it belongs), like an unclean woman who sits outside all the days of her uncleanness. The sixth is the judgment of hell. The seventh is that his soul wanders and is driven to roam about in the world, and for so long finds no place where it can rest, until the days of its punishment come to an end. These seven judgments pass over and come upon a person. This is signified (by the words of Lev 26:28): Then I will also walk contrary to you in fury, and I will chastise you seven times for your sins. Concerning these seven judgments, one may also consult the book Nishmath chayim of Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, fol. 84, col. 1, in the 24th chapter of the second part.

Regarding the fourth judgment, which is called Chibbut bakkefer, by which the dead person is severely beaten in the grave by the angel of death, the following is written about it in Elias Tischbi, fol. 31, col. 1: כתוב במדרש רבי יצחק בן פרנך שאלו לו תלמידיו את רבי אליעזר כיצד דין חבוט הקבר. אמר להם כיון שנפטר

האדם מן העולם בא מלאך המות ויושב על קברו מיד נכנסה נשמתו בגופו ומעמידו על רגליו וכולי. אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי ובידו שלשלת חציה של ברזל וחציה של אש ומכה אותו פעם ראשונה אבריו מתפרקין שנייה עצמותיו מתפזרים ובאים מלאכים ומקבצים אותם ומכה אותו פעם שלישית ונעשה עפר ואפר ומחזירו לקברו וכו' אמר רבי מאיר קשה דין חבוט הקבר מדינה של גיהנם שאפילו צדיקים גמורים ויונקי שדים ונפלים נדונין בו חוץ מי שמת בערב that is, in the Midrash of Rabbi Isaac, the son of Parnach, it is written: Rabbi Eliezer's disciples asked him how the judgment of the beating in the grave is carried out. He answered them: when a person departs from the world, the angel of death comes and seats himself upon his grave, whereupon his soul immediately re-enters his body and causes him to stand upon his feet, etc. Rabbi Jehoschua ben Levi said: (the angel of death) holds in his hand a chain that is half iron and half fire, and he strikes him. At the first blow (when he strikes him), all his limbs are torn apart. At the second blow, all his bones are scattered, and angels come and gather them back together. At the third blow he strikes him again, and then he is turned to dust and ashes, after which he lays him back in his grave, etc. Rabbi Meir said: the judgment of the beating in the grave is harsher than the judgment of hell, for even those who are perfectly righteous, as well as children who are still nursing at the breast (excepting only one who dies on the Sabbath eve and one who dwells in the land of Israel), are judged by it. On this matter one may also read chapter 24 of the second Maamar of the book Nischmáth chájim, and Sépher gilgúlim, fol. 44, col. 3, 4, as well as the book Reschíth chóchma, fol. 45, col. 1, 2, in the twelfth chapter, under the title Scháar hajiráh, where more on the subject is to be found. For this reason the Jews pray, as can be seen in the prayer book, fol. 32, col. 2, in a prayer that begins: יהי רצון מלפניך יי אלהי ואלהי אבותי שתרחמי וגו' that is, "May it be pleasing to You, Lord my God and God of my fathers, that You look with favor upon me, etc.," in the following manner: והצילנו מגורל החי, that is, "And deliver us from evil counsels, and from poverty, and from destitution, and from all manner of punishments, and from the judgment of hell, as well as from Chibbut hakkéfer," that is, the beating in the grave.

Regarding the fifth punishment, which occurs through worms, the following is taught in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 18. col. 2., as well as in the tractate Schabbáth fol. 13. col. 2.: אמר רבי יצחק קשה רמה למת כמחט בבשר החי : that is, Rabbi Isabac has said that a worm is just as distressing (and painful) to a dead person as a needle in the flesh of a living one. This is also found in the book called Sepher Chastádim, fol. 13. col. 4. numero 30., in these words: אמרו חכמים קשה רמה למת כמחט בבשר החי : that is, our sages have said that a worm is just as distressing to a dead person as a needle in the flesh of a living one.

Regarding the sixth punishment, which takes place in Hell, it will be treated in detail below in the 6th chapter of the second part. As for the seventh punishment, namely that the soul must wander about without rest, a thorough account of this will be given in the first chapter of the aforementioned second part.

According to the teaching of the Rabbis, the dead are also supposed to speak with one another and to do other things that are done by living people, and concerning this, the following fable is read in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 18. col. 2.: מעשה בחסיד אחד שנתן דינר לעני בערב ראש השנה בשני בצורת והקניטו: אשתו: והלך ולן בבית הקברות ושמע שתי רוחות שמספרות זו לזו אמרה חדה לחברתה חברתי בואי ונשוט בעולם ונשמע מאחורי הפרגוד מה פורענות בא לעולם אמרה לה חברתה איני יכולה שאני קבורה במחצלת של קנים אלא לכי את ומה שאת שומעת אמרי לי הלכה היא ושטה ובאה ואמרה לה חברתה חברתי מה שמעת מאחורי הפרגוד אמרה ליה שמעתי שכל הזרע ברביעה ראשונה ברד מלקה אותו הלך הוא וזרע ברביעה שניה של כל העולם כולו לקה שלו לא לקה. לשנה אחרת הלך ולן בבית הקברות ושמע אותן שתי רוחות שמספרות זו עם זו אמרה חדא לחברתה בואי ונשוט בעולם ונשמע מאחורי הפרגוד מה פורענות בא לעולם אמרה לה חברתי לא כך אמרתי לך איני יכולה שאני קבורה במחצלת של קנים אלא לכי את ומה שאת שומעת בואי ואמרי לי הלכה ושטה ובאה ואמרה לה חברתה חברתי מה שמעת מאחורי הפרגוד אמרה לה שמעתי שכל הזרע ברביעה שניה שדפון מלקה אותו. הלך וזרע ברביעה ראשונה של כל העולם כולו נשדף ושלו לא נשדף. אמרה לו אשתו מפני מה אשתקד של כל העולם כולו לקה ושלך לא לקה ועכשיו של כל העולם כולו נשדף ושלך לא נשדף סח לה כל הדברים הללו. אמרו לא היו ימים מועטים עד שנפלה קטטה בין אשתו של אותו חסיד ובין אמה של אותה ריבא אמרה לה לכי ואראך בתך שהיא קבורה במחצלת של קנים. לשנה אחרת הלך ולן בבית הקברות ושמע אותן רוחות שמספרות זו עם זו אמרה לה חברתי בואי ונשוט בעולם ונשמע מאחורי הפרגוד מה פורענות בא לעולם. אמרה לה חברתי הניחיני דברים That is to say: It came to pass that a pious man gave a poor man a shilling on the eve of the New Year during a year of drought (when grain was costly); but when his wife grew angry with him on that account, he went and spent the night at the place of burial, and heard two spirits (of two deceased young girls) speaking with one another. One said to the other: my companion, come, let us run about through the world and listen behind the curtain (which hangs before the place where God is) to hear what punishment is to come upon the world. Her companion answered her: I cannot, for I am buried in a covering of reeds; but go you, and tell me what you hear. Thereupon she went, and ran about, and came back again, and her companion said to her: my companion, what did you hear behind the curtain? And she answered her: I heard that everything sown at the first rain (which, according to Rabbi Solomon's commentary thereon and Rabbi José's opinion, as found in the Talmudic tractate Taanith fol. 6, col. 2., falls on the 17th of September) will be struck down by hail. So he went and sowed at the second rain, and everything that others had sown was struck down, but his was not struck down. In the following year he went again and spent the night at the place of burial, and heard those same two spirits speaking with one another again; and one of the deceased young girls said to the other: come, let us wander about through the world and listen behind the curtain to hear what punishment is to come upon the world. The other answered her: my companion, have I not already told you that I cannot, since I am buried in a covering of reeds? But go you, and come back and report to me what you have heard. Thereupon she went, and when she returned, her companion said to her: my companion, what did you hear behind the curtain? She answered her: I heard that whatever is sown at the second rain (which falls on the 23rd of October) shall be struck by blight. So he set out and sowed at the first rain, and all other people's crops were ruined by blight, but his was not blighted. Thereupon his wife asked him: why was it that last year all people's crops were struck down by hail but yours were not, and now all people's crops have been ruined by blight but yours has not been blighted? He then told her all these things. It is said that not many days later a quarrel arose between the wife of this pious man and the mother of that young girl (who had been buried in the covering of reeds), and she (namely the pious man's wife) said to her (that is, to the mother of the deceased young girl): come here, I will show you your daughter, who is buried in a covering of reeds. In the following year he went again and spent the night at the place of burial, and heard those same two spirits speaking with one another again; and one young girl said to the other: my companion, come here, let us go about through the world and listen behind the curtain to hear what punishment is to come upon the world. The other said to her: my companion, leave me in peace; the things that passed between the two of us have already been heard by the living. All of this can also be found in the Maase Buch, in the 120th chapter.

How it is proven that the dead speak with one another is read in the cited passage of the Talmudic tractate Berachôth fol. 18. col. 2. as follows: אמר רבי שמואל בר נחמני אמר רבי יונתן מנין למתים שמספרים זה עם זה שנאמר ויאמר יי 'אליו זאת הארץ אשר נשבעתי לאברהם ליצחק ליעקב לאמור מאי לאמור אמר הקב"ה למשה לך אמור להם לאברהם ליצחק ליעקב וליעקב שבועה שנשבעתי לכם כבר קיימתי לבניכם that is: Rabbi Samuel, the son of Nachmani, has said that Rabbi Jonathan said: From where is it proven that the dead speak with one another? Since it is said (Deut 34:4): "This is the land which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," lemôr, that is, saying: (I will give it to your seed.) What does the word lemôr, "saying," mean? The Holy Blessed God said to Moses: go and tell Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob that I have already fulfilled the oath which I swore to you, for your children. Here, therefore, according to the erroneous teaching of the Talmud, the word lemôr, which is a gerundium, must be an imperativus, which is contrary to all reason and to the nature of the Hebrew language, and this only so that it may be forcibly derived therefrom that the dead speak, since Moses was supposed to say the cited words to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

The aforementioned Talmudic words are also found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 229, col. 4, in the Parascha Vesôth habberachá, and it follows shortly thereafter that the dead also know the things that occur in the world; and the words read as follows: למדנו החכמים זל בכאן בפירוש שהמתים יודעים אפילו עניינים שבעולם הזה ומה שהוצרך משה להודיעם כדי שיחזיקו הם that is: The Sages, of blessed memory, teach us here plainly that the dead also know the things which are in this world; but that Moses was compelled to make this known to them (namely to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) happened for this reason, so that they would give him thanks for having made the matter known to them, even though they had already known it beforehand. In the German-Hebrew Sépher minbagim printed at Dürrenfort in the year 452, that is, in the year of Christ 1692, one reads at fol. 55, col. 1, under the title Hilchôth afelúth (or Hilcos afelus) as follows: מיר לערנן אין דר גמרא דז דיא מתים וויסן וואס מן טוט אויף דעם עולם דרום זאל אן זעהן דז אן זיין וול מכבד זיין ועו זיין וואול או ג דניג. וויא וואול דס דר פסוק זאגט והמתים אינם יודעים מאומה דס מיינט דיא רשעים דיא הייסן מתים. דרום הייסן מן אך דז that is: We learn in the Gemara that the dead know what one does in the world; therefore one should take care to show them honor, for they know all things well; even though the Scripture (Eccl 9:5) says: "But the dead know nothing," for here the wicked are meant, who are called the dead; therefore the place of burial is also called Beth (or Bes) hachájim, that is, a place of the living. Rabbi Meir ben Gábbai writes in his book Avodáh hakkódesh, fol. 45, col. 2, at the beginning of the twenty-eighth chapter of the second part, which is called Chélek haavóda, concerning this matter in the following manner: אמרו במדרש רות הנעלם בזה הלשון אמר רבי אלכסנדראי בשעה שהאדם נפטר מן העולם הנפש הולכת אחר הגוף ונשארת בתוכו והרוח פורחת ממנו לתוך גן עדן ופוקדת מקום הנפש תמיד ומעוררת אותה ויודעים המתים ומספרים זה עם זה ויודעים דברים שכוהה דברים אחרים that is: In the Medrasch Ruth hannéelam it is said thus: Rabbi Alexander reports that at the time when a person departs from the world, the Néphesch, that is, the soul, follows the body and remains within it; the Ruach, that is, the spirit, flies away from it into Paradise, and continually visits the place of the souls and stirs them up. The dead also possess knowledge and speak with one another; they also know the things which are in this world, and many other matters.

Since a distinction is made here between the spirit and the soul, it is to be noted that, according to the teaching of the Jews, three kinds of souls are found in a human being: one is נפש Néphesch, that is, the soul; another is רוח Rúach, that is, the spirit; and the third is נשמה Neschamá (or Neschómo), that is, also the soul, which is, however, far more glorious than the first, which is called Néphesch. And in the last-cited passage of the book Avodáh hakkódesh, fol. 45,

col. 2, the following is taught on this matter: כבר כתבנו בפרק י"ח מהחלק הראשון ובפרק ב' מהחלק השני הזה כי האדם יש בו נפש ורוח ולפי מעשיו יזכה אל מעלה יותר עליונה הנקראת נשמה. וכשהצדיק השלם נפטר מן העולם הנשמה עולה אל מקומה בלי שום עיכוב והרוח הולכת אל גן עדן שלמטה כדברי המדרש שכתבתי. הנפש נשארת עם הגוף עד יפסד ויתעכל הבשר והוא שהביאו במדרש באמרם כי המות יפריד וגו' שהוא נאמר על זמן שהבשר קיים וכששם לעפר ומתעכל שהוא המות המפריד בינה לבין הגוף אז הרוח נחה בגן עדן מהפקודה שהיתה פוקדת אל הגוף בעודו קיים בשביל הנפש הנשארת שם והנפש נקשרת עם הרוח והרוח בנשמה. ובמדרש של רשב"י ע"ה תאנא והיתה נפש אדוני צרורה בצרור החיים את יי' אלהיך נשמת אדוני מבעי ליה אלא כמה דאמרו זכאה חולקהון וצדיקאי דכלא אתקשר that is: We have already written in the 18th chapter of the first part, and in the 2nd chapter of this second part, that in a human being there is a Néphesch, that is, a soul, and a Rúach, that is, a spirit, and that he, according to his works, becomes worthy of a higher glory, which is called Neschamá. When the perfectly righteous man departs from the world, the Neschamá returns without any delay to its place, and the Rúach, or spirit, goes, according to the words of the Medrasch that I have written, into the lower Paradise. The Néphesch, however, remains with the body until it has decayed and the flesh is consumed. And this is what has been adduced in the Medrasch (from the little book of Ruth, 1:17), when it is said: death must separate, &c., which is stated with reference to the time in which the flesh is still present. But when it has returned to dust and has decayed, which is the death that separates it (namely, the soul called Néphesch) from the body, then the Rúach or spirit rests in Paradise from the visitation (and ceases the same), by which it had visited the body, as long as it was still whole (and undecayed), on account of the Néphesch that had remained with it; and then the Néphesch binds itself to the Rúach, and the Rúach to the Neschamá. And in the Médrasch of Rabbi Schimon ben Jochai, upon whom be peace, it is taught (upon the words of 1 Sam 25:29): So shall the Néphesch, that is, the soul of my lord, be bound up in the bundle of the living with the Lord your God. It ought to have said: the Neschamá of my lord; but it is (constituted) as we have said. The portion of the righteous is righteous, for everything is bound to one another: the Néphesch to the Rúach, and the Rúach to the Neschamá, and the Neschamá to the Holy Blessed God; and from this it follows that the Néphesch is bound up in the bundle of the living, as is stated in the little book of Ruth.

Thus it is also written concerning the three aforementioned souls in the book Zerór hammór fol. 3. col. 1. in the Parascha Bereschíth as follows: 'השם ברא ג' עולמות עולם עליון ועולם האמצעי העולם השפל השם מצוי בעולם העליון ולפעמים מצוי בעולם האמצעי ולפעמים בתחתון וזהו מי כה 'אלהינו המגביהי לשבת המשפילי וכו' 'המגביהי לשבת כשבני אדם רעים מסלק שכינתו למעלה המשפילי לראות בשמים ובארץ כשבני אדם טובים. וכן אמרו שם כי השם ברא באדם ג' נפשות כנגד אלו הג' עולמות והם נפש ורוח ונשמה. נפש כנגד זה העולם הזה כנגד עולם האמצעי נשמה כנגד עולם העליון ולכן באלו השלושה נפשות זוכה האדם להשיג אלו הג' עולמות ולפעמים האדם יושב בעולם התחתון ולפעמים באמצעי ולפעמים בעליון והכל לפי זכותו ולפי זכות אלו הנפשות. ולכן כשהאדם נפטר מזה העולם כפי זכותו עולה למעלה תמיד מסתלק מעולם התחתון שהוא נמצא בו בחייו וזה כנגד הנפש. ואחר כך בכל השבוע פרה רוח באויר כיסוד הרוח והולך לעולם האמצעי כנגד הריח. that is: GOD has created three worlds, the uppermost world, the middle world, and the lowest world, and He is found (at times) in the uppermost world, at times in the middle world, and at times in the lowest world, and this is signified by (the words of Ps 113:5-6): Who is like the LORD our GOD, who has His dwelling so high: who stoops down, etc. Who has His dwelling so high: when the children of men are wicked, He withdraws His divine indwelling upward. Who stoops down to see what is in heaven and upon earth: when the children of men are good (or pious). Likewise it is also said there (in the Sohar) that GOD has created in man three souls corresponding to those same three worlds, namely the Néphesch, that is, the soul, and the Rúach, that is, the spirit, and the Neschamá, that is, the (most excellent) soul. The Néphesch (He created) with respect to this world; the Rúach with respect to the middle world; the Neschamá, however, with respect to the uppermost world. For this reason man becomes worthy, through such three souls, to attain these three worlds; and man dwells at times in the lower world, at times in the middle world, and at times in the upper world, and all of this occurs according to his worthiness and according to the worthiness of such souls. Therefore, when man departs from this world, he ascends according to his worthiness and is immediately taken away from the lower world, in which he had been during his lifetime, and this occurs with respect to the Néphesch. Half a year after this he flies into the air, into the element of the Rúach, that is, of the wind, and passes into the middle world, and this occurs with respect to the Rúach, that is, the spirit. But at the end of the year the Neschamá ascends into the uppermost world and does not descend, etc. Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, however, in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 69. col. 2. and fol. 70. col. 1. 2., rejects the opinion that there are three souls in man, and teaches that the three names Nephesch, Rúach, and Neschamá signify three facultates, that is, powers or faculties of the soul, as can be read in detail there in the 15th chapter of the second Maamar. In the Jalkut chadasch, however, one reads at fol. 154. col. 1. numero 5. under the title Neschámóth: יש באדם שלש צורות נפשות דהיינו צורה ראשונה: נפש היא הנפש השכלית שנית נפש המדברת 'שלישית נפש הבהמית המתאוה תמיד וגו' that is: In man there are three forms of souls, and the first form is the rational soul, the second the speaking (or reasoning) soul, the third the bestial soul, which is always desirous, etc.

We must also know when the aforementioned three souls are supposed to enter into a person, and this is written about in the Sepher Gilgulim fol. 40. col. 1. as follows: סוד העיבור תחילה תבא הנפש עם הלידה ואם יוכשרו מעשיו יזכה לרוח בשנת י"ג ויום א' וכשיוכשרו עוד מעשיו תבא אליו הנשמה בשנת כ' ואם לא יוכשרו מעשיו ישאר הנפש והרוח בלתי נשמה ולפעמים לא יזכה אלא לנפש לבדה ותשאר בלי רוח ונשמה ואחר כך נשארים הרוח והנשמה באתר מיוחד ידוע להק"ב ויזמן להן דוכנייהו לכל חד וחד וגומר: that is (The mystery of the joining together of souls, which is called Gilgul, consists in the following.) First, the Nephesch comes with the birth (of a person), and when his works are righteous, he becomes, upon reaching thirteen years and one day of age, a partaker of the Ruach, that is, of the spirit. When his works are then further righteous, the Neschama enters into him in the twentieth year. But if his works are not righteous, the Nephesch and the Ruach remain without the Neschama. Sometimes also (a person) is worthy only of the Nephesch, which remains without the Ruach and the Neschama; and after this, the Ruach and the Neschama remain in a hidden place, yet one known to the holy and blessed GOD, and there a place is prepared for each one etc.

But to return to the conversation of the dead and their knowledge of worldly things, the aforementioned book Avodath hakkodesch fol. 45. col. 3. 4. writes further on this subject in the previously mentioned 28th chapter of the second part as follows: וגם אמרם נשמתו עולה ויורדת הוא כפשוטו והוא שהרוח פוקדת את מקום הנפש ומעוררת אותה כל זמן שהגוף קיים כמו שכתבנו למעלה ומזה יודעים המתים ומספרים זה עם זה כמו שאמרו במדרש שכתבתי למעלה וכמו שמוכח בפרק מי שמתו. ומזה אמת בברכות פרק ראשון אין אומרים בפני המת אלא דברים של מת. ובפרק שואל אדם כל שאומרים לפני המת יודע עד שיסתם הגולל ולדעת האומר שם עד שיתעכל הבשר כל זמן שהבשר קיים הנפש שם עמו והרוח פוקדתה ולזה יש מציאות לספור המתים זה עם זה ואין זה נמנע שהרי הנפש והרוח שם יחד ובהם נשלם הדבור כי הדבור תלוי ברוח. וכבר התבאר בזה החלק כי הדבור החצוני הרוח סבתו ואף אם יש הרבה שאינן זוכים אל הנשמה שתאצל עליהם מלמעלה מכל מקום אין הדבור נעדר מהם אחר שיש בהם נפש ורוח שהם סבת החיות והדבור. ומזה פירש רש"י ז"ל בפרק שואל תפשו עליו תאבל כל זמן שיש לו בשר יש לו לנפש צד חיות להבין. משמע שעם היות שלא ישלם החיות וכשיפקדת את הנפש במקום הגוף החיות נשלם: that is, that they (namely our Rabbis) also say that his (understand: the deceased's) Neschama travels up and down, this is to be understood according to the letter (and literally), in that the Ruach visits the place of the Nephesch and rouses it for as long as the body is present (and has not decayed in the grave), as we have written above. From this the dead have knowledge and speak with one another, as is reported in the Medrasch that I have written above, and as is demonstrated in the chapter Mi schemethó (that is, in the third chapter of the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 18. col. 2. and fol. 19. col. 1.). Therefore it is said in the first chapter of the (aforementioned) tractate Berachóth: One speaks before a dead person nothing other than matters pertaining to the dead.

And in the chapter Schóel ádam (which is the 23rd chapter of the Talmudic tractate Schabbáth, it is read at fol. 152. col. 2.) The dead person knows everything that is spoken before him for as long as the coffin is closed with its lid. But according to the opinion of the one who says there (namely in the aforementioned fol. 152. col. 2. of the tractate Schabbath) until the flesh decays, so long as the flesh is still present, the Nepesch (or soul) is with it, and the Ruach (or spirit) visits it, and for this reason it comes about that the dead speak with one another. But this is no impossible thing, for behold, the Nepesch (or soul) and the Rúach (or spirit) are there together, through which speech is accomplished, since speech depends upon (and proceeds from) the Rúach (or spirit). It has also already been explained in this part that the Rúach (or spirit) is the cause of outward speech. And although there are many who are not worthy that the Neschama should descend upon them from above, they are nonetheless not lacking in speech, since the Népesch (or soul) and the Rúach (or spirit) are within them, both of which are the cause of life and of speech. Therefore Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, in the chapter Schóol (which, as previously stated, is the 23rd chapter of the tractate Schabbáth, fol. 152. col. 2.), explained the words of Job 14:22, "And his soul must mourn over him," as follows: So long as he (namely the buried person) has flesh, so long does the Népesch (or soul) have a manner of life by which to understand; and he thereby teaches that life is made complete through the Rúach (or spirit), and that when that Rúach or spirit visits the Népesch or soul in the place where the body is, life is then complete and speech is possible.

Furthermore, on this matter, shortly after the preceding passage in the cited place of the book Avodáth hakkódesch, the following is taught: המתים שהרוח פוקדת את הנפש כל י"ב חדש הספור בהם איפשר ויש לו מציאות וזה ענין אשת בעלת אוב וגם שמואל ע"ה שהעלתה אותו תוך י"ב חדש כמוזכר בפרק שואל אדם שרוחו היתה פוקדת את נפשו ובזה היה איפשר לה להעלותו ודבר עם שואל והגיד לו את אשר יקרה לו והענין כולו כמשמעו אין בו משל וחידה חס ושלום: ומצאתי לאחד מהחכמים בזה הלשון ושמעתי שבהראות המת כבעלת אוב או בענין אחר אם היה אדם בודק בקברו באותה שעה לא היה מוצא דבר עד אשר חזר ופשט מלבושיו. וכן מצאתי בלקוטי החסיד הרב ר' יהודה ז"ל. וראיתי להאריך בזה להועיל ולהודיע כי אין בכל דברי רבותינו ז"ל בזה שום משל וחידה ושהספד אל המתים זה עם זה יש לו מציאות תוך י"ב חדש הואיל והגוף קיים. ולאחר י"ב חדש הוא גם כן איפשר ויש לו מציאות וכמו שמצינו בר' אהאי בר' יאשיה בפרק שואל עם רב נחמן ועל הדרך להאריך בזה, that is: that the dead, whose Rúach or spirit visits the Népesch or soul for twelve months (beside the body in the grave), speak with one another is a possible thing, and it can occur. And this is the work of the sorceress with Samuel, upon whom be peace, whom she brought up (out of the grave) within the twelve months, as is mentioned in the (aforementioned) chapter Schöel ádam (fol. 152, col. 2 of the tractate Schabbáth): for his spirit had visited his soul, and through this it was possible for her to cause him to come up, so that he spoke with Saul and showed him what would befall him. This entire matter is also to be taken (and understood) according to the literal sense, and there is no figurative speech or riddle (and hidden meaning) in it: far be it from us to think so. I have also found one of the sages speaking in this manner, and have heard that when a dead person allows himself to be seen through a sorceress or in some other way, and one examines his grave at that same time, nothing is found in it until he (namely, the deceased) returns and has put his garments back on. And thus I have also found it in the collected writings of the pious Rabbi Jehuda, of blessed memory. I wished, however, to be thorough in this matter, so as to provide benefit and to make known that in all the words of our Rabbis, of blessed memory, which treat of this matter, there is no figurative speech or riddle, but rather that the conversation of the dead (which they hold with one another) during the twelve months, while the body is still present, can take place. After the twelve months, however, it is likewise possible, and can occur, as we find concerning Rabbi Achai bar Jaaschia in the (aforementioned) chapter Schöel (of the tractate Schabbáth, fol. 152, col. 2), that after his death he spoke with Rabbi Nachman: and in the manner which we have explained in chapter 25. These are the words of the book Avodáth hakkódesh.

In the Jalkut chadash, fol. 14, col. 3, numero 68, one also finds an absurd fable about Adam and Eve, how they rose from their graves and refused to allow Abraham to bury his wife Sarah with them. The words read as follows: כשבא אברהם לקבור את שרה במערת המכפלה עמדו אדם וחוה ולא רצו להיות שם במערה ואמרו ומה אנו תמיד מתביישים לפני הק"ה מפני החטא שעשינו ואתם באתם להוסיף עלינו ביוש שנתבייש מפני מעשיכם הטובים אמר אברהם הרי אני מקבל עלי להתפלל לפני הק"ה שלא תתביישו עוד. מיד נכנס אדם במקומו ועם כל זה לא נתרצתה חוה ליכנס עד שהכניסה אברהם בידו אצל אדם מיד. ואחרי כן קבר אברהם את שרה ר"ל אחרי אשר קבל עליו לפייס את הק"ה בשבילם ונכנס אדם במקומו ואחר כך קבר את שרה לשרה לא נאמר אלא את שרה לרבות את חוה שהכניסה אברהם אל אדם וזהו אלה תולדות השמים והארץ בהבראם ואמרו ר"ל באברהם ור"ל תולדות השמים והארץ ולא תולדות בר נש הם אדם וחוה לא יתביישו אלא בזכות אברהם, that is: When Abraham came to bury Sarah in the double cave (which is mentioned in Gen 23:17 &c.), Adam and Eve arose (from their grave) and refused to permit it to take place there in the cave, and said (to him): Why must we continually be ashamed before the holy blessed God on account of the sin which we committed, and now you have come to make us even more ashamed, so that we must be ashamed on account of your good works. Then Abraham answered: Behold, I take it upon myself (and bind myself) to petition the holy blessed God that you need no longer be ashamed. Thereupon Adam immediately returned to his place; but Eve was not willing, for all that, to go back in (into her grave), until Abraham had brought her in with his own hands to Adam straightaway. After that, Abraham buried Sarah. That is: after Abraham had taken it upon himself to appease the holy blessed God on their behalf, Adam returned to his place, and thereafter (Abraham buried Sarah) את שרה éth Sara, that is, with Sarah (as it is here incorrectly understood). It does not say לשרה Le-Sara, that is, "Sarah," but rather éth Sara, that is, "with Sarah," so as to include Eve (for the little word éth is not only a nota Accusativi, but also means "with," so that the sense is that Abraham buried Eve together with Sarah), since Abraham had brought her in to Adam. And this is what the words (Gen 2:4) signify: "These are the generations of the heavens and the earth," בהבאם behibbareäm, that is, "when they were created"; and our Rabbis, of blessed memory, say (that the word behibbareäm, through a transposition of its letters, means as much as) באברהם be-Abraham, that is, "through Abraham," and that by this it is indicated that Adam and Eve, who are generations of the heavens and the earth and not of human beings, were ashamed solely on account of the righteousness of Abraham, who brought them rest, so that they need no longer be ashamed in the life to come. But are these not once again strange perversions of Holy Scripture? Concerning the conversation of the dead, still more may be read in the Sepher Chasidim, numero 196 and 452, as well as in the 113th chapter of the Maase-Buch; and concerning the knowledge thereof, the entire twenty-second chapter of the second part of the book Nischmáth chajim, fol. 80 and 81, may be consulted.

All secrets are also to be revealed to the pious dead, which is why no one who is not their equal should be buried alongside them. Concerning this, the aforementioned book Nischmáth chájim fol. 83, col. 2, in the 26th chapter of the second part, states as follows: כשהצדיקים נחים על משכבתם מגלין להם רז עליונים ותחתונים ואם נקבר אחד אצלם שאין שוה להם למעלתם ימעטו העליונים מלהגיד ולגלות : that is, when the righteous rest in their bedchambers (that is, their graves), the upper and lower secrets are revealed to them. But when someone is buried alongside them who is not their equal in rank, the upper ones (those who dwell in heaven) no longer proclaim and disclose the secrets to them as frequently as they otherwise are accustomed to do, secrets from which they derive such delight as if they were eating the best things in the world. Something similar is also to be found in the smaller Jalkut Rubéni, numero 4, under the title Zúra. As for the reading of books by the dead, this was treated above in the first chapter.

In the Sepher chasidim a leaf is printed whose title reads Zavvaóth Rabbi Jehúda hechásid, that is, the testament of the pious Rabbi Jehuda, in which, under numero 1, the following is also written: אין לקבור שני מתים זה אצל זה שהיו שונאים that is, one must not bury two deceased persons next to one another who hated each other during their lifetimes, for they have no rest together. Furthermore, in the same work under numero 5, one reads: כשקוברים אשה שהיתה אוכלת ילדים בחייה אם רואים פיה פתוח בידוע שתעשה: that is, when one buries a woman who during her lifetime devoured children, and one sees her mouth open, it is certain that she will do the same for a full year after her death; one must, however, fill her mouth with earth, and then she will do no more harm. Further, in the same work under numero 11, one reads: אם יש קברות בעיר לא יעבירו המת לעיר אחרת לקבור כי המתים משכנים שם מעמם כי הוא בזיון להם: that is, when there are graves in a city, one shall not bury a deceased person in another city. One shall not convey him to another city to bury him there, for the dead who lie there will be angered by it, because it is contemptible to them. As for the resurrection of the dead, this will be treated in detail in the 26th chapter of the second part. But let this suffice on this subject, and with this I will close the first part.

Can anyone put forward as proof, something over which every person of sound reason must rightly laugh? For this reason Rabbi Aben Esra also rightly rejects it in his commentary on Dan 11:31, when he writes thus: כל החושבים: that is, All those who calculate words or letters by means of Gematria according to numerical values do a vain and mind-tormenting thing.

If the Jews want to believe that this manner of proving something is valid, then it is easy to demonstrate to them by the same means that Jesus Christ is the true promised Messiah, and not a stranger, but the eternal GOD. For in the book Zerór hammór it is written thus at fol. 37. col. 2. in the Parascha Vajéze: משיח עולה כמנין ש"נה ובו כלול ש"ילה שהוא עולה ה"שם that is, the word משיח Maschiach (that is, Messiah) amounts in number to 358, and contained within it is the word שילה Schiloh (which is mentioned in Gen 49:10, whereby the Messiah is understood), which yields the same numerical value as השם Haschéme (which among the Rabbis also signifies GOD, namely 345). In the same manner it could also be maintained that by the aforementioned word Schiloh in Gen 49:10, Jesus is to be understood, since the words עד כי יבא שילה ad ki javo Schiloh, that is, "until the Schiloh or the Hero comes," amount to exactly the same numerical value as ישוע בן דוד Jeschúa ben David, that is, Jesus the Son of David, namely 462. And that the words in Isa 9:6, פלא יועץ אל גבור Pele, joëz, El gibbor, that is, Wonderful, Counselor, mighty GOD, signify Jesus Christ, since they have the same numerical value as the words ישוע בן אלהים Jeschúa ben Elohim, that is, Jesus the Son of GOD, which consists of 529. Likewise, that the words in Ps 72:17, ינון שמו Jinnon Schemó, that is, "His name shall be propagated from child to child," point to Christ, since their numerical value, namely 462, agrees with the numerical value of the aforementioned words ישוע בן דוד Jeschúa ben David, that is, Jesus the Son of David; and still more examples of this kind could be set forth here against the Jews. But just as little as they accept these as binding and irrefutable, exactly so little are their proofs, which they bring forward in this manner against the Christian religion, to be regarded.

Fifth, they call Christ טעות Taüth (or Tóüs), that is, an idol. This word derives from טעה taah, which in the Hebrew language means to err, and additionally in the Chaldean language means to commit fornication and to forget; and an idol, or false God, is therefore called Taüth (or Tóüs) because the one who serves it errs, commits spiritual fornication, and forgets the true God. To see, and who created heaven and earth, as may be read in John 1:3 and Heb 1:2, they regard as a false GOD, and so they also give Him this mocking name, as may be seen in Rabbi Solomon Jarchi's commentary on Isa 9:7 (which verse we explain as referring to our Savior and Redeemer), according to the testimony of the Bible printed in Venice in the year 285, that is, by our reckoning 1525, in folio, with the commentaries of several rabbis, where he writes as follows: לתשובת המינים האומרים שם לטעיהם יש להשיבם מהו מעתה והלא לא בא אותו טעות עד לסוף שלש מאות שנה: that is, to the heretics, however, who interpret these words as referring to their Tauth or idol (that is, JESUS), one must reply: did not that same Tauth or idol come only at the end of 300 years? So too, in the little book Rosch amana (or amôno) fol. 15. col. 1., the following is read concerning Christians: כל עוד שיאמינו בטעות ובאמונה הכוזבת הם מינים וכופרים ואין להם חלק לעולם הבא: that is, so long as they believe in the Tauth or idol and persist in the false faith, they are heretics and deniers of GOD, and have no share in the world to come, that is, in eternal life.

Sixth, they call him יראה Jirah (or Jirob), which word properly means a fear, and in a divine sense, but signifies an idol, which is honored and feared in an improper manner. And thus it is used in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Psalms, fol. 127, col. 3, numero 879, where one reads: אומות העולם עושים יראתם של כסף, and ושל זהב, that is, the peoples of the world make their Jirah, that is, their idol, out of gold and silver. It also stands in Rabbi Moses bar Maimon's Sepher Mizvóth (or Mizvos), fol. 82, col. 4, as follows: לא תשביעו הגוי ביראתו והוא אמרו: יתעלה ושם אלהים אחרים לא תזכירו, that is, you shall not cause a Gentile to swear by his jirah, or his idol, and that is what the praised God says (Exod 23:13): you shall not mention the names of other gods. In like manner, the word Jirah is used in the aforementioned Rabbi Moses bar Maimon's book Jad chasaka (or chasôko), in the first part, in the tractate on idolatry, cap. 5, numero 10, and in the Talmud, in the tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 63, col. 2. The blinded Jews, however, call Christ by this name because we, in their erroneous opinion, honor Him in an idolatrous manner and fear Him as a God. For this reason, Rabbi Bechai writes in his book Cad hakkémach, fol. 34, col. 2-3, and in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 195, col. 1, in the Parashah Vaethechannán, on the words of Deut 6:4, "Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God is one God," as follows: אלו אמר שמע ישראל יי' אחד היה פתחון פה לאומות העולם: לדעתם כן שחזה למטה, that is, if he (namely Moses) had said, "Hear, O Israel, the LORD is one," then the peoples of the world (the Christians) would have had cause to say that he was speaking of their jirah, etc.,

The Second Part of Discovered Judaism.

Chapter I.

In which it is shown what the Rabbis write concerning the souls of Christians and of other peoples found outside of Judaism, and what they teach on the other hand concerning the souls of the Jews and their passage, or transmigration, from one body or place into another.

Since the Jews, puffed up with nothing but vain imagination, hate and despise all other peoples to the utmost degree, and are stuck in the erroneous opinion that they alone are holy, one can easily judge that they write nothing good at all about our souls, but rather defame and belittle them in the worst and most shameful manner. But so that their poisonous doctrine on this matter may be brought to light, it is to be known that they believe all the souls of those who are not Jews derive from the unclean spirits and devils. Hence it is read in the book Emek hammelech, folio 3, columna 4, in the 4th chapter, under the title Scháar Schiafchúe hamélech, as follows: אמרו רז"ל אתם קרויים אדם מצד נשמת אדם העליון ואין אומות העולם קרויים אדם כי אין להם נשמה מאדם העליון הקדוש אלא נפש יש להם מאדם בליעל : That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: you (Jews) are called human beings on account of the souls which you have from the highest Man (that is, God, who is called by the Kabbalists אדם העליון Adam haélion, that is, the Highest Man); but the peoples of the world are not called human beings, because they do not have a neschamá (or neschómo), that is, a soul, from the most holy Highest Man, but rather a néfesch, that is, a soul from אדם בליעל Adam beliaál, that is, from the most wicked (or most worthless) Man (namely, the chief devil Samaël, who, as can be seen in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, fol. 129, col. 4, in the 11th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin, is called Adam beliaál, that is, the most wicked Man). For this reason it is written on this matter in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 137, col. 1, in the Párascha Schemini, as follows: אתם ושאר עמים לאו אינון אדם וגו' בסטרא אחרא דמסאבא רוחא דאתפשט לשאר עמין נפק מסטרא דמסאבו לאו איהו אדם ובגין כך לא סליק בשמא דאי שמא דההוא רוח טמא לא סליק בשמא דאדם ולית ביה : That is: (You Jews) are human beings, but the remaining peoples are not human beings, etc. On the other side, which is unclean, the spirit (understand: the soul) which is spread out among the remaining peoples comes from the side of uncleanness (that is, from the devils). That same spirit is not a human being, and therefore this name is not given to it either. The name of that spirit is called Unclean, and it is not called by the name of human being, nor does it have any share therein. Its body is the garment of that same unclean one.

In the great Jálkut Rubéni, in the Párascha Bereschíth, the following is also taught on this matter at fol. 10 (though it should be folio 8), col. 3: עור ובשר הוא מלבוש לאדם ורוח הפנימי נקרא אדם. עכ"ם אינם קרויים אדם כי נשמתן מרוח הטומאה : That is: the skin and the flesh are the garment of man, and the inward spirit is called Man; but the idolaters (that is, the Christians and other peoples) are not called men, because their souls derive from the unclean spirit. But the souls of the Israelites derive from the Holy Spirit, etc. And at fol. 10, col. 2, in the same place, one reads: ישראל נקרא אדם על שנפשו ירדה לו מאדם עליון אבל לעכו"ם שבא נפשם מרוח הטומאה נקרא חזיר ואם כן : That is: an Israelite is called a man because his soul descends to him from the supreme Man; but an idolater, whose soul derives from the unclean spirit, is called a swine. If this is so, then the body of an idolater is the body and soul of a swine. Furthermore, in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, fol. 23, col. 4, in the 43rd chapter under the title Schéáar ólam battóhu, one reads: הרשעים בחייהם קרויים מתים כי אין להם נשמה קדושה מן היסוד הנקרא חי העולמים בתרין עלמין בעולם הזה ובעולם הבא רק יש להם נפש מן הקליפה : That is: the wicked are called dead during their lifetime, because they have no holy soul from the Foundation, which (Dan 12:7) is called He who lives eternally, in the two worlds, in this world and in the world to come; rather, they have souls from the Kelífa (that is, the husk, by which the Devil is understood, as was indicated above in the 18th chapter of the first part), which is called Death and the Shadow of Death; and through those same sparks they live. Now, since the Jews regard all Christians as idolaters and wicked people, as was demonstrated in the 16th chapter of the first part, and call Christendom the godless kingdom, as was indicated in the 17th chapter of the said first part, it follows from this that all of the above has been said concerning our souls.

This is also consistent with what is found at fol. 4, col. 2, in the preface of the book Schéva tal, where the words read as follows: נפשות האומות המה מכחות חיצוניות כחות הקליפות כאשר נבאר סוד ענינם בשערים הבאים בס"ד מפני כן חלקם והנחילם לשרי מעלה אבל הנשמות של אותה ישראלית אצולות מקדושת האצילות ברוך הוא : That is: the souls of the nations derive from the outermost powers, the powers of the Kelífoth (or Kelífos, that is, husks, namely of the devils), as we shall explain the mystery of their nature in the following chapters, with the help of God. For this reason God distributed them among the highest (seventy) princes (mentioned above in chapter 18 of the first part) and gave them as an inheritance. But the souls of the Israelite people derive from the holiness of the emanation, or outflowing, of the blessed God. So too it is written in Rabbi Ménachem von Rékanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 221, col. 4, nearly at the end of the Parashah Haabinu, as follows: השפע שבא לכחות: The influx, which comes to the powers of impurity, is called jín nésech, that is, libation wine (which is offered to idols); and from thence come the souls of the nations of the world. Concerning this origin of the souls of Christians and other nations, something has already been indicated above in chapter 16.

16. Chapter of the first part, in connection with the twenty-eighth name that is given to the Christians.

Since it was mentioned shortly before in folio 4, col. 2 of the book Schéva tal that the souls of the peoples of the world have been distributed among the seventy Princes or Devils, I must also set down here what is written on this subject in the book Tuf haárez fol. 9, col. 2, and the words read as follows: דע כי כל חלק וחלק מהארץ נתן לאומה המתיחסת אל החלק ההוא: וז"ש כי לבני לוט נתתי את ער ירושה ממש מתיחס לבני לוט הוא ער וכן לעשו הר שעיר. וכן פרשו רז"ל הוא אדום וארצו אדומה מורה שממש יחס הארץ לפי האומה השוכנת בה. והטעם כי השר השולט על האומה גם כן יש לו יחס להשפיע בחלק הארץ ההיא. וכן הנשמות ההם הם מחלק הקליפה המתיחסת לאותו עפר החיצוני בענין שהם שלשה יחסים יחס האומה יחס הארץ ויחס השר בנשמות: ובהשגחה: That is: Know that every portion of the earth has been given to that people to which that same portion (in which it dwells) is assigned; and this is what is said (Deut 2:9): I have given Ar to the children of Lot to possess. Ar is properly attributed to the children of Lot. Likewise, the mountain of Seir was assigned to Esau; and our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have explained the matter (through the words): He (namely Esau) is red, and his land is red; by which it is taught that the assignment of a land is properly according to that people which dwells therein. The reason, however, is that to that Prince (among the aforementioned seventy Princes) who rules over a people, the influence or influx over the portion of that same land has also been assigned. And thus those same souls (which are found in that same portion of the land) are from the portion of the Kelifa, or husks (namely of the evil spirit, or Devil), to which that same outward earth (or territory) is assigned, so that there are three kinds of assignment, namely the assignment of the people, the assignment of the land, and the assignment of the Prince over the souls and their governance.

Concerning this matter, as well as the frivolous doctrine that the souls of the nations derive from the seventy princes, or devils, it is also written in the book Maarébeth ha'elabúth (or Maaréches ha'elobús) fol. 206, col. 1. as follows: שאר אומות מסרם ה' ית' ל'שרים שהם שכלים נפרדים והמשלים עליהם ומנה שר לכל אומה ואומה לשלוט ולהנהיג עליהם טוב ולשמור על ידי כוכבים ומזלות והשגחם האלה הם הנקראים אלהי העמים אשר חלק להם ומן השרים האלה נשתלשלה נשמתן של האומות That is: the remaining nations (those found outside the Jews) the blessed God has delivered over to the princes, who are Intelligentiæ abstractæ, that is, spirits without bodies, and has given them dominion over those nations, and has set a prince over each and every people to rule over it and to speak good on its behalf (and to be its advocate), and also to preserve it through the stars and planets. These same princes are also called the gods of the nations, whom He (God) has given to them in part, and from such princes the souls of the nations derive.

Since the souls of the peoples are supposed to derive from the devils, it is read in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 121, col. 2. in the 151st chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árbä, that the Jews will in the future overpower all peoples, and indeed in these words: שהם יתגבר הטוב על הרע אז גם ישראל שהם לעתיד יתגבר הטוב על הרע מצד הרע וגוי That is: In the future, the good will overpower the evil; then the Israelites also, who are from the good side, will take possession of the peoples of the world, who come from the evil side. By the evil side, however, the devil is understood, wherefore it is stated in the book Avodáth (or Avódas,) hakkódesch, fol. 18, col. 3. in the 18th chapter under the title Chélek hajickud: הנחש הוא צד הרע that is, the serpent (namely the devil, as has been reported in the 18th chapter of the first part) is the evil side. In the book Zerór hammór it is also taught at fol. 148, col. 4. in the Parascha Ki tavó: אומות העולם הם משולים לנחש לפי שהם באו מזוהמת נחש הקדמוני That is, the peoples of the world are compared to a serpent, because they derive from the impurity of the ancient serpent. What is meant by this, however, is to be seen from the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 80, col. 4. in the Parascha Schemóth, where it is read: כל הנשמות באו מסטרא דקין והבל מהבל מסטרא דטוב ומקין מסטרא דרע That is, all souls derive from the side of Cain and Abel: from Abel from the good side, and from Cain from the evil side. Now since the soul of Cain (as has been reported in the second and eighteenth chapters of the first part) is supposed to have derived from that impurity which the chief devil Sammaël caused to fall upon Even when he lay with her, all souls of the peoples are supposed to derive from that same filth; for this reason it is read in the little book Afkáth (or Afkas) róchel, fol. 7, col. 2., where mention is made of the impurity of the evil spirit, as follows: הגוים והכופרים הבאים לטמא עצמם ממשכים רוח מאותו הצד ורוח הגוים משם: That is, the Gojim (that is, Christians or heathens) and the deniers of God, who defile themselves, draw (or receive) the spirit from that same side, and their spirit (that is, their soul) comes from thence.

From what time onward this occurs, namely that the souls of the nations are said to derive from the aforementioned seventy princes, is taught by Rabbi Abaron Schmu'el in his book Nischmāth (or Nischmas) ādām, in Chapter I, fol. 5, col. 2, where he writes as follows: הנה קודם דור הפלגה היו כל הנפשות ממקור אחד על כן היה כל־הארץ שפה אחת אמנם כאשר חלק השם לשבעים ומסרס לשבעים שרים נמשך לכל אומה ואומה נפש מהשר הממונה עליו על כן כפי חילוק הנפשות ופירודם נחלקו הלשונות אחר שהדבור נמשך מהנפש ואם כן באמרו ונבלה לשונם הוא ענין בלבול נפשם: That is: Behold, before the time of the dispersion (which took place at the building of the Babylonian tower), all souls (of the people who lived upon the earth) were from one source (and one origin); for this reason the people of the whole earth had one and the same language. But after God divided the seventy nations and delivered them over to the seventy princes, each nation received its souls from the prince appointed over it; for this reason, after the distribution of the souls and their separation, the languages were divided, since speech derives from the soul. If this is so, then by that which is said (Gen 11:9: "And let us confuse their language"), the confusion of their souls is to be understood.

In the book AmmudébaSchifa, the following is read concerning another origin of souls, fol. 51, col. 3, 4: עינך לוייתן ובת זוגו אינו הדבר כפשוטו כי אמרו רז"ל שעתיד: גבריאל לעשות קניגי עם לוייתן. ומה לו לציד עמו מלחמה אבל הענין הוא שלוייתן ובת זוגו הם רמזים על המלאך השטן אל אחר ולילית בת זוגו והם לוייתן נחש בריח ונחש עקלתון הנזכרים בישיעה שהק"ב עתיד לפקוד עליהם בחרבו הקשה להאכילם מן השלם וגבריאל יעשה קניגי עמו להעביר רוח הטומאה מן הארץ ובתחלת הבריאה כאשר ברא הק"ב לכוונה ידועה אצלו יתברך חשב מחשבת שאם יזדווג לוייתן חזה עם בת זוגו לילית המרשעת ויולידו נשמות מזיקים והרבה עכ"ם כי כשם שנשמות הצדיקים באים מהק"ב כן נשמות טומאה באים על ידי מלאך השטן אל אחר כנודע. ובדואי ברבות המזיקים ונשמות עכ"ם בעולם יגבור חס ושלום כח הטומאה ויחריבו העולם לפיכך מה עשה ק"ב סירס למלאך השטן שלא יזדווג עמה ויתקיים העולם ולכך אמר בזוהר משפטים ואל יחד אסתרס שסרס קב"ה שלא יעשה פרי ותולדה בעולם. והנה החכם בעל חסד לאברהם הקשה על מאמר הזוהר הזה ואומר איך אפשר הוא שסרס הק"ב להמלאך אל אחר שלא יוליד נשמות עכ"ם והרי אנו רואים שנשמות טומאה הם מרובות ותיירץ תירוצו נפלא על זה ואמר שהענין הוא שאלו הנשמות אינן באים מצד זיווג המלאך השטן ולילית כי אחרי שסרסם ודאי אי אפשר להם להזדווג אבל אלו הנשמות וכל הנשמות של המזיקין שבאים לעולם כולם באים על ידי מעשי הרשעים והם הגורמים להביא אותם לעולם כי העושה עבירה אחת בורא על ידי מעשיו הרעים מזיקים והן הן מזיקים המחריבים ומשטשטים העולם עד כאן. והנה אותם המזיקים הבורא אותם האדם על ידי מעשיו הרעים הם העדים המעידים עליו ביום הדין וכל אחד ואחד צועק ואומר פלוני בראני כמו That is to say: the matter of the Leviathan (that God castrated him so that the world would not be destroyed, were he to produce offspring, as will be shown below in the 15th chapter of the second part) and his female companion is not to be understood literally, that our rabbis, of blessed memory, said that the angel Gabriel would in the future arrange a hunt with the Leviathan. Why should he wage war against him?

Rather, the matter is to be understood thus: that the Leviathan and his wife signify that angel who is the Satan and the other god, and Lilith (or Lilis), his wife, who are the Leviathan, the one a straight serpent and a crooked serpent, of whom mention is made in Isaiah (ch. 27, v. 1), whom the holy blessed God will visit with His hard sword to destroy them from the world; and Gabriel will hold a hunt with him, so that the unclean spirit may be driven from the earth. Now the holy blessed God, at the beginning of creation, when He created all things for a purpose known to Him, considered in His thoughts that if this Leviathan were to lie with his wife Lilis, they would beget many souls of devils and of idolatrous people; for just as the souls of the righteous come from the holy blessed God, so the unclean souls come from the angel who is the Satan and the other god, as is well known. And it is certainly true that when the devils and the souls of the idolatrous multiply in the world, the power of impurity gains the upper hand (God forbid), and those evil spirits destroy the world. For this reason, what did the holy blessed God do? He castrated or cut the angel, the Satan, so that he should not mingle with her, and thus the world might be preserved. For this reason it is said in the Sohar, in the Parascha Mischpatim, that the other god was castrated, since the holy blessed God castrated him so that he would bring forth no fruit in the world and beget no offspring. Now the wise author, or writer, of the book Chesed le-Abraham חסד לאברהם, raised an objection against this statement of the Sohar, and says: how can it be possible that the holy blessed God should have castrated the angel who is the other god, so that he should beget no souls of idolatrous people, when we plainly see that there are very many unclean souls? And he resolved this objection most admirably, and said that the matter is to be understood thus: that those souls do not come from the side of the mingling of the angel, the Satan, and Lilis, for after God castrated them it is impossible that they should mingle. Rather, those souls, and the souls of the devils that come into the world, all come through the deeds of the wicked, who are the cause of their being brought into the world; for whoever commits a sin creates devils through his evil deeds, and those are the very devils that do harm, destroy the world, and defile it. (Thus far are the words of the book Chesed le-Abraham.) Behold, man thus creates those very devils through his evil deeds. Those same devils are the witnesses who will testify against him on the day of judgment; and each one will cry out and say that such-and-such a person created him, just as this is particularly shown in many places in the Sohar.

As for the place in which the souls of the nations are supposed to dwell before they enter into human beings, it is said to be in the expansis, that is, in the firmaments or expansions of the seven planets, and concerning this, the following is written in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 4, under the title

Neschamá, from the booklet Tuf háárez, fol. 9, col. 1: בשבעה רקיעים התחתים: 1: שכבה כוכבי לכת שצ"מ חנכ"ל ובאלה שבעה רקיעים יש נשמות ע' אומות י' אומות תחת כל כוכב וכו' ותחת גלגל לבנה האחרון שבכולם יש רקיע חלק שאינו משמש כלום שם נשמות That is: Among the seven firmaments or expansions there are seven planets, namely Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury, and the Moon, and in these seven expansions dwell the souls of the seventy nations, ten nations under each planet, etc. But beneath the Sphera, or sphere, of the Moon, which is the last of all, there is an expansion that serves no purpose whatsoever, and there dwell the souls of the devils, the spirits, and the night-phantoms.

How long the souls of the nations shall endure and remain in the world is taught in the book Maarébeth ha'elabúth, fol. 25, col. 2., in the commentary of Chájat, as follows: ביוכל הגדול לא תשאר שום אומה מאחר שהעולם יהיה חרב. וכה לנו: Chájat, as follows: יחיון עליהם. יש להשיב כי הבליעה חוזרת אל הקליפות כי יכלו ככל וכל מן העולם ולכן גם נפושם של האומות הבאות מהם ילכו לחרפות מאחר שסיבתם יהיה להם כלייה מכל וכל לא זיכר שמם עוד: that is, in the great Jubilee year no nation will remain, since the world (in that time) will be destroyed and laid waste. What advantage, then, do we (Jews) have over them (namely, the seventy nations)? To this it is to be answered that the destruction is to be understood as referring to the Kelifóth (or Kelifos), that is, the husks (which are the evil spirits), for these will be utterly and entirely exterminated from the world; and therefore the souls of the nations, which derive from them, will also come to ruin (and be exterminated), since their originators (from whom they proceed) will come to a complete end, and their name will no longer be remembered.

Having now revealed what the malicious Jews teach as a shameful doctrine concerning the souls of our people and of other nations, I must also show what they teach, by contrast, concerning their own souls. Here it is to be known that they hold that their souls are a part and spark of the divine essence. That they are a part of the divine essence is taught in the book Schené luchóth habberith, fol. 262, col. 3, in these words: הנשמות חלק אלוה ממעל, that is, the souls are a part of God from above. And in the book Nischmáth adam, Rabbi Abaron Schmuél writes: הנשמה היא חלק אלוה ממעל, that is, the soul is a part of God from above; which is also to be found in the book Schéfa tal, in the preface, fol. 4, col. 1, 2. And in the third column it is there taught: הנשמה היא חלק אלוה ממעל, that is, the soul is a part of God from above, and of His substance, or essence, just as a son is of the essence of his father. Something on this matter has, however, already been mentioned in the first chapter of the first part.

That they are also supposed to be sparks of the divine essence is evident from the book Emek hammélech, fol. 121, col. 4, in the 152nd chapter, under the title Schaár Kirjáth árba, where it is written as follows: נשמות שברא הם חיים וקיימים לעולם ועד מפני שהם ניצוצין מעצמותו ברוך הוא שנאמר ויפה באפיו נשמת חיים וכל That is: The souls which He (namely, GOD) has created live and endure in eternity, because they are a spark of the substance or essence of the blessed God, as it is said (Gen 2:7): And He breathed into his nostrils a living soul. The like is also to be found in the same place, fol. 127, col. 3. And in the book Nischmáth ádam, one reads in the first chapter, fol. 5, col. 1: הנשמה היא נר וניצוצין מהשם הגדול ידוד נאצלה מאורו הגדול ואשו הקדוש כמו שאמר הכתוב כי ה' אלהיך אש אוכלה הוא והוא כסדליק נר מנר שאינו חסר כלום כך הנשמה That is: The soul is a light and a spark of the great name Jehova, and derives from His great light and from His holy fire, as Scripture says (Deut 4:24): For the Lord your God is a consuming fire. And just as one lights a candle from another and that candle thereby suffers no diminishment, so too, so to speak, is it with the soul, which derives from the breath of the mouth of the blessed God. In the same manner one also reads in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 135, col. 1, in the 18th chapter, under the title Schäär réscha dísér ánpin: הנשמה היא באה מן שם הויה עצמה דכתיב כי חלק ה' עמו : That is: The soul derives from the name of the Essence (that is, the name Jehóva), as it is written (Deut 32:9): For the Lord's portion is His people. In the aforementioned book Nischmáth ádam, it is also taught at fol. 7, col. 1, in the first chapter, that the Jewish souls derive from the ten Sephiróth or Sephiros, and the words there read as follows: נשמותינו כלולים באחדות נשמת אדם הראשון : That is: Our souls, which are contained in the unity of the soul of the first man, derive from the holy ten Sephiróth (or radiances). By the ten Sephiróth, however, the Kabbalists understand the Godhead, as may be seen in the book Schéfa tal, fol. 1, col. 1.

Since the souls of the Jews are supposed to have such a glorious origin, while the souls of all other peoples are supposed to have such a shameful one, the former are to be entirely pleasing and dear to God, while the latter are to be regarded by Him as utterly worthless. It is reported in the book Schéfa tal fol. 4, col. 2. in the preface that, corresponding to the number of the seventy souls who, as can be seen in Exod 1:5, came from the loins of Jacob, there are also seventy peoples, and the following passage ensues: התורה הוצרכה להודיע זה כדי להורות לנו כי כל נשמה מישראל בפני עצמה חביבה וחשובה בעיני הק"ב יותר מכל הנפשות של אומה אחת בכללה וזה הענין גילה לנו התורה במקום אחר גם כן באמרה כל הנפש הבאה לבית יעקב מצרימה שבעים ודקדקה לומר כל הנפש ולא אמרה כל הנפשות כמו שאמרה אצל עשו את כל נפשות ביתו שלא היו רק שש נפשות ואפילו הכי קורא אותן נפשות בלשון רבים מכל שכן אצל יעקב שהיו שבעים נפש היה לו לומר כל הנפשות אלא שרצתה להורות לנו כי

כל נפש ונפש בפני עצמה מישראל חביבה בעיניו יותר מכל הנפשות של אומה מאומות עולם That is: The Law found it necessary to make this known, in order to teach us that each and every Israelite soul individually is more pleasing and more precious in the eyes of the holy blessed God than all the souls of one (other) entire people. And this matter the Law has also revealed to us in another place, when it states (Gen 46:27): "And all the soul (not souls, in the plural number) of the house of Jacob who came into Egypt was seventy." It (namely the Law) took careful note of this, that it says: "All the soul," and did not say "All the souls," just as it says of Esau (Gen 36:6): "All the souls of his house," and calls them souls in the plural, even though there were only six souls. How much more ought it to have said of Jacob, when there were seventy souls, "All the souls"? But it wished to teach us that each and every Israelite soul individually is more pleasing and more precious in His eyes than all the souls of an entire people among the peoples of the world, and that the Israelite people as a whole is more beloved and more highly regarded in His eyes than the seventy peoples.

Regarding the time in which the souls were created, the Jews teach that they were created at the very beginning of the world, in the first six days. Hence Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his book Nischmáth Chájim, fol. 70, col. 2, in the 16th chapter of the second Maámar, as follows: הגם שדעת חכמי אומות העולם הוא שהנשמות נבראים עם הגוף שלומי אמוני ישראל מאמינים באמונה שלמה שנבראו כלם בראשית ימי בראשית That is: Although the wise men of the nations of the world hold that souls are created together with the body, the perfect and faithful Israelites believe, with a perfect faith, that they were all created in the six days of the creation of the world. And immediately thereafter follows, from the book Tanchúma: כל הנשמות שהיו מן אדם הראשון ושיהיו עד סוף העולם כלם נבראו בראשית ימי בראשית וכלן בגן עדן That is: All souls that have existed from the time of the first man, and that will exist until the end of the world, were created altogether in the six days of the world. Likewise, in the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati on the five books of Moses, fol. 34, col. 2, in the Parascha Bereschith, one reads as follows: כבר ידעת כי הנשמות נבראו מששת ימי בראשית כענין שנאמר ידעת כי אז תולד ומספר ימך רבים That is: You already know that the souls were created from the six days of creation, as it is said (Job 38:21): "Did you know that you were to be born at that time, and that your days would be many in number?" And by this it is meant that the souls were created with the first light, as can be read in the aforementioned book Nischmáth Chájim, fol. 72, col. 1, in the 17th chapter of the second Maámar. This is also said to have occurred on the first day, as the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse reports in the immediately following 17th chapter, fol. 71, col. 2, where he writes in the following manner: ועתה אחר אשר טעמתי מעט דבש ואורו עיני גם בדבר הזה נחקור נא

באיזה יום מששת ימי בראשית נבראו ואומר כי מוסכם הוא כמעט מכל חכמינו ז"ל שהנשמות באו: That is: Now that I have tasted a little honey and my eyes have been enlightened in this matter as well, let us inquire on which of the six days of the creation of the world they were created; and I say that nearly all of our sages, of blessed memory, agree that the souls were created on the first day. Shortly thereafter he further expresses himself as follows: כבר כתב הרמב"ן שאי אפשר לומר שתהיה נבראת אחר יום ראשון כלל לפי שהקב"ה לא ברא יש מאין אלא ביום ראשון ומשם ואילך בשאר ימי בראשית עשה יש מיש ואם כך הנשמות בכלל היש הראשון באו: That is: Rabbi Moshe bar Nachman wrote that one cannot say at all that they were created after the first day, since the holy and blessed God created something out of nothing only on the first day, but from that day onward, in the remaining days of creation, He made something out of something; and if that is so, then the souls are included among those things that were created on the first day.

Where the souls go immediately after they have been created is taught by Rabbi Salomon Jarchi in his commentary on the Talmudic tractate Chagiga fol. 5, col. 1. in the following manner: אוצר יש וישו גוף ומבראשית נוצרו כל הנשמות : That is, there is a treasury (in heaven) which is called Guf, and all the souls which were created from the beginning and are yet to be born in the future have been placed there (by God). Concerning this, an equivalent passage is also to be found in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 152, col. 1. in the Parascha Nizzavim. From this treasury the souls are also to be given by God to children in their mother's womb, as the aforementioned Rabbi Menalle ben Israel teaches in his book Nischmáth Chájim fol. 72, col. 1. in the 18th chapter, when he writes as follows: מונח קיים ויצב הוא מדעת כל חכמי ישראל: שהנשמה הטהורה נתנה לו לאדם מאת ה' מן השמים מהחילת הוייתו במעי אמו טרם צאתו לעולם : That is, it is certain and true, according to the opinion of all the wise men of Israel, that the pure soul is given to man by God from heaven from the very beginning, when he is formed in his mother's womb, before he comes forth into the air of the world. And this he demonstrates in detail in what follows.

Regarding the number of souls which God originally created: there are said to be sixty times ten thousand, or sixty times one hundred thousand, in all, and indeed purely souls of the Israelites, all of which were contained within the soul of Adam and were attached to it. Therefore it is written in the Jalkut chadasch. fol. 155, col. 1. numero 34. under the title Neschamóth as follows: כללות הנשמות הם ששים רבוא והתורה היא שרש הנשמות דישאל ויש ששים (ששים רבוא פירושים לכל פסוק שבתורה וכל נשמה ונשמה בפני עצמה נתהוו מפירוש אחד ולעתידי כל אחד יקרא התורה כפי הפירוש המגיע לו אשר משם נבראת נשמתו ויש כמה נשמות שכוללות כמה פירושים ומשה רבינו עליו השלום היה כולל מכל הששים רבוא ובכל לילה

כשהאדם ישן אם זוכה עולה נשמתו וקורא שם הפירוש השייך לו בפסוק אחד ובלילה אחרת; בפסוק אחד וששים רבוא פירושים אלו כפשט הפסוק וכנגדן באגדה וכנגדן בקבלה; That is: the sum of souls consists of sixty times ten thousand (or six times one hundred thousand), and the Law is the root of the Israelite souls. Likewise, every single verse in the Law has six hundred thousand interpretations, and each individual soul was made from one interpretation. In the future, every person will also read the Law according to the interpretation that pertains to him, upon which his soul was created. There are, however, many souls that encompass many interpretations, and Moses our teacher, upon whom be peace, was encompassed by all six hundred thousands. Every night also, when a person sleeps, provided he is worthy of it, his soul ascends (into Heaven) and reads there the interpretation that belongs to it (and pertains to it) in one verse, and on the next night in another verse. These six hundred thousand interpretations, however, are according to the plain and literal sense of the verse; and corresponding to those (interpretations) there are likewise just as many (interpretations) in the Aggáda (that is, in the entertaining and subtle stories), as well as in the Kábbala. The very same thing is also found in the book Emek hammelech fol. 139, col. 4. in the 30th chapter, under the title Schaar réscha díser ánpin. Now, since six hundred thousand souls were created, there are also supposed to be just as many Jews; for this reason it is read in Schir haschtrím rábba, fol. 264, col. 2.: משה שקול כנגד ס' רבוא שהם כל ישראל; That is: Moses is equal to the six hundred thousands, which comprise all Israelites. Concerning which, more can be read in the book Megálle amyk-kóth, in the one hundred and eighty-sixth as well as in the one hundred and forty-eighth Ofan or chapter.

That all six hundred thousand souls were contained within the soul of Adam is taught in the book Nischmāth ādam, fol. 6, col. 1. in the first chapter as follows: נשמת אדם הראשון כלולה ושזורה מששים רבוא נשמות שהם כלל הדעות והפרצופים שבאפשרי המציאות להיות בישראל כבזוהר בראשית וכן כתב בעל ראשית חכמה שער האהבה פ"ה וז"ל ישראל יש בהם ששים רבוא נשמות ואיש לא נעדר לעולם מששים רבוא וזה יורה על היותם דוגמא המרכבה העליונה שיש בהם ששים רבוא בחינות : כנודע ליודעי החכמה . . . וכן שמעתי מבעלי התבונה שהכוכבים כולם הם ששים רבוא : That is to say: the soul of the first man was composed and put together from six hundred thousand souls (the Hebrew word properly means "twisted together," as threads are customarily twisted together), which is the sum of the forms of knowledge and of the persons that can possibly exist among the Israelites, as is explained in the Sohar on the first book of Moses. Likewise, the author of the book Reschith chóchma (by the name of Rabbi Elias), of blessed memory, writes in the 5th chapter under the title Scháar haaháva as follows: Among the Israelites there are six hundred thousand souls, and never at any time does a single person fall short of the six hundred thousands. This also indicates that they are a pattern of the supreme chariot, in which there are six hundred thousand forms of knowledge, as is known to those who are acquainted with this wisdom. I have likewise heard from astrologers that the number of stars in general is six hundred thousand.

Shortly thereafter, in that same column, the following appears: עתה הראיתוך לדעת כי כל הנשמות מישראל כלולים בששים רבוא ואותן ששים רבוא נשמות היו נכללים בפתילה אחת שהיא נשמת אדם הראשון ועל כן המשיל החכם נשמת אדם הראשון לנר שיש לו פתילה שזור מחוטים רבים: That is: I have now shown you, so that you may know, that the souls of the Israelites consist of six hundred thousand; and these six hundred thousand souls were contained within one wick (namely, the soul of the first man); for this reason the wise man compared the soul of the first man to a light that has a wick twisted together from many threads. And at fol. 8, col. 1, in the first chapter of the aforementioned book, it further states: נשמת אדם הראשון היא נר ה' שבו כלולים ששים רבוא נשמות מישראל כמדליק נר מנר: That is: The soul of the first man was a light of the Lord, in which the six hundred thousand souls of the Israelites were contained, just as one lights a candle from another. So too is it taught at fol. 7, col. 1 in the aforementioned first chapter: כל נשמות מישראל היו כלולים בנשמת אדם הראשון והיו מוכנים לבא בזה העולם בישראל חבל נחלתו עם סגולתו ואמנם אולת אדם הראשון שסילף דרכו והטיל הנחש זוהמא בחוה גרמה שהנשמות האלו נתערבו ואין כל אדם זוכה לנשמה זו כי אם אחר טהרה וקדושה וגו': That is: All Israelite souls were contained within the soul of the first man, and were prepared to come into this world among the Israelites, the portion of His (namely, God's) inheritance and the people of His possession. But the foolishness of the first man, who perverted his way, and the fact that the serpent cast a defilement into Eva, caused those souls to become mingled with one another; and not every person is worthy of such a soul except after purification and holiness, etc. In the Sepher Gilgûlim, fol. 1, col. 3, the following is also read: כל הנשמות והרוחות והנפשות כולם היו כלולים באדם הראשון בעת שנברא: That is, all Neschamoth, or souls, and all Ruchóth, or spirits, as well as all Nephalschóth, or souls, were comprehended in the first man at the time when he was created. And in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 171, col. 3, under the title Scháar ólam habbertá, the following is likewise taught on this matter: בשעת בריאת העולם היינו בשעה שנולד אדם הראשון היו כלולים בו כל ששים רבוא של נשמות זכר ונקבה היו וזהו שדרשו ר"ל על פסוק איפה היית ביסרי ארץ אמנם אחר כך כשחטא נתלשו ממנו אותם הנשמות של זכרים וירדו בעולם הבריאה עד היכל אלהי ישראל. והנשמות של נקבות נוסרו מן הזכרים וירדו גם המה בריוטא יותר התחתונה עד היכל לבנת הספיר: That is, at the time of the creation of the world, that is, at the time when the first man was created, all six hundred thousand souls, which were male and female, were comprehended in him; and this is what our rabbis, of blessed memory, taught concerning the words (Job 38:4), "Where were you when I laid the foundations of the earth?" But afterward, when he had sinned, those male and female souls were torn from him and descended into the world of creation, as far as the palace of the God of Israel. The female souls, however, were sawed off from the male ones and likewise descended into a lower chamber, as far as the palace of the sapphire stonework; just as Eve, before the sin, was sawed off from Adam.

The three patriarchs are said to have restored those souls which had been corrupted by Adam's sin, concerning which the Jalkut chadasch fol. 155, col. 4. numero 52. teaches the following under the title Neschamóth, from the book Megallé amykkóth: אברהם תיקן ששים רבוא נפשות שהיו תלויין בנפשו של אדם הראשון. ויצחק תיקן ששים רבוא רוחות שהיו תלויין ברוחו של אדם הראשון. ויעקב תיקן ששים רבוא נשמות שהיו תלויין בנשמתו של אדם הראשון: That is: Abraham restored the six hundred thousand nephalschoth, or souls, which had been attached to the néphelch, or soul, of the first man. And Isaac restored the six hundred thousand ruchóth, or spirits, which had been attached to the rúach, or spirit, of the first man. But Jacob restored the six hundred thousand neschamóth, that is, souls, which had been attached to the neschamá, or soul, of the first man. That a person has three souls, called Néphelch, Rúach, and Neschamá, has been treated at greater length above in the 19th chapter of the first part.

That all the aforementioned six hundred thousand souls were attached to Adam can be seen in the book Emek hammelech fol. 24, col. 2. in the 23rd chapter, under the title Scháar olam hattóhu, where the words read as follows: כל הנשמות שבגוף אדם הראשון כמו שאז"ל על אר"ז אין בן דוד בא עד שיכלו פסוק איפה היית ביסדי ארץ מלמד שכל הנשמות היו תלויות באדם הראשון זה היה הלוי בשערו וזה בחוטמו וכו' אף על פי שר"ש מפרש הדר יש ששים גוף ע"פנים בתורה: That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said (in the Talmudic tractate Avoda sara, fol. 5, col. 1.): The son of David (that is, the Messiah) will not come until all the souls that were in the body of the first man have come to an end; just as our rabbis, of blessed memory, have stated concerning the words (Job 38:4): "Where were you when I laid the foundations of the earth?" This teaches us that all souls were attached to the Guf, that is, the body of the first man, some to his hair, others to his nose, etc. Although Rabbi Solomon Jarchi interprets the word Guf to mean a chamber called Guf (in which the souls reside), the law is nonetheless expounded in seventy different ways. This is also read at fol. 31, col. 3 of the aforementioned book, in the 52nd chapter, under the title mentioned above, and what follows is: וכשתא נשרו ממנו איברים ובמקום שנפלו: שם נתישבו בני אדם וגגור עליו ישוב כדי להוציא אותן הנשמות: That is: But when he (namely Adam) had sinned, the limbs fell from him, and in the place where they had fallen, men had come to dwell, and it was decreed that it should be inhabited, so that those souls might be brought forth. The same is also to be found in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech fol. 94, col. 1. in the 55th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, as well as in the Sepher gilgúlim, fol. 1, col. 3., and in the Jalkut chádasch fol. 126, col. 1. 2. numero 89., under the title Mitha.

God is said to have shown Adam all the souls that were to proceed from him and enter into his descendants, concerning which the following is written in the Sobar über Schir haschirim, or the Song of Solomon of King Solomon, fol. 15, col. 1: ברא ק"בה לאדם הראשון מעפרא דבי מקדשא נטיל ומהמן אהברי ונפה באנפוי: 1: נשתהא דחיי וסתימן פתח ליה פתחא דגן עדן ועייל ליה בשבעין חדרין היכלין קדישין ועבד ליה עשר חופות כגוונא דאינון חופות דזמין ק"בה למעבד לצדיקים בגן עדן ומלאכי עילאי הוה מרקדין קמיה והוה הדי חמן ותמן ותמן אעבר קמיה ק"בה כל אינון רוחין ונשמתינ דזמינין ומתעתדן למהוי בכני נשא דיפקון מניה כיון דסטא למלך דוד חסה ליה דלא הוי ליה חיינ כלל אמר קמיה רבונו של עולם מן הוא דנה דלא חסינא ליה חיינ ער דאמר ליה ק"בה דוד מלכא איהו כיון דחמה אדם הראשון כך ייהב ליה משנוי שבעין שנין ודאינון ע' שנין דחיי דוד מלכא וכל שייפא ושייפא מכל שייפוי ייהב ליה מדיליה משייפוי הוה ליה מדיליה וחסרי מאדם קדמאה That is: the holy blessed God created the first man, and took from the dust (or ground) of the Temple (upon which the Temple was afterwards built), and from that he was formed, and He breathed the living soul into his nostrils; thereafter He opened for him the door of Paradise and led him into the seventy chambers, the holy palaces, and made for him ten bridal canopies, just like those canopies which the holy blessed God has appointed to make for the righteous in Paradise, and the higher angels danced before him, and he rejoiced there. In that same place the holy blessed God caused to pass before him all those spirits and souls that were ordained and prepared to be in the children of men and that were to proceed from him (namely from Adam). When he came to King David, he saw that he had no life whatsoever; whereupon he said: O Lord of the world, who is this, that I see no life in him? Then the holy blessed God answered him that he was King David. After the first man had seen how things stood, he gave him seventy years from his own years (which he had to live), and these were the seventy years of the life of King David; and thus the first man lacked seventy years of his thousand years, which he would otherwise have lived.

How Adam was able to see the souls is discussed in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 111, col. 2. numero 15. under the title Luchoth, where one reads: אמרו חז"ל הראה הקב"ה לאדם דור דור ודורשיו אין רצונו שראה כן בנבואה אלא ממש הראה אותם לו לפי שכל הנשמות שהיו עתידים לבא לעולם כולם עומדים לפני הקב"ה למעלה באותו דיוקן ממש שעתידיים לבא לעולם הזה וראה אותם אדם ממש זכוננא דא בהר סיני דכתיב אשר אינון פה ר"ל שהנשמות שלא נבראו עדיין היו בהר סיני באותו דיוקן שעתידיים לצאת לעולם הזה:

That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, have said: the holy and blessed God caused Adam to see each generation and its preachers, and the meaning is not that Adam saw them through a prophecy, but rather that God showed them to him actually and in very deed; since all the souls that were to come into the world stood above before the holy and blessed God in their actual form, in the very same form in which they were to come into this world, so that Adam truly saw them. It was likewise at Mount Sinai, as it is written (Deut 29:15): "With those who are not here," by which it is signified that the souls whose bodies had not yet been created at that time were present at Mount Sinai in that same form (with bodies) in which they were to go forth into this world.

According to this teaching, then, the souls must at that time have assumed bodies which Adam had seen; for in the aforementioned book Jálkut chádash, at fol. 154, col. 4. numerô 24., under the title Neschamóth, the following is likewise taught: כל הגשמות קודם שירדו לעולם הזה מתלבשין בגוף ובדיוקן שעתידי לעמוד בעולם הזה מתלבש למעלה טרם בואו לעולם ועומד לפני הק"ב בגוף ובדיוקן וה'קבה משביעו שלא יחטא וזהו גלמי ראו עיניך ר"ל גלמי הוא הגוף ואו עיניך שעמדתי לפניך. That is: All souls, before they descend into this world, clothe themselves with a body and in that form in which they are to stand in this world. And each soul clothes itself up above, before it comes into the world, and stands before the holy and blessed God with a body and in that same form. Thereupon the holy and blessed God adjures that same one (the body together with the soul) that it shall not sin; and this is what the words mean (Ps 139:16): "Your eyes saw my Gólem," that is, my Gólem, which is the body, your eyes saw, when I stood before You.

Regarding what has been stated, namely that the souls which were not yet in any bodies at the time when the Law was given by God on Mount Sinai took on bodies and clothed themselves therewith, this does not accord with what Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 70, col. 2., in the 16th chapter of the second Máamar, when he expresses himself as follows: אמרו בתנחומא פרשת פקודי ז"ל כל הנשמות שהיו מן אדם הראשון ושיהיו עד סוף העולם כולם נבראו בששת ימי בראשית וכולן בגן עדן וכולן היו במתן תורה שנאמר כי את אשר ישנו פה עמנו עומד היום ואת אשר איננו פה עמנו עומד היום. והפירוש הוא מוכרח כי איך יכרות ה' ברית עם הנעדרי המציאות ושלא היו עדיין בעולם. אלא שהפירוש כך הוא כי לא בלבד כרת ה' בריתו עם כל העומדים שם בגוף ונפש אלא גם כן בנפשות שנבראו מבראשית אשר היו שם מבלי גוף והם קבלו עליהם שבועת הר סיני. ולכן הזכיר בהן עמידה בלשון האמור במלאכי השרת בין העומדים האלה כאשר תראה באורך בספר פרס הרמונים דף ס"ה ע"א: That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, say in (the book) Tanchúma, in the Paraschá Pekúde: All the souls that have existed from the first man onward, and that will exist until the end of the world, were created in the six days of creation, and they are all in Paradise. They were also all present when the Law was given, as it is said (Deut 29:15): (For I make this covenant and this oath not with you alone,) but both with him who stands here with us today, and with him who is not here with us today. And this interpretation is necessary, for how could God have made a covenant with those who had not yet been created and were not yet in the world at that time? According to this interpretation, however, the matter stands thus: that God the Lord established His covenant not only with all those who stood there in body and soul, but also with those souls that were created in the beginning and were present there without a body, and who took the oath of Mount Sinai upon themselves. For this reason, the word "standing" is mentioned in connection with them, which is used of the ministering angels (Zech 3:7), (where it is written:) "Among these that stand," as you may see at length in the book Párdes Rimmónim, fol. 65, col. 1. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse. It is thus stated here that the souls were present at Mount Sinai without bodies, whereas in what preceded it was taught that they clothed themselves with bodies.

In Schemóth rábba, it is also taught at fol. 118, col. 1, in the 29th Parascha, that the souls, at Mount Sinai, flew out of the bodies from fear, and the words read as follows: ר' לוי בדברים שאלו ישראל מלפני הקב"ה שיראו כבודו וישמעו קולו והיו רואין את כבודו ושומעין את קולו. שנאמר והאמרו הן הראנו ה' אלהינו את כבודו ואת גדלו וכתוב ואת קולו שמענו מתוך האש. ולא היה בהם כח לעמוד שכיון שבאו לסיני ונגלה להם פרחם נשמתן על שדבר עמהן שנאמר נפשי יצאה בדברו: אבל התורה בקשה רחמים מלפני הקב"ה יש מלך משיא בתו והורג אנשי ביתו כל העולם כולו שמחים ובניך מתים מיד חזרה נשמתן שנאמר תורת ה' תמימה משיבת נפש:

That is: Rabbi Levi said that the Israelites had desired two things from the holy blessed God, namely that they might see His glory and hear His voice; and they saw His glory and heard His voice, as it is said in Deut 5:24: "And you said, behold, the Lord our God has let us see His glory and His majesty." And it stands written (further in the same place): "And we heard His voice out of the fire." But there was no strength in them to stand, for when they had come to Mount Sinai and God had revealed Himself to them, their souls flew out (of their bodies) while He had spoken with them, as it is said (Song 5:6): "My soul went forth when He spoke." But the Law entreated the holy blessed God for mercy on their behalf (and said to Him): Is there also a king who gives his daughter in marriage and kills his household servants? All people in the world are joyful, yet your children are dying. Thereupon their souls returned into them, as it is said (Ps 19:8): "The law of the Lord is perfect, restoring the soul."

The Jews also hold other wondrous and strange doctrines concerning souls, and say that the souls of the wise and learned are brought up into heaven every night. Concerning this, the following is read in the Sóhar chádasc, fol. 44, col. 1. in the Médrasch néelam: אמר רבי יהודה תא חזי אין לך בכל לילה ולילה שאינו אוהו : מטטרון שר הפנים כל נשמתן של תלמידי חכמים העוסקים בתורה וקראה אותן לפני הק"ה וממתינים מלאכי השרת ודוממים מלומר שירה עד שיכנפו נפשות הצדיקים עמהם ויאמרו ביחד לאל עליון שנאמר הנצנים נראו בארץ אלו העוסקים בתורה לשמה . עת הזמיר הגיע לומר לבוראם ביחד . וקול התור נשמע בארצנו זה מטטרון לאסוף נשמתן של צדיקים לומר : That is: Rabbi Jehuda said: Come and see. There is no night in which the angel Metátron, the Prince of the Presence, does not take all the souls of the wise who study the Law and present them before the holy and blessed God; and the ministering angels then wait and remain silent, refraining from singing their song of praise to God, until the souls of the righteous have been gathered together with them, and they together say the song of praise to the most high God, as it is written (Song 2:12): "The flowers appear on the earth" -- these flowers signify those who study the Law and for its sake. "The time of singing has come," so that they may sing together to their Creator. "And the voice of the turtledove is heard in our land" -- this turtledove signifies Metátron, who makes his voice heard in order to gather the souls of the righteous, so that they may sing a song of praise to their Creator every night, as it is written (Ps 149:5): "The godly shall rejoice in glory." These are the words of the Sóhar chádasc. The following is likewise taught in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 177, col. 3. numerö 64. under the heading Teschúva: וגו' הכיון שישן האדם עולה נשמתו לראות באור העליון וגו' : That is: When a person sleeps, his soul ascends to behold the highest light, etc. Concerning this nightly ascent of souls into Paradise, the book Emek hammélech, fol. 36, col. 3. in the 64th chapter, under the heading Scháar ólam hattóhu, may also be consulted.

Further, the rabbis teach that on their Sabbath the Jews receive, in addition to their own soul, yet another one, which they call נשמה יתירה Nescháma jetherá (or jeséra, or jattirá), that is, a superfluous soul. Something on this subject may be read in the Talmudic tractate Taanith (or Taanis) fol. 27, col. 2 and in the tractate Béza, fol. 16, col. 1., where the question is asked: for what reason does one not fast on the first day of the week? And the answer given is: א"ר יוחנן מפני הנוצרים שמואל בר נחמני אמר מפני שהוא שלישי ליצירה ריש לקיש אמר מפני נשמה יתירה דאמר ריש לקיש נשמה יתירה ניתנה בו באדם בערב שבת במוצאי שבת נוטלין אותה : ממנו שנאמר שבת וינפש כיון ששבת וי אבדה נפש : That is: Rabbi Jochanan said (it is done) on account of the Christians (who have a feast day on that same day, so that they cannot say we are fasting because they are rejoicing, as may be seen in the Talmud in the tractate Sopherim, fol. 13, col. 4. in the 17th chapter). Schmuél bar Nachmáni said (it is done) because it is the third day after the creation (of man), for Adam was created on the sixth day, namely on Friday, counting from which up to Sunday makes three days; but on every third day man is weak and thus unfit for fasting, as Rabbi Solomon notes in his commentary on the passage. Resch Lakisch said (it is done) on account of the superfluous souls; for Resch Lakisch states that this soul is given into man on the eve of the Sabbath (namely on Friday evening by God) and taken from him again at the departure (or end) of the Sabbath, as it is said (Exod 31:17): (But on the seventh day) He rested וינפש Vajinnafesh (that is, as it is foolishly understood in the Talmud): after he (namely man, on the Sabbath) has rested, (then) Vai afedá nefesh, o woe! the (superfluous) soul is lost. Thus Vajinnafesh, which means And He refreshed Himself, must, according to the erroneous teaching of the Talmud, signify as much as Vai afedá nefesh, which is a foolish interpretation of Scripture.

Concerning such a superfluous soul, the following is also written in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 15, col. 2, in the Parascha Bereschith: אמרו רבותינו ז"ל שיש לו לאדם נפש יתירה בשבת : That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that a person has a superfluous soul on the Sabbath.

And in the Jalkut chadash, at fol. 165, col. 3, numero 52, under the title Shabbath, the following is read from the 175th Ofan of the book Megalle amykkoth: חמשה פרצופים של הנשמה שהם נפש רוח נשמה חיה יחידה הם באים לאדם : באלו הזמנים בחול של מועד ובמוסף של ר"ה באה לו הנפש וביום טוב הרוח וביום כפור : That is: The soul has five kinds of forms (and names), which are: Nefesch, that is, the soul; Ruach, that is, the spirit; Neschamah, that is, the soul; Chajah, the living one, that is, the life; Jechidah, that is, the solitary one. These come to a person at the following times. On the weekdays that fall between the festival, and at the additional prayer of the new moon, the Nefesch, or soul, comes to him; and on the festival day the Ruach, or spirit; and on the Day of Atonement the Neschamah, or soul; and on the Sabbath the superfluous soul, which is the mystery of the Chajah, that is, of the living one, or of life; but in the life to come he becomes worthy of the Jechidah, or solitary one. Concerning these five kinds, one may also consult the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 10 and 14, under the title Neschamah.

The Jews are also accustomed to eating fine morsels on their Sabbath, which is done for the sake of this superfluous soul, concerning which the following is taught in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 144, col. 1, no. 10, under the title Schabbath: סוד ענג שבת הוא לעדן נשמה יתירה שהעשה היא מצוה רבה לכבוד השכינה : That is: the mystery of the delight of the Sabbath is that one should give pleasure to the superfluous soul, so that it may perform a great commandment in honor of the divine Majesty among those below (namely, among human beings who dwell here upon the earth); that is, that it should speak the blessing at the meal, which is a commandment not customary among those above (who dwell in Heaven). And Rabbi Salomon Jarchi writes, in his aforementioned commentary on the Talmudic Tractate Táanith, fol. 27, col. 2: נשמה יתירה שמרחיבין דעתו לאכילה : ושתייה : That is: through the superfluous soul, the person's disposition toward eating and drinking is enlarged, so that he acquires a greater appetite for eating and drinking.

Where the superfluous souls come from on the Sabbath is written about in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 165, col. 2, numero 45, under the title Schábáath, in the following manner: הנשמות היתרות הבאים בשבת יש מהם באים מצד הבל וגו' ויש : That is, concerning the superfluous souls that come on the Sabbath, some of them come from the side of Abel, etc., but some of them come from the side of Cain, etc. If this is the case, however, then not all souls that come on the Sabbath can be good, for in the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat on the five books of Moses, fol. 34, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschith, it is written: בספר הזוהר אמרו על קין מהאי גופא נשמתהון דרשיעיא : That is, in the book Sohar it is reported of Cain that from this body come the souls of the wicked. And in the Jalkut chádasch, fol. 8, col. 2, numero 120, under the title Adam, one reads: כל הנשמות שבעולם הם מסטרא דקין והכל הצדיקים הם בניי : That is, all souls that are in the world come from the side of Cain and Abel; the righteous are the children of Abel, but the wicked are the children of Cain. It has also already been shown above in the 2nd chapter of the first part that Cain received his soul from the supreme devil Sammaël, who is said to have slept with Eve, and thus all superfluous souls descending from Cain must be of the devil's nature.

This erroneous doctrine of the superfluous soul on the Sabbath is believed by nearly all superstitious Jews together; however, Rabbi Menasse ben Israël rejected it in his aforementioned book, Nischmáth chájim, fol. 53, col. 2, in the second Máamar, where he teaches as follows. ועתה האם יחשוב הקורא שבשבת נותנו לו לישראל נשמה יתרה בודאי לא כך עלה במחשבתן של ראשונים אבל הכוונה להודיע איך הנשמה ביום השבת המיוחד לעסק התורה פנוי הלב מעסקי ימי המעשה ומטרדותיו העלה : במדרגה ממתנה נחליאל ומנחליאל במות . והתוספת הוא תוספת השכלה והשגה : That is: Now, however, when the reader supposes that an Israelite is given a superfluous soul on the Sabbath, he is mistaken in this, for it did not enter the minds of the ancients (who taught concerning it) in such a manner; rather, the intention was to make known how the soul, on the Sabbath, which is dedicated to the study of the Law and on which the heart is freed from the affairs of the weekdays and their burdens, ascends step by step (as may be read in Num 21:19) from Matthana to Nabaliel, and from Nabaliel to Bamoth (that is, ever further and further). And the addition (of the soul) signifies an addition of understanding and comprehension of the divine Law.

On the above topic, the rabbis also teach that souls, when they depart from the bodies of the dying, pass into other bodies; this is called by the Greeks Μετεμψύχωσης, Metempsychosis, but by the Jews גלגול Gilgul, or גלגול נשמות Gilgul neschamóth (or neschómos), that is, a rolling of souls, from גלגל Gilgel, which means rolling, because they are, as it were, rolled from one body into another; and in ancient times the pagan philosopher Pythagoras was an adherent of this opinion. Concerning this doctrine, Rabbi Menasse ben Israël writes in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 152, col. 2, at the beginning of the sixth chapter of the fourth Máamar, as follows: אמנות הגלגול היא אמונה לכלל קהל עדתנו ולא נמצא מי שימאן בה ויחרוקנה: זולתי הרב ר' סעדיה הגאון והכ"ד דרשי כנראה באגרת ההתנצלות להרש"ב יוכן כתב ר"ל בן חביב בסימן ה' ז"ל אמנם יש כת אחרת גדולה מאד מחכמי ישראל המאמינים • והם כתבו אנהנו עליה כי היא אמונה אמיתית ועיקר מעקרי התורה לתרץ קושיית צדיק ורע לו. וכלנו אנחנו חייבים לשמוע דברי אלו האחרונים ולהאמין האמונה הזאת בלי שום פקפוק וספק כלל ע"כ: וידוע הוא לכל בני שער עמי שספר הזוהר וכל That is: The belief in the transmigration, or passage, of souls from one body into another is a sound belief held by the entire assembly of our congregation (or church), and there is no one who denies and rejects it, except Rabbi Saadias haggáon and the Badráschi, as may be seen in the letter of apology addressed to Rabbi Schlémo ben Addéreth. And thus Rabbi Levi ben Cháff, of blessed memory, wrote in numero 8. There is, however, another very large company of the sages of Israel who believe it, and they have written concerning it that it is a true belief and a foundation (or principal article) among the foundations of the Law, in order to resolve the objection, or difficulty, of why it goes ill with the righteous; and we are all obliged to hear the words of these latter teachers and to give our assent to this belief without any impediment or doubt whatsoever. Thus far are his words. It is likewise known to all who belong to my people that the book Sóbar and all Kabbalistic books hold firmly to this belief, etc. Something similar may also be read in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 7, col. 3, in the preface. We see, therefore, from these words of Rabbi Menasse ben Israël, that to this day all Jews regard this erroneous doctrine as a true matter. Yet Rabbi Naphtali also writes, fol. 7, col. 2, in the sixth chapter of his preface to the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, that there was also one in Italy who had denied it, and his words read as follows: הלא תראה בפירוש התורה להחכם השלם אברבנאל בפרשת כי תצא הוא סותר דבריהם המכחישים סוד הגלגול ובעו"ה ראיתי

קונטרסים א' שכתב חכם אחד מארץ איטליא ואוסר שכל מי שהוא מאמין בסוד הגלגול שהוא That is: Do you not see in the wise and perfect Abarbanel's commentary on the Law, in the Parashah Ki téze, that he refutes the words of those who deny the mystery of Gilgul, or the wandering of souls from one body into another? But I have seen, on account of our manifold sins, a pamphlet written by a wise man from Italy, in which he stated that anyone who believes in the mystery of the passage of souls from one body into another is a heretic, and that his transgression is greater than can be forgiven, and that his sin likewise has no atonement.

This teaching about the transmigration of souls from one body into another is said to have been first revealed by the patriarch Abraham in Egypt, as the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel teaches in his book Nischmáth chájim fol. 171, col. 1., in the 21st chapter of the fourth Máamar, whereupon he further makes himself heard as follows: כל העולם היו מאמינים שהנפשות נפסדות : וסותר האדם מן הבהמה אין עד שבא אברהם אבינו ופרסם בעולם ענין ההשארות והגלגול : That is: The whole world had believed that souls are perishable, and that man has no advantage over the beast, until our father Abraham came and revealed to the world that souls remain (after the death of man) and do not perish, and transmigrate from one body into another.

According to the senseless opinion of the Jews, the souls of human beings are supposed to pass either back into human beings, or else into tame or wild animals, fish, birds, or other living creatures, or into plants that grow from the earth, such as trees and the like, or even into lifeless things, such as stones, water, and the like, and indeed even into devils. As for the passage of souls into human bodies, the souls of the male sex are supposed to be transferred either back into the male sex or also into the female sex, and the souls of women are likewise to be transferred either back into the female sex or also into the male sex. That the souls of men return into men can be seen from the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 152, col. 2., in the sixth chapter of the fourth Máamar, where it is read that the soul of Adam passed into King David and will come into the Messiah; and the words read as follows: אמרו חכמי האמת אדם ראשי : יבוא אדם דוד משיח כי אדם אחר שחטא נתגלגל נפשו בדוד והוא גם כן חטא רק בדבר אוריה ולכן יתגלגל במשיח ופסוק מלא הוא ועבדו את ה' אלהיהם ואת דוד מלכם אשר אקים להם וכתוב דוד עבדי נשיא להם וכן ובקשו את ה' ואת דוד מלכם That is: The scholars of truth have said that the letters of the word אדם Adam (that is, Aleph, Daleth, Mem, or A.D.M.) are the first letters of the words Adam, David, Messiah, because the soul of Adam, after he had sinned, passed into David. But David also sinned in the matter of Uriah, and therefore his soul will come into the Messiah; and this is a complete (and clear) biblical passage (Jer 30:9, where it is written:) They shall serve the LORD their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up for them. And (Ezek 37:25) it is written: And my servant David shall be their prince forever. Likewise (see Hos 3:5) And they shall seek David their king. In the Jalkut chádasch, however, it is written at fol. 95, col. 1. numero 238. under the heading Jacob, concerning the soul of Adam, as follows: כְּשֶׁנִּבְרָא אָדָם הָרָאשׁוֹן הָיְתָה בּוֹ נִשְׁמָה חַשׁוּבָה חֲצוּבָה מִתַּחַת כִּסֵּא הַכְּבוֹד וּמִשְׁחָטָא פְּרָחָה מִמֶּנּוּ וּבָאָה בּוֹ נִשְׁמָה מִן הַקְּלִיפּוֹת וּכְשֶׁנּוֹלַד הַנּוֹד בָּאָה בּוֹ אוֹתָהּ הַנִּשְׁמָה הַחַשׁוּבָה שֶׁפָּרְחָה מֵאָדָם וְלָכֵן כֹּאשֶׁר נִגְזְרָה גְּזֵרָה עַל אָדָם לָמוֹת לֹא נִגְזַר עַל הַנּוֹד כִּי תָהִי: That is: When the first man was created, there was in him a glorious soul, which had been taken from beneath the throne of glory. But after he had sinned, it fled from him, and a soul from the Kelifóth (that is, the devils) entered into him. When Enoch was then born, that same glorious soul which had flown out of Adam came into him. Therefore, although it was decreed concerning Adam that he should die, it was not decreed concerning Enoch, because he possessed that same glorious soul.

That the souls of men also pass back into men is likewise to be seen in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numerô 9, under the title Gilgúlim, where the following is read: דַּע כִּי קֵיִן נִתְּלַגְלַל עָקֵר נִשְׁמָתוֹ בְּיִתְרוֹ וְרוּחוֹ בְּקֹרַח וּנְפָשׁוֹ בְּמִצְרִי וְזֶה שֶׁ'כִּי שְׁבַעֲתִים: That is: Know that the principal part of the Neschamá, or soul, of Cain passed into Jethro, his Ruach, or spirit, however, into Korah, and his Néphesch, or soul, into the Egyptian (whom Moses, as can be seen in Exod 2:12, 14, struck dead); and this is what Scripture (Gen 4:24) says: For sevenfold יוֹקֵם jykkam Kajin, shall Cain be avenged; and the letters of the word יוֹקֵם jykkam (namely the Yod, Koph, and Mem, or J, K, and M) are the initial letters of the names Jethro, Korah, Mizri (that is, of Jethro, Korah, and the Egyptian). And at numerô 18, the following is written in the same place: הָדַע שֶׁנִּשְׁמָתוֹ הַגְּבוּרָה הָיְתָה מִגְּלָגוּל יָפֶת: That is: Know that the soul of Japheth passed into the mighty Samson. And at numerô 24, the following is found there: הָיָה אִיּוֹב גְּלָגוּל תֵּרַח הָיָה: That is: The soul of Terah (the father of Abraham) passed into Job. In the Jalkut chádasch, fol. 127, col. 3, numerô 17, under the title Mila, the following is likewise written: קָיָן גּוֹל הָאוֹמָתוֹ שָׁל הֶבֶל לְפִיכָה יִתְרוֹ: That is: Cain took Abel's twin by force (that is, the sister who was born with him); for that reason the soul of Cain passed into Jethro, and the soul of Abel into Moses. For that reason Jethro gave his daughter to Moses as a wife, &c.

That the souls of men also pass into the female sex is taught in the small Jalkut Rubéni numerô 61, under the title Gilgúlim, as follows: לְפַעֲמִים אִם בֶּן אָדָם הָיָה כִּילִי בְּחֻכְמָתָהּ וְלֹא הָיָה רוּצָה לְלַמֵּד לְאַחֵרִים נֶעְנַשׁ הָיָה כִּילִי בְּמִמּוֹנָא וְלֹא עָבַד צְדָקָה וְגַם הָיָה כִּילִי בְּחֻכְמָתָהּ וְלֹא הָיָה רוּצָה לְלַמֵּד לְאַחֵרִים נֶעְנַשׁ: That is: Sometimes, when a man is miserly with his goods and gives no alms, and is also miserly with his wisdom, so that he will not teach others, he is thereafter punished by having his soul pass into a woman. And in the little book Schechéchath léket, it is read at numerô 16, under the title Jacob: נשמת תמר היתה נשמת זכר וביהודה היו בו ניצוצות מנשמת נקבה ועל ידי נשמת תמר היתה נשמת זכר ויהא נשמת זכר ועל כן לא היתה רות ראויה לילד עד כן ילדה ממנו. ורות היתה נשמת תמר שהיא נשמת זכר ועל כן לא היתה רות ראויה לילד עד כן ילדה ממנו. That is: Tamar's soul was a male soul, and in Judah there were sparks of a female soul; for that reason she bore a child by him. But Ruth had Tamar's soul, which was a male soul; therefore Ruth was not capable of bearing children until the Lord caused her to conceive (and become pregnant), that is, until He caused sparks of a female soul to shine within her, and thereby she bore a child. In the book Nischmāth chājim, it is likewise read at fol. 168, col. 2, in the 19th chapter of the fourth Máamar: האיש מתגלגל באשה מפני העונש: That is: The soul of a man passes into a woman as punishment. And it follows thereupon: וזה: That is: And such a transmigration of souls also occurs on account of grave sins that have been committed.

That the souls of women also pass into the female sex is likewise to be seen in the small Jalkut Rubéni, no. 1, under the title Gilgúlim, where one reads: רע: ששרה חנה שונמית צרפית כולם היו מגלגול חוה: That is, know that Sarah, Hannah, the Shunammite woman (mentioned in 2 Kgs 4:8) and the widow of Zarephath (mentioned in 1 Kgs 17:9) were all together the Gilgul of Eve (that is, that Eve's soul had passed into all of them). Likewise, it is taught in Jalkut chádasc fol. 3, col. 2, no. 8, under the title Adam: אדם נתגלגל באברהם וחוה בשרה: That is, the soul of Adam passed into Abraham, and the soul of Eve passed into Sarah.

That the souls of the female sex are also transferred into the male sex is evident from the aforementioned passage of the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 3, col. 2. numerô 8, where immediately following the cited words it is written: כדי לצרף: וללבן זוהמת אדם הוליד אברהם את ישמעאל ששאב עשו הזוהמא לחוץ וחוה נתגלגלה אחר כך ביצחק וגם היא נצרפה ונטהרה על ידי ששאב עשו כל הזוהמא ולפי שנתגלגלה ביצחק נקבה מיקרי שמאל סיטרא דנוקבא אחר כך נתגלגלו שניהם ביעקב וילדו בנים: That is: In order that the impurity of Adam (which had come from the chief devil Sammaël into Adam, and thereafter into his descendants) might be refined and cleansed, Abraham begat Ishmael, who drew out all the filth. After this, the soul of Eve entered into Isaac, and she too was refined and purified (from the impurity of Sammaël), because Esau drew all the uncleanness unto himself. And because the soul of a woman had entered into Isaac, the left side is called the side of the woman. After this, both of their souls entered into Jacob, and they begat children. This is also to be found at numerô 4 in the small Jalkut Rubéni, under the title Gilgúlim. And in the numerô 8 that follows it, one reads:

רחב נתגלגלה בחבר הקני ואחר כך נתגלגלה בחנה וזהו סוד : אשה קשת רוח אנכי שהיא That is: היתה זונה מצד רוח הקשה ועלי 'הוא גלגול יעל אשת חבר הקני וגו' The soul of Rahab entered into Heber the Kenite; thereafter it entered into Hannah, and this is the mystery (of the words of Hannah in 1 Sam 1:15, when she says:) "I am a woman of a hard (or troubled) spirit," because she had been a harlot (when she was called Rahab, and she spoke those words) in regard to the hard spirit of impurity. But the soul of Jael, the wife of Heber the Kenite, entered into Eli. Rabbi Menasse ben Israel teaches on this subject as follows in his frequently cited book Nilschmáth chájim, fol. 168, col. 2. in the 19th chapter of the fourth Máamar: האשה מתגלגלת באיש לשכר : That is: A woman's soul enters into a man as a reward for her, namely for the good that she has done.

Regarding the transmigration of female souls into other bodies, the following is written in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 23, col. 2. under the title Ischa, drawn from the Sépher hacavvanóth (or hacavvónos) of Rabbi Yitzhak Lúrya; fol. 55, col. 2.: סוד גלגול הוא שדווקא זכרים מתגלגלים בחטאם אבל נקבות אינם מתגלגלים בחטאם רק מקבלים עונשם בגיהנם אך לפעמים כשהאשה מתגלגלת לא כסיבתה הוא אלא הענין כי כשבעלה חטא עד שאחרי מותו הוכרח להתגלגל והוא מאותם שנאמר ויצא אשתו עמו שמגלגלים בת זוגו פעם אחרת בעבורו ולזה כשהאדם בא בתחילה לעולם ובת זוגו באה גם כן בתחילה לעולם זהו זיווג ראשון ואותו הזיווג הוא נעשה בקל בשעה וברגע אחד בלא קטטה כלל אך כאשר יתגלגלו ואחר כך נושאים זה את זה שנית זהו זיווג שני והוא בא על ידי קטטה גדולה כי יש מקטרגים למעלה על אשר בעונו נתגלגל ורוצים למנוע הזיווג ולפי זה זיווג שני יכול להיות אפילו בחר שנושא בתולה רק שהם מאותן הנשמות שנתגלגלו That is to say: the mystery of the transmigration of souls from one body into another consists in this, that only the souls of men enter into another body on account of their sins, whereas the souls of women do not pass into other bodies on account of their sins, but rather receive their punishment in hell. When, however, the soul of a woman does at times pass into another body, this occurs not on her own account, but because her husband has sinned, such that his soul must necessarily be transferred into another body after his death, and he is one of those of whom it is said (Exod 21:1): "his wife shall go out with him"; and therefore his wife's soul must, for his sake, enter into a body a second time. Therefore, when a person comes into the world for the first time, and his wife likewise enters the world for the first time, this constitutes the first marriage, and such a marriage comes about easily, in an hour, in a single moment, without any quarreling whatsoever. But when the souls of both of them pass into other bodies and they take one another a second time, this is the second marriage, and it comes about with great quarreling, for there are accusers above who wish to prevent the marriage, because his soul has been transferred into another body on account of his sin. For this reason, it can be the second marriage even when a young man marries a maiden, provided only that they are of those same souls that have been transferred.

The souls of Jews are also said sometimes to pass into heathen bodies, concerning which one reads in the book Avodath hakkódesh, fol. 45, col. 1. at the beginning of the 34th chapter of the second part, which is called Chélek haavóda, as follows: ויש עבירות שהעובר עליהם יבא מן הדין שיתגלגל בפנים כלומר : בישראל ויש עבירות שהעובר עליהן יבא מן הדין שיתגלגל בחוץ כלומר בגויי הארצות : That is: there are sins on account of which the soul of the one who commits them must by right pass inward, that is, into an Israelite; and there are sins on account of which the soul of the one who commits them must by right pass outward, that is, be transferred into a heathen from among the heathens of the world. Concerning Ruth, the following is written in the small Jalkut Rubéni numeró 63. under the title Gilgulim in this manner: רות היתה מתחילה נפש מנפשות קדושות של ישראל ובבעבור שחטאה נתחייבה גלגול ונתגלגלה באומות העולם ועתה שבא בועז לעולם זאת הנשמה של רות היתה בת זוגו כי כבר קבלה כל עונשה והגיע זמנה לבוא להתגלגל בעולם הזה עם בועז בן זוגה וכו' : ' ורות היתה נפש מנפשו של בועז וראויה לו וכשירדה מלמעלה לטטה נתגלגלה באומות העולם כי לפעמים מתגלגלים נפשות חסידים באומות העולם לזכות את ישראל שמהמים על ישראל : ועל כן אמרו ר"ז חסידי אומות הבא : That is: Ruth was originally one of the holy Israelite souls; but because she had sinned, her soul was required to pass into another body, and it was transferred into the peoples of the world. After Boaz had come into the world, however, this soul of Ruth was the one he was to marry, for she had already endured all her punishment, and her time had drawn near that she must come and enter another body in this world together with Boaz, who was to wed her, etc. Ruth was also a soul from the souls of Boaz, and belonged to him; but after she had descended from above, she passed into the peoples of the world, for the souls of the pious pass sometimes into the peoples of the world, and this happens in order to make the Israelites righteous (or to purify them), because one has compassion upon Israel. For this reason our rabbis, of blessed memory, say: the pious among the peoples of the world have a share in the life to come (that is, in eternal life). Since it is stated here, however, that the soul of Ruth had to pass into a heathen body on account of a sin she had committed, in order to atone for the sin in such a manner, this stands in direct contradiction to what was cited shortly before from Rabbi Isaac Luria's Sepher haccavvanóth; for that work teaches that the souls of women are not transferred into other bodies on account of their sins, but must endure their punishment in Hell. It is, however, nothing new at all among the foolish rabbis that they contradict one another, for lies have no consistency. But let this suffice concerning the passage of souls into human bodies.

That souls are also supposed to transmigrate into all manner of animals can be seen in Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmách chájim, fol. 168, col. 1, in the 19th chapter of the fourth Máamar, in which chapter he treats of the gradibus, or degrees, and the fivefold kinds of banishment according to which souls are supposed to be expelled, and he writes there as follows: הגירוש השני הוא מאותם שהאמינו בה 'ובמשה עבדו ועם כל זה פעלו און וחטאו בחטאות הנמרצות ועשו כתועבות הגוים בבעילות אסורות וינאפו את נשי רעיהם ובאו על העריות : ומפני שעשו כמעשה הבהמות ובלי הבחת האסורה והמותרת לקחו להם נשים מכל אשר בחרו הנה ה' אל אמונה ואין עול מעניש אותם ושולחם על פני חוצה בגופי הבהמות כפי מדרגת חטאם .פעמים בבהמה טהורה ופעמים בבהמה טמאה חיה ועוף : ושם נידונים על חטאם צער ויגון ימצאו : בהיותם מגורשים מלפני ה' 'חוץ מגופם הטבעי הולכים על ארבע כסוס כפרד אין הבין That is: The second banishment concerns those who did indeed believe in God and in His servant Moses, but nevertheless did evil and committed grave sins, and also acted according to the abominations of the heathens through forbidden intercourse, and committed adultery with the wives of their neighbors, and lay with forbidden women. And because they carried on a bestial work and, without distinguishing between the forbidden and the permitted, took wives for themselves from all those whom they chose, behold, God is a true God and does no wrong, and He punishes them and sends them out into the bodies of cattle according to the degree of their sin, sometimes into a clean animal, but sometimes into an unclean animal, a wild beast, or birds; and there they are judged on account of their sin and find pain and sorrow, inasmuch as they are driven away from the Lord and out of their natural body, and go on four feet like a horse and a mule that has no understanding.

So also in the book Avodáth hakkódesch fol. 49, col. 3., in the 34th chapter of the second part, the following is read: קבלו כי מה שאמר משה רבינו עליו השלום: בתורה אל אלהי הרוחות לכל בשר רמז בזה שהגלגול הוא בכל בשר כלומר בבהמות ובשקצים : That is, it has been learned through tradition, or oral teaching, that our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace, intended by the words in the Law (Num 16:22), "O God, who art a God of the spirits of all flesh," to indicate that souls pass into all manner of flesh, namely into cattle, vermin, and fowl; and that the words "all flesh" signify as much as "into all flesh."

It is thus evident from the cited words of the books Nischmát chájim and Avodáth hakkódesch that souls are also supposed to pass into wild animals; and in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 17, col. 1., in the third chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne batteschúva, it is stated that the soul of a human being had been in a deer, of which mention will be made below. On the other hand, in the little book Schechecháth léket, numéro 20., under the title Beth hamikdasch, from the Zijóni, the following is read: לא יתגלגל אדם: That is, one does not sacrifice wild animals, because the soul of a human being never passes into them; and for this reason their fat is also permitted (to eat).

The aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israël also reports, in his cited book Nischmát chájim fol. 160, col. 1. 2., in the 13th chapter of the fourth Maámar, the following on this subject, and says: גם צריך שתדע שהמקובלים האמינו גם כן ההעתקה והגלגול אפילו מגוף מין אחד לגוף מין אחר. ולכן אמרו שהעובר על המצוות להכעיס ולא עשה תשובה יתגלגל בבהמה. וכן על פסוק ויפיץ אותם מעל פני האדמה דרשו ח"ו שבשלשה חלוקי דינים נדונו דור הפלגה. הטובים שבהם נדונו בבלבול לשון. והכת שהתכונה לשם ע"ז נעשו מהן קופין וחתולין וכיוצא בהם. והכת הג' שאמרו נעלה לשמים ונכנו בקרדומות הושלכו למטה נעשו מהן שדין ומזיקין ורוחין. רצונם שקצת מהם נתגלגלו בבהמות האלו וקצת נעשו נשמתן במיקין ורוחות רעות ונדות בלי שום מעשה כלל. והריקנטי בפרשת נח ובפרשת שמיני כתב ז"ל. ויש מן המקובלים האחרונים המאמינים בגלגול הבהמות ואמרו שאם עשה אדם עברה אחת יתרה על זכיות יתגלגל בבהמה טמאה וזהו וזרה אינו מעלה טמא הוא הוא לכם. מי שאין לו גרה על זכיותיו. ואם מעלה גרה על זכיותיו יתגלגל בטהורה רק אם חטא בעבודה זרה בגילוי עריות ובשפיכות דמים באלו השלשה אפילו מעלה גרה יתגלגל בטמאה אם לא חזר בתשובה וזהו סוד שפן גמל חזיר וכו'. 'ובפרשת קדושים ז"ל כבר הודעתך סוד הבהמות הטהורות והטמאות וקצת מחכמי הקבלה האחרונים אומרים כי העובר על העריות סופו להתלבש בבהמה טמאה או בשקצים ורמשים. ולזה רמז ולא תשקצו את נפשותיכם בכל הרמש שבודאי יוכל אדם לשקץ נפשו בהם וזהו ואקוץ בם. ואמרו בעונש הבא על חמותו כי סופו להתלבש בנויה ותתגיר וזו היא דודתך היא כלומר שסופה לשוב לדתנו ולהורתנו. והבא על אשת אחיו סופו להתלבש בפרד שנאמר ועיר פרא אדם יולד על שהפריד הבנין של מעלה. והבא על אשת איש יתגלגל בחמור וזהו סוד כי תראה חמור שונאך עזוב תעזוב עמו. הבא על אשת דודו יתלבש באשה אשדורית. הבא על בהמה יתגלגל בעטלף כי נתעטף בדבר עבירה. הבא על הזכר יתלבש בשפן או ארנבת כי הם זכרים ונקבות ושנה. אחת באין עליה ושנה אחת יבא על האחרות. הבא על הגויה יתגלגל בקדשה יהודית שנאמר וחיתם בקדשים. הבא על כלתו יתגלגל בפרדה. הבא על שתי אחיות יתגלגל בקדשה גויה שיבאו עליה שני אחים. הבא על אשת אביו יתגלגל בגמל וזהו שנאמר גומל נפשו איש חסר ועוכר שארו אכזרי. שארו זו שאר אביך הוא. והנה הוא חצוף בעריות וסופו להיות צנוע That is: It is also necessary that you know that the Kabbalists likewise believe that souls pass and are transferred from the body of one kind of creature into the body of another kind; for this reason they have said that the soul of one who transgresses a commandment with the intent of provoking someone thereby, and who does not repent, will enter into a beast. Likewise, our sages of blessed memory have expounded the words "And He scattered them over the face of the earth" (Gen 11:8), that the generation of the dispersion, that is, those who built the Tower of Babylon, were punished with three kinds of judgments. The good among them were punished with the confusion of language. From the company whose intention was directed toward idolatry, apes, cats, and the like were made. The third company, however, those who said "we will ascend into heaven and smite Him," namely God, "with axes," were cast down and made into devils and evil spirits. By this they meant to say that the souls of some of them entered into those animals, while the souls of others became devils and spirits that wander about without the least rest. So also did Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat, of blessed memory, write in the Parascha Nóach and in the Parascha Schemini (in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 137, col. 2) as follows. There are also among the later Kabbalists those who believe that souls enter into animals, and they say that a man's soul enters into an animal when he has committed one more sin than good works, and this is what is meant by the words "and that which does not chew the cud shall be unclean unto you" (Lev 11:26), by which is understood the one who does not chew the cud over his merits, that is, his good works. But if he does chew the cud over his merits, his soul passes into a clean animal. However, if he has committed idolatry, lain with forbidden women, or shed blood, his soul, on account of these three things, passes into an unclean animal even if he does chew the cud, provided he has not repented; and this is the mystery of the hare, the camel, and the swine, etc. (of which mention is made in Deut 14:7-8). And in the Parascha Kedoschim (the said Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat, of blessed memory, fol. 151, col. 1) states: I have already shown you the mystery of the clean and unclean animals, and there are some among the later ones who understand the Kabbalah who say that one who lies with forbidden women will in the end be clothed with an unclean beast, or with vermin, or creeping things; and this is what the words point to: "And you shall not make your souls abominable in anything that creeps upon the earth" (Lev 20:25), for a man can certainly make his soul abominable in them; and this is indicated by the words "And I abhorred them" (Lev 20:23). They have also said, concerning the punishment of one who lies with his mother-in-law, that he will in the end be clothed with a stork and be killed by his companions, that is, the other storks. One who lies with his father's sister will in the end be clothed with a gentile woman who converts to the Jewish religion; and this is what the words point to: "For she is your Doda," that is, your aunt (Lev 18:14), by which is meant that she will in the end convert to our Dath, or Das, that is, our faith and our law. One who lies with his brother's wife will in the end be clothed with a mule, as it is said: "And a man is born like a young wild ass" (Job 11:12), because he has divided the upper structure. One who lies with another man's wife, his soul passes into a donkey; and this is the mystery of the words: "When you see the donkey of one who hates you lying down, you shall not neglect to help him" (Exod 23:5). One who lies with his father's brother's wife will be clothed with a woman of Ashdod. One who lies with his daughter-in-law, his soul is transferred into a she-mule. One who lies with two sisters, his soul passes into a gentile harlot. One who lies with his father's wife, his soul passes into a camel, as it is said: "A merciful man does good to his own soul, but a cruel man troubles his own flesh" (Prov 11:17); by "his flesh" is understood the flesh of your father; and behold, he was shameless with forbidden women, but in the end he will become modest like a camel. One who lies with his mother, his soul passes into a she-donkey, but this is properly to be understood only when one has not repented during his lifetime. Thus far are the words from Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, and the very same thing is also to be found in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 130, col. 3. in the Perascha Acharé moth. So also is the following read in the little book Schebechath léket, numero 10., under the title Abraham: חזר כך ואחר של בלעם ונתגלגל בחמורו של ר' פינחס בן יאיר That is: The soul of Ishmael entered into Balaam's she-donkey, and thereafter it passed again into the donkey of Rabbi Pinchas ben Jair; and because the Ishmaelites are thieves, the donkey was therefore stolen. In the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 57, col. 4, from the book Gäle räjsa, the following is also written: תתקעד דורות היו מגולגלים בצאן לבן ואחר כך הולכים יעקב למצרים ומשם זכו להתגלגל בסימן אנושי ולכן היו ישראל פרים ורבים מאד במצרים That is: The souls of nine hundred and seventy-four generations entered into Laban's sheep, and from there they became worthy to be transferred into the human race. For this reason the Israelites were very fruitful in Egypt and multiplied greatly. This is also to be found in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 46., under the title Gilgúlim.

The souls of the righteous are also said to be transferred into the bodies of cattle and birds, concerning which the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 49, col. 2., in the 34th chapter of the second part, as well as the book Caphtor uphérech, fol. 51, col. 2., teaches in the following manner: לפעמים נמצא נפש שום צדיק בשום בהמה או עוף שהיא מגולגלת נפש הצדיק ההוא בגוף הבהמה או בעוף ההוא That is: Sometimes the soul of a righteous person is found in a clean animal or bird, into whose body the soul of that righteous person has entered. And because human souls are accustomed to entering into clean animals, the Jews are commanded to have slaughtering knives without notches, so that they do not cause too great pain to such a soul; and concerning this it is written in the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 160, col. 2., in the 13th chapter of the fourth Maamar, as follows: וזהו סוד אדם וזהו סוד אדם וזהו סוד אדם לפעמים המקריב נפש בהמה עמה מקריב נפש אדם וזהו סוד אדם ובהמה תושיעה. 'אשר על כן נצטוינו בשחיטה ובסכין בלי פגימה כי מי יודע אם גלגול יש בה. ולכן צריך לברור לו מיתה יפה. והאוכל אבר מן החי באוכל מבשר אחיו כשיש שם גלגול נפש. וזהו סוד לא תאכל הנפש עם הבשר. ואמרו עוד שבגלל דבר הזה אמר דוד הצילה מחרב נפשי: That is: He who sacrifices the soul of an animal sometimes sacrifices along with it the soul of a human being; and this is the mystery (of the words of Ps 36:7): Lord, You preserve man and beast. For this reason we are commanded to slaughter (or butcher) with a knife without a notch; for who knows whether a soul may have entered into it: therefore one must choose for it a gentle death. And whoever eats a limb from a living animal does as much as if one were eating from the flesh of his brother, when a soul has been transferred into it. And this is the mystery (of the words of Deut 12:23): You shall not eat the soul together with the flesh. It is also reported that David therefore said (Ps 22:21): Deliver my soul from the sword; my solitary one from the dogs.

In the book Avodáth hakkódesh, at fol. 49, col. 3, in the 34th chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, the following is taught: אמרו עוד כי ענין חמשה דברים המפסידים את השחיטה שהם הלכה למשה מסיני וכל דקדוקי השחיטה שבאו בדברי רבותינו ז"ל ובדיקת הסכין כדי שלא תהיה פגומה לתועלת הנפשות המגולגלות בבהמות ובעופות שלא תפסל השחיטה ויתדחו עוד ושלם יצטרענה: That is: Furthermore, they (namely the rabbis) have said that the matter of the five things which invalidate the slaughtering, and which have come down by tradition from Mount Sinai, as well as all the precise observances in the act of slaughtering that appear in the words of our rabbis, of blessed memory, and likewise the inspection of the knife so that it not be nicked, are done for the benefit of the souls that have transmigrated into cattle and birds, so that the slaughtering may not be rendered unlawful, and so that they may not be driven further and be made to suffer pain. Shortly thereafter follows: על כן צריך שתהיה השחיטה יפה ובדוקה בעבור שכתוב ואהבת לרעך כמוך: That is: Therefore it is necessary that the slaughtering be done properly and with inspection, since it is written (Lev 19:18): You shall love your neighbor as yourself. And in the great Jalkut Rubéni, at fol. 102, col. 3, in the Parascha Jethro, the following is read from the book Pelia: בכלל לא תרצה שלא לשחוט אותו ואת בנו כי שמא שוחט שני קרובי בשרו: That is: Within the words (Exod 20:13) "You shall not kill" is included (the prohibition of Lev 22:28) that one shall not slaughter the same animal (namely the ox or the lamb) together with its young, for perhaps he would thereby be slaughtering two of his own blood relations. Concerning the transmigration of the souls of the righteous into other bodies, still more can be found in the Jalkut chadásch fol. 155, col. 2. numero 37., under the title Neschamóth. The souls of the perfectly righteous, however, are not to transmigrate into any other body, as may be seen in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 164, col. 1., in the 16th chapter of the fourth Máamar.

Regarding the transmigration of souls into birds and other flying creatures, the following is written in the book Emek hammélech fol. 11, col. 2., in the fourth chapter of the preface, as well as fol. 138, col. 4, in the 29th chapter under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin, concerning a raven in which a soul is said to have dwelt: "העיד כמוהר"ר משה גלאנטי אב"ד דצפת שמתחלת ביאתו של האר"י זצ"ל לארץ הקדושה הלך לעין זיתים ונשתטה על קבר ר' יהודה בר אילעי כיון שהגיע אצל אלוני זית ותאנים העומדים לשם סמוך לקברו ראה על אחד מהאילנות עורב אחד עומד וקורא קרק קרק הרבה פעמים עד אין מספר אמר האדון למה"ר משה גלאנטי שהלך עמו הכרת פני אדם אחד שהיה שמו שבתי גובה מכים בצפת א"ל הכרתיו והיה אדם רע אכזר גדול. אמר לו האר"י ז"ל נשמתו היא מגולגלת בזאת העורב. ועתה אומר לי שהוא פלוני ובעבור אכזריותו שנהג עם העניים בשעת גביית המסים שפשט הגלימא מעל כתפיהם והמשכבות מתחת גופיהם לכן העניש אותו הקב"ה בזה הצער שיתגלגל בעורב. ועתה הוא מבקש שאתפלל עליו. אוי That is: Rabbi Moshe Galante, who was the chief judge at Zephath (that is, at Jerusalem, which by an abbreviation is called Zephath, signifying as much as צבי פאר תפארתנו Zeví péer tifarténu, that is, the ornament of the glory of our splendor), testified that at the very beginning, when Rabbi Yitzhak Luria, of blessed memory, came into the Holy Land, he went to Ein Zeitim and stretched himself out (and lay) upon the grave of Rabbi Yehuda bar Ilai. But when he arrived at the bushes of the olive and fig trees that stood there near his grave, he saw upon one of those trees a raven standing and crying "krak" an innumerable number of times; whereupon the Lord (namely Rabbi Yitzhak Luria) said to Rabbi Moshe Galante, who was walking with him: did you know a man by the name of Sabbethai, who collected the tax at Zephath? He answered him: yes, I knew him, and he was a wicked and very cruel man. Thereupon Rabbi Yitzhak Luria, of blessed memory, said to him: this is his soul, which has transmigrated into this raven, and now he tells me that he is so-and-so; but on account of his cruelties, which he committed against the poor when collecting the tax, pulling the cloaks (or mantles) from their shoulders and the bedding from beneath their bodies, the holy and blessed God has punished him with this torment, that he has entered into this raven; and now he desires that I should pray for him. Thereupon Rabbi Yitzhak Luria, of blessed memory, said to him: you godless one, go your way, I will pray for you; whereupon the raven immediately flew away. In the little book Schebechath léket, numero 6, under the title Neschamóth vegilguám, one also reads: פרנס המנהנה על הציבור מתגלגל בדבורה שהיא: That is: the soul of a leader of the congregation who exalts himself haughtily over the congregation transmigrates into a bee, which is proud. The very same thing also stands in the book Emek hammélech fol. 153, col. 1., in the 45th chapter under the title Scháar résch di séranpin, and what follows thereafter is: וכמו שמצינו כי דבורה הנביאה היתה מהנאה ששלחה לקרוא אל ברק ולא הלכה אליו וכן עשתה חולדה שאמרה על מלך יהודה אמרו לאיש הזה וגו' ולא קראה אותו מלך והנה הדבורה גאותנית גם היא דברית ולכן גם המדבר דברים שלא כהונן מתגלגל גם כן בדבורה That is: just as we also find that the prophetess Deborah was proud, in that she had Barak summoned (as may be seen in Judg 4:6) and did not go to him herself; and just as the prophetess Huldah likewise did, who (as may be read in 2 Kgs 22:14-15) said of the king of Judah (namely Josiah): "Say to the man who sent you to me," etc., and did not call him king; see, therefore, a bee is likewise proud and very talkative (that is, it buzzes greatly), and for this reason the soul of one who speaks things that are not fitting also transmigrates into a bee.

I must now also indicate how one can tell from a person whether his soul was previously in livestock, a wild animal, or a bird, and on this subject the book Emek hammélech fol. 16, col. 3. in the third chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne batteschúva, writes as follows: ה"ארי זל"ה מסר סימן לתלמידיו שיכירו נפשות אלו ואמר כשהראו כני אדם שהם עזי פנים ואין להם בושה נכני אדם תדעו נאמנה בבירור שקודם זה הגלגול היו בגלגול בהמה חיה ועוף טמא וכמו שלהם אין בושה גם להם אין בושה וזהם הולכים אחר לימודם הראשון That is: Rabbi Yitzhak Luria taught his disciples a sign by which they could recognize such souls (which had previously been in livestock), and said to them: when you see people who are brazen and shameless, you can know with certainty and clarity that their souls were previously, before they returned into a human body, in livestock, a wild animal, or an unclean bird; and just as those animals feel no shame, so likewise these people feel no shame, and they follow that which they first learned.

That souls also pass into fish can be seen in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 20, col. 4, numero 9, under the title Achíla, where one reads as follows: בבל ג' סעודות של שבת צריך לאכול דג כי שם מגולגלים נשמות של צדיקים דכתיב בהם אם את כל דגי הים יאספו להם That is, one must eat fish at all three meals of the Sabbath, because the souls of the righteous pass into them, of whom it is written (Num 11:22): "Shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them?" In the book Emek hammelech, fol. 17, col. 3, in the fifth chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne batteschúva, where the transmigration of souls is treated, the following is also written on this subject: יש גלגולים אחרים במינים טמאים וטהורים בצומח ודומם כפי רשעהו של אדם רחמנא לישזבן. וצדיקים בני תורה הצריכים מירוק דינם בדגים שבים וסימן לדבר כתיב בצדיקים ויגוע ויאסף אל עמיו וכתוב אצל דגים אם כל דגי הים יאסף להם ללמד בגזירה שוה נאמר כאן אסיפה ונאמר להלן אסיפה מה אסיפה הנאמרה באן היא בצדיקים כך האסיפה הנאמרה להלן היא בצדיקים וגו' : 'ולפיכך מצוה מן המובחר לאכול דג בשבת ובפרט That is, there are also other transmigrations of souls into clean and unclean kinds of living creatures, as well as into plants and lifeless things, according to the wickedness of the person; may the merciful God preserve us from this. The righteous who occupy themselves with the law and stand in need of a purification are judged in the fish of the sea; and this matter is signified thereby, because it is written of the righteous (Gen 49:32): "And he expired and was gathered to his people." But of the fish it is written (Num 11:22): "Shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them?" in order to teach from this an argumentum à pari, that is, a proof from the like. There (namely Gen 49:32) mention is made of a gathering, and here (Num 11:22) mention is made of a gathering. Just as the gathering mentioned there is said of the righteous, so too does the gathering mentioned here concern the righteous, and so forth. Therefore it is commanded on the Sabbath, and especially at the third meal, which is the time of good pleasure, to eat of the very best fish. From this we see the reason why the Jews are so eager every Friday to buy fish for their Sabbath.

Regarding the transmigration of souls into plants that grow from the earth: they are said to enter at times into the leaves of trees, concerning which the following is read in the book Emek hammelech fol. 153, col. 2., in the 45th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin: המאכיל נבילות לישראל הוא מתגלגל בעלה של האילן והרוח בא ומגלגלתו והוא צער גדול וסוף עונשים הוא כשנופל העלה ההוא לארץ כי אז נחשב לו למיתה ממש בעת שנפרת הנעקר מן העולם וזהו סוד והעלה נבל כי מי שמאכיל נבילות מתגלגל בעלה נובלת וזהו כי תהיו כאלה נובלת עליה ולפעמים חוזר That is: whoever gives an Israelite carrion to eat (by which is meant not only an animal that has died on its own, but also what has gone wrong in the slaughtering, or what has been slaughtered by a Christian) -- that person's soul passes into the leaf of a tree, whereupon the wind comes and drives it about, which is a great torment. This punishment, however, comes to an end when the leaf falls down to the ground, for at that point it is reckoned to him as an actual death, when he is destroyed and rooted out from the world; and this is the mystery of the words (Jer 8:13): "And the leaf has fallen." For whoever gives someone carrion to eat, that person's soul is transferred into a falling leaf; and this is what the words mean (Isa 1:30): "For you shall be like an oak tree whose leaves fall off." Sometimes, however, he returns again (into other leaves) multiple times, and the mystery of the matter consists in this: that he descends from living creatures down to the rank or level of vegetabilium, that is, plants of the earth. The very same thing is also to be found in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 161, col. 1., in the 13th chapter of the fourth Máamar, and in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 155, col. 3. numero 42., under the title Neschamóth.

Regarding the transmigration of souls into entirely lifeless creatures, which was mentioned above, these souls are said to enter into stones, watermills, and other things. Concerning their entry into stones, it is written in the book Emek hammélech fol. 153, col. 2. in the aforementioned 45th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin, as follows: המדבר לשון הרע וכיצא בו מתגלגל באבן דומם וכמבואר אצלנו בענין נבל שנתגלגל באבן שנאמר ויהי לאבן אחר מיתת בלעם כי הוא היה גלגול בלעם אחר שלא היה כוחו אלא בפיו נתגלגל באבן ולכן נהידיא נבל מלדבר דברים רעים

באבן That is: Whoever speaks evil (and slanders) and does the like, his soul enters into a mute stone, as is clear in our treatment of the matter of Nabal, that his soul entered into a stone, as it is said (1 Sam 25:37): "And he became as a stone." (This happened, however,) after the death of Balaam, for the soul of Balaam had entered into him. Since his power resided solely in his mouth, his soul was transferred into a stone; for this reason Nabal was afraid to speak evil (against David), and he remembered that his soul had originally entered into a stone. This same thing can also be read in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, fol. 16, col. 3., in the third chapter, under the title Schaar tikkuné batteschūva, and in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 20, col. 1. numero 23., under the title Ummoth (or Ummos) baólam. In the book Nischmath chajim, fol. 161, col. 1., in the 13th chapter of the fourth Maamar, where this matter is treated, it is also written thus: (רבי יצחק לוריא) ואמר שד שנבל הוא :אותיות לכן ללמד שלכן בלעם ונבל הם גלגול אחד. ובלעם ולכן לא היה כוחן אלא בפיהם. ועל כן נתגלגלה נשמתו של בלעם בדומם שהוא הפך כוחו • וכאשר התחיל להתתקן ונתגלגל בנבל וחזר לסורו ולדבר לשון הרע בדוד חזר להתגלגל בדומם כבראשונה ויהי לאבן. וכן באשת לוט נאמר ותהי נציב מלה שהוא גלגול בדומם • ואל תחשוב שנפש האדם נעשית אז בלתי מרגשות בדומם וכצומח כי אם אין לה הרגשה היאך ירגיש העונש אולם כך יונן הדבר כי הקב"ה לעונש האדם מדבק הנפשות הרעות לעץ או לאבן ונפשותם That is: Furthermore, the Rabbi (Yitzhak Luria) said that the names Nabal and Laban contain the same letters, in order to teach that Laban, Balaam, and Nabal were one Gilgul (that is, they shared one soul, which passed from one into the other). Likewise, the power of Laban and Balaam resided in nothing other than their mouths; for this reason the soul of Balaam entered into a mute thing, which was entirely contrary to the power he had possessed. But when he began to be set right again, in that his soul was transferred into Nabal, he resumed his former evil nature and spoke evil of David, and his soul entered again into a mute thing as before, and came into a stone. So also it is said of the wife of Lot (Gen 19:26): "And she became a pillar of salt," which is likewise a transmigration of the soul into a mute thing. But do not suppose that the soul of a person thereby becomes insensible, like a lifeless thing or a plant; for if it had no sensibility, how would it feel the punishment? Rather, the matter must be understood thus: that the holy, blessed God causes the evil souls of men, as a punishment, to cleave to trees or stones and to be bound to them, so that they are tormented by the company of those things which are not of their nature. In the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, fol. 11, col. 2., in the fourth chapter, in the preface, the following is also read concerning a soul that is said to have entered into a stone: פעם אחת עבר ר' יצחק לוריא בטבריא בטבריא לפני בית המדרש הגדול של ר' יוחנן שהוא עדיין קיים הראה לתלמידיו אבן אחד בתוך הקיר ואמר בזה האופן

That is: שבו מגולגל נשמה אחת והיא צועקת שאתפלל עליה וזהו סוד כי אבן מקיר תצעק The Rabbi Yitzhak Lurja once passed through (the city of) Tiberias before the great school of Rabbi Jochanan, who was still living, and showed his disciples a stone in the wall, and said to them in this manner: a soul has entered into it, which cries out that I should pray for it; and this is the mystery of (the words of Hab 2:11): "For even the stone in the wall shall cry out."

That souls are also supposed to travel into water can be seen from the book Emek hammelech fol. 153, col. 1, 2. in the aforementioned 45th chapter, where it is written as follows: השופך דמים נתגלגל במים וסימניך על הארץ תשפכנו כמים ותמיד הולך ומתגלגל תוך המים ואין לו מנוחה ואלו היו יודעים בני עלמא כצערא הדין הוו בכיין תדיר ועיקר צערן במקום אשר מקלח המים ונופל עליו קילוח המים ומפילו ומגלגלו שם גם כל מי שעונו ועונשו הוא במיתת חנק הוא נענש במים ונחנק שם בכל עת ודע לך שאין שום אחד מאלו המגולגלים או שום אדם שנענש בבית דין של מעלה שאין יוצא לפניו כרוז שמכריז עונשו ועונו בכל אותו הזמן שנגזר עליו אותו העונש או אותו הגלגול ואינו נפרד ממנו גם כן יש עמו מלאך שוטר אחד המחניקו בתוך המים ומגלגלו בגלגול ההוא · וכן בכל שאר · הגלגולים ואינם נפרדים ממנו עד תשלום עונשו · גם רובם יש לפניהם בית דין אחר שדנין אותו בכל עת ומשנים אותו מעונש זה לעונש זה כפי הדין הראוי עליו וענין המים הנזכרים הם That is: Whoever sheds blood, his soul travels into the water, and this is signified (by the words of Deut 12:16) "You shall pour it out upon the earth like water," and that same soul is continually rolled about in the water and has no rest. And if the people of the world knew this pain, they would weep at all times. The greatest pain of such a soul, however, is in a place where the water flows down and the rush of water falls upon it, casts it down, and rolls it about there. Also, everyone who has committed a sin that is punished with the death of strangling (that is, by the rope) is punished with water and is continually suffocated therein. Know also that there is not one among those whose souls are thus transmigrated, nor any person who is condemned in the highest court, before whom a crier does not go forth and publicly proclaim his punishment and his sin for the entire duration for which that punishment or that transmigration of souls has been decreed upon him, and does not depart from him. There is also a ruling angel with him who suffocates him in the midst of the water and causes his soul to be brought there. So it is also with all the remaining transmigrations of souls, and such angels do not depart from one until his punishment has come to an end. Before most of them there is also a court which judges and condemns them continually, and changes their punishment now into this one, now into that one, according to the punishment that is due to each. The matter of the aforementioned water, however, is the mystery of the words (2 Sam 14:14): "And like water that is poured out upon the earth." Something concerning this can also be found in the Jalkut chádascb fol. 155, col. 2. num. 38. and fol. 152,

col. 4 of the book Emek hammélech. For here, in the little book Schebechátb léket numero 6., under the title Neschamóth vegilgulám, one reads: לכן לא ישים אדם פיו אל הסילון או מעין וישתה רק בידיו כי יכול להתעבר בו הנשמה ואפשר שהיא נשמת רשע: That is: Therefore a person should not put his mouth to the pipe (of a well) or to a spring and drink, but should drink from his hands, for otherwise a soul could enter into him (which he would swallow down with the water), and it might be the soul of a wicked person.

That souls are also to be placed into mills is to be seen from the aforementioned book Emek hammélech fol. 153, col. 2. in the chapter cited above, where the following is taught: הכא על אשת איש אחר צער נע ונד בא בעונש: שנתגלגל בתוך הריחיים שטוחנין על ידי המים ושם נידונים שניהם האיש והאשה בסוד וטחון: That is, whoever lies with another man's wife, his soul passes, after it has endured the torment of na venád, that is, of being unsettled and fugitive, into a mill in which grinding is done by means of water; and there they are both judged, the man and the woman, according to the mystery (of the words of Job 31:10): "So let my wife grind for another."

That the souls of the wicked are also to be transferred into devils is to be seen in the book Emek hammélech fol. 85, col. 1., in the 16th Chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, where the words read as follows: גם הרשעים של ישראל נידונים בגלגול שדים ומזיקין: That is, the wicked among the Israelites are also punished in that their souls pass into devils and harmful spirits. It has likewise been shown above, from the book Nischmáth chájim by Rabbi Menasse ben Israel, from fol. 160, col. 1., that the souls of those who built the Tower of Babylon and said they wished to ascend into heaven and kill God with axes have passed into devils. Since mention has been made here of the punishment called נע ונד Na venád, that is, being unsettled and fugitive, I must also indicate what the rabbis teach concerning it. It is to be known that only those who have sinned very grievously are tormented in this way, such that their souls must wander about lost in the world. Concerning this, the following is written in the book Emek hammélech fol. 16, col. 2., in the third chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne teschúva: אותן הרשעים שחטאו הרבה ומרדו כנגד אביהם שבשמים רחמנא: לצלן כי חטאתם כסודם הגידו ובפרט אותן בועלי גויות ונדות וגם החוטאים באשת איש וכן רוצח שהרג נפש מישראל וכן משומד אשר כפר בעיקר וגם מסור המוסר ומלשין על היחיד או על בכלל יהדות למלכות ושריו ומזיק אותם וגו' הכתות הללו אינם זוכים לעלות אל פני רקיע השמים לרמוס חצר ופלטוריו של מלך אלא למעלה פוסקים המלאכים דינו ותכף שולחים למטה בית דין אחד של מזיקים לדונו ולרדוף אותו מגבעה להר ומהר לגבעה ומשוטטין אויר העולם עד זמן הקצוב עליהם ומתגלגלים בדומם צומח חי מדבר ובשבע ארצות עד אשר יקבל אותן הגיהנם ושם נידונים שנים עשר חודש ואחר כך מצפצפין ועולין ונבראים פעם אחרת כדי להקנן ולצרפן וללבנן וגו' והק"בה לבדו מעלה אותם ממדריגה למדריגה בתחילה מגלגל אותם בדומם ומן הדומם עולים לצומח ומן הצומח עולים לבעל חי בלחי מדבר ואחר כך אל

חי מדבר בגוים או עבדים ואחר כך לישראלים ולפעמים יזכה איזה נפש מהם ומדלגת שנים חת מדבר בגוים או עבדים ואחר כך לישראלים ולפעמים יזכה איזה נפש מהם ומדלגת שנים חת: That is, those wicked persons who have sinned greatly and have shown themselves rebellious against their Father who is in heaven (from which may the merciful God preserve us), inasmuch as they have proclaimed their sins like Sodom; and in particular those who lie with heathen women and with those afflicted with their female impurity; as well as those who touch other men's wives; likewise a murderer who has killed an Israelite; and an apostate (Jew) who has denied the fundamental principle (of the Jewish religion); as well as a traitor who betrays a Jew, or the entire Jewish community, to the king and his princes, and causes them harm, etc. All these multitudes are not worthy to ascend up into the firmament of heaven and to enter the forecourt and the palace of the King; rather, the angels pronounce judgment upon each one above, and immediately send down a court of devils to judge him and to pursue him from the hills into the mountains and from the mountains into the hills, and they run about fugitively in the air of the world until the time appointed over them has passed, and they pass into inanimate things, into plants of the earth, into animals, and into human beings, as well as into the seven earths (of which mention was made above in the ninth chapter of the first part), until hell receives them, in which they are judged for twelve months; after that they cry out and ascend, and are created a second time so that they may be improved, refined, and purified, etc. But the holy and blessed God causes them to ascend from one rung to another. First He transfers their souls into a mute or inanimate thing, and from the inanimate thing they ascend to the plant, and from the plant they ascend to the irrational animals, and after this to human beings, passing into heathens or servants, and thereafter into Israelites. Sometimes one of those souls is also so worthy that it skips over two or three rungs at once.

In the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 167, col. 2, in the 19th chapter of the fourth Máamar, the following is also read on this subject: הגרוש אשר החטאים נגרשים מנגד עיני השם הוא על מדרגות שונות. הרשעים גמורים והפושעים אשר פעלו עולה בתכלית העול כמו האפיקורוסים שכחשו בה' ויאמרו לא הוא והנכחשים תורה מן השמים שחר ועונש והשארות הנפש וחיו בלי אלוה וכלי עול תורה אינם הולכים מיד לגיהנם כי גיהנם הוא למרק העוונות והכבס האחרון אבל הולכים נעים ונדים בעולם בלי שום נחת רוח ועליהם אמרה אביגיל ואת נפש אויביך יקלענה בתוך כף הקלע כי הזכירה האושר והטוב העליון אשר לו זוכים הצדיקים והצער העצום והענוי מופלג מן הקצה אל הקצה כאשר אמרתי אשר בו חטאים: That is: the banishment of sinners who are driven from the eyes of God takes place through various degrees and manners. Those who are entirely godless, and the transgressors who commit the greatest possible injustice, such as the Epicureans, who deny God and claim that there is none, and who deny that the law was given from Heaven, and who reject the reward of good and the punishment of evil, as well as the survival (that is, the immortality) of souls, and who live without God and without the yoke of the law, do not go immediately into Hell; for Hell is appointed to purge sins and is their final cleansing: rather, they wander restless and fugitive through the world without any peace of mind. Of these, Abigail said (1 Sam 25:29): "But the soul of your enemies shall be hurled out from the hollow of the sling." For she made mention of the blessedness and the highest good which the righteous deserve, and of the violent pain and the exceedingly great torment of those who are hurled from one end to the other, as I have said, with which the entirely godless are tormented.

Regarding this hurling, it is written in the aforementioned book Nischmáth chájim fol. 16, col. 2., in the seventh chapter of the first Máamar, as follows: אמרו רבותינו ז"ל שני מלאכים יש אחד בסוף העולם ואחר בסוף ומשליכים נפש רשע זה לזה שנאמר ואת נפש אויבך יקלענה בתוך כף הקלע ואחר כך יבואו ימי השלוה וההשקט: That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that there are two angels, one standing at this end of the world and the other at the far end, and they hurl the soul of the wicked back and forth to one another, as it is said (1 Sam 25:29): But the souls of your enemies shall be hurled out from the hollow of the sling. So too is it read in Rabbi Lipmann's Sepher Nizzachon, pagina 49. numero 77.: That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the angels of destruction hurl the soul of the wicked from one end of the world to the other. This, however, is taken from the Talmudic tractate Shabbat fol. 152, col. 2. Concerning the punishment of Na venád, something may also be found in the book Emek hammelech fol. 15, col. 2., in the first chapter under the title Scháar tikkúne batteschúva, as well as fol. 35, col. 4. in the 63rd chapter under the title Scháar olám hattóhu.

So that one may have further information about this matter, I will set down here a story from the aforementioned book Emek hammelech fol. 16, col. 3. 4. and fol. 17, col. 1., from the third chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne batteschúva, a story that is said to have taken place involving a spirit; and the words there read as follows: אספרה לך מעשה רב שאירע במגולגל אחד בזמן מורי ורבי ה"ארי זל"הה לידע ולהודיע כי אית דין ואית דיין ואין שכחה לפני כסא כבודו ית' והכל בצדק וביושר מאריך אפו לרשעים ובסוף גובה דיליה ומעשה שהיה כך היה בזמן הרב הקדוש והטהור המקובל האלהי כמ"הרר יצחק לוריא אשכנזי זל"הה בצפת תו"ב באשה אחת אלמנה שנכנס בה רוח אחד וציער אותה צער גדול ורב עד למאוד ונכנסו בני אדם אצלו והיה שמו כמ"הרר יוסף ארזון זל"תלמידו של הא"רי זל"ה אמר לו הרוח ברוך הבא אדוני מורי ורבי אינו זוכר אדוני שהייתי הלמידו זמן רב במצרים ושמי פלוני ושם אבא פלוני מיושבי מצרים ובראות קרובי האשה את צער וכאב האשה גדול עד למאוד הלכו אצל החכם כמ"הר יצחק לוריא נ"ע וחלו פניו שיוציא זה הרוח מן האשה ולהיות שלא היה לו באותו פעם פנאי שלא לתלמידו כמ"הר חיים זל"הה ומסר לו כוונה בשמות וצוה לו שיגזור עליו נידויים וחרמים

That is: I will tell you a great story that took place in the time of my teacher and master, Rabbi Isaac Lurja, of blessed memory, involving one whose soul had passed into another body; so that you may know and make known that there is a judgment and a judge, and that nothing is forgotten before the throne of glory of the blessed God; and also that He, with justice and righteousness, defers His wrath against the wicked, but in the end exacts what is His due. The story that came to pass took place in the time of the holy and pure rabbi, the divine Kabbalist, Rabbi Isaac Lurja the German, may his memory be for eternal life, in Zephath (that is,

Jerusalem), which may speedily and in our days be rebuilt and restored, involving a woman who was a widow, into whom a spirit entered and tormented her exceedingly greatly; and people went in to him and spoke with him, and he answered each one according to what he had asked him. Meanwhile a wise man, by the name of Rabbi Joseph Arlin, of blessed memory, who was a disciple of Rabbi Isaac Luria, of blessed memory, went in; whereupon the spirit said to him: blessed be he who comes, my lord, my doctor, and my teacher; does my lord not remember that I was his disciple for a long time in Egypt, and my name is such-and-such, and my father's name was such-and-such, who dwelt in Egypt. When the woman's relatives saw the exceeding great pain and misery of the woman, they went to the wise Rabbi Isaac Luria, may his rest be in paradise, and entreated him to drive the spirit out of the woman; but since he did not have the time on that occasion, he sent Rabbi Chájim, may his memory be for eternal life, in his stead, and taught him the intention with the names (that is, how he should use the holy names and thereby achieve his purpose and drive out the spirit), and commanded him to pronounce bans and excommunications against him and to drive him out against his will. Now when Rabbi Chájim, may his rest be in paradise, went in, the woman immediately turned her face toward the wall; whereupon Rabbi Chájim, of blessed memory, said to him (that is, to the spirit): you wicked one, why have you turned your face away from me? And the spirit answered him and said: I cannot look upon your face, for the wicked cannot behold the face of God. Thereupon Rabbi Chájim immediately commanded him to turn his face around, and he did so at once; and Rabbi Chájim straightway asked him and said to him: what have you sinned, that such a great and heavy punishment is being visited upon you? He then answered him and said: I sinned against a married woman and begot bastards, and it has now been twenty-five years that I go נע ונד (na venád), that is, restless and fugitive upon the earth, and have no rest, for three angels of destruction go with me to every place where I go, who punish me and beat me and cry out before me: thus shall it be done to the man who has multiplied bastards in Israel! And these three angels of destruction are indicated (Ps 109:6), where it is written: "Set a wicked man over him, and let Satan stand at his right hand," etc. And the spirit said to Rabbi Chájim: does my lord not see how one stands at my right and one at my left and they cry out, and the third stands and strikes me with deadly blows? Then Rabbi Chájim said to him: have not our rabbis, of blessed memory, said that the wicked are judged in hell for twelve months? But the spirit answered him: you do not understand the meaning of these words, for what our rabbis, of blessed memory, say, that the judgment of the wicked in hell lasts twelve months, is to be understood as follows: after they have endured their entire punishment outside of hell, they are then brought into hell, where they remain for twelve months and are cleansed and purified, so that all the stains of the souls may be removed from them and they may be prepared and made ready to enter paradise. The matter is like that of an experienced physician who at first applies strong and sharp medicines to a wound to eat away the living flesh (he should doubtless have said the putrid flesh), but afterwards, when the living (or rather the putrid) flesh has been eaten away, applies good salves and plasters to it that cool it and cause the flesh to grow back as it was before: so it is with hell, for the torment of hell is not the sixtieth part of what the sinning soul endures before it enters hell. After this Rabbi Chájim asked him: how did you die? And he answered him and said: I died by suffocation, for although the four deaths of the court (namely stoning, burning, beheading, and strangling, by which evildoers were formerly executed) have ceased (in that the Jews can no longer punish anyone with death), the judgment of these four deaths has not ceased; and when I sailed from Alexandria, a city in Egypt, on a ship, intending to travel to the city of Roschit, my ship ran aground at the place where the Nile flows into the sea, and there the ship sank and I drowned in it. Then Rabbi Chájim said to him: why did you not say the confession and acknowledge your sins when your soul was departing from your body? Perhaps it would have helped you. But the spirit answered him: woe is me! I had no time to confess my sins, for the water immediately choked me in my throat; and besides, I lost my senses as soon as I sank into the sea. The rabbi asked him further: what happened to you after the soul had departed from the body? The spirit answered him and said: know that as soon as the news became known in Roschit that the ship had sunk, the Jews went out from Roschit to the shore of the sea and pulled out all the Jews who had drowned in my ship and buried us immediately. But as soon as the Jews had gone away from the place of burial, a terrible angel came with a fiery rod in his hand and struck the rod upon my grave; whereupon the grave split open from the exceeding great and mighty blow. And that same angel immediately said to me: you wicked one! Rise up, that you may be judged! And he took me at once and placed me in the hollow of a sling and hurled me in one cast from the city of Kaschit all the way to the gate of hell that is in the wilderness. When I fell there before the gate of hell, thousands upon thousands of souls of the wicked who were being judged in hell came out of hell, and they all cried out against me and cursed me and said to me: go out, you man of blood, go out from here, you wicked one and troubler of Israel; you are not yet worthy, you have not yet permission to enter hell. Then I wandered from mountain to mountain and from hill to hill, and these three angels of destruction went with me continually and cried out before me and beat me without ceasing. At every moment and every instant other angels of destruction and evil spirits also encountered us, and when they heard those who were crying out before me, they too beat me all the more; and one pulled me toward himself from this side, and another pulled me toward himself from that side, until all the joints of my soul were stopped up (that is, became visible), and thus I went נע ונד (na venád), that is, restless and fugitive upon the earth, until I came to Hormis, which is a great city lying near India, reckoning from Babylon onward (that is, which lies between Babylon and India); and my intention was to enter the body of a Jew so that I might be delivered from these blows and afflictions. But when I saw that the Jews there were wicked, evil people who sinned greatly against God, lying with gentile women and with women in their menstrual impurity and committing other transgressions, I could not enter any one of them on account of the multitude of unclean spirits that dwelt within them and around them; and had I entered into one of them, I would have added impurity to my impurity and harm to my harm. So I turned back and went again from mountain to hill and from hill to mountain for many years, until I came to the wilderness of Judah, and there I found a hind (or doe) that was with young, and in my great distress I entered into her; but this was after I had endured many great and evil afflictions for seven years. When I had entered into the body of this hind, I suffered exceeding great torment, because the soul of a human being and the soul of a beast are not equal to one another, for the one walks upright and the other walks crouching (turned toward the ground). Moreover the soul of a beast is full of filth and loathsomeness, and its smell is disagreeable to the human soul; and besides, its food is not the food of a human being. Furthermore I also suffered great pain on account of the young that was in her womb; and likewise the hind suffered exceeding great pain because three souls cannot subsist together, and her belly swelled on account of my soul, and she ran about on the mountains and rocks in her great pain until her belly burst and she died. Then I went out from there and came to the city of Shechem, which is in the land of Israel, and entered into the body of a Jewish priest; but that priest immediately sent for the Ishmaelite (that is, Turkish) priests and monks, and on account of the many conjurations of the powers of impurity and the amulets that they hung around my neck, I could not remain and endure them, and I went out from there. Thereupon the rabbi immediately asked him: can the powers of impurity, of themselves, do harm or good to anyone? He answered him: no; but because the monks had, through their conjurations, brought so many unclean spirits into the body of that Jewish priest, and I saw that if I remained there any longer all those spirits would attach themselves to me, I could not stay with them, and I immediately fled from there and came to Zephath (that is, Jerusalem), which may speedily and in our days be rebuilt and restored, and entered into the body of this woman; and it is now twenty-five years today that I have been going about in this torment. Then the rabbi asked him: how long must you endure this torment, and will you not be delivered from it? And the spirit answered him and said: (I must suffer) until the bastards whom I begot are dead, for as long as they are alive and in existence, I cannot be restored. And all the people who were there, a very great multitude, wept greatly, for the fear, dread, and trembling of this judgment fell upon them, and a great commotion arose throughout the whole land on account of this story. The rabbi asked him further: who gave you the power to enter into this woman's body? The spirit answered and said: I spent one night in her house, and in the morning watch (that is, the last part of the night) this woman rose from her bed and wanted to strike fire with the flint and the steel, but the burnt tinder would not catch the sparks, and she tried with great effort and could not manage it. She became angry and threw the steel and the stone from her hand onto the ground in anger and said: let it be the Satan's; and from that word, (that she said) the Satan's, I received the power to enter into her, for the angels of destruction had given me this permission. Then the rabbi said to him: did they give you permission to enter her body on account of this sin alone? The spirit answered: this woman's outward appearance does not match her inner self, for she does not believe at all in the exodus from Egypt (that is, that the children of Israel went out from Egypt), nor in the night of Passover, in which all Israelites rejoice and recite the Hallel (which is a certain prayer) and recount the exodus from Egypt; all of this is in her eyes vanity, mockery, and laughter, and she thinks in her heart that this miracle never happened at all. Then the rabbi immediately said to the woman: you, N. N., do you believe with a perfect faith that the holy and blessed God created heaven and earth, and that it is in His power to do all that He wills, and that there is no one who can say to Him, why do you do this? She answered and said: I believe all of this. Then the rabbi asked her further: do you also believe that the holy blessed God led us out of Egypt and split the sea for us? And she answered: yes. The rabbi said further to her: do you believe all of this with a perfect faith, and do you repent, and feel contrition and sorrow for your former (sins)? And she answered yes, and began to weep. Thereupon the rabbi commanded the spirit by a ban to go out of her, and ordered him that he should not go out through any other limb but through the little toe of the left foot, and this for the reason that the limb through which he passes out is ruined and rendered entirely useless; and the rabbi directed his attention to the names that his teacher had given him. Immediately thereafter the little toe swelled up and became (as thick) as a turnip, and the spirit passed out through it and fled away. After this the spirit came on many nights through the windows of the house and through the door to frighten the woman; whereupon her relatives went again to the wise Rabbi Isaac Lurja, may his rest be in paradise; and he immediately sent his disciple, the aforementioned Rabbi Chajim, of blessed memory, back again to examine the Mesúsa (which is a parchment on which the words of Deut 6:4-9 and Deut 11:13-20 are written) to see whether it was proper or not; and he went and found the door entirely without a Mesúsa. Then the rabbi immediately commanded that a Mesúsa be affixed to the door, and they did so, and from that time on the spirit did not return. Thus far this story. The very same thing also stands, in these same words, in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech fol. 152, col. 2. 3. 4., in the 45th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin, as well as in the book Nischmát chájim, fol. 169, col. 1. 2., in the 20th chapter of

Concerning the aforementioned punishment of hurling and of a wandering existence, something may also be read in a small German-Hebrew booklet printed here in Frankfurt am Main in the year 1697, which contains the story of a spirit that is said to have been driven out of a Jew in Nikolsburg in the year 1696, at fol. 5. 6., where it is reported how that same spirit confessed that the devils had tormented him greatly, and that one had stood at one end of the world and another at the other end, who caught him in their mouths and spat him out again and threw him into each other's throats; but in the middle of the world there also stood a devil who, as often as he flew past him, cut him apart with a sword, which caused him more pain than all the rest. After that, he came into an unripe apple, and because a pig ate that apple, he ended up in the pig, whose belly he finally burst open. After this, he entered a millwheel, which he caused to stand still whenever the miller wanted it to turn; or he drove it around whenever it was supposed to stand still; indeed, he even broke it entirely, so that all the millers had to flee from it; and more of the like. Subsequently he entered a whore, and finally a young Jew. However, since it is written in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 57, col. 4. numero 60., under the title Gan Eden: הרשעים אינם באים בגלגול רק סובלים עונשם בגיהנם, That is: the souls of the wicked do not pass into any other body, but rather serve out their punishment in hell; and yet this spirit is said to have been a wicked person, as he himself indicated in the confession he gave, the most learned rabbis may here consider how both things can be true at once. The Kabbalists, however, are not in agreement on this matter, since it is read in the book Zijóni, fol. 27, col. 4.: עוד יש כת מקובלים האומרים כי אף הרשעים יתגלגלו זהו מאמר המשוורר אנשי דמים ומרמה לא יחצו ימיהם, That is: there are also some Kabbalists who say that the souls of the wicked are likewise transmigrated, and this is what the Psalmist says (Ps 55:24): the bloodthirsty and deceitful shall not live out half their days.

The souls of the righteous are also said to wander about in the world, concerning which the following is written in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 154, col. 4, no. 29, under the title Neschamóth: כיון בעולם וסובלין יסורין בשביל קדוש השם ורואין גם כן שרואים אותן בני אדם המדוכאין ביסורין וגלות באים ומגידים למשיח מיד נכנס משיח להיכל אחד בגין רשעי הדור הגורמין אריכות הגלות באים ומגידים למשיח ומקבל על עצמו כל כאיבין ויסורין ערן הנקרא היכלא דבני מרעין מיד נכנס לשם משיח ומקבל על עצמו כל כאיבין ויסורין דישראל שיבאו עליו ואלמלא שהוא מקיל היסורין לא היה אדם בעולם יכול לסבול היסורין על עונשי דאורייתא וכשהיו ישראל בארצם היו מסלקין היסורין וכל מרעין בישין על ידי הקרבנות אבל השתא משיח מסלקן להון דכתיב והוא מחולל מפשעינו That is: the souls of the righteous wander about in the world, and when they see those people who are afflicted with punishments and suffer torment for the sake of the sanctification of the name of God, and when they also see the godless of the generation who cause the prolongation of the captivity, they report this to the Messias, and he immediately enters a palace of Paradise which is called the palace of the sick, and takes upon himself all the pains and punishments of Israel, so that they come upon him. And if he did not lighten the punishments, no person in the world could endure the plagues on account of the penalties of the law. But when the Israelites were in their land, they had averted the punishments and all evil sicknesses through the sacrifices; now, however, the Messias takes them away from them, as it is written (Isa 53:5): "But he was wounded for our transgressions." Concerning this wandering about of the souls of the righteous, something may also be read in the little book of Rabbi Menáchem of Kekanat, which is called Táame mizvóth, fol. 17, col. 1.

Now let us also examine how many times souls, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, are transferred into human bodies; and it is to be known that they do not agree with one another on this point, for according to some opinions it should happen only three times, according to others four times, but according to still others as many as a thousand times, as is taught in the book Zijóni fol. 27, col. 4., where the words read as follows: דע איש המעיין כי כמה מחלוקיות יש בין חכמי התלמוד ובעלי הקבלה בסוד זה •יש אומרים בי אין הגלגול כי אם עד שלשה פעמים ונימוקים עמהם מדברי אליהו •ויש אומרים עד ארבע וראיה פוקד עון אבות על בנים על שלשים ועל רבעים •ויש אומרים עד אלף כדעת הבחיר That is, Know, devout man, that there are many disputes between the sages of the Talmud and the Kabbalists concerning this mystery. Some say that souls pass only three times from one body into another, and they draw their proof from the words of Elihu (Job 33:29). But some report that it happens four times, and prove it (from the words of Exod 20:5) "who visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation." Yet others maintain that it happens up to a thousand times, an opinion to which Rabbi Nechúnja ben Hakkáne gives his assent in his Sepher habbáhir.

Regarding the opinion about three times, Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his book Nischmāth chájim, fol. 161, col. 2, in the 14th chapter of the fourth Máamar, in the following manner: דע שרוב המקובלים כתבו כי אין הגלגול כי אם עד שלשה פעמים מלבד הביאה הראשונה וזוהי רמז אליהו לאיוב באמרו הן כל אלה יפעל אל פעמים שלש עם גבר • וכן איתא בזוהר ס' בראשית עמוד ק"נ והוא פוקד עון אבות על בנים על שלשים ועל רבעים • ואמרו עוד זוהי רמזו בפסוק על שלשה פשעי ישראל ועל ארבעה That is: Know that most Kabbalists have written that the transmigration of souls occurs no more than three times, apart from the first arrival (that is, apart from the first time it enters the world in the first body, since that first time is not counted among them); and this was indicated to Job by Elihu when he says (Job 33:29): Behold, God does all these things two or three times with a man. And so it also stands in the Sóhar, in the book Bereschíth (that is, on the first book of Moses) in the 150th column; and this is the mystery of the words (Exod 20:5): Who visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. It is further said that this is also signified by the words (Amos 2:6): For three transgressions of Israel, yes, for four, I will not revoke the punishment. Concerning this, Abarbanel also writes in his book Markéveth hammischnéh, fol. 83, col. 2, as follows: אמנם כמה פעמים התגלגל הנפש ותחול בחמרים • וכליהם וכלים מכלים שונים • כי שתי פעמים או אומר שנומז בדברי אליהו שאמר כל אלה יפעל אל פעמים שלש עם גבר • כי שתי פעמים או That is: How many times does the soul then pass into another body, and dwell in various earthly vessels? I say that this is signified in the words of Elihu, who said: Behold, God does all these things two or three times with a man. For this happens two or three times, and no more. In the book Pärdes rimónim, in the 32nd chapter of the second part, fol. 47, col. 4., the following is written on this matter: קבלו אנשי האמת והצדק כי הנפש אשר עותה ומרדה בבוראה וקלקלה דרכיה: תשוב לימי עלומיה לתקן עוותיה ולגדור פרצותיה ואם בראשונה לא הצליחה תשוב שנית ושלישית • ובמדרש רות הנעלם אמרו על זה משל לאדם שנוטע אילן ראה שלא הצליח עקרו That is: ושתלו במקום אחר וכן פעמים רבות הת"ר כל אלה יפעל אל פעמים שלש עם גבר the lovers of truth and righteousness have learned through a tradition that the soul which has sinned, and shown itself rebellious against its Creator, and has corrupted its ways, returns to the days of its youth in order to correct its perversities and to repair what it has torn asunder; and if it does not succeed the first time, it returns a second and third time. In the Medrasch Ruth banéelam, a parable is brought forward concerning this, stating that the matter is like a man who has planted a tree, and when he sees that it does not thrive (and grow properly), he uproots it and plants it in another place, and does this many times. This is what is written: "Behold, God does all these things twice or three times with a man." In the book Schené luchóth habberíth, Rabbi Jeschaja writes at fol. 305, col. 3. concerning this matter also in the following manner: ואלה המתגלגלים כאשר לא שבו אל השם בשלשה פעמים כמוזכר בדברי אליהו הן כל אלה

That is: when those whose souls are transmigrated do not convert to God within the three times, as is stated in the words of Elibu, "Behold, God does all these things twice or three times with a man," they thereafter pass into animals. And something concerning the threefold transmigration may also be read in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 79, col. 2. numerö 51. and fol. 155, col. 3. numerö 45. under the title Nóach, as well as in the book Emek hammélech fol. 15, col. 2. in the first chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne hatteschéva.

That the soul is transmigrated four times is taught in Rabbi Menachem Azariah Fano's book Asará maamoróth (or Afóro maamóros), fol. 82, col. 2, in the commentary, where it is written as follows: האדם מתגלגל ג' או ד' פעמים ואח (That is: the soul of a person is transmigrated three or four times, but thereafter, as it says in Amos 2:6, "For four transgressions" (that is, for the fourth time, as it is foolishly understood) "I will not spare him.")

That the soul, according to some opinions, is transmigrated up to a thousand times, can be seen from the Sohar printed at Sulzbach, on the first book of Moses, in the 152nd column, where the following is read: לעולם יראה אדם עצמו כאלו העולם כולו תלוי עליו אבל בר נש דטרח עליה ק"בה בגלגולא ולא אצלח באתריה אעקר ליה מאתריה ושוי ליה באתר אחרא ודא שני מקום. ואי לא אצלח אעקר ליה מתמן וארכיב ליה באילנא אחרא ושני שמיא ודא שני השם. ואי לא אצלח אעקר ליה מתמן וארכיב ליה באתר אחרא ושני עובדוי מכל דהוה בקדמיתא ודא שני מעשה. ועד כמה זמנין עד אלף כ"דא דבר צוה לאלף דור. ועליה אתמר האלף לך שלמה. ואינון אלף עלמין דנטע ליה עד דאצלח : That is: A person should always regard himself as though the entire world depended upon him. But when the holy blessed God takes pains to transmigrate the soul of a person, and it does not thrive and do well in its place, He tears it out of its place and sets it in another, and this is a change of place. And if it does not thrive in the second place, He plucks it out from there and grafts (or branches) it into another tree, and changes its name, and this is a change of name. If it then still does not do well, He tears it out from there and grafts or plants it in another place, and changes its works from everything that was before, and this is the change of works. How many times does this occur? Up to a thousand times, as it is said (Ps 105:8): "The word which He commanded unto a thousand generations." Of this it is also mentioned (Song 8:12): "A thousand are for you, O Solomon"; and this signifies the thousand generations in which He plants it until it thrives, and grafts it in there; and the mystery of this matter lies in the words (Exod 20:6): "And showing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me and keep My commandments, unto the thousandth generation." The same is also taught in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 93, col. 4, in the 55th chapter, under the title Schaar Kirjath arba: בעולם אחד יכול להתגלגל כמה פעמים אם יגרום החטא אפילו באלף לא בטיל כי כך נשבע הק"ב : That is: In order to set a person right in the world, his soul can be transmigrated many times from one body into another when sin gives cause for it, and such transmigration does not cease even after a thousand times; for thus the holy blessed God swore to Abraham, so that the one who is cast out should not be entirely cast away from Him.

However, how this is understood by some is shown by Rabbi Menasse ben Israel in his book Nischmāth chājim, fol. 162, col. 1, in the 14th chapter of the fourth Maamar, with these words: אמרו קצת שאין כוונת אולם להתחרת הספק הזה : עד אלף דור שיתגלגלו עד אלף פעמים אלא שהמדה הזו נוהגת עד סוף העולם שהוא סוד שיתא אלפי הוי עלמא . כי אלף פעמים חמשים הם ששת אלפים ואחריו אמרו שתכלית הגלגולים הוא להוסיף שלמות לנפש כדי שתאדם יעשה ויקיים כל מצוות ה' וישתלם במעלה ובחשיבות . או להעניש בגוף אחר הנפש החוטאת על מעשיה כדי שלא תקבל עונשה בעולם הנשמות וזהו מה שאמרה התקועית וחשב מחשבות לבלתי ידח ממנו נדח . אשר על כן לתקן את אשר עות תחזור הנשמה פעמים שלש ולא יותר . דאם לא תקנה מעשיה בג' פעמים תאבד תקותו ומוחזק הוא שלא ישוב עוד לבתלתא זמני היא חזקה . אבל אם תחזור להשלים המצוות תחזור עד אלף פעמים עד שתשלים התרי"ג כי אז חזירתה היא להנאתה ולטובתה . ואף לא מסתפינא הייתי אומר שהשלשה פעמים הם בגוף בני אדם והאלף בגופי בעלי חיים . וזהו פעמים שלש עם גבר דווקא . ובדבר זה אין לי שום קבלה והאל יורע אם בפי נכונה ושגיאות : That is: But in order to resolve this doubt (that the rabbis do not agree with one another as to how often the soul is transmigrated), some have said that when it is stated that the transmigration occurs up to the thousandth generation, the meaning is not that the soul must pass into another body a thousand times, but rather that this practice (of transmigrating souls) will remain in use until the end of the world, which is the mystery of the six thousand years that the world will stand; for a thousand times fifty makes six thousand. (The Rabbi, however, errs very greatly here in his calculation, for a thousand times fifty makes not six thousand but fifty thousand, which is a very great difference.) Others say that the purpose of the transmigrations of souls aims at making the soul perfect, so that a person may perform and observe all of God's commandments, and may become perfect in worthiness and excellence. Or else, so that the sinning soul may be punished for its deeds in another body, so that it does not receive its punishment in the world of souls; and this is what the woman of Tekoa said (2 Sam 14:14): "And he" (namely, God) "considers that the banished one not be banished from him." So that for this reason the soul returns three times, and no more, in order to correct that which it previously did wrong; for if in those three times it does not improve its deeds, then the hope for that person is lost, and he is regarded as one who will no longer repent, since in those three times it is presumed (that he will do penance). But if the soul returns (into another body) to observe the commandments perfectly, then it returns up to a thousand times, until it has perfectly observed the six hundred and thirteen commandments, since in that case its return serves its own benefit and its own good. If, however, I need not fear, I would venture to say that the transmigration of souls three times is to be understood as referring to human bodies, and the thousand times as referring to the bodies of living animals, and that this is precisely the meaning of the words (Job 33:29): "three times with a man." In this matter, however (namely, this opinion of mine), I have no tradition or oral teaching, and God knows whether the truth is in my mouth (and whether I am right); who can discern errors? (as is said in Ps 19:13): therefore I ask God for pardon, and forgiveness, and atonement, He who knows, etc.

Further, we also wish to gather instruction from the writings of the Rabbis concerning the purpose for which the aforementioned transmigration of souls takes place, and what moves God to permit it to occur. Regarding the final cause, namely why it takes place, the following is written about it in the book Zijóni fol. 27, col. 4.:

שוב מחלוקת אחרת ודעות שונות ביניהם מפני מה ומאיזה מדה יהיה הגלגול • הר' שלמה בן אדרת ושאר מקובלים רוצים כי על אחד משני אופנים יתגלגל המתגלגל או שלא השלים זמנו שהוא שבעים שנה ימי שנותינו בהם שבעים שנה • וזו היא ההבטחה שאמר מספר ימין אמלא • או צדיק שחטא חטא ולא נתנקה לגמרי ויש בו אבק עבירה לא יוכל נשמתו לעלות אל האלהים מרוב כבודות כתבן בחומר • עד שהורקה מכלי אל כלי ותהיה זכה וקלה ותתקשר ברוח עליונים ומרוח אל רוח עד בית מושבה ומחצבה אשר משם לוקחה ונ' :

That is: Furthermore, there is another dispute, along with various opinions among them (namely the Talmudic sages and the Kabbalists), as to why and for what reason the transmigration of souls takes place. Rabbi Schlómo ben Addéreth and the remaining Kabbalists hold that a human soul passes into another body for one of two reasons: either because the person did not complete and live out his allotted time, which is seventy years (for it is written in Ps 90:10: "Our life lasts seventy years"), and this is the promise that He (namely God, Exod 23:26) made when He said: "I will fulfill the number of your days." Or, because the soul of a righteous man who has committed a sin and has not been entirely cleansed of it, but still has upon himself some dust of transgression, cannot, on account of its great heaviness, just as straw and linen (which are heavy when combined) ascend upward to God, until it is poured from one vessel into another and becomes pure and light, and is bound to the spirit of those above, and likewise from one spirit to another, until it reaches the place of its dwelling and its origin, from which it was taken.

כשראה הק"בה שבניו אחר כך יחטאו ויאבדו מן העולם מה עשה הק"בה בהיות שהוא חפץ שלא תאבד שום נפש מישראל סבא שהם זרעו של אברהם אבינו עליו השלום קודם הכל צוה לו שימול בשר ערלתו ואם לא ונכרתה הנפש ההיא מעמיה ותיקן להם גלגול נפש להקן עצמה כדי שתחזור למקורה הראשון. באותה שעה נתקבצו סמאל עם ע' שריו לפני הק"בה ואמרו לפניו רבונו של עולם גם אנחנו מיציר כפיך יצאנו אתה אב אחד לכולנו כמו שעשית תקנה לנפשותם של בני ישראל על ידי גלגוליהם שסוף סוף כולם יש להם חלק לעולם הבא ומה ראית שבחרת בזרע אברהם יותר מכולנו. השיב להם הק"בה אם הייתם עושים כמו שעשה אברהם שהכיר אותי מקטנותו ונכנס באור כשדים לאהבתי ואתם ראיתם שאני הצלתי אותו מידכם ומכבשן האש שלא שלט בו ועם כל זה לא האמנתם בילהקדישני לכן מכאן ואילך אל תדברו מטוב ועד רע

That is: When the Holy and Blessed God saw that His children would afterward sin and be lost from the world, what did He do? Since He did not wish that any soul of old Israel, who are of the seed of our father Abraham, upon whom be peace, should be lost, He first of all commanded him (namely Abraham) that he should circumcise the flesh of their foreskin; but if this were not done, then that soul (which had not been circumcised) should be cut off from its people. And He ordained for them the transmigration of the soul from one body into another, in order to restore it, so that it might return to its original source. At that same hour, Sammael and his seventy princes gathered before the Holy and Blessed God and spoke to Him: O Lord of the world! We too have come forth from the work of Your hands; You are the father of us all. Just as You bring it about that the souls of the children of Israel are restored through their transmigration, so that they all ultimately have a share in eternal life (so do likewise with us): and what did You see that You chose the seed of Abraham above all of us? Then the Holy and Blessed God answered them: Had you done what Abraham did, who knew Me from his childhood and, out of love for Me, went into the fire of the Chaldeans, and you saw that I delivered him from your hands and from the fiery furnace, so that the fire had no power over him, and yet you did not believe in Me so as to sanctify Me, therefore speak henceforth neither good nor evil, etc.

The very same thing is also found in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 58, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajéze. As for what is mentioned on this subject in the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 162, col. 1, in the 14th chapter of the fourth Máamar, it was indicated a short while before.

The reason that moves God to transfer the souls of the Israelites from one body into another is said to be an act of mercy toward them. For this reason, Abarbanel writes in his book Markéveth hammischneb fol. 83, col. 2. as follows: גלגול נפשות אצל המקובלים הוא בחסד האל על ברואיו : That is: The transmigration of souls takes place, according to the Kabbalists, out of God's mercy toward His creatures. And in the Jalkut chadasch it is read at fol. 155, col. 3. numero 45. under the title Neschamóth: חסד ג' חסד : That is: The transmigration of souls takes place out of mercy, for thus (the word גלגול Gilgul amounts in number, by Gematria, to the same as חסד chesed, namely seventy-two). There also stands in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 48 col. 2. in the 32nd chapter of the second part, where it is written as follows: צריך אתה לדעת כי הענין הזה חסד המקום על ישראל כדי שיזכו הנפשות לאור באור העליון וכמו שאמר ר' : רבותינו ז"ל כל ישראל יש להם חלק לעולם הבא : That is: You must know that this work is an act of God's mercy toward Israel, so that the souls may become worthy of the light of the highest light, and, as our Rabbis of blessed memory have said, that all of Israel may receive a share in eternal life. The same is also to be found in Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmáth chájim fol. 163, col. 2. in the 16th chapter of the fourth Máamar.

Since much has been said up to this point about the transmigration of souls from one human body into another, I must also indicate from where the Jews wish to prove this their absurd error. It is to be known, then, that the presumptuous and overwise rabbis suppose they can establish this foolishness from Holy Scripture, which they are accustomed to perverting and drawing into a perverse understanding, as may be seen in the book Nischmáth chájim, in which Rabbi Menasse ben Israel brings forward all his supposed proofs for it, and writes at fol. 154, col. 2, in the sixth chapter of the fourth Máamar, as his first proof as follows: הפסוק הראשון אשר כפי דעתי רומז לגלגול הוא הוא מה שאמר לו : הקב"ה לארם הראשון אחר חטאו עד שובך אל האדמה כי ממנה לוקחת כי עפר אתה ואל עפר תשוב. רמז לו כי אחר שחטא יוכרח להתגלגל פעם אחרת ולשוב אל עפרו כדי להשלים מה : That is: the first verse which, in my opinion, alludes to the transmigration of souls, is that which the Holy Blessed God said to the first man after his committed sin (Gen 3:19): "Until you return to the earth, since you were taken from it, for you are dust, and to dust you shall return." By this He indicated to him that, after the sin was committed, his soul would necessarily be placed into a body a second time and would have to return to its dust, in order to accomplish that which was lacking the first time.

This, however, is an absurd proof, for God had no other intention in conveying to Adam through the aforementioned words than that he should die on account of the sin he had committed, and that his body should decay and return to the earth from which he had been created; for, as the holy Apostle Paul teaches, the wages of sin is death (Rom 6:23). For this reason the Rabbis are also accustomed to say: אין מיתה בלא חטא ואין יסורין בלא עון, That is: there is no death without sin, and there are no punishments without transgression; by which they mean to indicate that no one dies except on account of sin, and no one is punished except on account of transgression.

Further, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in the same place, fol. 154, col. 2, as a second proof, as follows: גם בפרשת וזאת הברכה נאמר: ופירשו המפרשים שהתפלל עליו שיאריך ה' שניו ולא ימות משבטו יחי ראובן ואל ימות. בברת קודם השנים הקצובות. ור"ל אמרו יחי בעולם הזה ואל ימות בחטאו בעולם הבא. אמנם הפירוש האמיתי הוא מה שתרגמו אונקלוס ומותא תנינא לא ימות וכיון על הגלגול וכמו: שכתב הרב רבינו בחיי התפלל עליו שלא ישוב עוד משם לגוף אחר למות מיתה שניה: That is: It is also said in the Parashah Vesóth habberachá (Deut 33:6): "Let Reuben live, and not die," and the commentators have explained it thus, that he (namely Moses) prayed on his (Reuben's) behalf that God would prolong his years, and that those who are of his tribe might not die by a cutting off before their appointed years. Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have declared (that the said words mean as much as): let him live in this world, and not die on account of his sin in the world to come. But the true interpretation is as Onkelos has rendered it (giving it thus:) "and let him not die the second death," by which he had in view the Gilgul, that is, the transmigration of souls; just as Rabbi Bechai also wrote (when he teaches:) he prayed on his behalf that he might no longer pass out of his body into another body and die a second time. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse.

This proof, however, is also entirely without force and invalid, for Moses conveyed through the cited words nothing other than his heartfelt wish that the tribe of Reuben might not be utterly exterminated on account of the grave and heinous sin which Reuben had committed when, as may be read in Gen 35:22 and 49:4, he had lain with his stepmother Bilhah. Likewise, by "the second death" one must understand not a temporal death in a second body into which a soul is to be transferred, but rather eternal death and eternal damnation, as is as clear as the sun in Rev 20:14 and 21:8. With this Rabbi David Kimchi also agrees in his commentary on the words of Isa 22:14, "What does it matter whether this transgression shall be forgiven you until you die?" when, concerning the Chaldean translation of Jonathan, אין ישתק חובא הדין, לכן עד דתמותון מותא תניינא, that is, "What does it matter whether this your sin shall be forgiven you until you die the second death?", he writes the following concerning this second or other death: רוצה לומר מיתת הנפש בעולם הבא, that is, "It means the death of the soul in the world to come," by which certainly nothing other than eternal death and eternal damnation can be understood. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi likewise states in his commentary on the same passage:

הבא, תרגום יונתן מותא תניינא לעולם הבא, that is, "Jonathan has translated it as 'the other or second death in the world to come, or the life to come.'" Moreover, if Onkelos had aimed in his translation at what Rabbi Menasseh and Rabbi Bechai assert, he ought to have mentioned not only the second but also the third and fourth death, since souls, when they depart from the first body, must, according to the teaching of the Kabbalists, enter human bodies at least three more times and depart from them again through death. Yet nowhere does one find that he makes any mention of a third or fourth death.

The third proof, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse wishes to force and teach at fol. 155, in the seventh chapter following thereupon of the said fourth Maamar, from the words of Deut 25:5-6, namely that because it was commanded there that, when a man dies without children, his brother shall marry the wife he left behind and lie with her, this was done to the end that the soul of the deceased might be transferred into the first son who is born; and his words read as follows: בפרשת תצא כתוב לאמור והיה הבכור אשר תלד יקום על שם אחיו המת. ואין זה שם ממש שיהיה שמו כשמו אלא יקום על שם אחיו והוא המת בנפש ידבר כי אין ספק שמי שמת בלא בנים צריך להתגלגל כי הוא יתברך שמו רוצה שלא יהיה הפסק למקור זה דוגמת הנחר אשר לא יכזבו מימיו וגו' וכן כתב הרב רבינו בחיי מצות הייבום תועלת גדולה לנפש המת • וידוע כי תגדל הנאת הנפש כשהיא מתגלגלת במי שהוא קרוב מן המשפחה יותר לפי שיש לו שייכות גדול עמו וגו' ולפי שאין לאדם יותר קרוב מאשתו That is: In the Parascha Teze (namely Deut 25:6) it is written: "And the firstborn son whom she bears shall stand in the name of his deceased brother." This, however, is not to be understood literally, or simply, with respect to the name, as though he should bear a name like his name was; rather, the text means to say that he shall stand with the soul in the name of his deceased brother, for there is no doubt that the soul of one who dies without children must pass into another body; for the holy and blessed God wills that this source shall not cease to flow, just as a river whose waters never run dry, etc. Likewise, Rabbi Bechai also wrote that the commandment to marry the wife of a brother who died without children is very beneficial to the soul of the deceased. It is also known that the benefit to the soul is even greater when it is transferred into one who is the closest relation to it within its family, since they have more in common with one another, etc. Now, since a man has no closer relation than his wife, who is bone of his bones, and his brother, in that they both (namely he and his brother) were hewn from one rock (that is, descended from one father and one mother), he is therefore set right again through both of them, etc.

Is this not an unreasonable proof? For in the cited passage, v. 6, the reason follows as to why the wife of the deceased brother is to be taken in marriage, namely, so that his name not be blotted out from Israel; and thus the true meaning of the cited words consists solely in this: that such a marriage is to take place so that the firstborn son may be regarded as the son of the deceased eldest brother, and may inherit the estate left behind by him, which Aben Ezra himself acknowledges in his commentary thereon, when he writes concerning the words "so that his name not be blotted out": על הנחלה ידבר, that is, "It speaks (the scripture) of the inheritance." How then can this be understood as referring to the transmigration of souls?

The fourth proof of this is found at fol. 157, col. 1, in the tenth chapter of the aforementioned fourth Maamar, and the words read as follows: גם המהביל כל עייני העולם הזה שלמה המלך עליו השלום תחלת דבר בו בספרו דקהלת רמז הסוד הנפלא הזה מהגלגול באמרו דור הולך ודור בא והיה מן הראוי שיסדר דבריו להפך כי ההויה ההויה קודם להפסד • אבל כאן נרמז הסוד הזה והדורות שהולכים הם עצמם הדורות אשר אחר כך באים • וכן במדרש רבי נחוניא בן הקנה אמר רבי עקיבא דור הולך ודור בא היה לו לומר דור בא ודור הולך אלא מלמד שכבר בא • ואל הסוד הזה רמז באמרו מה שהיה הוא מה שיהיה That is: King Solomon also, upon whom be peace, who holds all things of this world to be vanity, alludes at the beginning of the book of Ecclesiastes to this wondrous mystery of the transmigration of souls, when he says (Eccl 1:4): "One generation passes away, and another generation comes." He ought, however, rightly to have set his words in reverse order (and said: one generation comes, the other passes away), for a thing must first exist before it can pass away. But here an allusion is made to this mystery, and those generations which pass away are the very same ones that come afterward. Thus Rabbi Akkiva also said in the Médrasch of Rabbi Nechúnja ben Hakkáne: (Solomon says) "One generation passes away, and another generation comes"; he ought to have said, "One generation comes, and another generation passes away"; but he teaches thereby that it has already come. To this mystery he also alluded when he says (in the ninth verse following): "That which has been is that which shall be again, and there is nothing new under the sun" (Eccl 1:9). These are the words of Rabbi Menasse.

The scripture is here again interpreted in an erroneous manner, for King Solomon intended in the aforementioned fourth verse nothing other than to indicate the transience of human life, which lasts only a short time and soon comes to an end. Likewise, in the ninth verse he intended nothing other than to convey that all things in the natural world maintain their common course, that the planets and stars have their regular order, that the earth brings forth its produce in its accustomed season, and that even though men die, their lineage is nonetheless preserved through their descendants; all of which, along with other occurrences that come to pass, has been so since the days of Adam and will continue until the end of the world, so that nothing new arises that has not already existed before. What, then, does any of this have to do with the imagined transmigration of souls?

The fifth proof is also found in the aforementioned fol. 157, col. 2, immediately following what was adduced for the fourth proof, and it consists in these words: עוד השיב ידו על הסוד הזה בסימן ד' באמרו ושבה אני את המתים שכבר מתו מן החיים אשר הם חיים עדנה. ובהיות שלא ימצא בין אנשי הרעה והתבונה מי שהעדר טוב מהמציאות הפירוש המקובל הנא כמעט מוכרח ורצונו שהמתים שכבר מתו פעם אחרת וזוכים לאחר שנתגלגלו ומתו למנוחה נכונה בישיבה עליונה הם יותר משובחים מאלו That is: he (namely King Solomon) returns further to this mystery, in the 4th chapter (of his Ecclesiastes, in the second verse), where he says: "I praised the dead, who were already dead, more than the living, who still had life." Eccl 4:2. Now, since among understanding and wise men there will be found no one who holds it as certain (or affirms) that the deprivation (or the lack of a thing) is better than its presence, the interpretation of those words which we have through tradition or oral teaching is altogether necessary; and he (Solomon) means thereby to indicate that those dead who have already died a second time, and who, after having been transferred from one body into another and having departed, have become partakers of true rest in the supreme high academy, are more to be praised than those who have been transferred into another body and are still in the world, etc.

Is this not, however, yet another foolish proof? The wise King Solomon, according to the indication of the first verse, considered the misery of those who suffer injustice in the world and are plagued by those who have power over them, and therefore took occasion to praise the dead more than the living, who must endure such affliction and such injustice, that is, to count them fortunate, because they are relieved of all such misery and wretchedness and are entirely freed from it. How, then, can the transmigration of souls be proven from this? Likewise, what Rabbi Menasse says is of no weight, such that no reasonable person will confirm that the absence of a thing is better than its presence, for the wise King Solomon teaches the opposite in the following third verse, when he considers one who has not yet been born to be more fortunate than the living and the dead.

The sixth proof is also to be read in the last-cited passage, where it is written as follows: הפעם הרביעית אשר רמו שלמה המלך עליו השלום הענין הזה הוא בסימן ה' ושם נאמר ראיתי רשעים קבורים ובאו וממקום קדוש יהלכו וישתכחו בעיר אשר כן עשו גם . זה הבל . ודע שבפסוק הזה לא מציא כל אנשי חיל ידיהם בפירושו כי מה ענין קבורים ובאו ומה שפירש בו הרא"ב שראה הרשעים מתים בלי צער ובאים שנית לעולם דהיינו בניהם

שממלאים מקומם ולא ישכח זכרם והישרים שהיטיבו לעשות והם הצדיקים שממקום קדוש באו ישתכחו הם וזרעם יסוף. ויומשך מזה לחשוב שאין שכר ועונש זה הכל כי ה' יפרע מהם וישלם לצדיקים בעולם הבא. הוא היותר קרוב לפשוטו וגם שהוא רחוק. ולכן באמת יפה נדרש לפי דברי המקובלים על הגלגול ופירושו כך הוא. ראיתי רשעים קבורים ובאים ושבים בפעם אחרת לעולם הזה לתקן את אשר עותן ממקום קדוש ששם הנשמות ואחר כך משתכחים בזהו. בזהו עלמא וכן הוא הפירוש: עלמא מאשר עשו מהמצוות ומעשים טובים. That is: King Solomon, upon whom be peace, alludes for the fourth time to this matter in the eighth chapter of his Ecclesiastes (v. 10), where it is written: "And I saw the wicked who were buried, and they came; and they went forth from the place of the holy, and those who had done thus were forgotten in the city. This too is vanity." Know that even the most capable men have been unable to find satisfaction in their interpretation of this verse, for what is the meaning of the words "were buried, and came"? As for the interpretation of Rabbi Aben Esra (in which he states) that he, namely Solomon, had seen that the wicked die without pain and come into the world a second time, by which their sons are to be understood, who step into their place, and that in this manner their memory is not forgotten; whereas the upright, on the other hand, who have done good, namely the righteous, who came from the place of the holy, are forgotten, and their seed perishes: from which it would follow that one might think there is no reward for good or punishment for evil, and that this, if one wishes to think so, is a vanity; for God will take vengeance upon them and will recompense the righteous in the life to come: this interpretation, that is, this interpretation of Aben Esra, is the most fitting according to the literal sense, even though it too is absurd. For this reason, such a verse is certainly explained very aptly, according to the testimony of the Kabbalists, by means of Gilgul, or the transmigration of souls, and the following is its meaning: "I saw that the wicked were buried, and came a second time back into the world, to correct what they had done wrongly" (when they were in the world for the first time), "from the place of the holy, where the souls are; after this they boast in that world that they have performed the commandments and good works." This, then, is the interpretation. Thus far are the words of Rabbi Menasse.

This proof, however, is also founded upon a foolish fancy and a presumptuous distortion of Scripture, since, first of all, this verse is very obscure and difficult to understand, and therefore a great variety of interpretations and opinions are found among Christians and Jews concerning it. To wish to derive a certain proof from an obscure verse, however, is foolishness, in that one seeks to establish one uncertain thing by means of another.

Secondly, because neither in the Chaldean translation, which is held in very high esteem by the Jews, nor in the Commentary or exposition of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, of whom the Jews report that he must have possessed a prophetic spirit on account of his lofty and subtle understanding, nor from the learned Aben Ezra, as Rabbi Menasseh himself indicates, is anything to be found concerning the transmigration of souls, of which they would surely have made some mention if it could have been established from that passage. Indeed, even in the Talmud itself, in the tractate Gittin, fol. 56, col. 2, the said verse is interpreted in a very different manner, and specifically with reference to the Emperor Titus Vespasian, where it is written that when he had taken Jerusalem, he came into the Temple and committed fornication in the Holy of Holies with a harlot upon the book of the Law, and thereafter it follows: מה עשה נטל את הפרוכת ועשאה כמין גרגותני והביא כל כלים שבמקדש והניחן בהן והושיבן בספינה לילך ולהשתבח בעירו שנ' ראיתי רשעים קבורים ובאו וממקום קדוש יהלכו וישתכחו בעיר אשר That is: What did he (further) do? He took the curtain and made of it, as it were, a basket, and had all the vessels that had been in the Temple brought and laid therein, and had them placed in a ship in order to sail away and boast of it in his city, as it is said: "I saw the wicked who were קבורים Kevurim, that is, buried, and they came and went forth from the place of the holy, וישתכחו Vejitschtakkechú, that is, and were forgotten in the city that had done thus." Read not קבורים Kevurim, that is, who were buried, but rather קבוצים Kevuzim, that is, who were gathered together; read (also) not וישתכחו Vejitschtakkechú, that is, and were forgotten, but rather וישתבחו Vejitschtatbechú, that is, they boasted themselves, etc.

Thirdly, because in confirmation of such erroneous doctrine the scripture is perverted, and instead of וישתכחו Vejitschtakkechú, which means "and they were forgotten," וישתבחו Vejitschtatbechú, that is, "and they glorified themselves," is read, to which the cited words of the Talmud gave occasion. But when one wishes to prove something from Holy Scripture, its words must not be altered, for otherwise it is no proof from Scripture, but rather a thing fabricated out of an empty brain. The foolish Cabalists could not, however, easily manage without such perversion, as the oft-mentioned Rabbi Menasse himself briefly confesses immediately after the above-cited words, when he reports: אמנם רבים קראו וישתבחו ככ' וכך דרשו ששלמה המלך היה מהביל אפילו האמת והמוסכם באמרו שאין שום תועלת אם יבאו הרשעים וישבו לעולם הזה ממקום קדוש מאחר שישתכח מהם כל אשר עשו ואינם זוכרים להזהר מלחטוא שנית ולהתקן את אשר עותו ובאמת זו היא טענה גדולה : That is: there are many, however, who read Vejitschtakkechú with the letter Caph, and interpret it to mean that King Solomon also held the truth, and that which is acknowledged and agreed upon, to be vain, when he says that there would be no benefit whatsoever if the wicked were to return into this world from the place of the holy, since they forget everything they have done and no longer remember that they ought to guard themselves a second time from sinning and to correct that which they have done wrong. And certainly this is a great proof against the transmigration of souls.

The seventh proof follows directly upon the preceding one, fol. 158, col. 1. of the book Nischmáth chájim, with these words: גם כיד הנביאים הראשונים נחתם הסוד הנפלא הזה הלא תראה האשה התקועית אומרת כי מות נמות וכמים הנגרים אשר לא יאספו ולא ישא אלהים נפש וחשב מחשבות לבלתי ידח ממנו נדח, והפירוש המקובל כי הוא כי החוטא מת מיתה אחר מיתה יען מתגלגל מגוף לגוף וכמים הנגרים ארצה אשר לא יאספו כן נפשות בני אדם לא תאספו עוד אל הגוף בטבע כי אם ביכולת האלהי ודרך נס. ולא ישא אלהים נפש איש מן המיתה אבל חושב מחשבות לבלתי ידח ממנו נדח. ר"ל להשיב אליו כרוב רחמיו וחסדיו הנפש החוטאת ואשר בעוונותיה הודחה ממחיצתו. וזה על ידי גלגולים פעמים שלש עם גבר כדי שהחוטא יתקן את אשר עות והשיב הנפש לשרשה ואל מנוחתה כבוד. וכל המקובלים בונים כמעט כל אמונתם בפינה הזאת על פסוק הזה ובאמת רתוי הוא That is: this wondrous mystery has also been set down by the first prophets. Do you not see that the woman of Tekoá (2 Sam 14:14) says: for we must needs die, and are as water spilled on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again; and God does not take away a soul, but devises means that the banished one be not expelled from Him. The interpretation, however, which comes down through tradition or oral teaching, is this: that the sinner dies one death after another, since his soul is transferred from one body into another; and just as water spilled upon the ground cannot be gathered up again, so also the souls of men are not gathered back into bodies by natural means, but only through God's power and through a miracle; and that God does not wish to take away the soul of man from death, but devises means that the banished one be not expelled from Him, that is, so that the sinning soul, which on account of its transgressions has been expelled from His precinct (that is, His dwelling), may be brought back to Him according to His great goodness and mercy. This, however, comes about through the transmigrations of souls three times with a person, so that the sinner may correct what he has done wrong, and the soul may return to its origin and to its rest in glory. All Kabbalists also build virtually their entire faith in this chief matter upon this verse; and certainly, it is fitting that one hold to it, for it is clear and firm. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse.

This proof, however, which is supposed to be the foremost of all, is likewise entirely without force, but is built upon a vain fancy and a false understanding of Scripture; and neither Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, nor Aben Esra, nor Rabbi Jeschája, nor Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel has mentioned the slightest thing concerning the transmigration of souls in their commentarii on this passage, even though they all, without doubt, likewise believed in it. The woman of Tekoa, at the instigation of Joab, had sought to persuade King David that he should receive Absalom back into favor, since Absalom had caused his brother

Amnon to be killed because Amnon had dishonored his sister Tamar, and that David should no longer pursue Absalom in order to avenge Amnon's blood upon him. And because David had promised her that no harm should come to her only remaining son, of whom she pretended that he had killed his brother, she took the opportunity from this to put before the King the question of why he did not have his banished son Absalom, whose situation was the same, brought back to him; and she advanced this as her reason: "For we must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again," by which she meant to say that all men, and consequently the King as well, are mortal, and that therefore he should allow his banished son, to whom the crown and the rule rightfully belonged after him, to return to him. And even though Amnon had been killed, the matter could not be changed, for just as water that is poured out upon the ground cannot be gathered up again once it has been poured onto a sloping place, since it flows away and seeps into the earth, so too the souls of men cannot by natural means be brought into a body, but this must come to pass through a miracle, at the time of the resurrection of the dead; which interpretation is to be found for the most part in Rabbi David Kimchi's commentary on this passage. Others hold that she meant to give the King to understand that he should not seek to put Absalom to death for the manslaughter he had committed, for he would have to die soon enough of himself in due time, since all men are subject to death; and even if one puts a manslayer to death, the life of the slain cannot thereby be restored to him, any more than water that has been poured upon the ground can be gathered up again; with which interpretation Abarbanel is in great agreement.

Through the following words in the text, "and God will not take away the soul," she had intended to signify that God would not take Absalom's life, but would rather preserve him for the good of his people. However, the words in the Hebrew text, וְלֹא יִשָּׂא אֱלֹהִים נֶפֶשׁ Veló jissá Elohim néfesch, can also be interpreted as follows: "And God is no respecter of persons," that is, He spares no man, but all must die. This is how Rabbi David Kimchi explains it. Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel, however, teaches that the meaning is this: even if God does not punish the sinner in this world, that sinner will nonetheless be duly punished at the great Last Judgment, in the world of souls. Through the final words, "but (God) takes thought, so that the banished one may not be banished from Him," she had intended to indicate that God would not allow Absalom to be cast out, but would call him back to his own people. The aforementioned Abarbanel interprets these words to mean that God takes thought in this world to repay a man according to his works, so that he need not be punished in the world to come and be cast out from the divine blessedness of souls. And the woman had said this concerning Amnon, because it had been ordained by God that he must die, in order to atone for his sins through his death; and since Absalom had been sent by divine providenz, or providence, only to accomplish this, it would not be right that he should be punished. Or else she had intended to convey that God, out of pure mercy, had appointed cities of refuge for manslayers, of which one may read in Num 35, by means of which they are preserved alive and not utterly cast out; and for this reason the king ought to take careful thought not to utterly cast out his banished son, but rather to show mercy and receive him back into favor. According to this last interpretation, the words of the text are understood as referring not to God but to King David, and are thus translated from the Hebrew: "Therefore let him (namely the king) take thought, that the banished one may not be banished from him," by which the woman had intended to impress upon him that he should not utterly cast out the banished Absalom. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi likewise understood these words as referring to King David and not to God. From all of this it is reasonable to conclude that from the words of the woman of Tekoa, which the foolish Kabbalists nonetheless adduce as their best proof, not the slightest thing concerning the transmigration of souls can be demonstrated; as indeed the most learned Jews in their Commentarii on this passage say nothing of it, but interpret the matter in an entirely different way. From this one can see what is to be made of such foolish fantasy.

The eighth proof is also found in the aforementioned fol. 158, col. 1. and reads as follows: ישעיהו הנביא גם הוא בסימן כ"ב הודיע לנו העיקר הזה הלא הוא בקראו הגר על אנשי דורו האומרים הרוג בקר ושחוט צאן אכול בשר ושמות יין אכול ושתי כי מחר נמות. אמר בסימן כ"ב ונגלה באזני ה' צבאות אם יכופר העון הזה לכם עד תמותון ותרגם המתרגם מותא תנינא וכן בירושלמי זו מיתה שניה ר"ל אחר שישובו עוד בגוף אחר למות מיתה שניה וגומר : That is: The prophet Esaias has also made this principal matter known to us in the 22nd chapter. Did he not, when he rebuked the people who lived in his time, who spoke (v. 13.) of slaughtering oxen, killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine (and said:) Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die? And in the (aforementioned) 22nd chapter (v. 14.) he said: And the Lord of hosts was revealed before my ears (saying:) What does it avail whether this transgression shall be forgiven you, until you die? And the Chaldean interpreter translated (these words "until you die") as referring to the second death; as indeed it also stands in the Hierosolymitan (Talmud) that they signify the second death, namely after they have returned into another body, to die the second death, etc. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse, by which he seeks to prove that through the words "until you die," the transmigration of souls from one body into another is signified, because in the Chaldean translation mention is made of the second death.

This proof, however, is entirely without force and worth nothing, for, as has already been established above on p. 63, by the second or other death nothing else is understood than eternal damnation and eternal death. And the prophet, through the words "what does it matter whether this transgression shall be forgiven you," ad temúthun, that is, "until you die," intended to say nothing other than: this transgression will be forgiven you neither until your death, nor afterward, and therefore never at all. And in this sense the little word עד ad, which means "until" or "until that," is also taken in Job 27:5, where it is read that Job said to his friends: "Far be it from me that I should grant you to be right; until I give up my spirit, I will not depart from my integrity," by which he intended to give it to be understood that he had never desired to abandon his integrity at any point. This manner of speaking may also be consulted in 1 Chr 28:20. Now if the prophet Isaiah intended by the aforementioned words to indicate that the transgression should never be forgiven, then it could not have been forgiven through the second death, of which the Kabbalists teach that it occurs in the second body into which the soul passes; and thus the cited words of Isaiah are, rather, directly contrary to the Jewish doctrine of the transmigration of souls, instead of being capable of being proven from them.

This argument, I say, can be of no help to the Kabbalists, for by the second death, as mentioned, eternal damnation must be understood, and the wicked are cast into eternal damnation with body and soul alike, as is clearly seen in Dan 12:2. Even if only the body is mentioned here, the soul is nonetheless not excluded, since both must necessarily be together in eternal torment and must suffer together, just as they also sinned together.

Nor can the Kabbalists derive any benefit from what the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse further advances in response to the above, when he states: וכן תרגם בסימן ס"ה לא :אהשק כי אם שלמתי ושלמתי על חיקם ואמסור למותא תניינא ית גוייהון • וזה מורה שאין פירוש מותא תניינא מיתת הנפש אלא הגוף השני בגלגול that is, Thus he (namely the Chaldean interpreter Jonathan) also translated the words of Isa 65:6, "I will not keep silence, but will repay, yea I will repay into their bosom," (when he says) "I will deliver their bodies to the second death," and this teaches us that by the second death one is not to understand the death of the soul, but of the second body, into which the soul is transferred. This, I say, can be of no help to the Kabbalists, for by the second death, as already stated, eternal damnation must be understood, and the wicked are cast into eternal damnation with body and soul alike, as is clearly seen in Dan 12:2. Even if only the body is mentioned here, the soul is nonetheless not excluded, since both must necessarily be together in eternal torment and must suffer together, just as they also sinned together.

The ninth and last supposed proof is found at fol. 158, col. 1, immediately following the preceding one, in these words: סוף דבר הענין הזה פירש הק"ה בעצמו: לאיוב סימן ל"ה באמור לו לאחוז בכנפות הארץ וינערו רשעים ממנה תתהפך כחומר חותם וייתצבו כמו לבוש • רוצה לומר כפי מה שכתב הרב רבינו בחיי המימך צוית כנפוי לאחוז בכנפות הארץ ולנער הרשעים ממנה ולהעמיד אחרים תחתיהם ותתהפך הארץ מהם כחומר חותם שהוא מתהפך ומשתנה לצורות משתנות וייתצבו כל אחד ואחד מהרשעים כאדם שהוא לבוש בגדים חדשים וכו' ובמליצת אליהו לאיוב תראינה ענין עוד מפורש הענין הזה • וזהו מה שהעיד על עצמו באמרו ערום יצאתי מבטן אמי וערום אשוב שמה ר"ל אשוב שמה לבטן בהיותו חושב שעוד תשוב נשמתו להתגלגל בגוף אחר • ודע שעל היסוד הזה בנו הכמי האמת כל גלגוליהם. That is to say: In the end, the Holy and Blessed God Himself explained this matter to Job in the 38th chapter (vv. 13-14), when He declares: to take hold of the corners of the earth, that the wicked might be shaken out of it; that it might be changed like the clay of a seal, and they stand forth like a garment; by which He, according to what Rabbi Bechai has written, intended to say: have you, as I have done, commanded the corners of the earth to be taken hold of, and the wicked to be shaken out of it, and others to be set in their place, so that the earth might be changed by them like clay upon which a seal is pressed, which is transformed and altered into various shapes; and that each one of the wicked might stand like a man who has put on new garments, etc. So you also see this matter further explained in the eloquent speech that Elihu delivered to Job (which is to be read in Job 33), and this is what he (namely Job, Job 1:21) testified of himself when he says: Naked I came forth from my mother's womb, and naked shall I return there, by which he intended to say: I shall in fact return into the womb again; since he had thought that his soul would come again into another body. Know also that the theologians, or divines, have built all the transmigrations of souls, which have been revealed to them in their wisdom, upon this foundation.

These are once again the words of Rabbi Menasse, in which he seeks to establish, from three passages in the book of Job, the transmigration of souls from one body into another. The first proof consists in the obscure words of chapter 38, vv. 13-14, in whose exposition neither Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, nor Aben Ezra, nor Rabbi Levi ben Gershom, nor the Chaldean translator Jonathan, makes the slightest mention of the transmigration of souls and that foolish doctrine. The sense of the words, "to take hold of the ends of the earth, that the wicked might be shaken out of it," appears to be this: that the dawn (of which, as Aben Ezra teaches, mention is made here) encompasses the corners and ends of the earth with its bright radiance and illuminates the whole earth, whereby the wicked, who shun the light of day and commit their evil deeds by night, are, as it were, shaken out of the world, in that they take to flight (as Rabbi Levi ben Gershom expounds it) and hide themselves. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes concerning this that God intended to say as much as: just as a man takes hold of the corners of his cloak and shakes it out, so He will take hold of the corners of the earth and shake the wicked out of it. The following words, "that it might be changed as clay of a seal, and they stand as a garment," signify that the earth changes its form in various ways through the things which God creates upon it and causes to grow, just as the form of a clay seal is changed by the impression of various seals and takes on many different shapes; and that the creatures which are found upon the earth adorn it, as it were, like a garment. Aben Ezra also agrees with this when he writes concerning it that the earth is changed through different forms, and that men clothe it like a garment. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi expounds this to mean that the form of men is changed through death, but at the time of the resurrection they will rise again with their garments. Now what does all of this have to do with the transmigration of souls? And how can it ever be maintained from this with any semblance of reason?

In the second proof, reference is made to Job 33:25 and 33:29; for such pagan fictions are erroneously cited in Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 157, col. 2, and fol. 161, col. 2, concerning the transmigration of souls from one body into another, even though Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, Aben Ezra, and Rabbi Levi ben Gersom make no mention whatsoever of such a matter in their commentaries on those passages. The true meaning of the two aforementioned verses, however, is as follows. Elihu had given Job a rebuke at v. 8 etc., because Job held himself to be innocent, as though he had committed no sin on account of which God would have had cause to visit him with misery and sickness; and Elihu recounted to him that the sins he had committed had caused his illness, and also exhorted him to repentance, declaring that God would again be gracious to the sinner and restore him to health when he converted, so that he would again become entirely fresh and vigorous, and, as is read in v. 25, his flesh would flourish again as in youth, and he would become young again, that is, he would recover the bodily strength that he had possessed in his youth. As for what is said in v. 29, namely: "Behold, God does all these things two or three times with a man," an indefinite number is here used in place of a definite one, indicating thereby that God does not punish a man who has sinned with sicknesses only once, but rather multiple times in such a manner, and that when he converts, God receives him again into grace and helps him up. And thus Rabbi Salomon Jarchi likewise interprets this passage as referring to a man visited with sickness on account of sins he has committed, and states that God chastises such a person two or three times through sicknesses on account of his sins, in order to rescue his soul from destruction.

Now if this is the proper meaning of the words of Elihu, how then can the transmigration of souls be forced out of them?

The third proof, which is taken from the words of Job, from chapter 1, verse 21, upon which the Kabbalists build their entire foundation of such foolish doctrine, is likewise wholly absurd and without force. For Job, through the words "Naked I came forth from my mother's womb, and naked I shall return there again," intended nothing other than this: that since he was born naked and brought nothing with him into the world, he would likewise return naked into the grave and take nothing with him; and he thus consoled himself in the face of the great loss and misfortune he had suffered. That by the little word "there" he understood the grave, and not the mother's womb, is what sound reason demands, for no man can return into his mother's womb; and therefore the Chaldean interpreter Jonathan translates it thus: ערשילי נפקית מן כרסא דאמי, וערשילי אתוב לבית קבורתא, That is: I came forth naked from my mother's womb, and I shall return naked to the place of burial. Rabbi Solomon Jarchi also writes concerning the words "Naked shall I return there again" as follows: לא בבטן הוא סדבר ומה שמה אל מקום תשובתו ועל שהוא מוכן לכך ולא יחליף החוק לשוב כי אם אל הוצרך להזכירה, That is: He is not speaking of the womb (of his mother). What then does the little word "there" signify? It signifies as much as "to the place to which he shall return"; and because he was prepared for this, and could not alter the ordinance of returning to the dust, he had no need to make mention of it (and to say explicitly that he would return naked to the earth, into the grave). Rabbi Aben Ezra likewise remarks concerning this: רמז לקבר הידוע, That is: He has pointed to the well-known grave. Here we see, therefore, that even by the admission of the most learned Jews themselves, the Kabbalists' interpretation of the words of Job is false; and it is evident from all of the foregoing upon what a wretched and sandy foundation the foolish doctrine of the transmigration of souls from one body into another is built. Certainly Rabbi Menasseh ben Israel was convinced in his own conscience that all of his aforementioned proofs drawn from Holy Scripture were without force, which is why he writes at fol. 159, col. 1, at the beginning of the eleventh chapter of the fourth Maamar, as follows: אלו הם הפסוקים המורים דרך רמז לדעת, That is: These are the scriptural verses which, according to the opinion of the sages of the Kabbalah, teach the matter of the transmigration of souls by way of allusion. He did not dare to say that they were clear proofs, but only stated that they were indicia, or indications, from which the matter might be conjectured.

Concerning the above alleged proofs from Scripture, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasseh brings forward, in the said fol. 159, col. 1. 2., in the eleventh chapter of the fourth Maamar, three further ones, of which the Kabbalists make use to confirm their vain doctrine, and his words concerning the first read as follows: ואחד שאנחנו שידענו שהקב"ה אל אמת שופט צדק ואמת ועם כל זה ראינו צדיק ורע לו רשע וטוב לו. הרשעים מצליחים והצדיקים מוכים ומעונים אין זה כי אם דבר הגלגול. וכן נדרש בפי' הבהיר צדיק ורע לו צדיק בן רשע. כלומר שהוא עצמו כבר היה רשע מקודם ועתה על הראשונים מצטער. רשע וטוב לו רשע בן צדיק שהיה צדיק מקודם ועכשו ועכשו פרי מעלליו יאכל. וכאשר אנחנו לא נדע עניין הצדיק הזה מה היה טיבו ומעשיו לפנינו לכן אנחנו תמהים על יסוריו. וכן בענין הרשע המתעלה כאזרח רענן. אבל הנסתרות לה 'אלהינו וכל דרכיו משפט. ולזה גזרו על איוב שהיתה נפשו של תרה ושהיה סובל עוונות ראשונים ככתוב בספר הסודות. ולכן בראותו עצמו צדיק ולא היה יודע סוד נשמתו היה קורא תגר ומואס בחייו באמרו תם אני לא אדע נפשי אמאס חיי. ר"ל איני יודע אם נשמתי היא נשמה חדשה או that is to say: The first is that, although we know that the holy and blessed God is the true God and a just and true judge, we nevertheless see that it goes ill with the righteous and well with the wicked, and that the wicked prosper while the righteous are struck down and afflicted; but this is nothing other than a matter of the transmigration of souls. And thus it is explained in the book Habbáhir that a righteous man for whom things go ill is a righteous man who was a wicked son, that is, who was previously wicked but is now being afflicted on account of his former sins; whereas the wicked man for whom things go well was a righteous son, who was previously righteous but now enjoys the fruit of his works. But because we do not know the condition of such a righteous man, nor what his state and his works previously consisted of, we wonder at his afflictions. And so it is likewise with the wicked man who flourishes like a green native tree (or a laurel tree). But the hidden things belong to the Lord our God, and all His ways are right. And for this reason they (namely the Kabbalists) have declared concerning Job that his soul was the soul of Terah (the father of Abraham), and that he had to suffer on account of former sins, as is written in the book Hassodóth (or Hassódos); therefore, because he had seen that he himself was righteous and had not known the mystery of his soul, he showed himself aggrieved and despised his life, saying (Job 9:21): "Though I am blameless, I do not know my soul; I despise my life." He meant to say: I do not know whether my soul is a new soul or one that has been transmigrated (and has already previously been in another body); and if it has been transmigrated, I do not know who the first was (in whom it previously dwelt), and therefore I despise my life. These are the words of Rabbi Menasseh, according to whom it goes ill with a righteous man because his soul, when it was previously in another body, had sinned, and must now, in the other body, suffer for that reason, even though it is pious. The wicked man, however, is to fare well and be given his reward because his soul was previously pious in another body, even though it now leads a profligate life.

There is great error in this matter, for it would be contrary to God's justice to punish a body that has not sinned, and conversely to reward one that has done evil, since God punishes both the body and the soul that have sinned. That God sometimes sends the pious crosses and tribulations, and allows the godless to sit in prosperity, has other causes than the aforementioned ridiculous Kabbalistic fantasy: for He sometimes allows the pious to endure much misery in order to test them, whether they will steadfastly hold fast to Him; to the godless, however, He grants all manner of things that serve temporal well-being, so that they may receive their good in this world. To say nothing of yet other causes.

The second proof reads as follows: אנחנו רואים שנולדים הרבה מבני האדם מחוסרי אברים פעמים סומים ופעמים חגרים • ואם היוצר והבורא הוא האל ית' כאשר הוכחנו ואין מול ליצירה כאשר כבר כתבנו • אם אין לפניו עולה ולא משוא פנים נשאל נא מה פשע ומה חטאתה של הנשמה הזכה והנקיה עד שלא באה לעולם להכנס בגוף חסר וטפל וכלי אין חפץ בו להשלים מעשיה. אבל האמת יורה דרכו כי אלו הם החטאים בנפשותם והקבורים ובאים פעם אחרת בגלגול כדי לקבל עונשם בגוף הטפל הזה ונענשים על העונות הראשונים כאשר אמרנו • וחכמי אומות העולם אומרים שהחסרון הזה בילדים הוא מפאת חסרון החומר כאשר That is: We see that many children of men are born deficient in their members, sometimes blind, sometimes also lame (or limping). Now if the blessed God is the Creator who formed them, as we have demonstrated, and the formation does not derive from the stars, as we have already written, and if there is with Him neither injustice nor respect of persons, then we ask wherein the sin of the pure, clean, and innocent souls consists before they come into the world, that they must enter into a deficient and subordinate body, which is a vessel in which the soul takes no pleasure for accomplishing its works. But the truth teaches its own way, for those souls are the ones that have sinned through their souls, and have been buried, and come a second time through the transmigration of souls, so that they may receive their punishment in such a subordinate body, and they are punished on account of their former sins, as we have said. But the wise men among the nations of the world report that such deficiency in children derives from the deficiency of the matter (from which the deficient member ought to have been formed), just as such deficiency likewise produces altered and wondrous creatures. These are once again the words of Rabbi Menasse, in which he seeks to maintain that people are born deficient in their members because they previously sinned in another body, and that this therefore befalls them as a punishment.

However, as previously stated, such a thing would be contrary to the justice of God, to punish a body that has not deserved the punishment. The Kabbalists also teach, as has been shown above in this chapter, that the transmigration of Jewish souls is a special grace of God, through which they are set right and attain salvation. But since the Jews teach that the souls of Christians and other peoples do not have this grace, and do not pass from one body into another for this purpose, but are instead to perish together with the body, and yet many among the children of these peoples are also born deficient in their limbs, just as happens among Jewish children; it follows necessarily from this that the reason put forward by the Kabbalists for the deficiency of limbs in the children of the Jews is entirely false, for otherwise the deficiency of limbs in the children of Christians would have to have the very same explanation, which, however, would be directly contrary to their teaching. Therefore, when we wish to judge this matter in a spiritual manner, we must say that God has His reasons, hidden from us, why He allows some people to come into the world imperfect in their limbs. But if we wish to speak of it in a natural manner, we can say that the defect arises from a deficiency of matter.

The third proof consists in the following words: אנו רואים כל יום ויום הנפילים: גם ילדים אשר היו בארץ לאחר שהושפע בבטן אמם הנשמה הקדושה קודם שיצאו לאורה. גם ילדים קטנים אשר לא הגיעו להיות בר עונשים מתים בפרחם. ולמה יצא הקצף מלפני ה' עליהם כי מה עשו לשיענשו. והנה זה נגד היושר האלהי גוזר ומקיים שאין מיתה בלא חטא. ואין לומר שמתים בעון אביהם המרצח דכמה פעמים ראינו שמתים בני הצדיקים גמורים. וזולת זה ביתומים שאין להם אב ואם מאי איכא למימר. אבל עם דעת הגלגול יתוקן הכל כי הם נענשים כאמור That is: We see daily the misborn who appear on the earth, after the holy soul has been brought into them in their mother's womb, before they come forth into the light. Likewise, small children die in their bloom who have not yet reached the age at which they could be subject to punishment. Why then does the wrath of God go forth against them? What have they done, that they should be punished? See, this is indeed contrary to divine justice, which establishes and confirms that there is no death without sin. And one must not say that they die on account of the sin of their father, who is a murderer, for how often do we see that the children of the perfectly righteous die? Beyond that, what is to be said of orphans who have neither father nor mother? But all of this is resolved by the doctrine of the transmigration of souls, for they are, as stated, punished on account of prior sins (committed beforehand). These are the words against Rabbi Menasse.

However, a great Jewish error is contained therein, for he states that children die in the bloom of their youth before they have reached the age at which they can be punished for their sins; in which he aims at what the rabbis falsely teach, namely that a person is not punished for the sins he commits before the twentieth year of his age. Concerning this, Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 202, col. 1, in the Parascha Vehajá ékef, as follows: בית דין של מעלה מענישין עד עשרים שנה, That is: the supreme court punishes no one until the twentieth year. How foolishly this is proven from Scripture, however, can be seen from the aforementioned book of the said Rabbi Bechai, fol. 14, col. 4, in the Parascha Bereschíth, where he comments on the words of Gen 3:22, "Behold, Adam has become as one of us," reporting as follows: על דרך המדרש הן האדם היה אדם הראשון כבן עשרים שנה ועל זה נגזר על דור המדבר מבן עשרים שנה ומעלה. וזהו שדרשו ר"ז בן עשרים לרדוף שרודפין אותו מן השמים להענישו על חטאו, That is: in an allegorical sense, the words "Behold, Adam" signify that the first man was like one who is twenty years old (because he was punished for the sin he had committed); for this reason the judgment was passed upon the generation that was in the wilderness (Num 14:29), (inasmuch as it is written there) "from twenty years old and upward." And this is what our rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught (when they state): one who is twenty years old is subject to pursuit, since he is pursued from heaven so that he may be punished for his sin. Rabbi Naphtali likewise teaches, in his book Emek hammelech, fol. 175, col. 4, in the 18th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam habberia: קודם עשרים שנה אינו דן הק"ב את האדם, That is: before the twentieth year, the holy and blessed God does not judge a person. Something pertaining to this is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Schabbath, fol. 89, col. 2, in the conversation which Isaac is said to have held with God. Beyond this, the Jews are of the opinion that the sins which a person commits before the thirteenth year of his age are attributed and charged to his father; but as soon as he is thirteen years old and a Bar mizva, that is, one who is obligated to observe the commandments, he must himself bear his sins and answer for them. From these erroneous teachings the Kabbalists conclude: since the sins which a person commits before his thirteenth year are laid upon his father, and since no one is punished for his misdeeds before the twentieth year, and yet a great many die in their tender youth in the meantime, it must necessarily follow that the souls of such persons had previously existed in another body, in which they had sinned, and for the sake of those sins they are punished in the second body, since a person dies on account of sins.

They are, however, very greatly mistaken in this; for original sin clings by nature to all human beings, and there is none who has not sinned in Adam, since his guilt is imputed to all human beings, because he was the root of the entire human race and represented it. On account of this sin, all human beings must also die, as the Apostle Paul teaches plainly in the Epistle to the Romans, chap. 5, vv. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, with which the Rabbis also agree. For Rabbi Bechai, in his aforementioned commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 194, col. 2, in the Parascha Vaethbannân, writes as follows: דרשו ר"זל כל מי שהורג, בפש גולה למזרח של שמש שכן אדם הראשון, That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught that everyone who kills a soul must go into exile toward the rising of the sun; for thus did the first man cause death to all his descendants. What is written of him (Gen 3:24)? And He placed the Cherubim toward the rising of the sun of the garden of Eden, etc. Rabbi Isaac Karo teaches concerning this in his commentary on the five books of Moses, which is called Toledôth Yitzhak, fol. 47, col. 1, in the Parascha Schemôth, in the following manner: אף על פי שיש באדם חום טבעי שמכלה הליחות הטבעי וכן החום מבחוץ וגם, התנועה גופיות כמו שכתב בן סירה עם כל זה לא ימות אס לא בחטא אדם הראשון, That is: Although there is in man a natural warmth that consumes the natural moisture, and likewise there is an external heat, and there are bodily motions, as Ben Sira has written (through which the natural moisture perishes), yet he does not die for any cause other than on account of the sin of the first man. So also in the book Cad hakkémach, fol. 5, col. 4, it is stated concerning Adam: ידוע כי המיתה נגזרה על אדם הראשון שהיה שר העולם ועיקר כל הדורות, That is: It is known that death was decreed upon the first man, who was the root of the world and the foundation of all generations. And shortly thereafter, the words of Ps 82:7, "But you shall die like Adam," are explained as follows: בחטאו של, That is: On account of Adam's sin (shall you die), he who brought death upon himself and upon his seed unto the end of all generations. Shortly after this, the same passage continues: וכבר ידוע מדרך הטבע כי כשהשרש לוקה ונפסד גם הענפים יקחו חלקם מן ההפסד ומיתת האדם הוא פירוד הנפש מן הגוף וגו' ואם כן ענין המתה הזו היא דרך לכל העולם מפני שהם ענפי השרש ותולדותיו של אדם ואין צריך לומר כי היא בצדיקים החוטאים כי אף הצדיקים הגמורים שלא חטאו מעולם הם בכלל עונש מפני גזרת אדם הראשון שהרי מצינו צדיקים גמורים שלא חטאו מעולם ומתו והוא שדרשו זכרונם לברכה בסוף פרק השותפין ארבע מתו בעטיו של נחש כלומר לא בחטאם אלא בחטא הקדמוני, That is: It is known from the course and order of nature that when the root is struck and perishes, the branches also receive their share of the corruption; and the death of man is a separation from the body, etc. If this is so, then the nature of death is the way of the entire world (that is, of all human beings), since they are the branches of the root and the descendants of Adam; and it is not necessary to say that it strikes only those righteous persons who sin, for even those who are perfectly righteous and have never sinned are included under the punishment on account of the sentence that was passed upon Adam. For behold, we find perfectly righteous persons who never committed a sin and yet died; and this is what (our Rabbis), of blessed memory, have explained at the end of the chapter Haschuthafin (namely, in the first chapter of the Talmudic tractate Báva báthra, is no longer under his father's authority? To this it is answered that the Holy Blessed God has mercy upon such a person, so that he may die righteous, in order to give him a good reward in the life to come, and He does not wait until the twentieth year, lest that person sin and forfeit the future (eternal) life. But if that same person commits certain transgressions and dies before the twentieth year, then the Holy Blessed God withdraws His providenz, or providence, from him; and when power is given to the Destroyer (that is, the angel of death), such a person is caught in his sins, and he does not die by the decree of the upper court, but rather the Destroyer puts him to death of his own accord, and of such a one it is said (Prov 13:23): there is one who is consumed without judgment. Something similar is also to be read in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 175, col. 4, in the 18th chapter, under the title Schaar olam habberia. Now, although this too is an erroneous teaching, the premature death of a person is nonetheless not attributed to the cause that Rabbi Menasse puts forward.

Regarding the preceding last three proofs, Rabbi Menasse wishes to add a fourth, when he expresses himself in the aforementioned fol. 159, col. 2 as follows: הן אלה קצת מטענותיהן ז"ל ואסיפה לך עוד שאם הנשמות לא תהיינה מתגלגלות: מדור לדור וכמו שאמר שלמה דור הולך ודור בא בהכרח תהיינה במספר בלתי בעל תכלית וזהו טעות גדול כי הק"בה לא ברא בעולמו בעל תכלית בלתי בעלות תכלית כי המלאכים כבר גזר עליהם דניאל מספר הגם שעצום עד מאוד וכמו שכתוב אלף אלפים ישמשוניה ורבו רבון קדמוהי יקומון והנשמות אינן במדרגה יותר עליונה ולמה תהיינה בלי תכלית אלא ודאי שהנשמות חוזרות ומתגלגלות הגם שלפעמים באה איזה נשמה חדשה ומוציאה ראשונה ור"ז אמרו אין בן דוד בא עד שתכלינה כל הנשמות שבגוף רוצה לומר להתגלגל מורה זה היותן אמרתי: That is: Behold, these are some of the proofs of our Rabbis, of blessed memory; but to these I wish to add the following: if souls are not transferred from generation to generation into other bodies, and if it is not the case, as Solomon said (Eccl 1:4), that one generation passes away and another generation comes, then they would necessarily exist in an infinite number, which is a great error; for the holy, blessed God has created no infinite creatures in His finite world; since Daniel assigned a number to the angels, even though it is exceedingly great, as it is said (Dan 7:10): a thousand thousands served Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand (that is, a hundred thousand times a thousand) stood before Him; but souls are not of a higher rank than the angels, so why should they be without end (that is, innumerable)? It is therefore certain that souls return and are transferred into other bodies, although sometimes a new soul comes forth and goes out for the first time (namely, from beneath the Throne of Glory and into the world). Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have likewise said that the Son of David (that is, the Messiah) will not come until all the souls that are in bodies have come to an end, that is, until they cease to pass from one body into another; all of which teaches that they are circumscribed by a number, as I have said.

It is, however, greatly mistaken on this point, in that it supposes that if every body that comes into the world had to have a distinct soul, the souls would therefore have to be infinite and innumerable; for this does not follow from that premise, since the Kabbalists teach that only the souls of the Jews, through a special grace of God, are transferred from one body to another in order to bring them back from their sins to righteousness, and the souls of the Jews, however, which have existed from the beginning and will exist until the end of the world, are not infinite and innumerable. Indeed, even the souls of all people without distinction of nations, which have existed from the beginning of the world and will exist until its end, cannot be infinite and innumerable, since everything that comes to an end is finite and can be counted. But let this suffice concerning the transmigration of souls, which is called Gilgul.

Since this chapter has also made mention of another kind of passage of souls into other bodies, which is called עיבור Ibbur, I must here likewise indicate what the Rabbis teach concerning it. The aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel instructs us on this matter in his frequently cited book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 159, col. 2. and fol. 160, col. 1., in the twelfth chapter of the fourth Máamar, where he writes as follows: ואולם דע קורא נבון שיש דרך אחרת שבאות הנשמות לעולם הזה לא דרך גלגול שאין אותן נשמות עיקר הגוף שחיי תלויים בהם ואינם אלא סניף לנשמה וקוראים אותו חכמי הקבלה עיבור. כי כמו שכל זמן שהעובר בבטן אמו לאחר שהופעג בו הנשמה נכללה בגופה נשמה בנשמה. כך לאחר נשמתו של אדם על זה הדרך איפשר שתבאנה כמה נשמות מאנשים שכבר מתו להתחבר כי. או כמו שהאשה שהעברה יולדת והיא אינה חסרה כלום כן נפשות הצדיקים מתעברות ויוצאות מהן מצוות להגן על הדור או איזה איש פרטי כמדליק נר מנר והנר הראשון אינו חסר כלום. ואמרו קצת כי נשמת שת היתה זכה ובהורה ונתעברה במשה בשביל ישראל לתת תורה על ידו וזהו סוד ויתעבר ה' בי למענכם להגן עליהם בעדו יען תכלית העבורים האלו הוא או להשיג איזו מעלה או לצורך אחרים להישירם או להצילם. וכן הובא בספר עשרה מאמרות שבנפש שמואל נתעברו נפשות משה ואהרן דכתיב משה ואהרן בכהניו ושמואל בקוראי שמו. ובנפש פנחס נפשות נדב ואביהוא שהיו הולכות בלי מקום נתחברו אליו ורמו לדבר פנחס בן אלעזר בן אהרן הכהן ממש. וכן כתיב באידרא שכאליהו הנביא שהוא פנחס נתעברו הנ' נפשות הללו וכשלא רצה לילך אל יפתח ובתו נהרגה נענש ופרחו ממנו. כי הנשמות הבאות בסוד העיבור יכולות לברוח מה שאין כן הנשמה הבאה על ידי גלגול ביצירתו דאינה פורחת ממנו עד יום מותו. ועל דרך זה שמעתי על פסוק ועבדי כלב עקב היתה רוח אחרת עמו וימלא אחרי שנתעברה עמו רוח אחרת והיא שעמדה לו והדריכהו בדרך הישרה ולא פנה לעצת המרגלים : That is: Know, however, O discerning reader, that souls come into this world by yet another way, which does not occur through the Gilgul, for such souls are not the principal substance of the body upon which its life depends, but are only an addition (or appendage) to the soul (of the person to whom they are joined), and the sages of the Kabbalah call this Ibbur, that is, an impregnation; for just as throughout the entire time that a child is in its mother's womb, after the soul has been brought into it, a soul is contained within her body alongside her own soul, so too is it possible in this manner that many souls of deceased persons may be joined together with the soul of a living person (and placed together with it in one body). Or just as a woman becomes pregnant and gives birth, and thereby suffers no deficiency (in her body or soul), so likewise do the souls of the righteous become pregnant, and sparks go forth from them in order to protect the generation (of their time) or a particular individual; just as one lights a candle from another, and the first candle thereby suffers no deficiency. And some have said that the soul of Seth was pure and clear, and came through the Ibbur into Moses on account of Israel, in order to give the Law through him; and this is the mystery of the words (Deut 3:26) וַיִּתְּעַבֵּר ה' בִּי לְמַעַנְכֶם Vajithabbér Jehová bilemaanchém, that is (as the Kabbalists erroneously interpret it): And the Lord placed a soul into me through the Ibbur for your sake (whereas it means nothing other than: But the Lord was angry with me for your sake, as both the Chaldean translators Jonathan and Onkelos also render it), in order to protect them through him; for the purpose of such transferences of souls, which are called Ibbúrim, aims either at attaining some excellence, or serves the necessity of other persons by guiding them aright or delivering them. Thus it has also been adduced in the book Asará maamaróth (or Asóro maamóros) that the souls of Moses and Aaron came through the Ibbur into the soul of Samuel, as it is written (Ps 99:6): Moses and Aaron were among His priests, and Samuel among those who call upon His name. Likewise, the souls of Nadab and Abihu, which had been wandering without a place (that is, unsettled, and going from one place to another), were joined to the soul of Phinehas; and this is indicated by what is read (Num 25:7) in these words: Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, which is to be understood in its literal sense. In the same manner it is also written in the book Iddera that these two souls came through the Ibbur into the prophet Elijah, who is Phinehas; but when he had refused to go to Jephthah (of whom mention is made in Judg 11) and Jephthah's daughter was killed, he was punished, and those two souls flew out of him again; for the souls that come through the mystery of the Ibbur are able to fly away, which is not the case with the soul that comes through the Gilgul at the formation of a person (in his mother's womb), for that soul does not fly from him until the day of his death (which is also to be found in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 24, col. 1. numero 10. under the heading Eliabu). In the same manner I have also heard, concerning the words (Num 14:24): But my servant Caleb, because a different spirit is with him and he has followed me fully, that through the Ibbur another spirit came into him, which stood by him and led him on the right path, so that he did not heed the counsel of the spies.

These are the words of Rabbi Menasse, from which the distinction between Gilgul and Ibbur becomes clear; and it is to be seen that through Gilgul, the souls of the deceased pass into children who are formed in their mothers' wombs, and are in this manner transplanted into another body, in which they must remain until death; through Ibbur, however, one or more souls of the deceased are said to enter into a living person and be joined together with that person's soul, which added souls can fly out of him again whenever they wish, and do not have to remain with him until his death. But this Kabbalistic doctrine is also sheer nonsense, just like that of Gilgul, and its supposed proof rests solely on the false and perverse interpretation of the aforementioned words of Deut 3:26, even though the verb or word התעבר Hithabbér, throughout the entire Holy Scripture, where it appears in seven places besides the aforementioned one, namely Ps 78:21, 59, 62, and Prov 14:16 and 26:17, means nothing other than to be angry or to become angry; for which reason Rabbi Solomon Jarchi also explains the aforementioned word Vajithabbér by נתמלא חמה, that is, he became full of wrath. Likewise, in the Bible printed in Amsterdam by Rabbi Joseph, son of Alexander, in Judeo-German in the year 447 according to the Jewish calendar, that is, in the year 1687 A.D., the above-cited words are translated in corrupt German as follows: "And God was angering Himself over me." How, then, can the strange doctrine of Ibbur be forced out of this with any semblance of reason?

The souls are also supposed to be purified through the imagined Ibbur, concerning which the following is written in the second part of the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 51, col. 2, in the 37th chapter, at the beginning thereof: יש לרז"ל באיחור הגאלה יעזוב ביאת המשיח סוד גדול גלוהו באמרם בפרק הבא על יבמתו ובעז' פ' ראשון אמר רב אסי אין בן דוד בא עד שיכלו כל הנשמות שבגוף שנ' כי רוח מלפני 'יעטוף ונשמות אני עשיתי וחכמ thereof that all souls are to be purified before the coming of the Messiaë through the mystery of the Ibbur.

וחכמי האמת קבלו בסודו כי כל הנשמות יזדקקו קודם בא המשיח בסוד העיבור that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have a great mystery concerning the delay of the redemption and the postponement of the coming of the Messiah, which they have revealed when they state in the sixth chapter of the Talmudic tractate Jevamóth (fol. 62, col. 1) and in the first chapter of the tractate Avóda sára (fol. 5, col. 1): Rabbi Asi has said that the Son of David (that is, the Messias) will not come until all the souls that are in the body have come to an end, as it is said (Isa 57:16): "For the spirit would faint before Me, and the souls I have made"; and the theologians have learned through tradition from the mystery

Through this Ibbur, the souls of parents are also said to enter into their children, as can be read in the Jalkut chádascb, fol. 77, col. 2, under the title Chataim, from the book Asará maamaróth, fol. 44, col. 2, where the words read as follows: אלו היה האדם החוטא בפני עצמו היה החטא קל אבל האדם חוטא עם אבותיו 'שהם בו בסוד העיבור ולכן הוא חמור ולזה אמר דוד חטאנו עם אבותינו העוינו והרשענו פי כי אלו חטאנו בפני עצמינו היה החטא קל אבל חטאנו עם אבותינו שהיו בנו ממש בסוד העיבור ועמהם חטאנו ועל ידי כן העוינו והרשענו אותם שהיו צדיקים ועשינו אותם רשעים לכן אמר : That is: if a person sinned on his own account, the sin would be slight; but a person sins together with his forefathers, who are within him through the mystery of the Ibbur, and therefore the sin is grave. For this reason, David also said (Ps 106:6): "We have sinned with our fathers"; beevinu birschánú, that is, we have caused them to have acted wrongfully and to have been wicked. The meaning of these words is: if we had sinned on our own account, the sin would be slight; but we have sinned together with our fathers, who are truly within us through the mystery of the Ibbur, and we have committed sins together with them, and thereby we have caused them, who were righteous, to have acted wrongfully and to have been wicked, and we have made them wicked. For this reason he used (a Verbum transitivum, that is, a word whose action passes over onto another) the expression beevinu vehirschánú, that is, we have caused them to have acted wrongfully and to have been wicked; and he did not say, we have acted wrongfully and have been wicked. These are the words from the Jálkut chádascb.

From this, the Jews' terrible obduracy and wanton distortion of Scripture is once again evident, in that they wish to prove from the words of David that the souls of the fathers pass into the sons, because David said, "We have sinned with our fathers" (Ps 106:6); just as if the little word "with" were meant to signify that the souls of the fathers had been present in the sons, and that when the sons sinned, the fathers had sinned along with them. Yet the meaning consists simply in this: that David wished to say, "We and our fathers have sinned," that is, just as our fathers sinned, so too have we sinned. For the little word עם, Im, that is, "with," in the Hebrew language sometimes also means "and," as is said of David in 1 Sam 16:12: "And he was ruddy, with beautiful eyes," that is, "and beautiful in his eyes." And in 1 Sam 17:42, it is again reported of him: "For he was a youth, and ruddy, with a handsome appearance," that is, "and handsome in appearance." In this same sense it is also used in Ps 115:13 and Eccl 2:16 and in several other places. Likewise, the two words in Ps 106:6, beevinu vehirschánú, are wrongly interpreted when it is claimed that they should mean: "We have caused them to act wickedly and to have been ungodly," since they are nowhere in all of Holy Scripture taken in such a sense. As for the word העוה, Héeva, it has a significationem transitivam, that is, a meaning in which the action passes over to another, in only one place, namely Jer 3:21, and there it means "to pervert," where one reads כי העו את דרכם, that is, "that they have perverted their way." In all other places, however, it means "to do wrong" or "to act wickedly," and thus it is read in 1 Kgs 8:47 and 2 Chr 6:37: ורשענו ורשענו ורשענו, chatánu vebeevínu raschánu, that is, "We have sinned, and acted wickedly, and have been ungodly." Likewise, the verbum or word הרשיע, birchá, nowhere in Scripture means "to make ungodly," but rather either "to act ungodly and to be ungodly," as can be seen in Neh 9:33, Dan 9:5, and 2 Chr 20:35, or "to recognize and declare as ungodly," or "to condemn," as is read in Deut 25:1, Prov 17:15, and 1 Kgs 8:32 and in several other places. Therefore, the aforementioned words of Ps 106:6 are also translated by Rabbi Joseph, the son of Alexander, in his German-Hebrew Bible, as follows: "We have sinned with our fathers, we have acted crookedly, we have acted ungodly." How then can Rabbi Menáchem Asárja, in his book Asará maamaróth, so shamelessly distort Scripture into a false meaning in order to uphold a gross error?

To conclude this chapter, I must also point out that a human soul can be divided into many parts and thus transferred into many other people. For this reason, the following is written concerning the soul of Moses in the Jalkut chádasch, fol. 129, col. 2. numero 49: נשמת משה מתפשטת בכל דור ודור בכל תלמיד 49: חכם וצדיק דעסיק באוריתא ועליה כתיב דור הולך ודור בא וגו' that is, the soul of Moses has been spread abroad in all generations, among all disciples of the wise (that is, the learned) and the righteous who study the Law, and of this it is written (Eccl 1:4): "One generation passes away, and another generation comes," etc. According to this, therefore, the soul of Moses must at all times be divided into many thousands of parts, since there are at all times very many Jews who study the Law and are regarded among them as learned. But let this suffice concerning the Jewish errors regarding souls.

Chapter II.

In which it is shown in what manner the Jews are accustomed to curse us Christians and to wish all manner of evil upon us.

When one were to reproach the Jews and rebuke them for cursing the high Christian authorities and Christians in general, and for calling upon God for their downfall and complete extermination, they could, as is their custom, deny this, and say in their defense that one accuses them of such a thing with the greatest injustice, since their rabbis have expressly forbidden it; for in the book Shulchan áruch, in the part called Chóschén hammischépat, numero 425, §. 5, fol. 484, col. 2, over the words אסור להציל, that is, "It is forbidden to save them" (namely the Gójim or heathens from death), the following is written in the gloss in the margin: לא אמרו ח"זל דבר זה אלא על הגוים שהיו בזמניהם שהיו עובדי כוכבים ומזלות ולא היו מאמינים ביציאת מצרים ובחדוש העולם אבל אלו הגוים אשר אנחנו אוסה ישראלית גולים בצל שלהם ומפוזרת ביניהם הם מאמינים בחדוש העולם וביציאת מצרים ובכמה עיקרי הדת וכל כוונתם לעושה שמים וארץ וגו' לא די שאין איסור להציל אלא אנחנו מחויבים להתפלל בשלומם וכאשר האריך בזה בעל מעשה ה' בסדר הגדה בפסוק שפוך חמתך על הגוים אשר לא ידעון שהוד המלך עליו השלום התפלל לשפוך על הגוים אשר אינם מאמינים בחידוש העולם וענין האותות והנפלאות אשר עשה השם יתברך לנו במצרים ובננתן תורה אבל אלו הגוים אשר אנחנו בצלם חיים וחוסים תחת כנפיהם הם מאמינים בכל אלה ב"מש כ"מ ש ועל משמרתנו אנחנו עומדים להתפלל תמיד על שלום המלכות והשרים והצלחתם ועל כל מדינות ומקומות ממשלותיהם, That is: "Our sages, of blessed memory, said this only concerning those Gójim or heathens who were in their time, who served the stars and planets, and did not believe in the exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt, nor in the creation of the world. But those Gójim under whose shadow (that is, protection) we, the Israelite people, are in exile or misery, and dwell scattered among them, believe in the creation of the world and in the exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt, together with many principal articles of religion, and their entire intention is directed toward Him who made heaven and earth, etc. It is not only the case that it is not forbidden to save them (from death), but we are also obliged to pray for their welfare, just as the author of the book Maasééh haschéém, in the order of the Haggáda, or the account of the Passover feast, extensively notes, concerning the words (Ps 79:6) 'Pour out your wrath upon the heathens who do not know you,' that King David, upon whom be peace, prayed to (God) to pour out (His wrath) upon those heathens who do not believe in the creation of the world and in the matter of the signs and wonders which the blessed God performed for us in Egypt and at the giving of the Law. But those Gojim under whose shadow we live, and under whose wings we take refuge (and under whom we have our protection), believe all of this, as I have said, and we stand upon our watch to pray at all times for the welfare and prosperity of the kings and princes, as well as of all lands and places under their dominion." These are the words of the book Chóschén hamischpat.

Since the book Maaseh haschem, which Rabbi Eliézer composed, is also mentioned in this context, I wish to set down here as well what he writes on this matter. His words at folio 134, col. 4 read as follows: מן חשבו קצת מן הנכרים אשר אנחנו גולים בצל שלהם שהם ושלום אנחנו מקללים אותם וזה מבואר שאנחנו מחוייבים להתפלל בשלומם ואם כך איך יתכן שנתפלל להשם ית' שתי תפלות הפכיות, ועוד חלילה לנו בהדר משכבנו לקלל המלך אשר בצלו נחיה והער הפסוקים הללו שאנחנו אומרים שישפוך חמתו על הגוים אשר לא ידעוהו שהם מכחישים יציאת מצרים שלא הגיע אליהם ענין האותות והנפלאות ההם וזה מבואר מאוד שכל הנכרים האלה אשר גולת האומה ישראלית מפוזרת ביניהם כולם הגיע אליהם יציאת מצרים ומאמינים בה וידעו ענינה הרי אנו מבארים שהיודעים שמו שלא ישפוך עליהם חמתו כי נשמור נפשינו מחטא לה' שאין אנחנו מקללים יודעים שמו רק לעובדי אלילים ובלתי מאמינים מאמינים בחידוש העולם, ולפי שמחריבי בית המקדש לא היה להם מן האמונה שנתפשטה לאדם וישמעאל כי עדיין לא נתחדשו אבל היו עובדי אלילים לכן באר הכתוב שאותם הנכרים שהחריבו בית המקדש שלא ידעו את ה' ואכלו את יעקב ואת נוחו השמו אבל עתה שהנכרים הללו וכן הישמעאלים שהם יודעים את ה' ומודים ביציאת מצרים חלילה לנו מלקללם מפאת דתנו ואנו מקללים המריעים לנו והמצערים אותנו שלא כדן אפילו אותה הקללה איננה מפאת דתנו חלילה אבל היא כאדם המקלל למי שעשה נגדו ומריע לו כי האדם יקלל את בנו ואת אחיו כאשר ירע לו או יעשה לו שלא כדן כמו כן נקלל המריעים לנו בפרט אבל חלילה לנו לקלל כללות אומה אפילו יש ביניהם קצתם שהריעו לנו שאין זה רצונו של מקום רק שנקלל היחידים המרעים לנו ומצערים אותנו ולא זולתם ותורתנו הקדושה מזכרת בשם ראש המאמינים שאין רצונו בכך כמו שנאמר האף תספה צדיק עם רשע ואדון הנביאים אמר האיש אחד יחטא ועל כל העדה תקצוף, ומאלו הכתובים נתבאר שאין אנחנו רשאים מפאת הדת לקלל האומות שמודים ביציאת מצרים ויודעים את ה' בשום לא קבלת התורה: that is to say: Some among the Nochrim, that is, the foreigners (by which the Christians are to be understood), in whose shadow we dwell in exilio, or misery, have already entertained the thought that we (which be far from us) curse them; it is clear, however, that we are obliged to pray for their welfare. Now if this is so, how could it be fitting that we should offer up to God two contradictory prayers? But far be it from us to curse the king in our bedchamber, under whose shadow we live. This is also attested by those verses which we recite, that He (namely God) wishes to pour out His wrath upon the heathens who do not know Him, who deny the exodus from Egypt, and who have heard nothing of the matter of those signs and wonders. It is, however, entirely evident that all those foreigners among whom the Israelite people, dwelling in exilio or misery, are scattered, have come to know of the exodus from Egypt, believe in it, and are acquainted with its nature. See, we declare (thus) that He (namely God) will not pour out His wrath upon those who acknowledge His name, for we take care not to sin against the LORD, since we do not curse those who acknowledge His name, but rather the idolaters who do not believe in the creation of the world. Because those (Romans) who laid waste to the Temple were not adherents of the religions that had spread among Edom and Ishmael (that is, among the Christians and Turks), for at that time these had not yet been introduced, but rather they served idols, Scripture has therefore plainly shown us that those foreigners who destroyed the Temple did not know the LORD, and devoured Jacob, and laid waste to his dwelling. But now, since those same Nóchrim or foreigners (that is, the Christians), as well as the Ismaelites (that is, the Turks), acknowledge the LORD and confess the exodus from Egypt, far be it from us to curse them in view of our religion. And even when we curse those who do evil to us and torment us, which is nonetheless not right, even such a curse does not occur in view of our religion (as though we were commanded to do so), far be it, but rather it happens just as a man curses one who has done something contrary to him and causes him harm; for a man curses his son and his brother when he does him harm or otherwise commits something that is not right. In the same way, we curse only in particular those who do evil to us. But far be it that we should curse an entire people, even though some among them have done evil to us, for that is not God's will; rather, it is only His will that we curse those particular individuals who do evil to us and torment us, and no others. Our holy Law also reveals this in the name of the head of all believers (namely Abraham), that God takes no pleasure in it, as it is said (Gen 18:23): "Will You then destroy the righteous together with the wicked?" And the Lord of the Prophets (Moses) also said (Num 16:22, to God): "One single man has sinned, and You would be angry with the entire congregation?" It is thus evident from these passages of Scripture that it is not permitted to us, in view of our religion, to curse those peoples who confess the exodus from Egypt and acknowledge God, even though they have not received the Law of Moses.

Further, they could bring forward in their defense that the untruth of this can be seen from the book of Rabbi Asarja, Meór enájim, in which he, in the 55th chapter, fol. 169, col. 2, teaches the opposite and writes as follows: למען דעת כל עמי הארץ כי אנחנו שארית הפליטה כל ימי היותנו גרים ותושבים בארץ לא לנו הייבים על פי נביאי האמת וכפי מנהג האבות שהוא תורה להתפלל בשלומה של כל כוח המורשלת בנו. ובי לעת כזאת בפרט אשר עונונו הפיצונו בארבע רוחות השמים יש לנו לשחר That is: so that all peoples of the earth may know that we, who have remained (of Israel), for as long as we are strangers and sojourners together in a land that is not ours, are obligated, according to the command of the true prophets and according to the custom of the fathers, which is a law, to pray for the welfare of the realm that rules over us; and that we, especially in this time in which our sins have scattered us into the four corners of the world, should earnestly call upon God for the peace of all the inhabitants of the world, so that no people may lift up the sword against another. Upon this, the aforementioned Rabbi Asarja brings forward ten proofs that the Jews are obligated to do this, the first of which is taken from Jer 29:7, where it is written: Seek the peace (or welfare) of the city to which I have caused you to be led away, and pray for it to the Lord; for when it goes well for them, it shall go well for you also. The second proof is taken from Baruch, cap. 1, v. 10, 11, where it is reported that the Jews who had been held captive in Babylon sent money to Jerusalem to purchase all manner of offerings therewith, and requested therewith that the priests and other Jews in Jerusalem should pray for the life of King Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, and for the life of Belshazzar his son. The third proof is taken from Ezra, cap. 6, v. 9, 10, inasmuch as King Darius had commanded that the Jews in Jerusalem be supplied with all necessities, so that they might offer sacrifices to God and pray for the life of the king and his children. The fourth proof is taken from the Talmudic tractate Taanith, cap. 9, where it is written that when the Samaritans had requested of King Alexander the Great and had petitioned him that, on account of their temple which they had built on Mount Gerizim, he should destroy the temple in Jerusalem, Simon the Just said to him: should these heathens lead you astray, so that you might destroy the place in which we pray for you and your kingdom? Of the very same content are also the remaining six proofs. Upon all of this, the aforementioned Rabbi Asarja writes further, fol. 170, col. 1, as follows: ואמנם מה שהוא יותר מזה כי לא בלבד על המלכות המושלת בנו אבל על יתר המלכויות גם כן אשר בימי ממשלתנו היו במספר נפקד והאזהבים אותנו לא סרו אבותינו מלבקש עליהם תחנה כמו שתמצא בראשון מספר החשמונאים פרק י"ב כי יונתן כהן גדול כאשר כרת ברית עם שררת הספארציאטי באמרם כי יען היו בני אברהם נמצאו עצמם ובשרם של היהודים כתב אליהם כזאת אנחנו בימי החגים זוכרים אתכם That is: But what is yet more than this is that our forefathers prayed to God not only for the realm that ruled over us, but likewise also for the kingdoms which, in the time of our dominion, were of counted (that is, lesser) number and loved us, just as you find in the first book of the Hasmoneans (that is, the Maccabees), cap. 12, v. 11: for the high priest Jonathan, when he had made a covenant with the rulers of Sparta, and they had said that, since they (the Spartans) were descendants of Abraham, the Jews were their bone and flesh (that is, their blood relations), he wrote to them as follows: We remember you in the feast days through the sacrifices, as it befits us to remember our brothers. After this there follows further in the same place: ועוד יותר מזה כי לא על האדונים והאזהבים בלבד אבל גם על יושבי תבל כלם אנחנו מתפללים That is: Beyond this still, we pray to God not only for the lords and for those who love us, but also for all the inhabitants of the world, that He may be merciful to them, etc. Finally, he mentions yet further in the second column of the said 170th folio: וכן המנהג אשר להוספת חיוזק נמצא בקצת הקהלות לברך את שריהם וכל אכזריהו הוא באמת מנהג ותיקון למצוא חנינה בעיני אלהים ואדם חן ושכל: That is: Thus also, for further confirmation of this, the custom is found in some congregations that they bless their princes and all their harsh (rulers). This is certainly a custom and an ordinance through which one finds grace and understanding in the eyes of God and of men. Thus far are the words of Rabbi Asarja.

The latter assertion could further be supported by the fact that in some Jewish prayer books there is a prayer for the authorities, which is to be found in the large prayer book printed here in Frankfurt am Main in the year 448 according to the Jewish reckoning, that is, in the year 1688 A.D., called by the Jews the thick Tefillah, at fol. 69, col. 4, under the title Shacharit schel schabbath (or Shacharit schel schabbas), and reads as follows: הנותן תשועה למלכים וממשלה לנסיכים מלכותו מלכות כל העולמים הפוצה את דוד עבדו מחרב רעה הנותן בים דרך ובמים עזים נתיבה הוא יברך וישמור וינצור ויעזור וירומם ויגדל וינשא למעלה את אדונינו פלוני בן פלוני ירום הודו: מלך מלכי המלכים ברחמיו יחייהו וישמריו מכל צרה ויגון ונזק יצילהו וידבר עמים תחת רגליו ויפיל שונאיו לפניו ובכל אשר יפנה יצליח: מלך מלכי המלכים ברחמיו יתן בלבו ובלב כל יועציו ושריו רחמנות לעשות טובה עמנו ועם כל ישראל בימיו ובימינו ובימינו: That is: He who gives salvation to kings and dominion to princes, whose kingdom extends over all the world, who delivered His servant David from the evil sword, who made a path in the sea and a trail through the mighty waters, may He protect and preserve, and help, and raise up, and make great, and exalt our lord N., the son of N. (here they customarily insert the name of their territorial ruler), whose glory be exalted. The King of kings of all kings, may He in His mercy grant him life and preserve him from all misery, distress, and harm, and deliver him, and bring the peoples under his feet, and cause those who hate him to fall before him, and grant him success everywhere he turns. The King of kings of all kings, may He in His goodness place in his heart, and in the heart of all his counselors and princes, compassion to do good to us and to all Israel. In his days and in our days may Judah be redeemed, and may Israel dwell in safety, and may the Redeemer (that is, the Messiah) come to Zion; and thus be Thy will, and let us say Amen.

Rabbi Salman Zevi also presents, in his little book which he calls the Jewish Theriac, number 1, in the third chapter, fol. 16, col. 1, 2, and fol. 17, col. 1, 2, and fol. 18, col. 1, sixteen proofs by which he seeks to defend the Jews against the charge that they curse the Christian authorities; among these are included the ten which appear in the aforementioned Rabbi Asarja's book Me'or enájim, and it is also noted therein that in the Pirke avóth, or Chapters of the Fathers, in the third chapter, it is written: רבי חנינא סגן הכהנים אומר הוי מתפלל בשלומה בשלומה, That is: Rabbi Channína, who was the most distinguished among the priests after the high priest, said: pray for the welfare of the realm (that is, of the king), for if the fear of it were not present, one man would swallow another alive. Furthermore, the aforementioned Rabbi Salman Zevi states in the said Jewish Theriac, fol. 23, col. 1, in the fourth chapter, number 4, against the convert Samuel Friedrich Brenz, as follows: "He writes that we curse and revile them secretly with false words. Yet it stands in the Law (Lev 19:14): you shall not curse the deaf, or in an unknown tongue which he does not understand (wishing him evil). No one is excepted, whether he be a Jew or a Goi, that is, a Christian: cursing is forbidden. It stands alongside that passage, Lev 19:14: for you shall fear your God, since I am the Lord, (that is) you shall fear your God, who knows everything that you say." He writes likewise also at number 5 in the aforementioned fourth chapter, fol. 23, col. 2. And in the following fol. 24, col. 1, number 8, he states that it is strictly forbidden to curse a Christian, and that no honorable Jew does such a thing. He also writes still more against such accusations at the beginning of the fifth chapter in the same place, fol. 28, col. 1, number 1.

All of this appears so plausible that anyone who is not better informed on the matter could be persuaded by it: that the Jews in general wish Christians no ill, do not curse them, and are to be entirely acquitted of such an accusation. But notwithstanding all such specious objections, I shall set forth the contrary forcefully and with irrefutable proofs. As for those arguments which, as mentioned above, Rabbi Asarias adduces in his book Meór enájim, and Rabbi Salman Zevi in his Jüdischer Theriack, by which they seek to prove that the Jews are obligated and duty-bound to pray for the welfare of the great rulers of the world and of their subjects, these arguments are of no help to the Jews whatsoever; for the question is not whether they are bound and obligated to call upon God and pray for the welfare of the high authorities and their subjects in the land where they dwell, or also for those who reside elsewhere, but rather whether they actually do so in practice. They ought indeed to do so, according to the command of Jer 29:7 and according to the example of the Jews who lived in former times, but they do nothing less than this: for if it were observed by them as is claimed, it would necessarily be evident from their customary prayer books, printed in great numbers, which they use in their synagogues and at home. But I find in all such books not the slightest trace of this, apart from the prayer mentioned just above, which they offer for the high potentates and authorities, and which is performed very rarely at that, and stands in their books more for appearance's sake than for genuine, earnest use; for if they were required to pray it diligently and seriously, it would be found in all their regular prayer books, which is not the case. Their poor earnestness in praying for the welfare of a Christian emperor, king, prince, or lord is also as clear as the sun from the conclusion of that prayer, in which they petition as follows: "In his days and in our days may Judah be redeemed, and may Israel dwell in safety, and may the Redeemer (that is, the Messiah) come to Zion." For Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel teaches in his book Maschmía jeschúa, fol. 61, col. 4: כל גאולה שנאמרה, לִישְׂרָאֵל עִם מַפְלֵת אֲדוֹם, That is: the entire redemption of which mention is made to the Israelites (in Holy Scripture) will come about with the fall (or destruction) of Edom (that is, Christendom). And in Rabbi David Kimchi's commentary on Isa 63:1, the handwritten copies read: בַּחֲרֹבַן רוֹמִי תִהְיֶה תְּשׁוּעָה, יִשְׂרָאֵל, That is: the redemption of Israel will come when Rome (or the Roman Empire) is laid waste. The same appears likewise in his commentary on Obadiah. can be found below. The rabbis also teach, as can be seen further below in the 14th chapter of this second part, that at the coming of the Messiah a mighty war will take place between the Christians and the Jews, in which all Christians are to be killed by them, such that not a single one will remain anywhere in the entire world. In that very same prayer, therefore, in which they petition for the welfare of such a high authority, they also call upon God to let the Messiah come, so that all of Christendom may soon be destroyed and laid waste, and so that they may murder such a high authority, together with his Christian subjects, in a barbarous manner, and defile their godless hands in the innocent blood of the same. From this one can see with what kind of devotion such a prayer is offered.

In order to thoroughly convict the Jews of their godless crime and inexcusable cursing of all Christians without distinction, I will report here, one after another, everything that is found on this subject in their own prayer books, which they use throughout all of Germany. In the prayers which they perform daily, they call upon God with the words of David, Ps 24:1-2, as can be seen in the quarto prayer book printed here in Frankfurt am Main, which the Jews call the thick Tefillah, fol. 9, col. 1, under the title Shacharit (or Shacharit), in the prayer which begins: Hodu ladonai, Kiru bishmo, where they say: אֵל, נִקְמוֹת י"י הוֹפִיעַ הַנֶּשֶׁא שׁוֹפֵט הָאָרֶץ הַשֶּׁב גְּמוּלָה עַל גֹּאֲוִים, That is: O God, Lord to whom vengeance belongs, God to whom vengeance belongs, appear. Arise, thou Judge of the world: repay the proud according to their desert, by which they ask God that He would take vengeance upon the Christians, who are called the proud or the haughty, as was demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, who have greatly persecuted them and killed many of them, concerning which the Polish Siddurim, fol. 13, col. 1, may be consulted in the commentary under the title Shacharit. Therefore Rabbi Bechai writes in his book Cad hakkemach, fol. 19, col. 4: הבטיחנו עוד שיקום נקמתנו מן האומות שרדפנו: והוא שאמר ונתן י"י אלהיך את כל האלות האלה על אויביך ועל שונאיך אשר רדפוך והם השמיים, That is: He (namely Moses) has further assured us that He (understand: God) will take vengeance on our behalf upon the nations that have persecuted us, and this is what he said (Deut 30:7): But all these curses the Lord your God will lay upon your enemies and upon those who hate you and who persecute you. And thus he mentioned: your enemies and those who hate you; your enemies are the children of Esau (that is, the Christians, as was demonstrated above in the sixteenth chapter of the first part), and those who hate you are the children of Ishmael (that is, the Turks). Concerning such vengeance, the following is also read in Abarbanel's book Maschmia jeschúa, fol. 31, col. 3: כאשר תהיה נקמת האומות יתחברו שני הדברים: יחד חרב איש באחיו ביניהם ואש וגפרית ורוח זלעפות מאת ה' מן השמים וכמו שאמר יחזקאל וקראתי עליו לכל הרי חרב נאם ה' אלהים חרב איש באחיו ונשפתי אתו בדבר ובדם וגשם שוטף ואבני אלגביש אש וגפרית אמטיר עליו ועל זה אמר כאן כי באש ה' נשפט רוצה לומר אש וגפרית מלמעלה ובחרבו את כל בשר שהוא חרב האומות איש ברעהו ובוזה האופן ירבו חללי ה' ואמנם מה יהיו האומות אשר תהיה הנקמה בהם באר באמרו המתקדשים והמטהרים אל הגנות כי הנה אמר מתקדשים ומטהרים על הישמעאלים שהם מראים עצמם קדושים וטהורים ברוב רחיצתם וגו' ועל הנוצרים אמר אוכלי בשר החזיר השקך והעכבר לפי שאוכלים כל בשר הטמא והטהור יחדיו ועל שניהם רוצה לומר הישמעאלים והנוצרים אמר יחדיו יסופו להיות, That is: When vengeance comes upon the nations of the world, two things will come together at once: they will use the sword against one another among themselves, and from heaven the Lord will send fire, brimstone, and a stormy wind upon them; just as Ezekiel (Ezek 38:21-22) said: I will also call for a sword against him upon all my mountains, says the Lord God, so that every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will judge him with pestilence and with blood, and I will rain upon him and upon his bands and upon the many peoples that are with him an overflowing shower and great hailstones, fire and brimstone. Therefore he said here that the Lord will judge with fire, that is, with fire and brimstone from above, and with His sword, which is the sword of the nations that they will use against one another, He will judge all flesh, by which means the slain of the Lord shall be many (concerning which Isa 66:16 is to be read). But which nations these are upon whom such vengeance shall come, he (the prophet Isaiah, v. 17 of the cited chapter 66) has explained when he says: Those who sanctify themselves and purify themselves in the gardens; for see, he says the words "who sanctify themselves and purify themselves" of the Ishmaelites (that is, the Turks), who present themselves as holy and pure through their frequent bathing, etc. But of the Christians he says: those who eat swine's flesh, the abomination, and the mouse, because they eat all manner of flesh, unclean and clean alike. And of both of these, namely the Ishmaelites and the Christians, he said: they shall come to an end together and be exterminated by terror. Something further on this subject may also be found in the aforementioned Abarbanel's commentary on the third chapter of the prophet Joel, fol. 242, col. 1.

That God will also take vengeance on the Christians at the time of the coming of the Messiah is likewise to be seen from the book Zerór hammór, fol. 37, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajéze, where it is written as follows: באותו זמן יתגלה ה' לעשות נקמה באדום דכתיב מי זה בא מאדום חמוץ בגדים מבצרה וגומר פורה דרכתי לבדי וזהו ככם ביין לבושו וכדם ענבים סותה. that is, At that same time the Lord will reveal Himself to execute His vengeance upon Edom, as it is written (Isa 63:1, 3): Who is this that comes from Edom, with sprinkled garments from Bozrah? etc. I have trodden the winepress alone. And this is what is read (Gen 49:11): He will wash his garment in wine, and his cloak in the blood of grapes. In a handwritten commentary on the great prayer book used only on feast days, which is called Machsor, I also found the following written: חייבת ישרם לה גמולה כדכתיב הנה אלהיכם נקם יבא גמול אלהים הוא יבא ויושיעכם: that is, When the Holy and Blessed God takes vengeance on wicked Rome, He will repay it in kind, as it is written (Isa 35:4): Behold, your God comes for vengeance, and for recompense. God Himself comes, and will redeem you. And in another place of the aforementioned handwritten commentary I read: כאדם הנותר איבת שונאו בלבו עד יראה מקומו לנקום כך הק"ה נותר בלבו איבתו של עשו ושומר לו מועד לנקום בליל פסח שבונים אנו עתידין להגאל את תיראו עת תראו מפלת שונאיכם: זה חלקכם יום נקם: that is, Fear not, you will see the time of the downfall of your haters; their portion will be the day of vengeance, the year of recompense, for the strife over your city (namely the city of Jerusalem which was destroyed); and a great slaughter will take place upon that people which laid waste to my dwelling that was among you (that is, my Temple). By the haters, however, the Christians are to be understood, as was shown in the first part, in the 15th chapter. And because the Romans destroyed the city of Jerusalem and the Temple, and all of Christendom is regarded by the Jews as Romans, vengeance is also to be executed upon all of them, and they are to be put to death. We see therefore from all of this that the vengeance which the Jews call upon God to bring about using the cited words of David is to fall upon the Christians in general.

For such revenge they also pray to GOD on their Day of Atonement, in a prayer which begins Ribbon col haolámim mélech málke hammeláchim, which stands in the aforementioned thick Tefillah fol. 50, col. 2. under the title Schácharith, and this is done with the following words: ותזכני לראות בביאת : that is, Make me also worthy to see the coming of Your Messiah, and avenge the vengeance of Your people, the house of Israel, and the vengeance of the shed blood of Your servants, speedily and in our days. There also stands in the aforementioned thick Tefillah under the title Shacharit schel Shabbat fol. 68, col. 3. a little prayer which they pray every Sabbath, and which reads as follows: רחם על ציון כי היא בית חיינו לעלובת נפש תושוע ותנקום נקם במהרה בימינו ברוך אתה יי' משמח ציון בבניה: שמחנו יי' אלהינו באליהו הנביא עבדך ובמלכות בית דוד משיחך במהרה יבא ויגל לבנו על כסאו לא ישב זר ולא ינחלו עוד אחרים את כבודו כי בשם קדשך נשבעת לו . that is, Have mercy upon Zion, for it is the dwelling of our life: save her who is despised in soul, and avenge the vengeance speedily, in our days. Blessed art Thou, O LORD, who dost gladden Zion with her children. Gladden us, O LORD our GOD, with the prophet Elijah, Your servant, and with the kingdom of the house of David, Your Messiah: let him come speedily, so that our heart may rejoice. Upon his throne shall no stranger sit, and others (that is, the Christian and other high potentates) shall no longer possess his honor (and rule in the world): for You have sworn to him by Your holy name that his light shall never be extinguished. Blessed art Thou, O LORD, shield of David. In this little prayer one can see how excellently they pray for the Christian authorities, in that they call upon GOD to have their dominion entirely taken from them through their supposed Messiah.

Furthermore, on the Sabbath before Pentecost, as can be seen in the aforementioned thick Tefillah fol. 70, col. 1. 2. under the title Shacharit schel Shabbat, they pray a prayer which reads from beginning to end as follows: אב הרחמים שוכן במרומים ברחמי העצומים הוא יפקוד ברחמים החסידיים והישרים והתמימים קהלות הקודש שמסרו נפשם על קדושת השם הנאהבים והנעימים בחייהם ובמותם לא נפרדו מנשרים קלו ומאריות גברו לעשות רצון קונם וחפץ צורם: יוכם אלהינו לטובה עם שאר צריקי עולם וינקום בימינו בְּיָמֵינוּ נִקְמָת דָּם עֲבָדֶיךָ הַשְּׁפוּךְ בְּפֶתַח בְּתוּרַת מִשְׁחָה אִישׁ הָאֱלֹהִים הִרְגִּינוּ גֹּיִם עַמּוֹ כִּי דָם עֲבָדֶיךָ יִקּוּם וְנִקְמָת יִשְׁיב לְצַרְיָו וְכָפַר אֲדָמָתוֹ עַמּוֹ: וְעַל יְדֵי עֲבָדֶיךָ הַנְּבִיאִים כָּתוּב לֵאמֹר וְנִקְיִיתִי דָמָם לֹא נִקְיִיתִי נִי שׁוֹכֵן בְּצִיּוֹן: וּבִכְתָּבִי הַקּוֹדֵשׁ נֶאֱמַר לְמָה יֹאמְרוּ הַגִּוִּים אֵיךְ נָא אֱלֹהֵיהֶם יִנְדְּעוּ בַּגּוֹיִם לְעִנְיָנוּ נִקְמָת דָּם עֲבָדֶיךָ הַשְּׁפוּךְ: וְאֹמַר כִּי דוֹרֵשׁ דָּמִים אוֹתָם זָכַר וְלֹא שָׁכַח צַעֲקַת עַנְוִים: וְאֹמַר יְדִין בַּגּוֹיִם מְלֵא גְיוֹת מִסַּחַר רֹאשׁ עַל מְנַחֵל בְּדָרֶךְ יִשְׁתָּה עַל כֵּן יָרִים רֹאשׁ : אֶרֶץ רַבָּה . That is: The Father of mercies, who dwells on high, may He in His great grace graciously visit the pious, and the upright, and the innocent, the holy congregations who gave up their lives for the sanctification of His name, and who were beloved and pleasing, and who in their life and death did not depart from Him, who were swifter than eagles and stronger than lions in doing the will of their Creator and the pleasure of their Rock. May our God remember them and the rest of the righteous of the world for good, and in our days, before our eyes, avenge the shed blood of His servants, as is written in the Law of Moses, the man of God (Deut 32:43): Shout for joy, all you who are His people, for He will avenge the blood of His servants, and will take vengeance upon His enemies, and will make atonement for His land and His people. Just as it is also written through the hands of His servants the prophets (Joel 3:21): Should I leave their blood unavenged? I will not leave it unavenged. And the LORD dwells in Zion. And as it is said in the Hagiographa (Ps 79:10): Why should the heathen now say, where is their God? Let it become known among the heathen, before our eyes, the vengeance of the blood of your servants that has been shed. So also says (King David, Ps 9:13): For He, namely the LORD, inquires after the blood of those whose blood has been shed innocently, and remembers them, and does not forget the cry of the meek. And furthermore he says (Ps 110:6-7): He will judge among the heathen; He will fill all things with dead bodies; He will shatter the head over many lands. He will drink from the brook along the way; therefore He will lift up His head.

The reason why the Jews call upon God for vengeance on account of shed blood is that, in former times, a great many of them were persecuted by Christians for various reasons and put to death in many different ways. Concerning this, one may read in the aforementioned thick Tefillah, p. 49, col. 1-2, under the title Shacharit, in a prayer which they recite when they go to the burial place of their supposed departed saints, the words reading as follows: רבון העולמים אדון כל הנשמות רצני וקבלני בתשובה שלימה לפניך ושמע החינתי וקבלתי ועשה בקשתי למען הקדושים וההרוגים והצדיקות והצדיקים גדולים וקטנים שנהרגו ונשחטו ונשרפו ונחנקו ונתלו ונתיישבו על האופנים ונקברו חיים ונתחנקו על יחודך ושלקחו כל מיתות משונות ושפכו דם כמים על קידוש שמך ובכלל שנפטרו בשמך הגדול ויחוד שמך כי למען כבודם באתי הנה להתפלל על נשמתם וגופם שכולם ינוחו בגן עדן עם אברהם יצחק ויעקב That is: O Ruler of the worlds and Lord of all souls, be pleased with me and receive me, as I come before You in complete repentance, and hear my supplication and my prayer, and grant my petition on account of the holy and the slain, and on account of the righteous men and women, great and small, who were killed (by the sword) and drowned and burned and slaughtered and hanged and broken on the wheel and buried alive and strangled for the sake of Your unity, and who endured every manner of death and shed their blood like water for the sanctification of Your name, and in general all those who died in Your great name and in the unity of Your name. For in their honor I have come here to pray for their souls and bodies, that they all may rest in Paradise with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, &c. Concerning such killing and slaying, over which the Jews call upon God in lamentation, much more may also be read in the aforementioned thick Tefillah, fol. 42 and 43, under the title Suláth leschabbáth lifné schevuóth. Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel writes in his book Maschmía jeschúa, fol. 45, col. 1, on the words of Ezek 36:13, "Thus says the Lord: because they say to you, you are a devourer of men," concerning such killing and slaying, in the following manner: נבואה הזאת נאמרה לפי דעתי על הגלות הזה בין בני אדום שמוציאים דבה על בני ישראל שהורגים את ילדיהם כדי לאכול מדמם בחג הפסח והיה זה That is: This prophecy is, in my opinion, spoken of this exilium or misery in which we find ourselves among the children of Edom (that is, the Christians), who spread an evil report about the children of Israel (and assert of them) that they kill their children in order to eat their blood at their Passover feast, and this has been the cause of a mighty destruction and slaying among our people (in that the Christians, on account of such accusations, have killed a great many of them). May God avenge our vengeance.

Concerning the cause of such vengeance against the Christians, he also mentions something further in the aforementioned book Maschmía jeschúa fol. 7, col. 2. And at fol. 59, col. 3. he expresses himself concerning the vengeance for the destroyed Temple and the persecutions as follows: כבר בארתי בספר מעיני הישועה שהיו לאמונת הנוצרים שתי ראשים או אמור ההתחלות קוסטנטינא ורומי ועל שתיהן נבא כאן ירמיה וזה כולו מטה שיוכיח שהנבואה הזאת היא עתידה להתקיים בכל ארץ הנוצרים שהם מאומת בני אדום ואמנם יחזקאל נבא גם כן כה אמר ה' יען עשות אדום בנקום נקם לבית יהודה ויאשמו אשום ונקמו בהם לכן כה אמר ה' אלהים ונטיתי ידי על אדום והכרתי ממנה אדם ובהמה וגו' ונתתי את נקמתי באדום ביד עמי ישראל ועשו באדום כאפי וכחמתי וידעו את נקמתי נאם ה' אלהים והנבואה הזאת מחויב שנפרשה לעתיד לבא ועל רומי וכלל הנוצרים כיון שאמר יען עשות אדום בנקום נקם לבית יהודה שזה נאמר על חרבן בית שני שעשו הרומיים ולפי שהם היו בברית עם בני יהודה וילחמו בהם כאויבים לכן אמר ויאשמו אשום וכנגד מה שעשו בהם בגלות מהשמרות והגזרות אמר עוד ונקמו בהם ואמר שיכרית מאדום אדם ובהמה וידוע שזה לא היה בימי נבוכנאצר ולא בימי הורקטס ואמר גם כן שתהיה נקמת אדום ביד עם ישראל ואין זה אלא מה שקבלו חז"ל שאמרו שמסורה היא בידם שאין עשו נופל אלא ביד בני בניה של רחל והענין שבאותה המלחמה אשר ילחמו בהם משפחות צפונה יצאו בני ישראל ומשיח בן יוסף בראשם ויעשו באדום באף ובחמה ובקצף גדול נקמה עצומה *גם נבא יחזקאל נבואה שנית על הר שער ואמר עריך חרבה אשים ואתה שממה תהיה וגו' יען היות לך איבת

That is: I have already explained in the book Majene jeschúa that the faith of the Christians had two heads, or, to put it another way, two origins, namely Constantinople and Rome, and concerning both of these Jeremiah has here prophesied (namely Lam 4:21-22); and all of this indicates that this prophecy (meaning the prophecy of the prophet Obadiah, which Abarbanel is treating) must in the future be fulfilled in all the lands of the Christians, who are of the nation of the children of Edom. Likewise the (prophet) Ezekiel (Ezek 25:12-14) also prophesied thus: Thus says the Lord: because Edom took vengeance on the house of Judah and incurred great guilt in that they took vengeance upon them, therefore thus says the Lord God: I will stretch out my hand over Edom and will cut off from it both man and beast, etc. I will execute my vengeance upon Edom through my people Israel, and they shall deal with Edom according to my anger and according to my wrath, so that they shall know my vengeance, says the Lord God. This prophecy we must necessarily interpret as referring to the time to come, and to Rome, and to all of Christendom, because he says: because Edom took vengeance on the house of Judah; for this is said concerning the destruction of the Second Temple, which the Romans carried out. And because they had been in a covenant with the children of Judah and yet waged war against them as enemies, he therefore says: and incurred great guilt.

And with regard to what they did to them in the exile, or misery, through persecutions and severe decrees, he further states that they took vengeance upon them, and says that he wishes to exterminate man and beast from Edom. Now it is well known that this occurred neither at the time of Nebuchadnezzar nor at the time of Hyrchanus. He also states that the vengeance against Edom shall come about through the Israelite people, and this is nothing other than that which our Sages, of blessed memory, have learned through tradition, or oral teaching, who say that it is a tradition among them that Esau (that is, Christendom, as was demonstrated above in the 17th chapter of the first part) shall fall by no other means than by the hand of the children of Rachel. The meaning, however, is that in that war in which the nations from the north shall wage war against them (namely, the Christians), the children of Israel shall come forth, and the Messiah, the son of Joseph, shall march before them, and they shall take mighty vengeance upon Edom in the greatest wrath, fury, and bitterness. So too did Ezekiel prophesy the second prophecy against Mount Seir (that is, Christendom, as was indicated in the aforementioned 17th chapter of the first part), and said (Ezek 35:4-5): I will make your cities desolate, so that you shall become a wasteland, etc. Because you have borne eternal enmity, and have struck down the children of Israel with the sword at the time of their downfall.

We see, therefore, from these words of Abarbanel, that vengeance is to come upon all of Christendom on account of the Temple destroyed by the Romans and the persecutions of the Jews that have taken place here and there under the Christians. For this reason, the Jews also have, on the first Sabbath after their Passover feast, as may be read in the aforementioned thick Tefillah fol. 40, col. 4. and fol. 41, col. 1. under the title פסח אחר הפסח Súláth leschábbath riscón ácher happésach, a prayer which reads from beginning to end as follows: גאלתם. אזכיר דודי מארץ ירדן וחרמונים בנוול מסות אשר הפלאת קדמונים. גאלתם בזרוע והצללתם כמה מונים דמינו עתה בגולה כמתי אשמנים. הדיחני הארי וישרב עצם עצמי והצללני מפיו לפי מלאות ימי. זבני הרוב וגרם גרמי הצללתי מידו ודרשת דמי. טרף נמר. ופרץ היכלי יעץ סבית וסחוף לשכלי כילית אפיו בשמעת קולי לגיוזיו מחצת ותושעת קהלי מכולם ותקף חזיר הבר ניאץ וחירף ועד כוכבים גבר. סלני כרסנטי ולכלותי סיבר. עירער זבולך ועד היסוד עבר. פק פליליה ושנה עוז דתי. צווי לכחש יחוד עדתי. קונך דיעצור כח לעומתי רפתני הבירו והגני בקומתי שמעת חרפתם אל תחרש לריבי שבעתים השב אל חיק מריבי תבע גאולתי דודי וקרובי החיש לי טפלט עמך לערבי מסחצבת רהב העירה עוז נקם תשכיה. סכתי לחבוש. לדוך פורה בגדי נקם הלבש מלוכה לאורך das ללבוש. שחץ ערינה That is: My beloved, I will remember you from the land of the Jordan and Hermon, from the great trials which you performed in a wondrous manner for the ancients. You redeemed them by (your) arm and saved them many times over. We are now in exile or captivity, like the dead who are in the wilderness. The lion (that is, the Babylonian kingdom, as is to be found in Vajikra rabba, in the thirteenth Parascha, fol. 146, col. 3. 4. and as is to be seen in the seventh chapter of Daniel) drove me and broke my bones; but you rescued me from its jaws, so that my days might be fulfilled. The bear (that is, the Median kingdom) struck at me from behind and crushed my bones; but you delivered me from its power and demanded my blood. The leopard (that is, the Greek kingdom) tore and broke my Temple and took counsel within and without to bereave me of my children; but you destroyed its army when you heard my voice, and struck down all its warriors, and saved my congregation. The wild boar (that is, the Roman kingdom, by which all of Christendom is to be understood, as was shown in the aforementioned seventeenth chapter of the first part) is mightier than all of these: it has reviled and blasphemed, and has grown powerful up to the stars. It has trampled and laid me waste, and intended to destroy me. It has laid waste to your dwelling (that is, the Temple) and gone down to the very foundation. It has stumbled in judgment and altered the strength of my religion. It has commanded me to deny the unity of my congregation (that is, the one God in whom the Jewish church believes), and has said to me: does your Creator have any power over me? I have entered His choir (of the Temple) and yet still stand (in my former state, and nothing evil has therefore befallen me on that account). You have heard their reviling: do not keep silent concerning my dispute; repay those who contend with me sevenfold into their bosom. My beloved and my kinsman, seek my redemption; cause me quickly to have a refuge, that a surety may be provided for me against the crushing pride (of Christendom). Rouse up your strength to clothe yourself with vengeance. Destroy the wild beast, the Adina (that is, the voluptuous one, by which Christendom is to be understood, as was shown above in the seventeenth chapter of the first part), to bind my wounds; clothe yourself with the garments of vengeance to tread the winepress. Clothe yourself with the garments of vengeance, to glorify yourself with royal dominion, just as you did when the waters of the Red Sea dried up. As for what is to be understood by the treading of the winepress, this is sufficiently to be seen from Isa 63:1-3 and the commentaries of Abarbanel, Rabbi David Kimchi, and also Aben Ezra thereon, who understand it as referring to Christendom, and they hold that the words of Isaiah indicate the future bloody extermination of all Christians and the vengeance that is to come upon them, and that the garment of the Avenger will be sprinkled with Christian blood and become entirely red thereby, as if one had trodden and pressed red grapes and had sprinkled his garment with the red must.

We can see from this prayer, then, that the Jews call upon God therein to avenge Himself upon all of Christendom on account of the Temple destroyed by the Romans, and on account of the severe persecutions they previously suffered under certain Christians, and that He would exterminate and destroy all Christians. But what concern is it of ours, what the Romans, who were pagans, did? Why should the vengeance of God also fall upon us and our descendants on account of those persecutions which they previously endured here and there throughout Christendom? We are entirely innocent of that. How does this also accord with the words cited above in this chapter from the book Maáseh haschéim by Rabbi Eliezer, where he reports that the Jews take care not to wish anything evil upon Christians and Turks, because they acknowledge God? For from this prayer the very opposite is plainly to be seen.

Furthermore, the Jews pray daily three times a prayer in their synagogues, which they call ברכת המינים Birchát (or Birchas) hammínim, that is, the prayer against the heretics, or the cursing of the heretics, or לברכת לשומדים Birchas lammeschummádím, that is, the prayer against the destroyers, or the baptized Jews, or ברכת צדוקים Birchas Zaddúkim, that is, the prayer against the Sadducees, or ברכת רשעים Birchas reschéim, that is, the prayer against the godless, or ברכת האפיקורוס Birchas haepicúrus, that is, the prayer against the Epicureans; and it is found at fol. 21, col. 3 of the aforementioned prayer book called the thick Tefillah, under the title Shacharit, whose words read as follows:

 That is: The malschinim, that is, the slanderers, shall have no hope, and all who act wickedly must perish in an instant, and all of them together shall be swiftly cut off. Humble them swiftly, and in our days. Blessed are You, O Lord, who breaks the enemies and humbles the arrogant. In that same prayer book, this little curse-prayer is also found at fol. 24, col. 3, under the title Józer lepúrim, though somewhat altered, and it reads there as follows: ולמלשינים אל תהי תקוה וכל המינים כרגע יאבדו וכל אויבי עמך : That is: The malschinim, or the slanderers, shall have no hope, and all heretics must perish in an instant, and all enemies of Your people shall be swiftly cut off; and humble them swiftly, in our days. In another small prayer booklet which I possess, in place of וכל המינים, that is, "and all heretics," one reads וכל הזרים, that is, "and all the arrogant"; but it is not complete in any of these three places, since something has been omitted out of fear of the Christians. In the second part of the Machsor printed in Prague, it is found at fol. 19, col. 1, under the title lepúrim, with the following words: ולמלשינים אל תהי תקוה וכל המינים כרגע יאבדו וכל אויבי עמך מהרה יכרתו : That is: The malschinim, or slanderers, shall have no hope, and all heretics must perish in an instant (or be destroyed), and all who forsake Your name shall be swiftly cut off. Uproot, break, and destroy, and humble the Malchúth sadón, that is, the arrogant Kingdom, swiftly, in our days. But in other old copies it stands fully complete in the following manner: ולמשומדים אל תהי תקוה וכל המינים כרגע יאבדו וכל אויבי 'עמך מהרה יכרתו ומלכות זדון תעקר ותשבר ותמגר ותכניעם במהרה בימינו ברוך אתה יי : That is: The meschummadím (that is, the destroyed ones, namely the baptized Jews) shall have no hope, and all heretics must perish in an instant, and all enemies of Your people shall be swiftly cut off. Uproot, break, and destroy the Malchúth sadón (or Mälchus sodon), that is, the arrogant Kingdom, and humble them swiftly, in our days. Blessed are You, O Lord, who breaks the wicked and humbles the arrogant. In this prayer, which the Jews pray three times every day, they call upon God that He might not only utterly uproot and destroy those Jews who adopt the Christian faith, who, as was shown in chapter 16 of the first part, are called meschummadím, that is, the destroyed ones, and malschinim, that is, slanderers, but also the entire Christian world, which, as was reported in chapter 17 of the first part, is called Malchúth sadón, that is, the arrogant Kingdom; as has been pointed out by several converts, such as Anthonio Margarita in his booklet called "The Whole Jewish Faith," at paginâ 246 &c., and Ferdinand Hessen in the first chapter of the third part of his "Jewish Scourge," as well as Dieterich Schwaben in the second part of his "Jewish Cloak," in the seventh chapter, paginâ 111; and confirmed by the highly learned Buxtorf in the tenth chapter of his "Jewish School," paginâ 209 &c. of the Latin edition.

When this is presented to the Jews, they are accustomed, in keeping with their frivolous habit, to make excuses and to twist the matter, as can be seen in Rabbi Lipmann's Sépher Nizzáchon, numero 348, paginâ 193, where it is written that a converted Jew named Peter, whom Rabbi Lipmann mockingly calls פטר חמור Péter chámor, that is, the firstborn of a she-ass, had reproached Rabbi Lipmann with this, but that he had answered him as follows: למשומדים אל תהי תקוה זהו אומרים כל הנוצרים כאחד שכל מי שנשתמד אינו יכול לחזור אחרי כן להיות יהודי לכן אין אוהביו וקרוביו יכולים לצפות ולקוות אחריו לאחר שנשתמד שיחזור עוד אליהם להיות יהודי הרי אין לו תקוה ומה שאנו אומרים וכל המינים כרגע יאבדו אם היה דעתנו על הכומרים אז היינו אומרים כמרים כמו שנאמר במלכים השני הכמרים וגו' או היינו אומרים הכהנים כמו שנאמר וחוק לכהנים וגו' אלא המינים לשון מיני זרעים או מיני אילנות וירוע אשר מין לשון יחיד ומינים לשון רבים ר"ל שני מינים והכי פי' בני אדם שהמה מסופקים בין אמונת היהודים ובין אמונת הגוים ופוסחים על שתי הסעיפים הרי אלה יאבדו כי אינם בכלל בני נח ואינם בכלל היהודים כי אותן נקראין בלשון אשכנז ורצו "יולד קע"צר :ומה שאנו אומרים וכל אויבי עמך מהרה יכרתו אמרתי אי אתה מודה שכל שבא נשמתו לחיי עד שהוא בכלל עם ה' . והרי אנחנו אומרים שכל העולם שהם בני נח כל מי שבהם שמקיים שבע מצוות יש לו חלק לעולם הבא וגו' וכל המקיים כשורה הרי הוא בכלל עם ה' : 'הרי אין אנו אומרים וכל אויבינו אלא וכל אויבי עמך כך אנו אומרים כלפי מעלה . והם אותם בעלי העבירות והמסופקים ששונאים לאלו הצדיקים שהם עם ה' בין שהמה יהודים בין שהמה גוים אנו אומרים עליהם שיכרתו ואפילו עליהם אין אנו אומרים שימותו אלא שיכרתו ר"ל שיוסר השנאה מלכם וזהו כריתת האויבים כי נכרת אהבתם :ומה שאנו אומרים ומלכות זרון תעקר ותשבר ותמגר וגו' הגע בעצמך הרי אנו אומרים בפרקי אבות ששנו ר"ל לאחר החרבן וצוו לנו בהם להתפלל בשלומה של מלכות וגו' וכתוב בירמיה התפללו בשלום העיר כי בשלומה יהיה לכם שלום :ואיככה יתקנו אנשי כנסת הגדולה בתפילה לקל המלכים •גם ראה שאין אנו אומרים מלכי הגוים תעקר או מלכי הנוצרים אלא מלכות זרון . והמה אותם שאינם מזרע המלוכה וממליכין מעצמם ועומדים בזדונם על המלכים הישרים לבטלם ומקלקלים המלכויות that is, (as regards the words:) The Mesummadamim, or the destroyed, shall have no hope; so say all Christians unanimously, that any (Jew) who has had himself baptized (in Hebrew it is called "destroyed") cannot afterward turn back and become a Jew again. Therefore his friends and relatives, after he has been baptized, can have no more hope in him that he will come back to them and become a Jew again: see, thus he has no hope. As for what we say, "And all Minim, or heretics, must perish in an instant" (or be destroyed): if we meant the priests by this (as you, Peter, claim, that we call them Minim, that is, heretics), then we ought to say "(and all) Kemarim," that is, idolatrous priests (must perish in an instant), as the word Kemarim is read in 2 Kgs 23:5. Or we ought to say the Cohanim, that is, priests, just as it is stated (in Gen 47:22): the Cohanim, that is, the priests, had their allotted portion. Likewise, the word minim also means kinds of seeds or kinds of trees; and it is well known that the word min (which means a kind) is of the Singularis numeri, whereas the word minim (which means kinds) is of the Pluralis numeri and signifies two kinds. The meaning, therefore, of the words "and all minim, or heretics, must perish in an instant" consists in this: that all people who stand in doubt between the Jewish faith and the faith of the Gójim (that is, the Christians), and who limp on both sides, will be lost, since they are comprised neither among the children of Noah nor among the Jews; for they are called in the German tongue desperate heretics. As for what we say, "And all enemies of your people must speedily be cut off," I said to him: do you not acknowledge that everyone whose soul enters into eternal life belongs to the people of God? Now see, we say that every one of the children of Noah throughout the whole world who observes the seven commandments (of Noah) has a share in the world to come (that is, in eternal life), etc. But whoever observes them rightly is comprised among the people of God. And see, we do not say "and all our enemies," but "all enemies of your people" (must be cut off), and we speak thus to God. Those enemies, however, are those sinners and doubters who hate the righteous, who are the people of God, whether they be Jews or Gójim; and we say of them that they shall be cut off: yet we do not say against them that they shall die, but that they shall be cut off, that is, that the hatred shall be taken from their hearts, and this is the cutting off of the enemies, when their enmity is cut off. As for what we say, "Uproot, break, and destroy the מלכות זדון Malchúth Sadón, that is, the arrogant kingdom," consider within yourself (and reflect upon) what we say in the Pirke avóth (or óvos, that is, the Chapters of the Fathers, in the third chapter), which our Rabbis, of blessed memory, taught after the destruction (of the city of Jerusalem) and commanded us therein to pray for the welfare of the kingdom, etc. So it is also written in Jeremiah (Jer 29:7): Pray for the peace of the city, for when it has peace, you also have peace. How then could the men of the Great Assembly (that is, Ezra, Zerubbabel, and their companions) have ordained in a prayer to curse the kings? See also that we do not say, "Uproot the kings of the Gójim (or heathens) or the kings of the Christians," but rather "the arrogant kingdom." These, however, are those who are not of royal lineage and who make themselves kings, and who in their arrogance rise up against the legitimate kings to drive them out, and (in such manner) corrupt the kingdoms and the lands; and for this reason such a thing is called an arrogant kingdom, and it is fitting that one should pray against them that they may be destroyed. These are the words of Rabbi Lipmann.

Rabbi Salman Zevi wishes, in his little book, the Jewish Theriack, which he wrote against the converted Samuel Friedrich Brenz's Jewish Shed Snakeskin, in the fifth chapter, numero 14, to excuse the Jews as well, and reports that those among them in Germany who convert to the Christian faith turn out like lemons in Moscow: one cannot endure the heavy burden and likes to eat rich morsels; another does not want to pay tolls; a third will not suffer having dice demanded of him; a fourth has a desire for a Christian woman, or hates his wife, and thinks by such means to be rid of his wife and to get another; for these reasons they let themselves be baptized, and afterward make books and pamphlets against the Jews, in order to show thereby that they are good Christians and enemies of the Jews, and they think to make them suspect so that they will be driven out. Upon this he now writes further with these words:

that is to say: Therefore we pray to God thus: And the Mesbummadim, that is, the baptized Jews, shall not have their hope fulfilled (but we do not curse them), and all heretics shall be lost in an instant. If we wanted to curse them, we would speak briefly and count them among the minim, that is, the heretics, and write: And the baptized Jews and heretics must be lost in an instant. We do not curse them; they have no need of a curse, for I say the greater part of them conduct themselves badly. When they first deny the Jewish faith, they have no more standing under the Jewish law. When they afterward run away again, travel to Constantinople or Venice, put on red hats, and present themselves once more as Jews, they then deny the Christians' law as well, and are stripped of both laws, and are true meschumadim and destroyers of both laws. Thus I interpret it for my own part: they desire to destroy the old law of their fathers and us; therefore they are meschumadím, etc. In many places one says (instead of) Velañeschummadím, Velammalschíním, that is, the traitors (shall have no hope), which applies to many baptized Jews, for they wish by force to be our traitors, like this apostate (Samuel Friedrich Brenz) and his kind; but enough of that here, etc. And as will be written further about it, we pray for the emperors, kings, and princes (whose glory be exalted) that the arrogant realm, that is, those who presumptuously set themselves up to become kings or emperors, to whom governance does not rightfully belong, shall soon be rooted out, broken, shattered, and made subject: as indeed in the year 1338 by the Christian reckoning, a rebel and arrogant man by the name of Armleder set himself up to be king, led many people astray, and stirred up war; whereupon a Selicha, or a prayer, was composed, in which a verse runs thus: Hasten swiftly, veámmim hádbber, that is, and lead the peoples (as Rabbi Salman Zevi doubtless intends it to be understood, since in the Chaldean tongue the word Adber means to lead), and strengthen the armies of our lords who rule over us, and break swiftly the Malchúth sadón, or arrogant realm. Thus you see how we pray for the authorities (whose honor be exalted) and call the rebels and seditious the Malchúth sadón, that is, the arrogant realm. These are the words of Rabbi Salman Zevi. He also writes in the second chapter, numerô 15, of his aforementioned little book, that the little prayer Birbáth hamminím was indeed composed in the time of Ezra, when there were still no Christians, and therefore the same cannot concern the Christians.

In the booklet Schévet Jehúda, it is read at fol. 65, col. 1, that a king in Spain said to a certain man named Versorius that he had been informed that the Jews in his kingdom pray to God that He would extirpate the proud kingdom, and invoke Him in such a manner that his realm might fall to ruin; and that he had asked this man whether it was indeed so, that the Jews do such a thing. Whereupon Versorius answered as follows: ועל שאלת אדונינו מעיני תפלת היהודים: מה שראיתי בכל הפירושים הוא שנאמר זה על עמלק אשר נצטוו היהודים שאם יהיה להם ממשלה יעקרוהו מן העולם ובזמן השעבוד לפחות לא ישכחוהו שכן אמר הבריביא מתחת השמים לא תשכח ונקרא מלכות זרון כי בזדון בא עליהם בצאתם ממצרים ולא הכיר נפלאות שעשה האל במה שכבר הודה פרעה הקשה ואמר ה' הצדיק וזה בא להוכיח המפורסם לכן כעס עליו האל כעס נפלא ואמר בספר הבריביא מלחמה לה 'בעמלק והשכל כן גזור כי איך יתפללו לעקירת מלכות אדוננו והם ג' פעמים בשבוע מוציאין ספר תורה ומתפללים עליך שתחיה ויגדל כסאך ובליל נורא שיש להם קראוהו כפורים ומוציאין כל ספרי תורה שבהיכלם ומתחננים על שלום המלך וכן באשמורות אומרים בתחנון תן שלום במלכות ואין סותרים את עצמם בתפלתם: that is, as for the question of our Lord concerning the prayer of the Jews (in which they call upon God that He would extirpate the proud kingdom), so much as I have seen in all Commentariis, or expositions, on the subject, this is said of Amalek, concerning whom the Jews have been commanded that, when they have dominion, they shall extirpate him from the world, but during the time of their servitude (that is, when they are subject to other peoples and have no power), they shall at the very least not forget it; for it is said (Deut 25:19): "You shall blot out the memory of Amalek" under heaven: "do not forget." He is called Malchúth sadón, or the proud kingdom, because he came against them in arrogance when they went out of Egypt, and did not acknowledge the wonders which God had done, which even the hard or severe Pharaoh had acknowledged, saying (Exod 9:27): "The Lord is righteous"; but this one (namely Amalek) came to contend against that which had been made manifest; therefore God was mightily angered against him, and it is said (Exod 17:16): "The Lord will war against Amalek." Reason also bears this out; for how should they pray for the extirpation of the kingdom of my Lord, seeing that three times a week they bring out the book of the Law and pray for him, that he may live and his throne be made greater? Moreover, on the dreadful night which they observe and call Kippúrim, that is, Atonement, they bring out all the books of the Law that are in their Héchal (which is a certain cabinet in their synagogue or school) and pray for the welfare of the king. And likewise in the morning they say in a prayer: "Give peace in the kingdom." How then should they be contrary to themselves in their prayer, and petition for two mutually contradictory things? Thus far are the words of the booklet Schévet Jehúda.

This is what the Jews put forward in their defense; but all of it is pure, cunning deception, intended to mislead those who know no better. Rabbi Lipmann claims that the words "the meschummadím," that is, the destroyed or apostate Jews, shall have no hope, are to be understood as meaning that the friends and relatives of an apostate have no more hope that he might return to them and become a Jew again. Rabbi Salman Zevi, however, interprets them to mean that the wish expressed therein is that the baptized Jews may not succeed in their hope of making the Jews hated and driving them away through the books and pamphlets they write against them. But both of their statements are false and fabricated, for the true meaning consists in this: that those who depart from them and embrace the Christian faith shall have no hope of salvation, as can be seen from what was cited at the end of the 16th chapter of the first part, from the Sepher amaná, and from Rabbi Lipmann's Sépher Nizzáchon, numero 346. Likewise, Rabbi Lipmann falsely states that the converted Jews are not cursed by the little prayer Bircháth hamminím, for it is indeed also called קללת המינים Killáth or Killas hamminím, that is, a cursing of the heretics, as can be read in the book Beér haggólah, fol. 44, col. 4, where it is written as follows: ענין הברכה הזאת מבוארת בעצמה שנקראת קללת המינים בכל מקום שנוכרה ברכה זאת בדברי חכמים לפי שנתקנה ברכה זאת על המבטלים הדת והמתנגדים זאת, אל הדת כמו שדברו שם שבשביל המינים נתקנה ברכה זאת, That is: the nature of this prayer is clear in itself, for wherever it is mentioned in the words of the Sages, it is called Killáth (or Killas hamminím, that is, the cursing of the heretics, since it is directed against those who seek to annul the (Jewish) religion and are opposed to it, as it is said there that this prayer was ordained on account of the heretics. Since the converted Jews are specifically called minim, that is, heretics, and are opposed to the Jewish religion, they are also cursed therein.

Regarding the words "And all minim or heretics must perish in an instant," Rabbi Lipmann would have us believe that this refers to those who stand in doubt between the Jewish faith and the faith of the Gôjim or Christians, who waver on both sides and are called desperate heretics. But this is fundamentally false, and it does not at all accord with the words cited above from the book Beér haggôla, fol. 44, col. 4. For by the word minim or heretics, one understands not only converted Jews but also all Christians, as has been demonstrated in detail in the 16th chapter of the first part, under the nineteenth name they give to Christians. Likewise, Rabbi Salman Zevi interprets the same words as referring to those who convert to the Christian faith, and these two deceivers do not even agree with one another.

The words "And all enemies of your people must be swiftly exterminated," the frivolous Rabbi Lipmann also wishes to interpret in a manner entirely different from what the plain sense requires, seeking to persuade us that by the extermination of the enemies of the Jews nothing other is prayed for than that the hatred and enmity which they have conceived against the Jews might be rooted out from their hearts. Yet the word "exterminate" is nowhere taken in such a sense, and what they desire and pray for by it is nothing other than that their enemies, namely the Christians, might be utterly wiped from the face of the earth.

Regarding the words "root out, break, and destroy the Malchúth fadón, or the arrogant kingdom," Rabbi Lipmann and Salman Zevi would have us believe that the Jews are hereby praying for the Christian emperors, kings, and high potentates, rulers, and authorities, and calling upon God that He might root out those who rise up against them and seek to seize power for themselves; and they claim that such rebels are what is called the arrogant kingdom. But this was not their sincere meaning; rather, with these words, just as with the preceding ones, they intended only to instruct the Jews in what they should answer to the Christians who reproach them with this curse-prayer, for by Malchúch fadón, or the arrogant kingdom, they understand the whole of Christendom and nothing else whatsoever, as has been demonstrated with the clarity of sunlight in the 17th chapter of the first part, under the fifteenth name they give to Christendom; and they call upon God with the aforementioned words that He might root out and destroy all of Christendom, just as they believe that all Christians, at the coming of their Messia, are to be slaughtered by them in a most terrible manner, so that not a single one shall remain, as will be thoroughly demonstrated in the 14th chapter of this second part.

The words which Rabbi Salman Zevi cites from a Selicha, or a prayer, supposedly composed against a former rebel named Armleder, who had set himself up as a king, in support of his false claim, are not intended for the Christians but are directed squarely against them, and must therefore be interpreted as follows: Eile geschwind / vehádber ámmim, that is, "and bring the peoples to ruin, and strengthen the armies of our lords who rule over us" (that is, the war-hosts of the Messiah, son of Joseph, and of the Messiah, son of David, both of whom will in succession fight against the Christians and other peoples and overcome them, as is shown at length below in the fourteenth chapter of this second part cited above), "and swiftly shatter the arrogant kingdom." That the words hádber ámmim mean "bring the peoples to ruin" is evident from Ps 47:4, from which they are taken, where it reads: יִדְּבֵר עַמִּים תַּחַת רַגְלֵינוּ Jádber ámmim tachténu, that is, as rendered in the Chaldean translation: "He (namely God) will destroy the peoples in our stead with the plague, and subdue the heathen under our feet." Rabbi Salomon Jarchi likewise interprets it thus in his Commentario: יִתֵּן דְּבַר בְּאוֹמוֹת תַּחַת נַפְשֵׁינוּ לְהוֹיֹת חֲמָתוֹ מִתְּקַרְרָה בָּהֶם וְאֵנוּ נִצְּוִלִים כַּעֲנִין שְׁנֹאֲמַר וְנִתֵּי כִפְּרָר מִצָּרִים, that is, "He will send the plague among the peoples in our stead, so that His wrath may be cooled (that is, appeased) through them, and we may be saved, as it is said" (Isa 43:3): "I have given Egypt as your ransom." From this it is therefore rationally to be judged that in the aforementioned Selicha nothing good is wished upon the Christians and other peoples. If, however, one wishes to interpret the words hádber ámmim with Aben Esra and certain other Jews as "lead the peoples" (namely, under us), then they signify, according to the content of the cited Psalm, "and make them subject to us," which is directly contrary to Christian authority, in that it prays that God would overthrow it and deliver it into the power of the Jews. On this manner of speaking, something may also be read at Ps 18:48.

Rabbi Lipmann further advances, in defense of the Jews, that the little prayer Birchas haminim does not curse the Christian high potentates, since Ezra and Zerubbabel, together with their companions, ordained it to be prayed, and these would not have acted contrary to the words of Jer 29:7: "Pray for the peace of the city," etc. Likewise, Rabbi Salman Zevi states, as mentioned, that it was composed in the time of Ezra, when there were still no Christians, and therefore it cannot concern the Christians. However, both of them have written against their better knowledge and conscience, for even though the prayer called Schemóne ésre is supposed, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, to have been instituted in the time of Ezra, the curse-prayer Birchas hamminim was only patched into it much later. For this reason Bechai writes about it in his book Cad hakkemach, fol. 79, col. 4, and fol. 80, col. 1, as follows: צריך אתה לדעת כי מימות משה רבינו עד אנשי כנסת הגדולה היתה התפלה בישראל בלתי מסודרת בתיקון שוה שהיה כל אחד ואחד עושה מליצה ומתפלל לעצמו כפי ידיעתו וחכמתו וצחות לשונו עד שבאו אנשי כנסת הגדולה תקנו תפלה זו של שמונה עשרה כדי שתהיה תפלה מסודרת שוה לכל ישראל ועל כן תקנו אותה בלשון פשוט ומובן יותר מדאי כדי שלא יתבלבלו הרעיונים בהבנת הלשון וכדי שיהיו כל ישראל שוין בה בין החכמים בין הטפשים וגו' ואחר כך תקנו ביבנה ברכת למשומדים כדי להשלים יג' ברכות באמצע שהם כלל כל צרכי בני אדם וכל זה לא היה במקרה כי אם בעיון גדול מוכרח ומוצרך that is, you must know that from the time of Moses our teacher, up to the men of the Great (Synagogue, that is, as mentioned above, of Ezra, Zerubbabel, and their companions), no prayer had been instituted among the Israelites that all would have in a common formula; rather, each one composed an elegant discourse and prayed for himself according to his knowledge, wisdom, and the elegance of his language, until the men of the Great Synagogue came and arranged the prayer Schemóne ésre, so that it would be an orderly prayer and common to all Israelites. For this reason they composed it in a wholly simple and intelligible language, so that the thoughts would not be confused in the understanding of the words, and so that all Israelites, both the wise and the unwise, would be treated equally by it (and they were to use it as their customary prayer formula), etc. After this, the Birchath lammeschummadin was instituted at Jabneh, that is, the prayer against the apostate or baptized Jews, in order thereby to complete the thirteen little prayers, which are the sum of all the necessities of mankind, in the middle (of the said prayer Schemóne ésre); and all of this did not happen by chance, but with great and necessary deliberation. We thus see from this that the little prayer Birchath hamminim was only composed after the prayer Schemóne ésre, in the city of Jabneh.

The truth of this stands even more clearly in the ordinary prayer book printed in Amsterdam in the year 5441 according to the Jewish reckoning, that is, 1681 according to our calendar, in quarto, which the Jews call the Polish Siddúrim, in which fol. 29, col. 2. under the title Schacharith, concerning the aforementioned little curse-prayer, it is written as follows: ברכת המינים אינה בחשבון י"ח כי לא תקנוה אנשי כנסת הגדולה אלא בימי הגאונים והוא כנגד מדת הגבורה That is: the Birchath hamminim, or prayer against the heretics, is not counted among the eighteen (little prayers called Schemóne ésre), for the men of the great Synagogue did not ordain it; rather, it was composed in the time of the Geónim, and indeed against the attribute of power. The very same thing is also to be read in the book Héchal hakkódesch fol. 17, col. 2. Rabbi David Gans also writes about this in the first part of his book Zémach David, numéro 788. fol. 25, col. 2. as follows: סנהדרין גלתה מירושלים ליבנה ארבעים שנה קודם חרבן הבית בשנת תש"פה ושם תקן שמואל ברכת המינים לפני רבן גמליאל הזקן כדאיתא בפרק קמא That is: the Sanhedrin, or high council, moved forty years before the destruction of the Temple, in the year 785, from Jerusalem to Jafna, and there (the Rabbi) Samuel ordained the (little prayer) Bircháth hamminím before the elder Rabban Gamaliel, as is mentioned in the first chapter (of the Talmudic tractate) Sanhédrin. So also in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth (or Beróchos) fol. 28, col. 2. it is written about this in the following manner: אמר רבי לוי ברכת הצדוקים ביבנה תקנה That is: Rabbi Levi said that the (little prayer) Bircháth hazaddúkim, that is, the little prayer against the Sadducees, was composed in (the city of) Jafna. On this point Rabbi Solomon Jarchi teaches in his commentary as follows: ביבנה תקנה לאחר זמן מרובה That is: they composed it in Jafna, a long time afterward (after the prayer Schemóne ésre had been established). But in the Talmud printed at Cracow in the year 1362 according to the Jews, that is, in the year 1602 A.D. according to our reckoning, in the aforementioned passage of Berachóth, one reads at fol. 28, col. 2.: לאחר זמן מרובה קרוב לחרבותו של הנוצרי שלמד להפוך דברי אלהים חיים That is: a long time afterward (namely, after the prayer Schemóne ésre), around the time of the wicked conduct of the Nazarene (that is, of Christ), who taught the overturning of the words of the living God; which words Rabbi Solomon Jarchi also wrote in his commentary on Alfasi's book on the Talmud, on the fourth chapter of the tractate Berachóth, as can be seen in the copy printed at Sabionetta. Following the aforementioned words of the Talmud, Berachóth fol. 28, col. 2., there follows in the same place in the Talmud printed at Amsterdam, in the text, the further passage: תנו רבנן שמעון הפקולי הסדיר שמונה עשרה ברכות לפני רבן גמליאל על הסדר ביבנה אמר להם רבן גמליאל לחכמים כלום ישאדם שיודע לתקן ברכת הצדוקים עמד שמואל הקטן ותקנה That is: our Rabbis teach that Rabbi Simeon the cotton-merchant arranged the eighteen little prayers (called Schemóne ésre) in order before Rabban Gamaliel in Jafna; and when Rabban Gamaliel said to the sages, is there also someone who can compose (or draw up) a little prayer against the Sadducees, then Samuel the Small arose, and it was composed. How then can the Jews claim that this little curse-prayer was made in the time of Ezra, when it was in fact composed only in the time of Christ, during which many of the Jewish people believed in Him and abandoned the Jewish religion?

Indeed, in the book Megalléh amykkóth, it is clearly stated at fol. 23, col. 1 at the end of the eighty-second Ofan that this prayer of cursing was instituted against Christ, where it is written as follows: אמר הקב"ה צו את יהושע אין צו אלא רוח הטומאה צא האמר לו שהיא צואה רותחת שנידון בה כאשר משפטו שמו כן פעלו כדאיתא That בגיטין דף נ"ז שתקנו כנגדו ברכת המינים ביבנה לכנאמר צ"ו את יהושע צ"ו בגימט ז'וא is: The holy blessed GOD said (Deut 3:28, to Moses): Zav eth Jehóschia, that is, command your Joshua; but the word Zav (that is, command) signifies nothing other than the unclean spirit, (as is said in Isa 28:22:) Ze tómar lo, that is, you shall call him Ze, that is, filth, which is the boiling Zóab, that is, filth, in which he (namely Jesus, according to the wicked, diabolical teaching of the Jews, as shown above in the 4th chapter of the first part and there refuted) is punished; for as he acted, so also shall he be judged there, as is stated in (the Talmudic tractate) Gittin fol. 57, col. 1.; and against him the Bircháth hammínim, that is, the prayer against the heretics, was ordained in Jafna. For this reason GOD said: Zav eth Jehóschia, that is, command Joshua; and the word צו Zav, reckoned numerically by Gematria, equals as much as צוא zóah, namely 96. But the word צו zav signifies nothing other than idolatry, for he (namely Jesus) made himself into an idol. These are the words of the book Megálleh amykkóth. But is this not a cursed perversion of Holy Scripture, in that the word zav, that is, command, is senselessly twisted into the word zóah, which means filth?

That not only the converted Jews but also all of Christendom is cursed by this prayer is also irrefutably evident from the book of Rabbi Bechai, Cad bakkémach fol. 80, col. 1., where he teaches as follows: התקו אותה כדי לעקור מלכות הרשעה שתהיה מדת הדין מתוחה כנגדה וכנגד האויבים That is: They have ordained it (namely, the little prayer Birchas hammínim) in order to uproot Málchus barrascháa, that is, the godless kingdom, so that the attribute of judgment may be stretched out against it and against the enemies. For Christendom is called by the Jews Malchúth barrascháa, that is, the godless kingdom, as was demonstrated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, in connection with the eleventh name they give to it. Likewise, Christians are regarded by them as their enemies, as was reported in the 15th chapter of the aforementioned first part. Beyond this, Rabbi Isaac Lurja writes in his Sépher baccavvanóth (or baccavvónos) fol. 34, col. 1 concerning this prayer in the following manner: יש בברכה זו כ"ט תיבות כנגד כ"ט פורעניות שעתיד הקב"ה ליפרע מבצרה שנ' קצף לה' על כל הגוים וגו' ונטה עליה קו תהו וגו' ודע כי ברכה זו ביבנה תקנוה שהיא ברכת הסופרים That is: There are in this prayer twenty-nine words, corresponding to the twenty-nine punishments with which the Holy and Blessed God will take vengeance upon Bozrah, as it is said (Isa 34:2): The Lord is wrathful against all the nations, etc. (And in v. 11 it is written there:) And He (namely, God) will stretch the line of desolation over it (that is, over Bozrah and Edom, as may be seen in v. 6), and the stones of devastation, etc. Know also that this little prayer was ordained in Jabneh, and that it is the prayer of the scribes. By Bozrah, however, the city of Rome is understood, as was indicated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, and by the name Rome all of Christendom is sometimes meant, as was demonstrated in the aforementioned 17th chapter; and the entire 34th chapter of Isa is interpreted by Rabbi David Kimchi and by Abarbanel in such a way that the plagues mentioned therein are to come upon all of Christendom. Who then would doubt that this curse-prayer concerns the Christians, given that it is made so plainly intelligible by the rabbis themselves? Thus Johannes Reuchlin was greatly mistaken in this matter when he sought to excuse the Jews in this regard, and his own words on this are to be found in the annotations of the highly learned Mr. Wülfer on the Jewish Theriaca, paginâ 327. and 328.

Regarding that which, as mentioned above, was given as an answer to a king of Spain by Versorius, namely that by Malchúth sadón, or the arrogant kingdom, Amalek, or the Amalekite people, is to be understood: the aforementioned Versorius did not conduct himself honestly toward the king either, and excused the Jews in a cunning and deceitful manner, claiming that not the Christians but the Amalekites were meant by it, even though Christendom is called Amalek, and Christians collectively are called Amalekites by the Jews, as has been clearly demonstrated above in the 16th and 17th chapters of the first part. But let this suffice concerning the curse-prayer Birchas hamminim.

On the Sabbath they customarily call upon God to take dominion away from the Christian potentates and to give it to the Messiah, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah, fol. 68, col. 3, under the title Shacharit schel Shabbat, and the little prayer reads as follows: שמחנו יי אלהינו באליהו הנביא עבדך ובמלכות בית דוד משיחך במהרה יבא ויגל לבנו על כסאו לא ישב זר ולא ינחלו עוד אחרים את כבודו כי בשם קדשך נשבעת לו שלא יכבה נרו לעולם ועד, That is: Gladden us, O Lord our God, with your servant the prophet Elia, and with the kingdom of the house of David your Messiah, or Anointed One. May he come quickly, and our heart shall rejoice. Upon his throne shall no stranger sit, and his honor shall others possess no more (or inherit): for you have sworn to him by your holy name that his light shall never be extinguished. Now the Jews teach that at the coming of the Messiah all lands, and especially those of the Christians, shall be subdued and subjected to him, and indeed all Christians shall be killed miserably, as will be demonstrated below in the 14th chapter of this second part. Therefore, the purpose of this prayer is easy to judge.

Furthermore, they pray on the Sabbath, as found in the Bench-book fol. 15, col. 1. under the title זמירות ליום שבת Semiroth lejóm Shabbat, in a prayer which begins בת עמ יקרא לבן עמ Derór jikra lebén im bath, in the following manner:

דרוך פורה בתוך בצרה. וגם בכל אשר גברה נתוץ צרי באף ועברה וגו' הדון קמי אל קנא. That is: Tread the winepress in Bozra; as also in Babel, which has become mighty. Destroy my enemies in wrath and fury, etc. Shatter my adversaries, O jealous God, so that their hearts may melt and fail (that is, all courage may sink); then we will open our mouths wide and fill them with our tongue singing to You. Now, what is to be understood by the treading of the winepress has already been noted above in this chapter. Likewise, it has been shown in the 17th chapter of the first part that by Bozra the city of Rome is to be understood, and by Rome the whole of Christendom; and that the name Babel also sometimes, as happens here, signifies Christendom in a veiled manner. And in the 15th chapter of the aforementioned first part it has been demonstrated that the Jews regard us Christians as their worst enemies and adversaries; therefore such a curse applies to us.

Furthermore, they pray on the Sabbath, according to the testimony of the cited Bench-book, fol. 16, col. 1. 2. under the title Semiróth lemozaë Shabbat, which begins חדש ששוני Cháddesch sesóni, with these words: זמן מזוני ולחם חקי. הלב חיל גוים חיש להניני. טובך תשביע עוללי ויונקי. יבא משיחי לעיר מושבי את אליהו הנביא. כונן לעם זו לחם לאכול ובגד ללבוש. משנאי יהוה ירא ויבשו.

"Provide me with my sustenance and the bread of my modest portion, so that I may quickly be nourished with the very best goods of the Gojim, that is, of the Heyden (or Christians). Satisfy my young children and nurslings with good things. May my Messiah come into the city of my dwelling, with the Prophet Elia. Provide this people (namely Israel) with bread to eat and clothes to wear, so that my enemy may see it and be ashamed. Subdue with all speed the dwelling of Mount Seir (that is, Christendom, which is called Har Seir, that is, Mount Seir, as has been reported in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the tenth name which the Jews give to it). My joy will be great when I see the Prophet Elias around me. Destroy quickly Ammon and Moab (that is, Christendom, as may be read at the end of the aforementioned 17th chapter), and reveal your redemption to your people at the earliest opportunity." Immediately following this, there appears another short prayer in the same place, which reads as follows: תריב ריבי. בראותי כי מאויבי. אגיל ואשמח בלבבי. ולציון גואל תביא. איש צמח תצמיח. אליהו הנביא ומלך המשיח: לכן בגוים יחד. תפול. אימה ופחד. לבם יפחד. בעת יעלה גוי אחד. וארחותיו יצליח. עוד ממזרח למערב. יעור. That is: I will rejoice in my heart and be glad when I see that You will contend with my enemy in my dispute, and bring the Redeemer to Zion, cause the man Zémach (that is, the Messiah, who is called Zémach, that is, a Branch or Shoot, in Zech

1:8 and 6:12) to spring forth, and send the Prophet Elias and the King Messiah. Therefore, fear and terror shall fall upon the Heyden all at once; their hearts shall tremble at the time when the singular people (namely the Jewish people) shall rise up and prosper in its ways. It will also be stirred up from the rising to the setting of the sun to slay many in Edom (that is, Christendom) and in Arabia (that is, in Turkey), to wage war, and it will raise a cry against its enemies, etc. From this we see how the Jews intend to deal with us Christians at the hoped-for coming of their Messiah, in that they plan to wage war against us and to kill us; of which a detailed account will be given below in the 14th chapter of this second part; and here they wish that fear and terror may then come upon us.

Several days after the feast of the new moon, which is observed every month, the Jews go out at night under the open sky, when they are able to see the moon, and recite a certain prayer which they call ברכת הלבנה (Bircháth hallevaná or Birchás hallevóno), in which they address the moon, as can be seen in the large Tefillah fol. 45, col. 3, under the title Schacharith, as follows: ברוך בוראך ברוך קונך : ברוך עושך : ברוך יוצרך that is, Blessed be He who made you; blessed be He who formed you; blessed be He who created you. After this they jump up three times and further say: ואיני יכול ליגע בך . כשם שאני רוקד כנגדך . that is, Just as I jump or leap toward you and yet cannot reach you, so shall none of my enemies be able to touch me to do me harm. After this they say three times: תפול עליהם אימתה ופחד בגדול זרועך : תפול עליהם אימתה ופחד בגדול זרועך ידמו כאבו that is, Let fear and terror fall upon them; through the greatness (that is, the power) of your arm they must become silent as a stone; they must become silent as a stone through the greatness of your arm, and terror and fear fall upon them. By their enemies, however, they mean the Christians, as has already been shown many times, and therefore this curse concerns us. In some copies, however, instead of אייבי Ojesai, that is, my enemies, the word אחרים acherim stands, that is, others, as can likewise be seen in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 78, col. 2, in the Parascha Bo el Pároh, and in the Amsterdam Talmud, in the Tractate Sopherim fol. 14, col. 2, by which we are also meant, as has been shown in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, at the twenty-eighth name by which they call us.

During the seven days that precede the New Year's Day, the Jews are accustomed to recite certain prayers that stand at the beginning of their Selichóth (or Selichos), in which Christians are also not spared. On the first of the said seven days, in a prayer that begins ואתה קדוש יושב תהלות veátta kadósch jóscheft tehillóth, as can be seen in the Selichóth printed here in Frankfurt in quarto in the year 1665, fol. 6, col. 1, 2, as well as in the thick Tefillab fol. 3, col. 4, and fol. 4, col. 1, they recite from Ps 137:7: זכור י"י לבני אדום את יום ירושלים האומרים ערו ערו עד היסוד בה That is: "Remember, O Lord, against the children of Edom the day of Jerusalem, those who said: lay bare, lay bare (that is, destroy) it to its very foundation." With this they call upon God to avenge the destruction of the city of Jerusalem upon the Christians, whom they call the children of Edom (as has been shown in the sixteenth chapter of the first part), and to punish them for it.

On the second day of the aforementioned seven days they pray, as can be seen in the Selichóth printed here in Frankfurt, paginâ 10, col. 2, and in the Prague Selichóth fol. 10, col. 1, 2, as well as in the thick Tefillab fol. 2, col. 3, 4, under the title Selichóth leschéni, in the following manner: ישראל עמך תחנה עורכים שהם מצירים ולהושע צריכים צריהם עליהם מאריכים וגו' עצתם הסכל ומחשבותם הבטל

That is: Your people, Israel, which is in distress and has need of deliverance, appoints a prayer. Their enemies (namely the Christians) hold them long under the yoke, etc. Make their counsel foolish, and let their thoughts come to nothing. Let a great tumult (that is, a great terror) come upon them, and a cruel angel thrust them away and drive them out. For the sake of the glory of Your name, and Your praised holy name, do great wonders, so that it may not be profaned among the heathens. Let their counselors and princes go about senseless (that is, without knowledge and understanding), or, as it is also otherwise expounded in the Commentario thereon: Let their counselors and mighty men be led away captive, and deal with them as they have dealt with me, etc. Your mercy, O God of the upper and lower (creatures), come before me, before the proud water (that is, Christendom, as was demonstrated above in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the sixteenth name which the Jews give to it) overwhelm me, etc. Furthermore, they pray on the second day, as may be read in the Frankfurt Selichóth fol. 11, col. 1. and in the Prague edition, fol. 11, col. 2 and fol. 12, col. 1, a prayer which reads as follows:

That is: On the day when I am afraid, I call out to You, so that the Sédim, that is, the proud ones (understand: the Christians, as was indicated in the 16th chapter of the first part at the twenty-fifth name which the Jews give to us), who have forsaken the glorious (dwelling), may not oppress me. Seat

Yourselves (O God!) to examine their evil, to repay them in return. That the judgment of the wicked and malicious may be fulfilled (that is, may come to an end), those who think to cause Your holy and glorious name to be forgotten, and to accustom themselves to the unclean name of the Despised One (understand: Christ), who is served. This is their custom: to destroy the best of the (Jewish) people. Deliver the remnant (of Your people); crush them (namely the aforementioned proud ones) in the winepress, etc. There are many hard masters who wish to abolish Your service (namely, divine worship). Let a heavy judgment come upon them and declare them guilty (that is, condemn them according to their deserts; or, as others expound it: Lay them waste). Do unto them, and mock them; destroy them on account of their heaviness (that is, the stubbornness of their hearts). Let blown cords (that is, fiery coals) rain upon them as their portion of the cup. Repay them sevenfold; avenge the covenant, and lay them waste, etc.

On the third day of the aforementioned seven days, they prayed a prayer which begins with איה כל נפלאותיך Ajéh col nifleothécha, and which is found in the Frankfurt Selichóth fol. 14, col. 1. 2. and in the Prague edition fol. 15, col. 2. and fol. 16, col. 1., as well as in the thick Tefillab fol. 8, col. 2. under the title Selichóth lachamischí, in the following manner: נלאיתי נשוא עול מדהבה נואמת: מרוד והבא הביאה רבה סגולתך דוחקת פקודתך מלנצור סברה להמיר כבודך בעת צר. עד אנא יי 'אקרא ממצר וגו': 'ריבה יי' 'ריבי נפשי. רצה להצילני אלהי קדושי: שני רשעים בחצץ שכול ואלמון אתם ותהרום. השפוך דמם ארצה לרום וגו' That is: I am weary of bearing the yoke of Madbéfa (that is, of Christendom, as has been shown in the 17th chapter of the first part, under the forty-fifth name which the Jews give to it) which says: measure, and bring much (money) here. It oppresses your own people, so that your commandment cannot be kept. Its intention is to change your honor in the time of distress (and to believe in Jesus, as has been reported in the second chapter of the first part, under the eleventh name which the Jews give to Christ.) How long shall I, O Lord, cry out of distress, etc. Contend, O Lord, the contention of my soul. Be pleased to deliver me, O God, my Holy One. Crush the teeth of the wicked with gravel; destroy them with bereavement of children and widowhood. Pour out their blood to bespatter the earth, etc. Furthermore, they pray on the said third day in a prayer immediately following this one, which begins with 'ישראל נושע ביי' Israël noscha badonái, as follows: כלה שעבודם. פדות ורוחה יושעו לעין כל ואל ימשלו בהם רשעים. That is: Grant them (namely the Israelites, O God!) a redemption and relief (to recover themselves again.) Let them be saved before the eyes of all, and let the wicked (that is, the Christians, as has been demonstrated in the 16th chapter of the first part, under the seventeenth name which is given to us) no longer rule over them. Bring the servitude of the this prayer is also found at fol. 10, col. 4 and fol. 11, col. 1 under the title Selichoth, the final words have been omitted out of fear.

To You we call, You who are terrible and to be feared: do not hide Your face from beholding our distress, when the accursed ones (or, as some would have it, those who cause want) rise up against us and in their deliberations devise a foolish counsel. They decree against us that we shall not call upon the Lord our Redeemer, who is called the Lord of Hosts, my beloved who is white and red and distinguished among ten thousands, but rather shall despise His word and cause Him vexation, shall accept the most contemptible idol (by which Christ is doubtless meant) as a god, bow before the image and serve before it; shall not sanctify the One (Lord and Creator) who forgives abundantly, and shall not fear the terrible God. When I hear this, my heart trembles. I give to him who quarrels with me this answer: far be it from me that I should forget the praise of the God of my fathers and forsake Him. The unclean and dead god (by which Christ is blasphemously meant) is new and only recently come (and therefore not the eternal God). What sort of condition is it with him, that I should mingle him with God (that is, associate him and likewise hold him to be a god)? When they hear my words, which ought to be pleasing, they gnash their teeth together against me (and say: we will rob and plunder the labor of their hands, and speak of exterminating and killing, etc.). Look upon, O Lord, the prayer of Your servants; redeem and rescue them from the hand of those who sin against You. Grant salvation to the seed of Your pious ones, that it may go forth from the tumult of those who show themselves rebellious against You into a fresh land. Be zealous for the honor of Your name, if it is not to be done for their sake (understand: for the sake of the Jews). Be greatly wrathful against those who afflict them, for the wicked say: where is their Lord? He (the Lord) will contend their (namely the Jews') strife and rise up to protect them. Judge the violent (or rapacious) people (namely the Christians): let their flesh dissolve and their tongue melt away; humble their pride and let them be trodden underfoot. Their spirit must burst asunder and they become tributary, etc.

On the evening before New Year's Day, as well as before the Day of Atonement, they customarily pray in a prayer which begins שיחי לפניך Eschpoch sichi lefanecha, and which appears in the Frankfurt Selichóth fol. 32, col. 2. under the title ראש השנה ולערב יום כפור Leéref roch haschána uleéref jom kippur, praying as follows: הרדוף באף. שבעתים השב לחיק מענינו. גאם חכניע כחורב בציון ותשמידם מהוללתך. גם שלומים לריב ציון. הקרא אל אלהים עליון. גאם חכניע כחורב בציון : ריבנו וגאלנו. That is: Contend our cause (O God!) and redeem us; repay sevenfold into the bosom of those who afflict us; pursue them in anger and destroy them, O our Creator. Proclaim, O most high God, a year of retribution, to contend for Zion's sake. Humble the proud as the heat in a parched place. Save Zion and lay her foundations; build also the cities of Judah, etc. After this there follows in the aforementioned Selichóth fol. 32, col. 2. a prayer which begins לְדָמִי אֱלֹהִים אֵל דְּמִי לְדָמִי Elohim al dómi ledámi, in which the Jews bitterly lament before God that a great many of them have been killed by Christians because they would not accept the Christian faith, and thereupon they offer, at fol. 33, col. 2, a prayer with these words: עליך הורגנו כל היום נחשבו: אל תחשה ותענו עד מאוד: אל הי העל אלה תתאפק כי אכל את יעקב ואת נוהו כצאן טבחה. אל נקמות יי' אל נקמות הופיע: הנשא שופט הארץ השב גמול על גאים: והשב לשכנינו שבעתים אל חיקם אשר חרפוך יי'; יי' כגבור יצא כאיש מלחמות יעיר קנאה יריע אף יצריח: That is: For Your sake (O God) we are slain daily and counted as sheep for the slaughter; for they have devoured Jacob and laid waste his dwelling. Will You, O Lord, therefore restrain Yourself, and keep silence, and oppress us so greatly? O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongs, O God to whom vengeance belongs, appear; arise, You judge of the earth; repay the proud; and give back to our neighbors sevenfold into their bosom, who have reviled You, O Lord. The Lord will go forth like a hero; He will stir up His zeal like a man of war; He will shout and cry aloud and prevail over His enemies. Immediately following this little prayer there comes yet another at fol. 33, col. 2 which begins: את הקול קול יעקב נוהם Eth bakkól Kol Jaacóf nóhem, in which they further lament before God that the Christians have killed so many of them because they would not believe in Christ, and they again petition for vengeance; as indeed also occurs subsequently at fol. 37, col. 2 in a little prayer which begins: That is: Avenge the blood of Your servants, as it is written in Your Law, וְצָרָה. The same is also to be seen in another prayer immediately following, which begins: זכור ברית אברהם Sechór beríth Abráham, in which they call upon God as follows: דורש דמים: דון דיננו: השב שבעתים לחיק מענינו: That is: Lord, remember the slain and those whose hair has been torn out. You who demand (that is, avenge) blood, judge our cause; repay sevenfold into the bosom of those who afflict us.

On the first day of the New Year's festival, which falls on the first of September, they pray, as can be seen in the Frankfurt Máchsor, fol. 26, col. 1. 2. and in the first part of the Prague fol. 31, col. 2 under the title Músaph lejóm ríschon schel rósch haschána, a prayer which from the beginning reads as follows: אנסיכה מלכי. לפניו בהתהלכי. אמצו בהמליכי יאזור עוז וימלוך: אליל בהשליכי. לפני בא יום מלכי. איש מלאכי ישלח ואז ימלוך. בבואו ואז ימלוך. נתן חנף ממלוך. בית גאים בלי מלוך. יסח לבל ימלוך: בתוכי יהליך. בהופיעו למלוך. במלכותו ימלוך: לבדו ימלוך: גברת ממלכות. במגרו ממלכות. גוים וממלכות. יהום והוא ימלוך וגו': זך דין בערכו. יאחו דרכו. זרים בדרכו נקם יעט וימלוך: זר זר בשלכו. יתן עוז למלכו וגו': בתים בכתהו. איים בכתהו. כס ממלכתו

וְיִמְלֹךְ אֲנִי: that is, I, I will anoint my King, when I walk before Him and bring it about that His strength shall reign. He will gird Himself with strength and rule as a King, when I shall cast away the idols. Before the day of my King (the Messiah) comes, He will send my messenger (Elijah), and then reign. When He shall come, He will destroy the hypocrite (that is, the godless Esau, as can be seen in the Commentary of the Prague Machsor on this passage, by which Christendom is understood) so that he shall no longer rule. He will root out the house (or lineage) of the proud (that is, of the Christians) so that it shall no longer reign. He will walk among me when He shall appear to reign. In His kingdom He will rule and reign alone. When He will destroy the kingdoms, the heathens together with the kingdoms, He will plague the Geveréth mamlachóth, that is, the Mistress of the Kingdoms (by which Christendom is named, as has been demonstrated in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the nineteenth name which is given to it) and He Himself shall reign, etc. When the pure one (God) shall tread down the proud, He will maintain His custom. When He shall ordain judgment, He will clothe Himself in vengeance and reign, etc. When He will cast away the crown of the proud one (that is, of Esau, as can be seen in the Prague Commentario, by which Christendom is signified) He will grant strength to His King (namely the Messiah), etc. When He will crush the Hittites (that is, the Romans and all Christians, as has been indicated in the 16th chapter of the first part, at the fourth name that is given to us) and smite the islands, the throne of His kingdom will be established and He will reign, etc. From this prayer it can be seen what the Jews have in store for us, and how they intend to deal with us at the time of their vainly hoped-for Messiah, and how they plan to exterminate us all.

Furthermore, on the first day of the New Year, as found in the aforementioned Frankfurt Machzor, fol. 30, col. 1. 2. and in the Prague Machzor, in the first part, fol. 36, col. 1. 2., under the aforementioned title, in a prayer which begins: אשא דעי בצדק Essadei bezèdek, they are accustomed to pray as follows: פגרו וסעירו. ממלכות שעיר. פשעה: תשקיע ותבעיר. פחד רב וצעיר. בקול המיית העיר. בקול קולות שופר. פתחי העיר. ראות כנוס גלויות. בקול גודל שופר. רביעית שופר וגו': 'רחשתי לעלויות. ועיני תלויות. שנה תעורר. לשלם גמול לצורר: חיות. ליקוד להיות. רשף שלהביות. בקול להב שופר: שוכנים הזורר. בקול שאונו הפורר. That is: Destroy and sweep away by a whirlwind the kingdom of Seir (that is, Christendom); call to mind (that is, remember) its sins through the sound of the blaring of the trumpets. Let the gates of the city (namely, the city of Rome, as is taught in the commentary of the Prague Machzor) perish and burn, and let the great and the small tremble with fear at the noise of the trumpets, etc. I speak upward (to God), and my eyes are lifted up to behold the gathering of the captivities (that is, of the Jews scattered throughout the entire world among other peoples, and sitting in exilio, or misery) through the sound of the great trumpets. The fourth beast (that is, Christendom, as is indicated in the seventeenth chapter of the first part, at the twenty-seventh name given to it) must be burned to glowing coals through the sound of the flames of the trumpets. Awake from your sleep, to repay the enemy (understand: Christendom, as has been demonstrated in the aforementioned seventeenth chapter at the thirty-ninth name by which it is called). Break its tumult (that is, its arrogance) through the sound of the power of the trumpets. Set the lily free; make the redemption clear (that is, reveal the end, when the redemption shall come); and let the dead enjoy (that is, awaken them) through the sound of the awakening of the trumpets. Step forth from (the mountain of) Hermon to crush the Admon, or the Red One (that is, Christendom, as has likewise been reported in the aforementioned seventeenth chapter at the sixth name given to it). Let hell grow cool through the sound of the tumult of the trumpets, etc.

It should be noted here that, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, God will blow with a great trumpet when He redeems the Jews scattered throughout the entire world from the yoke of the Christians and other peoples, gathers them together, and brings them back into the Promised Land of Canaan. For this reason, there follows at fol. 30, col. 1. in the Frankfurt, and at fol. 37, col. 1. in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, a little prayer which reads as follows: אלהינו ואלהי אבותינו תקע בשופר גדול לחרותנו וקרב פזורינו מבין הגוים ונפוצותינו כנס מירכתי ארץ והביאנו לציון עירך ברנה ולירושלים בית מקדשך בשמחת עולם וגו' That is: Our God and God of our fathers, blow with the great trumpet for our freedom, to gather our captivities together; and let our scattered ones from among the heathen come together again, and gather our dispersed from the corners of the world, and bring us into Your city Zion with singing, and into Jerusalem into Your holy Temple with everlasting joy, etc. In this same manner they also pray daily in the morning, as may be seen in the large Tefillah fol. 21, col. 2. under the title Schácharith, with these words: תקע בשופר גדול לחרותנו ושא נס לקבץ גליותינו וקבצנו יחד מארבע כנפות הארץ ברוך אתה יי' מקבץ נדחי עמו ישראל That is: Blow with the great trumpet for our freedom, and raise up the banner to gather our captives, and bring us together from the four corners of the world. Blessed are You, Lord, who gathers the dispersed of His people Israel.

On the second New Year's Day they also prayed, as can be read in the first part of the Prague Machsor fol. 39, col. 2, under the title Shacharit schel rosch haschanájom schéni, in a prayer which begins: מלך אמון מאמרך Mélech amón maamarechá, in the following manner: שופר צרפת וספרד יצרה להתקדש נפוצים

בארבע, That is: Let the trumpet sound over France and Spain, so that those scattered into the four parts of the world (Israelites, to strike dead) must make themselves ready. In the Commentario on this passage, Aschkenas, that is, Germany, is also placed alongside France and Spain, and it is noted therein: הם עיקר הגלות שהרעו מאוד לישראל, That is: These (three countries) are the foremost of the Jewish captivity, which have done the Israelites very great harm. That they are to be stirred up to killing, namely of Christians, by the sound of the trumpets, is likewise to be found in the said Commentario. What evil is thereby wished upon the Christians, however, can also be seen below in Chapter 13, at the eighth sign of the coming of the Messia, from the book Afkáth róchel.

Since the ram's horn is mentioned here, as it is in many other places in the New Year's prayers, I must also indicate where it comes from. It should be known that it is supposed to be one of the horns of that ram mentioned in Gen 22:13, which Abraham sacrificed as a burnt offering in place of his son Isaac. Concerning this, in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 30, col. 4, in the Parashah Vajéra, on the words "Then Abraham lifted up his eyes and saw a ram behind him caught in the thicket by its horns," the following is written: ומסתבכין במלכיות מבבל למדי : שישאל נאחזין בעברות וימון ליון ומעון לאדום סופן להגאל בקרנו של איל שנאמר וי"י בשופר יתקע ודעת ר"ז כי That is: שופר של מתן תורה שכתוב בו וקול שופר חזק מאוד שופר אילו של יצחק היה : When the Israelites are caught in sins and entangled in the kingdoms (namely the four monarchies), so that they pass from Babylon into Media, and from Media into Greece, and from Greece into Edom (that is, the Roman monarchy, or Christendom), they will in the end be redeemed through the horn of the ram, as it is said (Zech 9:14): "And the LORD shall blow the trumpet." Our rabbis of blessed memory are also of the opinion that the trumpet which was blown when the Law was given (by God on Mount Sinai), of which it is written (Exod 19:16): "And the sound of a very mighty trumpet," was a trumpet made from the horn of Isaac's ram. Exactly the same is also to be found in Vajikra rabba, fol. 162, col. 3-4, in the 29th Parashah. In the little book Pirke Rabbi Eliéser, in the 31st chapter, the following is also read concerning this ram: חנינא בן דוסא אומר אותו האיל לא יצא ממנו דבר לבטלה אפרו של איל הוא יסוד שעל גבי המזבח הפנימי שנאמר וכפר אהרן על קרנותיו אחת בשנה. גידיו של איל הם עשרה כנגד עשרה נימין של כנור שהיה דוד ממנן בהם. עורו של איל הוא אזור מתניו של אליהו שנאמר ויאמרו אליו איש יור לקראתו ואזור עור אזור במתניו. שתי קרניו של איל של שמאל תקע בו הקב"ה על סיני שנאמר ויהי קול השופר. וקרן של יטין הוא גדול מן השמאל ועתיד לתקוע בו לעתיד לבא בקבוץ של גליות שנאמר והיה ביום ההוא יתקע בשופר גדול : גדול That is: Rabbi Channina, the son of Dosi, says: nothing from that ram went to waste. Its ashes were the foundation that was upon the innermost altar, as it is said (Exod 30:10): "And Aaron shall make atonement upon its horns once a year." Its sinews were ten in number, corresponding to the ten strings of the harp upon which David played. Its hide was the belt which Elijah had girded about his loins, as it is said (2 Kgs 1:6, 8): "And they said to him: a man came down to meet us, and had a leather belt about his loins." As for its two horns, the Holy One, blessed be He, blew upon the left one at (Mount) Sinai, as it is said (Exod 19:19): "And the sound of the trumpet grew ever louder." But the right horn is greater than the left, and He will blow upon it in the time to come, when the captivities (that is, the Jews scattered throughout the world) shall be gathered together, as it is said (Isa 27:13): "And it shall come to pass at that time that a great trumpet shall be blown." All of this is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 29, c. 1, numero 101, as well as in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 9, col. 1, numero 8, under the title Avóth veïmmabóth.

This ram must also have been very old when it was sacrificed, for according to the rabbis' account, it was created by God at the beginning of the world, during the six days of creation. Concerning this, the following is written in the great Jalkut Rubeni, fol. 3, col. 2., from the book Médrasch néeelam, on the words בראשית ברא bereschith bará, that is, "In the beginning (God) created": בראשית ברא זהו אילו של יצחק שנברא מששת ימי בראשית וזהו בראשית ברא היש: that is, the words bereschith bará, "in the beginning (God) created," signify the ram of Isaac, which was created from the six days of creation, and this is indicated by the word בראשית bereschith, which (through a transposition of the letters) means ברא היש bará tájisch, that is, "He created a ram." Likewise, Jonathan, the son of Uziel, reports in his Chaldean translation on Gen 22:13 as follows: וזקף: אברהם ית עיניו וחזא והא דכרא חד דאתברי ביני שמשותא דשכלול עלמא: that is, "And Abraham lifted up his eyes and saw, and behold, there was a ram, which had been created between the twilight of the founding of the world." And in Bammidbar rábba, fol. 219, col. 4., in the 17th Parascha, one reads: אילו של: אברהם נברא בין השמשות that is, "Abraham's ram was created at twilight." But let this be enough on this matter, and we must return to the Jews' curse-prayers.

On the second New Year's Day they prayed in the morning, as can be seen in the Frankfurt Machsor fol. 34, col. 1 and in the Prague one, fol. 43, col. 1, in the first part under the title Shacharit schel rosch haschaná jom schéni, in a little prayer which begins חבלו שמו מפארים עדת חבלו Schemó mephaarím adáth chefló, in the following manner: שבטי מקוראך עלה והמשל: That is: Exalt and let the tribes of your called one (Israel) rule, when you shall cut off the branches of the enemies (that is, exterminate the Christians) and cast them away. Immediately after this follows another prayer, which begins: אדר והוד אתן Eder vahod étten bezifón, in which they call upon God in the following manner: מוטות צרים ושכר והכחידם. זרויך קבץ וחנם תפדם. זכור י"י לבני אדום את יום ירושלים: קמיהם על פנימו גלה שולים. זכור ירתך קניית קדם. נדיבי עמים ינוחמו בכפלים That is: Break the yoke of the enemies and root them out; gather your dispersed ones and redeem them freely. Let the princes among the peoples (namely the Jews) be comforted twofold. Uncover their skirts before the faces of their enemies (that is, put them to open shame; and this manner of speaking is taken from Nah 3:7). Remember, O Lord, the children of Edom (that is, the Christians) on the day of Jerusalem.

Furthermore, on the aforementioned second day they pray, as can be seen in the Prague Machzor, in the first part, fol. 58, col. 1, and in the Frankfurt fol. 41, col. 2, under the title Musaph lejóm schéni schel rosch haschaná, in a prayer which begins נוראות שם בציון עשה לך בציין שם נוראות Aséh lechá bezijón schem noraóth, in the following manner: ריבו מושיעים. כי ארך לה קץ מלוכה. דבצה עדינה שקטה מאלמון ושותיו על אדון הוד המלוכה. ככתוב על יד נביאך ועלו מושיעים בהר ציון לשפוט את הר עשו והיתה לי"י המלוכה וגו' תחגור גאות תחזור עוז לבל ישתדר זר במלוכה. תכון תבל כי יונער רשע ושם צדק לרגליו ויוצק מלוכה. ככתוב בדברי קדשך י"י מלך גאות לבש י"י עוז התאזר אף תכון תבל כל תמוט. תקום גוים. הוכיה לאומים. תשבור מטה רשע. חלוף התאזר אף תכון תבל כל תמוט. תקום גוים. הוכיה לאומים. תשבור מטה רשע. חלוף תכנס ארץ ישראל ותהיה למלכות. תשבג לבדך. הקרא נצח יחיד במלוכה (Adina (understand: Christendom, as in Chapter 17 of the first part, near the relevant passage) sits still and at rest, without widowhood (and enjoys every pleasure), since the end of her reign has been set far off. Contend, O ye redeemers! Take the splendor away from Edom (Christendom) and give the glory of dominion to the Lord, as it is written (Obad 21): "And saviors shall come up on Mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau, and the kingdom shall be the Lord's," etc. Gird yourself with majesty and surround yourself with strength, so that no stranger may rule in the kingdom. Let the world be established when the wicked shall be shaken out. And You (namely, God) will set righteousness at Your feet and take up dominion, as it is written in Your holy words (Ps 93:1): "The Lord is King; He has clothed Himself with majesty; with strength He has girded Himself; and the world is also established by Him, so that it cannot be moved." Take vengeance upon the Gojim, or heathens; chastise the peoples; break the scepter of wickedness that now rules. Destroy the idols, and be You alone exalted, and called the sole one in dominion for eternity. From this one can see how the Jews are disposed toward the high Christian rulers under whose protection they live, in that they call upon God to take away their dominion and to cast them down from the throne.

Further, under the last-mentioned title, fol. 62, col. 1. of the Frankfurt Machsor, in a prayer which begins עליהני אל על כל בנות Illicháni el al col banóth, the following is prayed: That is: Shatter those who plunder me (namely the Christians, as can be seen in the Commentary thereon); blow the trumpet. When the storm winds blow from the south, then the sound (of the trumpet) shall go forth (and be driven by the winds to all peoples, and shatter them likewise, as is expounded in the aforementioned Commentary). In short, they call upon God once again for vengeance in this manner, as can be read at fol. 62, col. 2. in the Prague Machsor, where in a short prayer which begins היום תאמצנו Hajóm teammezénu, they pray: That is: Demand today the blood of your servants that has been shed.

On the tenth day of September, the Jews have their feast of atonement, which they call יום כיפור Jom kippur, that is, the day of atonement, because they believe that on that day they are reconciled with God and all their sins are forgiven them. They have, however, certain prayers which they pray between the New Year's day and the Day of Atonement, and they call upon God on the second day between the two aforementioned feasts, as can be seen in the Prague Selichoth fol. 47, col. 2. and fol. 48, col. 1. and in the Frankfurt edition fol. 46, col. 1. 2. in a prayer which begins מיקה ישראל יי Mikvéh Jífraël Adonai, addressing God as follows: פגושי ארי ודוב ונמר שוקד: גלינו מארץ צבי ונהרס היכל. לגושי ארי ודוב ונמר שוקד: פגושי ארי ודוב ונמר שוקד: גלינו מארץ צבי ונהרס היכל. דכנו חזיר יער וכרסמנו למאכל. למה תהיה כאיש נדהם כגבור לא יוכל וגוי: צוד צרוני צוררים ברוחב ואורך: חומת עירך מפורצת במותיה להדרך וגוי: למה פניך תסתיר תשכח ענינו ולחצנו. פתחו רשעים חרב ודרכו קשתם להעציב כאובינו. עצמו להאריך מענית ולחרוש גבינו וגוי: למה אלהים זנחת לנצח. יעשן אפך בצאן מרעיתך. עדינה יושבת בטח ובוקקת גפניך. יום מערמת לאבד צפוניך. ואני ואפסי עוד אומרה לפניך. למה יי תזנח. נפשנו תסתיר את פניך.

Please remember us in the sorrows of Your people among those who mock them, who think to make Your people forget Your name, their Creator. Do not give them, in the land of their captivity, into the power of those who terrify them. Why should the nations say, "Where now is their God?" That is: We have been driven out of the land of splendor (namely, the Promised Land), and the Temple is destroyed. The lion, the bear, and the lurking Pardel (that is, the Babylonian, Persian, and Greek Monarchy) have met us to plunder us. The wild boar (that is, the Roman Monarchy) has trampled us and rooted us up for its food. Why then do You wish to be like a weary man (who has no strength to help), or like one who is astonished or frightened and does not know what he should do, like a mighty one who cannot come to our aid, etc.? The enemies (understand: the Christians) chase me in breadth and length. The wall of Your city is broken down; its heights are trampled, etc. Why do You hide Your face and forget our misery and distress? The godless (that is, the Christians) have drawn their swords and bent their bows to torment us as our enemies; they have grown powerful enough to draw the furrow long and to plow upon our backs (that is, to afflict us), etc. Why do You cast us off forever, O God, and does Your anger burn against the sheep of Your pasture? The Adina (understand: Christendom) sits secure and lays Your vineyards bare (namely, the Jews); she employs cunning daily to destroy Your hidden ones (that is, the Israelites, who are so called in Ps 83:4), and says before You (from Isa 47:8): "I am, and there is none besides me." Why do You wish to cast us off, O Lord, and hide Your face? Remember the weeping of Your people under their plunderers (the Christians), who think to cause Your people to forget Your name, their Creator. Do not give them (the Jews), in the land of their captivity, into the power of those who terrify them. Why should the heathen say, "Where now is their God?" (which utterance is charged against the Christians, as may be read in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 160, col. 2, in the Parascha Haasinu.) We see, therefore, from this prayer that the Jews reproach God for allowing Christendom to sit in security and comfortable peace, as though He no longer had the power and strength to punish and overthrow it, as they wish might come to pass.

On the third day, which falls between New Year's Day and the Day of Atonement, they pray to God in a prayer that begins אשמרה אליך עזי Eschmerá elécha usí, and which is found at fol. 55, col. 1-2 in the Prague Selichóth and at fol. 53, col. 2 and fol. 54, col. 1 in the Frankfurt Selichóth, in the following manner: שבת בעריך תערוך. שם רשעים לפרוך. שביה מכתה. בועם תשפיל גאים וגו' : 'שבת בעריך תערוך. שם רשעים לפרוך. שביה מכתה. בועם תשפיל גאים וגו' : that is, Humble the proud (meaning the Christians) in wrath, etc.; prepare a seat (for the Israelites) in Your city (Jerusalem), to destroy the name of the wicked, and to heal the wound of the captive (Jews). Tread down the lion and the viper (that is, Christendom, as has been indicated in the seventeenth chapter of the first part, at the thirty-fourth name which is given to it); tread down the wicked, that they may come to an end.

On the fourth day, which falls between the two aforementioned feast days, they pray in a prayer which begins with איך אוכל לבוא עדיך Ech úchal lavó adécha, and which stands at fol. 55, col. 1. 2. in the Franckfurter Selichóth, in the following manner: ועוברי וזולת לא עזבוני לעבדך והמה בקשו איך אוכל לבוא עדיך. להפרידי מיחודך וגו' : א'המה יושבים לבטח בשלוח וגילה ואני בתוך הגולה : אוי כוס התרעלה שתיני ואגמע . בכיתי ואדמע מעול משא ומשמע . והמה לועגים עלי הקשיבה ושמע . ואני כחרש לא אשמע : איד מחצני אלהי ומכאובי לא חבש : ומעיל תפארתי לבנו אדום הולבש

 That is: How shall I come to You, seeing that those who serve another besides You (understand: the Christians) do not permit me to serve You, and seek to separate me from Your unity (since You are the one God), etc. They sit secure in joy and pleasure, but I am in the exilio, or misery.
 How have I drunk the cup of abomination! I weep and shed tears on account of the yoke of the burden and of the outcry; but they mock me and say to me: hearken and take heed (to what we wish to tell you); yet I am like one who is deaf and does not listen to them. How has my God struck me and not bound up my pain? How are the children of Edom (that is, the Christians) clothed with the mantle of my glory (in that they rule and have the upper hand, whereas the dominion would rightly belong to me?), and eat honeycomb, milk, and honey, while I wither like grass? Etc. Remember us, O God, and visit us with Your salvation. Destroy and hurl them down from the heaven of Your dwelling.
 Furthermore, on the said fourth day they address God in a prayer which begins with מקוה ישראל אך בך Ach bach mikvéh Jisrael, which stands at fol. 56, col. 1. 2. in the aforementioned Frankfurter Selichóth, as follows: יז נצחם על מדוע אדום
 . ללבושך תקרב עונתו. זה יי קוינו לו נגילה ונשמחה בישועתו
 That is: Bring it about that the time draws near (in which we shall ask You, from Isa 63:2): Why is Your garment so red? (and You will answer: the blood of them, that is, of the slain Christians, has been sprinkled upon the garments I have put on.) We will praise such a day forever, which will come in its appointed time. (We will say:)
 This is the Lord for whom we have waited; let us rejoice and be glad in His salvation.

Further, they call upon GOD on the said fourth day in a prayer which begins אבדו חכמי גלות Avedú cháchme gáluth, and which stands at fol. 56, col. 2 in the cited Frankfurter Selichóth, as follows: לרון לבנו . עלימו השחור .
 : 'בקלקולם שלותם הפחזו וגו' : 'עדינה תרגו ימים על שנה : פלא פעול והפלא סולה וגו
 That is: Destroy those who sin against You (namely the Christians), and whet Your sword against them. So that our heart may rejoice at their ruin (and downfall), diminish their prosperity, &c. May Adína, or the Voluptuous One (that is, Christendom), tremble year after year.
 Work wonders (upon the same), O You who pardon and forgive (sins). Lead Your armies (namely the Israelites) out from the venom of the dragon and the creeping thing.

On the evening of the Day of Atonement, they customarily invoke GOD against Christendom in a prayer which begins: אל אלהים אצעקה במלואי El Elohim ezaká bemillulái, as can be seen in the Prague Selichóth fol. 71, col. 2. and in the Frankfurt edition fol. 71, col. 1. 2. under the title לערב יום כפורים leéref jom

kippúrim, invoking GOD as follows: יכסנה הענן: יפקוד על כותי ועל שרה. ששה חדשים כמכת שחין לצערה. יגענה בבהרת ירדנה אף ועברה. כי זבח ליי' בבצרה, בבצרה העמידה מלך טבח הפיל בהנתקך המחץ ראש על ארץ בועמידך ואו העורר ישועתך, לרהומיך אתה יי' לא תכלא רחמיך, That is: He (namely GOD) would visit the Cuthéer (that is, Christendom, as is explained in the 16th chapter of the first part under the third name given to Christians, and likewise indicated in the 17th chapter under the third name by which Christendom is called, and as can be seen in the German translation of the Selichóth printed in Amsterdam, fol. 61, col. 1., where the word Cuthéer is explained by Edom) and its princes (namely the chief devil Sammaël, who is mentioned in the 18th chapter of the first part and who, according to the Jews' godless teaching, is supposed to rule over Christendom) with war. May a cloud cover them (namely Christendom) for six months, so that they may be tormented with the plague of boils. May He smite them with blains and punish them with wrath and fury; for the LORD will carry out a slaughter in Bozra (that is, in Rome, as can be read in the aforementioned German translation and as was reported in the 17th chapter of the first part, indeed throughout all of Christendom, which is sometimes understood by the word Rome). Carry it out in Bozra; overthrow the (Roman) king through the slaughter, when you shall execute vengeance. Strike the (Roman) head to the ground in your fierce wrath, and then you will raise up your salvation for your beloved (Jews). You, Lord, will not withhold your mercy.

So that one may properly grasp the content of this dreadful curse-prayer, it is to be known that in ancient times there are said to have been ten distinguished and very learned Rabbis, who, as can be seen with their names in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 53, col. 4, near the end of the Parascha Mikkétz, as well as in the Machsor, under the title Mincha schel jom kippur, in a prayer which begins אלה זוכרה Ellé eskerá, were called: Rabbi Simeon, son of Gamaliel; Rabbi Ismaël the High Priest, son of Elisa; Rabbi Akkiva, son of Joseph; Rabbi Jebuda, son of Baba; Rabbi Chanánja, son of Tardejon; Rabbi Jeschéfabh the Scribe; Rabbi Eliezer, son of Dama; Rabbi Channína, son of Chachínai; Rabbi Chúzpith the Interpreter; and Rabbi Eliezer, son of Schammúa; and they are called by the Jews עשרה הרוגי מלכות Asára harúge málchus, that is, the ten who were put to death by the (Roman) Empire. These ten men are said to have been killed one after another by the Romans at the instigation and request of Sammael before God, and by means of the permission thereby obtained, yet on the condition that Sammael had to bind himself in writing to the effect that the punishment and vengeance which would therefore have to come upon him and his people, the Roman Empire, should be reserved for them; concerning which it is written as follows in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 85, col. 2, 3, in the 16th chapter under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba: ככל עת צרה שמיצר לישראל תכף ננידה : עליו גזירה להנקם ממנו גזירות וצרות משונות זו מזו מדה כנגד מדה ובפרט כשנצבע דין מאת הקב"ה על עשרה הרוגי מלכות להשלים גזירה וגנב נפש מישראל ומכרן מות יומת וגו' ושמורה לו נקמה להנקם ממנו בעת שיפקוד יי' על צבא המרום במרום שנשחט הוא וכל שרי מלכות בטרם כגדיים וכבשים של יום הכיפורים. וכן אמר רבי ישמעאל כהן גדול כל התנאים הללו וכל התראות הללו התירו בו והתנו בסמאל והוא אמר קבלתי עלי ויבחרו עשרת אבירים הללו. ואמר רבי ישמעאל ז"ל מה עשה זה רי"אל יי' צבאות אלהי ישראל באותו שעה לא הספיק לומר לסופר בתוב גזירות ומכות גדולות ומבוהלות כביהות על נפ"ם הרשעה מפני חמה שנתמלא על סמאל שקבל עליו כל התנאים הללו אלא מיד הוא עצמו נטל הקולמוס וכתב וכן כתב ליום נקמה שעתידי ושמור לגפ"ם הרשעה העלה ענן אחת ותעמוד למעלה מגפ"ם ותוריד שחין עליה ששה חדשים על האדם והבהמה והכסף והזהב והפירות ועל כל כלי מתכות ואחר כך תעלה ענן אחרת ותדחה חברתה ותעמוד במקומה ששה חדשים תוריד נגע וצרעת וספחת ובהרת וכל מיני נגעים כולם על גפ"ם הרשעה עד שייגיע השעה שיאמר אדם לחבירו הא לך גפ"ם הרשעה היא וכל אשר that is, as often as that one (namely Sammael) plagues the Israelites in the time of distress, a judgment is immediately pronounced against him (by God) that one shall take vengeance upon him through various persecutions and tribulations, and repay him like for like; and this occurred in particular at the time when he had requested of the holy and blessed God that those ten who had been put to death by the (Roman) Empire should be judged, in order to execute the decree (Exod 21:16, which reads:) "Whoever steals a soul from Israel and sells it shall surely die," etc.; and for this reason the vengeance has been reserved, that one shall take vengeance upon him at the time when the Lord will visit the host of the height (that is, the high host) in the height (concerning which one may read in Isa 24:21), in that he and all the princes of the Empire in the height (that is, all seventy evil angels who are said to dwell in the air and to govern the seventy nations of the world, concerning which the 18th chapter of the first part treats in detail) shall be slaughtered like the goats and lambs of the Day of Atonement. And likewise the High Priest Rabbi Ismael also said that all these conditions and warnings had been stipulated with Sammael and that he had been warned by them, and that he thereupon said: I accept them upon myself; only let these ten heroes be chosen for me (namely the aforementioned ten Rabbis). Furthermore, Rabbi Ismael, of blessed memory, said: What did Sahariel, the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, do at that hour? It was not enough at that moment to tell the scribe to write down the great and terrible and mighty decree and plagues which were to come upon wicked Rome (for the word גפ"ם Gapim signifies, through the transposition of the alphabet Atbasch, as much as רומי Romi, that is, Rome) on account of the wrath with which He (namely God) was filled against Sammael, who had taken all such conditions upon himself; rather, Sammael himself immediately took up the pen and wrote them down. He wrote, however, in the following manner: On the coming day of vengeance which is reserved for wicked Rome, a cloud shall rise up and stand over Rome, and shall bring down upon it, for six months, boils upon man and beast, and upon silver and gold, as well as upon the fruits and all metal vessels. After this, another cloud shall rise up and drive away the former, and shall stand in its place for six months, and shall cause plagues and leprosy and scab (or boils) and blisters and all manner of plagues to come down upon wicked Rome, until the time comes when one man shall say to another: See, here you have wicked Rome and everything that is in it for a penny; but he shall answer him: I do not want it. Thus far extend the cited words of the book Emek hammelech. The very same thing also stands in the aforementioned book Emek hammelech, fol. 39, col. 4, in the 68th chapter under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu, and fol. 131, col. 1, at the end of the 11th chapter under the title Scháar réscha disér ápin; and in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 53, col. 4, and fol. 54, col. 1, at the end of the Parascha Mikkétz, as well as in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 67, col. 3, in the Parascha Vajélschef; and from this it is clearly to be seen what the Jews intend by their aforementioned curse-prayer, namely that they call upon God to visit Christendom with all manner of dreadful plagues and to destroy it.

On Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, they pray, as can be read in the Frankfurt Selichoth fol. 75, col. 1, under the title Lejózer schel jom Kippur, in a prayer that begins: אשפוך שיחי לפני צורי Eschpóch schíchi lefanécha Zúri, as follows, addressed to God: שבעתים השב לחיק מענינו ותשמידם מחוללט ריבנו וגאלנו. That is: Repay sevenfold into the bosom of those who afflict us (namely the Christians, of whom they claim, as was shown in the fifteenth chapter of the first part, that they are their worst enemies and do them the greatest harm). Pursue them in wrath and destroy them, O our Creator! O God, Thou most high God! Proclaim a year of retribution to contend for Zion; humble the proud, as the heat upon a parched ear of grain, etc. Furthermore, on the said day, under the aforementioned title, they pray in a prayer that begins רבת צררוני מנעורי Adonái Elohai rabbáth Zerarúni minneúrai, as can be seen in the oft-mentioned Frankfurt Selichoth fol. 78, col. 1, in the following manner: אשר שפכו בני נבל בעברה שפטה משפטי ונקום דם עבדיך. That is: Judge my cause and avenge the blood of Thy servants, which the sons of the Fool (that is, of Esau, who, as was reported in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, is called a Fool, by which the Christians are to be understood, who, as was shown in the said sixteenth chapter under the twenty-fourth name that the Jews give to the Christians, are called the foolish people and fools) have shed in wrath. Destroy those who rise up against me, and send upon them a burning wrath, and fury, and anguish.

Furthermore, they pray on the aforementioned day, as can be seen in the Frankfurt Machsor fol. 58, col. 2. under the title Józer lejóm Kippur, and in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 81, col. 2. under the title Shacharit schel jom kippur, as follows: נפש נענה תבשר סליחה. פלטם מעומק שוחה. ולא יתקוממו יהיו That is: Proclaim forgiveness to the humbled soul; deliver them from the depth of the pit; and let our adversaries be rooted out, etc. And in another prayer, which stands at fol. 84, col. 1. 2. in the first part of the Prague Machsor under the aforementioned title, and which begins איומה בחר Ajúma bachár, they pray ליקר That is: He (understand: God) would root out the ten horns (namely, Christendom, which is thus named, as has been mentioned in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the forty-second name that the Jews give to it) so that He might honor those who are planted in His house (understand: the Jews). Following this comes another short prayer, fol. 84, col. 2. in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, and fol. 60, col. 2. in the Frankfurt Machsor, which begins אך אתים בחין לפניך Ach athim bechín lefanécha, in which they petition God in the following manner: אך מגר מתקוממי צפוניך וגוי That is: Destroy the adversaries of Your hidden ones (namely, the Israelites), etc. Raise up the seed of Your proven ones, etc.

On the Day of Atonement they are also accustomed to pray a dreadful prayer, which is omitted from the printed Machzors but is written by them on slips of paper and laid into the book at the place where it belongs, as I myself have seen. This cursing-prayer is mentioned in the Machzor printed here in Frankfurt am Main in the year 1686 A.D., in quarto, with the German translation, at fol. 131, col. 1, where it reads: הגוים שני חסר כאן, That is: "The second (prayer, which begins with) Haggójim is missing here," in order to indicate where it belongs in the prayer book. The prayer itself, however, reads as follows, as can be seen in Mr. Wülfer's annotations on the Theriack, paginâ 351. and 352.:

הגוים אימים ומוטים קדר ואדומים בלעם קלעם גמומים דמומים הגוים גומר ומגוג אשכנז ותוגרמים דכאם הכאם זעומים מוחרמים הגוים הגרים קטורים לוד וארמים וזכרם שכחם תתחת שמים הגוים זרח נחת מוים ושמים חרמם כרמסם שיתם שוממים הגוים טבח נחס ויתר דאומים יסרם הסירם מהיות אומים הגוים כפתורים כסלוחים לטושים ולצומים לפתם כפתם סעורם רשומים הגוים מכשפ וארבאל משמעיס ורומים נפצם הפיצם שיתם חרמים הגוים סבא וחולדה סב חכה ורעמים עקרים קרקרים דויים עטומים הגוים פלשת ועמון אשור ועלומים צמתם המיתם תנם למלהומים הגוים קיר ומואב לודים וענמים רטשם נטשם דקים צנומים הגוים ששך ומדי וכיתים ולב קמים העבם העינם לאין הקומים

That is: destroy and scatter (that is, root out) the heathens, the wicked giants, the Kedarenes and Edomites (that is, Turks and Christians), so that they may be cut off and hewn down (that is, exterminated). Shatter and strike the abominable and accursed (or cursed) heathens, Gomer and Magog, Ashkenaz and Togarmah (of whom mention is made in Gen 10:2-3). Chastise the heathens, the Hagarenes, the Keturahites, the Lydians, and the Arameans (or Syrians), and cause them to be forgotten under heaven. Destroy, trample down, and lay waste the heathens of the lineage of Zerah, Nahath, the Mizraites, and the Shammaites (of whom one may read in Gen 36:13). Punish the heathens of the lineage of Tebah, Gaham, and the remaining Reumites (of whom mention is made in Gen 22:24), and do away with them so that they are peoples no more. Attack the heathens, the Capthorim, the Casluhim, the Letushim, and the Leummim (of whom mention is made in Gen 10:14-15 and Gen 25:3), and bind them so that they are driven by the storm wind and the thunder. Scatter and cast down the heathens of the lineage of Mibsam and Abdeel, and the Mishmaites and Dumahites (of whom mention is made in Gen 25:13-14), and reduce them to pieces. Root out and destroy the heathens of the lineage of Seba, Havilah, Sabtecah, and Raamah (of whom one may read in Gen 10:7), so that they become faint and darkened. Exterminate and slay the heathens, the Philistines, Ammonites, Assyrians, and Elamites, and give them over to destruction. Smite (or shatter) the heathens of Kir, the Moabites, the Lydians, and the Anamim (of whom mention is made in Gen 10:13), and leave them thin and bare. Have abhorrence for the heathens, those of Sheshach (that is, Babel), the Medes, and the Chittites (that is, Italians), and for the disposition of those who rise up against us: darken them so that they cannot rise again.

This is the text of the aforementioned wicked blasphemous prayer, from which the Jews' godless and desperately evil disposition is plain to see, in that they curse all peoples in such a terrible manner and wish their destruction upon them, which has never been done by any people under the sun.

To be sure, the frivolous scoundrel Rabbi Lippmann attempted to interpret the matter differently in his Sépher Nizzáchon, pagina 194, numero 349, after it had been thrown in his face by a converted Jew named Peter; but it is nothing other than a cunning deception, intended to beguile the ignorant and credulous. After he had brought forward various things that the converted Peter had put to him, he writes concerning this matter as follows: והוסיף על 'הטאתו פשע ואמר בצומא רבא. אתם אומרים אימים זמזומים קרר ואדומים בלעם קלעם וכו' והנה אמרתי שאינו מבין הפשט. כי אין הדבר הפלה שהרי אין אנו אומרים אנה 'בלעם קלעם' וכו' 'אלא הדבר קבלה וצעקה וקאי על למעלה. כי סוף הפיוט שלפניו מסיים אנקתם אוון דופקי דלתותיך ואנו מבקשים שה"שיבין וישמע אנקתנו ואינו מפרש הצעקה או מה נעשה לנו על זה

מסיים הפייטן ומפרש הצעקה בפיוט זה וקובל שהגויס אימים וזמזומים אומרים עלינו זה לזה בלעם קלעם לכן אנו מבקשים מלפני השם יתברך הצלה לפני זה ופיוט זה נתקן כמו דברי ירמיה שנאמר שבתם וקימתם הביטה אני מנגינתם. That is: "He (Peter) committed one sin upon another, and spoke with great thirst (that is, zeal): You (Jews) say: Destroy and scatter the heathens, the wicked giants, the Kedarenes and Edomites, etc. But see, I answered him that he does not understand the plain meaning of these words, and that it is no prayer at all, for we do not say: O LORD, destroy and scatter them, etc.; rather, it is a crying and wailing, and refers to that which stands above (namely, in the conclusion of the preceding prayer); for the conclusion of the preceding rhymed prayer reads thus: Hear the sighing or crying of those who knock at your doors (that is, the Jews who call upon you); and we ask that the holy blessed GOD may perceive and hear our sighing (or crying); but the crying, or what has befallen us, is not explained, and therefore the Poet concludes (his work) and clearly sets forth the crying in these verses, and cries out that the heathens, the wicked giants, say to one another against us (Jews): Destroy them (the Jews) and scatter them (that is, exterminate them); therefore we beseech the holy blessed GOD that He would deliver us from this; and this verse is fashioned after the words of Jeremiah, where it is said (Lam 3:63): Behold their sitting down and their rising up; I am their song." These are the words of the wicked Rabbi Lippmann.

From this it is plain to see in what manner he seeks to twist the matter and to talk us into believing something against his own conscience and better knowledge, as though the true meaning of the Hebrew words were that the nations of the world whose names are mentioned therein wish such evil upon the Jews, and that for this reason they call upon God to preserve them from such harm. And according to his account, the Hebrew words are to be interpreted as follows: The heathens, the wicked giants, the Kedarenes and Edomites (say:) destroy and scatter them (namely the Jews), so that they may be cut open and hewn down (that is, exterminated). The heathens Gomer and Magog, Ashkenaz and Togarmah (say:) shatter and strike the abominable and accursed (Jews), etc. The falsity of this pretense is, however, plainly evident from the fact that in the Hebrew the word אומרים omerim, which means "to speak," and the name "Jews" do not appear at all, and if that were the correct interpretation, such words would necessarily have had to be added, without which the interpretation is forced. It is likewise false that this is not a prayer but rather an explanation and indication of the outcry mentioned at the end of the preceding prayer, for it is certainly a prayer, and indeed a distinct prayer, in which they call upon God for the destruction of all nations, as the translation demonstrates, and it cannot be connected to the preceding prayer at all. It is indeed sufficiently apparent from what has already been reported above how the Jews are accustomed to curse other nations, and Christians in particular, in a most godless manner; how then should such clear words be interpreted as anything other than Jewish curses against all nations, given that they cannot be understood in any other way? The Jews would also not leave this out of their prayer books if they were not convinced in their own consciences that it is a curse-prayer against Christians and all nations, and if they did not fear it for that very reason.

The fraudulent claim of Rabbi Lipmann is also irrefutably evident from the prayer that immediately follows the aforementioned curse-prayer, and which is found in the Machsor printed here in Frankfurt in the year 1686 A.D., with the German translation, pagina 131, and in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 101, col. 1; for therein the destruction of the nations is further mentioned, and the words from beginning to end read as follows:

ובְּכֹל תוֹקֶה יֵאָמֶן עֶזוֹ הוֹלִילֶךָ. שְׁלוֹת שׁוֹדְדִים וְשֹׁאֲנוֹתָם בְּהִילוּלֶךָ. וּבְכֹל רָגֶשׁ יוֹמֶתֶק סוֹד

 That is: And the strength of Your praise shall be confirmed with all might, when You shall turn the quiet and peaceful state of the despoilers (that is, the nations of the world who rob us) into wailing. And in every great assembly (of the Israelites, in the synagogues) a sweet counsel shall be held by Your faithful ones (Jews), when You shall raise the horns of Your righteous ones in Your palaces. And at every step there shall be leaping and jumping to honor You, when You shall destroy the princes of the transgressors (that is, the nations of the world) from the earth. And with all might a song of praise shall be sung to You, when You shall heal Your own peculiar people from the wound of their injuries. And in all regions (or lands) there shall be sweet singing to glorify You, when You shall cast down the kings of the earth from their glory. And with all tongues Your name alone shall be exalted, when You shall cause the branch of Your planting (namely, the Israelites) to dwell in safety alone. And in every place the sound of Your cymbals shall be played with every hand, when You shall strip the palaces of the Unclean (that is, the Christians and other nations) of their wealth. And everywhere that the Israelites encamp or travel, You shall arise and return again, when You shall bring back Your scattered ones by the tens of thousands (into the Promised Land). And in all ways the strength of Your host shall be spoken of, when You shall gladden Your people (namely, the Jews), as they place their trust in You. And in all places the dominion of Your unity shall be acknowledged as King, when You shall root out the multitude of the violent ones to destruction. And Your holy name shall be exalted with all manner of blessings, when You shall renew the youth of Your faithful ones like an eagle. Thus far go the words of this prayer. Now, just as the destruction and extermination mentioned therein is understood to refer to the Christians and other nations of the world, and not to the Jews, so too do the terrible curses mentioned in the preceding prayer apply to those nations, and not to the Jews. Jews themselves, to whom I have presented this prayer, have also personally admitted to me that it is directed against all the nations of the world.

The truth of this is also clearly visible from another prayer which they customarily recite on the Day of Atonement, which has been entirely omitted in the new Machzors out of fear of the Christians, but stands quite incompletely in the first part of the Prague Machzor, fol. 101, col. 2, following immediately after the preceding passage; in it they make mention of the downfall of the dominions of all peoples, and its words, as may be seen in the aforementioned Mr. Wülfer's annotations on the Jewish Theriack, paginâ 349, read as follows: מלכותם באבדך עובדי פסילי נסכים תיכון מלכותך מלך מלכי המלכים מלכותם בבלעך בוטחי הבל העתוים שמים וארץ שבחך יהו מביעים מלכותם בנרעך מקימי אשרים וחמנים רוממותך יקראו בגרון המונים חמונים מלכותם בדכאך דורשי קטב תהוה ובעלים קדושה ועוז תיסד כפי עוללים מלכותם בהרסך המתהללים באלילים צדקתך יגידו באיים אל אלים מלכותם בובחך המטהרים והמתקדשים פאר מלוכה ינחלו נטעי כנת קדושים מלכותם בעמק שטי כזב פוני אל רחבים עילוי כבוד שמך יהנו כל באהבים מלכותם בחבלך סוגדי מעשה הרשיפ סיפור מעשיך ברינה יפצחו מאירשים מלכותם בטאטאך טועני עצבים עשויים פרקים נועם דיעה אמתך יתמלאון ארקים מלכותם בידך כורעי נסכל משא לעיפה משתחווים כל בשר לפניך עושה : שחר ועיפה מלכותם בבלותך לנער רשעים מארץ לכן במלכו ישמחו השמים ותגל הארץ : That is: When You, O King of all kings, shall utterly destroy the kingdom of those who serve molten images, then Your kingdom shall be established. When You shall overthrow the kingdom of those who trust in vanity and error, then heaven and earth shall proclaim Your praise. When You shall root out the kingdom of those who erect groves and sun-images, then great multitudes of people shall cry out Your majesty with full throat. When You shall shatter the kingdom of those who seek destruction, vanity, and Baal, then You shall establish holiness and strength, as it were from the mouths of young children. When You shall overthrow the kingdom of those who boast of idols, then men shall declare Your righteousness, O God, among the islands, unto the mighty. When You shall punish the kingdom of those who purify and sanctify themselves (that is, the Turks and Christians, as has been demonstrated in the eleventh chapter of the first part), then the plants of the branch of the holy ones (that is, the Jews) shall inherit the royal crown. When You shall hold in abhorrence the kingdom of those who turn to lies and incline themselves toward the proud, then all shall give praise and honor to Your name out of love. When You shall destroy the kingdom of those who bow before the work of craftsmen, then those who speak shall break forth in song, recounting Your works. When You shall sweep away the kingdom of those who lay their idols made with joints upon beasts of burden, so that they grow weary carrying the load, then the lands shall be filled with the pleasantness of the knowledge of Your word. When You shall reject the kingdom of those who bow down (before idols) which are loaded (upon animals) so that they grow weary under the burden, then all flesh shall prostrate itself before You, O Creator of the dawn and of darkness. When You shall destroy their kingdom and shake the wicked from the earth (that is, root them out), then the heavens shall rejoice and the earth shall be glad when You reign. These are the words of the prayer. Just as nothing other than the destruction and annihilation of all the kingdoms of the peoples upon earth, and the downfall of such peoples, is spoken of herein, so too in the aforementioned curse-prayer nothing other than the extermination and annihilation of all peoples is treated, for which the Jews wait with anguish, yet in vain.

Beyond the above, they are accustomed at the Day of Atonement, as found in the first part of the Prager Machsor fol. 124, col. 2. under the title Musaph schel jom kippur, in a prayer which begins אורח תזריח לחשיכה Orechá tasríach lachaschécha, to call upon God in the following manner: צולה: פצנו משאון גלים: שבור זרוע מלכות רשע. תחריב באפך. קומה בחרוגך על גאים. רומה בעורך ורומם שפלים. שבור זרוע מלכות רשע : that is, "Deliver us from the roaring of the waves; dry up the deep in Your anger; arise in Your wrath against the proud; exalt Yourself in Your power and raise up the lowly; break the arm of the wicked kingdom" (that is, of Christendom, as has been indicated in the seventeenth chapter of the first part, under the eleventh name which is given to it). The very same is also to be found in the Machsor, fol. 165, col. 1. printed here in Frankfurt with the German translation in the year 1686 A.D., but in place of מלכות רשע Malchuth réscha, that is, "of the wicked kingdom," there stands מלכות רשעים Malchúth reschaím, that is, "of the kingdom of the wicked"; and in the Machsor likewise printed here in Frankfurt in the year 1690, such words have been omitted entirely out of fear.

On the day before the Day of Atonement, the men among the Jews customarily slaughter a rooster, and the women a hen, preferably not red but white, whenever they can be obtained. These animals are, in their view, to bear their sins and must die in their place. Such a rooster or hen is called כפרה

Cappóro, that is, an atonement. Concerning this, the following is written in the German-Hebrew Sepher minháigim, printed at Dürenfort in the year 1692, fol. 37, col. 2., under the title ערב יום כפור Eref'jom kippur: מן פלעגט כפרות צו מאכן • אן נערט אן האן אן אן מאן • און 'אן הון צו איינר פרוי • און 'פאר אן פרוי דיא שוואנגר איז נעמט אן האן און 'אן הון פאן וועגן דעס קינד וועגן • דער בעל הבית מאכט פֿר 'זיך • דער נאך פֿאר זיין הויז גיזינד • דען דער כהן גדול האט פֿער מכפר גוועזן פֿאר זיך 'און דער נאך פֿאר זיין הויז גיזינד • דער נאך פֿאר כל ישראל • און 'דאס איז דער סדר פֿון דען כפרות • ער נעמט דען האן פֿון זיין האנט און 'זאגט די פסוקים : אולים מדרכ פשעם ומעונותיהם יתענו • ויזעקו אל יי 'בצר להם וממצוקותיהם יצילם : ישלח דברו וירפאם וימלט • משחיתותם יודו לי 'חסדו ונפלאותיו לבני אדם • ויזבחו זבחי תודה ויספרו מעשיו ברנה אב 'יש עליו מלאך מליץ אחד מני אלף להגיד לאדם ישרו ויחננו ויאמר פדעהו מרדת שחת מצאתי כפר • און 'שחיינ'ט דים כפרה דרייא מאל אום דען קאפֿ און 'זאגט צו פיטס בקי זו חילופתי • זה תמורת • זה כפרתי • זה התרגול ילך למיתה ואני אלך לחיים טובים עם כל חילופתי : that is, one customarily makes Cappóros, that is, atonements: one takes a rooster for a man, and a hen for a woman, and for a woman who is pregnant one takes a rooster and a hen, on account of the child. The head of the household performs it first for himself, then for his household; for the High Priest likewise first made atonement for himself, then for his household, and finally for all Israel. This, however, is the practice of the Cappóros, or atonements: he takes the rooster in his hand and speaks these verses (from Ps 107:17, 13, 20, 21): "Fools are afflicted because of their transgressions and because of their iniquities. Then they cry out to the LORD in their distress, and He delivers them from their troubles. He sends His word and heals them, and rescues them from their destruction. Let these give thanks to the LORD for His goodness, and for His wonders before the children of men, and offer sacrifices of thanksgiving, and recount His works with rejoicing." (And from Job 33:23-24:) "But if there be for him an angel, an advocate, one among a thousand, to declare to man his uprightness, then He (God) is gracious to him and says: Deliver him, that he may not go down into destruction, for I have found an atonement." And he swings the Cappóro (namely the rooster) three times around the head, and says at each time: "This is my exchange (or: in my stead); this is in my place; this is my Cappóro, or atonement. This rooster shall go to death, but I, together with all Israel, shall go to the good (that is, the blessed) life. Amen, etc." Concerning this, one may also consult the prayer book printed here in Frankfurt in quarto, fol. 28, col. 1. 2.

When a poor Jew cannot buy a rooster, he seeks out a Christian upon whom he may load his sins, concerning which the converted Jew Ferdinand Hess, in the 7th chapter of the second part of his Judengeissel, writes as follows: Those among the Jews who are so poor that they cannot buy a rooster run out early in the morning onto the road until they happen to find a Christian, to whom they give three or four pennies, and ask him whether he would be their Cappóro, which is to say: I must die and have sinned; go to hell in my place, for the forgiveness of my sins, and die in my stead. And thus they curse us Christians with the curse כפרה מיתה משונה Cappóro mító meschúnno, That is: You must go to death for my sin and die; meaning thereby that the three or four pennies can transfer their sins, which are heaped heavily upon them, onto the neck of the Christian, who is to bear the sin for them and atone and suffer for it. Exactly the same is also written by the converted Victor von Carben in the 16th chapter of his little book on the Jews. Likewise, the most learned Mr. Johann Jacob Schudt, duly appointed Conrector of the Gymnasium here in Frankfurt, reports in his Compendio historie Judaice, p. 553, that he himself witnessed in Hamburg that the Jews had done this, which he also related to me personally in conversation.

That this must be true is reasonably to be concluded from the fact that the Jews believe that the other nations, and in particular the Edomites, by whom they understand the Christians, must bear their sins and atone for them. Therefore it is written in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 14, col. 4. in the Parascha Toledóth Nóach as follows: השם רחום וחנון ומרחם על ישראל ואף על פי שיחטא האדם באיני רוצה השם להלקותו בעצמו אלא תולה הקללה והיסורים באחרים לכפר על בניו that is, God is merciful and gracious, and has compassion on Israel; and although man sins, God does not wish to strike him himself, but rather lets the curse and the punishments fall upon others, so that His children may be reconciled. And at fol. 152, col. 3. of the aforementioned book, in the Parascha Nizzayim, Veétten adam tachtécha uleümmím táchath nafschécha, that is, "Therefore will I give men in thy stead, and peoples for thy soul," it is read thus: ואֶתֵּן אָדָם תַּחֲתֶיךָ וְלְאַמִּים תַּחֲתֶיךָ: נְאֻמַּת אֱלֹהִים תַּחֲתֶיךָ אֲמָרוּ וְכָרוֹנִם לְכַרְכָּה אַל תִּקְרִי אָדָם אֶלָּא אֱלֹהִים: וְלְאַמִּים תַּחֲתֶיךָ נִפְשֶׁךָ בְּאוֹמְרוֹ וְלֹאִם מְלֹאִם יֵאָמֵר. כִּי אַחֵר שְׁנֵה הָאִישׁ חָטָא וְנִגְזְרָה עָלָיו גְּזִירָה הַקִּבֵּ"ה מִבְּטָל אֶת הַגְּזִירָה מֵאִישׁ זֶה אַחֵר שֶׁהָיָה אִישׁ קֹדֶשׁ וְהוֹפֵךְ הַגְּזִירָה עַל אִישׁ אַחֵר חוֹטֵא מִזֵּרֵעַ אֲדָוִים בְּעֵנֶן שֶׁהָרַבִּי: that is, (our Rabbis) of blessed memory say (concerning the words) Veétten adam tachtécha, that is, "Therefore will I give men in thy stead," read not adam, that is, "men," but rather Edom, that is, Edomites (by whom the Christians are understood; and the words) "and peoples for thy soul" signify as much as (the words of Gen 25:23) "and one people shall be stronger than the other" (which are said of Jacob and Esau, or their descendants). For when a man has sinned and a judgment has been passed upon him, the Holy Blessed God annuls that judgment so that it does not fall upon that same man, after he (through repentance) becomes a new man, and turns it upon another sinful man of the seed of Edom (that is, upon a Christian), so that Satan may not accuse such a (penitent) man. And at fol. 92, col. 2. in the aforementioned book Zerór hammór, it is written in the Parascha Vajikra as follows: כְּשֶׁהֵקֵף הַיָּהוָה הַגְּזִירָה מֵעַל אִישׁ פָּרְטִי הוּא מְזַמֵּן לְמִדַּת הַדִּין בְּמָקוֹם זֶה הָאִישׁ : that is, when the Holy Blessed God turns a judgment away from a particular man, He appoints, in accordance with the attribute of justice, in the place of this sinning man another man who is descended from the stock of Edom, upon whom the judgment is fulfilled, so that this one comes in the place of that one.

More on this can also be found in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 39, col. 4, and fol. 40, col. 1, in the 68th chapter under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu, and fol. 125, col. 2, in the 8th chapter under the title Scháar réscha disér ánpin. And in the little book Schschecháth léket, it is taught at numerô 3, under the title Maschiach uthechiáth hamméthim, as well as in the Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 58, col. 1, numerô 366: הֵקֵב"ה נוֹטֵל כָּל עֲוֹנוֹתֵיהֶם שֶׁל יִשְׂרָאֵל וְנוֹתֵנָם עַל עֲשׂוֹ הָרָשָׁע : that is, the holy and blessed God takes all the sins of the Israelites and lays them upon the wicked Esau (that is, Christendom). Therefore, in the aforementioned Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 276, col. 4, numerô 885, one reads: בְּשָׁעָה שֶׁיִּשְׂרָאֵל חוֹטְאִין אֲמוֹת הָעוֹלָם לוֹקִין : that is, at the time when the Israelites sin, the nations of the world are struck. And in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 19, col. 4, numerô 15, under the title Ummóth haólam, it stands thus: בשביל שחוטאים ישראל אף האומות לוקין. אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי אלו היו יודעין האומות שהן לוקין כשחוטאים ישראל היו מעמידים שני שומרים לכל אחד מישראל ויחטא : that is, because the Israelites sin, the nations are also punished. Rabbi Jehóschcha, the son of Levi, has said: if the nations knew that they are struck whenever the Israelites sin, they would station two guards beside every single Israelite to prevent him from sinning.

In this manner, the Roman Emperor Lupinus is said to have been put to death and burned in place of Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tardejon; concerning which, the following is read in the book Emek hammélech fol. 40, col. 1. in the 68th chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu: א"ר טו לי סוריאלי שר הפנים : באותו שעה צוני לירד למטה וירדתי וטרדתי את לופיינוס דמ"חג מהיכלו שהיה ישן בו בלילה והולכתינהו בבית האסורין שישב בו רבי חנניא בן תרדיון לקחת חזירים וכלבים. והכנסתי את רבי חנניא בן תרדיון בהיכלו שהיה יושב ואומר נפלאות בבית המדרש ומלמד לאבירי ישראל תורה והחלפתי דמות דיוקני ראשם נראה להם לופיינוס דמ"חג כמו רבי חנניא בן תרדיון והוא ורבי נחוניא בן הקנה חתכו את ראשו ואשתו של רבי חנניא באשתו של דמ"חג ובתו של דמ"חג נתחלפה בבתו של רבי חנניא בן תרדיון ורבי חנניא בן תרדיון קשר כתר מלכות ומלך על גפ"ם הרשעה בצורת פנים של לופיינוס דמ"חג ששה חדשים והרג בהם ששת אלפים צריפ"ט"י אלף צריפ"טמי בכל חדש ואחר כך נסתלק עם חבריו חיים למעלה בקדושה ובטהרה והעמידו לופיינוס בצורת רבי חנניא בן תרדיון לפני גפ"ם הרשעה ותפשוהו והטילוהו והשליכוהו באש. ומי הוא שהטילו באש תחת רבי חנניא לופיינוס והלא חתכו את ראשו אלא אחר שהמיתוהו חזרו והחיו אותו בית דין : That is: Rabbi Ismaél said: Súriel, the prince of the countenance, spoke to me: my dear friend, I will tell you what Sabáriel, the Lord, the God of Israel, did at that same time (when the Roman Emperor Lúpinus sought to put Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tárdejon, to death). He commanded me to come down (from Heaven), and when I had come down, I drove the Emperor (for דמ"ח signifies, by Athbasch, as much as קיסר, Késar, that is, Emperor) Lúpinus out of his palace, in which he slept by night, and led him into the prison in which Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tárdejon, sat, to receive swine and dogs; and I brought Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tárdejon, into that same palace, he who spoke wondrous things in the school and taught the heroes of Israel the Law. And I exchanged the form of their heads, so that Emperor Lúpinus appeared to them (namely, to the Romans) as though he were Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tárdejon; and he (Rabbi Chanánja) and Rabbi Nechúnja, the son of *Káne*h, cut off his head. But the wife of Rabbi Chanánja was exchanged with the Emperor's consort, and the Emperor's daughter with the daughter of Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tárdejon (so that each appeared and was taken for the other in outward form). And Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tárdejon, put on the imperial crown and reigned as king over wicked Rome, in the form of Emperor Lupinus, for six months, and killed in those six months six thousand princes (for the word צריפטמי, Zariftemi, signifies by Athbasch as much as הגמונים, hegmónim, that is, princes and high commanders), one thousand princes in each month. After this, he was taken up alive into Heaven with his companions in holiness and purity; but Lupinus was placed before wicked Rome in the form of Rabbi Chanánja, the son of Tardejon, seized, and thrown into the fire. Who then threw him into the fire? Had they not already cut off his head (and thereby killed him in such a way that he could not be put to death a second time)? After he had been killed, the supreme (heavenly) court brought him back to life, and the Romans (for גפמי, Zagpimi, signifies by Athbasch הרומים, harómim, that is, the Romans) seized him and threw him into the fire. These are the words of the book Emek hammélech, and the same is also to be found in the Sepher Júchasin fol. 31, col. 2., and is taken from the Medrasch. According to the content of this fable, therefore, the Emperor Lupinus is said to have been burned in place of Rabbi Chanánja.

Also read in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth, fol. 62, col. 2, is that a certain Roman was killed in place of Rabbi Eliezer, and the words there read as follows: רבי אלעזר על לבית הכסא אתא ההוא רומאי דחקיה קם רבי אלעזר ונפק אהא דרקונא שמטיה רבי אלעזר לרכשיה קרי עליה רבי אלעזר ואתן אדם תחתין אל תקרי אדם אלא אדם That is: Rabbi Eliezer went into a privy, and when a Roman also came in and pressed against him (or shoved him), Rabbi Eliezer stood up and went out; whereupon a serpent came and tore out his (the Roman's) rectum (having slithered into his body and killed him, as is expounded in the Jalkut Schimóni on Esaias, fol. 50, col. 3, numero 316). Then Rabbi Eliezer called out over him (and said, it is written Isa 43:4): "Therefore I will give ádam, that is, man, in your place"; read (however) not ádam, that is, man, but Edom, that is, Edomite.

Since the Jews thus imagine that the Edomites, by whom they understand the Christians, must bear their sins and suffer the punishment thereof, they call upon God in a short prayer which begins: תפן באין פיד טיה רפשינו Téfen beón pid tiach riffchénu, and which is found under the title Józer lepharascháth schekalím, fol. 12, col. 2. in the thick Thephilla, and in the second part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 4, col. 2., in the following manner: תקרא דרור: כמאז בו לההפישנו • תת המון גוים תחת נפשנו That is: Proclaim a liberty as in former times, thereby to set us free (from captivity), and give the multitude of the nations in our stead (that is, as may be seen in the Commentario thereon in the aforementioned Prague Machsor: תתום לסבול הרעה המעוהדה לבא עלינו That is: Let them bear the misfortune which is prepared to come upon us). Furthermore, in the said Prague Machsor, in the cited fourth folio, col. 2., in the Commentario on the words להדבר כפרם Cofrá́m lehá́dber, which are read in the prayer beginning: קצובה היא זאת וגו' Kezúva hi soth, &c., the following is written: כפרם להדבר אומות: העולם ינגפם בדבר והם כפרתן של ישראל שנאמר נתתי וגו' Cofram lehá́dber, (which mean) to slay their (the Israelites') atonement by pestilence, signify that the nations of the world shall be struck with pestilence and shall be the Cappóro, that is, the atonement, of the Israelites, as it is said (Isa 43:3): I have given Egypt as your atonement, &c. Beyond this, they say in a prayer which begins: אז מאז ומת ננו As meas sammótha &c., which is found under the aforementioned title Józer lepharascháth schekalím, in the thick Tefillah fol. 11, col. 3. 4. and in the second part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 3, col. 2. and fol. 4, col. 1, in the following manner: תת לאומים משאת: כפרם בן תת That is: He (namely God) has said that He would give the nations over to burning as their (understand: the Israelites') atonement; which words are explained in the Commentario of the Prague Machsor as follows: דבר הק"בה לתת אומות העולם • תחת ישראל בשריפה בגיהנם That is: The Holy One, blessed be He, has said that He would give the nations of the world, in the place of the Israelites, into the burning of Hell, as it is said (Isa 43:3): I have given Egypt as your ransom-offering (or your atonement), the Moors and the Sabaeans in your stead.

In the third book of Moses, in chapter 16, v. 5, etc., it is written that God commanded that on the Day of Atonement two goats should be taken for a sacrifice, and the one that fell to Him by lot should be offered; upon the head of the other, however, the high priest Aaron was to lay his hands, and upon it confess all the sins and transgressions of the children of Israel, and place them upon its head, and send it away into the wilderness by the hand of a man, together with those sins. In what manner, however, the confession and acknowledgment of sins took place, this is shown to us by the Talmudic tractate Yoma fol. 66, col. I, in these words: בא לו אצל שער המשתלה וסומך שתי ידיו עליו ומתודה וכך היה אומר אנה השם חטאו עו פשעו לפניך עמך בית ישראל אנה השם כפר נא לחטאים ולעוונות ולפשעים שחטאו ושפגעו לפניך עמך בית ישראל ככתוב בתורת משה עבדך לאמור כי ביום הזה יכפר עליכם לטהר אתכם מכל חטאותיכם לפני ה' תטהרו והכהנים והעם עומדים בעזרה כשהיו שומעין שם המפורש שהוא יוצא מפי כהן גדול כורעים ומשתחווים ונופלין על פניהם ואומרים ברוך כבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד: That is: When he (namely the high priest) had come to the goat that was to have been sent away (into the wilderness), he laid both his hands upon it and made the confession, and spoke thus: O Lord! Your people, the house of Israel, have sinned, transgressed, and trespassed before You. O Lord! Atone now for their sins and transgressions and trespasses, which Your people, the house of Israel, have committed before You, as it is written in the law of Your servant Moses, where it is said (Lev 16:30): For on this day shall he (namely the high priest) make atonement for you, to cleanse you from all your sins. Before the LORD you shall be clean. The priests and the people stood in the forecourt, and when they heard the Schem hammephorásch (that is, the name of God, Jehovah), which went forth from the mouth of the high priest, they bowed and bent themselves down, and fell upon their faces, and said: Blessed be the name of the glory of His kingdom forever and ever. Thereupon the goat was handed over to the man who had to lead it into the wilderness; and when he arrived at the appointed place, at a high mountain, at a steep cliff, he pushed the goat backward down the cliff, so that it tumbled down and was broken to pieces before it reached the halfway point of the mountain, as may be seen in fol. 67, col. I of the aforementioned tractate Yoma.

This goat was supposed to have been given as a gift by the Jews every year to the supreme devil Sammaël, as their greatest enemy and accuser before God, to the end that he might not oppose them and accuse them before God; concerning which it is written in the 46th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer as follows: רבנו של עולם על כל אומות העולם נתה לי רשות על ישראל אין אתה נותן לי רשות אמר לו הרי יש לך רשות עליהן ביום הכפורים אם יש להם חטא ואם לאו אין לך עליהן רשות לפיכך נותנין לו שוחד ביום הכפורים שלא לבטל קרבן של ישראל שנאמר גורל אחד ליהו' וגורל אחד לעזאזל. גורלו של הקב"ה קרבן עולה וגורלו של עזאזל שער חטאת וכל עוונותיהם של ישראל עליו שנאמר ונשא השעיר עליו את כל עוונותיהם. ראה סמאל שלא נמצא בהם חטא ביום הכפורים אמר לפניו רבנו של עולם יש לך עם אחד בארץ בארץ כמלאכי השרת בשמים. מה מלאכי השרת אין להם קפיצין כך הם ישראל עומדים על רגליהם ביום הכפורים. מה מלאכי השרת אין להם אכילה ושתייה כך ישראל אין להם אכילה ושתייה ביום הכפורים. מה מלאכי השרת נקיים מכל חטא כך ישראל נקיים מכל חטא ביום הכפורים. מה מלאכי השרת שלום מתוך ביניהם כך הם ישראל שלום מתוך ביניהם ביום הכפורים. והקב"ה שומע עדותן של ישראל מן הקטיגור שלהם ומכפר על המזבח ועל הכהנים. ועל כל הקהל למגדול ועד קטן שנ' 'וכפר את מקדש הקדש': That is: On the day on which the Law was given, Sammaël spoke to the holy blessed God: "O Lord of the world! You have given me power over all the nations of the world, but over the Israelites you give me no power." He answered him: "See, I give you power over them on the Day of Atonement (which is called by the Jews the long day), when a sin is found among them; but if not, you shall have no power over them." For this reason the Israelites give him a gift (namely the goat) on the Day of Atonement, so that he might not (through his accusation) annul their offering, as it is said (Lev 16:8): "One lot for the LORD, and the other for Azazel." The lot of the holy blessed God is for a burnt offering, and the lot of Azazel is for the goat of the sin offering, upon which all the sins of Israel rest, as it is said (Lev 16:22): so that the goat shall bear all their transgressions upon him (into the wilderness). Now when Sammaël sees that on the Day of Atonement no sin is to be found among them, he speaks to Him: "O Lord of the world! You have a people upon the earth who are like the ministering angels in heaven. Just as the ministering angels do not leap about, so the Israelites stand (continually) upon their feet on the Day of Atonement. Just as the ministering angels neither eat nor drink, so the Israelites likewise neither eat nor drink on the Day of Atonement. Just as the ministering angels are pure from all sin, so the Israelites too are pure from all sin on the Day of Atonement. Just as there is peace (or unity) among the ministering angels, so too there is peace (or unity) among the Israelites on the Day of Atonement." After the holy blessed God thus hears this testimony concerning the Israelites from their accuser (Sammaël), He atones for the altar, and the priests, and the entire congregation, from the greatest to the least, as it is said (Lev 16:33): "And he shall thus make atonement for the holy sanctuary." This same passage is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 138, col. 4, in the Parashah Acharé moth (or mos), and in Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman's Commentario on the aforementioned Five Books of Moses, fol. 91, col. 3, in the said Parashah, as well as in the book Toledóth Yitzhak, fol. 76, col. 1, in the mentioned Parashah, and in various other places besides.

Regarding the word Asasel: Rabbi Salomon Jarchi teaches that a high and steep mountain is to be understood by it, when he writes in his commentary on Lev 16:8: עזאזל הוא הר עז וקשה צוק גבוה, that is, Asasel signifies a strong, rough, and steep mountain; the same is also to be found in the commentary of Aben Ezra on the same passage. So too, in the little book of Rabbi Saadia, Sépher baēmúnóth vehadeóth, fol. 24, col. 4, under the title Maámar schelischí Zivvui veashará, one reads: עזאזל שם הר כמו שאמר במקום אחר הוא הכה את אדום בגיא מלח, Asasel is the name of a mountain, just as it is said in another place (2 Kgs 14:7): He also smote ten thousand Edomites in the Valley of Salt, and took Selah by war, and called it Joktheel unto this day. Likewise, (Josh 15:11) Jabneel, and (1 Chr 20:16) Jeruel, and (Josh 18:27) Jirpeel are also place names. Others hold that the goat was named thus, and that this word is compounded from the word עז, es, which means a goat, and אזל, asal, which means to go, because the goat had to go into the wilderness. Still others, however, understand by it the chief devil Sammael, to whom the goat was sent as a gift; for this reason one reads in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 99, col. 4, at the end, and fol. 100, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parascha Acharé moth: לפי שלפעמים השוטה כשעומד בהיכל המלך מדבר לפני המלך דברים מעברי - המלך שעושים רועם במלך כל אחד משרי המלך מפשיט לבושו ונותנו לו בענין שידבר טוב אל המלך כן רצה השם יתברך שנשלח זה השעיר לעזאזל הוא שטן הוא יצר הרע הוא נחש הוא סמאל שהוא השם, That is: Because sometimes a fool stands in a royal palace and speaks before the king on behalf of the king's servants, who give the king cause for reflection (so that he casts his disfavor upon the servant), each of the king's princes strips off his garment and gives it to the fool, so that he may speak well of him before the king. So too did the Blessed God desire that we send the goat to Asasel, that is, to Satan, to the evil inclination, to the serpent, to Sammael, the deadly poison, etc., so that he might speak well before the King. So too, in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parascha Acharé moth, Sammael is understood by Asasel; and it has been shown in the eighteenth chapter of the first part that Sammael is also called Asasel. In the Jalkut Schimóni on the Books of Moses, fol. 12, col. 2-3, numero 44, one reads that two angels, namely Schamchasai and Asasel, requested of God that He might permit them to dwell upon the earth, and that this was granted to them; and after they had sinned, Schamchasai did penance; but concerning Asasel one reads there that he remained steadfast in his godless manner of seducing men through the adornment of women to evil thoughts, in these words: עזאזל לא חזר בתשובה: ועדיין הוא עומד בקלקולו להטות בני אדם לדבר עבירה במיני צבעונין של נשים ולכך היו ישראל מקריבין קרבנות ביום הכפורים איל אחד ליי' שיכפר על ישראל ואיל אחד לעזאזל, That is: But Asael did no penance, and remains still in his destructive manner, enticing men to transgression through the various colors of women's garments. For this reason the Israelites offered sacrifices on the Day of Atonement, one ram (or goat) to the Lord, that He might atone for the Israelites, and one to Asasel, who had to bear the sins of the Israelites; and this is the Asasel of whom mention is made in the Law.

According to the teaching of the Rabbis, the goat sent into the wilderness and given as a gift to the Devil, upon which the sins of the Jews were laid, was supposed to signify Esau and his descendants, who are held to be the Christians of today; and for this reason not only Esau but also Christendom is called Seïr, that is, a goat. That Esau was signified by the goat sent into the wilderness and handed over to the Devil can be seen in the Jalkut chádascb fol. 102, col. 3. under the title Jamím noraím, from the 103rd chapter of the book Megalléh amykkóth, where it is written as follows: גלה יעקב לעשו שילך לדרכו שעירה שהוא: שעריר המשתלה ביום הכפורים שעריר לעזאל that is, Jacob indicated to Esau (Gen 33:14) that he should go his way to Seïr, because he was the goat that was sent (into the wilderness) on the Day of Atonement, as a goat for Azazel. Something equivalent is also found in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 60, col. 1., from Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati, in the Parasha Vajischlach, on the words of Gen 33:16, "So Esau returned that day on his way to Seïr," where it is taught as follows: גלה יעקב לעשו שילך לדרכו שעירה שהוא: שעריר המשתלה ביום הכפורים שעריר לעזאל that is, He (namely Esau) is the goat that was given to Azazel. Likewise, in the Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 58, col. 1. numerô 366., one reads: באותה שעה נוטל הק"ב כל עונותם של ישראל ונותנם על עשו הרשע שנאמר ונשא השעיר עליו את כל עונותם ואין שעריר אלא עשו הרשע שנאמר הן הן עשו אחי איש שעריר that is, In that same hour (in which God says that His garment is red because He has trodden the winepress) the Holy One, blessed be He, takes all the transgressions (and sins) of the Israelites and lays them upon the wicked Esau, as it is said (Lev 16:22): that the goat shall thus bear all their transgressions upon him. But the goat signifies none other than the wicked Esau, as it is said (Gen 27:11): "Behold, my brother Esau is isch saïr," that is, a hairy man; and the word Saïr means not only hairy but also a goat, on account of his shaggy hair. And in the book Toledóth Yitzhak, fol. 76, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parasha Achare moth, it is written: אמרו בבראשית רבה ונשא that is, In Bereschith rábba it is said that the words (Lev 16:22), "that the Saïr, that is, the goat, shall bear upon him," signify Esau, as it is said (Gen 27:11): "Behold, my brother Esau is isch saïr," that is, a hairy man; and the words that follow, col avonothám, that is, all their transgressions, signify avonóth tam, that is, the transgressions of the upright one (Jacob), as it is said (Gen 25:27): Jacob was an isch tam, that is, an upright man. On this matter one may also consult the commentary of Rabbi Bechai on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 2, in the Parasha Toledóth, and the commentary of Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman on the said Five Books of Moses, fol. 91, col. 3, as well as the book Zerór hammór, fol. 100, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parasha Achare moth. That Esau is called a goat has also been indicated above in the 16th chapter of the first part, among the mocking names which the Jews give to him.

That the Christians, who according to the erroneous teaching of the Jews are supposed to be the race and descendants of Esau, must bear the sins of the Jews and, according to their mistaken fancy, must serve as their scapegoat: I prove this first from the fact that the Rabbis teach that whatever happened to the Fathers in ancient times was a prefiguration for their descendants, and that it has also subsequently come to pass and continues to come to pass. For in the book Cáphthor uphérach, fol. 40, col. 2, it is written as follows: אמרו ר"זל מעשה: אבות סימן לבנים וכל מה שאירע לאבות אירע לבנים בגלות דוגמתו, That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, say that whatever happened to the Fathers was a prefiguration for their children, and that everything that befell the Fathers also befell the children in the exilio, or exile. Likewise, in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 42, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajischlach, one reads: דע כי יש בפרשה בפרשה הזאת באור למה שארע ליעקב עם עשו: אחיו ורמז גם כן לדורות למה שעתיד שיארע לנו תמיד עם בני עשו, That is: Know that in this Parascha there is an explanation of what befell Jacob with his brother Esau, and that this also carries a meaning for the generations (or descendants) regarding what should befall us at all times in the future with the children of Esau (that is, the Christians). And in the book Irgiborim, fol. 52, col. 3, it is taught: אמרו ר"זל האבות היו סימן לבנים ולא פירשו ר"זל באיזו ענין היו סימן לבנים על: כן ראינו לבאר בכל עניניהם שהיו סימן לעתיד וענין תולדות האבות ועקרות האמהות הכל דע כי יש בפרשה בפרשה הזאת באור למה שארע ליעקב עם עשו: אחיו ורמז גם כן לדורות למה שעתיד שיארע לנו תמיד עם בני עשו, That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the Fathers were prefigurations for their sons, but they did not explain in what respect they were prefigurations of the sons; therefore we have seen it fit to expound this from all their affairs (and occurrences), that these were a prefiguration of things to come. Likewise, all the misfortunes of the Fathers and the barrenness of the mothers were a prefiguration of what would come to pass between the Israelites and the nations. Now if this is so, it follows from it that just as Esau, as mentioned above, had to bear Jacob's sins and had to serve as his scapegoat, so too must the Christians, as the supposed children and descendants of Esau, at all times bear the sins of the Jews and serve as their scapegoat, whom they hand over as a gift to the devil Azazel or Samael on their Day of Atonement.

Secondly, I assert this for the following reason: because the Jews teach that all their sins fall upon the head of Sammael's people on the Day of Atonement. For in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 101, col. 3. numero 21, under the title Jamim noraim, it is written as follows: כיון שמקבל סמאל השעיר וישראל מתוודין עונותיהם: אומר הק"ב לכל השבעים שרים הראיתם זה שהוא תמיד מקטר על בא סמאל ונעשה סניגור.

בני ועתה בשביל שער אחד שהתוודו בני כל עונותיהם עליו ונתנו לו הוא נעשה סניגור מיד מסכימים כולם שכל העונות יבאו על ראש אומתו. ואלו היו יודעים האומות משעיר זה לא היו מניחים הם ושלוש שריד לישראל בעולם אפילו יום אחד, That is: When Sammael receives the goat, after the Israelites have confessed their sins, he becomes their advocate or intercessor (on account of this gift, whereas he is otherwise their declared enemy and accuser). Thereupon the Holy Blessed GOD speaks to all seventy princes (of the nations, of whom more was said in the 18th chapter of the first part): Have you seen this one (Sammael), who always accuses my children (the Jews), how he has now become an intercessor on account of a goat, over which my children have confessed all their sins and which they have given to him as a gift? Thereupon they all unanimously agree that all sins shall come upon the head of his people; and if the nations knew the matter of this goat, they would (which GOD forbid) not leave a single one of the Israelites alive even for one day. And in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 129, col. 3, in the Parascha Acharé moth, the following is read from the Sohar: בשעתא דההוא שער משדרי ליה לההוא דסטרא דמסאבא עלייהו אתי לשבחא לישראל ווי להו לעמא דעכו"ם, That is: Woe to the idolatrous people (the children of Esau) at the time when the goat is sent to the accuser (of the Jews, to Sammaël), who is set over them (namely over the idolaters), for then he comes to praise the Israelites, and the Holy Blessed GOD causes the sins (of Israel) to fall upon the head of his people. So also in the book Emek hammelech fol. 146, col. 4. in the 37th Chapter, under the title Schäär réscha diser anpin, it is read: ועליו נאמר קדקד שער מתהלך באשמי. עשו איש שער כלו כאדרת: שער. של ישראל על ידי שער של יום הכיפורים שנאמר בו ונשא כל עוונותם אל ארץ גזירה על דרך שנאמר ובאו כל האלות האלה על שונאיך אשר רדפוך והדין נשלם בעמו וזרעו של עשו, That is: Esau was a hairy man (as is read in Gen 27:11), altogether rough like a hairy garment (as is written in Gen 25:25), and of him it is said (Ps 68:22, that GOD will shatter the head of His enemies): the hairy crown of him who walks in the sins of Israel (He will crush), through the goat of the Day of Atonement, of which it is stated (Lev 16:22) that the goat shall thus carry all their transgressions into the wilderness; just as it is said (Deut 30:7): And all these curses shall come upon your enemies who hate you and who persecuted you. This judgment, however, is executed upon the people and seed of Esau. Since, now, by the seed of Esau and the people of Sammael the Christians are understood, as has been clearly demonstrated above in the 16th and 18th chapters of the first part, we must, according to the Jews' superstition, bear their sins, be their scapegoats, and be handed over to the devil in their place. For this reason Christendom is also called a goat by them, as was indicated in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the thirty-sixth mocking name which they give to it.

Since all of this is as has been reported, there is absolutely no reason to doubt that what a man named Valentin Kärcher, who was beheaded here in Frankfurt in the preceding year of 1699, had declared about her will prove to be true. This man had, in the year 1698 in Sachsenhausen, killed his mother-in-law in a state of drunkenness; she had been a servant to the local Jews on the Sabbath and had performed all necessary work for them. Shortly before he was beheaded, according to the oral account given to me by the highly learned Mr. Difenbach, a duly appointed Evangelical Lutheran pastor, he testified about her that she had, every year on the Jews' Day of Atonement, allowed herself to be hired here as their scapegoat in exchange for a sum of money. I have also been told by others in addition to this that during that time she had put on a goatskin and had gotten down on her hands and feet like a goat, presenting herself before the Jews, taking their sins upon herself, and had also been spat upon by them; from which the presumptuous insolence of the Jews is plain to see, in that they dare to commit such highly punishable wantonness in the very midst of Christians. It is also worth noting here that the aforementioned woman undoubtedly represented all of Christendom, which, as has been reported, is called "the goat" by our sworn enemies, the Jews. The said woman, however, received her well-deserved reward, in that she came to a very wretched end.

At the festival of Tabernacles, which falls on the 15th day of September and lasts eight days, the Jews customarily invoke God in a prayer that begins אָנָּא הוֹשִׁיעָה נָּא Ana hoschia na, found in the first part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 141, col. 1, as follows: •וּתַעֲשֶׂה סוּף תִּקְרָאדָּךְ וְתַעֲנֶנָּה: הַבְּקָעֶם: כְּבָקִיעַת יִם הָהָא אֲבִינוּ כְּמַפֶּת בְּכוֹרִים •וּתַעֲשֶׂה סוּף תִּקְרָאדָּךְ וְתַעֲנֶנָּה: הַבְּקָעֶם: כְּבָקִיעַת יִם That is: Strike our enemies as you struck the firstborn (in Egypt), and plague them; split them apart as you split the Red Sea, and we will call upon you, and you will hear us. They make this same petition also on the second festival day, as can be seen in the aforementioned Prague Machsor, first part, fol. 149, col. 1; however, in the Machsors printed here in Frankfurt, one word has been changed, and in place of Ojefenu, that is, "our enemies," stands קָמֵיךְ Kamécha, that is, "your adversaries," which amounts to the same thing, since both terms refer to the Christians, whom they call their own enemies and God's enemies, as has been demonstrated in Chapter 15 of the first part; and they believe that all the plagues which in former times came upon Egypt will also befall Christendom, as will be thoroughly established below in Chapter 14. Furthermore, on the first day they petition in a prayer that begins קוֹס שְׁכִינַת עֲזָרָה Kost scheinath etz, found at fol. 142, col. 1 in the Prague edition and at fol. 184, col. 4 in the Frankfurt German-Hebrew Machsor, as follows: גּוֹר לְבָלְתִּי לְהַעֲבִיד •תּוֹלְדוֹת שְׁעִיר הָאֲבִיד That is: Exterminate the generations of Seir (that is, Christendom, as has been indicated in Chapter 17 of the first part, under the ninth name that the Jews give to it), so that the Lord (that is, the Israelite people, who descend from Jacob, who according to the blessing in Gen 27:29, with which his father Isaac blessed him, was to be lord over his brothers) may no longer be compelled to serve (Esau, that is, the Christians). Here again something has been altered in the Frankfurt entirely Hebrew Machsor, where at fol. 101, col. 1, אֲיִבֶיךָ Ojebecha, that is, "your enemies," stands in place of Seir; but both expressions carry the same meaning.

On the evening of the first day of the aforementioned Feast of Tabernacles, they prayed in a prayer which begins צמחות נטעי טועני Toané nité Zemachóth, as can be read in the Polish Siddúrim, fol. 158, col. 1, under the title Maarith lel rishon schel Succoth, in the following manner: שבור קרקוד מאדום שבר הצִיץ מדם: that is, Break Edom's neck, make your arrows drunk with the blood (of the Edomites, that is, of the Christians.) These words, however, have been omitted out of fear from the thick Tefillah, fol. 80, col. 3, 4, where this prayer also appears under the aforementioned title.

On the seventh day of the Feast of Tabernacles, which they call הושענא רבה Hoschána rábba and which falls on the 21st of September, they customarily walk seven times around their Almémor (which is the elevated place in their synagogues or schools, somewhat resembling a pulpit), just as the Israelites formerly walked seven times around the city of Jericho, as may be read in Josh 6:3 etc. The meaning of this practice is described by Rabbi Bechai in his book Cad hakkémach, fol. 51, col. 4 and fol. 52, col. 1, as follows: לעתיד תחזור השכינה • לבית קדשי הקדשים ונתחל מדת הדין בשונאיהן של ישראל אשר הציקום ושעבדו בהם וההקפה שאנו עושין בזמן הזה הוא סימן ורמז לעתיד שתפול חומת אדום ויהיו כלים ואובדים מן העולם שכן התנבא דניאל על החיה הרביעית עד די קטילת חיותא והובד גשמה ויהיבת ליקירת אשא • ואז ישמח הר ציון וירושלים שנקראו מדבר וציה שנאמר ציון מדבר היתה וירושלים שממה • וכן התנבא ישעיה שישמחו ציון וירושלים על פורענות אדום הוא שאומר That is: In the future, the divine Majesty will return to the house of the Holy of Holies (namely, the Temple), and the attribute of judgment will be visited upon the enemies of Israel, who afflicted them and brought them into bondage. The walking around, however, which we perform at this time, is a sign and indication pointing toward the future, namely that the wall of Edom (that is, Christendom) will fall, and that they (the Christians) shall perish and be destroyed from the world; for thus did Daniel prophesy concerning the fourth beast (when he says in chapter 7, v. 11): Until the beast was slain, and its body destroyed, and given to the burning of fire. Then shall the mountain of Zion and Jerusalem rejoice, which are called a wilderness and a dry land, as it is said (Isa 64:10): Zion has become a wilderness, and Jerusalem a desolation. Thus also did Isaiah prophesy, and this is what he says (in chapter 35, v. 1): The wilderness and the dry land shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom like a rose. We see from this, therefore, that such walking around signifies the downfall of Christendom, and that the converted Ferdinand Hess, in the second part of his Judengeißel, at the end of the eighth chapter, wrote the truth when he reports that on the aforementioned day the old and young, in the manner of a Procession, walk seven times around the Almémor, carrying their Thóra (that is, their book of the law) with them, calling and crying out seven times; this signifies that, just as the children of Israel walked around Jericho and the city walls immediately fell down, so too do they cry out fervently to God for help, that Christendom and their enemies shall likewise fall, perish, and be destroyed; they call the day Hoschána rábba, that is, the great help before God, believing in the end that God will certainly help them.

Rabbi Samiga writes about this procession in his book Mikráě Kódesch, in the 21st chapter, fol. 109, col. 1, in the following manner: ביום הושענא רבה שהוא היום האחרון לממשלת סמאל והשרים המלמדים קטיגוריא על ישראל אנו מסבבים את הדוכן שבע פעמים וספר תורה באמצע כדי שיעתרו מן השמים אף אם חס ושלום אנשי אמונה ורוהים את הגזרות אבדו ואינם שיענה אותם בעד הס"ת שבעבורו מתעררים הרחמים כדברי הזוהר בפרשת ויחי וכמו שנענו כשסבבו את יריחו שבע פעמים כן יענה אותם עתה לכלה הפשע ולהתם החטאות וכל גזירות קשות ולהכניע ולמעט הדילאטורין והקטגורין ולכלותם מעל פני האדמה: that is, on the day of Hoschána rábba, which is the last day of the dominion of Sammaël and of the princes who accuse Israel, we walk seven times around the pulpit, with the book of the law in the middle, so that God in heaven may be entreated, in case, God forbid, the faithful and pious people who are able to hinder and avert the severe decrees or judgments are gone and no more remain, so that He may then hear them for the sake of the book of the law, on account of which He, as is noted in the Sóhar in the Parascha Vajechi, is moved to mercy. And just as they (namely the Israelites) were heard when one walked seven times around the city of Jericho, so may He now hear them, to ward off transgression and to put an end to sin and to all severe decrees, and to humble and diminish the accusers and prosecutors, and to exterminate them from the earth.

On the twenty-second day of September, which is called Sheminí Azéreth, that is, the eighth day of the feast, they pray in a prayer which begins אום אישון נוצרת Om ischon ninzéreth, and which stands in the Frankfurt Machsor fol. 111, col. 1. 2. under the title Józer lischminí azéreth, as follows: שוכן עליו ורב העליליות. עתה כנס גלויות: כל שונאיך להאביד. ואוהבין שמחות להרביד. במלכות משיח. צרים מנו להדמם וגו' that is, Thou (O God,) who dwellest on high and doest great deeds, gather now those who are in exilio or misery, so that those who hate Thee may be destroyed, and dominion). Behold, restore the deferred (and from the Jews so long withheld) kingdom to the city of Zion. From this the high Christian potentates can see how the Jews are disposed toward them.

Furthremore, on that same day they prayed, as can be read in the aforementioned thick Tefillah fol. 8, col. 3. 4. under the title mentioned above, as follows: ועל הנסים הלל. הרשעומית בשבט פיו יאביד. וגומר. : לגמור צעיר מהעביד צדק ומשפט רביר. that is, May your God cause His Messiah to come, who will be girded with the belt of righteousness and justice. He (the Messiah) will destroy the wicked through the scepter of His mouth, and will exterminate the enemy (that is, Christendom, as was indicated in the 17th chapter of the first part, under the thirty-ninth name by which the Jews call it), and will complete the song of praise on account of the miracles (which he will perform), and will free the small one (that is, Jacob, who is called the small one in Gen 25:23, by which the Israelites, as his descendants, are here understood) from the servitude (with which the greater one, namely Esau, that is, Christendom, afflicts him), ע"כ. In addition to the above, they call upon God in the following manner, as is to be found in the grace-after-meals book (Benschbuch) fol. 22, col. 2 under the title זמר נאה לחנוכה Sémer náěh lachanúcca: מעוז צור ישועתי לך נאה לשבח. תכון בית תפלתי. ושם תודה נזבח. לעת תכין מטבח. מצר. המנבח. אז אגמור. בשיר מזמור. חנוכת המזבח: רעות שבעה נפשי. ביגון כוחי כולה. : that is, O Strength and Rock of my salvation, it is fitting to praise You: let my house of prayer (that is, the Temple in Jerusalem) be erected again, and we will offer thanksgiving offerings to You there, when You shall have accomplished the slaughter (namely the butchering and killing, which has already been mentioned several times above, and of which one may read in Isa 34:6) upon the barking enemy (that is, Christendom, which, as was stated in the 17th chapter of the first part, is called the dog): then will I complete the dedication of the altar with song. My soul is sated with evil; my strength has passed away in sorrow; my life has become bitter to me in the harsh servitude of the kingdom of the calf (that is, Christendom, which is called the three-year-old calf, as has likewise been reported in the 17th chapter of the first part, under the thirty-fifth name which is given to it), in whose power the glory resides. Lead out Your own possession (namely the Jewish people).

On the Sabbath that falls immediately before the festival of Purim, they call upon God, as may be read in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 10, col. 2. and fol. 11, col. 1 and in the large Tefillah fol. 16, col. 4. and fol. 17, col. 2 under the title Jozer lepharaschath sechór, as follows: יהי לנו. זכור את אשר עשה. וגזעו יעקר בבועסה. ביטה אל חטאו אל תשא. כי קהלך עיסה. בכל צרה ודריסה

וג' That is: Remember what he (namely Amalek, as may be read in Deut 25:17) has done; let him be given over to plunder and pillage, and let his stock (that is, Christendom, for Christians are called the children of Amalek and the seed of Amalek, as was noted in the sixteenth chapter of the first part under the seventh name they give us, while Christendom is called the Amalekite kingdom, or simply Amalek, as was shown in the seventeenth chapter of the first part, likewise under the seventh name by which they designate it) be rooted out in fury. Look, O God, and do not forgive him his sin, for he has oppressed your congregation with all manner of tribulation and trampling, &c. Cause the name of Adina, or the Voluptuous One (that is, Christendom, as has been demonstrated in the aforementioned seventeenth chapter of the first part under the twenty-fourth name), to be forgotten on all sides and in every corner, and restore the kingdom now to him to whom it belongs (namely, to the Jews). Concerning such forgetting, Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 215, col. 4 in the Parascha Ki téze, in the following manner: הפרשה הזו: התחלה בזכרון וסיימה בשכחה להורות שעתיד זכרם להשתכח מן העולם וזה בזמן המשיח: That is: This Parascha begins (with the word) Remember (as may be seen in Deut 25:17) and ends (v. 19) with the words: Forget it not, since their memory will be forgotten from the world, and this will come to pass at the time of the Messiah.

Furthermore, they pray on the aforementioned Sabbath, as can be seen in the mentioned second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 13, col. 1. 2. and in the thick Tefillah, fol. 18, col. 3. under the above-mentioned title, in the following manner: זכור ה' לאדומים נוה ניארו. צרים אשר חומות ערערו. עד היסוד ערו ערו. פִּימו: דברו בגאות ופִּעֵרו: זה אין לפניך שכחה. עברתם שמרה נצח. מלשכחה חלף לא ידעו עשות נכוחה: ספרם חתום ליום תוכחה: טעם חוק בדת מוכח. חזכר כי לא תשכח יום בו עמם That is: Remember it against the Edomites, who destroyed the dwelling (understand: the Temple) and laid it bare to its very foundation, and who opened their mouths speaking in arrogance; let this not be forgotten before You. Observe their ever-enduring wrath, that it may not be forgotten, since they did not know how to do what is right. Seal their book for the day of punishment. The reason for the judgment (which has been pronounced against them) is indicated in Scripture (Joel 3:2, 19). Remember it, and do not forget the day on which You will contend with them; therefore You have commanded Your people: forget it not. From this we see once again that the Jews call upon God to punish Christendom on account of the Temple destroyed by the Romans.

Furthermore, on the aforementioned Sabbath, under the title mentioned, as can be seen in the Prague Machsor fol. 15, col. 1. 2. and fol. 16, col. 1. in the thick Tefillah fol. 20, col. 2. and fol. 21, col. 1. 2., they call upon God as follows: אלהים אל דמי לך. קול מים רבים נשמע קולך. משמיע ומצוה לעמך בקנין פעלך: זכור את אשר עשה לך וגו': זכור בית מקדשך השמם. וכל עובר עליו משתומם. מתי תתנשא ותתרום זכור אומר פ'ך קומם. בשלש עתות עמלק להמם. בשלש מיתות זכרם להרתם. בשלש ימי אפילה נהם להענם. בשבעה ימי עברה להרשימם: בעשרה מיני שמד להאשימם. כמו מעשרת דברים עכבו עם מענות. ומשבע מצוות המיושנות. כן בעשר ושבע יושכרו לענות ובת קול הצא ממעונות. והפוצץ בכל המחנות. זכרון דברים להגיד ולענות. אל תזכרו ראשונות. בינו ישועות אחרונות. והזכירו זכר רננות. עמלק אשר בא ועת מחנות. והיקר אתכם בפני בנות. ויצא לו שם בכל המדינות. ראו עתה לתנות. איך נמחה כתרך בכל פנות. וצבא המרום אשר במעונות. אשר הוסמך עליהם כמשענות. יפקוד עליהם אות העוונות. לרוב ימים להמנות. לחשוב עליהם חשבונות. להפילם לתופת דראונות. והמון לאומים וכל הלשונות. על עוזר ועוזר ישאו קינות. וכשל עוזר ונפל עוזר מקוננות. וידע כל פועל כי לא שכחת. ויבין כל יציר כי שמם שכחת. ושעיר ושריו אז וכחת. ועמלק וטפסריו הוכחת ואתם במשפט נתוכחת. ויווכרו עם אשר זכרת. כי לטובה אוהב זכרת. ובזכרון טוב אתם 'נזכרת. והמזכירים את יי 'אמרו המר וגדל יי. 'ויאמרו גאולי יי 'כן יאבדו כל אויביך יי 'וגו': that is to say, God, be not silent. Your voice has been heard like the voice of many waters, which calls out and commands Your people in the possession of Your work (that is, in Your law, as can be seen in the Prague Commentario): Remember what he (namely, Amalek) has done to You, etc. Remember Your desolated Temple, over which everyone who passes by is horrified. When will You arise and exalt Yourself? Remember it, and fulfill the declaration of Your mouth, to shatter the Amalekites three times (for in Isa 33:10 the word "Now" stands three times); to blot out their memory through three kinds of death (namely the sword, the plague, and the famine, as it is explained in the Commentario); to darken their splendor in the three days of darkness; to mark them out in the seven days of wrath; to destroy them with ten kinds of extermination (which are found in Isa 34). Just as they held the people (Israel) back from observing the Ten Commandments and did not keep the seven ancient commandments (of the children of Noah), which commandments together make seventeen, so shall they be filled with wormwood (that is, bitterness) by means of the seventeen (words which stand in Ps 75:9 in the Hebrew text, and which read in German as follows: For the Lord has a cup in His hand, filled and poured out with strong wine, and He pours from it, but all the wicked of the earth must drink and drain the dregs). And a voice (from heaven) will go forth from the dwelling places and scatter itself through all the camps, to announce the remembrance of these things and to cry out: Remember not the former things (namely, the deliverance from Egypt), but consider the final salvation, and proclaim it with singing, (and say:) Behold idolaters, as was indicated in the 16th chapter of the first part, at the thirty-first name that is given to us.

On the twenty-third day of February they call upon God, in a prayer which begins אשרי כל חוסי בך Aschré col cholébach, and which stands in the thick Tefillah fol. 33, col. 1.2, and in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 25, col. 2, under the title Józer lepharascbáth Pára, in the following manner: זכור בנך וואהובך וגוי תאמר בדתך להמתיקם כקריאת ים סוף וכמכת בכורים שונאיהם להפקידם that is, Remember your children and your beloved ones (namely the Jews), etc. Command that they may receive a sweetness in your law (when they study therein), and that just as the Red Sea was parted and the firstborn (in Egypt) were struck down, so too those who hate them may be rooted out.

On the first day of March they pray, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah fol. 42, col. 1.2, and in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 38, col. 2, under the title Musaph lepharascbath hachodesch, in a little prayer which begins ארבע דרוש נא במדותך כעולתם Mevasser am lachióth, in the following manner: כבראשונה. כאשר שמענו כן עוד חיש נא that is, We will trample the four kingdoms (namely the four monarchies) when you mete out their reward to them (and repay them for their deeds), as you have done before. Just as we have heard (how the Egyptians perished), so now hasten further (and do likewise to our enemies the Christians.) In this manner they also petition in the four preceding prayers that they may hear such news concerning the Christians as they once heard of old concerning the Egyptians; for they believe that the Christians will be visited with the very same plagues with which the Egyptians were punished, as will be demonstrated shortly hereafter, as well as below in chapter 14.

On the Sabbath which is the nearest one before the Easter festival, and which is called Shabbat haggadol, that is, the Great Sabbath, they pray in a prayer which begins אתי מלבנון כלה Itti millevanón cálla, and which is found in the thick Tefillah fol. 42, col. 3. 4. and fol. 43, col. 1, in the following manner: פריץ חיות טהם ולבו מכבד. כלה לענות בקושי לשעבד. צעירה בפרך ותחיה וחהיה ככלי אובד that is, The ravaging beast (that is, Christendom, as has been indicated in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the thirtieth name given to it) growls and hardens its heart, to afflict the Bride (that is, the Jewish people) and to keep her in heavy servitude. It torments her with harshness and a heavy yoke; but it shall be put to shame and shall be like a vessel of destruction. Furthermore, they pray on that same Sabbath, as may be read in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 40, col. 2. and in the thick Tefillah fol. 44, col. 3. under the last-mentioned title, as follows: שואה ומשואה תפיל צר לשוחה ונחיה בגשם ישועה that is, Devastation and destruction (may they come upon Christendom.) Cast the enemy (namely the Christians, as has already been mentioned many times) into the pit, so that we may live through the rain of salvation. Immediately following this comes the following: משא רומה כמשא. ישמע לאדום כשמע מצרים. נפרעת מפתרום בתכלית מכה עשיריה. באדום תפרע בתכלית קרן עשיריה. ירדו מצרים. that is, Let that which was heard concerning Egypt be heard concerning Edom (understand: Christendom; in the thick Tefillah, however, לבוש Lechúsh, that is, the land of the Moors, stands in place of Edom, so that the Christians should not notice that this prayer is directed against them). The burden concerning Duma (of which one may read in Isa 21:11) is like the burden concerning Egypt.

You have taken vengeance upon Pathros (that is, upon the Egyptians, concerning whom one may read in Isa 11:11 and Jer 44:1) at the end of the tenth plague: take vengeance also upon Edom at the end of the tenth horn (that is, at the end of their reign). The Reemim, that is, the unicorns (by which the Romans are to be understood) must go down with them (namely, that they shall be slaughtered, as is explained in the book Cad hakkemach fol. 57, col. 3, and as may be read in Isa 34:7). Strip the firstborn of the realm of their people of the crown, and banish them in wrath. Immediately following this comes another short prayer, which begins with אל נא לישע עמך וגו' El na lejescha ammecha &c., in which they petition God as follows: מה שהיה בראשונה הוא, שיהיה באחרונה כמשמע מצרים תשמיע לצורים, That is: What happened in the beginning (to the Egyptians, when the Israelites were delivered out of Egypt) shall also come to pass at the last (upon the Christians). What was heard concerning the Egyptians (what punishments came upon them) let also be heard concerning those of Zor (that is, concerning the Christians, as has been demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, under the twelfth name that is given to us).

That this is the correct understanding of such words can be seen in Schemoth rabba fol. 103, col. 3. at the end of the ninth Parascha, where it is written as follows: 'כמשם שהביא הק"ב על המצריים כך הוא עתיד להביא על מלכות הרשעה שנ : כאשר שמע למצרים יחילו כשמע צור, אמר ר' ל' כל צור שבסקרא חסר במלכות הרשעה : that is, Just as the Holy Blessed God had brought (plagues) upon Egypt, so too will He bring them upon the godless kingdom (that is, Christendom, as has been shown in the 17th chapter of the first part), as it is said (Isa 23:5): Just as men were terrified when they heard of Egypt, so too will men be terrified when they hear of Zor. Rabbi Eliezer has said: wherever in Scripture צר Zor appears without a Vau, there Scripture speaks of the godless kingdom. But wherever the word Zor appears in its full form (namely צור), there Scripture makes mention of the city (or region) of Tyre. Rabbi Bechai also writes this in his book Cad hakkemach fol. 57, col. 4. and adds the following: מי שפרע מן הראשונים יפרע מן האחרונים . במצרים דם ובאדום דם שנ' דם ואש ותימרות עשן. במצרים צפרדעים שקולן . קשה ובאדום כתיב קול שאון מעיר . במצרים כנים ובאדום כתיב ונהפכו נחליה לזפת ועפרה לגפרית. במצרים ערוב ובאדום כתיב וירשוה קאת וקפוד וגו' במצרים דבר ובאדום כתיב : that is, He who took vengeance upon the first will also take vengeance upon the last. In Egypt there was blood; in Edom there will also be blood, as it is said (Joel 3:30): Blood, fire, and columns of smoke. In Egypt there were frogs, which have a harsh voice, and of Edom it is written (Isa 66:6): A voice of tumult from the city. In Egypt there were lice, and of Edom it is written (Isa 34:9): Their streams shall be turned to pitch, and their dust to sulfur. In Egypt there was vermin, and of Edom it is written (Isa 34:11): The bittern and the hedgehog shall possess it, etc. In Egypt there was pestilence, and of Edom it is written (Ezek 38:22): And I will judge him with pestilence and blood, etc.

That the aforementioned word Reemim, which means unicorns, is understood in a veiled manner to refer to the Romans, can be seen from the aforementioned book Cad hakkemach fol. 20, col. 1., where it is written: דרשו ז"ל ראמים אלו רומיים : that is, Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have interpreted the word Reemim to mean Romijim, that is, the Romans. Likewise, in the same book, fol. 31, col. 4., on the words of Isa 34:7, "There the Reemim, or unicorns, shall come down with them," the following is taught: דרשו ז"ל אלו רומיים that is, Our rabbis, of blessed memory, interpret it as referring to the Romans. Similarly, in the book Zeror hammor fol. 47, col. 3., at the end of the Parascha Vajischlach Jaacob, on the aforementioned words of Isaiah, one reads: אל תקרי : that is, Read not Reemim, unicorns, but Romijim, Romans. On this matter, the old Nizzachon, pages 167 and 168, may also be consulted. By the Romans, however, Christians in general are understood here, as has been demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, in connection with the second name that is given to us. But to return to the previous subject: the Jews are also accustomed on the aforementioned Sabbath to pray to God that He would tread the winepress, as is found in the prayer that begins: אזורב נסים : that is, "Pour out As rof nissim bifletha, page 45, col. 4., in the large Tefillah, under the aforementioned title, the meaning of which has been reported above.

On the evening before Easter, four cups of wine are poured for each person, which that person must drink; and when they have poured the fourth cup, they then recite, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah fol. 6, col. 3, under the title Haggada, from Ps 79:6 and Jer 10:6 and Ps 69:25, as well as Lam 3:66, as follows: שפוך חמתך על הגוים אשר לא ידעוך ועל הממלכות אשר בשמך לא קראו : שפוך : that is, "Pour out עליהם זעמך וחרון אפך ישיגם . תרדוף באף ותשמידם מתחת שמי יי

Your wrath upon the heathen who do not know You, and upon the kingdoms that do not call upon Your name. Pour out Your indignation upon them, and let Your fierce anger overtake them. Pursue them in anger and destroy them from under the heavens of the Lord." This prayer of cursing, however, is directed against the Christians, as two converted Jews truthfully report: Ferdinandus Heß in the second part of his Judengeissel, at the end of the fifth chapter, and Johann Adrian of Emden in his letter of warning, pagina 27. The Jews could, of course, deny this and say that in the book Chóschén hammischpat fol. 484, numero 425, §. 5, whose words were cited at the beginning of this second chapter, it is expressly stated that this curse applies only to those peoples who do not believe that the children of Israel went out of Egypt and that God performed wonders and signs on their behalf, and that it is therefore not directed against the Christians, who believe all of this. One must not, however, be swayed by this, for it is a hollow evasion, inasmuch as Rabbi Bechai, in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 69, col. 1, in the Parascha Vaëra, writes of it as follows: התקנו לנו ר"זל בכוס רביעי ולהתחיל בו שפוך חמתך והטעם בזה לפי שעתיד הק"בה להשקות לאומות העולם ארבע כוסות של פורענות הוא שכתוב קח את כוס היין החמה וכתוב כוס זהב בכל ביד יי' וכתוב ורוח זלעפות מנת כוסם that is, "Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have ordained for us to conclude the Hallel (which is a certain hymn of praise) at the fourth cup, and therewith to begin the words 'Pour out Your wrath,' etc. The reason for this, however, is that the Holy One, blessed be He, will cause the nations of the world to drink four cups of vengeance (or punishment); and this is what is written (Jer 25:15): 'Take this cup of wine full of wrath.' And it is written (Jer 51:7): 'The golden cup of Babylon is in the hand of the Lord.' And it is written (Ps 11:6): 'And a mighty tempest wind shall be the portion of their cup.' And it is written (Ps 75:9): 'For the Lord holds a cup in His hand, poured full of strong wine.'" The same can also be read in the Jalkut Schimóni on Jeremiah, fol. 65, col. 3, numero 307, and in the Jalkut chádäsch fol. 100, col. 2, numero 45, under the title Jámim tóbim. From this it is thus evident that such a curse applies to the nations of the world, by which all peoples outside of Judaism are understood, and consequently the Christians as well.

This is also read in the Polish Siddúrim, fol. 101, col. 1. 2., under the title Haggáda schel Pésach, in the commentary on this curse-prayer, as follows: שפוך חמתך אל הגוים וגו' כי אכל את יעקב וגו' ב' פסוקים אלה הם במזמור ע"ט והם גם כן בירמיהו במעט שינוי ולפי שפסוק לא לנו ה' לא לנו אינו נאות לראשית והתחלת הרבים כי הוא חוזר על מאמר קודם אליו לכן תקנו לומר בתחלתו שתי פסוקים אלו לומר ה' אלהינו אחרי שהושעת וגאלת את ישראל ממצרים ונקמתם להודיע כתך הגדול על פרעה ועל מצרים שאמר לא ידעתי אתה ה' וגם להענישם על מה שהרעו לישראל גם עתה שפוך שפוך חמתך אל הגוים והם own assertion, their worst enemies, who have done them much harm, against whom they also call upon God for vengeance on account of the destroyed Temple, as has been mentioned above; and since, moreover, Christians belong among the peoples of the world: it is therefore irrefutably true that such a curse applies to them as well, and indeed applies to them above all others. There is also the following passage on this matter in the book Orach chájim, fol. 236, col. 1. numero 480: יש אומרים שיש לומר שפוך חמתך וכו' קודם לא לנו ולפתוח הפתח: כדי לזכור שהוא ליל שימורים ובזכות אמונה זו יבא משיח וישפוך חמתו על העכ"ם that is, some say that the words "Pour out Your wrath, etc." are to be spoken before (Ps 115, which begins) "Not unto us, etc.," and that one must open the door in order to remember that this is a night of watching, and that through the merit of this faith the Messiah will come and pour out his wrath upon the idolaters. Now the Jews regard Christians as idolaters, as has been demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, in connection with the thirty-first name that is given to us; and their supposed Messiah will deal more harshly with no one than with the Christians, for he will have them all put to death so that not a single one of them remains, as may be found below in the fourteenth chapter of this second part. It is therefore an inescapable conclusion that such a curse applies to Christians as well, and may indeed be directed solely and exclusively against them.

Furthermore, on the aforementioned evening before their Passover, they pray in the Haggáda, as can be read in the thick Tefillah fol. 7, col. 4, in a prayer which begins אומץ גבורותיך הפלאת Omez gevurothécha biflétha, under the title הגרה Haggáda, as follows: שני אלה רגע הביא לאדום, That is: Let these two things come in an instant upon Edom (namely, Christendom). In the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 71, col. 2, where this same prayer is likewise to be found, as well as in another prayer book, presumably printed at Hanau in the year 446, that is, 1686, in the sixteenth part of a sheet, which I possess, there stands at fol. 301, col. 1, under the title Haggáda, in place of Edom, the word עוצית Uzith or Uzis; but it amounts to the same thing, for this too signifies Christendom, as has been reported in the 17th chapter of the first part, under the twenty-sixth name that is given to it. Now the aforementioned words are taken from Isa 47:9, where it is written: But these two things shall come upon you suddenly in one day, namely widowhood and the loss of children, as can be seen at v. 8 of the same passage; and through this the Jews pray to God that He would let these two severe punishments come upon the Christians. I have also read the following in a handwritten Commentario on the Machsor, concerning these words: כך אומרים ישראל שנים הצרות הם שכול ואלמון הביא לאדום עוץ, שנקראת עוצית דכתיב שיש ושמחי בת אדום יושבת בארץ עוץ, That is: Thus speak the Israelites: let these two misfortunes, namely the loss of children and widowhood, come upon Edom, which is called Uzith, as it is written (Lam 4:21): Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom, you who dwell in the land of Uz.

On the first day of their Passover feast, which falls on the 15th day of March and lasts eight days, they call upon God, as can be read in the second part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 56, col. 1. and in the Frankfurt edition fol. 123, col. 1 under the title Józer lejóm ríschon schel Pésach, as follows: על הרי בתר. על אחד ההרים יראה לבחירים. גמול פועל הורים. דובים נמרים אריות וחזירים. פרים אבירים. לפסג גורי גורים. כיקר כרים. כלים גמורים. תור וגוזל שלומים. ולא חסרים וגו' That is: Upon the mountains of the cutting (that is, as it is explained in the Commentario, upon Mount Zion, upon which in the Temple the offerings were cut into pieces and divided), upon one of the mountains, shall be seen by the chosen (Israelites) the recompense of the work of the Fathers (understand: the reward of the merit of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob), namely that the bears, leopards, lions, and swine (that is, the Persians, Greeks, Babylonians, and Romans) shall be hewn into pieces like strong bulls, like excellent (fat) lambs, and utterly destroyed, but the turtledoves and young doves (that is, the Jews) shall be preserved unharmed and without lack, etc. On the evening of the first day of their Passover feast, they are accustomed to pray in the following manner, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah fol. 69, col. 2. under the title Maaráf lel ríschon schel pásach: ליל שמורים אותו אל חצה. בחצות לילה בתוך מצרים. גבור על איביו יחצנו כחצה That is: God divided the night of watching (or observance, meaning the night on which the Israelites departed from Egypt, of which one may read in Exod 12:42) into two parts, when at midnight He went forth from the midst of Egypt. May the Mighty One (God) divide that same night over His enemies (namely the Christians, for in some copies, as I also possess one, which, as just mentioned, was presumably printed in Hanau, in place of איביו ojefáú, that is, his enemies, the word אדום Edom stands) just as He divided it (in Egypt). By these words they wish to obtain from God that it may go with the Christians exactly as it went with the Egyptians, and that an equal punishment should come upon them. Furthermore, on the said evening they pray, in a prayer which begins פסה אכלו פחודים Pésach achelú pechudím, and which stands under the aforementioned title, as follows: פסה חרב חדה על אדום ביד צה ואדום וגו' בפסה: That is: The Passover feast will be a sharp sword against Edom (meaning Christendom), through the hand of Him who is white and red (of whom Song 5:10 speaks), etc. At the Passover feast He will press our oppressors down and heal us of the wound, etc. The first words are omitted in the thick Tefillah fol. 69, col. 3., but I find them in another copy. Beyond this, they also pray under the aforementioned title a short prayer which reads as follows: ליל שמורים קראו נורא עלילה/ כי בו: שבר מוטות עגלה. רעוץ ירעוץ אום.

להתגאלה That is: The night of watching has been so named by Him who is terrible in deeds (namely by God), for in it He broke the yoke of the Calf (that is, of Egypt). May He utterly shatter the crushing and devouring people (that is, the Christians, as has been indicated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, in connection with the eleventh name which the Jews give us), so that we may be redeemed a second time thereby. This also stands thus in the aforementioned copy, but in the thick Tefillab the words "May He utterly shatter the crushing and devouring people" have been omitted out of fear, and in their place has been set: רעיתו מוציא בשמחה וגיל That is: He leads His beloved (namely the Jews) forth with joy and gladness.

On the second day of Easter, they call upon God, as can be seen in the second part of the Prague Machzor, fol. 66, col. 1, and in the Frankfurt edition, fol. 128, col. 2, under the title Józer lejóm schéni schel Pésach, in a prayer which begins אפיק רנן ושירים Appík rénen veschirim, in the following manner: יושבי נוף That is: just as He (namely God) has destroyed the inhabitants of Nof (which was a city in Egypt called Memphis, but now named Alcair or Cair, by which Egypt is here understood), so may He also destroy the beast in the reed (that is, Christendom, as has been demonstrated in the 17th chapter of the first part, at the twenty-eighth name which is given to it).

He wishes to deliver me from the ravaging beast out of the forest (that is, from the wild boar, by which Christendom is also understood, as was likewise indicated in the aforementioned 17th chapter of the first part, at the twenty-ninth name by which it is called). In the Commentary of the Prague Machsor these words are explained as follows: כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּעְרַת בְּמַצְרַיִם לְהַרוֹג בְּכוֹרֵיהֶם כֵּן גַּעַר בְּאוֹמֶה הָרְשָׁעָה שֶׁנִּקְרְאָת חַיֵּת קִנָּה: כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר גַּעַר חַיֵּת קִנָּה: וְנִלְצַנִּי מֵאוֹמֶה שֶׁנִּקְרְאָת יַעַר מִזֵּעַר הָרְשָׁעָה: הַסְּמָנָה: חֲזוֹר מִזֵּעַר that is, Just as you rebuked (or destroyed) Egypt by slaying their firstborn, so also rebuke (or destroy) the godless people (that is, the Christians, as was reported in the 16th chapter of the first part, at the seventeenth name by which the Jews customarily call us) which is called the beast in the reeds, as is said (Ps 68:31): Rebuke (or destroy) the beast in the reeds; and deliver me from the people which (Ps 80:14) is called a wild boar that ravages it (namely, the vine). Furthermore, they pray on the aforementioned second day of Passover, as can be seen in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 68, col. 2, and in the Frankfurt edition fol. 130, col. 1, under the title mentioned, in a prayer which begins אודך פי עֲנִיתָנִי Odecha ki anithani, in the following manner: נָא שָׁאג מִמְּרוֹמַי יְרֵדוּ לְטֹבַח רְאֵמִים: that is, Roar now, O God, from on high, and let the Reemim (that is, the unicorns, by which, as has already been demonstrated in the preceding portion of this chapter, the Romans and all Christians are understood) come down to the slaughter. These words, however, are taken from Isa 34:7.

Furthermore, they pray, as can be read in the Frankfort Machsor fol. 131, col. 1. and in the Prague edition fol. 70, col. 1. in the second part, under the aforementioned title, as follows: קָנַת בְּחִילָךְ: קִפְצָת חֲמֵשׁ מֵאוֹת מִקְלָךְ קִנֹּת: רֹמֶם צוּרִים בְּשִׁלּוֹחַ לָךְ עַם מִיִּדְּךָ. רָשָׁפֶת צָרִים בְּרִבּוּעַ מִכַּת צוּרִים: רָאוּת יָרָא כֵן צוּרִים. רֹמֶם צוּרִים בְּשִׁלּוֹחַ צָרִים: שִׁחַת מְשׁוּלֵי קֹשׁ בְּאוֹסֶר. שְׁלוֹם קִרְנוֹת עֶשֶׂר? שְׁלֵקֶבם כְּאֶכְלוּ בַּחוּסֶר. שְׁטֵר תַּכְלִית מִכּוֹת יָגוּ: עֶשֶׂר: that is, "The enemies of Your congregation (namely the Egyptians) You have destroyed through Your punishment. You leaped down (from Heaven), which is as far away (from the earth) as one can travel in five hundred (years), to acquire for Yourself a people that hopes in You. You burned the enemies, so that four plagues always came together: thus must those of Zor (that is, the Christians, as reported shortly before) also see (that they are visited with that same punishment). Exalt the rocks (that is, the Israelites) by sending the messengers (namely) of the Messia, the son of Joseph, and of the Messia, the son of David. Then You will destroy those who are compared to stubble (that is, the children of Esau, as found in Obad 1:17, by which the Christians are meant) through the one who binds (that is, the Messiah, the son of David, of whom it is said in Gen 49:11 that he will bind his foal to the vine), and You will repay the ten horns (which have been taken from the Israelites). Burn them (the children of Esau) just as (the Egyptians were consumed by fire), so that they are left in want (that is, so that not one of them remains. Demand from the Christians) the full account of the letter of the ten plagues, etc." That is, as it is expounded in the Commentario in the Prague Machsor, that which the prophets, namely Isaiah and Micah, have said: the former in chapter 23, v. 5 says, "Just as men were terrified when they heard of Egypt, so shall they also be terrified when they hear of Zor"; but the latter in chapter 7, v. 15 states, "I will show them wonders, just as in the time when they went out of the land of Egypt." The Jews thus pray in this manner that God would punish Christendom with the ten plagues with which He punished the Egyptians, as can be clearly seen in the aforementioned Commentario.

On the evening of the second day of Easter, they pray in a prayer which begins: ליל שמורים אדיר ונאה Lel schimmúrim addír venáêh, as can be seen in the thick Tefillab fol. 71, col. 4, under the title Ma'aríf leléł schéni schel Pésach, as follows: ליל שמורים שמע מצרים לנצור יחילו כשמע צור בחג פסח. ליל שמורים ונאה וגו' :לנקמה נטורה ולהסיר מנו עברה וגו' that is, "The night of watchings is, to observe the cry from Egypt. One will tremble at the Passover feast when the cry of Zor (that is, of Christendom) will be heard (when it is destroyed by the ten Egyptian plagues). The night of watchings is kept for the reserved vengeance, to turn away wrath from us, etc." However, several words have been omitted here which appear in the aforementioned copy, presumably printed at Hanau, fol. 169, col. 1, for therein one reads: על צור. ליל שמורים שמור לנקמה נטורה. that is, "The night of watchings is kept for the reserved vengeance against Zor, the Crowning One." By Zor, however, Christendom is understood, as has already been demonstrated above.

On the seventh day of the Passover festival, they call upon God in the following manner, as can be seen in the Frankfurt Machsor fol. 141, col. 2, and in the Prague Machsor fol. 79, col. 1 of the second part, under the title Józer lejóm schevií schel Pésach: צוה ישועות יעקב אותך ביראה: תפול צרה כעדינה מאנוש לאבוד. כי לשמך תן כבוד וגו' נא שית אדום למורש קפוד ואגמי מים וגו' :כהפלאה לדור :ראשון רוב נסך. הפלא עם אחרונים מחכיך וחסיך וכל פה יהלך מה רבו מעשיך קדוש that is, "Let dread fall upon Adina" (meaning Christendom, as has already been noted more than once) "so that she perishes and not a single person remains of her. Grant salvation to Jacob" (that is, to the Israelites) "so that You are served with fear; and give glory to Your name, etc. Make Edom" (that is, Christendom) "now an inheritance for the hedgehogs and a watery swamp, etc. Just as You worked wonders for the former generation" (in Egypt) "through many signs, so also work wonders for the latter ones who wait and hope in You; then every mouth will praise You" (and say:) "O holy God, how great are Your wonders!" In place of the word "Edom," however, the Frankfurt fully Hebrew Machsor cited so often, as well as the one that has the German translation alongside it, reads כל קמיך, that is, "all Your adversaries"; but the meaning is the same, since the Jews regard the Christians as adversaries of God, as has been reported in chapter 15 of the first part. Furthermore, they pray in the following manner, as can be seen in the Frankfurt Machsor fol. 142, col. 1, and in the second part of the Prague Machsor fol. 80, col. 1, under the aforementioned title, in a prayer that begins וישע אל אמונה וגו' Vajóscha El emúna, &c.: תפול עליהם וחריון יסופו. שמעו עמים וברחת רופפו. אז פלילים ברעד זועפו. תביאמו קרית הנה דוד אל רם ונשא תדביר יי'. ימלוך שם תפארתך ושם עדינה תאביד that is, "The peoples have heard it" (how You, O God, punished the Egyptians) "and trembled with fear; their judges were violently shaken with trembling. Let a cry fall upon them" (namely, upon the peoples) "so that they all perish. Lead them" (meaning the Israelites) "into the city in which David dwelt, O You high and exalted God! Adorn" (them) "O Lord! Let Your glory dwell there, and blot out the name of Adina" (that is, of Christendom.)

Furthermore, they call upon GOD, as can be seen in the Prague Machsor, fol. 82, col. 1, and in the Frankfurt Machsor, fol. 143, col. 2, under the last-mentioned title, in a prayer that begins שבטי יה הוצאת Schifte Jah hozétha, as follows: עדינה תמחץ ושיתה כלה. עריה העיר מאושש להללה. ערות יסוד עד צואר סלה וגו': ביטה ומהר שנת גאולים. בגד בוגדים וחלף אלילים. במלכות זדון הפל חללים. ביום הרג That is: Strike Adina (meaning Christendom) and reduce her to nothing; rouse (your power) against her who is bare (of your commandments and keeps none of them) and wound her so that not a single person (of her) remains. Lay bare (that is, destroy) the foundation down to the neck: Sela. Look, and let the year of redemption come swiftly; let the transgressors transgress, and root out the idols. Let the wounded fall in the arrogant kingdom (namely Christendom, as has been reported in chapter 17 of the first part, under the fifteenth name given to it) on the day of great slaughter, when the towers fall. In the Prague Machsor, in place of: במלכות זדון, הפל חללים, that is, Let the wounded fall in the arrogant kingdom, it reads: בטופלי שקר הפל חללים, that is, Let those who patch together lies fall wounded. Beyond this, they pray, as can be seen in the Prague Machsor, fol. 85, col. 2, under the aforementioned title, in a prayer that begins אילו הצדק ידועים Ele hazzédek jedúim, in the following manner: כאשר שמע לעגלה לאויב יעשה כלה, That is: Just as the cry concerning the calf (that is, Egypt) was heard, so may He (namely GOD) utterly exterminate the enemy (meaning Christendom). In the aforementioned Frankfurt Machsor, however, with the German translation, instead of לאויב, "the enemy," one reads לאויביו, "his enemies." And in the entirely Hebrew Frankfurt edition, in place of the words "So may He utterly exterminate the enemy," one reads: לכניך עשה הצלה, That is: So deliver your children.

Shortly after this, they also pray in the last-cited prayer, as found in the Prague Machsor, fol. 86, col. 1, with these words: שם יקרא בכתבתו. יכון במלאותו. באויביו יתן נקמתו רבות מופתי גבורתו. וכסאו עוד תתגשא מלכותו. נברי שעיר בהכותו. That is: The name (of God, namely Jehova) will be read as it is written (and no longer replaced by Adonaj, as the Jews are accustomed to do at the present time). His word (namely the word Jehova) will be made complete from its half (and instead of Jah, the full name Jehova will be given to Him). Moreover, His kingdom will be exalted and His throne established when He (namely the name) shall be complete. When He strikes the descendants of Seir (that is, the Christians, as has been demonstrated in the 16th chapter of the first part, under the sixth name given to us), He will take vengeance upon His enemies, multiply the wonders of His strength, and sound the trumpet in His stormy blast. He will be zealous over Zion in His zeal, when He destroys the beast in the reeds (understand: Christendom). However, in the Frankfurt Machsor, the words "when He strikes the descendants of Seir, He will take vengeance upon His enemies" are omitted. But in order to understand this matter correctly, one must know that the Jews hold that the name, as well as the throne of God, remains incomplete until the race of Esau and Amalek, that is, the Christians, shall be entirely destroyed by the Messiah, since it is written in Exod 17:16: כִּי יְהוָה יָד עַל כֶּסֶּה יָה ki jad al Kes jah, that is, "The hand is upon the seat of the LORD," in which words כֶּסֶּה Kes is read in place of כִּסֵּא Kissé, and יָה Jah in place of יְהוָה Jehova, both being read as incomplete; and in these same words mention is also made of the perpetual war against Amalek, and in the preceding verse 14, of his complete extermination.

On the evening of the seventh day of Passover, they pray, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah, fol. 74, col. 3, under the title של פסח ליל שביעי (Ma'arif lel Schevii fibel Péfach), in a prayer which begins מתי אבוא ואראה (Mathái avo veera'eh), in the following manner: /אותותיו /כימי עולם לשמש על עשר חביתי לו /גנעים: יריד יוד הו'מ'ש, That is: I wait upon the LORD, that He would again, as in former times, make use of wonders, and would cause five more to come upon the ten plagues (which He had sent upon Egypt), and would employ the devastation and condemnation upon the great city (namely Rome, as can be seen above in the 17th chapter of the first part, under the second name which is given to the city of Rome). But upon you, Zion, shall His glory be seen morning and evening. In another copy, the words "in the great city" are omitted, and in their place the following is read: על עשר וגנעים על עובד אליל וחמש, That is: And would cause five more to come upon the ten plagues, upon the idolater.

On the eighth and last day of the Passover festival they pray, as can be seen in the second part of the Prague Machzor fol. 97, col. 2 and in the Frankfurt one fol. 156, col. 1 under the title Józer lejóm ácharon fíbel Péfách, with these words: כּוּס בּא בן עתה כּל צוּרֵינוּ יחד : תּפּוּל עֲלֵיהֶם אִימַתָּה וּפַחַד . לִמְעַן לַעֲוֹג לִכְבִּיּהֶם . כּוּס : חֲמַתְךָ כִּסּוּךְ בִּינֵיהֶם . יִרְאֶה וּרְעַד יבֹא בֵּהֶם . שְׁרֹף רַעַה בְּלִבָּבָם . חֲלַחֲלָה וּמַעַר בִּמְתִּנֵּיהֶם . זִיעַ וּרְתַת כָּל אִיבְרֵיהֶם . וּכְשֶׁלוּ מֵהֶם זִבְחָם . הוּא עַל הוּא תִבָּא אֲלֵיהֶם . הַנֶּגֶם יֵשֶׁב וְהַחֲרָתָם : גַּעַר מְלֵאִים וְאֵין מִרְפָּא לָהֶם . בְּנִיךָ עַד יַעֲבְרוּ לִגְבוּלָם : אֵל הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּעַת לֵאבֹתֵיהֶם . That is: Just as in former times it came to pass that the nations trembled and quaked, so now must all their enemies (namely, those of the Jews, meaning especially the Christians) tremble together. Let fear and dread fall upon them, so that their hearts melt. Pour out the cup of Your wrath among them. Let fear and trembling come upon them, confusion in their hearts, mighty pain and staggering in their loins, sweat and trembling in all their limbs, so that they stumble among one another because of it. Let one misery come upon them after another, so that they must sit still in their ears. Rebuke them so that they are not healed, until Your children have passed into their borders, into the land which You swore to their forefathers.

On the evening of the aforementioned last day of Passover, they pray in the thick Tefillah (Tefillah fol. 77, col. 1.) in a little prayer which begins נטע שורק (נטע Netá schórek), to be found under the title Maaríf lelél acharón schel Pésach, as follows: קנה ערה נער חיה בארץ והיה יי' למלך על כל הארץ, That is: Acquire for yourself a community; rebuke the beast upon the earth (namely Christendom, which, as has already been mentioned many times, is called the beast of the reed), so shall You, O LORD, be King over all the earth. Furthermore they pray, as is to be found in the Polish Siddúrim, fol. 104, col. 1. under the aforementioned title, in a prayer which begins 'פסח אשרו וגו' (Pésach yscháru &c.), in the following manner: ולא יהיה שריד לבית עשו, That is: At the Passover feast You will grant salvation to those who hope in You, and none of the house of Esau (namely of the Christians) shall remain (but rather they shall all perish). This shall be the future Passover feast.

What they pray against Christians on the first Sabbath after their Passover feast has already been indicated above in this chapter at paginâ 105. and 106. Beyond that, they also customarily call upon GOD in the following manner, as can be seen in the Polish Siddúrim fol. 68, col. 1. in a prayer that begins אין כמוך באלהים En camócha bailemím, under the title Józer leschábbath rischón ácher happésach: הרץ. לבוש נקמתך וקנאתך ועוררה את גבורתך: תגער חית. הרץ שדי קנא לתורתך. בלכיון שוד ושבר. אותו ואת עמו בדבר. אל דמי לך. ימינך דהב מחצבת. הרץ גלגולת במקבת. זאת עדינה היושבת. צה ואדום משעיר: נסיכה בכליון תגעיר. כאיש that is, Thou Almighty (GOD), be zealous for Thy law; clothe Thyself with Thy vengeance and with Thy zeal, and awaken Thy power. Rebuke (or destroy) the devastating beast (that is, Christendom, which is called the beast in the reeds and the wild boar) through extermination, devastation, and destruction: (exterminate) it and its people through the plague: be not silent. Just as Thou didst root out the pride (or the strength of the Egyptians of old), so also shatter the skull of this Adina (that is, Christendom) who dwells in (peaceful) repose, with a hammer. Come white and red from Seïr (Christendom) and destroy its glory through annihilation. Awaken (Thy) zeal like a man of war: be not silent.

On the third Sabbath after Easter they pray, as can be read in the thick Tefillah fol. 41, col. 2. 3. under the title וולת לשבת שלישי Suláth leschábbath schelischí, in the following manner: עדינה נטה אני ואפסי. אתה אלהים וזולתך אין עוד. באתי בחדרי מלך וערערתי מקום ועוד. ובשלום יצאתי בלי פגע ומיועד. גבורי שוסיתי אביריו עשיתי. טירוהיו הרסתי משכנותיו רמסתי. דבירו ריצעתי נחלתו עניתי. צבאותיו רצצתי ורע לא אוניתי הנני שלווה רשינה ורעננה יושבת כארמון שקטה ושאננה ואיה נפלאותיו אשר הפליא לכוה. מדוע מידי לא יצולנה. זמירות היכלו החשתי וחללתי שירותיו. והצתי באש מקדשו ועירעתי חצרותיו וגו'. למה הביט בוגדים המקים עלינו. החריש

 וגו' : that is, "You are God, and besides You there is none other. The Adína (understand: Christendom) turns and says: I am it, and besides me there is none other. I have entered the chambers of the King (namely, the dwellings of God in Jerusalem) and have laid bare the place of assembly (that is, destroyed the Temple), and I have gone out in peace, without misfortune or stumbling. His heroes I have plundered, his mighty men I have oppressed, his palaces I have destroyed, and his dwellings I have trampled down; his choir I have broken, his inheritance I have afflicted, his armies I have shattered, and no evil has befallen me. Behold, I am at rest, fat, and flourishing;
 I dwell quietly and peacefully in the palace. Where now are His wonders, which He performed for the Branch (that is, the Israelites)? Why will He not deliver them out of my power? I have silenced the songs in His Temple and profaned His hymns, burned His sanctuary with fire, and laid bare His courts, etc. Why do You look upon the transgressors who rise up against us? Why do You keep silent when the wicked devours those who are still left of our congregations?
 They oppress and torment and crush Your people, and bring forth many mockeries and blasphemies, etc. Awake! Why do You sleep? To destroy Your enemies, etc."

On the fifth Sabbath after their Passover feast, they pray, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah: fol. 41, col. 4. and 42, col. 1. under the title זולת לפרשת בהר
Suláth lepharascháth behár Sindái, in a prayer which begins וגו' אחרִי נמכר גאולה
Acharé nimcar geúlla, also in such a manner: כשמע: באזנינו שמענו. 'מזרים לעינינו הראנו.
 חדש כבראשונה וחנם קננו וגו' : 'סוב ופגע בצר אשר עני יארוב וגו'
 פרץ רב הפרוץ בפורת האדומית .תהפך רגע כמהפכת סדומית וגו' : 'קרא אל החרב לאבד
 שוטניך וגו' : 'למה תישן עורה באף ותחגור חימות ונקום נקמתי מאת האומות .גואל האל הנותן וגו' : that is, The remembrance of Your wonders we have heard with our ears; let us also see with our own eyes (against the Christians) what we have heard of Egypt. Do it anew, and redeem us without cost, etc. Surround and strike the enemy who lies in wait for the poor, etc. Crush mightily in the winepress the Edomite (realm, that is, Christendom). Let it be overturned in an instant, as Sodom was overturned, etc. Call the sword to destroy Your adversaries, etc. Why do You sleep? Awake, gird Yourself in anger with fury, and avenge my vengeance upon the nations, You Redeemer and GOD, who exercises vengeance, etc. On the Sabbath before their Feast of Weeks, as well as before the ninth day of the month of July, they are accustomed, as may be read in the aforementioned thick Tefillah fol. 42, col. 1. 2. 3. under the title לשבת לפני שבועות Leschabbath lifne Schevuoth, to lament before GOD in a prayer which begins ארתך כל היום קיינו Othechá col hajóm kivvinu, that the Christians wish to compel them to adopt the Christian religion, and they call upon Him for vengeance; and they do likewise in the prayer immediately following, which begins באזנינו שמענו Elohim beosnénu schamánu, as well as in the prayer which begins אל חי נרנן El chai arannén, in which they call upon GOD, as may be read at fol. 43, col. 3, among other things, in the following manner: הקנה גער חית קנה שנית עמך הקנה that is, Rebuke (or destroy) the beast in the reeds, and take possession of your people a second time.

On the ninth day of the month of July, they petition, as may be read in the thick Tefillah fol. 49, col. 3. 4. under the title קרובץ להשעה בלב Kerúbaz letíscha beáf, in the prayer which begins אכלני הממני וגו' Achaláni, hamamáni &c., in the following manner: קרב יום אידם במשפט להתרומם. מתי לער קמיך להחרימם. That is, When will you banish (or exterminate) those who rise up against you? Let the day of their ruin draw near, so that you may be exalted through judgment.

The Jews do not forget us at their circumcisions and weddings either, and they believe it is not right unless they curse us in everything they do. At their circumcisions they curse us, as can be seen in the thick Tefillah fol. 60, col. 2. under the title Józer leschábbas uberís mílah, in a prayer which begins אות ברית Oth beríth (oder Os berís) schilláschti lemárpe olám, in the following manner: קנית קדם נחלתך : אות ברית שלחתי וגו' גוים כאשר שמע מבין חמורים ראותך תבוסת דם בהכותך בכורים שדי הפרנו ואויבך תכסנ . למלטנו מחלאות למצרים יחילו צורים אל יקים בחסדו ניבו שנית למלאות . וחיש לרחמנו גואלנו קדוש שמו צבאות . That is: You acquired Your inheritance of old from the donkeys (namely, You redeemed it from the Egyptians), when You saw the treading down of blood, when You struck the firstborn. O Almighty, deliver us and cut Your enemies to pieces. Just as it was heard from Egypt (that they were seized with terror on account of the plagues and punishments that came upon them), so may they be seized with terror. May God, according to His mercy, bring it about that His declaration be fulfilled a second time. May He hasten to have compassion on us and to deliver us from our afflictions. May He let us see wonders as in former times. Our Redeemer is the Holy One, who is called the Lord of Hosts. And in the Benschbook they pray at fol. 26, col. 1. under the title Birchas hammáson libris mílah, in a prayer which begins: אלהים ציוה לדיד Elohim Zivvífi lididēcha, with these words: הרוב יחרבו הרשעים That is: The wicked must be utterly destroyed. By the wicked, however, Christians are meant, as has already been demonstrated many times.

What concerns weddings: in the Polish Siddúrim, fol. 110, col. 2, under the title Vegám seh lachathúnna, in a prayer which begins: אל אדון על כל המעשים El Adon al col hammáalim, one reads that they pray as follows: מגר זדים כקרוח אש 'המסים נוגשי עמך הדורסים ורומסים וג that is, exterminate the arrogant (that is, the Christians, as was demonstrated above in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, at the twenty-fifth name which the Jews give them) just as fire burns the stubble, those who plague, oppress, and trample your people.

Those who are appointed over the burial of the deceased are accustomed, as in the little book printed here in Frankfurt am Main in the year 1697, which is called Seder Chafrútha dekafránim, fol. 3, col. 1, in a prayer that begins: אַנאַ זכור זאת אויב חרף את שמך משנאיך נשאו ראש: יערימו סוד על עמך. לשרפנו וגו' אלהי אברהם וגו' Ana Elobé Abraham &c., to pray against us, among other things, as follows: לשרפנו. חרפתם שמעת ולבנו ולשלול יתנכלו יתנכלו מתקוממך. ריבה את יריבי לחם את לוחמך. חרפתם שמעת. יי' עלי כל מחשבותם. ומעללים עלילות ברשע ובתרמיהם. להכחידנו ולהשמידנו כל עצתם שבתם וקמתם הביטה אני מגינתם וגו'. 'כלה גרש יגרשו כן לב הנוצרים. להנתנו לחרב ולבוזה בידי אכזרים. חרפה ישיבענו וירונו לענה ומרורים. השקמו מים המאוררים והיו להם למרים That is: Remember this, how the enemy (that is, Christendom, as has been established in the seventeenth chapter of the first part, at the thirty-ninth name which they give to it) blasphemes Your name. Those who hate You lift up their heads and devise a cunning scheme against Your people. Your adversaries think cunningly to burn us, to drive us out, to rob us, and to plunder us. Contend against those who contend against me, and fight against those who fight against You. Lord, You have heard their reproach. All their thoughts are against me, and they seek, in a godless manner and through their deceit, occasion and pretext; their entire counsel tends toward exterminating and rooting out. Look upon their sitting and their standing; I am their little song, &c. They drive out everything. This is the mind of the Christians, that they deliver us to the sword and to plunder into the hands of the cruel. They fill us with shame and make us drink wormwood and bitterness. Make them drink cursed water, so that it may become bitter to them. What, however, is meant by such cursed bitter water is clearly to be seen from Num 5:18-27.

This is what I have found in the Jewish prayer books against the Christians, from which it is as clear as daylight how the godless Jews are disposed toward us, and what they secretly carry in their shield against us, in that they desire nothing but revenge, and wish to strike us all dead without mercy and to extirpate us utterly and completely from the world; and that they act in direct contradiction to what was presented at the beginning of this chapter, which might have served as their excuse. Likewise, that all their smooth and fair words which they give to Christians consist of pure hypocrisy, for which reason one may well say of them, from Ps 62:5: With their mouth they give fair words, but in their heart they curse. Yet they may curse us and wish us all manner of evil as much as they please; God does not hear their wicked prayer at all, and no harm is thereby done to us, for the wise King Solomon says in Prov 26:2: As a sparrow flutters to and fro, and a swallow flies away, so a curse that is uttered without cause does not strike its mark. Thus we may also say with King David from Ps 109:28: Let them curse, but do Thou bless.

This abominable cursing is, however, an infallible proof against the wicked and desperate evil Jews that there is not a single good hair left on them, and that they are no longer God's people. They must themselves confess that such cursing is wrong, as has been demonstrated at the beginning of this chapter from their own books, and that it constitutes a wanton violation of the commandment in Jer 29:7, where it is written: "Seek the welfare of the city into which I have caused you to be carried away, and pray for it to the Lord; for when it goes well for them, it will go well for you also." They have no cause whatsoever to curse us in such a manner, for they fare well among us, and are powerfully protected against all harm by the high authorities; they also live in sheer idleness, and yet enjoy better sustenance and a far more abundant livelihood through their great shameful usury and their godless deceits than most poor Christians have, who must labor day and night, early and late, with the greatest hardship and bitter sweat, and in such a manner earn their bread. They are therefore unworthy of the great benefits that are bestowed upon them, since they show themselves so ungrateful in return; and they would deserve thereby to be held not only to the heaviest but also to the most contemptible labors, and to be given nothing but water to drink and dry bread to eat, so that they would come to recognize how little cause they have hitherto had to curse us so wantonly and to wish all manner of evil upon us.

Chapter III.

In which three questions are examined: first, whether Jews are permitted to rescue a Christian who is in mortal danger from death; second, whether Rabbinic laws allow bringing a Christian's life to an end; and likewise third, whether one can safely entrust oneself to Jewish physicians or doctors, and use their medicines without concern.

Regarding the first question, whether it is permitted to Jews to rescue a Christian who is in danger of body and life from death: I answer thereupon that it is not at all permitted to them, but rather strictly forbidden. That it is not at all permitted to them, I prove from the book Shulchan áruch, from the section Jóre déa, number 158, where it is written thus: עובדי עכ"ם אסור להצילם מהמות That is: it is forbidden to rescue idolatrous people from death. Since they regard Christians as idolaters, as has been demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, at the thirty-first name they give us, it necessarily follows that they are also not permitted to come to their aid in mortal danger. Upon this, the following is further read in the same place: עובדי עכ"ם שאין בינינו וביניהם מלחמה ורועי בהמה דקה מישראל בארץ ישראל זמן שהיו רוב השדות של ישראל וכיוצא בהן אין מסבבים להם המיתה ואסור להצילם אם נטו למות כגון שראה אחד מהם שנפל לים אינו מעלהו אפילו יהן לו שכר That is: one does not cause death to the idolaters with whom we are not at war, nor to the shepherds of small cattle among the Israelites in the land of Israel, at a time when most of the fields belong to the Israelites, and those like them; yet it is forbidden to rescue them when they are near death. As when one sees one of them who has fallen into the sea, one does not pull him back out, even if he were willing to give a reward. Something on this matter can also be found in the aforementioned Shulchan áruch, in the section Chóschen hammischpat, number 425, §. 5, fol. 484, col. 2. And in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sara, fol. 13, col. 2, in the commentary of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, on the words הגיים והרועים בהמה דקה ולא מעלין אותן מן הבור אם נפלו לתוכו אלא לנחום והן ישראל וכן גזלנים הרי הן כגויים. ואין מעלין אותן מן הבור אם נפלו לתוכו אלא לנחום וימותו That is: the Gójim or heathens, and the shepherds of small cattle, as well as the robbers who are equal to the heathens, one does not pull out of the pit when they have fallen into it, but rather one leaves them therein so that they must die.

For this prohibition, I find three reasons. The first is found in Rabbi Moses bar Maimon's book Jad chasáka, in the first part, in the 10th chapter, numerò 1, fol. 40, col. 1, under the title הלכות עכו"ם Hilchóth achum, in these words: אין כורתין ברית לעובדי כוכבים ומזלות וגו' ואסור לרחם עליהם שנאמר ולא תחנם לפיכך אם ראה כותי עובד כוכבים ומזלות אובד או טובע בנהר לא יעלינו. ראהו נטוי למות לא יצילו וגו' : that is, one makes no covenant with idolaters, etc., and it is forbidden to have compassion on them, as it is said (Deut 7:2): And you shall show them no favor. Therefore, when one sees an idolatrous Cuthean (that is, a Goy, meaning a Christian, or another who is not a Jew, for in the writings of the aforementioned Rabbi Moses and certain other books, the word Cúthi or Cuthean is used in place of Goi) perishing, or sees him sinking in a river, he shall not pull him out. If he sees that he is near death, he shall not rescue him. It is therefore forbidden for Jews to have compassion on a Christian or any other person who is not a Jew. On this matter it is written in the Jalkut Schimóni, on the Psalms, fol. 102, col. 4, numerò 727, on the words of Ps 36:11, "Extend your goodness to those who know you," as follows: אמר רבי יצחק אל : תהי מושך חסד לאומות העולם : that is, Rabbi Isaac said: do not extend your goodness (or mercy) to the nations of the world. In the Piske Tosephóth of the Talmudic tractate Jevamóth, fol. 123, col. 1, numerò 32, it is likewise read: לא : תכרות להם ברית דווקא בשבעה אומות ולא בשאר לא תחנם בכל האומות : that is, (the words of Deut 7:2,) "You shall make no covenant with them," apply strictly to the seven nations (which were in the land of Canaan) and not to the remaining nations; (but the words) "You shall show them no favor" apply to all nations. Rabbi Menachem of Recanati likewise teaches the very same thing in his book Taame mizvóth, fol. 23, col. 2, in these words: מצוה שלא להעביר למולך ושלא : לפנות אחר עבודת אלילים וגו' ושלא לחונן על עובדי עבודת אלילים : that is, it is commanded that one shall not cause anyone to pass through the fire to Molech, and that one shall not look upon idolatry, etc., and likewise that one shall not show compassion toward idolaters. In Rabbi Moses bar Maimon's book called Sépher mizvóth, fol. 85, col. 3, the following is also read on this matter: 'מציה נ : הזהירנו מחמול כלל על עובדי עבודה זרה ומליקות דבר מכל מה שמיוחד להם והוא אמרו לא תחנם וגומר : that is, in the fiftieth commandment we are warned to have absolutely no compassion on those who practice idolatry, and also not to regard anything that belongs to them as beautiful; and this is what is said (Deut 7:2): You shall show them no favor, etc. Abarbanel likewise teaches in his book Markéveth hammichneh, fol. 77, col. 4, in the Parascha הצא Téze: אין ראוי לעשות : that is, it is not fitting that one should show mercy to enemies. Rabbi Levi ben Gerson likewise states in his commentary on 1 Kgs 18:40, in the Toalióth or lessons drawn from that verse, the following concerning this matter: אין ראוי לשלם לחמול על הרעים המחטיאים וזולתם ומסירים מאחרי השם יתברך : that is, it does not befit an upright man to show compassion toward the wicked, who cause other people to sin and turn them away from the blessed God, for mercy toward them is cruelty toward the good, etc. It is also written in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin, fol. 92, col. 1: אמר רבי אלעזר כל אדם שאין בו דעה אסור לרחם עליו שנ' כי לא עם בינות : that is, Rabbi Eliezer said: it is forbidden to show compassion toward any person who is without understanding, as it is said (Isa 27:11): For it is a people without understanding; therefore He who made them will not have compassion on them, and He who formed them will show them no grace. Now, since the Jews regard us Christians as idolaters, wicked and seductive people who seek to turn them away from their religion, and also as their enemies, and indeed as people without understanding and as fools, as has been demonstrated in the 16th chapter of the first part, and since we belong to the nations of the world, it is beyond all doubt that they are also not permitted to rescue any one of us from death.

The second reason why Jews are not permitted to rescue any Christian from death is that they have been commanded to rescue only their neighbor from death, but Christians are not considered neighbors by them. For this reason, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon writes in the fourth part of his book Jad chasaka, in the 4th chapter, §. 11. fol. 49, col. 2. under the title הלכות רוצח ושמירת נפש Hilchóth rozéach uschemirát néphesch, in the following manner: אסור להצילם אם נטו למות כגון שראה אחד מהן שנפל לים אינו מעלהו שנאמר לא תעמוד על דם רעך ואין זה רעך: that is, it is forbidden to rescue them (namely the Cutheans or Christians) when they are near death; as when someone sees one of them who has fallen into the sea, he does not pull him out, as it is said (Lev 19:16): "You shall not stand against the blood of your neighbor"; but this one is not your neighbor.

The third reason is this: because a Jew who rescues a Christian from death thereby keeps alive a person who practices idolatry. On this point, the book Beér haggóla, fol. 44, col. 2, teaches as follows: הגוים אשר הם עוובים אלהי עולם : לא מעלין ולא מורידין . לא מעלין כיון שהוא אינו עובד אלהים חיים וגו' ועובדים אלהי נכר לא מעלין ולא מורידין . לא מעלין כיון שהוא אינו עובד אלהים חיים וגו' . That is: one does not pull the Gójim, or heathens, who have forsaken the eternal God and serve foreign gods, out (namely, out of the pit or the well into which they have fallen), nor does one throw them in. One does not pull them out, because such a person does not serve the living God, etc. Therefore, when he is in the well (or the pit), one must not pull him out, since by doing so one would be keeping a person alive in his idolatry. Likewise, it is stated in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 20, col. 1, in the Tosepboth: אם מעלהו נמצא מגול בן לעבודה זרה That is: if one pulls (a Goi) out, it turns out that one is keeping a person alive in his idolatry.

Now, even if the Jews were to object that the prohibition against rescuing the Gójim from death is to be understood as applying only to those seven nations mentioned in Deut 7:1, who dwelt in the land of Canaan when they took possession of it, as is maintained in the words cited at the beginning of section 2, no. 425, of the book Chóschen hammischpat, such a claim on their part is nonetheless nothing but a cunning deception. For, as has been stated, it is quite explicitly forbidden to them in general terms to rescue one who practices idolatry and who is not their neighbor, that is, not a Jew; and of any such distinction there is no mention whatsoever.

When this prohibition concerned only the said seven peoples, it would not be necessary at all today, since they no longer dwell among them; and even if their descendants were still to be found somewhere, they do not recognize them as such, unless someone were willing to believe Rabbi David Kimchi, who in his commentary on Obad 1:20 reports that the Germans are descended from the Canaanites, which Rabbi Gedálja also confirms in his book Schalchéleth hakkabbála fol. 76, col. 1. with these words: יש קבלה שיושבי אשכנז הם הכנענים : that is, we have learned through tradition that the inhabitants of Germany are those Canaanites who took to flight before Joshua. This, however, is entirely rejected by Abarbanel in his Commentario on Obadiab fol. 254, col. 2. in the sixth question. Since this prohibition must still be observed by them at the present time, and they dwell among us, it follows irrefutably that the matter concerns Christians, and that they may not rescue any of them from death.

On the other hand, however, they are earnestly commanded to save a Jew from death, as may be read in the book Jad Chasaka of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, in the fourth part, in the first chapter, numero 14, under the title Hilchóth rozéach, where the words read as follows: כל היכול להציל ולא הציל עובר : that is, whoever can save (his neighbor, namely a Jew) and does not save him, transgresses the commandment Lev 19:16, which reads: You shall not stand against your neighbor's blood. Likewise, one who sees his companion sinking in the sea, or that murderers are coming upon him, or that a wild beast is approaching him, and can save him, or hire others for wages to save him, and does not help him; or when he hears that informers or traitors are plotting something evil against him, or are laying a snare for him, and does not reveal and disclose this to his companion; or when he knows that a Cuthean or a violent man intends to go against his companion (and do him harm), and he could appease him on behalf of his companion and remove from his mind what he intends, and does not appease him (so that he does nothing against his companion), and whatever else may be of this kind: whoever does this (and does not help his neighbor) transgresses the commandment: You shall not stand against your neighbor's blood. The very same is also to be found in the book Chótschen hammischpat, fol. 484, col. 2, numéro 426.

Regarding the second question, namely whether Rabbinic teaching permits the killing of a Christian, we wish to draw a distinction between those Christians who were formerly Jews and converted to the Christian religion, and those who were born of Christian parents.

As for converted Jews, it is undeniable that it is permitted to kill such a person. Such converts are called, as was indicated at the end of the 16th chapter of the first part, Mesbummadím, that is, the Destroyed; Mumarím, that is, the Changed; Malschiním, that is, Slanderers; Miním, that is, Heretics; Epicurusím, that is, Epicureans; Copherím, that is, Deniers; and Moserím, that is, Traitors. And in Ababenel's book Rosch amaná, fol. 9, col. 1, where the thirteen articles of the Jewish faith are treated, the following is taught concerning them: אם לא יאמין אדם עקר מאלו העיקרים כראוי כבר יצא מן הכלל וכפר בעיקר ונקרא מין ואפיקורוס וקוצץ בנטיעות וערב האדם לשנאו ולמאסו בו ולאבדו ועליו נאמר הלא משנאיך י"י אשנא: that is, when a person does not believe one of these articles as is proper, he has already stepped outside the community of the faithful, and denies the foundation, and is called a Min or heretic, and an Epicurean, as well as a destroyer of the plantings; and one is obligated to hate him, and to despise him, and to destroy him (or to kill him). Of such a person it is also said (Ps 139:21): Should I not hate those, O Lord, who hate You? This same teaching is also found in Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's commentary on the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 121, col. 1, in the Amsterdam Talmud. Likewise, the following is written concerning them in the book Jóre déa, fol. 123, col. 2, no. 158: מיני ישראל והם שעובדים לעבודת אלילים או העושה עבירות והאפיקורוסים והם שכופרים להכעיס אפילו אכל נבילה או לבש שעטנז להכעיס הרי זה מין. והאפיקורוסים והם שכופרים בתורה ובנבואה מישראל מצוה להרגם אם יש בידו כח להרגם בסיף בפרהסיא הורג ואם לאו יבא בעלילות עד שישבב הריגתו כיצד ראה אחד מהם שנפל לבאר והסולם בבאר קודם ומסלקו יבא: ואומר הריני טרוד להוריד בני מן הגג ואחזירנו לך וכיוצא בדברים אלו: that is, it is commanded to kill the Minim or heretics among the Israelites, namely those who practice idolatry, or one who commits sins in order to provoke someone (even if he merely eats carrion, or puts on a garment mixed of linen and wool in order to provoke someone to anger, he is a heretic), and the Epicureans, namely those who deny the Law and the prophecy of Israel. When one has the power in his hand to kill them, one kills them publicly with the sword; but where that is not possible, one shall approach them with cunning until one brings about the death of such a person. How then shall one proceed: when one sees one of them who has fallen into a well, and a ladder is standing in the well, one goes over and removes it, and says to him: see, I am occupied with letting my son climb down from a roof (and need this ladder for that purpose), I will bring it back to you; and similar things (he may say more to him, but he does not bring the ladder back, and instead lets him die therein). All of this is also to be found in the book Chóschén hammischpat, no. 425, §5. Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon writes in his book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, in the 4th chapter, no. 10, fol. 49, col. 2, under the title Hilchóth rozéach, as follows: הכופרים בתורה ובנבואה מישראל מצוה להרגן אם יש בידו כח להרגן בסייף בפרהסיא הורג: ואם לאו יבא עליהן בעלילות עד שיסבב הריגתן: וגומר: that is, it is commanded to kill those among the Israelites who deny the Law and the Prophets. When one has the power in his hand, one shall execute them publicly with the sword; but where that is not possible, one shall approach them with cunning until one causes their death. Likewise, in the Piske Tosephóth of the Talmudic tractate Pesachím, fol. 122, col. 2, no. 127, the following is taught: הכופר מותר להרגו: that is, it is permitted to kill a Cópher, that is, a denier.

In the book called Sépher Toledóth Adam vechávva, the following is also read concerning this matter in the sixth part, fol. 160, col. 2: מינין ומסורות ומשומדים ואפיקורסים מורידים ולא מעלים וגו' ואם היה מעלה בבור מגירה ואומר אני עושה כדי שלא תרד בהמתי לשם. ואם היתה אבן על פי הבור. מניח הוא ויאמר אני רוצה להעביר עליו בהמותי: that is, the Minim or heretics, and traitors, and the Meshummadim or the destroyed, as well as the Epicureans, one lets down (into a pit) and does not pull back up, etc. And when there is a ramp in the pit, one removes it and says: I do it for the purpose of preventing my cattle from going down there. And when a stone has been placed over the opening of the pit, one lays it back on top and says: I want to let my cattle walk over it. But when there is a ladder in the pit, one takes it away and says: I must let my son climb down from the roof, etc. All of this, however, is taken from the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 26, col. 2. In the book Beér haggóla, the following is also read at fol. 44, col. 2: והכופרים אלו שלשה מורידין לבור וזה כי המשומד הוא שעווב את אלוה שלו ועובד אלהי נכר. ולשון משומד הוא בא על מי שהיה תחלה עובד ה"ש ואחר כך נשתמד לעבודת אלילים: that is, one lets these three kinds, namely the Minim or heretics, the Mesbummadim or the destroyed (that is, the apostates), and the Copherim or deniers, down into a pit; and this because a Mesbummad or destroyed one forsakes his God and serves a foreign god. (The name Mesbummad, however, is given to one who at first served the blessed God, but afterward destroyed (and corrupted) himself in idolatry (that is, fell away); therefore it is fitting that he too be entirely destroyed.) In the second part of the Prague Machzor, at fol. 34, col. 1, under the title Józer lepharascháth bachodesch, in the commentary on the prayer that begins אבי כל הוזה Aví col chóseh, it is written in the following manner: המינין ראוי לעקר אותם, that is, it is fitting that one root out the Minim or heretics. In the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, at fol. 4, col. 2, it is also stated in the Tosephóth concerning a Min or heretic: מותר להרגו בידים, that is, it is permitted to kill him with one's own hands. In Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's book Jad chasáka, in the first part, in the tenth chapter, numero 1, fol. 40, col. 1, under the title הלכות עכו"ם Hilchóth achum, the following is also taught on this matter: המוסרים והאפיקורוסין מישראל : 'מצוה לאבדן ולהורידן עד באר שחת מפני שהן מצירין לישראל ומסירין את העם מאחרי ה' that is, it is commanded to kill the traitors and the Epicureans who are among the Israelites, and to cast them down into the pit of destruction, because they afflict the Israelites and lead the people astray.

Further, concerning traitors, the aforementioned book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, in the eighth chapter, numerô 9. 10. 11. fol. 46, col. 1, under the title הלכות חובל ומזיק Hilchóth chóvel umássik, writes in the following manner: אסור למסור ישראל ביד כותים בין בגופו בין בממונו ואפילו היה רשע ובעל עבירות ואפילו היה מיצר לו ומצעריו : וכל המוסר ישראל ביד כותים בין בגופו בין בממונו אין לו חלק לעולם הבא . מותר להרוג את המוסר בכל מקום ואפילו בזמן הזה . ומותר להרגו קודם שימסור אלא כשאמר הריני מוסר פלוני בגופו או בממונו ואפילו ממון קל התיר עצמו למיתה . ומזהרין לו ואומרים לו אל תמסור . אם העיז פניו ואמר לא כי אלא אמסרנו מצוה להרגו וכל הקודם . להרגו זכה . ומעשים בכל זמן בערי המערב להרוג המוסרים שהחזקו למסור ממון ישראל : that is, it is forbidden to betray an Israelite, whether in his person or in his property, into the hands of the Cuthean (that is, the Christians, as has been demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part under the third name that is given to us, or other peoples), even if he is already a godless and sinful person; and whoever betrays an Israelite, whether in his person or in his goods, into the hands of the Cuthean, has no share in the world to come (that is, in eternal life). It is permitted to kill a traitor in all places, even in the present time; and it is permitted to kill him before he carries out the betrayal. But if he says, "Behold, I will betray such-and-such a person in his person and property," even if it is only a small amount of property, he thereby makes it permissible to kill him. One does, however, warn him and say to him, "Do not betray"; but if he is shameless (and obstinate) and says, "I will betray him nonetheless," then it is commanded to kill him, and whoever kills him first is righteous. This occurs at all times in the cities of the West, that traitors who are held to intend to betray an Israelite's property are killed, and the traitors are handed over into the hands of the Cuthean (that is, secretly arranged through people of the Gojim) to be killed and struck down. The very same is also read in the book Shulchan áruch, in the part called Chóschén hammischpat, fol. 451, col. 2. and fol. 452, col. 1. numero 388. §. 9. 10., and in the Sèpher mizvòth gadòl, fol. 148, col. 3., under the title הלכות גניבה Hilchoth genéva. Since converted Jews are regarded by the Jews as traitors in particular, inasmuch as they reveal their secrets to Christians and, according to the teaching of the rabbis, have abandoned the living and true God and given themselves over to idolatry, it follows rationally from this that it is permitted to the godless evildoers to take the life of such a person.

So that the truth of this matter may come to light all the more clearly, I will prove it with plain examples that the Jews have caused those who have abandoned their faith and become Christians, or who have merely let it be known that they intended to do so, to be killed in a pitiful manner, either by themselves or through other godless people whom they hired for that purpose. The convert Victor von Carben recounts in his little book on the Jews, in the 17th chapter, that there was once a man who had accepted the Christian religion, who was called Gottsmann, and when he mocked the Jews, his relatives, who were of a great family, were ashamed on that account and hired, by means of bribes, a false and wicked Christian, who attached himself to Gottsmann and inquired into all his secrets, presenting himself as though he were his best and most trusted friend. When Gottsmann once wished to travel into the countryside, he asked his supposed friend to accompany him, and the latter agreed; but he immediately went to the Jews and informed them of his plan and his scheme, whereupon they hired yet another wicked Christian to go along as well. In addition, two strong fellows from Gottsmann's circle of acquaintances were appointed for the purpose, and these four devised a plan as to where they would meet. Thereupon Gottsmann set out on the road with his supposed friend, on which road the assigned Christian came to them and pretended as though he had come upon them by chance. When they arrived in a dense forest at the appointed place, the poor Gottsmann was struck by his two traveling companions so that he fell to the ground, and they held him there until the two Jews who had arranged the deed arrived. Thereupon the two Jews sent the godless Christians a little way aside and confronted him with the charge that he had traded a living GOD for the dead body of a man (by which they meant Christ), and said to him: if you wish to die as a pious Jew, we will here pledge and swear to you that we will bury you in our churchyard at Cologne beside your parents; to which, however, he remained completely silent. When the Jews perceived that they could obtain nothing from him, they called the two false Christians back, and when the poor man noticed the two Christians before him, he called out to the one who had previously presented himself as his best friend and had associated with him in a very familiar manner, calling him by name, and said: O you false traitors! How miserably you have betrayed me. And as he had been wounded by them, the blood had run over him so that he could neither see nor speak well; yet he took the blood that flowed from him into his hand and spoke in such agony, with words of comfort: hear, you traitors and murderers, I was formerly baptized in water; now I am baptized with my own blood; and with that he poured the blood with his own hand over his head, then cried out with a clear voice as loudly as he could: now I will die as a pious Christian; whereupon they immediately beat him to death. This is what the aforementioned Victor von Carben reports. The highly learned Mr. Diefenbach, duly appointed Evangelical Lutheran pastor here in Frankfurt, also states in his book, which he calls Judeus convertendus, paginâ 143, that the Jews at Mainz had the learned and converted Rabbi Samuel shot by a murderer near Cologne in a forest (for which they paid him 400 thalers), on account of which, in addition to the murderer, nearly fifty Jews were executed as their well-deserved punishment.

The hatred of the Jews toward the Christian religion is also so great and terrible that parents even forget all natural love for their children and put them to death in a cruel manner when they perceive in them a desire to embrace the Christian religion. We have a noteworthy example of this in what took place in the year 1694 in Prague, concerning which one may likewise consult the aforementioned Pastor Diefenbach's Judeus convertendus, paginâ 136, 137, &c., wherein a Jew there (by the name of Lazar Abel) put his own natural little son, who was approximately twelve to thirteen years old and was called Simon Abel, to death in a cruel manner with the help of Löbel Kurzhandel, for the reason that the boy had, the year before, presented himself to the Fathers of the Jesuits and wished to become a Christian; as indeed the entire course of this affair was published in print at Nuremberg in the year 1696 by the bookseller Balthasar Joachim Ender.

Indeed, when the godless Jews notice in their children even the slightest inclination toward Christian things, they make no scruple of putting them to death on that account. Eusebius reports that a Jew burned his son because the latter had read and studied the Gospel concerning Christ. Likewise, the aforementioned Victor of Carben writes in the 16th chapter of his little book on the Jews that a Jew had a little son of five or six years of age, who was called Mennichen, and who had played with some Christian children. On one occasion it came to pass that Mennichen ran into a church together with the Christian children, and when he came home again he said to his mother: "Oh, what a beautiful school the Gojim have," that is, the Christians. When the mother heard this she was greatly alarmed and beat him soundly with a rod. Yet the next day the child ran back into the church again; she disclosed this to the father, who also beat him with the rod. But all of this was in vain, and the child ran to the church nonetheless, just as before, which greatly troubled the parents. Then the mother said to the father: "We will live to see sin and shame from this child; it would be far better if we quietly did away with him, for he will never come to any good." And although the father replied that the child was still young and did not know what he was doing, and that when he came of age he would surely conduct himself differently, this availed nothing with the mother, who opened the Scripture at Deut 21:20-21 and said: "Our son is stubborn and rebellious; therefore the words of Zech 13:3 shall be fulfilled upon him," which read as follows: "You shall not live, for you have spoken lies in the name of the Lord." To this she added yet other passages of Scripture. Thereupon, on a Sabbath, without her husband's knowledge, she poisoned the child with her own hand by means of a dish made of white flour and eggs, from which it died immediately. From these accounts it is thus sufficiently evident that it is permitted among the Jews to kill a convert, seeing that they do not even spare their own natural children when they give any sign that they either wish to embrace the Christian religion, or even merely praise something that is Christian. Let this now suffice concerning converts.

Regarding the remaining Christians who are descended from Christian parents: it is likewise permitted to kill them, and this is demonstrated by the following arguments.

First, because they teach that God has permitted them to shed the blood of the Gojim, or heathens, concerning which the following is read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 132, col. 1, in the Parascha Schemini: זאת החיה אשר תאכלו וזה שאמר הכתוב עמד וימודד ארץ במדרש ראה ויתר הגוים. בשעה שבקש הק"ה ליתן תורה לישראל עמד וימודד את הארץ ונתן התורה לישראל במדבר בפרהסיא לכך כתיב עמד וימודד ארץ. דמם התיר להם שנאמר ותגוים חרוב יחרבו. נפשם התיר להם שנאמר לא תחיה כל נשמה. ממונם התיר להם שנאמר ואכלת את כל העמים : that is, in the Midrash it is taught that the words of Lev 11:2, "These are the animals that you shall eat," signify what Scripture says (Hab 3:6): "He stood and measured the earth; He looked upon the heathens and scattered them." At the time when the Holy and Blessed God wished to give the Law to the Israelites, He stood up and measured the earth, and gave the Israelites the Law publicly in the wilderness; therefore it is written: "He stood up and measured the earth." He permitted them (namely the Israelites) the blood of the heathens (to shed it), as it is said (Isa 60:12): "And the heathens shall be utterly laid waste (or destroyed)." He permitted them their souls, as it is said (Deut 20:16): "You shall let no soul live." He permitted them their goods, as it is said (Deut 7:16): "You shall devour all peoples." In Vajikra rabba, fol. 146, col. 1-2, in the thirteenth Parascha, the following is also found on this subject: רבי שמעון בן יוחאי פתח עמד וימודד הארץ. מדד הק"בה כל האומות ולא מצא אומה שהיא ראויה לקבל את התורה אלא דור המדבר. מדד הק"בה כל ההרים ולא מצא הר שתנתן בו את התורה אלא סיני וגו' : 'רב אמר דמן התיר וממונן התיר. דמן התיר שנאמר לא תחיה כל ממונן התיר שנאמר ואכלת את שלל אויביך : that is, Rabbi Schimon ben Jochai began (and said, it is written, Hab 2:6): "He stood and measured the earth." The Holy and Blessed God measured all peoples and found no people worthy of receiving the Law except the generation of the wilderness. The Holy and Blessed God measured all mountains and found no mountain upon which the Law was to be given except Mount Sinai, etc. Raf said: He permitted their blood (to be shed) and allowed their goods (to be taken). He permitted their blood, as it is said (Deut 20:16): "You shall let no soul live." But their goods He permitted, as it is said (Deut 20:14): "And you shall eat of the spoil of your enemies." The same is to be found twice in the Jalkut Shimoni on the Prophet Habakkuk, fol. 83, col. 3, numero 563. And in Rabbi Joseph Albo's Sepher Ikkarim, fol. 92, col. 1, in the 25th chapter of the third Maamar, on the words of Deut 23:20, "Of the foreigner you may take usury," the following is written: זהו עובד ע"ז ואינו רוצה לקיים שבע מצוות בני נח כנר תושב גופו מותר כפי הסכמת כל הדתות ואפילו הפילוסופים מתירים דמו ואסרו הרגו למי שאין לו דת וכן תזהיר התורה על עובדי ע"ז לא תחיה כל נשמה גופו מותר כל שכן ממונו כי העובר ע"ז ראוי להרגו ולא לחמול עליו : that is, such a (foreign) person is one who practices idolatry and does not wish to observe the seven commandments of Noah, as a foreigner who dwelt in the Promised Land (in former times) was obligated to do: his body is, by the unanimous agreement of all religions, permitted (to be killed). Indeed, the philosophers, or sages, also allow that his blood may be shed, and have said: kill the one who has no religion. Thus the Law of Moses also warned against idolaters (and commanded, Deut 20:16): "You shall let no soul live." The body of an idolater is permitted; how much more so his goods, for it is right that one should kill him and show him no mercy.

Against this, the Jews might offer, in their defense, the objection that this applies only to the seven nations of the land of Canaan, as can be seen in Deut 7:1-2 and Deut 20:16-17. For this reason, it is written in the Sepher mizvóth gadól fol. 10, col. 3, concerning the words of Deut 7:2, "You shall show them no favor," as follows: לא מעלין אותם מן הבור ולא מורידין ועיקר פשוטו לא תרחם עליהם : that is, one does not pull them out of the pit, nor does one let them down into it; and the principal plain meaning of these words is this: you shall not have mercy on them; and (Scripture) speaks of the seven nations, the Amorites, the Canaanites, etc. Furthermore, the same Jews might bring forward in their defense that Rabbi Mosché bar Majemon also teaches in his Sepher Mizvóth, fol. 85, col. 2-3, in the forty-ninth commandment, under the title Mizváth lo táaseh, in the following manner: הזהירנו שלא להחיות איש מז 'עממין כדי שלא יתהדו במ אדם ויסיתום לעבודה זרה והוא אמרו לא תחיה כל נשמה והריגתם מצות עשה כמו שבארנו במצות קפ"ו ומי שעבר ולא הרג מהם: that is, (Scripture) warns us that we are not to let any person of the seven nations live, so that the people (namely the Israelites) may not associate with them and be led by them into idolatry; and this is what it (Deut 20:16) says: you shall let no soul live; and it is a positive commandment that one must put them to death, as we have explained in the hundred and eightieth commandment (fol. 73, col. 1, under the title Mizvah aléh). But whoever transgresses this and does not put any of them to death when it was possible for him to kill one, has transgressed a prohibitive commandment.

To this, however, the following answer must be given: that although the words "You shall show them no favor," as well as the words "You shall let no soul live," are indeed spoken in Holy Scripture concerning the seven peoples of Canaan, the words cited in Rabbi Bechai as proof that the blood of the Gentiles is permitted, drawn from Isa 60:12, which read "And the Gentiles shall be utterly laid waste (or destroyed)," apply to all peoples in general; just as the words in Deut 7:16, "You shall devour all peoples," are to be understood as referring not only to the aforementioned seven peoples, but to all of them collectively. Beyond this, if they were only permitted to kill the said seven peoples of the land of Canaan, why then do they intend, at the coming of their Messiah, to kill all Christians and let not a single one live? It must surely follow that this is permitted to them. But even granting that it is to be understood only of the aforementioned seven peoples, which is not the case, the Germans would still not be excluded from it; rather, it would be permitted to the Jews to kill them wherever they can and may, because according to the teaching of Rabbi David Kimchi they are said to be descended from the accursed Canaanites. He states this in his commentary on Obad 1:20 as follows: אומרים בקבלה כי בני ארץ אלמנייא היו כנעניים כי כשפנה כנעני מפני יהושע כמ: שכתבנו בספר יהושע הלכו להם לארץ אלמנייא שקורין ארץ אשכנז ועוד כיום קוראים אותם כנענים : that is, it is said through tradition, or oral teaching, that the inhabitants of Germany are Canaanites; for when the Canaanites withdrew from before Joshua (out of fear of being killed), as we have written in our commentary on the book of Joshua, they went to the land of Alemannia, which is called Germany; and these same people (namely the Germans) are still called Canaanites to this day.

Secondly, I prove it from the fact that it is permitted for Jews to kill a Christian, since according to the teaching of Rabbi Bechai, all Gójim, or heathens, are worthy of being exterminated; for he teaches thus in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 136, col. 4, in the Parascha Mezóra: אמר. כל הגוים בני נדות הם וחייבים כרת שנאמר הוי יושבי חבל הים גוי כרתים. רבי ישמעאל מניין שהגוים חייבים כרת שנאמר כי יכרית ה' אלהיך את הגוים: that is, all Gójim are children of the unclean (that is, they were conceived by their mothers during the time of their female impurity) and are chajávim kéreth, that is, worthy of being exterminated, since it is said (Zeph 2:5): "Woe to the inhabitants of the region of the sea, the people of the Kerethites" (who are so named from כרת Caráth, which means to exterminate). Rabbi Ismael said: from where is it proven that the Gójim, or heathens, must be exterminated? Since it is said (Deut 12:29): "When the Lord your God shall exterminate the heathens." Thus far are the words of Rabbi Bechai. They would not spare us either, if they had power and authority over us, as can be seen from the cited commentary of the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 198, col. 1, in the Parascha Vehajá ékef, where he expounds the words of Deut 7:16, "You shall devour all the peoples that the Lord your God shall give you," as follows: תכלה אותן ותאכלם כלהם כלשון כי לחמו הם: that is, you shall destroy them and devour them like bread, according to the manner of speaking (Num 14:9, where it is read): "For they are our bread" (that is, for we will devour them like bread). Immediately following this, it continues: דרשו רבותינו זכרונם לברכה בומן שמסורין בידך that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, explain this (namely, that you shall destroy the peoples) as applying to the time when they are delivered into your power.

Thirdly, I assert it for this reason: according to their teaching, whoever kills a godless person performs a pleasing work before GOD the LORD. For in the Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 245, col. 3, no. 772, as well as in Bammídbar rábba, fol. 229, col. 3, in the twenty-first Parashah, the following is read: כל השופך דמן של רשעים כאילו הקריב קרבן, That is: Whoever sheds the blood of the godless does just as much as if he were offering (to GOD) a sacrifice. Now they regard Christians collectively as godless people, for they call them the godless, as well as the godless people, and Christendom the kingdom of the godless, or the godless kingdom, as well as the godless Esavian kingdom and the godless Roman kingdom, as has been shown in detail in the first part, in the sixteenth and seventeenth chapters. It therefore necessarily follows that, in their view, they render GOD a pleasing service when they take the life of a Christian.

Fourthly, I confirm it for this reason: because they teach that it is permissible to kill a person who practices idolatry and does not observe the seven commandments of Noah, inasmuch as Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon teaches in his book Jad chasaka, in the first part, fol. 40, col. 1, in the 10th chapter, number 1, under the title Hilchóth achum, as follows: אין כורתין ברית לעובדי כוכבים ומזלות כדי שנעשה עמהם שלום ונניח אותם לעובדם שנאמר לא תכרות להם ברית : that is, one makes no covenant with the idolaters, such that we would make peace with them and allow them to practice their idolatry, as it is said (Deut 7:2): You shall make no covenant with them; rather, they must desist from it, or they shall be put to death. Likewise, in Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's book Jad chasaka, in the first part, fol. 120, col. 2, in the first chapter, number 6, under the title Hilchoth mila, it is further read that if a Cushite servant will not accept the seven commandments (of Noah), he shall immediately be put to death. In the Sepher mizvóth gadól, it is read at fol. 192, col. 4 under the title Hilchoth melachím umilchamóth, the following on this matter as well: בפרק ארבע מיתות תנו רבנן שבע מצוות נצטוו בני נח וגו' : 'כל בן נח : that is, in the chapter Arba mithoth (that is, in the seventh chapter of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 57, col. 1.), our Rabbis teach that the children of Noah were commanded seven commandments, &c., and that every one who is a child of Noah and transgresses one of them shall be put to death by the sword. The aforementioned Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon also teaches on this matter in his said book Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 290, col. 1, in the eighth chapter, number 10, under the title Hilchóth melachím umilchamoth, as follows: צווה משה רבינו מפי הגבורה לכופ את כל באי העולם לקבל מצוות שנצטוו בני נח וכל מי שלא קבל : that is, our teacher Moses commanded, from the mouth of God, to compel all people who come into the world to accept those commandments which were commanded to the children of Noah, and that whoever does not accept them shall be put to death. More on this matter can also be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 210, col. 1, in the Parascha Schophetim. Furthermore, Jacob's two sons, Simeon and Levi, who, as is read in Gen 34:25, slew the Shechemites, are said to have done so because those people were given over to idolatry, concerning which it is written as follows in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 44, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajischlach: והיותר נראה שמצאו שמעון ולוי מבואר הוא כי היו אנשי שכם רשעים עובדי עבודה זרה ומגלי עריות וכענין שכתוב בהם כי את כל התועבות האל עשו אנשי הארץ וגומר ועל כן ראו כי המה חשוב להם כמי שירצו להנקם מהם והרגו המלך וכל : that is, the justification which Simeon and Levi found (for killing the Shechemites) is clear, because the inhabitants of Shechem were wicked people who practiced idolatry and fornication, as it is written concerning them (Lev 18:27): For all these abominations the people of this land have done, etc. And therefore they considered the blood of those people to be reckoned among them as water, and they wished to avenge themselves upon them (on account of their sister Dinah), and they killed the king together with all the men of the city, for all of them followed him (in wickedness). Now, since the Jews regard us as people who practice idolatry, as was indicated in the 16th chapter of the first part, at the thirty-first name they give us, and since idolatry is forbidden in the seven commandments of Noah, it follows from this without fail that they consider themselves permitted to kill us, whenever it might be within their power to do so.

Fifthly, I confirm it for this reason: because they regard Christians as Amalekites, and call Christendom the Edomite and Amalekite kingdom, as well as Amalek, as has been demonstrated in the first part, in the 16th and 17th chapters; but the killing and complete extermination of the Amalekites has been commanded to them in Deut 25:19, concerning which Rabbi Moses bar Maimon, in his Sepher mizvóth, fol. 73, col. 2, at the one hundred and eighty-eighth commandment, under the title Mizváh aseh, teaches in the following manner: מִצְוָה קפ"ח והיא שציונו להכרית זרע עמלק בלבד משאר זרע עשו זכרים ונקבות קטנים וגדולים והוא אמרו יתעלה תמחה את זכר עמלק וכן להרוג ז' עממין ולאבדם צווי נצטונו בו והוא מלחמת מצוה ואנחנו מצווים להשיג אחריהם ולרודפם בכל דור ודור עד שיכלו ולא ישאר מהם איש: that is, the one hundred and eighty-eighth commandment is that He (namely God) has commanded us to exterminate solely the seed of Amalek from the remaining seed of Esau, namely men and women, small and great, and this is what the praised God says (Deut 25:19): You shall blot out the remembrance of Amalek. And shortly before this, at the one hundred and eighty-seventh commandment, he writes: כל זמן שנמצא מזרע עמלק מצוה להכריתו, that is, it is commanded that at all times those who are found to be of the seed of Amalek shall be exterminated. Likewise, we are also commanded to kill and exterminate the seven nations, and this is a commanded war, and we are commanded to pursue them and persecute them until they are exterminated and not a single person of them remains. In this same manner he also teaches in his Commentario on the Mischnájoth of the tractate Sanhédrin, as may be seen in the Amsterdam Talmud, fol. 115, col. 1, of that tractate, as follows: מלחמת הרשות היא מלחמת עמון ומואב וישמעאל ורומיה: ומלחמת מצוה היא מלחמת עמלק ושבעה עממין בלבד (that is, a voluntary war is a war waged against the Ammonites and Moabites, as well as the Ishmaelites and peoples of that kind; but a commanded war is a war against Amalek and the seven nations). This commandment our sworn enemies, the Jews, would gladly fulfill against us, and would murder us all in a barbarous manner, if only they had the opportunity to do so; they assure themselves, however, that it will certainly come to pass at the arrival of their supposed Messiah, in a great war which he will wage against the Christians, and that at that time all Christians shall be exterminated, so that not a single one remains and they shall never more be remembered, as will be demonstrated at greater length below in the 14th chapter. Now if, in their view, it is permitted to them to strike all Christians dead at that time when they have the upper hand and the power, then there is also no doubt that it is permitted to them at the present time to kill someone wherever they wish and are able; for the reason why they intend to kill them all in the future is precisely the same reason on account of which they may now, here and there, kill one or more.

Sixth, I demonstrate it from the fact that they teach that a Goi or Christian who observes the Sabbath is guilty of death and ought to be put to death. For in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin fol. 58, col. 2, it is written as follows: אמר ריש לקיש גוי ששבת חייב מיתה שנאמר ויום ולילה לא ישבותו (that is, Resh Lakish has said: a Goi who rests is guilty of death, as it is said in Gen 8:22: they shall not rest day and night). So also writes Rabbi Menachem of Recanati in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 116, col. 4, and fol. 117, col. 1, in the Parascha Ki tiffa, concerning this matter in these words: אמרו רז"ל בפרק ב' דביצה אמר רבי יוחנן בשם רבי שמעון בן יוחאי כל מצות שנתן להם הקב"ה לישראל נתן להם בפרהסיא חוץ משבת שנתן להם בצנעה שנאמר ביני ובין בני ישראל. ובאלה שמות רבה פירוש המאמר הזה. ראו כי יי' נתן לכם את השבת. לכם ניתנה ולא לאומות העולם. מכאן אמר אם יבאו בני נח וישמרו את השבת לא דיין שאינו נוטלין שכר אלא חייבין מיתה שנאמר .. יום ולילה לא ישבותו. ואזהרה לבני נח זו היא מיתתן אומר ביני ובין בני ישראל אות היא משל למלך ויושב ומטרונה יושבת כנגדו העובר ביניהם חייב מיתה. והרמז לכנסת ישראל של מעלה. ובאלה הדברים רבה אמר רבי חייא בר אבא בנהוג שבעולם מלך ומטרונתא יושבין ומשיחין זה עם זה מי שבא ומכניס עצמו ביניהן אינו חייב מיתה. כך השבת הוא בין הקב"ה ובין ישראל שנאמר בינו ובין בני ישראל לפיכך כל גוי שמכניס עצמו ביניהם עד שלא מל משל למלך ויושב ומטרונה יושבת כנגדו העובר ביניהם חייב מיתה (that is, our Rabbis of blessed memory have reported in the second chapter of the Talmudic tractate Beza that Rabbi Jochanan said in the name of Rabbi Simon ben Jochai that the holy blessed God gave all the commandments which He gave to the children of Israel to them publicly, with the exception of the Sabbath, which He gave to them in secret, since it is said in Exod 31:17: between Me and the children of Israel. And in Schémoth rábba (fol. 116, col. 3, in the 25th Parascha) he explains this saying (and declares): "See that the Lord has given you the Sabbath: it is given to you, and not to the nations of the world." From this he says: if the children of Noah come and observe the Sabbath, it is not enough that they receive no reward for it, but they are also guilty of death, as it is said in Gen 8:22: they shall not rest day and night. The warning to the children of Noah, however, is their death (that is, they are warned against sins in no other way than by being put to death). He (namely God) says in Exod 31:17: it (the Sabbath) is a sign between Me and the children of Israel. The matter is like a king who sits, and a Matron who sits opposite him: whoever passes between them is guilty of death; and this has a meaning with reference to the congregation (or community) of Israel above (in heaven). And in Devarim rábba (fol. 235, col. 2, in the Parascha Devarim) Rabbi Chija bar Abba has said: according to the custom of the world, if a king and a Matron sit and speak with one another, should not the one who comes and places himself between them be guilty of death? So it is with the Sabbath, which is between the holy blessed God and the Israelites, since it is said: between Me and the children of Israel. Therefore every Goi or heathen who places himself between them before he is circumcised is guilty of death; and this is, beyond that, what is said (by our Rabbis): a Goi who rests is guilty of death.)

On this matter, the following is also read in the book Maarébeth haálábúth fol. 211, col. 2. in the Continuatio Commentario: המילה דוחה את השבת כי הגוים אין להם כנוחה בשבת כמו שאמרו חז"ל גוי ששובת חייב מיתה כי לא ישובת ביום השבת שהוא רמז לאלף השביעי: that is, circumcision overrides the Sabbath (that is, it is permitted to perform it on the Sabbath), for the Gojim, or heathens, have no rest on the Sabbath, as our Sages of blessed memory say, that a Goi who rests is guilty of death, for he shall not rest on the Sabbath day, which is a symbol pointing to the seven-thousandth year (of the world). Upon this there follows in the same place fol. 212, col. 2 the following: אין ראוי שישמור את השבת רק ישראל והם וראוים לפי שבת שבת ולא יכרתו ממנו. ואפילו גוי ששבת שום יום מן הימים חייב מיתה בעבור שירצה לדמות כי גם הוא ישכון בכבוד במנוחתו ואין צריך לומר אם ישתדל לשבת ביום השבת עמנו בעבור שירצה להשתמש בכתר מלכות ואינו ראוי לו כי לא ישקוט : that is, no one is worthy to observe the Sabbath except the Israelites, and they are worthy of the day that is pure Sabbath (that is, of the eternal Sabbath in Heaven), and they shall not be cut off from it (that is, excluded from it). But if a Goi rests on any day whatsoever, he is guilty of death, because he thereby wishes to signify that he too shall dwell in glory in his rest (that is, observe the eternal Sabbath in Heaven); and it is needless to say this when he endeavors to rest on the Sabbath together with us, since he wishes to make use of the royal crown, of which he is not worthy, for he shall never rest nor repose therein. With this Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon also agrees, when he states in his book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, in the 10th chapter, numero 9, fol. 296, col. 1, under the title Hilchôth melaehím: כותי עכ"ו ששבת אפילו ביום מימות החול אם עשהו לעצמו כמו שבת חייב (ואין צריך לומר אם עשה that : מועד לעצמו : כללו של דבר אין מניחין אותן לחדש דת ולעשות מצות לעצמן כדעתן is, an idolatrous Cuthean (or Goi) who rests even on a weekday and thereby makes for himself, as it were, a Sabbath out of such a day, is guilty (of death), and it is needless to say this when he makes a feast day for himself. The sum of the matter is this: they are not permitted to establish a new religion or to ordain commandments for themselves according to their own understanding.

 For this reason the Jews pray on their Sabbath, as can be seen in the thick Tefillab fol. 65, col. 4, and fol. 66, col. 1, under the title Schácharith schel schábbath, in a prayer that begins במתנת חלקו משה ישמה Jismách Mósche bemattenáth chélko, in the following manner: לא נתתו יי' אלהינו לגויי הארצות ולא הנחתו מלכינו לעובדי אלילים וגם במנוחתו לא ישכנו רשעים כי לישראל עמך נתתו באהבה : לזרע יעקב אשר בם בחרת וגומר : that is, You have not given it (namely the Sabbath), O Lord our God, to the nations of the earth, and You have not caused the servants of idols to inherit it, O our King. Neither shall the wicked dwell in His rest, for You have given it in love to Your people Israel and to the seed of Jacob, whom You have chosen, etc. In the Polish Siddúrim it stands at fol. 68, col. 2, under the title Józer schel Schábbath, where this same prayer is to be found, and in place of רשעים Reschaim, that is, the wicked, it reads ערלים Arelím, that is, the uncircumcised; and from this it is plainly to be seen that we Christians are meant thereby. Since now the Christians observe not only the Sabbath but also other days as holy days, it follows from this that, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, they are on that account guilty of death, and may therefore be put to death.

Seventhly, I assert this furthermore because they teach that a Goi, that is, a pagan or Christian, who studies in the Law is worthy of death; for in the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin fol. 59, col. 1. it is taught thus: אמר רבי יוחנן גוי ששוקק בתורה חייב מיתה, that is, Rabbi Jochanan has said: a Goi who studies in the Law is guilty of death. The very same is also read in the book Mattéh Aharon fol. 60, col. 1. Since now many Christians study in the Law of Moses and read therein, it follows that all such people are thereby guilty of death, and that when a Jew kills such a person, he does no wrong in doing so. Against this, the Jews could object and say that it is also written in the aforementioned place of the tractate Sanbédrin: גוי העוסק בתורה הוא ככהן גדול, that is, a Goi who studies in the Law is equal to a high priest. Now if he is equal to a high priest because he studies in the Law, then he is to be honored on that account, and no harm may be done to him; why then should he be guilty of death? This is also thrown up by that godless villain, Rabbi Salman Zeví, in his Jüdischer Theriack, in the sixth chapter, numero 2, against the convert Friedrich Samuel Brenz. But I answer hereupon that, while those words are indeed read there, in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára fol. 3, col. 1., where they also appear, they are explained in the Tósephoth as follows: שאפילו גוי ועוסק בתורה פירש בשבע מצוות שלהם דאילו בשאר מצוות אמרינן בסנהדרין פרק ד' מיתות גוי העוסק בתורה חייב מיתה, that is, (the words) that even a Goi who studies in the Law (is equal to a high priest) are to be understood with reference to their seven commandments; for if one were to understand them as referring to the remaining commandments (which are contained in the Law of Moses), (that would be wrong,) for we say in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin in the 7th chapter, which is called Arba mithóth, that a pagan who studies in the Law (of Moses) is guilty of death. So too does Rabbi Moses bar Maimon write in his book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, in the tenth chapter of the tractate Hilchóth Melachím, numerô 19. fol. 296., as follows: גוי שעוסק בתורה חייב מיתה לא יעסוק אלא בשבע מצוות שלהן בלבד, that is, a Goi who studies in the Law is guilty of death. He shall study only in their seven commandments. From this we thus see clearly that whoever studies in the Law of Moses, which very many Christians frequently do, is guilty of death, and consequently may be killed by the Jews.

Eightly, I confirm it on the following grounds: they interpret the commandment of Exod 20:13, "You shall not kill," in such a way that it is to be understood as applying only to Jews, and consequently does not concern Christians or other peoples. That they interpret it thus can be seen from the commentary of Rabbi Levi ben Gershom on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 77, col. 4, in the Parascha Vaïschma Jethro, where he teaches as follows: לא תרצח ר"ל שלא תהרוג נפש אדם מישראל: כי הריגת בעל חיים הותרה להם לפי שהתבאר בתורה במקומות רבים. וכבר נצטוו גם כן על הריגת קצת האומות כמו עמלק ושאר האומות שנצטוו: that is, (the words) "You shall not kill" mean that you shall not slay any person from among the Israelites. For the killing of living animals is permitted to them, as is evident from many places in the Law. Likewise, they have also been commanded to kill certain peoples, such as Amalek and the remaining peoples, of whom they have been commanded that they shall let no soul among them live. Therefore it follows that this commandment concerns only the Israelites. With this Rabbi Moses bar Maimon also agrees, in his book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 47, col. 1, in the first chapter, number 1, under the title Hilchóth rozéach, when he states: כל הורג נפש אדם מישראל עובר בלא תעשה שנאמר: לא תרצח: that is, whoever kills a person from among the Israelites transgresses a prohibitory commandment, as it is said: "You shall not kill." Now if this commandment only prohibits the killing of Jews, and other peoples are excluded, then it must indeed be permissible to kill a Christian.

It is true that this passage is interpreted differently in the old Nizzáchon, pagina 257 and 258, where the following is written: המינים מונין אותנו ואוטרין שאנו מרצחים את בניהם • תשיב ותאמר להם שאין אומה מזהרת כל כך ברציחה כמונו ואפילו ברציחת גוים אנו מזהרים שהרי בלא תחמוד כתוב רעך : ובלא תרצח ובלא תגנוב ובלא תנאף לא כתיב רעך • משמע לא תרצח כלל שום בריה נמצא שאפילו על הריגת גוי נזהרנו . ולמה כי בצלם אלהים עשה את אדם וכתיב שופך דם האדם באדם דמו ישפך משמע . That is: The heretics (namely the Christians) press upon us and say that we murder their children. Answer and say to them that no people is so strictly warned against killing as we are; indeed, we are also warned not to kill any Gójim (or Christians), for behold, in the commandment "Thou shalt not covet," the word "neighbor" is written (as in: thy neighbor's house, thy neighbor's wife), but in the commandments "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not steal," and "Thou shalt not commit adultery," no mention is made of "neighbor"; by which it is to be understood that one ought not to kill any person whatsoever, and it is thus established that we are warned not to kill any Gentile. Why (are we not permitted to take anyone's life)? Because (according to the passage Gen 9:6) God made man in His image, and it is written (in that very same place): "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." This teaches us that all human beings in general are to be understood thereby.

These words would have some appearance of truth if one did not know the matter better; but they are invented only to deceive and to persuade us of something that is in fact quite different. It is stated therein that no people has been so warned against killing as they have; but this is untrue, for the Jews were indeed commanded to kill the Amalekites and the seven peoples of the land of Canaan, as has been noted in the preceding section; whereas we Christians are not permitted in the New Testament to kill any person whatsoever, but rather all killing is forbidden under penalty of the loss of eternal salvation, as may be seen in Gal 5:21; indeed, even hatred toward one's brother is counted as killing, as is found in 1 John 3:15: thus killing is forbidden to us far more strictly than to them. Furthermore, it is alleged that they are warned not to kill any Goi or Christian, because in the commandment "Thou shalt not kill," the neighbor is not mentioned, and thus it does not say: "Thou shalt not kill thy neighbor" (that is, an Israelite). In this, the truth is indeed stated, that this commandment forbids the killing of a Christian, since it is to be understood as applying to all people; but why then do the rabbis interpret it as has been shown in the immediately preceding section, namely that it forbids only the killing of Jews? And why do they permit the killing of the Gójim, that is, the heathens or Christians? For in the Sepher chasidim fol. 73, col. 2, no. 1017, the following is read: יהודים שהיו הולכים בדרך ופגעו בהם : לסטים ועמדו על היהודים והיהודים הרגו הלסטים ויש שם נכרים ויראים שמא יגידו לבניהם או לקרוביהם וינקמו מהם לפיכך יכולים היהודים להרוג אף אותם הנכרים אף על פי שיאמרו אותם הנכרים לא נגיד שאין להאמין להם אם הם מאותן האומות שנאמר בהם אשר פיהם דבר שוא וימינם ימין שקר וכן מצינו בדוד שנאמר איש ואשה לא יחיה דוד פן יגידו לפלשתים: that is, when Jews are traveling on a road and encounter murderers who attack the Jews, and the Jews kill the murderers, and strangers (that is, people who are not Jews, by which name Christians are also called, as has been demonstrated in the sixteenth chapter of the first part under the eighth name given to us) are present (having witnessed it), and the Jews fear that the strangers might report it to the sons or relatives of the murderers, and that these might take revenge upon them, then the Jews may also kill those strangers, even if they should say that they will not report it; since they are not to be believed, if they belong to those peoples of whom it is said (Ps 144:8): "Whose mouth speaks lies, and whose right hand is a right hand of falsehood." Thus we also find that this is what David did, as it is said (1 Sam 27:11): But David left neither man nor woman alive, so that they might not report it to the Philistines.

So it is also written in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 58, col. 1, that Rabbi Schéla brought a man to his death through false accusation and struck him dead with a club, and the words there read as follows: רב שילא נגדיה להווא גברא דבעל ארמית אזל אכל ביה קורצי בי מלכא אמר איכא חד גברא ביהודאי דקא דיין דינא בלא הרמנא דמלכא שדר עליה פריסתקא כי אתא אמר ליה מאי טעמא נגדתיא להאי אמר ליה דבא על חמרתא אמרי ליה אית לך סהדי אמר להו אין אתא אליהו אידמי ליה כאינש ואסהיד אמרי ליה אי הכי בר קטלא הוא אמר להו אנן מיומא דגלינן מארען לית לן רשותא למקטל אתון מאי דבעיתון עבידו ביה, עד דמעייני ביה בדינא פתח רבי שילא ואמר לך יי 'הגדולה והגבורה וגו' אמרי ליה מאי קאמרת אמר להו הכי קאמינא בריך רחמנא דיהיב מלכותא בארעא כעין מלכותא דרקינא ויהיב לכו שולטנא ורחמי דינא אמרו חביבא עליה יקרא דמלכותא כולי האי יהבי ליה קולפא אמרו ליה דון דינא כי הוה נפיק אמר ליה ההוא גברא עביד רחמנא ניסא לשקרי הכי אמר ליה רשע לאו חמרי איקרו דכתיב אשר בשר חמורים בשרם חזייה דקאזיל למימר להו דקריניהו חמרי אמר האי רודף הוא והתורה אמרה אם בא להרגך השכם להרגו להרגו: that is, Rabbi Schéla had once flogged a man who had lain with an Aramean woman (and had committed fornication with her); whereupon that man went and accused him before the king's house, saying: there is one here among the Jews who passes judgment without the permission (or command) of the king. Thereupon (the king) sent his messenger to him (and had him summoned before him). When Rabbi Schéla came, he was asked: why did you flog this man? He answered and said: because he had committed fornication with a she-ass. He was then asked whether he had witnesses, and he said to them: yes. Then Elias came and assumed the form of a man and gave testimony; and they (namely the judges) said: if that is so, then he is deserving of death. He said to them, however: from the time that we were driven out of our land, we have had no power to put anyone to death; but you may do with him whatever you wish. While they were deliberating on the verdict (as to how they would judge the evildoer), Rabbi Schéla began and spoke (from 1 Chr 29:11): Thine, O Lord, is the majesty and the power, etc. And when they asked him what he had said, he spoke to them: I said thus: Blessed be the merciful God who gives a kingdom upon earth like unto the kingdom of the firmament (or heaven), and grants you dominion, and causes you to love justice. Thereupon they said: does he then hold the glory of the kingdom so dear? And they gave him a club and said to him: pass judgment upon him yourself (and strike him dead). As he now went out (to execute him), that man (namely the evildoer) said to him (to Rabbi Schéla): does God then also work a miracle for liars in such a manner (that a man has come who bore false witness against me)? He answered him: you godless man, are they (the Babylonians) not called asses, as it is written (Ezek 23:20): whose flesh is as the flesh of asses? When Rabbi Schéla saw that he was about to go and report that he had called them asses, he said: this man is a pursuer, but the law says: if someone comes and seeks to take your life, rise up and strike him dead; and he struck him with the club and killed him. So too is it read in the Judeo-German little book called Maalióth vesippúrim min málke Jísraél, fol. 7, col. 1, that the Jews who are said to dwell beyond the river Sambátjon kill all Christians who come across, for it is there read as follows: מן דין זייטן חיובר זיין מוביטין דען זיימירט מוהריק פון ישמעאלים That is: they let no one cross the Sambátjon except merchants from the Isbmaelites (or Turks); but when a Cutbean, that is a Christian (as has been reported in the 16th chapter of the first part), comes across, he is put to death immediately. How then can it be maintained that the Jews are not permitted to kill anyone? Especially when the killing does no harm to them but is forgiven; for in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's Táame mizvóth, fol. 29, col. 2, it is taught as follows: אפילו יהון ישראל עברין בגלותא על עבודת אלילים וגלוי עריות ושפיכות דמים וכות אבהן יגין עליהון מכל מערערין בישין That is: even if the Israelites in exile (exilio) commit idolatry, fornication, and murder, the merit of the patriarchs nonetheless protects them from all evil misfortunes.

What is further put forward in the old Nizzáchon, namely that it is forbidden for Jews to kill a Goi because he, as a human being, was created in the image of God, and Gen 9:6 states: "Whoever sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed, for God made man in His image" - it is indeed true that all killing of human beings, without distinction, is forbidden here. However, since the Jews regard Christians and other peoples not as human beings but as cattle, as has been shown in detail in the 15th chapter of the first part, no Jew will trouble his conscience on account of this saying about killing a Christian, but will regard it as no more than if he had merely killed a beast. Furthermore, it is considered of no account among them when a Jew kills a Goi, for in the book of Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon, Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 48, col. 1, in the 2nd chapter, numero 11, under the title Hilchóth rozéach, it is taught as follows: ישראל שהרג גר תושב אינו נהרג עליו בבית דין שנאמר וכי יזיד איש על רעהו . י. that is, an Israelite who has killed a stranger dwelling among us is not put to death on his account in the court of justice, because it is said (Exod 21:14): "But if a man acts presumptuously against his neighbor (and kills him by cunning);" and it is not necessary to say that he is not put to death on account of a Cutbean (or Christian), (since that person is not his neighbor.) Likewise, this passage is also erroneously interpreted in the book Mechilta fol. 29, col. 4, in the Parascha Mischpatim, and it is said that therein רעהו reehu, that is, "against his neighbor," is written, להוציא את אחרים, that is, to exclude others (understand: those who are not Jews, as has been shown in the 16th chapter of the first part, under the thirty-eighth name that is given to us). Thus God's commandment at Gen 9:6 is not observed at all in this matter, since such a person is regarded by them as no better than cattle. So too does Rabbi Mósche bar Majemon teach, in his book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 295, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, numero 4, under the title Hilchóth melachím, in the following manner: בן נח שבדרך את השם או שעבד עבודת כוכבים ומזלות או שבא על אשת חברו או שהרג חברו ונתגייר פטור • הרג בן ישראל או שבא על אשת ישראל ונתגייר חייב והורגין אותו על בן ישראל וחונקין אותו על אשת ישראל : that is, a child of Noah (that is, one who is not a Jew, as shall be mentioned in the following sixth chapter) who curses God, or commits idolatry, or lies with his companion's wife, or has killed his companion, and then accepts the Jewish faith, is free (and is not punished on that account). But if he has killed an Israelite, or has lain with an Israelite's wife, and becomes a Jew, then he is guilty (of death): and he is put to death on account of an Israelite, and is executed by strangling on account of an Israelite's wife whom he has lain with, for behold, his judgment is (in such a case) of a different character. This, however, is taken from the Talmudic Tract Sanhédrin fol. 71, col. 2. Now if the commandment "Whoever sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed" also applied to other people besides Jews, as the old Nizzáchon would have it maintained, then such a Goi who kills his companion would also have to be executed, just as he is to be punished with death on account of an Israelite whom he strikes dead.

9. Ninthly, I prove it from the fact that it is permitted to them to kill a Christian, since in the book Mechilta fol. 11, col. 1. in the Parascha Beschállach it is clearly written: הם היו הקלה לישראל מכאן היה רבי שמעון אומר טוב שבגויים הרגו : that is, they (namely the Egyptians) were a stumbling block to them (understand: to the Israelites); therefore Rabbi Schímmon said: kill the best among the Gójim or heathens; crush the brain of the best among the serpents. So also in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 93, col. 1. in the aforementioned Parascha Beschállach it is read: אומרים במסכת סופרים כשר: שבג"כ הרוג: that is, in the Talmudic Tractate Sopherim it is said: kill the most upright among the idolaters. And this is likewise to be found in Tractate Avóda sára fol. 26, col. 2. in the first line, in the Tósephoth. However, such words have been omitted in my copy of the Talmud, which was printed in Amsterdam, at fol. 13, col. 2 in the 15th chapter of the aforementioned Tractate Sopherim, because the Jews were afraid to include them. Now, if they are commanded to kill the best among the Gójim or heathens and among the idolaters, then it is likewise permitted to them to kill, without distinction, whomever they wish among the Christians.

Against this, the Jews are accustomed to object, as is done in the Jewish Theriack, fol. 26, col. 2. numero 20. in the fourth chapter, by Rabbi Salman Zevi, that such words are only to be understood as meaning that in war one should strike dead the best among the Gójim, but not that one may kill any of them outside of war. To this I reply that it is indeed true that these words are here and there explained in this manner in the Rabbinical books, for in the Sepher Toledóth Adam vechávva, fol. 160, col. 2. in the sixth part it is written thus: אמרינן במקום אחר טוב שבגוים הרוג מפרש בירושלמי דקדושין בשעת מלחמה. אבל: שלא בשעת מלחמה לא מעלין ולא מורידין אפילו שועבדין לעבודה זרה ועוברין על שבע מצוות: that is, we say in another place, kill the best among the Gójim, and this is explained in the Jerusalem Talmud, in the Tractate Kiddúschin, as referring to the time of war; but outside the time of war, one does not pull them out of a pit, nor does one let them down into one, even if they commit idolatry and transgress the seven commandments (of the children of Noah). Such an interpretation is likewise to be found in the book Beér hag-Haggóla, fol. 44, col. 3. and in the Tósephoth, fol. 26, col. 2. of the Talmudic Tractate Avóda sára. However, since the words "in the time of war" appear neither in the ancient book Mechílta nor in the Tractate Sopherim, it is reasonable to conclude from this that they were subsequently added by others in other books, for the purpose not only of preventing their godless doctrine from being held against them by Christians and other peoples who might read or learn of it, but also of keeping those Jews who thirst greatly after Christian blood from giving too free a rein to their desires through the command to kill the best among the Gójim, and thereby bringing about the ruin of all of them through the killing of some or many Christians, just as they have previously been, here and there, severely persecuted and driven out of many lands on account of their murders and other vices.

Even if this were the proper meaning, that one should kill the best Goi in war and not outside of it, why then does it stand in the aforementioned book

Mechilta that Rabbi Schimon said the words "bring the best among the Gojim to death" for this reason: because the Egyptians had been a stumbling block to the Israelites when they lived among them in Egypt? Not a single word of war is mentioned here, and it cannot be forced into that meaning by any rational argument. Beyond that, if this were to be understood as referring to war, the Jews would have no reason to be shy about showing everyone the true meaning of such words, since it is permissible in war to kill the enemy. But because they seek to conceal it and keep it secret, this is a certain and infallible indication that the matter is not right. This, however, is what one named Rabbi Salomon Levi did: when it was once brought before Pope Marco Florentino, among other things, that the rabbis teach טוב שבגוים הרוג tof schebegójim haróg, that is, "bring the best among the Gójim to death," he, as can be read in the little book Schévet Jehúda fol. 54, col. 1. 2., had the aforementioned Rabbi Salomon summoned before him and called him to account for it. But Rabbi Salomon twisted the meaning of the words in a malicious and shameless manner and interpreted them as follows: טוב שבגוים הוא המשפט רוצה לומר משפט ההריגה כי לא אמר הרגו הטוב שבנוצרים אבל אמר הרוג והוא מקור. עוד אמרו הטוב והמעולה שבגוים כל כך חושש אל הכבוד והמשפט עד שמיד אומר הרגו לפלוני שכך עשה that is, "The best among the Gójim is justice, meaning the justice of putting to death (someone who deserves it); for he (namely Rabbi Schimon) does not say birgú, that is, 'kill the best among the Christians,' but rather he says haróg, which is the Infinitivus (and not the Imperativus) and means 'to kill.' Beyond that, he says that the best and most praiseworthy among the Gójim takes honor and justice so much to heart that he immediately says, birgú, 'kill such-and-such a person, because he has done this or that.'" According to Rabbi Salomon Levi's statement, the words would therefore have to be interpreted in this way: "The best among the Gojim or heathens is the killing," that is, "this is the best and most praiseworthy thing about the Gójim, that they uphold justice and have evildoers punished and put to death." But the said Rabbi Salomon reported falsely to the Pope in an insolent manner, for the word haróg here is not an Infinitivus but rather the Imperativus in singulari numero, that is, a command in the singular, and means "kill" and not "to kill," as indeed all Jews who have written about it interpret it in this way and state that the meaning of these words is: "Kill the best among the Gojim in war." Hence Rabbi Salman Zevi writes about it in his Jewish Theriack, chapter 4, nos. 19. 20., in the following manner: דהט חבירי גישריבן שטייט טוב שבגוים הרוג דס הייל מיין קייני קריסטן גירעט: וונדר מיין דיא גוטס עובדי ע"ז רען דער תלמוד ירוש[למי] שרייבט עט דא אונז רידט פון מלחמה: דס זאגט דער תלמוד ווען אמן מלחמה המלט מיט דען גוים דס חיי: מיט דען היידן זול אמן קייני פון מיין לויפן לסן. מול זול קיינן ורשונן ווען עס שון דער בעטטי ר"ל דער חשוב מודר אוך מלך יהיה שלחוג מן טוט דען ווען דו מיין לויפן לוסט אז זירט ער דיך זעלט

: וגו' that is, "What is written there, 'bring the best among the Gojim to death,' is said of no Christians, but rather of the idolatrous Gojim; for the Jerusalem Talmud writes it where one speaks of war. There the Talmud says: when one wages war with the Gojim, that is, with the heathens, one should let none of them flee, and should spare none, even if it be the best, that is, the most distinguished, or even if he be a king, strike him dead; for if you let him flee, he will see to it that he brings you down, etc." Beyond this, it is also clearly to be seen from the words of the book Mechilta that the word haróg is the Imperativus and a command, since immediately following the words "bring the best among the Gojim to death" comes "the best among the serpents razzéz eth mocho," that is, "crush its brain." Now, just as little as the word razzéz can be interpreted here as being the Infinitivus, just as little is haróg the Infinitivus; and the natural sense of the passage requires that both are the Imperativus. Finally, in the tenth place, I maintain it on these grounds, that it is permitted to the Jews to kill a Christian: because the rabbis teach that one should put to death those who cause someone to sin, concerning which it is written in the Jalkut Schimóni on the passage of Moses, fol. 245, col. 4. numero 773., on the words of Num 25:17, "Deal as enemies with the Midianites, for they have dealt as enemies with you," as follows: מכאן אמרו חכמים בא להרגך השכם להרגו. רבי שמעון אומר שכל המחטיא את האדם יותר מן ההורגו שההורג הורגו בעולם הזה ויש לו חלק לעולם הבא והמחטיאו הורגו בעולם הזה ולעולם הבא: that is, "From this our sages say: if someone comes to kill you, be ready and kill him. Rabbi Schimon says that whoever causes a person to sin does more than if he were to kill him, for he who kills him destroys him in this world, and the one who is killed has a share in the world to come (that is, in eternal life); but whoever causes him to sin kills him in this world and in the world to come (so that he cannot be saved)." Now since there are Christians here and there who make it their concern to turn Jews away from their erroneous religion and to convert them to the Christian faith, by which, according to the rabbis' erroneous opinion, they cause the converted Jews to sin, in that they are led astray to abandon the one God and to serve other gods, it is therefore permitted to them to kill such a Christian as a supposed murderer of souls.

Beyond all of the above, experience also testifies that the godless Jews make no scruple of taking a Christian's life, and this has been perpetrated not only against many adult Christians, but also frequently against young innocent children, by those same people, out of sheer bitter hatred toward Christians, in a godless manner, as the histories attest sufficiently, of which I will here indicate only a little. Socrates reports in his ecclesiastical history, in the seventh book, in the thirteenth chapter, that the Jews in the year 418 A.D., at Alexandria, gathered together by night, having woven rings of palm bark around their fingers as a distinguishing mark, and thereafter raised a cry that the Christians' church there, which was called the Church of Alexander, was on fire. But when the Christians had run there to extinguish the supposed fire, the Jews lay in wait for them along the way and murdered all those they could get their hands on. For this reason, Bishop Cyrrillus, on the following day, had all the Jews expelled from Alexandria. in the year 1321 A.D., the Jews in France had the wells poisoned through lepers, so that many people died from it, and all those who were guilty of it were burned by order of King Philip, as is reported in Heinrich Anselm von Ziegler's Täglicher Schauplatz, printed here in Frankfurt in folio in the year 1695, at p. 5, col. 2, and in Sebastian Münster's Cosmographia, printed at Basel in the year 1550, at p. 192 in the second book. The very same thing they also did in the year 1348 in Switzerland and in Alsace, as is read in Münster's aforementioned Cosmographia, p. 656, and in Ziegler's Schauplatz, p. 353, col. 1, 2, as well as in Cluverius's Epitome historiarum, printed at Breslau in the year 1672, p. 577, col. 2. And this deed, as Ziegler reports, was admitted and stated by the Jews themselves: because they had concluded from the discord between the Emperor and the Pope that the downfall of the Christians was imminent, they had sought to hasten it by means of such poison. They received, however, their well-deserved reward, for many of them were burned at Basel, Strasbourg, and Mainz. In other places they were stuffed into the very same poison sacks that had been found in the wells, and thus thrown into the water and drowned; others were stabbed, hurled from buildings, and otherwise executed by every conceivable manner of death, without regard to age or sex. This poisoning of the wells carried out by the Jews is also mentioned by the Jesuit Matthaeus Raderus in his Bavaria sancta, in the second part, p. 315; and in the third part, which was printed at Munich in the year 1627, he also writes at pp. 172, 173, and 174 that they confessed to the same. in the year 1349 A.D., the Jews of Meiningen, a city in Franconia, attacked the Christians while they were in the church and intended to kill them all. However, a maidservant had overheard this plan at the Jews' synagogue and revealed it, whereupon the Christians all left their church, took up arms, and killed all the Jews, as can be found in the aforementioned Ziegler's Schauplatz, paginâ 396, col. 1. 2.

In the year 1571, Joachim the Second, former Elector of Brandenburg, of most blessed memory, was poisoned by a Jew with whom he had kept very close company, as Sleidan reports in the tenth book of his histories, paginâ 60. Likewise, in that same year, M. A. Bragadino was flayed alive by the Jews and murdered in that most gruesome manner, as the aforementioned Sebastian Münster indicates in his Cosmographia. Beyond this, Cluverius reports in his aforementioned Epitome historiarum, paginâ 386, col. 1, that when the Persian king Chosroes captured the city of Jerusalem in the year 611 A.D., during the reign of Emperor Heraclius, and had killed very many Christians, the Jews purchased from him ninety thousand captive Christians for a trifling sum of money and put them all to death in the most wretched manner.

In the year 1665, on the 12th of May, a woman was murdered in a most cruel manner by the Jews in Vienna, in the Jewish quarter; she was found in a puddle used for watering horses, inside a sack to which a stone of fifty pounds had been attached, and the body was wounded with many stab wounds, while the head, both shoulders, and the thighs down to the knees had been cut off, as may be read in the aforementioned Ziegler's Schauplatz, pagina 553, col. 1. 2. Since crimes of murder of this kind, along with many thefts and other vices, had been committed there by the Jews in a wicked manner, His Imperial Majesty was moved by a most praiseworthy Christian zeal to decree the banishment of the malicious Jews, and in the year 1670, on the 4th of February, to have it proclaimed at the customary places in Vienna to the sound of public trumpets that all Jews collectively were to depart from there forever, and that by the evening of Corpus Christi not one of them was to show himself any longer, on pain of corporal punishment and death; whereupon more than 1,400 Jewish persons departed, some going to Turkey and others to Venice, as may be found in the aforementioned Schauplatz, pagina 99, col. 1.

As for the tender, innocent little children who have been put to death in a most terrible manner by the Jews, there would be much to write about this. in the year 419 A.D., the Jews in Syria, in a place situated between Chalcyde and Antiochia called Inmestar, played games together, and after they had become drunk with wine, they began to mock not only the Christians but even Christ Himself. Afterward they also seized a Christian boy, bound him to a cross, hung him up on high, mocked him with laughter, and finally beat him to death, for which they received their just reward, as may be read in the ecclesiastical history of the aforementioned Socrates, in the seventh book, in the 16th chapter. in the year 1250 A.D., the Jews in Aragon likewise stole a boy of seven years, crucified him on their Passover, pierced him in the chest with a spear, and thus killed him, as is reported in the little book of Johannes à Lent de Pseudo-Messiis, that is, concerning the false messiahs, pagina 33, from the Aragonese chronicle of the said year. Cluverius also writes in his aforementioned Epitome historiarum, pagina 541, col. 1, that the Jews in London in the year 1257 A.D. killed a Christian child as though for an annual sacrifice. in the year 1282 A.D., it came to pass in Munich that a woman who was a sorceress sold a little boy to the Jews there, who pierced him all over his body and killed him in a most horrible manner. When the said woman then wanted to steal another child and bring it to them, she was caught by the child's father and accused, whereupon she, after having endured torture, confessed the deed and pointed out the place where the murdered child had been laid, and she was thereafter executed. When the people of Munich saw the child that had been pierced and killed in such a manner, they became so embittered against the Jews that they beat all the Jews of that region to death, as can be seen in greater detail in the aforementioned Matthæi Raderi's book Bavaria sancta, in the second part, paginâ 315, and from the seventh book of Aventini annalium Bojorum. in the year 1303 A.D., a boy at Weissensee in Thuringia, and in the year 1305 one at Prague, at Easter, were killed in the same horrible manner, as the highly learned Mr. Tentzel reports in his monthly discourses of July 1693, paginâ 556. And in the year 1345, a little boy named Heinrich was again killed in Munich by the Jews there, who opened his veins and gave him some sixty stab wounds, as the aforementioned Raderus indicates in his mentioned book Bavaria Sancta, in the second part, paginâ 333, from the said Aventini's seventh book. in the year 1475 A.D., the Jews at Trent, through a Jew by the name of Tobias, on the evening of Holy Thursday, seized a poor Christian child named Simon, who was not yet quite two and a half years old, and had him brought into the house in which they held their synagogue, where they were all assembled. Thereupon an old Jew named Moses took the child onto his lap, stripped off his clothes, and stuffed a handkerchief into his mouth so that he could not cry out, while the others held him by the hands and feet. The said Moses then made a wound in his right cheek with a knife and cut out a small piece of flesh; those standing around caught the blood, and each of them pinched off a small piece of flesh with a pair of scissors, until the wound had grown as large as an egg, which they also did at other places on the body. After this they stretched out his hands and arms apart like a Crucifix, and pierced the half-dead body all over with needles, speaking meanwhile certain words to this effect: Let us kill him, just as the Christians killed their God Jesus, who is nothing; and all our enemies must perish in this manner. Finally, when the child, after enduring this torment, which lasted a full hour, had given up the ghost, they hid him beneath the wine barrels, and, fearing a thorough search of the house, threw him into the water flowing past the synagogue, as may be read in Münster's Cosmographia, paginâ 342, and in the book of the highly learned Herr Sigismund Hofmann, Consistorial and City Preacher at Zell, printed in the past year 1699 at Zell, which is entitled Das schwehr zu bekebrende Juden-hertz ("The Jewish Heart Hard to Convert"), paginâ 115 &c. And this act of murder has been painted here in Frankfurt beneath the bridge tower, to the greatest shame of the Jews, with the following words beside it: Anno 1475, on Holy Thursday, the little child Simon, 2 and a half years old, was killed by the Jews.

The Amsterdam Jew Isaacus Viva did indeed, in his tract written in Latin against Jacob Geusius, which is called Vindex Sanguinis, undertake to deny this murder that took place at Trent, by inserting on page 17 of the edition appended behind Mr. Wülffer's annotations on the Jewish Theriac a testimony from the chancellery at Padua, in which it is stated that the matter was fabricated. However, Mr. Tentzel, in his monthly discourses of July 1693, page 551 &c., establishes the contrary in detail and with irrefutable grounds. He also writes there on pages 552 and 553 that the inquisition into this matter was entrusted to the city magistrate of Trent, who was called Johannes della Salle, who had summoned to himself a Christian in Trent who had converted from Judaism seven years prior, and asked him what particular customs the Jews observe especially at Easter. And the man answered that the Jews are accustomed, on the fourth day of Holy Week, to bake unleavened bread and to mix into it the blood of a Christian child, which blood they also mix into the wine at their Passover, on the fifth and sixth days of the week, and to add into their customary table prayer and blessing a curse against the Christians, that God would send upon them all the plagues of the Egyptians and of Pharaoh. But even if it were fabricated, there are so many other examples of the murder of children which the Jews have committed in many lands, that they cannot be excused from such bloodshed as has occurred, as may be seen from what has gone before and will be further confirmed in what follows. in the year 1486 A.D., the Jews of Regensburg murdered six children with their murderous hands; these were found in a vault beneath the ground, and whatever remained of them was brought to the town hall there. In the aforementioned vault, a large stone was also seen, which had been smeared over with clay, and beneath which clay, since they had killed the children upon the stone, blood was found, as may be read in the aforementioned Raderi Bavaria Sancta, third part, paginâ 172. in the year 1509 A.D., the Jews of Bosingen, a market town in Hungary, abducted a wagonmaker's small child from that place, dragged it into a cellar, and tortured it in the most gruesome manner, cutting out all its little veins and sucking up the blood with quill pens. After the deed was done, they threw the body in front of the town, into a thick thornbush, where it was found by a woman, who reported the matter to the authorities, who had the Jews who were under suspicion thrown into prison. Although they denied the deed, they nonetheless finally confessed to it under torture, as is reported in the aforementioned Zieglers täglichem Schauplatz, paginâ 588, col. 1. 2. in the year 1540 A.D., in a village in the Upper Palatinate, in the Principality of Neuburg, called Sappenfeld, situated not far from Neuburg, a little boy named Michael, who was three and a half years old, whose father was called Georg Pisenharter, was taken away by the Jews before the Easter feast and brought to Titingen. There they bound him to a post, tormented him for three days, cut off the tips of his fingers and toes, carved crosses all over his body, and tore him apart so badly that he could not be wounded any further. This murder came to light through a young Jew who said to other Jewish boys on the street that the dog had died after howling for three days, which was overheard by the neighbors. They carried the body into a forest and hid it in the bushes, covering it with leaves; a shepherd's dog found it, whereupon many people gathered and saw the condition in which the child had been left. The child's blood was subsequently found at Posingen, as the aforementioned Raderus shows in greater detail in his book Bavaria Sancta, in the third part, paginâ 176, etc. in the year 1598 A.D., a child was murdered by the Jews in Poland, as is written in the aforementioned monthly discourses of Julio 1693, paginâ 557, drawn from Papebroch, Tom. II of April, paginâ 836 and 837, where it is also noted that the child's blood was used by them in the unleavened bread and wine at the Easter feast, which a rabbi named Isaac confessed. The aforementioned Papebroch, in the cited passage, also brings forward twelve further examples of such murders, all of which occurred in Poland. in the year 1650 A.D., on the 11th of March, a Jew in Caaden wounded a child of four and a half years named Matthias Tillich with two deadly stabs to the head and six other stabs and cuts, and cut off the fingers on both of his hands; the Jew, however, was immediately taken into custody and on the 21st of March was broken on the wheel and put to death, as can be seen in the aforementioned monthly discussions of January 1694, paginâ 148, as well as in those of December 1694, paginâ 975, drawn from the book of the Jesuit Georgius Crugerius, which is called Sacri pulveres. It is likewise stated in the said discussions of January 1694, paginâ 152, that similar barbaric acts of murder were committed by Jews in Styria, Carinthia, and Carniola. Furthermore, in those discussions of July 1693, it is recorded that the aforementioned Papebroch, Tom. II, on the 17th day of April, paginâ 504 and 505, compiled many more examples of Christian children murdered by Jews in Germany, and at the same time related, from Bonfinio and Cantipratano, the reasons for this: namely, that the Jews held that Christian blood was efficacious for stanching the blood at circumcision, for arousing love, for stopping the monthly flow, etc., and that with it they practiced an old but secret Decret, to propitiate God daily with an offering of Christian blood. Furthermore, in the said discussions of July 1693, paginâ 553, it is recorded that in Tunguch in Lower Germany, the Jews, forty years ago, slaughtered a Christian child at their Passover feast, whereupon, when the matter became known, more than 45 of them were burned.

In the year 1669, on the 25th of September, a Jew from Metz by the name of Raphaël Levi abducted a child of three years from a resident of the village of Glatigny by the name of Gilles le Möyne, taking him from the open highway and carrying him on his horse under his cloak to Metz; whereupon the aforementioned Raphaël Levi, after evidence had been gathered that he had stolen the child, was taken into custody, and after a lengthy investigation of the matter, was burned alive on the 17th of January, 1670. The child's little head, however, together with part of the neck and several ribs, along with the clothing the child had been wearing and a red cap, was found in the forest near the aforementioned Glatigny, having been carried there by a Jew by the name of Gedeon Levi, who had lived in the village of Hez: all of which is to be seen in a small book printed at Paris in the year 1670, in sixteenth-sheet format, entitled Abbregeé du procès fait aux Juifs de Mets, that is, A Brief Account of the Proceedings Instituted Against the Jews of Metz, which was lent to me to read by a good friend just as I had finished writing this material, and in which the entire matter is described in detail.

More about such horrifying and inhuman Jewish murders can be read in the aforementioned book called The Jewish Heart Hard to Convert, as well as in Genebrardus in the fourth book, paginâ 343 etc., and in the book Fortalitium fidei, in the third book. In the present day, however, one hears nothing more of such atrocious deeds in Germany, except that, if I recall correctly, I read in the newspaper some years ago that a murdered child had been found in Franconia, and the Jews had been suspected on that account. Since in former times very harsh measures were taken against the Jews wherever such things were committed, there is no doubt that they now refrain from such bloodshed out of fear of punishment, even though their hatred toward Christians is just as great as it may ever have been before. From all of the above, however, it is clearly to be seen that the Jews have no scruple about killing a Christian, and that it must be permitted to them, so long as it can be done conveniently and secretly, without danger.

Regarding the use of Christian blood, which was mentioned in the preceding section, the aforementioned Raderus also writes in his Bavaria Sancta, in the third part, at page 172, as well as at page 179, citing Eckius, chapter 11, that Jewish women who are pregnant cannot give birth without Christian blood. On this matter, the converted Samuel Friedrich Brenz also expresses himself in the following way in his Jüdischer abgestreiffter Schlangenbalg, in the first chapter, page 5, col. 1. 2.: "But if there is a Jewish woman who cannot be delivered of her womanly burden and is in great distress, the Rabbi, or the chief Jew next to him, called Parnas, takes a clean piece of deer parchment and writes three separate slips: the first is placed upon her head, the second is given to her in her mouth, and the third into her right hand, and she then gives birth. But what kind of ink must be used to write these slips, they keep entirely secret. I have learned through true and credible accounts, however, that the Jews have at times bought or stolen Christian children and tortured them, and that with their blood such slips are perhaps written, which I well know they do not regard as a sin when it is done against the Gójim, that is, against the Christians; they also say it is better to take a Christian's life than that an entire lineage should belong to Satan, which might descend from this." These are the words of Brenz. But that they use it for this purpose here, and that it has such an effect among them and promotes childbirth, I cannot believe.

That it was also previously customary among the Jews at their Passover feast to use Christian blood, and to mix it into their sweet cakes, which they call maßkuchen, and into their wine, is also mentioned in the little book Schévet Jehúda, fol. 6, col. 2, where one reads that the King of Spain, Alphonsus, spoke with a learned man named Thomas, who was without doubt a convert, concerning this matter, and told him that a bishop had come to his city, namely to Madrid, who had publicly preached that the Jews could not celebrate Passover without Christian blood, and that he had therefore asked the said man whether it was true that this occurred; but Thomas answered the King, as it is presented there in Hebrew at fol. 7, col. 1, 2: הנה היהודי ראינו שאינו אוכל דם משום חי ואפילו מן הדגים שאמרו התלמודיים שלא יקרא דם אסרוהו שתוהו והוא מאוס בעיניהם מאד מפני שלא הורגל בו ואפילו שראה בניה עמים אוכלים רקם וכל שכן שימאס דם האדם שלא ראה שום אומה שיאכלנו. ויראה מלכנו דבר זה שאם יאכל היהודי מן הכבד ויצא מן השנים דם עליו לא יאכלנו עד שיגרנו וידוע שיותר נמאס לאדם דם אחרים מדמו ואפילו דמו ימאסנו מפני שלא הורגל בו, That is: Behold, we have seen that a Jew eats no blood from anything that lives; indeed, they have also forbidden the drinking of blood from fish, of which the Talmudists say that it is not to be called blood, and that same blood is very despised (and disgusting) among them, because (a Jew) is not accustomed to it; even though he sees that many peoples eat blood: how much more, then, will he have an aversion to the blood of human beings, since he has seen no person who eats it? The King may also observe this from the fact that when a Jew eats from a liver (or something that is hard to bite), and blood comes from his teeth (or his gums) onto it, he will not eat it until he has scraped it off. Now it is well known that a person has a greater disgust for other people's blood than for his own, and that he also has an aversion to his own blood, because he is not accustomed to it. From this one can thus see that the aforementioned Thomas declared the Jews innocent in this matter.

Rabbi Isaac Abarbanel also laments in his commentary on the Prophet Ezekiel, fol. 202, col. 4, concerning the words of chapter 36, v. 14, "Thus says the Lord, because they say to you, you are a devourer of men," over this accusation, when he breaks out into these words: הנה סמך לזה נבואת יען אומרים לכם אוכלת אדם את לרמוז על הרעה הגדולה אשר מצאנו בין בני אדום בגלות הזה שמוציאים דבה על בני ישראל שהורגים את הגוים בסתר כדי לאכול מדמם בחג הפסח והיה השקר והכזב That is: Behold, he (namely the Prophet Ezekiel) has set this prophecy, "Because they say to you, you are a devourer of men," here in order to point thereby to the great misfortune which has befallen us in this exilio, or misery, among the children of Edom (namely the Christians), who spread an evil report about the children of Israel, that they secretly kill the Gójim, or Christians, so that they may eat of their blood at the Passover feast; and this untruth and lie has been the cause of severe persecutions and killings which the Gójim, or Christians, have committed against our people. May God avenge that vengeance. He writes the very same thing also in his book Maschmia jeschúa, fol. 45, col. 1, and the words found there have already been cited above at page 103 in this second part, in the second chapter. One could therefore judge from this that the Jews have been wronged in this matter, especially since it is so strictly forbidden in the books of Moses, as in Gen 9:4 and Lev 7:26-27 and 17:14, as well as Deut 12:23-25. However, since many capable authors have written that the Jews make use of Christian blood, and have demonstrated this with examples, and since the children killed by them have for the most part been murdered at Eastertime, one may on the other hand conjecture that not everything can be untrue. I leave it undecided, however, whether the matter stands thus or not. That the Jews have committed child-murder for the most part at Easter will without doubt have occurred because our Savior Christ was crucified at Easter, and it is in contempt of Him that they do this. But let this suffice on this subject.

As for the question of whether a Christian, when he is ill, may safely entrust himself to a Jewish medico and make use of the medicines prescribed by him: I answer that this should by no means be done by a Christian, and I shall prove it.

First, because the Jews are the declared and embittered enemies of Christians, as has been sufficiently shown in the 15th chapter of the first part and elsewhere; and from an enemy one can expect nothing good.

Secondly, I assert this for the following reason: because it is permitted to them, as has been stated in the preceding section, to take the life of a Christian. Who then would entrust himself to such a person, of whom one must fear that he might, instead of restoring him to health, bring about his death through improper medicines? The rabbis are indeed quite unwilling to permit a Jew to make use of a Christian physician, as Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon teaches in his book Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 56, col. 1, in the 12th chapter, number 9, under the title Hilchoth rozeach, as follows: אָסוּר לִירְקָה רְפוּאָה מִן הַכּוֹתִי אֲלֵא אִם כֵּן נִתְאַשּׁוּ מִמֶּנּוּ שְׂוִיתִסְיָהּ. וְאָסוּר לְהִתְרַפְּאוֹת מִן הָאֶפִיקוּרוֹסִים וְאִם עַל פִּי שְׂוִיתִאֲשׁוּ מִמֶּנּוּ שְׂמָא, That is: It is forbidden to take a medicine from a Cuthean (that is, a Christian), unless there is no hope that he (namely the sick person) will remain alive. Likewise, it is forbidden to be healed by the Epicureans (that is, baptized Jews), even when one already doubts the recovery of the sick person, lest one follow them (in their apostasy from the Jewish religion). And in the Talmudic Tractate Avoda sara, it is read at fol. 27, col. 2: אֵין מִתְרַפְּאִין מֵהֶן אֶפִּילוּ לְחַיִּי שְׂעָה, That is: One does not allow oneself to be cured by them (namely the Gojim), even with respect to temporal life alone. And Rabbi Salomon Jarchi sets forth in his Commentary thereon the following as the reason: שהגוי ממחר להמיתו ושמא יום או יומים יהיה, That is: Because the Goi hastens to take one's life, and the sick person perhaps lives only one or a couple of days. In the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Jore déa, it stands concerning this at numero 155 as follows as well: כל מכה וחלי שיש בהם סכנה שמחללים עליהם: שבת אין מתרפאין מעכזים שאינו מומחה לרבים דחיישין לשפיכות דמים ואפלו הוא ספק חי ספק מת אין מתרפאין ממנו אבל אם הוא ודאי מת מתרפאים ממנו דלחיי שעה לא חיישין בהא, That is: One does not allow an idolater to treat a wound or illness that is dangerous, and on account of which the Sabbath is desecrated, unless he has been approved by many; for we fear the shedding of blood (that is, such a physician might take the Jew's life). Even when it is uncertain whether the sick person will remain alive or die, one still does not submit to his cure. However, if the sick person is certainly dying (and there is no hope of recovery), then one entrusts him to that physician's cure, for in such a case we do not concern ourselves with temporal life. Now, since the Jews do not trust Christians, because they believe Christians have murderous dispositions just as they themselves do, why then should we entrust our lives to them, especially since we know how they are disposed toward us?

The converted Jew Samuel Friedrich Brenz also writes in the fourth chapter of his Schlangenbäl, page 22, concerning Jewish physicians and doctors, in the following manner: I also wish hereby to warn all pious Christians faithfully against Jewish doctors; for the more such a Jewish doctor is able to bring Gójim, that is, Christians, to their deaths, the higher that same Jewish doctor ascends into Gan éden, that is, into Heaven or Paradise. And such a physician is compared to a Mohel, that is, one who circumcises Jewish children, from whom they hold this Cabbala (that is, oral teaching): when one circumcises as many Jewish children as the numerical value of his name in the Hebrew language, he is a ben ólam-hábbo, that is, a child of eternal life. Likewise, a Jewish physician, when he brings to their deaths as many Christians as the numerical value of his name in the Hebrew language, shall have the same reward as one who circumcises Jewish children; for the Jews have no other numerals than the Hebrew letters. These are the words of Samuel Friedrich Brenz; whether this be true, however, I leave undecided, and it is unknown to me; yet he will have heard it during his continuing blind Judaism, just as he heard many other things he has reported, and will not have sucked it from his fingers. Against this, Rabbi Salman Zevi makes himself heard in his Jewish Theriack, fol. 27, col. 1, in the fourth chapter, number 22, as follows: דוא שרייבט אונר מוז מין קריסטן אזער פֿור דער יוון רופֿמים חזל: זאגט איר: דאז דען פֿרייא אונד ווען איר זול קריסטן אומברינגן - אלו וויא מיין אוהב דער ויל קינרר יורשט - דש מיר הובין חופֿט ור חנטווערט - דש אמן קיין גוי דש מיר קיין דער שון עבודה זרה דינט דארף חומברינגן שטייט ניט שופֿך דם האדם דאז יהו ישפֿך דער דש אענשן בלוט ורגיסט דעם זול זיין בלוט • וידר ורגיסן וורדין {יה לחווא} שמא {חיי קיין יוד נאך קיין קריסט הולץ ערין גוועזן • שטייט That is: Here the Mumar (or the apostate) writes and warns all Christians against the Jewish doctors, and says we consider it a commandment when we kill many Christians, just as a circumciser who circumcises many children. This has been answered above many times: that one may not kill any Goi, that is, any person who already commits idolatry. Does it not stand written (Gen 9:6): Whoever sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed? At that time there was neither Jew nor Christian upon the earth. No man shall be killed; it stands indeed (Exod 20:13): You shall not kill. These are the words of Rabbi Salman Zevi. This is, however, a poor defense; for that it is permitted to the Jews to kill a Goi, and that they do not regard us as human beings, and consequently that the commandment of Gen 9:6 does not apply to us, and also that the commandment "You shall not kill" is understood by the rabbis to refer only to Jews, has been sufficiently demonstrated in what preceded.

Furthermore, the Rabbis do not permit their physicians to treat a Christian for any reason other than the preservation of peaceful relations; as is to be found in the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Jore déa numero 158, fol. 123, col. 1. 2., where it is taught that one should not save idolatrous people who are in danger of body and life from death, and the following passage comes after it: לפיכך אין לרפאותן אפילו בשכר אם לא היכא דאיכא איבה דאז אפילו בחנם שרי אם לא: יוכל להשט אפילו בחנם: that is, for this reason one should not treat them even for payment, unless it must be done for the sake of avoiding enmity (that is, to avoid the hostility that one would draw upon oneself through refusal); for in that case it is also permitted to do it without charge, when one cannot otherwise get out of it and must do it without charge. And the very same thing is also to be read in Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's book Jad chasáka, in the first part, in the 10th chapter, numero 2, under the title Hilchóth ábum: from which it is evident that they are permitted to do it not with sincere intent, but only out of fear that the Christians might become their enemies in the event of a refusal.

Thirdly, I confirm it for the following reason: because the Jewish physicians are permitted by the rabbis to test medicines of uncertain effect, whether they are beneficial or harmful to the patient, upon the Gójim. For in the aforementioned book Shulchan áruch, in the section Jore déa, fol. 123, col. 2, numero 158, it is written as follows: "אם תועיל מותר לנסות רפואה בעכו"ם, That is: it is permitted to test a medicine upon an idolater to see whether it is beneficial. In the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 26, col. 2, at the end, in the Tosephóth, the following is also read: "אסור לרפאותן בחנם אבל בשכר שרי משום איבה וראיה: בפרק מי שאחזו דרב שימי בר אשי עברה ליה לההוא גוי לדבר אחר ואינסי אלמא שרי לרפאות גוי אלא ודאי בשכר היה ועוד יש לומר דהתם נמי בחנם הוה גתתחכם ברפאות יכול להיות מותר וכן משמע מפני שלא היה בקי ברפאות עשה לגוי ולא לישראל, That is: it is forbidden to treat them (namely the Gójim) free of charge, but for payment it is permitted, in order to avoid enmity; and proof of this is found in the fourth chapter of the Talmudic tractate Gittin, fol. 70, col. 1, where Raf Schimi, the son of Aschi, administered medicine to a Goi for another ailment (that is, leprosy, as Rabbi Salomon explains in his commentary) and healed him. It is therefore permitted to heal a Goi, but it was certainly done for payment. Beyond this, it is to be said that it may also have been done without charge, and that in order to become skilled in medicines (and to gain experience), he (Rabbi Schimi) permitted himself to take the case into treatment; and this teaches us accordingly, because he did it to a Goi and not to an Israelite (and tested the medicine upon him). On this matter, the following is also found in the Tosephóth at the aforementioned place in the tractate Gittin, fol. 70, col. 1: "שמא להתחכם ברפואה שרי כרי שידע לרפאות ישראל על ידי כן, That is: it is perhaps permitted (to treat a Goi) in order to become skilled in medicine (and to acquire knowledge), so that one may thereby be able to treat an Israelite in such a manner. If this is indeed the case, who would wish to entrust himself to a Jewish physician, given that one must always be apprehensive that the said physician intends to test the prescribed remedies upon oneself and to observe what effect they produce? Rabbi Gedálja reports in his book Shalshelet hakkabbála, fol. 96, col. 1-2, that in the year 5315 after the creation of the world, that is, in the year 1555 A.D., there was a pope in Rome by the name of Paulus, a Neapolitan by birth, who had commanded that Jewish men and women should wear yellow hats, should live together in a single street apart from others, and should not make use of the services of Christians; and it further follows that he had also forbidden היהודים לרפאות שום נוצרי שלא יוכלו היהודים לרפאות שום נוצרי that is, that the Jews should not treat any Christian. Now if this came to pass, it must certainly not have occurred without weighty reason, and it may well be that the aforementioned pope had received information about such Jewish teaching.

Fourth, I defend it for this reason: because there are many among them who have studied little, or indeed nothing at all, in medicine. The convert Victor von Carben writes of them in the 23rd chapter of his little book on the Jews, in these words: "When foolish Christians are burdened with illness, they think there is no physician among the Christians who can help them, and they run to the devil Beelzebub among the Jews, placing more trust in them than in God. For just as Asa, of whom it is written in 2 Chr 16, who also did not trust God well, placed all his hope in the hands of the physicians, so they say: I do not care to whom I run, so long as I am helped. They act as though the Jews alone, and no one else, had the power to deliver the sick. Oh, those Christians do not recognize what they are doing, and they also do not know that the Jews pursue Christians diligently, day and night, not only after their goods but also after their lives. Thus, first, while the Jews are still young and suited to usury, they deceive Christians through usury, taking their money and goods. And when they then grow old, sick, and incapable of usury, their livelihood escapes them; thereupon they take up the practice of medicine, and many a one has never in his entire life examined a urine sample, nor read in any book of medicine. And so through their ignorance they give medicine to poor people, by which they wretchedly ruin and murder many a Christian person. And thus they deceive Christians in their youth, and also in their old age. And I say in truth that no Jew is to be trusted: however friendly they conduct themselves, they are still not to be trusted." These are the words of Victor von Carben.

The convert Antonius Margarita writes in his book, which he calls "The Whole Jewish Faith," in the ninth chapter, in which he gives instruction on the Jews' manner of slaughtering, also about Jewish physicians in the following way, and says: It is quite fitting here, and is ad propositum, that I say a little about the Jews' physicians, and what opinion one ought to hold of them. It is therefore well to note that there has been no Jew in Germany, Bohemia, Hungary, etc., who in his entire life has so much as seen Avicenna, Galen, Hippocrates, and the like in the Hebrew language, let alone read them, still less learned Latin; for none of them are taught these things in these lands, they have written no book on medicine in these lands, and they do not study for the sake of reading; they have at times written small booklets in German with Hebrew letters, and possess some knowledge of herbs and roots, such as they may have heard and learned from their fathers or ancestors, but this knowledge is very slight, and I have therefore been astonished that we Christians are such foolish people as to believe them. When a Jew does not do well, but has gambled away his property, drunk it away, whored it away, or otherwise spent it shamefully, or has been driven out and stripped of his possessions, and has very often quarreled with others over his goods, he moves among the Christians, presents himself as a physician, commonly passes himself off as a rabbi, and thereby obtains money and is held in high regard; for they can produce many bright and smooth words, and can also skillfully probe from behind the light what ailment or defect the patient has, so that they may hit upon it all the more accurately when they inspect the urine. To this end they have quickly learned to make heavy salves with mercury or sulfur. In the Talmud, to be sure, there is much medicine scattered here and there, but no one can make use of it, since the names of the roots and herbs, as well as of the diseases, cannot be reliably learned from it. Now I will also show how this connects to the matter at hand. Ask all Jews who present themselves as physicians whether they are not bodek and schochet, that is, whether they cannot examine and slaughter livestock; they will all say yes, for they can all generally do it. As soon as one is capable of this, he presents himself as a physician, for he thinks that because he knows well what internal sickness and health the livestock has, and can speak knowledgeably about it, he may thereby sufficiently deceive the Christians when he speaks of such internal diseases of human beings as well. I therefore wish to warn all Christian people against all German Jewish physicians, and above all against those who travel about the country, for all their medicine has no foundation or substance; they can very rarely write a prescription for the apothecary; indeed, it is to be suspected that out of zeal for their faith they sometimes do not help a person whom they could well help, but only make his condition worse, concerning which there is an old proverb: the Jewish physicians give every tenth patient the plague. Yet I do believe that the Jews who have been in Sicily, Spain, or Italy are fairly learned Doctores Medicinae, for the reason that they study diligently and possess Galen and Avicenna in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin; these one may well trust. Thus far go the words of Antonius Margarita; and I readily believe that there are still to this day many such deceitful physicians in Germany, as I indeed know of a certain Jewish medic astrum who cannot string together three good words of Latin in a row and has studied very little, from whom little help is to be expected. And although at the present time there are also many Jewish Medici in Germany who have studied at universities and been promoted to the doctorate, and good cures have been performed here and there by them, no Christian can nonetheless be assured that such a one will deal faithfully with him, because the hatred and enmity of the Jews toward Christians is unspeakably great. It is therefore far better to avoid them altogether, since there are indeed enough learned, conscientious, and faithful Christian Medici to be found; but to seek help from an enemy and to entrust one's life to him is contrary to all reason. Indeed, in the Talmud, in the tractate Kidduschin fol. 82, col. 1., their Medici are not held in high regard, since it is written there as follows: טוב שברופאים לגיהנם, That is: the best among the physicians belongs in hell; the best among the butchers is the companion of Amalek. And Rabbi Solomon Jarchi sets forth the following reason for this in his Commentario and says: אינו ירא מן החולי ומאכלו מאכל בריאים ואינו משבר לבו למקום ופעמים שהורג נפשות ויש בידו לרפאות הרעני ואינו מרפא, That is: (because) he does not fear sickness, and eats rich morsels, and does not humble his heart before God. Sometimes he also takes people's lives, and even when he could cure a poor man, he does not cure him. Now if the Talmud gives such an evil testimony of Jewish physicians, what good can Christians then expect from them?

Fifth, experience also attests to it, and the histories teach it, what has befallen certain Christians at the hands of Jewish physicians; and Cluverius writes in his Epitome historiarum, pagina 456, col. 2., as does Munsterus in his Cosmographia, that when Emperor Charles the Bald was seized by a fever in the year 877 A.D., he was poisoned by a Jewish physician whom he employed, by the name of Sedechia, in a powder which he had prescribed for him to take against the fever. Now, if a Jew dared to take the life of so exalted a personage in such a manner, what then can happen to common people when they wish to avail themselves of Jewish physicians?

Since this is the case with Jewish physicians, and so little trust is to be placed in them, it was right and proper that the Jus Canonicum, in the second part of the Decretals, in the 28th Causa, in the first Quaestio, Cap. 13, forbids the use of their physicians, where the following is read: Nullus eorum qui in sacro sunt ordine, aut Laicus azyma Judeorum manducet, aut cum eis habitet, aut aliquem in infirmitatibus suis vocet, aut medicinam ab eis percipiat, aut cum eis in balneo lavet. Si verò quisquam hoc fecerit, si Clericus est, deponatur, si Laicus excommunicetur. That is: No one among those who are in holy orders, nor any layman, shall eat of the unleavened bread of the Jews, or dwell among them, or summon any of them to himself in his illness, or receive medicine from them, or bathe with them in the bath. But if anyone shall do such a thing, he shall, if he is a clergyman, be deposed, and if he is a layman, be excommunicated (that is, excluded from the community). With this also agrees what stands in Barbosa and Tabor's Loci communes, in the 9th book, in the 120th chapter, in the 8th axiom, in these words: Judæi non possunt esse Medici Christianorum, That is: Jews cannot be physicians of Christians.

Chapter IV.

In Which It Is Shown That Christians, According to the Teaching of the Jews, Are All Damned and None Can Be Saved, Whereas All Jews Are to Partake of Eternal Salvation.

If one were to ask the Jews whether Christians can also partake of eternal salvation, they will indeed answer yes, and say that their rabbis teach חסידי העולם הבא that is, the pious among the nations of the world have a share in the ólam hábbá, that is, in the life to come; as indeed this same answer was given to me by them as well. The said words are found in the Jalkut Rubéni, under the title Gilgúlim, numero 63, as also in the book Avodáth hakkódesch fol. 55, col. 1, in the 42nd chapter of the second part, which is called Chélek haavóda, and in many other places. How little, however, such a declaration of their mouths agrees with their hearts will be clearly seen from what follows. We will now examine who those are that are called Chasíde ummóth (or úm mos) haólam, that is, the pious among the nations of the world, and what the Jews understand by ólam hábbá, that is, the life to come.

Concerning the pious among the nations of the world, Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon writes in the fourth part of his book Jad chasáka, fol. 290, col. 2, in the 8th chapter, numeró 11, under the title Hilchóth melachím, about this matter in the following manner: חסידים אומות הרי זה מחסידי אומות כל המקבל שבע מצוות ונוהר לעשותן הרי זה מחסידי אומות העולם ויש לו חלק לעולם הבא והוא שיקבל אותן ויעשה אותן מפני שצוה בהן הק"ה בתורה והודיענו על ידי משה רבנו שבני נח מקודם נצטוו בהן אבל אם עשאו מפני הכרע הדעת אין זה גר תושב ואינו מחסידי אומות העולם ולא מחכמיהם : that is, whoever accepts the seven commandments (of Noah) and is diligent in observing them is among the Chasíde ummóth haólam, or the pious of the nations of the world, and has a share in the life to come. Such a person, however, is one who accepts and observes them for this reason: because the holy and blessed GOD commanded them in the Law and made known to us through our teacher Moses that they were commanded to the children of Noah beforehand (before the Law was given on Mount Sinai). But if he observes them because reason prompts him to do so (by nature), then he is not a Ger tóschaf (that is, a stranger who, on account of the seven commandments of Noah which he has undertaken to observe, and for that reason is permitted to dwell among the Jews in the Promised Land) and is not one of the pious of the world, nor one of their wise men. Rabbi Lipmann likewise teaches on this subject in his Sépher Nizzáchon, paginâ 145, numeró 265, as follows: כתב רמ"ב גוי המקיים שבע מצוות בני נח מסברת

 Majemon has written that a Gentile who observes the seven commandments of the children of Noah according to his own heart's judgment shall not be called one of the righteous of the nations of the world, but rather one of the wise of the nations of the world. The righteous of the nations of the world, however, are those who observe the seven commandments for this reason: because they believe in the blessed GOD, who gave the Law to Moses and therein commanded the Israelites many commandments, but commanded the rest of the world only seven commandments.

All the children of Noah who keep the seven commandments of Noah shall also be saved, and the aforementioned Rabbi Lipmann expresses himself on this matter in his Sepher Nizzáchon, paginâ 193, numero 347, as follows: הרי אנחנו אומרים שכל העולם שהם בני נח כל מי שבהם שמקיים שבע מצוות יש לו חלק לעולם הבא : that is, "Behold, we say that whoever among all the world, among the children of Noah, keeps the seven commandments, has a share in the life to come." Rabbi Meir also reports in his book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 55, col. 1., in the 42nd chapter of the second part, which is called Chélek haavoda, the following, and says: כל תורת בני נח אשר קיימו כל תורת בני נח : שהן שבע מצוות שנצטוו ואחר שקיימו תורתם הנה קנו המדרגה שהיא כמו הצדיקים הגמורים הם אשר קיימו כל תורת משה ע"ה אלה כתורתם ואלה כתורתם הואיל וקיימה כגיו שנצטוו : that is, "One must say that the pious among the nations of the world are those who keep the entire law of the children of Noah, namely the seven commandments that were commanded to them. And when they have kept their law, behold, they attain that very same degree of salvation which the perfectly righteous, who have observed the entire law of Moses (upon whom be peace), attain: these according to their law, and those according to their law; since they have observed it as they were commanded, they all attain the degree in the life to come according to their law." So too is it read in the book Nevésh schalom fol. 196, col. 2., in the 6th chapter of the thirteenth Máamar, as follows: חסידי אומות העולם הם אותם שהאמינו בעיקרי התורה ומקיימין קצת מצוותיה החשובות ובסבת זה יזכו לחיות להם חלק : that is, "The pious among the nations of the world are those who believe in the principal articles of the law of Moses and keep some of its most important commandments; and thereby they merit having a share in the life to come, and this comes about through the mediation of the law." We thus see from all of this that, according to the teaching of the rabbis, those who observe the seven commandments of the children of Noah are regarded as the pious among the nations of the world.

By "the children of Noah" and "the peoples of the world," all peoples who exist in the world outside of the Jewish people are understood; for Rabbi Solomon Jarchi writes thus in his Commentario on the Talmudic Tractate Nedárim fol. 31, col. 1.: איתקרו ישראל על שמה דאברהם ולא על שום בני נח : that is, the Israelites are named after the name of Abraham, and not after the name of the children of Noah. For this reason, in the Talmudic Tractate Sanhédrin fol. 56, col. 2. and fol. 57, col. 1, a בן נח, ben Nóch, that is, a child of Noah, is frequently set in opposition to an Israelite, as can be found sufficiently in many places.

What concerns Olám habbá, or the future life (though it properly means the future world), the rabbis do not agree among themselves as to what is to be understood by it, or when it begins. Elias writes in his Tischbi fol. 67, col. 1. 2. in the word עולם Olam about this with the following words: יש מחלוקת בין האחרונים על זמן עולם הבא יש אומרים שהוא עולם הנשמות ורוצה לומר תכף אחר המיתה ויש אומרים שהוא זמן ימות המשיח ויש אומרים שהוא אחר תחיית המתים וכל אחד מביא ראיות לקיים דעתו ואני איני כדאי להכניס ראשי בין ראשי החכמים והחכם וכו' אך מי שרוצה לעמוד על אמתת הענין הזה יעיין בפירוש דון יצחק אברבנאל ז"ל בספר נחלת אבות בפרק בן לעמוד על אמתת הענין הזה : that is, there is among the later (sages) a dispute concerning the time of Olam habba, that is, the future world. Some say it is the world of souls, that is, the world which immediately follows death; others hold that it is the time of the days of the Messiah; still others maintain that it is the time after the resurrection of the dead, and each party brings forward proofs in support of its opinion. I, however, am not worthy to put my head among the heads of such sages (and to involve myself in their dispute); but whoever desires to know the true foundation of this matter, let him examine the commentary of Isaac Abarbanel, of blessed memory, in the book Nachalath Avoth, in the chapter Ben Soma, for he has spoken very well of this therein. These are the words of Elia. Rabbi Joseph Albo is of the opinion that it begins for a person immediately when the soul is separated from the body, as may be read in his Sepher Ikkarim fol. 146, col. 2. in the 31st chapter of the fourth Maamar, with which Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon also agrees, of whom Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman writes in his book Torath adam, fol. 107, col. 1. under the title Schaar baggemul as follows: יראה מדבריו שהוא משנה עלינו זמנו של העולם הבא והוא לדעתו בא לאדם אחרי מותו מיד והוא העונג והנועם שקרינו אנחנו אותו גן עדן כך כתב בספר המדע זה שקראו אותו חכמים העולם הבא מפני שאינו מצוי עתה וזה העולם אבד : One sees from his words that he departs from us regarding the time of the future life, and that, in his opinion, it comes to a person immediately after his death, which is the delight and the pleasantness that we call Paradise; thus he has written in his Sepher hammadda. This is what the sages have called Olam habba, because it is not to be found at present, and when this world (that is, this life) passes away, after it that world (that is, that life) comes, etc.

Among the others who hold that it only begins after the resurrection of the dead is Rabbi Meir, who in his book Avodath hakkodesch fol. 55, col. 1., in the 42nd chapter of the second part, which is called Chelek haavoda, expresses himself thus: העולם הבא בב"ד דבריהם ז"ל לא יאמר כי אם בייחוד על העולם הבא אחר : תחיית המתים לא על הבא לאדם אחר מותו מיד that is, the Olam habba, which, according to the words of our rabbis of blessed memory, is to come, is said only of the future life that follows the resurrection of the dead, and not of that which comes to a person immediately after death. The aforementioned Rabbi Meir also refutes, at fol. 45, col. 4., in the 41st chapter of the said second part, the opinion of Rabbi Joseph Albo, who had held that by Olám hanneshamóth, that is, the world of souls, one should understand not only their condition after death but also the life after the resurrection; and still more can be read at fol. 53, col. 4. and fol. 54, col. 1. in the aforementioned 43rd chapter.

Since in the foregoing mention was made of the seven commandments of the children of Noah, I must also indicate wherein they consist and in what manner they are demonstrated. Wherein they consist is to be seen in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 56, col. 2, where the following is written concerning them: תנו רבנן שבע מצוות נצטוו בני נח דינין וברכת השם עבודה זרה גילוי עריות ושפיכות דמים גזל ואבר מן החי That is: Our rabbis teach that the children of Noah were commanded seven commandments: to maintain justice, not to curse the name of God, to avoid idolatry, to flee fornication and adultery, to refrain from bloodshed, not to rob, and not to eat a limb torn from a living animal. In the book Beér haggóla it is likewise read at fol. 44, col. 2: בני נח נצטוו על עבודה זרה ועל ברכת השם ועל הרציחה ועל העריות ושלא לגזול ולדון בין איש לרעהו ועל אבר מן החי שלא לחתוך ממנה אבר ולאכול אותו שזה אכזריות גדול מאד That is: The children of Noah are commanded not to practice idolatry, not to curse the name of God, not to kill anyone, to refrain from fornication and adultery, not to rob, to judge between a man and his neighbor, and to refrain from the limb of a living animal, so that one shall not cut off a limb from it and eat it, since this is a very great cruelty.

How cleverly these seven commandments are proven from Holy Scripture is a matter of the highest astonishment, for there is no Christian so wise and learned as to be able to establish such a mystery from Gen 2:16-17 as the rabbinical strange minds are able to do. The words there read as follows: "And the LORD Elohim commanded the man, saying: Of all the trees of the garden you may eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat." And Rabbi Bechai proves the seven aforementioned commandments from this passage in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 12, col. 2, in the following manner: ויצו זו עבודה זרה דכתיב כי הואיל הלך הלך אחרי צו. ה' זו ברכת השם דכתיב ונוקב שם ה' מות יומת. אלהים אלו הדיינים שנאמר אלהים לא תקלל. על האדם זו שפיכות דמים שנאמר שופך דם האדם וגו' לאמור אלו עריות שנאמר בספר ירמיה לאמור הן ישלח איש את אשתו והלכה מאתו והיתה לאיש אחר. מכל עץ הגן אכול תאכל זה הגזל כלומר מדבר פלוני ולא מאחר. ומעץ הדעת טוב ורע לא תאכל ממנו. זה אבר מן החי. כלומר מדבר פלוני לא תאכל מקצתו הרי לך שבע מצוות של בני נח רמוזות בכאן. That is: the words "And He commanded" signify idolatry, as it is written (Hos 5:11): "For he was willing to walk after the commandment." The words "the LORD" signify the cursing (or blaspheming) of the name of God, as it is written (Lev 24:16): "Whoever curses (or blasphemes) the name of the LORD shall surely die." The word Elohim (which means both "God" and "gods") signifies the judges (who are also called gods in Scripture), as it is said (Exod 22:28): "The Elohim, that is, the gods, you shall not curse." The words "the man" signify the shedding of blood, as it is said (Gen 9:6): "Whoever sheds man's blood." The word "saying" signifies fornication and adultery, as it is said in the book of Jeremiah (Jer 3:1): "saying (that is, one says): if a man puts away his wife, and she departs from him and takes another man." The words "Of all the trees of the garden you may eat" signify robbery, as if it were said: of this thing (you may eat) and not of another. The words "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat" signify a limb torn from a living animal, as if it were said: you shall not eat any part of this thing. See, here you have the seven commandments of the children of Noah, which are signified here (in this passage). This subtle proof is also found in the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 19, col. 3, in the Parashah Bereschith, as well as in the Jalkut Schimoni on the aforementioned Books of Moses, fol. 7, col. 3, numero 22, in which latter book, however, something is altered, for the words there read as follows: ויצו אלו דינים וכן הוא אומר כי ידעתיו אשר יצוה וגו' ה' זו ברכת השם וכן הוא אומר ונוקב שם ה'. אלהים זו עבודת אלילים וכן הוא אומר לא יהיה לך אלהים אחרים. על האדם זה שפיכות דמים וכן הוא אומר שופך דם האדם. לאמור זה גילוי עריות וכן הוא אומר לאמור הן ישלח איש את אשתו. מכל עץ הגן אכול תאכל ולא גזל, That is: the words "And He commanded" signify the courts of law, and thus Scripture says (Gen 15:19): "For I know that he will command his children, etc." The words "the LORD" signify the cursing (or blaspheming) of the name of God, and thus it says (Lev 24:16): "Whoever curses the name of the LORD." The word Elohim (which means God and gods) signifies idolatry, and thus it says (Exod 20:3): "You shall have no other gods before my face." The words "the man" signify the shedding of blood, and thus it says (Gen 9:6): "Whoever sheds man's blood." The word "saying" signifies fornication and adultery, and thus it says (Jer 3:1): "saying (that is, one says): when a man puts away his wife." The words "of all the trees of the garden" signify that one shall eat nothing obtained by robbery. The words "you may eat" signify that one shall eat no limb of a living animal.

There have indeed been rabbis who added still other commandments to those seven, as can be read in the aforementioned fol. 7, col. 3 of the Jalkut Schimoni, where, after the recounting of the above seven commandments, the following is written: רבי חנינא בן גמליאל אומר אף על הדם מן החי. רבי חידקא אומר אף על הסירוס. רבי שמעון אומר אף על הכישוף. רבי יוסי אומר כל האמור בפרשת מכשף בן נח מוזהר עליו לא ימצא בך מעביר בנו וגו' ובגלל התועבות האלה יי' אלהיך מוריש אותם מפניך לא ענש אלא אם כן הזהיר. רבי אלעזר אומר אף על הכלאים מוזהרין בני נח ללבוש כלאים. That is: Rabbi Channina, the son of Gamaliel, says that it is also forbidden to them to eat blood from a living animal. Rabbi Chidka says that castration or cutting is likewise not permitted to them. Rabbi Schimon states that sorcery is also forbidden to them. Rabbi Jose says that a son of Noah is warned against everything that is said in the Parashah concerning the sorcerer (that is, Deut 18:9-11), where it is written at v. 10: "There shall not be found among you one who causes his son or daughter to pass through the fire," etc., and "on account of these abominations the Lord your God has driven them out from before you" (as is to be read at v. 11). He did not, however, punish them unless He had first warned them. Rabbi Eliezer says that the children of Noah are also warned not to mix two kinds together (concerning which Lev 19:19 is to be read); yet they are permitted to wear a garment mixed of wool and linen and to sow two kinds of seed in one field, and it is forbidden to them only to put two kinds of livestock together so that they have dealings with one another, and to graft a branch of one kind of tree onto the trunk of another kind. These points, however, which are taken from the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 56, col. 2, are not counted among the commandments of the children of Noah, and the matter remains with only the aforementioned seven commandments.

Of the aforementioned seven commandments, six are said to have been given to Adam, and Noah is said to have received the seventh, concerning which Rabbi Bechai, in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 92, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajischma Jethro, teaches as follows: כשנברא אדם הראשון נצטוו על ו' מצוות כדי שיתקיים העולם בשש קצוות. בא נח ונצטווה על השביעית זו אבר מן החי אברהם על שמינית זו מילה. יעקב על התשיעית זוהי גיד הנשה. כשבאו ישראל נתן להם י' מצוות: דברות שהן כוללות תרי"ג מצוות: that is, after the first man was created, six commandments were enjoined upon him, so that the world might be sustained in its six directions. When Noah came, the seventh was enjoined upon him, namely, not to eat any limb of a living animal. Abraham received the eighth, namely circumcision (as may be read in Gen 17:10), and Jacob the ninth, that he should not eat of any dislocated sinew (as may be seen in Gen 32:32). After the Israelites had come, God gave them the Ten Commandments, which comprehend all six hundred and thirteen commandments within themselves. Rabbi Moses bar Maimon also teaches in his book Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 293, col. 2, in the 9th chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchoth melachim, concerning this matter in the following manner: ששה דברים נצטווה אדם הראשון על עכ"יו ועל ברכת השם ועל שפיכות דמים ועל גילוי עריות ועל הגזל ועל הדינים אף על פי שכולן הן קבלה בידינו ממשנה רבינו והדעת נוטה להן מכלל דברי תורה יראה שעל אלו נצטווה. הוסיף לנה אבר מן החי שנאמר אך בשר בנפשו דמו לא תאכלו נמצאו שבע מצוות: that is, six things were commanded to the first man: to abstain from idolatry, from blasphemy of the name of God, from bloodshed, from fornication and adultery, and from robbery, and to observe justice; all of which we hold as a tradition, or oral teaching, handed down from Moses our teacher. Reason likewise supports this, and it appears from the words of the Law that these things were commanded to him. To Noah, God added the commandment concerning the limb of a living animal, as it is said (Gen 9:4): "But you shall not eat flesh with its blood, in which is its soul." There are thus seven commandments.

Since mention is here made of the seven commandments of the children of Noah, we also wish to see what the Rabbis write concerning the Law of Moses, which was commanded to the people of Israel: for it is to be known that they teach that God offered it to all nations, but they were unwilling to receive it, concerning which the book Zerór hammór, fol. 161, col. 2, in the Parascha Ve-zóth habberachá, contains the following written: ידוע כי השם הלך אל כל האומות וצו לקבלה ולא רצו לקבלה כמאמרם זכרונם לברכה ואחר כך בא לישראל שיקבלו וגוי: that is, It is known that God went to all nations so that they should receive the Law, but they were unwilling to receive it, as our Rabbis, of blessed memory, report. Thereafter He went to the Israelites so that they should receive it, וצ"ל. This, however, the foolish Rabbis wish to prove, in an absurd manner, from the words of Deut 33:2, which read as follows: The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; He shone forth from mount Paran. Concerning which, in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 2, col. 2, the following is written: מאי בעי בשעיר ומאי בעי בפארן אמר רבי יוחנן מלמד שהחזירה: that is, What do the words "from Seir" signify? and what do the words "from Paran" signify? Rabbi Jochanan has said: these teach that the Holy, blessed God carried it around among all peoples and tongues (and offered it to them), but they did not accept it, until He came to the Israelites, who accepted it. On this matter the book Mattáth jah, fol. 45, col. 4, in the Parascha Bechykkothái, may also be consulted.

In the Sobar on Vajikra, or the third book of Moses, in the 31st column, in the Parascha Vajikra, on the words of Judg 5:4, "LORD, when You went out from Seir, when You marched from the field of Edom," the reason is also given why God offered it to all nations, and the following is read there concerning this: מלמד דקב"ה זמין לכל שאר עמין לקבלא לאוריתא ולא בעו. וכי לא הוה גלי קמיה דלא: that is, This teaches us that the Holy, blessed God invited all the remaining nations to receive the Law, but they were unwilling. What! Did God then not know that they would not accept it? (Yes, certainly He did,) but (He did it only for this reason,) so that they would have no excuse and might say that, had the Holy, blessed God given them the Law, they would have kept it.

The Law of Moses was also supposed to have been proclaimed in seventy languages, since seventy nations are said to exist in the world apart from the Jews, and to have been heard throughout the entire world. Concerning this, Rabbi Bechái writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 89, col. 2, in the Parashah Vajischma Jethro, as follows: כשהיה הדיבור יוצא מפי השכינה היה נחלק לז' קולות וס' קולות לשבעים לשונות: וכן אמרו במדרש תהילים ה' יתן אומר המבשרות צבא רב • היה הדבור יוצא ונחלק לז' קולות וס' קולות ומי שמעו כל אומה ואומה הדבור לפי שהיה מתחלק לטבעים אומות • לשבעים לשון כאדם המכה על הסדן וניצוצות הדבור לפי שהיה מתחלק לטבעים אומות: that is, when the word went forth from the mouth of the divine Majesty, it was divided into seven voices, and from the seven voices into seventy languages; and therefore every nation heard the word, since it was divided among the seventy nations. So too it is said in the Médrasch Tillim (on the words of Ps 68:12), "The Lord gave the word; great was the company of those who proclaimed it": the word went forth and was divided into seven voices, and from the seven voices into seventy languages. Just as a man strikes upon an anvil and the sparks fly out in every direction, so too was the company of those who proclaimed it (who had proclaimed the Law) a great host. The same is also read in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat, fol. 88, col. 2. And in the tractate Seváchim it is written, fol. 116, col. 1: כשנתנה תורה לישראל: קולו הולך מסוף העולם ועד סופו וכל אומות העולם אחזתן רעדה בהיכליהן ואמרו שירה שנאמר ובהיכלו כולו אומר כבוד נתקבצו כולם אצל בלעם הרשע ואמרו לו מה קול ההמון אשר שמענו שמא מבול בא לעולם אמר להם ה' למבול ישב וישב ה' מלך לעולם. כבר נשבע הק"ה שאינו מביא מבול לעולם. אמרו לו מבול של מים אינו מביא אבל מבול של אש מביא שנאמר כי הנה באש ה' נשפט. אמר להן כבר נשבע שאינו משחית כל בשר. ומה קול ההמון הזה ששמענו אמר להן חמדה טובה יש לו בבית גנזיו שהיתה גנוזה אצלו הת"ק עד דורות קודם שנברא העולם וביקש ליתנה לבניו שנאמר ה' עוז לעמו יתן. פתחו כולם ואמרו ה' יברך את עמו בשלום: that is, when the Law was given to the Israelites, its voice went from one end of the world to the other, and a trembling came upon all the nations of the world in their palaces, and they sang a song, as is stated in Ps

29:9: "And in His palace everyone speaks of His glory." They also all gathered together at the wicked Balaam and said to him: what kind of a voice of tumult is this that we have heard? Perhaps a flood is coming upon the world. Then he said to them, from Ps 29:10: "The Lord sat enthroned at the flood; and the Lord remains King forever" (He will therefore not destroy His creatures, since He wishes to reign over them as King). The holy and blessed God had already sworn that He would not let a flood come upon the world again. Thereupon they said to him: He will not send a flood of water, but He will indeed send a flood of fire, as is said in Isa 66:16: "For behold, the Lord will judge by fire." Then he answered them: He has already sworn that He will not destroy all flesh. (But they asked again:) what then is this voice of tumult that we have heard? And he gave them the answer: God has a good and precious thing in His treasury (namely, the Law), which had been stored away with Him for nine hundred and seventy-four Secula, or ages, before the world was created, and He wished to give it (now) to His children (the Israelites), as is said in Ps 29:11: "The Lord will give strength to His people." Then they all began and said, from the aforementioned verse 11: "The Lord will bless His people with peace."

In the book Pesikta Sotárta, at fol. 68, col. 1. 2., in the Parascha Vaethechannán, the following is also found concerning the voice heard throughout the entire world: אנכי יי' אלהיך לשון חברה שכיון שהביא הקב"ה להשמיע הדיברות לישראל היה הקול יוצא ומחזר על כל העולם וישראל שומעין את הקול מן המזרח היו הופכין פניהן כלפי המזרח. וכיון שהיו הופכין פניהן כלפי מזרח היה בא להם הקול מן הדרום. הופכין פניהן לדרום היה בא להם הקול מן הצפון. הופכין פניהן לצפון היה בא להם הקול מן המערב היו המהיין לומר כמה רשויות לפיכך פתח להם אנכי יי' אלהיך. לא מפני שראיתם דמיונות לפידיים הרבה וקולות הרבה שמעתם אל תהיו סבורים לרשויות הרבה אלא כן: that is, (the words of Exod 20:2) "I am the LORD your God" were the words of a single voice; for when the holy and blessed God caused the Israelites to come together to proclaim the Ten Commandments to them, the voice went forth and passed through the entire world; and when the Israelites heard the voice from the east, they turned their faces toward the east. But after they had turned their faces toward the east, the voice came to them from the south. When they had turned their faces toward the south, the voice came to them from the north. And when they had turned their faces toward the north, the voice came to them from the west. At this they marveled and said: how many lords (that is, gods) are there then? Therefore He (namely, God) began and said to them: "I am the LORD your God." Do not think, because you have seen many likenesses of flames and heard many voices, that there are many lords; rather, everything you have seen and everything you have heard, that am I. On this matter, the book Schemóth rábba, fol. 100, col. 1. 2., in the fifth Parascha, may also be consulted. As for the languages in which the Law was given, which, as mentioned above, are said to have been seventy in number, only four are named in the Jalkut chádascb, fol. 112, col. 2, numero 50, and the words there read as follows: כשבא הקב"ה ליהן לשון עברי ורומי וארמי וערבי ליהן תורה לישראל נגלה עליהם בארבע לשונות לשון עברי ורומי וארמי וערבי: that is, when the holy and blessed God came to give the Law to the Israelites, He revealed Himself to them in four languages: in the Hebrew, Latin, Syriac, and Arabic tongues.

Since it was mentioned in the immediately preceding passage that the seventy nations had not wished to accept the Law, we also want to examine the reasons why they are said to have done this. On this matter, the following is written in the margin of the book Maarécbeth haëlabúth fol. 209, col. 2.: לא היו יכולים לקבל כי הם עבדים מן השרים המשפיעין מאותן קליפות, ולא יוכל העבד לקבל דבר שלא מדעת רבו והשרים אדונייהם לא רצו שישתעבדו לאלהי האלהים יתברך רק להם הנקראים אחרים, That is: They (namely, the nations of the world) could not accept the Law, because they are servants of the (seventy) princes (who were mentioned above in the 18th chapter of the first part), which (princes) impart their influenz from those same Keliphóth or husks; and a servant cannot accept anything without the prior knowledge of his master. Moreover, their masters, the princes, did not want them to submit themselves to the blessed GOD of gods, but rather to them, who are called the other (gods).

In the Jerusalem Targum, however, at the beginning of the Parascha Vesóth habberachá, another reason is given as to why the children of Esau and the Ishmaelites were unwilling to accept it, and the words there read as follows: י"י מן סיני אתגלי למיתן אורייתא לעמיה דבית ישראל דנח ביקריה על טורא דשעיר למיתן אורייתא לבנוי דעשו וכיון דאשכחו כתיב בגוה לא תהוון קטולין לא קבילו יתה הופע ביקריה על טורא דגבלא למתן אורייתא לבנוי דישמעאל וכיון דאשכחו כתיב בגוה לא תהוון גנבין לא קבילו יתה. וחזר ואתגלי על טורא דסיני ועמיה רבון מלאכין קדישין ואמרו בני ישראל כל די That is: The Lord revealed Himself from Mount Sinai to give the Law to His people of the house of Israel; and He appeared in His glory upon Mount Seir to give the Law to the children of Esau (from whom the Christians are said to descend); but when they found written therein, "You shall not kill," they did not accept it. Thereupon He appeared in His glory upon Mount Gebal to give the Law to the children of Ishmael; but when they found written therein, "You shall not steal," they did not accept it. Then He revealed Himself again upon Mount Sinai, and with Him were many tens of thousands of holy angels, and the Israelites said: all that the Lord has spoken, that we will do and accept; whereupon He stretched out His hand from amid the flames of fire and gave the Law to His people.

In the booklet Pirke Rabbi Eliezer, the following is also read at the beginning of the 41st chapter: בַּשְּׁשֶׁה בַּסִּין: יִרְדֵּה הַשְּׁשִׁית שִׁירָד לְסִינִי שְׁנֶאֱמַר וַיֵּרֶד י"י עַל הָרֹם סִינִי: נִגְלָה ה"קְבֵה עַל יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּהָרֹם סִינִי וּמִמָּקוֹמוֹ נִתְלַשׁ הָרֹם סִינִי וּנְפָתְחוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם וּנְכַסַּס רֹאשׁ רֹאשׁ הָהָר בְּשִׁמְשִׁים וְעִרְפֵּל מִכְסָה אֶת הָהָר הֵק"בִּה יוֹשֵׁב עַל כִּסְאוֹ וּרְגָלָיו עוֹמְדוֹת עַל הָעִרְפֵּל שְׁנֶאֱמַר וַיֵּט שָׁמַיִם וַיֵּרֶד וְעִרְפֵּל תַּחַת רְגָלָיו. רַבִּי טַרְפוֹן אָמַר זֶרַח הֵק"בִּה מֵהָר שְׁעִיר וּנְגִלָה עַל בְּנֵי עֶשָׂו שֶׁנ' י"י מְסִינִי בָּא וְזֶרַח מִשְׁעִיר לָמוֹ וְאִין שְׁעִיר אֵלָּא בְּנֵי עֶשָׂו שֶׁנ' יוֹשֵׁב עֶשָׂו בְּהָר שְׁעִיר. אָמַר לָהֶם הֵק"בִּה מִקְבְּלִין אַתֶּם אֶת הַתּוֹרָה אִמְרוּ לוֹ מָה כְּתִיב בְּהָ אָמַר לָהֶם לֹא תִרְצֶצָה אִמְרוּ לוֹ לֶךְ מִעֲמֻנָּה כִּי אֵין אֲנוּ יִכּוֹלִין לָעֻזּוֹב אֶת הַבְּרִכָּה שְׁבִירָךְ יִצְחָק אֶת עֶשָׂו אֲבִינוֹ שְׁנֶאֱמַר לוֹ וְעַל חֶרֶבְךָ תַּחֲיָה וּמִשָּׁם חֲזַר וּנְגִלָה עַל בְּנֵי יִשְׁמָעֵאל שֶׁנ' הוֹפִיעַ מֵהָר פָּאָרָן אָמַר לָהֶם מִקְבְּלִין אַתֶּם אֶת הַתּוֹרָה אִמְרוּ לוֹ מָה כְּתִיב בְּהָ אָמַר לָהֶם לֹא תִגְנוּב אִמְרוּ לוֹ אֵין אֲנוּ יִכּוֹלִין לָעֻזּוֹב אֶת הַדְּבָר שְׁעֶשָׂו אֲבוֹתֵינוּ שִׁגְנוּב אֶת יוֹסֵף וְהוֹרִידוּהוּ לַמִּצְרַיִם שֶׁנ' כִּי גִנוּב גִּנְבְּתִי מֵאֶרֶץ הָעִבְרִים וּמִשָּׁם שָׁלַח לְכָל אֲמוֹת הָעוֹלָם וְאָמַר לָהֶם מִקְבְּלוֹן אַתֶּם אֶת הַתּוֹרָה אִמְרוּ לוֹ מָה כְּתִיב בְּהָ אָמַר לָהֶם לֹא יִהְיֶה לָךְ אֱלֹהִים אֲחֵרִים עַל פְּנֵי אִמְרוּ לוֹ אֵין אֲנוּ יִכּוֹלִין לִהְיוֹת דָּת אֲבוֹתֵינוּ שְׁעִבְדוּ אֶת הָאֱלִילִים אֵין אֲנוּ חִפְצִין בַּתּוֹרָה אֵלָּא תָן תּוֹרָתְךָ לַעֲמֹךְ שֶׁנ' י"י עוֹז לַעֲמוֹ יִתָּן י"י יִבְרַךְ אֶת עַמּוֹ בְּשָׁלוֹם וּמִשָּׁם חֲזַר וּנְגִלָה עַל בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל שֶׁנ' אֶתָּה מִרְכַּבּוֹת קוֹדֶשׁ וְאִין רִכְבוֹת אֵלָּא יִשְׂרָאֵל שֶׁנ' That is: The sixth descent (of God) was when He descended onto Mount Sinai, as it is said (Exod 19:20): "And the LORD came down upon Mount Sinai." On the sixth day of the month of Sivan, the Holy Blessed God appeared over Israel on Mount Sinai, and Mount Sinai was torn from its place, and the heavens were opened, and the summit of the mountain reached up into the heavens, but darkness covered the mountain; and the Holy Blessed God sat upon His throne, and His feet stood upon the darkness, as it is said (2 Sam 22:10): "He bowed the heavens and came down, and thick darkness was under His feet." Rabbi Tarfon said: the Holy Blessed God appeared from Mount Seir and revealed Himself to the children of Esau, as it is said (Deut 33:2): "The LORD came from Sinai and dawned upon them from Seir." By Seir, however, the children of Esau are to be understood, as it is said (Gen 36:8): "Thus Esau dwelt in the hill country of Seir." And God spoke to them: will you accept the Law? But they asked Him: what is written in it? And when He told them (that it contains): "You shall not murder," they said to Him: depart from us, for we cannot abandon the blessing with which Isaac blessed our father Esau, as it was said to him (Gen 27:40): "By your sword you shall live." From there He departed and revealed Himself to the children of Ismael, as it is said (Deut 33:2): "He shone forth from Mount Paran"; and He said to them: will you accept the Law? But they asked Him: what is written in it? And when He answered them (that it contains): "You shall not steal," they said to Him: we cannot abandon what our fathers did, who stole Joseph and brought him down into Egypt, as it is said (Gen 40:15): "For I was indeed stolen out of the land of the Hebrews." From there He sent word to all the nations of the world and said to them: will you accept the Law? But they asked Him: what is written in it? And He gave them the answer (that it contains): "You shall have no other gods before My face." Then they said to Him: we cannot abandon our fathers' religion, who served idols (or false gods); we have no desire for the Law; rather, give Your Law to Your people, as it is said (Ps 29:11): "The LORD will give strength to His people; the LORD will bless His people with peace." From there He went and revealed Himself over the children of Israel, as it is said (Deut 33:2): "He came with many tens of thousands of holy ones"; by the many tens of thousands, however, no one is to be understood but the Israelites, as it is said (Num 10:36): "And when it (namely, the ark of the covenant) rested, he said: Return, O LORD, to the ten thousands of the thousands of Israel," etc. Concerning this, the same may also be found in the book Mechilta fol. 25, col. 2, 3, in the Parashah Jéthro, in the fifth Parashah, as well as in Pesikta rábbetha fol. 36.

How does that fable square with what is read in Jalkut chádascb fol. 133, col. 1. numero 130, where it is written as follows: בשעה שקבלו ישראל התורה נתקנאו בהם האומות. מה ראו אלו להתקרב יותר מן האומות סתם הק"ה את פיהם אמר להם הביאו ספר יוחסין שלכם שנאמר הבו לה' משפחות עמים כשם שבני מביאין ויתלדו על משפחותם וגו' That is: At the time when the Israelites received the Law, the nations were envious of them (or begrudged it to them, and said:) for what reason are these permitted to draw nearer to God than the nations? But the holy blessed God stopped their mouths and said to them: bring forward your genealogical register, as it is said (1 Chr 16:28 and Ps 96:7): "Give to the LORD, you families of the peoples," just as my children bring it forward, as it is said (Num 1:18): "And they declared their lineage according to their families," etc. If the nations begrudged it to the Israelites and would gladly have had it themselves, how then can it be true that they were unwilling to receive it? But both are foolish rabbinical fictions; just as it is likewise a senseless madness that God offered it to the chief devil Samael, regarded as the supposed prince of the children of Esau, as can be seen in the aforementioned Jalkut chádascb, fol. 112, col. 1. 2. numero 31, under the heading Luchóth (or Lúchos); or that the holy angels are supposed to have desired that it might be given to them, as can be read in Médrascb Tillim fol. 9, col. 1, on the eighth Psalm.

To return to the aforementioned matter, that the pious among the nations of the world are to have a share in the life to come: this is explained in the book Maarécbeth ha'elabúth fol. 205, col. 2. in the Chajath, as to how it is to be understood, and it is written there as follows: מה שאמרו חז"ל חסידי אומות העולם יש להם חלק לעולם הבא הכוונה שהם יושבים במדרגה העליונה מהגיהנם ומשם מתהנים מהענוג הגן עדן הסמוך אליו כי אין בין גן עדן לגיהנם אלא כחוטא נימא אבל חלילה שיהיו : that is, the intent of what our Sages, of blessed memory, have said, that the pious among the nations of the world have a share in the life to come, consists in this: that they sit in the highest degree of Hell, and there enjoy something of the delight of Paradise, which is close by; for there is no more than a thread's breadth of difference between Paradise and Hell. But far be it that they should be in Paradise, for no uncircumcised person shall eat of it (that is, partake of it). From this we see, therefore, that no person other than Jews shall enter Paradise.

Yes, the rabbis teach that all peoples are damned, and Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 55, col. 4, in the Parashah Vajiggasch, on the words of Balaam (Num 23:10), "Let my soul die the death of the righteous," in the following manner: רמז שאין בכל אומות העולם נוחלי גן, That is: It is thereby signified that there is none among all the peoples of the world that shall inherit Paradise except the Israelites. And fol. 144, col. 4, at the end of the Parashah Kedóschim, the aforementioned Bechai teaches the following: האומות כהו עיניהם מראות אור התורה לפי שאין להם תורה והולכים בדרכי החושך וכענין שכתוב והיה במחשך מעשיהם ומזומנים הם לגיהנם שנקרא חושך שנ' כל חושך טמון לצפוניו וכתוב ורשעים בחושך ידמו. אבל ישראל זוכים הם לאור הגנוז וצפון לצדיקים לעתיד לבא בזכות שקבלו התורה הנקראת אור שנ' נר לרגלי דברך ואור הנהיב, That is: The eyes of the peoples are darkened, so that they cannot see the light of the Law, because they have no Law and walk in the ways of darkness, as it is written (Isa 29:15): "And their works are in the dark"; therefore they are appointed to Hell, which is called darkness, as it is said (Job 20:26): "All darkness is hidden in his secret places." And it is written (1 Sam 2:9): "The wicked shall be silent in darkness." But the Israelites deserve the light that is kept and hidden for the righteous in the time to come, by virtue of the merit that they accepted the Law, which is called a light, as it is said (Ps 119:105): "Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light upon my path." In the book Zerór hammôr, fol. 122, col. 2, in the Parashah Bálak, one likewise reads: כל אותה פרשה רמוזה על ענין עולם הבא שיש להם לישראל ולא לאומה אחרת. ולכן סמך לזאת הפרשה והיו העמים משרפות סיד שוה רמז על אש גיהנם, That is: That entire Parashah has a signification concerning Olam habbá, that is, the life to come, which the Israelites shall receive and no other people shall attain; therefore the words (Isa 33:12), "And the peoples shall be burned to lime," are placed alongside this Parashah, which has a signification concerning the fire of Hell. Something similar is also to be found in the book Pesíkta rábbetha, fol. 13, col. 4 And fol. 147, col. 3 of the aforementioned book Zerór hammôr, in the Parashah Ki téze, it reads: כל האומות אוכלים העולם הזה ואין להם חלק לעולם הבא : אבל ישראל נתן להם השם בעולם הזה ותהלה ושם ותפארת ונותן להם קדושת העולם הבא וגומר, That is: All peoples enjoy this world and have no share in Olam habbá, that is, the life to come; but to the Israelites God grants in this world praise, and a great name, and glory, and gives them the holiness of the life to come, etc. Therefore one also reads in the aforementioned book Zerór hammôr, fol. 164, col. 4, in the Parashah Vesôth habberachá, as follows: אשריך ישראל מי כמוך לפי שאתה נושע בה 'אבל שאר אומות אין ישועתם אלא העושר וטובות העולם הזה אבל אשריך ישראל נושע בה 'תשועת עולמים בעולם הזה ובעולם הבא, That is: Blessed are you, Israel; who is like you, seeing that you are preserved by the Lord; but the salvation of the remaining peoples consists only in riches and the goods of this world. Israel, however, is preserved by the Lord through an eternal redemption, in this world and in the world to come. And in the second part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 13, col. 1, in the commentary on the prayer that begins אצילי אומות העולם בחרו, Azile merêi néched Seir, one reads as follows: אומות העולם הזה ואינם מכינים להם צידה לעולם הבא, That is: The peoples of the world have chosen this world and provide themselves with no provisions for the world to come. Beyond this, it is taught in the book Ir gibbórim, fol. 50, col. 1, as follows: לא יזכה שום אומה לעולם הבא כי אם זרעה של שרה הוא שאמרה גרש בן האמה: הזאת היינו מן העולם הבא ע"ד כי לא יירש בן האמה העולם הבא עם בני, That is: Not a single people shall be found worthy of the life to come except the seed of Sarah, who said (Gen 21:10): "Cast out the son of this maidservant," which is to be understood as referring to the life to come, according to what is said (1 Sam 26:19): "Because they have not driven me out, that I should not dwell in the Lord's inheritance"; for the son of the maidservant shall not inherit the life to come together with my children.

Concerning the damnation of all peoples, the following is written in the Médrasch Tillim fol. 10, col. 3. on the words of Ps 9:18, "The wicked shall go down to hell": האמר רבי אלעזר כל הגוים אין להם חלק לעולם הבא that is, Rabbi Eliezer has said that all Gójim, or heathens, have no share in the life to come. In the book Jr gibbórim, at fol. 50, col. 1. numero 77., the following is also read on this subject: רמז אברהם בענין השבע הכבשות אשר הצב לברנה שאין שום אומה זוכה לעולם הבא that is, Abraham signified, through the act of the seven lambs which he set apart (concerning which Gen 21:28 is to be read), that no people is worthy of the life to come except those companies of the righteous who are compared to sheep, namely the scattered sheep of Israel. Rabbi Isaac writes in his book Chilluk emúna pagina 163. likewise as follows: האושר האמתי הוא ההצלחה והתשועה הנפשית אין שום אומה בעולם הזה זוכה אליה זולת אומת ישראל לפיכך אמר אשריך ישראל מי כמוך עם נושע ביי"ר"ל היש בעמים עם נושע ביי"ר"ל that is, the true blessedness is the happiness and salvation of souls, of which no people in this world is worthy except the people of Israel; for this reason he (namely Moses, Deut 33:29) says: "You are blessed, O Israel; who is like you, a people saved by the Lord?" This means as much as: Is there also among the peoples a people that is saved by the Lord as you are? In the little book Othiôth (or Othos) Rabbi Akkiva, the following is likewise found at fol. 7, col. 3: בה: עמד גרסנאל שרו של גיהנם לפני הק"ה ואמר לפניו רבונו של עולם כל אומה ואומה נתת לי שתאכלם אשי של גיהנם שנאמר לכן כאכול קש וגו' ואומה זו של ישראל מפני מה אינך נותן לי שתאכלם אשי כדרך כל אומות העולם • השיב הק"ה ואמר לו כל האומות העולם הרי הן בפתקי שלך לעשות להן כרוע מעלליהם ולדונם בתוך גיהנם אומה זה של ישראל אינה בפתקיות שלך ואין לך עסק בהן that is, the prince of hell, Nagársanel, stood before the holy and blessed God and spoke to Him: "O Lord of the world! You have given me all peoples, so that my hellish fire shall consume them, as it is said (Isa 5:24): 'Therefore as the fire's flame consumes straw, etc.' But why do you not also give me this Israelite people, so that my fire may consume them just as it does the peoples of the world?" Then the holy and blessed God answered him and spoke to him: "Behold, all the peoples of the world are in your warrant (or patent) to deal with them according to their evil works and to judge them in hell; but the Israelite people is not in your warrant, and you have nothing to do with them." Following this, the said little book Othiôth Rabbi Akkiva continues at fol. 8, col. 1: אומר מנין ששרה של גיהנם בכל יום ויום תן לי מאכל כדי סיפוקי שנאמר לכן: מהו לבלי הרחיבה שאול נפשה ופערה פיה לבלי חוק וירד הדרך והמונה ושאוניה ועלו בה. מהו לבלי חוק אלה אומות העולם שפערו גיהנם פיה עליהם על שלא קבלו את התורה ולא קיימו את המצוות בעולם הזה. כל הכותים כאין נגדו לפיכך נמסרים לאשה של גיהנם שתאכלם בבת אחת שנאמר ישובו רשעים לשאולה וגו' that is, from where is it proven that the prince of hell says daily: "Give me food so that I may have enough"? Because it is said (Isa 5:14): "Therefore hell has opened itself wide and has spread its jaws without measure, so that his glory, and his multitude, and his tumult, together with him who rejoices therein, shall descend into it." What do the words "without measure" signify? They signify the peoples of the world, over whom hell has opened its jaws, because they did not receive the Law and did not keep the commandments in this world. All Cuthean (or heathens) are counted as nothing before Him (as is to be read in Isa 40:17). Therefore they are delivered into the hellish fire, so that it may consume them all at once, as it is said (Ps 9:18): "The wicked shall go down to hell."

Further, one reads in the aforementioned booklet Othiôth Rabbi Akkiva fol. 13, col. 4. and fol. 14, col. 1. כנון כל מי שהוא דל בעולם הזה עשיר הוא לעולם הבא כנון אומות כגון ישראל מפני שהם עוסקים במצוות. עשיר בעולם הזה דל הוא לעולם הבא כנון אומות העולם ורשעים שאינם עוסקים במצוות ועשירים בעולם הזה לפי שהק"ה נותן להם שכרם בעולם הזה שנאמר ומשלם לשונאיו אל פניו להאביד מן העולם הבא ששכר מצוה אחת מן העולם הבא עין לא ראתה אלהים זולתך. ואומות העולם שאינם עוסקים במצוות מקבלים שולחנם בעולם הזה ולמה לפי שהק"ה אינו מקפח שכר כל בריה כיצד באין אומות העולם ורשעים ועושין מצוה אחת לפניו כדי שישבחו אותם וישמעו בני אדם ויכבדו אותם וכל מה שעושין רשעים אין עושין אלא לכבודם על כן הם עשירים בעולם הזה ועניים לעולם הבא

ש'אין כל אדם זוכה לשתי שולחנות. ואם יש אדם בישראל שנולד במזל טוב לחיות בעולם הזה ויכיר בוראו בכל לבבו והולך בתומו ובענוה ולא מגיס רעהו על חברו ולא אומר בלבו אני גדול מפלוגי ופלוגי ולא יענה לעניים בנבחות הלב ולא יקלל אדם שהוא קטן ויעשה מעשרו לעניים צדקה ולעשירים גמילות חסדים בהלואה ונותן דעתו בכל שעה על בוראו ואומר בשפלות וברוח נמוכה מה אני מה חסדי מה צדקתי לפני בוראי זה אוכל הפירות בעולם הזה והקרן קיימת לעולם וכל מצווה שיעשה האדם בעולם הזה ולא יעשה אותם באהבה וביראה אינו מקבל שכר מאותם מצוות שיעשה האדם בעולם הבא. ואם תמה אתה כדרכים הללו בא והסתכל בעשיו הרשע ואומות העולם שהם אוכלים מלכות וגדולה בעולם הזה וסופן שנוטריין That is: Whoever is poor in this world is rich in the world to come, just as the Israelites are, because they occupy themselves with the commandments. But whoever is rich in this world is poor in the world to come, just as the nations of the world and the wicked are, who have nothing to do with the commandments (and do not regard them, and do not study them). They are, however, rich in this world, because the holy and blessed God gives them their reward in this world, as it is said (Deut 7:10): "And He repays those who hate Him, each to his face, so that He may destroy them and deprive them of the life to come." For the reward of even a single commandment in the world to come no eye has seen, except Yours, O God. But the nations of the world, who do not apply themselves to the commandments, receive their table (that is, their reward) in this world. Why? Because God does not withhold the reward from any creature (that is, does not deprive any creature of it, as is taught in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 118, col. 1. and Báva kámma fol. 38, col. 2.). How then do the nations of the world and the wicked come to observe a commandment before Him (namely, before God the Lord)? They do it to this end: so that people will praise them when they hear of it, and honor them. For everything the wicked do, they do only for their own honor; therefore they are rich in this world but poor in the world to come, for no person deserves two tables. And when a person among the Israelites is born under a favorable star to live in this world, and acknowledges his Creator with his whole heart, and walks uprightly and humbly, and does not exalt his mind against his neighbor, and does not think in his heart "I am greater than this one or that one," and does not answer the poor with a proud heart, and does not curse any person who is lowly (or insignificant), and gives alms to the poor from his wealth, and shows kindness to the rich by lending, and directs his mind every hour toward his Creator, and speaks with a lowly and humble spirit: "What am I? What is my kindness? What is my almsgiving before my Creator?" such a person enjoys the fruits in this world, and the principal remains for the world to come (which he is to receive in the life to come). But concerning all the commandments that a person performs in this world without performing them out of love and fear, he receives no reward for them in the world to come. And if you marvel at these ways, then come and consider the wicked Esau and the nations of the world, who rule and are great in this world, but are in the end cast out from the world to come (and the eternal life) and have no share in it, as it is said (Obad 1:18): "And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, but the house of Esau shall be stubble."

On this topic, the book Nézach Israël fol. 29, col. 3, in the 19th chapter (also read subsequently: האומות סופם בעולם הזה ואין ראויים לעולם הבא ולכך השם יתברך נותן להם שכרם שהוא בסוף בעולם הזה שהוא סופם של אומות ולא כן ישראל אשר מזומנים לעולם הבא וכיון שבך הוא אין ראוי שיקבלו השכר שהוא שלמות בעולם הזה אבל שכרם הוא בסוף לכך שכרם אינו רק לעולם הבא ומה שאוכלים בעולם הזה אינו רק פירות כי עקר That is: The end of the nations is in this world, and they are not worthy of the world to come; therefore the holy and blessed GOD gives them their reward, which is the end of this world, and this is the end of the nations. With the Israelites, however, it is not so constituted, for they are appointed to the world to come. Since this is the case, it is not fitting that they should receive the reward that consists in perfection in this world; rather, their reward is to be awaited at the last, and therefore they receive it in the life to come. And what they enjoy in this world is only the fruits, for the principal reward, which is the essence of the reward, is due to them only at the last.) Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman likewise teaches on this matter in his book Torat adam fol. 90, col. 4, under the title Schâar baggemûl, in the following manner: אי אפשר לאומות בלא צדקה ומעשים נאים ואי אפשר לישראל בלא עבירות אלא שהאומות עובדי כו'ם אובדין בעונש ע'א שלהם לגיהנם ואבודן וישראל חלקם בחיים שדבקים ביוצר הכל יתברך ולפיכך הדין מתוח כנגד כל ישראל ליפרע מהן מלכלוך עונות בעולם הזה ומדת הטוב פרושה על האומות הנו 'לשלם להם שכר בעולם הזה על מעשים נאים וצדקה שעושין זהו שנאמר רק אתכם ידעתי מכל משפחות האדמה על כן אפקוד עליכם That is: It is impossible that the nations should be without almsgiving and good works, and it is impossible that the Israelites should be without transgressions. The idolatrous nations, however, are lost through the punishment of their idolatry into hell and into destruction; the Israelites, on the other hand, have their portion in life, inasmuch as they cleave to the blessed Creator of all things; therefore judgment is stretched out against all Israelites, so that they are punished in this world on account of the filth of their transgressions. The attribute of goodness, however, is spread over the aforementioned nations, so that their reward in this world for their good works and the alms they give may be rendered to them; as it is said (Amos 3:2): "You only have I known of all the families of the earth; therefore I will visit upon you all your iniquities."

Furthermore, concerning the damnation of all seventy nations, Rabbi Bechai writes the following in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 79, col. 3. on the words of Ps 49:3, "Both the sons of man and the sons of the man": גם בני איש אלו בניו That is: By "the sons of the man" are understood the children of Noah, who (Gen 9:6) is called a righteous man. It is also interpreted in another way, namely that the seventy nations are thereby understood, who descend into hell. Likewise, in the Jalkut Shimoni on the Psalms, fol. 106, col. 2. numero 757., one reads: בני אדם אלו בני אברהם וגו' בני איש אלו בניו של נח וגו' אלו שבעים אומות העתידים לירד לגיהנם That is: "The sons of man" are the sons of Abraham, &c. "The sons of the man" are the sons of Noah, &c.; these are the seventy nations who will descend into hell. And in the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, one reads at fol. 132, col. 1 in the Parascha Schemini that GOD permitted the nations of the world to eat all foods, because they are all damned, and the words read as follows: למה הדבר דומה לרופא שהלך לבקר שני חולים אחד יש בו סכנה אמר להן תנו לו כל מה שמבקש לאכול נכנס לשני אמר להן תנו לו מאכל פלוני ואל תתנו לו מאכל פלוני לימים שחזור לו המאכלים כולם מת וזה שהתיר לו מקצת ואסר לו מקצת, נתרפא. אמרו לו מה זאת אמר להן זה שראיתי בו סימני חיים התרתי לו זה ומנעתי ממנו זה וזה שראיתי בו סימני מיתה התרתי לו את הכל כך התיר הקב"ה לאומות שקצים ורמשים וכל העבירות לפי שהם מוכנים לגיהנם אבל ישראל שהם לחיים אמר להם את זה תאכלו ואת זה לא תאכלו That is: To what is the matter comparable? To a physician who went to visit two sick men. With the one there was danger, and he said to those present (namely, to those who were with him): give him everything to eat that he desires. Afterward he went to the second, and said to them: give him this and that food, and do not give him this and that food. Some days later, the one to whom he had permitted all foods died, but the one to whom he had permitted some foods and forbidden others had been cured. He was then asked why he had done this, and he answered: the one in whom I saw signs of recovery, I permitted him this and forbidden him that; but the one in whom I saw signs of death, I permitted him everything. Thus the holy and blessed GOD permitted the nations abominable things and vermin, as well as all transgressions, because they are destined for hell; but to the Israelites, who are appointed for life, He said: this you shall eat, and that you shall not eat. This same passage is also to be found in the book Toledoth Yitzhak fol. 71, col. 1. in the aforementioned Parascha Schemini, and in the book Akédath Yitzhak fol. 171, col. 3., and in Vajikra rabba fol. 146, col. 2. in the 13th Parascha, and in the book Ir gibborim fol. 83, col. 2. numero 275, as well as in the Jalkut Schimoni on the prophet Habakkuk, fol. 83, col. 4. numero 563.

Regarding the reason why the peoples of the world are to be condemned, it is stated in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 90, col. 4, in the Parascha Jethro, that this occurs because they did not accept the Law of Moses, and the words read as follows: אמרו רז"ל שחיטת נכרי נבלה ומטמא:

במשא לפי שהם מצד שמאל ולפי שלא קבלו התורה שכתוב בה מימינו אש דת למו הן נידונין במשא לפי שהם מצד שמאל ולפי שלא קבלו התורה שכתוב בה מימינו אש דת למו הן נידונין:

That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that what a stranger (that is, one who is not a Jew) slaughters is to be regarded as carrion, and defiles when it is carried, because they are from the left side (namely, from the side of the devils), and because they did not accept the Law, in which it is written (Deut 33:2): At His right hand is a fiery law unto them; therefore they are condemned to the fire of hell.

But in the book Pesikta Sotárta, the reason given for the condemnation of the peoples is that they translated the Law of Moses, and it is read there, fol. 83, col. 4, in the Parascha Ki tavo, on the words of Deut 27:3, "And you shall write upon them (namely, upon the stones) all the words of this Law," as follows: תנו רבנן : כיצד כתבו ישראל את התורה רבי יהודה : אומר על גבי אבנים כתובה שנאמר וכתבת על האבנים את כל דברי התורה הזאת באר היטב ואחר כך סדו אותם בסייד . אמר לו רבי שמעון לדבריהך היאך למדו אומות העולם תורה אמר . להם בינה יתירה נתן בהם ה"קבה ושיגרו נוטרין שלהם וקלפו את הסיד והעתיקה ועל דבר That is: Our Rabbis teach: How did the Israelites write the Law? Rabbi Jehuda said: they wrote it on stones, as it is stated (Deut 27:3): And you shall write upon the stones all the words of this Law plainly; after which they covered them with lime. Then Rabbi Simeon said: according to your words, how then did the peoples of the world learn the Law? He answered them: the Holy Blessed God gave them an extraordinary understanding, and they sent their notaries or court scribes, who scraped off the lime and translated it. For this reason the decree of judgment upon the peoples was sealed, that they shall descend into the pit of destruction, as it is written (Isa 33:12): For the peoples shall be burned to lime, on account of the lime (which they scraped away). This, however, is taken from the Talmudic tractate Sóta, fol. 35, col. 2, and in the Talmud the following is further written on this matter: מה סיד אין לו תקנה אלא : שריפה : That is: Just as lime cannot be set right but must be burned, so too the peoples of the world cannot be set right but must be burned. The word "burning," however, is interpreted by Rabbi Salomon Jarchi in his commentary thereon in the following manner, where he says: שריפה גיהנם שכל זמן שאינו מתגיירין והן קרויינ עמים אין חלקם אלא : שריפה : That is: The word "burning" signifies hell, for as long as they do not adopt the Jewish faith and are called peoples, they have nothing to expect but that they shall be burned to lime. The aforementioned Rabbi Salomon Jarchi also teaches in his commentary on the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 4, col. 1, as follows: ישראל נפרע מהן הק"בה את כל עונותיהן בעולם הזה כדי שיזכו : That is: The Holy Blessed God punishes the Israelites for their sins in this world, so that they may be found righteous on the day of judgment; but the peoples of the world He does not punish at all, so that He may cast them out of the world to come. He further writes in the said commentary, fol. 18, col. 2, as follows: גידונין אומות העולם לגיהנם: That is: The peoples of the world are condemned to hell.

In the Jalkut Shimoni on the Psalms, one reads likewise at fol. 100, col. 4, numero 714: להעמיד לבא הק"ה מביא כל אומה ואומה ואלהיה עמה וכל אומה ואומה תהא: קוראה באלהיה ואין עונה אותם וכיון שרואין שאין באלהיה ממש כמו שנאמר יזעק אליו ולא יענה הולכין להק"ה מיד הוא דן אותן וטורדן לגיהנם ומתביישין ומתערעמין לפני הק"ה ומחזירן וקורא אילונין שלהם והוא מחזירן שוב לגיהנם לכך כתיב ב' פעמים יבושו ויבהלו: that is, in the time to come the Holy Blessed God will cause every single nation to come together with its gods, and every nation will call upon its gods, but none will answer them. When they then see that there is nothing to their gods, as it is said (Isa 46:7): one cries out to him, yet he does not answer; they will go to the Holy Blessed God, but He will immediately judge them and cast them into hell; then they will be ashamed and lodge their complaint before the Holy Blessed God, and He will let them come back again and read their obligation, or their bond of debt, and thereupon let them go back into hell again; therefore it is written twice (Ps 6:11): all my enemies must be put to shame and be greatly terrified. In the aforementioned Jalkut Shimoni on the prophet Micah, at fol. 81, col. 3-4, at the end of numero 551, concerning the words of Mic 4:5, "For every people will walk in the name of its god," the following is also found: לשיד לבא באים כל שרי אומות העולם לפני הקדוש ברוך הוא ומקטרגים על ישראל ואומרים לפניו רבנו של עולם אלו עובדי אלילים ואלו עובדי אלילים אלו מגלים עריות ואלו מגלים עריות הללו שופכי דמים והללו שופכי דמים הללו יורדים לגיהנם והללו אין יורדים אמר להם אם כן הוא כל אומה ואומה תרד עם אלהיה כי כל העמים ילכו איש בשם אלהיו: that is, in the time to come all the princes of the nations of the world (understand by these the seventy evil angels, mention of whom was made in the eighteenth chapter of the first part) will come before the Holy Blessed God and accuse the Israelites, saying before Him: Lord of the world, these (namely the seventy nations) have committed idolatry, and those (namely the Israelites) have also practiced idolatry; these have committed fornication, and those have also committed fornication; these have shed blood, and those have also shed blood; these descend into hell, but those do not descend into it (why then are they not treated equally with one another?). Then He will say to them: if that is the case, then every single nation shall descend and take its gods with it, for every people will walk in the name of its god. Precisely the same is also to be found in the aforementioned Jalkut Shimoni on the Psalms, fol. 94, col. 4, numero 665, and in the Midrash Tillim, fol. 3, col. 4.

ללבנה ועכ"ם להמה מה הלבנה מושלת ביום ובלילה כן ישראל יש להם חלק בעולם הזה ובעולם הבא ומה חמה שאין מושלת אלא ביום כך אין לעכ"ם חלק אלא בעולם אחד ולא בעולם הבא: that is, our rabbis of blessed memory have said that the Israelites are like the moon, but the idolaters are like the sun. Just as the moon reigns by day and by night, so the Israelites have a share in this world and in the world to come (or in this life and in eternal life). But just as the sun reigns only by day, so the idolaters have a share in only one world (that is, in this life), but not in the world to come, or in eternal life. Furthermore, in Bereschith rabba fol. 19, col. 2., at the beginning of the 19th Parascha, the following is read: לעתיד לבוא הקדוש ברוך הוא נוטל את עכ"ם ומורידם לגיהנם: that is, in the future the holy blessed God will take the idolatrous peoples and cast them into hell. And in Bamidbar rabba, it is written at fol. 173, col. 1., in the second Parascha: לעתיד לבוא הם נכנסין לגיהנם ועכ"ם נכנסין שם ואלו הם נכנסין לתוכה ואובדין וישראל יוצאין מתוכה בשלום שנאמר כי תלך במו אש לא תכוה למה כי אני יי מחזיק ימינך: that is, in the future they (namely the Israelites) will go into hell, and the idolaters will also go in. These will go in and perish, but the Israelites will come back out unharmed, as it is said (Isa 43:2): "When you walk through the fire, you shall not be burned." Why? (Because it is written in Isa 41:13:) "For I am the LORD, who strengthens your right hand." In the lesser Jalkut Rubeni, under numero 9., under the title Gebennom, drawn from the Jalkut Schimóni on Esaïam fol. 57, col. 1. numero 360., the following is also read: לעתיד יעברו עכ"ם על גשר של גיהנם ויהיה לפנייהם כחוט ונופלים לפנייהם לגיהנם ומיד ישראל מתייראים אמרו רבותו של עולם תאמר לעשות עם אלו תעשה עמנו אמר להם מי אתם אמרו לו עמך ונחלתך אמר להם מי מעיד עליכם אמר לו אברהם כו' מי מעיד יותר א"ל יצחק כו' מי מעיד יותר. that is, in the future the idolaters will walk over the bridge of hell, and it will be like a thread before them, and they will fall forward into hell. The Israelites will immediately be afraid on account of this and will say (to God): "You, Lord of the world, tell us whether you will do to us as you have done to them (the idolaters)." Then He will ask them: "Who are you?" And they will answer: "We are your people and your inheritance." He will further ask them: "Who bears witness for you?" And they will say: "Abraham, etc." (He will ask them further:) "Who testifies more?" And they will say to Him: "Isaac, etc." He will ask them once more: "Who testifies more?" And they will say to Him: "Jacob, etc." At that moment the holy blessed God will walk before them (over the bridge). Rabbi Bechai also writes in his book Cad hakkémach fol. 34, col. 3. in the following manner: ידוע כילא נברא גן עדן אלא לצורך אותם המייחדים שמו בכוונה המודה בייחוד הלא הוא כופר בע"ז וכל המודה בע"ז כופר בייחוד וגיהנם בשבע מדוריו לא נברא אלא לעובדי ע"ז: that is, it is known that paradise, together with its excellences, was created solely for the benefit of those who hold His (namely God's) name alone before God with devotion. Does not he who confesses the unity (of God) thereby deny the idols? But he who confesses idolatry denies the unity of God, and hell with its seven dwellings was created solely for the idolaters. Since the Jews regard all peoples as idolaters, they must, according to their own teaching, all be damned. See also his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 195, col. 2., in the Parascha Vaëthchannán, concerning this matter.

Concerning the uncircumcised, they teach exactly the same thing, for in the small Jalkut Rubéni, number 4, under the title Mila, the following is written: נברא גיהנם למטה למי שלא קיבל ברית מילה ולא האמינו בהק"ב ולא שמרו שבת, That is: The lowest hell was created for those who have not accepted the covenant of circumcision, and who do not believe in the holy blessed God, and who have not kept the Sabbath. And in the book Toledóth Jitzchak, fol. 23, col. 2, at the end of the Parashah Lech lechá, one reads: גדולה מילה שכל מי שהוא מהול אינו יורד לגיהנם וגו' ומי יורד לגיהנם מי שכתוב אחריו את הקני ואת הקניזי ואת הקדמוני שכולם יורדו לגיהנם וגו' ערלי לב וכל ע"ז יורדין לגיהנם וגו', That is: Circumcision is a great matter, for whoever is circumcised does not go to hell, etc. Who then goes to hell? Those who are described in what follows (Gen 15:19): the Kenites, the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites, for they are all uncircumcised in their hearts; and all idolaters go to hell, etc. The very same thing is also to be found in the Médrasch Tillim, fol. 7, col. 2, on the sixth Psalm. I have therefore also found the following in a handwritten commentary on the Machsor: עתיד הק"ב להטביע אומות העולם בגיהנם על שלא קיבלו עליהם את המילה שנאמר לכן הרחיבה שאול נפשה ופעה פיה לבלי חוק ואין חוק אלא מילה שנאמר ויעמידה ליעקב לחוק, That is: The holy blessed God will plunge the nations of the world into hell, because they have not accepted circumcision, as it is said (Isa 5:14): Therefore hell has opened itself wide and has opened its maw without chok or measure. By the word chok, however, which signifies a measure and a law, nothing other than circumcision is understood, as it is said (1 Chr 16:17 and Ps 105:10): And He established the same as a chok for Jacob, that is, as a law. Something on this subject may also be read in Schemoth rábba, fol. 111, col. 1, in the 19th Parashah.

Until now we have seen what the rabbis teach in general concerning the damnation of all peoples; now we shall also see what they write in this matter specifically concerning Christians and Turks. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, the following is read at fol. 220, col. 4, in the Parashah Nizzavim: שתי האומות האלה קראן שלמה שתי בנות והזכיר שהן מזומנות לגיהנם הוא שאמר לעלוקה שתי בנות הב הב כי המשל גיהנם שהוא מקום הדין והמשפט לנפשות הרשעים לעלוקה שמוציאה הדם שהוא הנפש ועליהן אמר ישעיה עליו השלום המתקדשים והמטהרים אל הגנות המתקדשים אלו בני ארום שדרךן לנענע אצבעותיהן לכאן ולכאן והמטהרים אלו בני ישמעאל שדרךם לרחוץ ידיהם ורגליהם ולא לכם שהוא העיקר וגו' אוכלי אוכלי בשר That is: These two peoples Solomon calls (Prov 30:15) two daughters, and states that they are appointed to hell; and this is what he says: the leech has two daughters, "Give, give!" For he compares hell, which is the place of judgment and punishment for the souls of the wicked, to a leech, which draws out the blood, namely the soul. And of these same peoples Esaias speaks, upon whom be peace (in chapter 66, v. 17): "Those who sanctify themselves and purify themselves in the gardens." Those who sanctify themselves are the children of Edom (that is, the Christians), whose custom is to move their fingers back and forth (when they make the sign of the cross); and those who purify themselves are the children of Ismael (that is, the Turks), who are accustomed to washing their hands and feet, but not their hearts, which is the most important thing, etc. Those who eat swine's flesh are the children of Edom; those who eat abominations and mice are the children of Ismael; they shall be taken away together, says the Lord. This is also to be found in the book Gad hakkémach, fol. 20, col. 1. And in the little book Othióth Rabbi Akkiva it is read at fol. 15, col. 2-3, that God did not reveal the Schem hammphorasch to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the following passage comes after: לֹא גִלָּה לְאַבְרָהָם מִפְּנֵי שְׂמוּאֵל נֹפֶל לְגִיָּהֶם. לִיצְחָק מִפְּנֵי That is: He did not reveal it to Abraham, because the seed of Ismael goes down to hell; nor to Isaac, because the seed of Esau goes down to hell. Something on this subject can also be found in Rabbi Joseph ben Jachja's commentary on Ps 140:11.

Regarding the Christians alone, the following is taught in the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 34, col. 4, in the Parascha Toledoth: של גיהנם מזומן לכת של ועוד ירמוזו לנו הפרשה כי גיהנם מזומן לכת של עשו וגן עדן מזומן לכת יעקב ובניו הוא שדרשו רז"ל כי בשבאו שני האחים האלה לפני אביהם ליטול הברכות שנכנס עם האחד גן עדן ועם האחר גיהנם גן עדן נכנס עם יעקב וגיהנם נכנס עם עשו וגוי' וכן דרשו רז"ל כי העולה זו מלכות הרשעה שהיא מעלה את עצמה שנאמר אם That תגביה כנשר וגוי' על מוקדה זה גיהנם לעתיד לבוא ובעולם הזה ויהיבת ליקידת אשא is: Furthermore, this Parascha signifies that hell is prepared for the company of Esau (that is, for the Christians), but paradise is appointed for the company of Jacob and his children (that is, for the Jews). This is what our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have taught: that when these two brothers (namely Esau and Jacob) came before their father to receive the blessings (of which one may read in Gen 27:18, 31), paradise entered with the one and hell with the other (into their father's presence). Paradise entered with Jacob, and hell entered with Esau, etc. Likewise, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, interpreted the words (Lev 6:9, "The burnt offering shall burn") to mean that the burnt offering signifies the godless kingdom (that is, the Roman Empire and all of Christendom), which exalts itself, as it is said (Obad 1:4): "Though you soar aloft like the eagle," etc.; but by the burning, the future hell is to be understood, and that in this world the same (godless kingdom) shall be given over to be consumed by fire. That hell entered with Esau to his father is taken from Bereschith-rabba fol. 60, col. 1, in the 65th Parascha, where it is written as follows: בישעה שנכנס אבינו יעקב אצל אביו נכנס עמו גן עדן הדא הוא דאמר ליה ראה ריה בני כריח שדה ובשעה That is: At the time when our father Jacob went in to his father, paradise also went in with him; this is what he said to him (Gen 27:27): "See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field." But when Esau went in to his father, hell went in with him; and this is what is said (Prov 11:2): "When pride comes, then comes disgrace." Rabbi Bechai therefore intends, in the words cited above, to indicate that because hell is said to have entered with Esau, it was thereby signified that he and his descendants are damned and shall come into hell. Concerning such damnation of Esau, one may also read in the book Zerór hammór fol. 27, col. 1, in the Parascha Toledóth Yitzbak: עשו הרשע אין לו חלק לעולם הבא That is: The godless Esau has no share in the life to come; on which subject more may also be seen at fol. 135, col. 2, in the Parascha Ekef of the same work.

The reason why hell went in with Esau to his father Isaac is indicated in the book Ammudéba schif'a, fol. 20, col. 1. under the title Ammud scheni, with these words: אמרו רז"ל במדרש לך לך שהראה הקב"ה לאברהם גיהנם ומלכיות ובירר אברהם: גלות לפטור בניו מגיהנם וז"ש בקש יעקב לישב בשלוה ר"ל אברהם לא בקש לישב בשלוה ובירר גלות לפטור בניו מגיהנם אבל יעקב בקש לישב בשלוה שבירר גיהנם ולפטור ממלכיות כי היה סבר שצער גיהנם אינו גדול כל כך כמו צער הגלות ולפיכך קפץ עליו רוגזו של יוסף שנאבד ממנו ואז היה יעקב בוכה ומצטער ביותר ומאנה הנחם נפשו על דתו בשאול גיהנם ואז ראה האמת שצער גיהנם הוא יותר גדול מצער מלכיות וחזר והסכים לדעת אברהם שבירר מלכיות ולפטור מגיהנם אך יש לנו לידע למה נכנס מגיהנם עם עשו עכשיו יותר מזמנים אחרים ומצאנו וראינו בגלוי רזיא מאמר אחד ויהיה תשובה לזה וז"ל כשהיה יצחק רוצה לקלל את יעקב בשביל שרימה אותו ולקה הברכות ברמאות נראה לו מלאך ששמו אופה והראה גיהנם פתוח מתחתיו הבא חזר יצחק ממחשבתו ואמר גם ברוך יהיה ע"כ, ואם כן היה בהכרח שיכנס הגיהנם עם עשו עשו דוקא כי בבוא עשו ראה יצחק שיעקב רימה אותו ורצה לקללו ובראותו הגיהנם הזכרה לחוץ וגו': that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said in the Medrasch of the Parascha Lech lecha that the holy, blessed God showed Abraham hell and the kingdoms (of the peoples of the world, or the four Monarchies), and that Abraham chose the exilium, or misery and captivity, so that his children might be free from hell; and this is what is meant when it is said that Jacob desired to dwell in peace and quiet, that is, Abraham did not desire to sit in rest, but chose the exilium or misery so that his children might be freed from hell; Jacob, however, wished to dwell in peace and quiet, and chose hell in order to be free from the kingdoms (and the misery under them), since he believed that the torment of hell was not so great as the torment of the exilii or misery; therefore the wrath of Joseph came upon him, in that

Joseph was lost to him. Then Jacob wept and grieved all the more, and would not be comforted, since Joseph (in his opinion had died and) had descended into the pit of hell. Then he saw the truth, that the pain of hell is greater than the torment endured under the kingdoms, and he came to agree with Abraham's view, who had chosen the kingdoms (that is, the misery under the four Monarchies) in order to be free from hell. We must, however, know why hell went in with Esau at this time more than at other times; and we find and see in the (book) Gale rašaja, in a Maámar, that the following answer is given to this. When Isaac had wanted to curse Jacob because he had deceived him and received the blessings by deceit, an angel appeared to him by the name of Ephob, and showed him hell standing open beneath him; whereupon Isaac drew back from his intention and said (as may be seen in Gen 27:33): "He shall also remain blessed." Thus far are the words of the Gale rašaja. If this is so, then hell necessarily had to go in with Esau, for when Esau had come, Isaac saw that Jacob had deceived him and wanted to curse him; but when he saw hell, he was compelled to draw back (and to refrain from the cursing, etc.)

In the book Schááre órab the following is found concerning this at fol. 49, col. 1-2: דע כי בראות יצחק אבינו עליו השלום כי שני עולמות הם העולם הזה והעולם הבא 1-2: וראה את ישראל דחופים ומצטערים בעולם הזה וראה מדתו שהיא מדת הדין מהווה על על ישראל נצטער ואמר מה יעשו בני ידי הגוים שבעים אומות והיאך ינהגו ביניהם בגלותם אמר מוטב שאתן לעשו בני ברכת העולם הזה הבא על ידי מאכל ומשתה כדי שימשול על ישראל מאחר שיחטאו ישראל ויפלו בגלות. יותר טוב הוא שיפלו בגלות עשו אחיהם משיפלו בגלות אחרים נכרים שהם שבעים אומות. ואמר יצחק מאחר שאי אפשר שלא תגבה מדת הדין החוב שלה מישראל יותר טוב הוא שתגבה החוב על ידי אחיהם משתגבה אותו על ידי נכרי. וזהו סוד לא תתעב אדומי כי אחיך הוא. ולפיכך אהב יצחק את עשו מפני שהוא התיקון ויעקב שלא יפלו בניו בגיהנם. וכשראה שנפלטו בני יעקב מגיהנם והם נצודים בגלות עשו שמח וזהו סוד כי ציד בפיו. ולפי שהענין כך אמר יצחק אין עשו ראוי לירש ברכה עליונה שכלית אבל: הוא יורש ברכה התחתונה גופנית ראוי לברכו על דבר גופני שהוא דבר שהגוף נהנה בו וגומר: that is, know that when our father Isaac, upon whom be peace, had seen that there are two worlds, namely this world and the world to come, and had observed that the Israelites were to be driven and afflicted in this world, and had perceived that his attribute, which is the attribute of judgment, would extend itself over the Israelites, it grieved him, and he said: what will my children do under the power of the heathens, the seventy peoples, and how will they be governed among them in their exilio or misery? Thereupon he said: it is better that I give my son Esau the blessing of this world, which comes through eating and drinking, so that he may rule over Israel, after the Israelites sin and fall into the exilium or misery. It is better that they fall into the exilium or captivity under their brother Esau than that they fall under the captivity of the other foreigners, who are the seventy peoples. Isaac also said: since it is impossible that the attribute of judgment should not exact its debt from Israel, it is better that it exact the debt through their brother than that it collect it through a foreigner; and this is the mystery of the words (Deut 23:7): "You shall not abhor an Edomite, for he is your brother." For this reason Isaac also loved Esau, since Jacob is set right through him, so that his children might not descend into hell. When Jacob saw that his children were to be freed from hell and driven into Esau's captivity, he rejoiced; and this is the mystery of the words (Gen 25:28): "Because he brought him venison in his mouth." Since the matter was thus constituted, Isaac said: Esau is not worthy to inherit the higher spiritual blessing, but he shall inherit the lower bodily blessing; it is fitting to bless him in a bodily matter, which is a thing that the body enjoys, etc.

It is also said that Esau sold Jacob eternal life, concerning which the book Nézacch Israël, fol. 25, col. 3., in the 15th chapter, on the words of Gen 25:31, "Sell me today your birthright," from the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, the following is written: אמרו כשהיו יעקב ועשו במעי אמן אמר יעקב לעשו אחי שני עולמות לפנינו עולם הזה ועולם הבא עולם הזה יש בו אכילה ושתיה ומשא ומתן לישא אשה ולהוליד בנים ובנות ועולם הבא אין בו כל המדות הללו רצונך טול את עולם הזה ואני עולם הבא שנאמר מכרה כיום בכורתך לי באותה שעה שהיה בבטן אמן מיד כפר עשו בתחיית המתים ואמר אני הולך למות ולמה לי זה בכורה באותה שעה נטל עשו חלקו בעולם הזה ויעקב נטל שוכרו בעולם הבא : that is, it is said that when Jacob and Esau were in their mother's womb, Jacob said to Esau: "My brother, there are two worlds before us, this world and the world to come. In this world one eats and drinks, carries on trade, takes wives, and begets sons and daughters; but in the world to come none of this takes place. If you wish, take this world, and I will take the world to come," as it is said: "Sell me today your birthright." At that time, while Esau was still in their mother's womb, he immediately denied the resurrection of the dead and said (as may be seen in v. 32): "I am going to die; what then is the birthright to me?" At that same hour Esau took his portion in this world, and Jacob took his reward in the world to come. But what befell the patriarchs of old is said to have been a prefiguration for their descendants, as may be found in the book Zerór hammór fol. 30, col. 4., in the Parascha Vajéze, where it is stated: מה שאירע לאבות סימן לבנים : that is, what happened to the fathers was a sign for the children. This can also be read in the book Mikráē hakkódesh by Rabbi Samiga, fol. 50, col. 2., in the second chapter. For this reason it is also written in the book Ir gibbórim, fol. 52, col. 3., on the words of the Midrash וגו' אדם תבשילו אדם : that is, "He (namely Esau) is red, his food is red, &c.," the following: לפי מדרש זה יש רמז שהאומות בני עשו אין להם חלק לעולם הבא : that is, according to this Midrash it is signified that the nations who are the children of Esau have no portion in the life to come. And in Bereschith rábba, fol. 5, col. 4., in the sixth Parascha, the following is read: אמר רב נחמן עשו מונה לחמה שהיא גדולה ויעקב מונה ללבנה שהיא קטנה. אמר רב נחמן זהו סימן טב עשו מונה לחמה שהיא גדולה מה חמה הזאת שולטת ביום ואינה שולטת בלילה כך עשו יש לו חלק that is, Esau (that is, Christendom) reckons (the year) by the sun, which is great, but Jacob (that is, Jewry) reckons by the moon, which is small. Just as the sun rules by day and not by night, so Esau has a portion in this world but not in the world to come. Precisely the same is also found in the book Menorath hammaor, fol. 35, col. 2., in the first chapter, under the title Ner schelisch, kelal revii, chelek rischon. In Bammidbar rabba it is also stated, fol. 198, col. 3., in the eleventh Parascha, that the Edomites, who are the descendants of Esau, must go into the eternal fire.

Concerning the foregoing, Rabbi Eliezer writes in his 44th chapter that all Amalekites are condemned, and his words read as follows: רבי שילא אומר רצה הקב"ה להכרית ולהשמיד את כל זרעו של עמלק מה עשה הקב"ה פשט יד ימינו ואחז בכסא כבודו ונשבע להכרית ולהשמיד את כל זרעו של עמלק מן העולם הזה ומן העולם הבא שנאמר בעמלק : that is, Rabbi Shela says: the holy blessed God wished to root out and destroy the entire seed of Amalek. What then did God do? He stretched out His right hand, seized the throne of His glory, and swore that He would root out and destroy the entire seed of Amalek from this world and from the world to come, as it is said (Exod 17:16): "For the hand of the LORD is a war of the LORD against Amalek." And in the book Lef Arjeh, at fol. 104, col. 3, concerning the words of Exod 17:13, "And Joshua defeated Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword," one reads: נידונו בסיף ולכך : שחיו בעולם הזה ובעולם הבא שאין לו חלק : that is, they were executed by the sword; therefore He (namely God) also commanded (Deut 25:19): "You shall blot out the memory of the Amalekites from under heaven." Likewise, in the book Mekhilta, fol. 21, col. 2, in the parashah Beshallah, at the beginning of the second parashah, one reads: עמלק בא להזיק את ישראל ואבדו הקב"ה מחיי עולם הזה ומחיי עולם הבא שני כי מחה אמה : that is, Amalek came to harm the Israelites; therefore the holy blessed God destroyed him from the life of this world and from the life of the world to come, as it is said (Exod 17:14): "For I will utterly blot out," etc. Now, since Christians are called the children and seed of Amalek, as was shown in the 16th chapter of the first part, this applies to Christians as well, and they are condemned under the name of Amalek.

Furthermore, concerning the damnation of Christians, the following is written in the book Cad hakkemach fol. 17, col. 4.: לעתיד לבוא מלכות רומי הרשעה : על ידי שתתאנה ומעלה ומעלה את עצמה וגל נידונת באש שנאמר חזה הוית עד דקטילת חיותא והוכר גשמה ויהיבת ליקידת אשא. ובפרק השותפין דרשו ז"ל המיתיר נופל בגיהנם : שנאמר וד יחד לץ שמו עושה בעברה זרון ואין עברה אלא גיהנם שנאמר יום עברה יום ההוא : that is, in the future the godless Roman Empire (that is, Christendom, as was mentioned in the seventeenth chapter of the first part) will, because it is proud and exalts itself, etc., be judged in fire, as it is said (Dan 7:11): I watched until the beast was slain, and its body perished and was thrown into the fire. And in the first chapter of the Talmudic tractate Báva báthra, our rabbis of blessed memory teach that a proud person goes down to hell, as it is said (Prov 21:24): The proud and haughty man is called a scoffer, who acts with arrogant wrath. By wrath, however, hell is understood, as it is said (Zeph 1:15): For that day is a day of wrath. And in Rabbi Lipmann's Sepher Nizzachon, at pagina 14, at the end of the eighth numerus, the following is read: הלא על הנוצרי נבא בלעם אוי מי יהיה משומו אל כי אוי לכל אותם שיהיו מן אותו שישים עצמו אל כי אוי לכלם שהרי לשאינם מאמינים בו מצרים והמאמינים בו יאברו לעולם. הבא כמו שמסיים וצים מיד כיתים וענו אשור וענו עבר וגם הוא עדי אובד. וידוע שהכיתים הם רומיים וניכרו שהם יענו את אשור ויענו את הברון: that is, did not Balaam prophesy concerning the Nazarene (that is, Christ), when he speaks (Num 24:23, as the Jews interpret it wrongly): Alas, who shall live when God appoints him? For woe to those who shall be of him who sets himself up as a God! Woe to them all! For they shall afflict those who do not believe in him; but those who do believe in him shall be lost in the world to come, as he (Balaam) concludes his words when he says: And ships from Chittim shall afflict Asshur, and shall also afflict Eber, but he too shall perish. Now it is well known that the Romans are understood by the Chittites, and accordingly they shall afflict Asshur and the Hebrews, and for that very reason they shall be lost in the world to come. In the old Nizzáchon, at pagina 143, the following is also written concerning fasting on Friday: ותשאל להם למה הן מתעניין ביום הששי אם בעבור שישו נתלה על ידי תליתו בו ביום: אם כן היה להם לעשות יום משתה ושמחה כי לפי דבריהם בו יודו לעולוקה למכשול ויסורין ניצלו מגיהנם: אף הם מתאבלים כי ידוע להם שכל המאמינים בו יודו לעולוקה למכשול ולפוקה: that is, ask them (namely the Christians) why they fast on the sixth day (meaning Friday): whether it is because Jesus was crucified on that same day. If that is the reason, then they ought to hold a feast on that day and be merry, since, according to their own account, they have been redeemed from hell through his crucifixion and his suffering. But they mourn on account of this, because they know that all who believe in him will go to the bloodsucker (that is, hell), and will stumble and waver. In this manner, something may also be read concerning the damnation of Christians in Rabbi Joseph ben Jachja's commentary on the Psalms, on Pss 88 and 119.

From all of the above, we can clearly see that, according to Jewish teaching, no Christian can be saved. A chief rabbi in Amsterdam also stated this openly to the highly learned Mr. Wülfern, as he reports in his annotations on the Jewish Theriaca at pagina 250, and gave him to understand thereby that whoever regards Christ as a God, renders Him divine honor, and worships Him, commits idolatry, and for that reason cannot partake of eternal salvation. Idolatry, however, as mentioned above, is forbidden to the children of Noah, and an idolater cannot be counted among the pious of the nations of the world. Now, Rabbi Moses bar Maimon did write, in the little book called Iggereth lehammáor haggádol, to Rabbi Chasdai as follows: ומה ששאלת על האומות הוי יודע דרהמנא לבא בעי ואחר כוונת הלב הם הם הדברים ועל כן אמרו חכמי האמת רבותינו עליהם השלום חסידי אומות העולם יש להם חלק לעולם הבא אם השיגו מה שראוי להשיג מידיעת הבורא יתברך והתקינו נפשם במדות הטובות. ואין בדבר ספק שכל מי שהתקין נפשו בכשרות המדות וכשרות החכמה באמנות הבורא יתברך בודאי הוא מבני העולם הבא. ועל כן אמרו חכמי האמת רבותינו ע"ה אפילו גוי ועוסק בתורת משה רבינו עליו השלום הרי הוא ככהן גדול: that is, As for what you have asked concerning the nations (whether they too can be saved), know that the merciful God desires the heart, and that they speak according to the intention of the heart. For this reason, the theologians, our Rabbis, upon whom be peace, say that the pious of the nations of the world have a share in the life to come, when they comprehend what is fitting to comprehend of the knowledge of the blessed Creator, and improve themselves in good virtues (and observe them). And there is no doubt in the matter that everyone who rightly improves himself in virtues and in wisdom in faith in the blessed Creator will certainly be one of the children of the life to come (the blessed life); for this reason the theologians, our Rabbis, upon whom be peace, also say that even a Goi or heathen who studies in the Law of Moses our teacher, upon whom be peace, is to be regarded as equal to a high priest. These are the words of Rabbi Moses. I cannot, however, persuade myself that he believed that a Christian too could be saved, even though it appears that he wrote this of all nations without distinction; since he regards Christians as idolaters, as was shown in the sixteenth chapter of the first part, at the thirty-first name given to us, from his commentary on the Talmudic tractate Avoda sara, fol. 78, col. 3. Idolatry, however, as already mentioned, is forbidden in the seven commandments of Noah; and according to his own teaching, only those are held to be pious among the nations, in the book Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 290, col. 2, in the eighth chapter, numero 11, under the title Hilchoth melachim, which was cited above at pagina 235 in this chapter, who keep the seven commandments of Noah. It therefore necessarily follows from his own words that no Christian can be saved, because he does not observe the commandments of Noah but commits idolatry; and Rabbi Moses will not have contradicted himself in what he wrote to Rabbi Chasdai. A Jew may therefore, when asked by a Christian whether a Christian can also partake of eternal life as a Christian, offer as pleasant an answer as he pleases, yet it is nothing but sheer hypocrisy, invented solely for the purpose of keeping people satisfied; for they certainly deny salvation to all Christians in general and regard them as godless, damned people. As for what the aforementioned Rabbi Moses writes, that a Goi who studies in the Law of Moses is to be regarded as equal to a high priest, he is not in agreement with other Rabbis on this point; for, as was already shown above from the Tosepboth of the Talmudic tractate Avoda sara fol. 3, col. 1., this is understood by others not of the Law of Moses, but of the seven commandments of the children of Noah.

Repentance is also supposed to be of no benefit to any Goi or Christian, such that he might thereby attain salvation; for in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 176, col. 1. numero 23, under the title Teschuva, it is written thus: אין תשובה מועלת אלא ליתן לישראל או לגר צדק אבל לגוים ואפילו לגר תושב כנעמן אין תשובה מועלת ושתידי ליתן: הדין כי התשובה היא מצות עשה ומי שאינו מצווה אינו יכול למחות פשעיו על ידי התשובה: that is, Repentance benefits no one except the Israelites, or one who has become a Jew; but for the Gojim, and even for a stranger who dwells among us (and has bound himself to observe the seven commandments of Noah), as Naaman was, repentance is of no benefit, but rather he must give an account (for the evil that he has done), for repentance is a positive commandment; but whoever has not received a commandment cannot blot out his sins through repentance.

Likewise, it is supposed to be of no benefit to any Goi when he studies the Law of Moses and applies himself to it, as may be read in the book Jesod schirim fol. 14, col. 2., where the words read as follows: מנין שכהן גדול צריך להיות תלמיד: חכם דכתיב כי שפתי כהן ישמרו דעת ותורה יבקשו מפיהו ואם הוא עם הארץ אין מקבל עליה שכן: שכן כן גוי העוסק בתורה הואיל והוא גוי אין עבודתו עבודה ואינו מקבל עליה שכר: that is, From where is it proven that a high priest ought to be a wise and learned man? Because it is written (Mal 2:7): For the priest's lips shall preserve knowledge, and from his mouth shall men seek the Law. But if he is an Idiot or an unlearned man, he receives no reward for it. So likewise, when a Goi studies the Law, his service is no service (by which GOD is served), because he is a Goi, and he therefore receives no reward for it.

Since the topic here has been the damnation of Christians and other peoples, I must also indicate here what the Rabbis teach concerning the deceased children of wicked Jews and other peoples, whether they too are damned or whether they attain salvation. On this subject, the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 110, col. 2:

That is: We have learned in a Baraitba: the children of wicked Israelites do not enter the life to come, as it is said (Mal 3:19, or in some editions 4:1): "For behold, the day comes that shall burn like an oven, and all the proud and all those who commit wickedness shall be stubble, and the coming day shall set them ablaze, says the LORD of Hosts, who will leave them neither root nor branch." He will leave them no root in this world, nor branch in the world to come. These are the words of Rabbi Gamaliel. Rabbi Akiva says, on the contrary, that they do enter the life to come, for it is said (Ps 116:6): "The LORD preserves the Pethaim," that is, the simple, though in Rabbi Akiva's interpretation here it means "children," since in the coastal cities a child is called Pathja. It is also said (Dan 4:20, or according to others v. 23): "Hew down the tree and destroy it, yet leave the stump of its roots in the earth, etc." But the children of the wicked peoples of the world, according to all opinions, do not enter the life to come. Rabban Gamaliel also proves his view from the words of (Isa 26:14): "And you have destroyed all memory of them." It is stated and asked: from what time does a child enter the life to come? Rabbi Hiyya and Rabbi Simeon, the son of the Rabbi, differ on this point. One says: from the hour in which it is born; the other says: from the time when it can count. The one who says from the hour in which it is born proves it from the fact that (Ps 22:32) it is said: "They shall come and declare His righteousness to a people that shall be born, that He has done it." But the one who says from the time when it can count proves it from the fact that (Ps 22:31) it is written: "The seed that shall serve Him shall be counted to the LORD as children's children." It is reported that Rabbina said: from the time when it is conceived, as (Ps 22:31) it is written: "The seed that shall serve Him." Rav Nahman, the son of Isaac, said: from the time when it is circumcised, as (Ps 88:16) it is written: "I am afflicted and faint from my youth; I have borne your terrors and am in despair." A teacher of the Mishnah speaks in the name of Rabbi Meir: from the time when it can say Amen, as (Isa 26:2) it is said: "Open the gates, that the righteous nation may enter, שומר אמונים Shomer emunim, that is, that keeps faithfulness." Read not Shomer emunim, "that keeps faithfulness," but שְׁאוֹמֵר אָמֵן She'omer amen, that is, "which says Amen." On this subject one may also consult the Yalkut Shimoni on the Prophet Malachi, fol. 88, col. 2, numero

592, and the book Resbit Hochma, fol. 375, col. 2, under the title Giddul Banim. We see, therefore, from these words of the Talmud, that salvation is entirely denied to the children of the wicked peoples of the world. Now, since the Jews regard Christians as wicked people and call Christendom the wicked kingdom, it is clearly evident from this that, in their view, all deceased Christian children are likewise to be damned.

That the Jews believe all Christians will be damned can also be inferred from the fact that when a Christian dies, they are accustomed to say: נשמתו בגיהנם Nischmatho (or nischmoso) begebinnom, That is: his soul is in hell, as several converted Jews unanimously attest, namely Dieterich Schwab in the first part of his Jüdischer Deckmantel, pag. 66, in the 7th chapter, and Ferdinand Heß in the first part of his Judengeißel in the 4th chapter, as well as Samuel Friedrich Brentz in his Jüdischer abgestreiffter Schlangenbalg in the 4th chapter, pag. 17; and the aforementioned Dieterich Schwab further notes in this connection that they do so with rejoicing and clapping of hands. But these godless blasphemous mouths and sworn enemies of Christ and of all Christians may condemn us as frivolously as they ever wish: we need not concern ourselves with it in the slightest, for the holy word of God teaches us the complete opposite, as it is written in John 3:16-17: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, so that all who believe in Him shall not be lost, but have eternal life. For God did not send His Son into the world to judge the world, but that the world might be saved through Him." And in John 5:24, Christ says: "Truly, I say to you, whoever hears my word and believes in Him who sent me has eternal life and does not come into judgment, but has passed from death into life." It is likewise clearly to be seen in Acts 15:11 and 1 Tim 1:15 and 2 Tim 1:9, as well as in several other places, that we are saved through Christ.

As for the children of believing Christians who die, they too partake of eternal joy and blessedness, for Christ the Lord says in Matt 19:14: "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." And Peter says in Acts 2:39: "For the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, whom the Lord our God shall call." The children therefore belong within the covenant of God, and thereby attain eternal blessedness; and if the root is holy, then the branch is also holy, as the Apostle Paul teaches in the Epistle to the Romans, Rom 10:16.

We can say with good reason and in truth, in opposition to the Jews, that if they persist obstinately in their hardened unbelief and do not accept the true, sole saving faith in Christ, they can by no means attain eternal salvation, but will be damned for all eternity; for it is expressly written in John 3:36: "Whoever believes in the Son has eternal life; whoever does not believe in the

Son will not see life, but the wrath of God remains upon him." Beyond this, they also cannot be saved, according to the teaching of their own rabbis, on account of the abominable blasphemies and slanders which they repeatedly utter against our most innocent and most holy Redeemer Jesus Christ, at the instigation of the father of all blasphemy and slander, the wretched Devil, as has been treated in the second, third, fourth, and fifth chapters of the first part, and to which they also accustom their children from youth onward; as also on account of the unauthorized, dreadful desecrations and insults directed against Christians as a whole, which have been mentioned here and there throughout this my work. For Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon teaches thus in his book Jad chasāka, in the first part, fol. 16, col. 1, in the 7th chapter, numero 3, under the title הלכות דעות Hilchóth deóth (or Hilchos déos): אמרו חכמים שלש עבירות נפרעין: ואין לו חלק לעולם הבא עכ"ם וגילוי עריות ושפיכות דמים ולשון הרע כנגד כולם: ועוד אמרו חכמים כל המספר בלשון הרע כאלו כופר בעיקר שנאמר אשר אמרו ללשוננו נגביר שפתינו אתנו מי אדון לנו: that is, the Sages say that a man is punished in this world for three transgressions, and he has no share in the world to come, namely: on account of idolatry, fornication, and bloodshed; and evil slander (or defamation) is equal to all of them combined (and is just as great a sin as all three of these together). Furthermore, the Sages say that whoever speaks evil (or slanders) does as much as if he denied the foundation (that is, God), as it is said (Ps 12:5): "Those who say, we will prevail with our tongues; our lips are our own: who is our Lord?" Furthermore, the aforementioned Rabbi Mosche writes in the said first part, fol. 46, col. 1, in the third chapter, numerô 6, under the title Hilchoth teschuvá, in this manner: אלו הן שאין להן חלק לעולם הבא אלא נכרתים ואובדים ונידונים על גודל רשעם וחטאתם לעולם ולעולמי עולמים האפיקורסין והכופרים בתורה והכופרים בתחיית המתים ובביאת הגואל והמומרים ומחטיאי הרבים והפורשים מדרכי ציבור והעושה עבירות ביד רמה בפרהסיא כיהויקים והמוסרים ומטילי אימה על הציבור שלא לשם שמים ושופכי דמים ובעלי לשון הרע: that is, these are those who have no share in the world to come, but are cut off and perish, and are damned for all eternity on account of the greatness of their wickedness and their sins: the Epicureans, and the deniers of the Law, and those who deny the resurrection of the dead as well as the coming of the Redeemer (namely the Messiah), and the apostates (who have abandoned the Jewish faith and adopted another), and those who cause many people to sin, and those who separate themselves from the ways of the community, and he who sins willfully and publicly as Jojakim did, and the traitors, and those who cause the community to live in fear when it is not for God's sake, and the shedders of blood, and the slanderers, as well as he who draws out his foreskin (so that it becomes long again, as though he were uncircumcised). Beyond this, it is taught in the book Cad hakkémach, fol. 40, col. 2., from the Talmudic tractate Sóta, fol. 42, col. 1.: ארבע כתות אין מקבלות פני שכינה ואלו הן בת חנפי' כת' :

שקרים כת מספרי לשון הרע כת לצים ומצינו כי חלק בעל המרה הזו של לשון הרע נתנה דוד עליו השלום עם חלק הגנבים והמנאפים ואמר כי לא יאות לבעל לשון הרע שיעסוק בתורה והוא שאמר ולרשע אמר אלהים מה לך לספר חקי ותשא בריתי עלי פיך אם ראית גנב ותרוץ that is, there are four companies which do not come before the face of the divine Majesty, namely: the company of hypocrites, the company of liars, the company of those who speak evil (and slander), and the company of mockers. And we find that King David, upon whom be peace, ascribes to the one who is afflicted with the vice of evil speaking (or slander) the very same condition that is ascribed to thieves and adulterers, and he said that it is not fitting for one who speaks evil to study the Law; and this is what he says (Ps 50:16, 18): "But to the wicked God says: what right have you to recite my statutes, and to take my covenant upon your lips? When you see a thief, you run with him, and you keep company with adulterers." And it stands written (ibid., v. 19) further: "You give your mouth free rein for evil, and your tongue frames deceit." He (King David) calls him (namely the one who speaks evil and slanders) a wicked man, and holds him equal to thieves and adulterers. Now there is no people under the sun that hypocritizes, lies, and slanders, or speaks evil more than the Jews, since hypocrisy is permitted to them, as has been demonstrated in the 15th chapter of the first part, and their Talmudic teachers instruct them masterfully in lies, as has been shown at length in the eighth chapter of the said first part, and their shameful slanders have already been sufficiently brought to light by me. Therefore, according to their own teaching as well, they cannot partake of salvation, but must be damned eternally, if they do not convert.

Since the Jews, as has been shown from the foregoing, know so much to say about their supposed salvation, and on that account exalt themselves so greatly above the other peoples of the world, who, according to their erroneous teaching, are all to be damned; and yet those same Jews, as they themselves must confess, commit many and great sins and cannot render perfect obedience to the law of God, nor do they any longer have a Temple in Jerusalem in which their sins might be atoned for through sacrifices: I therefore consider it not without use to show the gracious reader in what manner, according to their own opinion, the sins of the hardened Jews are forgiven in our day, and how they thereby become partakers of eternal salvation.

To give a complete account of this matter, it should be known that their sins are, according to their ill-founded claim, to be forgiven in various ways. They hold the opinion that the transgressions of one who grieves over the death of a righteous and pious man will be pardoned. For this reason, Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman teaches in his book Toráth ádam, fol. 17, col. 2., under the title Scháar bakeriáh, as follows: מפני מה מתים בניו ובנותיו של אדם כשהן קטנים מפני שלא

That is: Why do a man's sons and daughters die when they are still young? Because he did not weep and mourn for a righteous man who has died; for to him who weeps and mourns for a righteous man (who has died), all his sins are forgiven. This is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Schábbath fol. 105, col. 2., from which it is taken. And in the Jálkut chádasc it stands at fol. 124, col. 3. numerò 50., under the title Mitha, drawn from the Sóhar, where the following is written: כל המצטער על מיתת הצדיקים ומוריד דמעות הקב"ה מוחל לו חטאיו ומכריז עליו וסר עונך וחטאתך תכופר ולא עוד אלא שטובת שלא ימותו בניו בחייו ועל זה כתיב יראה זרע יאריך That is: To him who grieves over the death of the righteous and lets tears fall on that account, the Holy and Blessed God forgives his sins and proclaims over him (the words of Isa 6:7): Your transgression is taken away, and your sin is atoned for. Beyond this, such a one is also assured that his children will not die during his lifetime; and of him it is written (Isa 53:10): He shall see his seed and prolong his days.

Further, in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 5, col. 1-2, it is taught: כל : העוסק בתורה וגמילות חסדים וקובר את בניו מוחלין לו על כל עונותיו : that is, whoever studies the Law, and applies himself to benevolence, and buries his children, to him all his transgressions are forgiven. For this reason it is reported in the Mèdrasc Mischle fol. 67, col. 1: התורה מכפרת כל עון : that is, the Law atones for all transgressions. And at fol. 12, col. 2 of the aforementioned Talmudic tractate Berachóth one reads: כל העושה דבר עבירה ומתבייש בו מוחלין לו על כל : עונותיו שנאמר למען תזכרי ובושת ולא יהיה לך עוד פתחון פה מפני כלמתך בכפרי לך לכל : that is, whoever commits a transgression and is ashamed of it, to him all his transgressions are forgiven, as it is said (Ezek 16:63): that you may remember and be ashamed, and never open your mouth again because of your shame, when I forgive you all that you have done, says the Lord. And in the tractate Schábbath it is written at fol. 119, col. 2: כל המתפלל בערב שבת ואומר ויכולו שני מלאכי השרת המלווין לו לאדם מניחין ידיהן על ראשו : that is, whoever on the eve of the Sabbath recites the words (Gen 2:1 etc.): Thus the heavens and the earth, with all their host, were completed, etc., upon him the two ministering angels who accompany the person lay their hands on his head, and one of them speaks to him the words (Isa 6:7): Your transgression is taken away, and your sin is atoned for. Likewise, in the tractate Megilla fol. 31, col. 2, one reads as follows: אמר אברהם לפני הקב"ה רבנו של עולם שמא חס ושלום ישראל חוטאים לפניך ואתה עושה להם כדור מבול וכדור הפלגה אמר לו לאו אמר לפני רבנו של עולם במה אדע אמר לו קחה לי עגלה משולשת וגו' : אמר לפני רבנו של עולם תינה בזמן שבית המקדש קיים בזמן שאין בית המקדש קיים מה תהא עליהם אמר לו כבר תיקנתי להם סדר קרבנות כל זמן שקוראין : בהן מעלה אני עליהן כאילו מקריבין לפני קרבן ומוחל אני על כל עונותיהם : that is, Abraham spoke before the Holy Blessed God: O Lord of the world! Perhaps the Israelites will sin before You (which be far from them), and You will deal with them as You dealt with the generation of the flood and the generation of the dispersion (who built the Babylonian tower? God answered him: No (that will not happen). Thereupon Abraham said to Him: O Lord of the world! How shall I know this? Then God answered him with the words (Gen 15:9): Take for me a three-year-old heifer, etc. Upon this Abraham said to God: O Lord of the world! This will indeed come to pass in that time when the Temple is standing; but when the Temple stands no more, how will it go with them then? Then God answered him: I have already ordained for them the order of the sacrifices (in the third book of Moses, ch. 1, etc.), and at all times when they read therein I will account it to them as though they had offered a sacrifice before Me, and I will forgive them all their transgressions. That the reading about the sacrifices is accepted by God as though one had actually sacrificed, and that sins are thereby forgiven, is also to be found in the Talmudic Tractate Taanith fol. 27, col. 2.

But the following is read concerning such reading about the sacrifices, which is to be accepted in place of the sacrifices themselves, in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 128, col. 2, in the Parascha Zav: דרשו ז"ל זאת התורה לעולה למנחה ולחטאת ולאשם וגו' כל העוסק בפרשת עולה כאלו הקריב עולה בפרשת מנחה כאלו הקריב מנחה בפרשת חטאת כאלו הקריב חטאת וגו' ויהיו עונותיו קרובן נמחלין לו כאלו הקריב קרבן: that is, our sages, of blessed memory, have expounded (the words of Lev 7:37) "This is the law of the burnt offering, of the grain offering, of the sin offering, and of the guilt offering," etc., as follows: whoever studies in the Parascha concerning the burnt offering (that is, in the chapters of the books of Moses in which the burnt offerings are treated) does just as much as if he had offered a burnt offering; whoever studies in the Parascha concerning the grain offering, it is reckoned to him as if he had offered a grain offering; whoever studies in the Parascha concerning the sin offering, it is accepted for him as if he had offered a sin offering, etc., and his sins are forgiven as if he had offered a sacrifice. Shortly thereafter, the following appears in the same place: ובמדרש זאת התורה לעולה למנחה ולחטאת ולאשם ולמלואים ולזבה השלמים: כל העוסק בתורה כאלו הקריב עולה כאלו הקריב מנחה כאלו הקריב חטאת כאלו הקריב אשם ומלואים ושלמים: that is, in the Midrash (it stands over the words of Lev 7:37) "This is the law of the burnt offering, of the grain offering, of the sin offering, of the guilt offering, of the ordination offerings, and of the peace offerings": whoever studies in the Law does just as much as if he had offered a burnt offering, as if he had offered a grain offering, as if he had offered a sin offering, as if he had offered a guilt offering, an ordination offering, and a peace offering. Furthermore, the following stands in the same place: בה אמר הק"ה: בזמן שקורין בהם מעלה אני עליהם כאלו הקריבום לפני rabbis) say that the Holy, blessed be He, said: when they (meaning the Israelites) read about these (namely the sacrifices), I accept it from them as if they had offered them before Me. The like is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimóni on Hosea, fol. 76, col. 3, numero 525, and in the book Avódath hakkódesh, fol. 58, col. 3, at the end of the third chapter of the second part. In the Jalkut chádassch, however, it is taught at fol. 179, col. 1, numero 101, under the title Teschuvá, that the reading of the words of Deut 6:4, "Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God is one LORD," serves in place of the sacrifices, and the words read as follows: בזמן שבית המקדש היה קיים היו מקריבין את הכבש הא' בבוקר והשני בין הערבים ועכשיו אמר הקב"ה תלכאו קריאת שמע ערבית ושחרית ועולה לפני יותר ומכל הקרבנות: that is, at the time when the Temple still stood, one offered a lamb in the morning and the other between the two evenings (that is, between that time when the day begins to decline and the night commences); but now, says the Holy, blessed be He, you shall recite the Keriáth schemá (that is, the words of Deut 6:4, "Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God is one LORD") in the evening and in the morning, and it is more pleasing to Me than all sacrifices. And this is also found in the Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 266, col. 2, numero 835, and on the Psalms, fol. 99, col. 3, numero 703.

All of their sins, even the most grievous, are to be forgiven them on the Day of Atonement, which they call the long day, so that they are also holy and pure on the Day of Atonement, like the angels in heaven, and so that even the devil himself must confess that no sin is to be found in them; of which a more detailed account shall be given below in the ninth chapter.

Beyond the above, they also believe that their sins are forgiven them on account of the merits of their supposed deceased saints. Hence, at the end of the 187th chapter of the Máase-book, it is written thus: עבירות: גמט חס מונדי: that is, GOD shall forgive us our sins, through the merit of Rabbi Shimon the Great, Amen, Sela. The like is also to be found at the end of the 182nd, the 183rd, and the 211th chapters of the said Máase-book. For this reason they are accustomed, as may be seen in the thick Tefillah fol. 48, col. 3. under the title לבית הקברות Lebeth hakkebbharóth, to call upon God in the following manner: רבון העולמים האזינה לקול תחנוני וקבל תפילתי ברוב רחמך שיהא נשמתי ראוי לשכון עם נשמה הצדיק הזה שנקבר פה ועם נשמת אברהם יצחק ויעקב ועם שאר צדיקים שנפטרו בשמך הגדול וזכנו וזכהו ומעשיו הטובים שעשה כל ימיו כי למען כבודו באתי הנה כדי להשתטח על קברו ולהתפלל על נשמתו שיצורו: that is, O Thou Lord of the Worlds! hear the voice of my supplication, and receive my prayer, according to Thy great mercy, that my soul may be worthy to dwell with the soul of this righteous one who is buried here, and with the souls of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as also with the remaining righteous ones who have died in Thy great name; and let me be made righteous through his merit (or righteousness) and his good works which he performed throughout the whole time of his life: for in his honor have I come hither, to cast myself down upon his grave, and to pray for his soul, that it may be bound up in the bundle of the living (which is mentioned in 1 Sam 25:29); and that his body may be worthy to rise again at the time of the resurrection of the dead, ע"ה. In the following fol. 49. there is another prayer which they pray when they go to the graves of their supposed saints, and it reads as follows: רבון העולמים אדון כל הנשמות רצני וקבלני בתשובה: שלמה לפניך ושמע תחינתי ותפילתי ועשה בקשתי למען הקדושים ההרוגים והצדיקים והצדקניות גדולים וקטנים שנהרגו ונשחטו ונשרפו ונטבעו ונתלו ונחנקו על קדוש שמך ובכלל שנפטר בשמך הגדול ויחוד שמך כי למען כבודם באתי הנה להתפלל על נשמתם וגופם שכולם ינוחו בגן עדן עם אברהם יצחק ויעקב שרה רבקה רחל ולאה ועם שאר צדיקי עולם: רבון העולמים זכני זכותם אשר עשו ואני וכל אוהבי וכל ישראל נהיה נשמרים מכל גזירות ועלילות ותפיסות ונסיונות ושתאה נשמתי ראוייה לשכון אצלו נשמתן בגן עדן ועם נשמת אברהם יצחק ויעקב שרה רבקה רחל ולאה ועם שאר צדיקים וצדקניות בגן עדן אמן: that is, O Thou Ruler of the Worlds, and Lord of all souls! be pleased with me, and receive me in perfect repentance before Thee: hear my supplication and my prayer, and grant my petition, for the sake of the holy ones who have been put to death, for the sake of the righteous men and women, great and small, who for the sake of Thy righteousness (in that they held Thee alone to be the true GOD) were killed, and drowned, and burned, and cut down, and hanged, and broken on the wheel, and buried alive, as also strangled, and suffered every manner of death, and thereby shed their blood like water for the sanctification of Thy name; and in general (on behalf of all) who have died for the sake of Thy great name and the unity of Thy name: for in their honor have I come hither, to pray for their souls and bodies, that they may rest in Paradise with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as also with Rebecca, Rachel, and Leah, and the remaining righteous ones of the world. O Thou Lord of the World! let their merit (or their righteousness) which they have performed make me righteous, so that I, together with all my friends and all of Israel, may be preserved from all persecutions, and cunning evil designs, imprisonments, and temptations; and that my soul may be worthy to dwell with their souls in Paradise, and also to be with the soul of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of Sara, Rebecca, Rachel, and Leah, as also with the remaining righteous men and women in Paradise. Amen. Furthermore, there is to be found in the same place fol. 50, col. 2. 3. a prayer which begins: רבון כל העולמים מלך מלכי המלכים Ribbon col haolámim, melech málke hammeláchim, in which, among other things, the following is prayed: ותני להן לחסד ולרחמים בעיניך ובעיני כל רואי בזכות הצדיקים האלו הקדושים וזכותם ומעשיהם הטובים יגינו ויליצו בעדי ותעשה בקשתי ותמלא שאלתי לטובה ואל תשיבני ריקם that is, Give me favor, grace, and mercy in Thine eyes, and in the eyes of all those who see me, for the sake of the merit of these righteous holy ones, and let their merit, together with their good works, protect me and be my advocate. Grant my petition, and fulfill my desire for my good, and let me not return from Thee empty-handed. Furthermore, they pray there fol. 51, col. 1. in the prayer which begins: יהי רצון מלפניך יי אלהי ואלהי אבותי שתרצי Jehí razón millephanécha Adonái Elobái velobé avotbái scheteirzéni, in the following manner: ותמלא כל משאלות לבנו לטובה בזכות הצדיקים הקדושים האלו וגו' that is, Fulfill all the petitions of our hearts for good, for the sake of the merit of these righteous holy ones, &c. Of which more may be read in the prayer following thereupon, which begins: Jehí rázon millephanécha Adonái Elobái, Velobé avotbái schetehé tephillathénu merúzza; and in the prayer after this, which begins, Ana habbét bezidkáth avadécha. And from all of this it is sufficiently to be gathered that the Jews are of the opinion that the supposed merit of their imagined righteous ones and saints can be of great help to them.

Since the deceased intercede for the living, as has been mentioned here regarding the merit of the supposed departed saints through which the Jews believe they are justified, I must also point out that they believe the deceased pray to God on behalf of the living, and that they also invoke them. That the deceased are supposed to pray on behalf of the living is evident from Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 72, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajéschef Jacob, where it is written as follows: אמרו רבותינו זכרונם לברכה שהמתים מבקשים רחמים על החיים שנאמר והעל שכבת הטל מפול תפלת קבר that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, say that the deceased pray for mercy on behalf of the living, because it is said (Exod 16:14): "And the layer of dew that had settled rose up," by which the prayer of those who lie in the grave is understood in a subtle sense.

That these same ones are also invoked by the Jews can be seen from the book Sifte jeschenim, which is a catalogue or index of Hebrew books, fol. 9, col. 1, in the preface, where a prayer is set down which is to be said by them daily, after the other customary prayers, and indeed in such a manner as if they were standing upon the graves of the dead. It reads as follows: אתם נשמות קדושים וטהורים. כזוהר הרקיע מזהירים. את אשר ישנו פה שזכרתי היום וכל יום ואת אשר איננו פה ברשות הקדוש ברוך הוא וברשות כל קדושי המלך. הנה באתי לבקש ולחנן לפניכם. התעוררו. ועמדו נא. קומו נא. חלו נא בעדי ובעד כל בני ביתי. ויעמוד לי זכות תלמוד תורתכם ומעשיכם הטובים שהיו בכם כשהייתם בעולם הזה. שלא אכשל ואכלם בדברי תורתי. ויתרחב לבבי להבין ולהשכיל ללמוד וללמד לשמור ולעשות ולקיים את כל דברי התורה. ויהא הזכרת שמותיכם או שמות הספרים שחברתם נחשב כאלו למדתי בהן. וכאלו הבנתי את הכל. וכשיגיע קצי להפטר מן העולם הזה יהיה חלקי עמכם בגן עדן. להסות בסתר עליון בצל שדי. ויעלה נשמתי ממעלה למעלה. ובעת יציאת נשמתי יבואו המלאכים הממונים על זה. ויוליכו נשמתי למעלה. בלי פגע רע. ושלא יבהלוני בדרך. והתפלה הזאת תהא נחשבת יותר מאלו באתי

להשתטח על קבריהם. והרי אני חשוב לפניכם כמת אבל בעוד נשמתי בקרבי אבקש מלפניכם שיהיו בעזרי להליץ ולהגן בעדי אמן: that is, O you holy and pure souls, who shine like the radiance of the firmament, who are described here (in this book), of whom I make mention today and every day, and who are not described here: behold, I come with the permission of the holy and blessed God, and with the consent of all the saints of the King, to entreat and implore you. Rouse yourselves, rouse yourselves, stand up now, raise yourselves up, pray for me and for all my household. Let the merit of the study of your law and of your good works, which were in you when you were in this world, stand before me and protect me, so that I do not stumble in the words of my law and be put to shame. Let my heart also be enlarged, that I may understand and comprehend, learn and teach, keep, do, and fulfill all the words of the law. Let the mention of your names, or of the names of the books which you have written, be counted and received as though I had read in them and as though I had understood everything. And when my end comes, that I must depart from this world, let my portion be with you in Paradise, that I may take refuge under the secret shelter of the Most High and under the shadow of the Almighty; and let my soul ascend from one step to the next. And when my soul departs, let the angels who are appointed for this come and lead it upward, without evil mishap, and that I not be frightened upon the way. Let this prayer also be counted as more than if I had come to prostrate myself upon your graves. Behold, I am reckoned before you as one dead; but so long as my soul is within me, I will entreat you to come to my aid, to be my advocates, and to protect me. Amen.

The sins of the Jews are also to be atoned for through prayer, and for this reason Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 114, col. 2, in the Parascha Tissa, in the following manner: בזמן הזה שאנחנו שרויים בגלות בשעבוד האומות ואין לנו כהן גדול לכפר על חטאתינו ולא מזבח להקריב עליו קרבנות ולא בית המקדש להתפלל בתוכו לא נשאר לנו לפני ה' בלתי אם תפלתנו. That is: In this time, when we dwell in the exilio, or misery, under the servitude of the nations, and we have no high priest to atone for our sins, and there is no altar upon which to offer sacrifice, and no Temple is at hand in which to pray, nothing remains to us before the LORD except our prayer. So also in the great Jalkut Rubeni, fol. 54, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajeze, as well as in the book Asara maamaroth (or Asoro maamoros), fol. 126, it is read: התפילה מכפרת כמו הקרבנות. That is: Prayer atones, just as the sacrifices do. And in the Jalkut chadash, fol. 177, col. 4, numero 72, it is reported: אמר רבי שמעון שהתפילה במקום קרבן. that is, Rabbi Simeon has said that prayer stands in the place of the sacrifices.

To whoever properly observes the Sabbath, all his sins shall also be forgiven; therefore it is written in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 91, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajischma Jethro, as follows: כל המשמר את השבת מוחלין לו כל עונותיו אפילו עובד עבודה זרה כדור אנוש מוחלין לו, כל עונותיו שנאמר אשרי אנוש יעשה זאת וגו' שומר שבת מחללו אל תקרי מחללו אלא מחול לו That is: To everyone who observes the Sabbath, all his sins are forgiven, even if he should have committed idolatry, as the generation (of mankind in the time) of Enos did, as it is said (Isa 56:2): Blessed is the man who does this, etc., who keeps the Sabbath mechallelo, that is, so that he does not desecrate it. Do not read mechallelo, that is, so that he does not desecrate it, but rather mechól lo, that is, he forgives him, or (his sin) is forgiven. This very same thing is also to be found in Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 117, col. 1, in the Parascha Ki tissa, and in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat, fol. 119, col. 2. And in the end of the 18th chapter of the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer it is read: מ"ה שהוא שומר את השבת בעולם הזה הק"ב מוחל לו כל עונותיו... שנאמר שומר שבת מחללו אל תקרי שומר שבת מחללו אלא...

"but He forgives him, and moreover all his sins are forgiven him": that is, whoever keeps the Sabbath in this world, the Holy Blessed God forgives all his misdeeds, as it is said: he who keeps the Sabbath, mechalleló, that is, so that he does not desecrate it; do not read "he who keeps the Sabbath, mechalleló," that is, so that he does not desecrate it, but rather mechól lo, that is, He forgives him. Furthermore, whoever keeps the Sabbath should be regarded as having done as much as if he had kept the entire Law, for in the book Pesikta sotárta, fol. 50, col. 3, in the Parascha Beschallach, it is taught thus: כל המשמר את השבת כאלו קיים כל התורה כולה שנאמר ראו כי יי' נתן לכם השבת that is, everyone who keeps the Sabbath does as much as if he had kept the entire Law, as it is said (Exod 16:29): "See, the Lord has given you the Sabbath."

In what manner, however, the Sabbath is to be properly kept is to be seen in the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the aforementioned 18th chapter, where the words read as follows: ממה הוא שימור של שבת מלהבעיר בה אש ומלעשות בה מלאכה ומלצאת ומלבוא חוץ לתחום אפילו רגל אחד ומלהביא דבר בידו ולהעבירו ארבע אמות ברשות הרבים ולהוציא מרשות לרשות וזו היא שמירתה של שבת that is, in what does the keeping of the Sabbath consist? That on it one must not kindle any fire, nor perform any work, nor take even a single step beyond the boundary of the Sabbath (which consists of two thousand paces), neither going out nor coming in, nor carry anything in one's hand, nor carry anything four cubits in a public or common place, nor transfer anything from one domain or authority into another. In this consists the keeping of the Sabbath.

The sins of the Jews are also to be atoned for in various ways, namely through prayer, wherefore it is written in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 54, col. 1. in the Parascha Vajéze, from the book Asaráh maamaróth, as follows: התפילה מכפרת כמו קרבנות that is, Prayer atones just as sacrifices do. The sermon of a wise man, and the utterance of the words Amen, sein großer nahme seye gebenedeyet, is also supposed to have such an effect, for it is taught in the Médrasch Mischle fol. 69, col. 1. as follows: בשעה שחכם יושב ודורש אני מוחל ומכפר עונותיהן של ישראל ולא עוד אלא שבשעה שהן עונין אמן יהא שמיא רבא מברך אפילו אם נחתם גזר דינם אני מוחל להם : that is, At the time when a wise man preaches, I forgive and atone for the transgressions of the Israelites. Moreover, when they say Amen, may His great name be blessed, I forgive and atone for their transgressions, even if the decree or sentence of their punishment has already been sealed. They are also to be atoned for through chastisements, and in Rabbi Becháí's commentary on the Five Books of Moses fol. 151, col. 2. in the Parascha Bechykkothái, it is read as follows: דרשו רבותינו ז"ל יסורין מכפרין כשם : that is, Our rabbis, of blessed memory, teach that chastisements atone just as sacrifices do. For this reason it is taught in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 5, col. 1.: ביסורין ממרקין כל עונותיו של אדם : that is, Through chastisements all of a person's transgressions are wiped away.

Therefore, they are also to be atoned through exilium, or exile, and the following is found concerning this in the book Scháare óra, fol. 45, col. 4: אם אין ישראל נוהרין ואינם מפחדים לפני יי 'יותר טוב הוא שיפלו בגלות עשו שישפלו בגיהנם כי גלות מכפרת עון על כן שמח יצחק שיפלו ישראל בגלות עשו ויתכפרו עונותיהם That is: When the Israelites are not cautious and do not fear God, it is better that they fall into exile under Esau (that is, Christendom) than that they should descend into hell, for transgression is atoned through exile. For this reason, Isaac rejoiced that the Israelites would fall into exile under Esau and that their transgressions would be atoned, so that they might not go to hell. The very same is also to be found there at fol. 49, col. 1, 2, as well as in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 1, under the title Abáva, and likewise in the large Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 50, col. 4, in the Parashah Toledóth. Rabbi Jacob also writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 44, col. 1, in the Parashah Behaalotechá, on the words of Dan 9:24, "Seventy weeks are determined upon your people, etc.," as follows: מלמד שגלות מכפרת כמין קרבן That is: This teaches that exile atones just as a sacrifice does. And in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Five Books of Moses, it is read at fol. 11, col. 1, numero 38, as well as in the Talmudic tractate Sanbedrin, fol. 37, col. 2: גלות מכפרת על הכל That is: Exile atones for everything. For this reason, Rabbi Bechai expresses himself in his book Cad hakkémach, fol. 19, col. 2, under the title Oth gimmel, as follows: עם הגלות והשעבוד עונותינו מתמרקין ואנו ניצולין בו מדינה של גיהנם That is: Through exile and servitude, our transgressions are wiped away, and we are thereby rescued from hell. So too is it read in the book Mattáth jah, fol. 8, col. 3, in the Parashah Lech lechá: במקום גיהנם That is: The exilium, or exile, stands in the place of hell. On this matter, one may also consult the old Nizzáchon, page 246, and the commentary of Rabbi Mosche de Mircado on Ps 94:12.

Furthermore, sins are also to be atoned for through death, and concerning this, the following is read in the first part of the Prague Machsor, fol. 95, col. 1, in the Commentario, under the title Shacharit schel jom Kippur, on a prayer which begins Tamid tichlonén: מיתה מכפרת עונות לגמרי שנאמר אם יכופר עון עד That is: Death atones for transgressions entirely, as it is said (Isa 22:14): "What does it avail, whether such transgression shall be atoned for you, until you die?" For this teaches us that after death the sin is atoned for. So also in Sēpher chasidim numero 1171 the following is read: That is: After death there is no atonement, for in the anguish of death a person's transgressions are atoned for him. And in Rabbi Menáchem von Rekánat's commentary on the five books of Moses, it is taught at fol. 123, col. 1, in the Parascha Ki tissa, where death and chastisement are treated, as follows: אין לך רחמים גדולים מאלו שניצול מדינה של גיהנם על ידי יסורין ומיתה שהם בנוהג העולם ולא עוד אלא שזוכים לחיי הבא That is: There is no greater mercy than this, inasmuch as he (namely, the person) is delivered from the judgment of Hell through the chastisements and death which are accustomed to occur in the world. And so people thereby also obtain the world to come, that is, eternal life. For this reason the sick are accustomed to pray in the following manner, as may be seen in the daily prayer book under the title Schacharith, specifically in the large Tefillah, fol. 47, col. 1: מודה אני לפניך יי 'אלהי ואלהי אבותי שרפואתי בידך ומיתתי בידך יהי רצון מלפניך שתרפאני רפואה שלימה ואם אמות תהא מיתתי כפרה על כל חטאים ועונות ופשעים שחטאתי ושעויתי ושפשעתי לפניך ותן חלקי בגן עדן וכוני לעולם הבא הצפון לצדיקים That is: I confess before You, O Lord, my God and God of my fathers, that my recovery and my death are in Your hand. May it be Your will that You restore me to complete health; but if I am to die, may my death be an atonement for all my sins, transgressions, and offenses which I have committed before You, and grant me my portion in Paradise, and make me worthy of the life to come, which is hidden (and preserved) for the righteous.

The Jews also teach that the table makes atonement, and this is written in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 55, col. 1, as well as in the tractate Chagiga fol. 27, col. 1, as follows: כל זמן שבית המקדש קיים מזבח מכפר על ישראל ועכשיו שלחנו של אדם מכפר עליו That is: As long as the Temple stood, the altar made atonement for the Israelites; but now a man's table makes atonement for him. The very same thing is also to be read in the Jalkut Schimóni on Ezechiel fol. 74, col. 1. numero 41, and in the book Toledóth Jitzchak fol. 60, col. 2, in the Parascha Terúma.

The death of the righteous is also said to atone for those who sin. For in the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, it is taught at fol. 191, col. 2, in the Parascha Elleh masse: מִיתַת הַצְדִּיקִים מַכְפֶּרֶת, That is: the death of the righteous atones. And in the Talmudic Tractate Möed Káton, it is read at fol. 28, col. 1: מִה פֶּרָה אֲדוּמָה מַכְפֶּרֶת אֶף מִיתַתֵּן שֶׁל צְדִיקִים מַכְפֶּרֶת. אמר רבי אלעזר למה נסמכה מיתת אהרן לבגדי כהונה מה בגדי כהונה מכפרין אף מיתתו. That is: just as the red heifer (of which mention is made in Lev 19:2 etc.) made atonement, so too does the death of the righteous make atonement. Rabbi Eliezer said: why is the death of Aaron (Lev 19:26) placed alongside the priestly garments? Just as the priestly garments make atonement, so too does the death of the righteous make atonement. There also stands in the book Lefárjeh, fol. 70, col. 3, the following: הַבְּטִיחַ הַק"ב לְאַבְרָהָם בְּזֶמֶן שְׁבָנִיךְ, That is: the holy and blessed God promised Abraham (and assured him): at the time when your children fall into sins, I will take one righteous man from among them (through death), and through this they shall be atoned for. This may also be looked up in the Jalkut chádascsh, fol. 125, col. 1, numero 64, under the title Mitha. In this manner, then, the ungodly are to be atoned for through the righteous, as is read in the Prague Machsor, in the first part, fol. 144, col. 1, in the Commentario, under the title Lejóm rischon schel succóth.

The rabbis also teach that all Jews are sureties for one another. For in the book Schéfa tal fol. 8, col. 3., in the preface, it is written: כָּל יִשְׂרָאֵל עֲרֵבִים זֶה, That is: All Israelites are sureties for one another, because they are all one soul. And more on this subject can be read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 109, col. 3, in the Parascha Tissa, and fol. 151, col. 2, in the Parascha Bechykkothái, and in the book Toledóth Yitzhak fol. 67, col. 2., in the Parascha Vajikra, and in Schemóth rábba fol. 117, col. 2., in the 27th Parascha, and in Bammidbar rábba fol. 194, col. 2., in the 10th Parascha, as well as in the book Nischmáth ádam, in the first chapter, fol. 7, col. 1 The Jews are also said to be delivered from Hell and made partakers of eternal blessedness in various other ways, among which circumcision is included. For this reason, Rabbi Menachem of Recanati teaches in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 43, col. 3, in the Parascha Lech lechá, concerning the circumcised as follows: אָמְרוּ רַבּוֹתֵינוּ ז"ל שֶׁכָּל הַנִּימּוֹל אֵינוֹ רוֹאֶה פָּנָי : גֵּהִינָם שְׁנֵאמַר וְעַמֵּךְ כָּלם צְדִיקִים לְעוֹלָם יִירָשׁוּ אֶרֶץ : that is, Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that no circumcised person shall see Hell. And in the small Jalkut Rubeni, under number 1. under the title Milah, the following is read from the Zijoni: בראשית ברית אש מלמד שהמילה מצלת מן הגיהנם that is, the word Bereschith (which stands at Gen 1:1 and means "in the beginning") signifies (through the transposition of its letters) as much as Berith esch, that is, the covenant of fire, and this teaches that circumcision delivers from Hell. There is also found in the Médrasch Tillim, fol. 7, col. 2, on the 6th Psalm, the following: חביבה המילה שנשבע הקב"ה לאברהם שכל מי שהוא מהול אינו יורד לגיהנם that is, Circumcision is beloved, for the holy blessed God swore to Abraham that no one who is circumcised shall descend into Hell, as it is said (Gen 15:18): "On that same day the LORD made a covenant with Abraham." Concerning this, one may also consult the small Jalkut Rubeni, number 27, under the title Avóth veimmabóth, and number 2, under the title Schevúah, as well as number 13, under the title Milah. And in the book Akedáth Jizchák, fol. 54, col. 2, as well as in Bereschíth rábba, fol. 43, col. 2, in the 48th Parascha, it is taught: אברהם יושב על פתח גיהנם ואינו מניח that is, Abraham sits before the gate of Hell and does not permit any circumcised person among the Israelites to descend into it. What a great matter circumcision is held to be is also shown in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 79, col. 1, at the end of the Parascha Vajíschma Jethro, with these words: ברית מילה השוב ככל הקרבנות that is, The covenant of circumcision is esteemed equal to all sacrifices. And in the Jalkut chádasch, fol. 180, col. 4, number 142, under the title Teschúvâ, the following is read: כל ישראל שניטול that is, Every Israelite who is circumcised is called a righteous man.

The tribute and toll which the Jews must pay to the Christians and other peoples is also supposed to deliver them from Hell, and it is written in the Jalkut chádasch fol. 48, col. 1. numerô 34. under the title Galuth as follows: המסים והארנונות המפרישת חובו של הקב"ה ולכך הם מצילון אותנו מן הגיהנם that is, The tributes and tolls are a payment of the debt of the holy blessed God, and therefore they deliver us from Hell. And at fol. 55, col. 4. numero 22. the following is read in the same work under the title Gan Eden: כל המסים והארנונות שהמלכויות גובים מאתנו הוא פריעה חובו של הקב"ה שהייב ליתן להם שכרם בע"ה ואנו פוריס חובו על כן בזה אנו פודים עצמינו מהגיהנם that is, All the tributes and tolls which the kingdoms collect from us are a payment of that which the holy blessed GOD owes them; for He is obliged to give them their reward in this world, but we pay His debt (through the tribute and toll), and therefore we thereby deliver ourselves from Hell.

Whoever reads in the Talmud, or teaches his son the law, shall also partake of eternal life. Concerning the reading of the Talmud, the following is written about it in the Talmudic tractate Megilla fol. 28, col. 2.: כל השונה הלכות מובטח : that is, Everyone who learns the Talmudic rulings is assured that he is a child of eternal life, for it is said (Hab 3:6): His halichóth, that is, ways, are eternal. Read not halichóth, that is, ways, but halachóth, that is, rulings. Concerning the instruction of one's son in the law, the following is taught in the book Reschúth chóchma fol. 370, col. 1. under the title Pérek giddul banim: כל המשתדל ללמד את : that is, Everyone who diligently endeavors to teach his son the law, and knowledge, and wisdom, inherits this life and the life to come. And in the second column, the following is read there: אמר רבי יוחנן ג' מנחלי העולם הבא הדר בארץ ישראל והמגדל בנו לתלמוד תורה : that is, Rabbi Jochanan said, there are three among those who inherit eternal life: he who dwells in the land of Israel (meaning the land of Canaan), and he who raises his son to learn the law, and he who distinguishes the Sabbath from the remaining days of the week with wine at the end of the Sabbath. The very same is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Pesachím fol. 113, col. 1. Likewise, the following is taught in the Jalkut chádasch fol. 60, col. 4. numero 9. under the title Din verachamím: כל המגדל בנו לתלמוד תורה ומוליכו לבית רבו בבוקר ובערב מעלה : עליו הכתוב כאילו קיים כל התורה : that is, Whoever raises his son to learn the law and leads him to his teacher's house in the morning and in the evening, of him Scripture reckons as much as if he had kept the entire law.

Furthermore, he who gives alms, or observes the commandment of lodging arriving strangers, or keeps the three meals on the Sabbath, shall inherit eternal life. Concerning alms, it is written in the book Menoráth hamáor fol. 49, col. 3. under the title Ner schelíschi, pérek ríschon, kelál scheví, chélek schéni, as follows: : כל המגין מנכסיו ועשה מהם צדקה : גיצל מדינה של גיהנם : that is, whoever takes from his means and gives alms therefrom shall be freed from the punishment of Hell. In the book Brandspiegel, fol. 94, col. 2. in the 30th chapter, the following is also taught on this matter: מדין גרעטי איזו הי מי דוח : דח ווערט מיר הירן ווייז : אין יום ז : געבן חול דיה לויט ווען אן יח : ז : געבן חול ושבט גיב חי לו געבן חול ווען אין ד : קטן טון טון דז ברינגט מען דיא צדקה לויט זיביגען 'לעבן וון 'דער מענש מוט זיין לעבן חליל זיין וועט מוט בהויט מען בייר דעם געכק טוט וון That is: Almsgiving is a great commandment; here you will hear how one ought to give it, and the time when one ought to give it, and what is proper to give. And when one is able to do this, almsgiving brings a person to eternal life, and prolongs his life in this world, and protects him from sudden death, and he does not die before his time. King Solomon says in his Proverbs (Prov 10:2): וצדקה הציל ממות : almsgiving delivers from death. On this matter one may also consult the Talmudic tractate Báva bâthra fol. 10, col. 1. Concerning lodging, it is read as follows in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 30, col. 1., in the Parashah Vajéra: כל המצות אכסניא יורש גן עדן that is, everyone who keeps the commandment of lodging shall inherit Paradise. On this matter the Talmudic tractate Shabbat fol. 127, col. 1. at the end may also be consulted. Concerning the observance of the three meals on the Sabbath, of which the first is to be held on Friday evening, the second on Saturday at midday, and the third on Saturday evening, the following is found in the Jalkut Schimóni on Malachiam fol. 88, col. 4. numero 595.: כל המקיים שלש סעודות בשבת ניצל משלש: פורעניות מחבלו של משיח מדינה של גיהנם ומלמחמת גוג ומגוג that is, everyone who keeps the three meals on the Sabbath shall be freed from three punishments, namely from the suffering of the Messiah (that is, from the misery that must be endured at the time of the Messiah), from the punishment of Hell, and from the war of Gog and Magog. The very same is also to be found in the book Menoráth hammáor fol. 42, col. 4. and in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat fol. 118, col. 1. Furthermore, the one who puts on the Tefillin, that is, the prayer straps, and the Zizis, that is, the woolen threads on a square cloth, which all Jews are accustomed to wearing, is said to be a child of eternal life. Regarding the Tefillin and Zizis, the following is written about them in the book Menoráth hammáor fol. 34, col. 2.: כל המניח תפילין ומתעטף בציצית וקורא קריאת שמע ומתפלל: מובטח לו שהוא בן העולם הבא that is, Everyone who puts on his Tefillin and puts on his Zizis and reads the words (Deut 6:4) "Hear, O Israel," etc., and prays, is assured that he is a child of eternal life. Likewise, the following is read concerning the Zizis in the book Pesíkta sotárta fol. 50, col. 3. in the Parasha Schelách lechá: כל המקיים מצות ציצית כאילו קיים כל התורה כולה: that is, Whoever observes the commandment concerning the Zizis does as much as if he had kept the entire Law. Concerning the Tefillin, more can also be found in the Médrasch Tillim, fol. 3, col. 2. on the first Psalm.

The one who is poor shall also partake of salvation, and one reads in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 55, col. 1. numero 1. under the title Gan eden, from the Talmudic tractate Jevamoth, the following: עני בשכר עניו ניצול מדינה של גיהנם That is: The poor man is, as a reward for his poverty, delivered from the punishment of hell. And on this matter one may also consult the book Cad hakkémach fol. 5, col. 3., as well as the Talmudic tractate Báva bâthra fol. 10, col. 1. This is doubtless to be understood on account of the fact that poverty is supposed to be the greatest of all plagues, for in Schemóth rábba fol. 121, col. 4. in the 31st Parasha one reads thus: אין בעולם קשה מן העניות שהיא קשה מכל יסורים שבעולם : That is: There is nothing harder in the world than poverty, for it is harder than all the afflictions that exist in the world. Yet this same poverty is said to suit the Jews very well, for in Vajikra rábba fol. 146, col. 2. in the 13th Parasha it is written thus: That is: Poverty suits the Jews handsomely, like a red strap on the breast of a white horse. This is also to be seen in the Jalkut Schimóni on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 144, col. 4. numero 535. And in the Talmudic tractate Chagiga one reads at fol. 9, col. 2.: מאי דכתיב הנה צרפתיך ולא בכסף בחרתיך בכור עוני מלמד שהחזר הק"ה על כל מדות טובות ליתן לישראל ולא מצא אלא עניות אמר שמואל ואי תימא רב יוסף היינו דאמרי אינשי That is: What does that which is written (Isa 48:10) signify: Behold, I will refine you, but not with silver; I will choose you in the furnace of affliction. This teaches us that the holy, blessed God went through all good qualities and conditions, yet found none other than poverty to give to the Israelites. Samuel, or if you prefer to say, Rav Joseph, declared that this is what people are accustomed to say: that poverty suits the Jews as handsomely as a red strap suits a white horse. In the Sepher Ikkarim of Rabbi Joseph Albo it reads somewhat differently, for at fol. 122, col. 1. in the 13th chapter of the fourth Máamar one reads thus: That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that poverty suits the Israelites as well as a red rose suits a white horse. This is also to be found in the little book Afkáth Róchel at the beginning of the second part. But if poverty suits the Jews so well, why then do they strive so eagerly, through their godless deceit and shameful usury, after riches?

Beyond the above, the one who visits a sick person shall also attain blessedness, and this is taught in the Talmudic tractate Nedarim fol. 40, col. 1, as follows: כל המבקר את החולה ניצל מדינה של גיהנם שנ' אשרי משכיל אל דל ביום רעה that is, every person who visits a sick person is saved from the punishment of hell, for it is said (Ps 41:2): Blessed is he who diligently attends to the poor (that is, the sick); the Lord will deliver him in the day of evil. And in the Jalkut chádasc it stands at fol. 72, col. 4, number 16, under the title Choli, written thus: כל המבקר את החולה ניצול מדינה של גיהנם ובע"הו מה שכרו ניצל that is, every person who visits a sick person is saved from the punishment of hell. What reward does he then have in this world: he is delivered from the evil inclination (which clings to man) and from afflictions; and all people will honor him, and he will gain good neighbors and no bad ones. On this matter, the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol. 102, col. 1, number 722, may also be consulted. But the one who does not visit the sick is regarded as equal to a murderer, for in the book Toráth ádam fol. 5, col. 2, it is taught from the aforementioned Talmudic tractate Nedarim fol. 40, col. 1, as follows: כל שאין מבקר חולים כאילו שופך דמים that is, whoever does not visit the sick does as much as if he were shedding blood. What benefit, however, the sick person derives from the visit is indicated in the aforementioned tractate Nedarim fol. 49, col.

2, with these words: כל המבקר חולה נוטל אחד מששים בצערו that is, whoever visits a sick person takes away from him one sixtieth part of his pain.

He who walks four cubits in the promised land shall also be saved; and this is read in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 55, col. 2. numero 11. under the title Gan éden, from the Talmudic tractate Kethuvóth, as follows: כל המהלך ארבע אמות בארץ ישראל מובטח לו שהוא בן עולם הבא that is, whoever walks four cubits or paces in the land of Israel is assured that he is a child of eternal life. And at numero 11. it follows in the same place: אפילו שפחה שבא"י מובטח לה שתהא בת עולם הבא that is, even a maidservant who is in the land of Israel is assured that she will be a child of eternal life.

He who recites Ps 145 daily shall also attain salvation. This is stated in Rabbi Bebai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 83, col. 4, in the Parashah Beschállach, where the following is written: ז"ל כבר בארו לנו רבותינו מעלת המזמור תהלה לדוד שהאומרו שלשה פעמים בכל יום מובטח לו שהוא בן העולם הבא That is: Our rabbis, of blessed memory, have already explained to us the excellence of Ps 145 (which begins) Tebilla ledavid, that is, A Song of Praise of David, namely that he who recites it three times every day is assured that he is a child of eternal life. Likewise, in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the aforementioned Five Books of Moses, fol. 53, col. 2, in the Parashah Vajéra, the following is read from the Zohar: ג' פעמים כל מאן דאמר תהלה לדוד That is: Whoever recites Ps 145 three times every day is a child of eternal life. And in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's book Táame mizvóth, it is taught at fol. 32, col. 2: כל האומר תהלה לדוד בכל יום כאילו קיים תרי"ג מצוות וכבר ידעת מה שאמרו רז"ל כל האומר תהלה לדוד בכל יום ג' פעמים That is: Whoever recites the psalm Tebilla ledavid every day does as much as if he had kept all 613 commandments. And you already know what our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said, namely that everyone who recites the psalm Tebilla ledavid three times every day is assured that he is a child of eternal life. Now, the Jews recite this psalm three times every day in their synagogues; therefore they must all be assured of their salvation.

The Rabbis also teach that a Jew who keeps even a single commandment of God properly will partake of eternal salvation. For this reason, the following is read in Rabbi Moses bar Maimon's Commentary on the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Maccóth, as can be seen in the Talmud printed at Amsterdam, fol. 28, col. 4: מעקרי האמונה בתורה כי כשיקיים אדם מצוה מתרי"ג מצוות כראוי וכהוגן ולא ישתף עמה כוונה מכוונות העולם בשום פנים אלא שיעשה אותה לשמה מאהבה כמו שבארתי לך הנה זכה בה לחיי העולם הבא. ועל זה אמר רבי חנניא כי המצוות בהיותם הרבה אי אפשר שלא יעשה אדם בחייו אחת מהם על מתכונתה ושלמותה ובעשותו אותה המצוה תחיה נפשו

מעשה That is: It is one of the principal articles of faith in the Law that when a person keeps one of the 613 commandments as is proper and fitting, and allows no intention, or no purpose, of the purposes of the world to intrude in any way (and lets nothing hinder him in his devotion), but rather does it out of love, for its own sake, as I have explained to you, he thereby becomes worthy of eternal life. For this reason Rabbi Chananja said that, because there are many commandments, it is impossible that a person should not keep at least one of them properly and perfectly in his lifetime. But if he does keep such a commandment, his soul shall live on account of that deed. Rabbi Isaac also expresses himself on this matter in his book Chissuk emuna, pagina 149., as follows: אפילו בקיום מצוה אחת כהלכתה לשם שמים יהיה לאיש הישראלי חלק חלק לעולם הבא ולפי רבוי קיום המצוות כן ירבה שכרו והגדל מעלתו לפני ה"ש וזוהי מר"ע כוסף והואב להכנס לארץ כדי על ידי קיום המצוות התלויות בארץ יזכה למעלה יותר גדולה בעולם הבא That is: When an Israelite man keeps even a single commandment as is proper, to the honor of God, he has a portion in eternal life. And likewise, according to the abundance of the keeping of the commandments, his reward shall be increased and his glory magnified before the blessed GOD. For this reason our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace, desired and longed to enter the land (of Canaan), so that through the keeping of the commandments that were tied to the land (that is, which were to be observed in that land alone) he might partake of a greater glory in eternal life. On this matter one may also consult Abarbanel's little book Rosch amana fol. 17, col. 2. and fol. 18, col. 1, as well as Rabbi Menasse ben Israel's book Nischmath chajim fol. 37, col. 2. and fol. 38, col. 1-2, in the 14th chapter of the first Maamar, where the matter is set forth at greater length.

Therefore, in the Médrash Mischle fol. 65, col. 3 (which ought rather to be fol. 1.) the following is read: כל המקיים מצוה אחת כאילו קיים כל התורה, That is: Whoever keeps one commandment does as much as if he kept the entire Law. For this reason, the following is also read in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 59, col. 2. numerô 23.: כל מי שמאכיל פרוסה לצדיק כאילו קיים חמשה חומשי תורה, That is: Whoever gives a righteous man a piece of food to eat does as much as if he had kept the five parts of the Law (that is, all the laws commanded in the five books of Moses). And in the book Pesikta sotárta it is written, fol. 50, col. 3, in the Parascha Schelách lechá: כל הכופר בעבודה זרה כאילו קיים כל התורה כולה, That is: Whoever renounces idolatry does as much as if he had kept the entire Law. Likewise, Rabbi Bechai teaches the following on this subject in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 198, col. 2, in the Parascha Ekef: כל המשקץ עבודה זרה כאילו קיים כל המצות ודרשו רבותינו ז"ל כל הכופר בעבודה זרה כאילו מודה בכל התורה כולה, That is: Whoever holds idolatry in abomination does as much as if he kept all the commandments; and our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: whoever denies idolatry does as much as if he confessed the entire Law; and whoever confesses idolatry does as much as if he denied the entire Law. On this point, one may also consult Rabbi Solomon Jarchi's commentary on the words of Exod 23:13, "You shall make no mention of the names of other gods."

Every Jew who believes the thirteen articles of the Jewish faith shall be saved, even if he commits all manner of sins to which desire and evil nature lead men astray. For this reason, Abarbanel in his little book Rosch amanáh fol. 5, col. 1., after having set forth the said thirteen articles, expresses himself as follows: כאשר ישלמו בלב בני אדם אלה העקרים כלם ויאמין בם הוא הנכנס בכלל ישראל וצריך לאהוב אותו ולמחול עליו ולעשות עמו כל מה שצוה הבורא לעשות איש לאחיו מן אהבה והאחוה. ואפילו אם יעשה כל העבירות שיש בעולם מצד התאוה והיצר וגבורת טבעיו והסרים That is: When all these principal articles are complete in the hearts of men, and a man believes them, he enters into the sum of the Israelites, and one must love him, and forgive him, and do for him everything that the Creator has commanded one person to do for another out of love and brotherhood. And even if he should commit all the transgressions (or sins) that exist in the world, on account of desire and evil disposition and the force of his deficient nature, he is indeed one of the sinning Israelites and will be punished according to his sins, yet he nonetheless has a share in eternal life. The very same thing is also to be found in Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's commentary on the Mishnah of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 121, col. 1. of the Talmud printed at Amsterdam, appended to the said tractate Sanhedrin, following the presentation of the aforementioned thirteen articles, though with some variation.

It is thus evident from the words of Abarbanel that even the wicked, after they have endured the punishment of their sins, shall be saved; and this accords with what is read in the book Toráth adam, fol. 100, col. 2. under the title Scháar haggerúl, in these words: כל הרשעים שעונותיהן מרובין דנין אותם כפי: חטאותיהם ויש להם חלק לעולם הבא that is, All the wicked who have committed many sins are punished according to their sins, and have a share in eternal life, for all Israelites have a share in eternal life. So too it is written in the book Kizzur reschíth chóchma, which is also called Sepher tappúche sabab, at the beginning of the chapter called Scháar hakkedúscha, as follows: שנינו כל ישראל יש להם חלק לעולם הבא שנ' ויעמך כלם צדיקים בא לנו להודיע שאף הרשעים כשנתרחק עונם על ידי עונשים קשים ומרים וגלגולים מכל מקום סופם להכנות עם כת הצדיקים ולעולם יירשו ארץ החיים והטעם הוא שהם נצר מטעי כי הנשמות של ישראל הן חלק אלוה וז"ש כי רחוק מרשעים ישועה. ר"ל אעפ שרחוקה היא מ"מ ישועה היא אחר: that is, We learn (in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 90, col. 1.) that all Israelites have a share in eternal life, as it is said (Isa 60:21): And all your people shall be righteous. And this indicates to us that even the wicked, after their transgressions have been removed from them through severe and bitter punishments and the transmigrations of souls from one body into another, shall at last be numbered among the company of the righteous and shall possess the land of the living forever. The reason for this, however, is that they are (as is read in the cited passage, Isa 60:21) branches of God's planting, for the souls of the Israelites are a part of God. And this is what is said (Ps 119:155): Salvation is far from the wicked; that is, although it is far off, it nevertheless comes to them after a long time. Something on this subject is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 34, col. 1., at the end of the Parascha Chaje-Sarah.

We thus see from this that the wicked are to become righteous and blessed through the endurance of severe punishments and through the passage of their souls from one body or place into another, of which thorough treatment was given above in the first chapter of this second part. For this reason, it is also written in the book Emek hammelech, fol. 143, col. 2, in the 34th chapter, under the title Schäär réicha difér an-pin, concerning the words of Abraham in Gen 15:8, "O God my Lord, by what shall I know that I shall possess it?" as follows: בקשת אברהם היה שיתן לו הק"ב זרע נצחי לו ולבניו עד סוף כל הדורות לבלתי ידה ממנו נדה כאומרו כל ישראל יש להם חלק לעולם הבא והשיב לו הק"ב לה ולזרעך אתן את הארץ הזאת שהיא ארץ החיים והראה לו עול מלכיות דהיינו ארבע גליות וגיהנם כמו שאמרו חכמינו ז"ל על ידי אלו העונשים יתכבס הנגע מהם ואז יהיה טהור ליכנס לגן עדן. וכל ישראל סופם להיות צדיקים על ידי כור הברזל ועל ידי גלגולים וחלק גן עדן שלהם מסתין עליהם מאיזותי יתכשרן לקבלו ואז יזכו ללכת מחיל אל חיל ויראו אל אלהים בציון שנאמר ועמך כלם צדיקים פירוש כלם מוכנים להיות סופם צדיקים וגומר: that is, Abraham desired that the Holy Blessed God might give to him and his children, until the end of all generations, an eternal seed, so that the outcast would not be (entirely) cast out from him, as it is said: All Israelites have a share in eternal life. Then the Holy Blessed God answered him: to you and to your seed I will give this land, which is the land of the living; and He showed him the yoke of the (four) Monarchies, namely the four exilia or exiles, and Hell, as our Sages, of blessed memory, have said, that through such punishments the leprosy (of sins) shall be washed away from them, and thereafter each one shall be pure so as to enter Paradise. All Israelites shall thus ultimately become righteous through the iron furnace and through the transmigrations of souls, and their portion of Paradise awaits them until they are truly fit to receive it; then they will be worthy to go from strength to strength and to see God in Zion, as it is said (Isa 60:21): "And all your people shall be righteous," that is, they will all be disposed or prepared so that they shall all ultimately become righteous. These are the words of the book Emek hammelech. As for how those who are punished in Hell on account of their sins also attain blessedness after their torment has been endured, a sufficiently full account of this will be given in the following sixth chapter, and let this be enough on this subject for now.

Chapter V.

In Which Is Shown What the Jews Write and Teach Concerning Paradise

Since in the preceding chapter mention was made of Paradise, into which the blessed souls come, and of Hell, in which the damned are punished, given that the rabbis know nothing of any third place to which the departed are supposed to go, as can be seen in the book Nischmath chajim, fol. 82, col. 1. 2, in the 23rd chapter of the second Maamar; we wish in this chapter also to consider what the Jews teach concerning Paradise, and in the following eighth chapter to show what opinions they hold concerning Hell. As regards Paradise, which is called Gan Eden, that is, the Garden of Delight, they say that it is one of those seven things which God the Lord is supposed to have created before the world, as was reported above in the eighth chapter of the first part from the Talmudic Tractate Pesachim, fol. 54, col. 1, and Nedarim, fol. 39, col. 2. In the great Jalkut Rubeni, this is stated at fol. 41, col. 2, in the Parashah Vajera, concerning the lower Paradise, in these words: דע כי גן עדן, ההתחתון נברא אלף שיסה שנה קודם עולם השפל שאנו בו That is: Know that the lower Paradise was created one thousand three hundred and sixty-five years before the lower world in which we exist. On the other hand, in the Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 5, col. 4, it is read that it was created on the third day of the creation of the world, and the words there read as follows: בראשון ברא שמים וארץ ואורה. בשני ברא גיהנם ורקיע ומלאכים. בשלישי ברא אילנות ודשאים וגן עדן. ברביעי ברא חמה ולבנה ומזלות. בחמשי עופות ודגים ולויתן. בששי אדם וחוה ורמש, That is: On the first day He (namely, God) created heaven and earth, as well as the light. On the second day He created Hell, and the firmament, together with the angels. On the third day He created the trees and the herbs, as well as Paradise. On the fourth day He created the sun and the moon, and the stars; on the fifth, the birds and the fish, and the Leviathan (that is, the great whale); but on the sixth, Adam and Eve, and the creeping creatures. Likewise it is written in Bereschith rabba, fol. 21, col. 1, in the 21st Parashah: גיהנם מקודם לגן עדן נבראת גיהנם בשני וגן עדן בשלישי That is: Hell was created before Paradise, and Hell was created on the second day, but Paradise on the third day. And this is likewise to be found in the little book of Rabbi Moshe bar Nachman, Torath (or Tóras) adam, fol. 98, col. 1. As for how these two mutually contradictory teachings can be reconciled with one another, I shall leave that for the overwise rabbis to worry about and to rack their brains over.

How large Paradise is can be seen from the Talmudic tractate Taanith fol. 10, col. 1., where the following is read: על: תנו רבנן ארץ מצרים היא ארבע מאות פרסה: ארבע מאות פרסה והוא אחד מששים בכוש וכוש אחד מששים בעולם ועולם אחד מששים בגונן אחד מששים לעדן ועדן אחד מששים לגיהנם נמצא כל העולם כולו ככיסוי קדירה לגיהנם: ויש אומרים גיהנם אין לה שיעור ויש אומרים עדן אין לה שיעור: that is, our Rabbis teach that the land of Egypt is four hundred miles long and wide, but that the land of the Moors is sixty times as large as Egypt, and the world sixty times as large as the land of the Moors, and the garden (of Paradise) sixty times as large as the world, and Eden (that is, Paradise) sixty times as large as the garden, but Hell sixty times as large as Eden: so that it is found that the entire world is only like the lid of a pot in comparison to Hell. Some, however, say that Hell cannot be measured; others, however, report that Paradise cannot be measured.

There are also said to be two Paradises: namely, the upper one in Heaven and the lower one on Earth, concerning which Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his book Nilschmáth chájim fol. 25, col. 2. in the tenth chapter of the first Maamar as follows: ראו' שנתע כי בעלי חכמת הקבלה הסכימו כי יש גן עדן עלאה וגן עדן התחתון והאמת אתם כי כן תמצא בספר הזוהר פ' שמות האחד הוא היכלא עילאה ושם נהרי אפרסמון וכל תענוגי עולם הבא. וגן עדן התחתון הנקרא היכלא תתאה גם מתענוגי העולם הבא. אבל לית ליה מגרמיה כלום עד שנוהן לו מהיכלא עילאה והוא נקרא אפריון That is: It is fitting that you should know that those who are versed in the Kabbalah unanimously declare that there is a Paradise above and one below, and they speak the truth, for so you will find it in the book Sóbar, in the Parasha Schemóth. The one is the uppermost palace, and there are rivers of balsam and all manner of delights of the life to come. The lower Paradise, however, which is called the lowest palace, also has something of the delights of the life to come, but it has nothing of itself until it is given to it from the uppermost palace, and that one is called Appírjon, that is, a bridal chamber. The very same is also found in the Jalkut chádatch fol. 56, col. 4. numero 38. under the title Gan Eden, and at numero 15 and 46 under the aforementioned title, still more concerning these two Paradises may be read. Likewise, in the book Megaliéh amykkóth fol. 78, col. 2. in the two hundred and twenty-third ófan, it is taught: כך יש גן עדן למטה בארץ. That is: Just as there is a Paradise above in Heaven, so too is there a Paradise below on Earth.

Regarding the location of the lower Paradise, the following is written in Rabbi Schem Tof's book, which is called Sépher haëmúnoth, fol. 65, col. 1, in the sixth chapter of the sixth Scháar: הזה מצי' בעולם הזה פירוש מדברי סופרים שגן עדן מצי' בעולם הזה: במקום ידוע בארץ ושארבע נהרות יוצאים משם ואחד מהן פרת הסובב את ארץ ישראל וכל מה שבא בכתוב מפשרי סדר בראשית הבל אמת ואנשי המדות עצמן אמרו שגן עדן תחת קו ההשויה לא יוסיף היום ולא יחסר, That is: It is clear from the words of the scribes that in this world a Paradise is found in a certain place on earth, and that four rivers flow out from it, one of which is the Euphrates, which surrounds the land of Israel. And everything that appears in Scripture concerning the order of creation, according to the literal sense, is entirely true. Likewise, worthy men themselves say that Paradise lies beneath the equatorial line of the world, where the day neither increases nor decreases. However, since it was shown just above from the Talmud that the garden of Paradise is sixty times as large as the entire world, I would very much like to know how it could be situated on the earth and constitute only a part of it; there must necessarily be a great and gross lie about this in the Talmud, since the Paradise into which God placed the first man, according to the teaching of Holy Scripture (Gen 2:8 etc.), consisted of only one part of the earth: how then could it be as large as it is described in the great book of fables, the Talmud?

Concerning the lower Paradise, it is also written that it has three gates, of which the book Megalléh amykkóth fol. 78, col. 2. in the two hundred and twenty-third Ofan states the following: שלשה פתחים יש לגן עדן ואחד מהם בארץ : that is, Paradise has three gates, and one of them is in the land of Israel in Beth Sean (a city mentioned in Josh 17:11), and likewise Hell also has three gates, one of which is in Jerusalem.

The upper Paradise is also said to have seven names, just as the lower one does. Regarding the upper one, it is written in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 26, col. 1, in the tenth chapter of the first Máamar, as follows: הנה הגן עדן עליון : שבע שמות נקראו לו ואלו הם. צרור החיים אהל ה' הר הקדש הר ה' מקום הקדש חצרות ה' ובית ה'. 'צרור החיים דכתיב והיתה נפש אדוני צרורה בצרור החיים את ה' אלהיך וכבר הוכחנו למעלה שעל ענין התענוג הנפשי אשר לו זוכים הצדיקים הכתוב מדבר. אהל ה' והר הקדש דכתיב ה' מי יגור באהלך מי ישכון בהר קדשך הולך תמים ופועל צדק וכו' וכן במזמור ס"א אמר אגורה באהלך עולמים. ובמ"ג שלח אורך ואמתך המה ינחנו יביאוני אל הר קדשך וכל : 'הר ה' ומקום הקדש דכתיב מי יעלה בהר ה' ומי יקום במקום קדשו נק' כפים ובר לבב וכל. ובודאי שעל עדן הגן ומקום קדשו בשיבה של מעלה הכתוב מדבר כי אליו נושא את נפשו לבד הנקי כפים ובר לבב. גם בפיוה נכונה לקרות חצרות ה' כמי שהמצא במזמור פ"ד נכספה וגם כלתה נפשי לחצרות ה' ועוד כי טוב יום בחצריך מאלף וגו' סוף דבר הכי קרא שמו בית ה' כמו שתמצא במזמור ל"ו מורה מעלת הצדיקים ירוון מדשן ביתך ונחל עדנך תשקם : ואמר עיני בנאמני ארץ לשבת עמדי והפך ברשעים לא ישב בקרב ביתי עושה רמיה : that is to say: Behold, the upper Paradise is called by seven names, and these are they: the Bundle of the Living, the Tent of the Lord, the Holy Mountain, the Mountain of the Lord, the Holy Place, the Courts of the Lord, and the House of the Lord. The Bundle of the Living, as it is written (1 Sam 25:29): "And the soul of my lord shall be bound up in the bundle of the living with the Lord your God." We have already demonstrated above that Scripture speaks here of the spiritual delight of which the righteous are made worthy. The Tent of the Lord and the Holy Mountain, as it is written (Ps 15:1-2): "Lord, who shall sojourn in Your tent? Who shall dwell upon Your holy mountain? He who walks blamelessly and does what is right," etc. And likewise in Ps 61 he says: "I will dwell in Your tent forever." And in Ps 43: "Send out Your light and Your truth; let them lead me, let them bring me to Your holy mountain," etc. The Mountain of the Lord and the Holy Place, as it is written (Ps 24:3-4): "Who shall ascend the mountain of the Lord? And who shall stand in His holy place? He who has clean hands and a pure heart," etc. And it is certain that Scripture speaks here of the Garden of Eden and His holy place in the heavenly academy, for only he who has clean hands and a pure heart lifts up his soul toward it. It is likewise fitting to call it the Courts of the Lord, as is found in Ps 84: "My soul longs, yes, even faints for the courts of the Lord," and further: "For a day in Your courts is better than a thousand," etc. In sum, it is also called by the name the House of the Lord, as you will find in Ps 36, which sets forth the excellence of the righteous: "They shall be abundantly satisfied with the richness of Your house, and You shall make them drink from the river of Your delights." And he says: "My eyes are upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me; he who walks in the way of integrity shall minister to me. He who practices deceit shall not dwell within my house."

"I will dwell in Your tabernacle forever." And in Ps 43:3 he says: "Send out Your light and Your truth; let them lead me and bring me to Your holy mountain," etc. The mountain of the LORD and the holy place, as it is written (Ps 24:3-4): "Who shall ascend the mountain of the LORD? And who shall stand in His holy place? He who has innocent hands and a pure heart," etc. Scripture speaks here certainly of paradise and its holy place in the supreme heavenly academy, for only he who has innocent hands and a pure heart lifts his soul thither. He is also accustomed to calling it the courts of the LORD, as you can find in Ps 84, where he says (v. 2): "My soul longs and yearns for the courts of the LORD." And further (he says there, v. 11): "For one day in Your courts is better than a thousand elsewhere," etc. Finally, he also calls it the house of the LORD, as you will find in Ps 36, which teaches the glory of the righteous, where it is read (v. 9): "They are made drunk (or filled) with the abundance of Your house, and You give them drink from the river of Your pleasures." So he also says (Ps 101:6): "My eyes look to the faithful in the land, that they may dwell with me." The opposite, however, is read (v. 7) concerning the ungodly, where it is said: "Deceitful people I will not keep in my house."

Regarding the seven names of the lower Paradise, the following is read in the aforementioned book Nischmāth chájim fol. 27, col. 1, in the cited tenth chapter of the first Māamar: כמו שיש גן עדן למעלה כך יש גן עדן למטה ומצאתי גם כן ששבע שמות נקראו לו ואלו הם. גן עדן היכל ה' ארץ החיים מקדשי אל עיר ה' משכנות ה' וארצות החיים. גן עדן הוא השם היותר מפורסם דכתיב ויטע ה' אלהים גן בעדן מקדם והוא בארץ ממש ושמו מוכיח עליו שהוא מקום התענוג והאושר ונטעו ה' כפי הרא"ב בע"צ מזרח וזהו מקדם ועליו אמר יחזקאל הנביא למלך צור בעדן גן אלהים היית כל אבן יקרה מסוכתיך אודם פטדה ויהלום וכו' וסופר ומונה כל שבחיו. ועליו נאמר גן נעול אחותי כלה וכו'. היכל ה' דכתיב אחת שאלתי מאת ה' אותה אבקש שבתי בבית ה' כל ימי חיי לחזות בנועם ה' ולבקר בהיכלו וגו'. ארץ החיים דכתיב לולא האמנתי לראות בטוב ה' בארץ חיים שיוטביה חיים לעולם מקדשי אל דכתיב ואני כמעט נטיו רגלי כי קנאתי בהוללים שלום רשעים אראה וכו' עד אבא אל מקדשי אל אבינה לאחריתם ר"ל שבקש בראותו צדיק ורע לו רשע וטוב לו לדעת מה בין עובד אלהים לאשר לו עבדו ויגע ולא מצא עד שבא במחשבת לבו אל מקדשי אל והם היכלי גן עדן כי שם השכר והגמול ובו יבחנו הטובים והרעים וזהו שאמר אבינה לאחריתם. עיר ה' דכתיב כחלום מהקיץ אדני בעיר צלמם תבזה ור"ל שבעיר ה' אשר למקום כבודו בנה בארץ אז צלמם שהיא נפשותם תבזה שלא יזונו ליכנס שם ולשבת במשכנות לא להם. וכן אמר במקום אחר להבריה מעיר ה' פועל און.

The passage is rendered in German as follows: Just as there is a Garden of Eden above, so too there is a Garden of Eden below, and I have likewise found that seven names have been given to it, and these are they: Garden of Eden, Palace of the Lord, Land of the Living, Sanctuary of God, City of the Lord, Dwellings of the Lord, and Lands of the Living. "Garden of Eden" is the most well-known name, as it is written: "And the Lord God planted a garden in Eden, toward the east" (Gen 2:8), and it is literally in the earth, and its name testifies of itself that it is a place of delight and happiness, and the Lord planted it, according to the Ra'ba, toward the east, and this is what is meant by "toward the east." Concerning it, the prophet Ezekiel said to the king of Tyre: "You were in Eden, the garden of God; every precious stone was your covering: ruby, topaz, and diamond, etc." (Ezek 28:13), and he goes on to enumerate and count all its praises. And concerning it, it is said: "A garden locked is my sister, my bride, etc." (Song 4:12). "Palace of the Lord," as it is written: "One thing I have asked of the Lord, that will I seek: that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord and to inquire in His palace, etc." (Ps 27:4). "Land of the Living," as it is written: "I believe that I shall look upon the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living" (Ps 27:13), meaning that those who are good there shall live forever. "Sanctuary of God," as it is written: "But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled, for I was envious of the arrogant when I saw the prosperity of the wicked, etc." (Ps 73:2-3), up to: "until I came into the sanctuary of God; then I discerned their end" (Ps 73:17), meaning that he sought, upon seeing the righteous faring ill and the wicked faring well, to understand what the difference is between one who serves God and one who does not serve Him, and he labored and did not find it until he came in the meditation of his heart to the sanctuary of God, which is the halls of the Garden of Eden, for there is the reward and the recompense, and there the good and the wicked are examined, and this is what he meant by "then I discerned their end." "City of the Lord," as it is written: "Like a dream when one awakes, O Lord, when you rouse yourself, you despise their image" (Ps 73:20), meaning that in the City of the Lord, which He built on earth as the place of His glory, their image, that is, their souls, shall be despised, so that they will not be permitted to enter there and to dwell in dwellings that are not theirs. And likewise it is said in another place: to drive from the City of the Lord the worker of iniquity.

און וכתוב נהר פלגיו ישמחו עיר אלהים. וכמו שכתוב בזוהר פרשת בשלח הוא הנהר דכתיב ביה ונהר יוצא מעדן להשקות את הגן. משכנות ה' דכתיב שלה אורך ואמתך המה ינחוני יביאוני אל הר קדשך ואל משכנותיך ואומר מה ידידות משכנותיך ה' צבאות נכספה וגם כלתה נפשי לחצרות רוצה לומר שאף שידידים הם משכנות ה' בגן עדן של מטה נפשו היתה נכספה לעלות עוד לחצרות ה' בגן עדן של מעלה. ארצות החיים דכתיב אתהלק לפני ה' בארצות החיים. ואמר That is: בלשון רבים ארצות להודיע ששם ישבו כסאות למשפט כסאות לכל צדיק וצדיק just as there is a Paradise above, so there is also one below. I have likewise found that this same lower Paradise has seven names, for it is called: the Garden of Eden (that is, the garden of delight), the Palace of the Lord, the Land of the Living, the Sanctuaries of God, the City of the Lord, the Dwellings of the Lord, and the Lands of the Living. The name Garden of Eden is the most familiar, as it is written (Gen 2:8): "And God the Lord planted a garden in Eden, toward the east," and this garden is certainly upon the earth. Its very name also indicates that it is a place of delight and blessedness; and God planted it, according to the opinion of Rabbi Aben Ezra, toward the rising of the sun, which is signified by the words "toward the east." Of this same garden the prophet Ezekiel also said (in his 28th chapter, v. 13) to the king of Tyre: "You were in Eden, in the garden of God; you were adorned with every precious stone, with sardius, topaz, and diamond, etc.," and he recounts and reports in what follows all the praises thereof. Of the same it is also said (Song 4:12): "You are an enclosed garden, my sister, my bride, etc." It is called the Palace of the Lord, as it is written in Ps 24:4: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek: that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to visit His Palace." It is called the Land of the Living, as it is written (Ps 27:12): "Unless I had believed that I would see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living, in the land whose inhabitants live (I would have perished from heartache)." It is called the Sanctuaries of God, as it is written (Ps 73:2, 3, 17): "But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled; for I was envious of the foolish, when I saw that the wicked prosper, etc., until I went into the Sanctuaries of God, and considered their end." He (King David) means to say by this: when he had seen that it went ill with the righteous and well with the wicked, he sought to know what distinction there might be between one who serves God and one who does not serve God, and he labored to find this out, but could not, until in the thoughts of his heart he came to the Sanctuaries of God, which are the palaces of Paradise; for it is there that reward and recompense are to be awaited, and through this the good and the wicked are tested, and this is what he says: "And I considered their end." It is called the City of God, as it is written (in the aforementioned Ps 73:20): "As a dream when one awakens, so, O Lord, You will make their image despised in the City," and he (King David) means to say by this that the Lord, in the City which He has built upon the earth as the place of His glory, will then make their image, that is, their souls, despised, so that they shall not be worthy to enter therein and to dwell in the habitations that do not belong to them. And thus he also says in another place (namely Ps 101:8): "That I may cut off all evildoers from the City of the Lord." And it is written (Ps 46:5): "The river and its streams shall make glad the City of God." And just as it is written in the Sohar in the Parascha Beschallach: this is the river of which it is written (Gen 2:10): "And a river went out from Eden to water the garden." It is called the Dwellings of the Lord, as it is written (Ps 43:3): "Send out Your light and Your truth; let them lead me and bring me to Your holy mountain and to Your dwellings." And (Ps 84:2, 3) he says: "How lovely are Your dwellings, Lord of Hosts. My soul longs and yearns for the courts of the Lord." He means to say: although the dwellings of the Lord in the lower Paradise are lovely, yet his soul longed to ascend further into the courts of the Lord, into the upper Paradise. It is called the Lands of the Living, as it is written (Ps 116:9): "I will walk before the Lord in the Lands of the Living," and he used the plural form, "in the lands" (and not the singular, "in the land"), in order to indicate thereby that thrones for judgment and thrones for every righteous person shall be set up there.

Each Paradise is also said to be divided into seven dwellings or palaces, concerning which the aforementioned book Nischmath chajim, fol. 32, col. 2, in the 12th chapter of the first Maamar, states the following: דע כי כמו שיש בגן עדן עליון והתחתון ותחתון שבעה בתים ליתן שכר טוב לצדיקים כפי מעלתם כך יש בביהמם ז' מדורות ליפרע מן הרשעים: that is, Know that just as in the upper and lower Paradise there are seven dwellings, in order to give the righteous a good reward according to their worthiness, so too are there seven dwellings in hell, in order to punish the wicked. Above, in the 19th chapter of the first part, it was shown from the book Col bo, fol. 136, col. 4, and fol. 137, col. 1, in what manner Rabbi Joshua ben Levi escaped the Angel of Death and leaped into Paradise; and in the passage immediately following that, the seven dwellings of the lower Paradise are described as follows: הלך מלאך המות אל ר' יהושע בן לוי: אמר לו ר' וכל אמר לו רבן גמליאל יפה עשה לך אלא בא לרבן גמליאל ואמר לו כך וכך עשה לי ר' יהושע בן לוי אמר לו רבן גמליאל יפה עשה לך אלא בא ואשלחך אליו ואמור לו בבקשה ממך שתחפש בגן עדן כולו וגיהנם ואוצרותיהם וכתוב אותם ותשלח אותם אלי אם יש גוים בגן עדן ומבני ישראל בגיהנם. הלך מלאך המות ואמר לו רבי יהושע כך אעשה. הלך רבי יהושע וחפש בגן עדן כולו ומצא בו ז' בתים בגן עדן וכל בית ובית שנים עשר רבוא מילין באורך וברוחב שנים עשר רבוא מילין. שיעור מדת ארכן כרחבן. הבית הראשון כנגד הפתח הראשון בגן עדן שוכנים בו גרים שבישראל שנתגירו מאליהן לא בחזק. והקירות שלו בנויות מזכוכית. וקורותיה ארזים. וכשבאתי למדדה עמדו כל הגרים ובקשו לעבור. ענה עובדיה. הצדיק שהוא ממונה עליהם ואמר להם מנין זכותכם שישב זה עמכם מיד הניחוני למדדה הבית השני כנגד פתח השני בגן עדן והיא בנויה מכסף וקורותיה ארזים. ויושבין בה בעלי תשובה ומנשה בן חזקיהו ממונה עליהן: הבית השלישי כנגד הפתח השלישי בגן עדן והיא בנויה מכסף וזהב ושוכנים בה אברהם ויצחק ויעקב וכל ישראל שיצאו מארץ מצרים ודור המדבר וכל בני המלך דוד חוץ מאבשלום ושם דוד ושלמה וכלאב בן דוד חי הוא שם. ושם כל מלכי בית יהודה חוץ מנשה בן חזקיהו שהוא ממונה על כל בעלי תשובה ומשה ואהרן הם ממונים עליהם ושם כל כלי זהב וכלי כסף הנחמדים וכל טובות ושמינים ואבנים וחופות במטות וכסאות ומנורות של זהב ושל אבנים טובות ומרגליות ואמרת לי שם מאומות העולם אפילו טבני עשו אחי. אמר לי לא שכל טובה שהם עושים בעולם הק"ב משלם להם שכרם בחייהם באותו העולם ובסוף יורשין גיהנם. אבל בישראל כל רשע שבהם לוקה בעולמו בחייו וזוכה לעולם הבא שנאמר ומשלם לשונאיו וגומר. הבית הרביעי כנגד הפתח הרביעי בגן עדן והוא בנוי ויפה כאדם הראשון וקורותיו מעצי זית ובו צדיקים גמורים ונאמנים. ולמה מעצי זית על שהיו ימיהם מרורים כזית. הבית החמישי הוא בנוי מכסף וזהב ופז ומבתם ומזכוכית ומבדולח ונהר גיחון מושך אל תוכו וקורותיו זהב וכסף והפרש מעלה מכל ריח הלבנון הפרשת מטות כסף וזהב ובשמים תכלת וארגמן מאריגת הוה ותולעת שני ושש ועזים מאריגת המלאכים ושוכנים בו משיח בן דוד ואליהו זכור לטוב ואפריון מעצי הלבנון. עמודיו עשה כסף רפידתו ארגמן. ובתוך האפריון משיח שוכן שהוא אהבת בנות ירושלים. של תוכו רצוף אהבה ואליהו זכור לטוב נוטל ראשו של משיח ומניחו בחיקו ואומר לו החרש כי הקץ קרוב ואבות העולם והשבטים כלם ומשה ואהרן ודוד ושלמה וכל מלך ומלך מישראל ומבית דוד כל שני וחמשי וכל שבת ויום טוב באים אליו ובוכים עמו ומחזיקים אותו ואומרים לו דום והשען בבוראך כי הקץ קרוב ואף קרה ועדתו ודתן ואבירים ואבשלום באים אליו כל יום רביעי ושואלים אותו עד מתי קץ הפלאות ומתי תשוב תחינו ומתהומות הארץ תשוב תעלנו והוא אומר אומר להם לכו אצל אבותיכם ושאלו להם, וכששומעין כך מתביישין ואינם שואלים אל האבות, וכשבאתי אצל משיח שאל אותי ואמר לי מה עושים ישראל בעולם שבאת משם אמרתי לו הם מחכים אותך בכל יום מיד הרים קולו בבכיה. הבית השביעי יושבין בו מתים בדרך מצוה. That is: Then the Angel of Death went to Rabban Gamaliel and said to him: such and such has Rabbi Joshua ben Levi done to me. But Rabban Gamaliel answered him: he did right by you; come now, I will send you to him, and say to him: I beg you, search through all of Paradise and hell and their treasures, and describe them, and report to me whether there are also Gojim, or heathens, in Paradise, and any of the children of Israel in hell. Then the Angel of Death went, and Rabbi Joshua said to him: I will do so. And Rabbi Joshua went and searched through all of Paradise, and there are within it seven houses or dwellings, and each house was twelve times ten thousand (that is, one hundred and twenty thousand) miles long and twelve times ten thousand miles wide, and thus just as long as it is wide. The first house is situated opposite the first gate of Paradise, and dwelling therein are the proselytes who are among the Israelites, those who of their own accord and without compulsion (or coercion) have adopted the Jewish faith; and the walls thereof are built of glass, and its beams are of cedar. When I came to measure it, all the proselytes stood up and wished to pass through (and prevent it); then the righteous (prophet) Obadiah, who is set over them, spoke and said to them: by what merit have you earned that this man should wish to dwell with you? Whereupon they immediately permitted him to measure it. The second house is situated opposite the second gate of Paradise, and it is built of silver, and its beams are of cedar; and dwelling therein are those who have done penance, and Menasse, the son of (King) Hiskiah, is set over them. The third house is situated opposite the third gate of Paradise, and it is built of silver and gold; and dwelling therein are Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, together with all the Israelites who went out of Egypt, as well as the generation that was in the wilderness, and all the sons of King David, except for Absalom. There also are David, and Solomon, and Chileab the son of David, alive. There are also all the kings of the house of Judah therein, excepting Menasse the son of Hiskiah, who is set over all those who have repented. But Moses and Aaron are set over them. There also are all manner of desirable golden and silver vessels, and all kinds of good things, and oil, and stones, as well as chambers with beds and chairs, and candlesticks of gold and precious stones and pearls. When I then asked for whom these were prepared, David answered and said to me: these are all for the children who dwell in the world from which you have come. When I then asked him whether there were also any of the nations of the world and of the children of Esau therein, he said to me: no, for the holy and blessed God gives them their reward for all the good they do in the world during their lifetimes in this world, but in the end they inherit hell; whereas every wicked man among the Israelites is chastised during his lifetime in this world and earns the life to come, as it is said (Deut 7:10): And He repays those who hate Him, etc. The fourth house is situated opposite the fourth gate of Paradise, and it is built and beautiful like the first man, but its beams are of olive wood, and therein are the perfect and faithful righteous. But why is it built of olive wood? Because their days were bitter like an olive. The fifth house is built of silver and gold, and of fine gold, and of glass and crystal, and the river Gihon flows through the midst of it; its beams are of gold and silver, and there is a fragrance that far surpasses all the scent of Lebanon. The furnishing of the beds is of silver and gold and spices, blue silk and scarlet, woven by Eve, as well as crimson and the finest linen and goat's hair woven by the angels. Dwelling therein are the Messiah, the son of David, and Elias, of blessed memory; and there is a chamber made from the wood of the mountain of Lebanon, whose pillars are of silver and whose floor is adorned with scarlet, and in that chamber dwells the Messiah, who is beloved by the daughters of Jerusalem. Within it is laid with love, and Elias, of blessed memory, lifts the head of the Messiah and lays it in his lap and says to him: be still, for the end is near (when you shall redeem Israel). The fathers of the world also come (namely Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) and all the ten tribes, as well as Moses, Aaron, and David, and Solomon, together with all the kings of Israel and of the house of David, on every second and fifth day of the week (namely on Monday and Thursday), as well as on every Sabbath and feast day, to him, and weep with him, and hold him, and say to him: be still, and trust in your Creator, for the end is near. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram also come to him on every fourth day (of the week, namely on Wednesday) and ask him: when will the end of wonders be? And when will you raise us up again (from the dead)? And bring us up again from the depths of the earth? But he says to them: go to your fathers and ask them. When they hear this, they are ashamed and do not ask the fathers. When I came to the Messiah, he asked me and said to me: what are the Israelites doing in the world from which you have come? And I answered him: they wait for you every day; whereupon he immediately raised his voice in weeping. In the sixth house dwell those who died on the way of the commandments. In the seventh house dwell those who died of illnesses on account of the sins of the Israelites. These are the words from the book Col bo; and in connection with this one may also consult the book Shalshelet hakkabbāla, Amsterdam edition, fol. 73, col. 2, under the title Adam, where such seven dwellings are briefly described, as well as the book Emek hammelech, fol. 178, col. 4, and fol. 179, col. 1, in the 3rd chapter under the title Schāar ólam habberiah, where a more extensive account of them is given.

Just as there are seven distinct dwellings in the upper and lower Paradise, so too shall there be in each of them seven groups or orders of the righteous, each order having its own particular dwelling. Concerning the seven groups or orders in the upper Paradise, it is written in Médrasch Tillim, fol. 11, col. 3, on Ps 11, regarding the words of v. 7, "The upright shall behold His face," as follows: שבע כתות הן שהן עתידין לעמוד לעתיד לבא לפני חי וקיים קודשא בריך הוא ואיו: כת המעולה שבהן שמקבלין פני שכינה זו כת ישרים שנאמר יהוה פנימו וכתוב אחר אומר ישבו ישרים את פניך וגו' ישר יהוה פנימו אלו שבע כתות של צדיקים שכן כתיב והמשכילים יזהירו כזוהר הרקיע כחמה וכלבנה כרקיע ככוכבים כברקים וכשושנים וכלפידים. כחמה

שנאמר ואוהביו כצאת השמש בגבורתו. כלבנה שנאמר כירח יכון לעולם. כרקיע שנאמר והמשכילים יזהירו כזוהר הרקיע. ככוכבים שנאמר ככוכבים לעולם ועד. כברקים שנאמר כברקים ירוצצו. כשושנים שנ' למנצה על שושנים. כלפידים שנאמר ומראהו כלפידים. והכת הראשונה יושבת לפני המלך ורואה את המלך זאת הפנים שנאמר ישבו ישרים את פניך ואומר ישר יזהו פנימו. והכת שניה אשרי יושבי ביתך. והשלישית מי יעלה בהר יי. 'רביעית אשרי תבחר ותקרב. חמישית יי 'מי יגור באהליך. ששית מי ישכון בהר קדשך. שביעית ומי That is: There are seven groups who in the future will stand before the living, enduring, holy, and blessed GOD. But which is the most distinguished group among them? Those who stand before the face of the divine Majesty, namely the group that beholds His face. And in another place (Ps 140:14) it is written: "The upright shall dwell before Your face," etc. The words "the upright shall behold His face" signify the seven groups of the righteous, for thus it is written (Dan 12:3): "The wise (or the teachers) shall shine like the brightness of the firmament." They shall shine like the sun, and like the moon, like the firmament, like the stars, like the lightning, like the lilies, and like the torches. Like the sun, as it is said (Judg 5:31): "But those who love Him shall be as the sun when it goes forth in its might." Like the moon, as it is said (Ps 89:38): "Like the moon shall it be established forever." Like the firmament, as it is said (Dan 12:3): "The wise shall shine like the brightness of the firmament." Like the stars, as it is said (Dan 12:3 as well): "Like the stars forever and ever." Like the lightning, as it is said (Nah 2:4, or according to some, v. 5): "They rush swiftly like lightning." Like the lilies, as it is said (Ps 45:1): "For the choirmaster, upon the lilies." Like the torches, as it is said (Nah 2:4): "Their appearance is like torches." The first group sits before the King and sees the King and His face, as it is said (Ps 140:14): "The upright shall dwell before Your face." So too it is said (Ps 11:7): "The upright shall behold His face." Concerning the second group (Ps 84:5 reads): "Blessed are those who dwell in Your house." Concerning the third group (Ps 24:3 says): "Who shall ascend the mountain of the LORD?" Concerning the fourth group (Ps 65:5 reads): "Blessed is the one whom You choose and bring near." Concerning the fifth group (Ps 15:1 reads): "LORD, who shall sojourn in Your tent?" Concerning the sixth group (likewise Ps 15:1 reads): "Who shall dwell on Your holy mountain?" Concerning the seventh (Ps 24:3 reads): "And who shall stand in His holy place?" Each group also has its own distinct dwelling in Paradise. That this is to be understood as referring to the upper Paradise is to be found in the book Nischmath máth chájim, fol. 26, col. 1-2, in the 10th chapter of the first Maamar, where all of this likewise appears and where the upper Paradise is treated. One may also consult these seven groups in Vajikra rábba, fol. 163, col.

1, in the thirtieth Parascha, as well as in the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 46, col. 1, in the 29th chapter under the title Chélek haavóda.

Regarding the seven groups or orders in the lowest Paradise, these are described in the aforementioned book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 27, col. 2, as follows: שניה • ראשונה הרוגי מלכות כגון רבי עקיבא וחבריו טבועים בים • שלישית רבן יוחנן בן זכאי ותלמידיו וגו' כת רביעית אלו שירדה הענן וכסה עליהן • כת חמישית אלו בעלי תשובה במקום שבעלי תשובה עומדין צדיקים גמורים אינן עומדין • כת ששית אלו רווקים שלא טעמו טעם חטא מימיהם. כת שביעית אלו עניים שיש בהן מקרא ומשנה ודרך ארץ עליהם הכתוב אומר וישמחו כל חוסי כך לעולם ירננו וה"בה יושב ביניהן ומבאר להן את התורה שנאמר עיני בנאמני ארץ לשבת עמדי וכו' ולא פרסם הק"ה כבוד המתוקן להם יותר ויותר שנאמר עין לא ראתה אלהים זולתך יעשה למחכה לו. הבט נא איך לכל אחד ואחד מכתיו הצדיקים ייחס בית ומדור לעצמו ואיך המדרגה העליונה שאין למעלה ממנה היא מדרגת הרוגי המלכות כמו רבי עקיבא וחבריו וגו' That is: The first group consists of those who were put to death by the kingdom (under whose power they were, or for the sake of the kingdom and the honor of God), such as Rabbi Akkiva and his companions (who were killed by the Roman Empire). The second group is of those who drowned in the sea. The third group is that of Rabbi Jóchanan ben Sáccaï and his disciples, etc. The fourth group consists of those upon whom a cloud descended and covered them. The fifth group are those who repented; and in the place where the penitent stand, the perfectly righteous do not stand. The sixth group are the unmarried, who never tasted the flavor of sin throughout their lives. The seventh group are the poor who occupied themselves with the Bible, the Mishnah, and an honorable earthly conduct; of these, Scripture says (Ps 5:12): "Let all those who trust in You rejoice, that they may exult forever." And the holy, blessed God sits in their midst and expounds the Law to them, as it is said (Ps 101:6): "My eyes are upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell (or sit) with me," etc. The holy, blessed God has also revealed more of the glory that is prepared for them, as it is said (Isa 64:4): "No eye has seen, O God, besides You, what You do for those who wait for You." Observe now how each and every group of the righteous is assigned its own distinct house and dwelling, and how the highest degree, above which there is no other, is the degree of those who were put to death by the kingdom (or for the sake of the kingdom and the honor of God), just as Rabbi Akkiva and his companions were. These are the words of the book Nischmáth chajim. This passage, however, is taken from the Jalkut Schimóni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 7, col. 1, numerô 20. In the Jalkut chádasch, fol. 55, col. 2, numerô 16, under the title Gan Eden, the following is read from the Sóhar chádasch, fol. 34, col. 2: כל שבט יש לו מדור בפני עצמו בגן עדן That is: Every tribe (of the twelve tribes of Israel) has its own distinct dwelling in Paradise. But in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat, fol. 152, col. 1, it stands: כל צדיק עושין

That is: For every righteous person, a dwelling is made according to his honor.

It shall also not be permitted to the angels and to the most righteous who are in Paradise to go from the place of their rank to a place that is of a higher rank, concerning which Rabbi Aharon Schmu'el writes in his book Nischmáth ádam, in the tenth chapter, fol. 39, col. 2, as follows: המלאך נקרא עומד לפי שהוא עומד על משמרתו תמיד כפי שגזר עליו השם ואין לו רשות לזוז ממקומו ומדרגתו וכל מלאך אשר רוצה לזוז ממקומו ומדרגתו לקרב ולגשת למדרגת חברו מיד נתבטל מציאותו כמו שכתב בעל ראשית חכמה בשם ספר ברית מנוחה בענין קברות התאוה כי שם קברו את העם המתאווים 'כי כל מלאך שיחשוק ויתאוה לעלות למעלה ממדרגתו יתבטל מציאותו וזה ענין הקבורה וכו' נמצא כי המלאכים תמיד על משמרתם יעמדו וכן הוא בענין קצת צדיקים שיש לכל אחד ואחד מדור בעדן בפני עצמו אין לו רשות לגשת לעלות למעלה ממדרגתו לחופת חברו כי מיד נבוה מאודו הגדול ועל כן גם המה בשם עומדים נקראו כי צריכים לעמוד על משמרתם. אמנם החסידים השרידים אשר הנור סביב עליה והמה מעטים שזוכים לדביקות השי"ת יש להם רשות להלוך ארוכות וקצרות לטייל בכל מקומות ושערים וחדרים וזהו המעלה שאין למעלה הימנו כי בטוולם בהיכלות המלאכים וחדרי גן עדן מקום ששאר הצדיקים יושבים הם משפיעים : that is, an angel is called a standing one, because he stands at his post at all times, as God has ordained for him, and he has no permission to depart from his place and his rank; and any angel who wishes to depart from his place and rank, and to draw near and approach the rank of his companion, is immediately reduced to nothing, as the author of the book Reschíth (or Reschís) chóchma writes, citing the book Berith (or Berís) menúcha, in the matter where he treats of the graves of lust (concerning which Num 11:34 is to be read), in which the people who had lusted (after flesh) were buried, writing that any angel who has desire and longs to ascend above his rank shall be reduced to nothing (and perish), and that this is to be understood through the burial, etc. It is thus found that the angels stand at their post at all times. And so it is likewise with certain of the righteous, since each one has a separate dwelling in Paradise, and none is permitted to ascend from his rank to the chamber of his companion and to draw near to him, for he is immediately consumed by that one's great fire; for this reason they too are called standing ones, because they must stand at their post. But the remaining pious ones, who are permitted to ascend, though they are few who are worthy to cleave to the holy and most blessed God, have permission to go to far and near places, and to walk (or stroll) in all places, gates, and chambers, and this is a rank (and distinction) above which there is none; for when they walk about in the palaces of the angels and the places of Paradise, as the place in which the remaining righteous dwell, they impart to them abundantly of the radiance of their wisdom, which God has bestowed upon them.

Regarding the lower Paradise, it is described as follows in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 7, col. 1, numero 20: ארי 'כל שני שערי כדכד יש בגן עדן ועליהם ששים רבוא מלאכי השרת וכל אחד מהם זיו פניהם כזוהר הרקיע מבהיק ובשעה שהצדיק בא אצלם מפשיטין מעליו הבגדים שעמד בהן בקבר ומלבישין אותו ח' בגדים של ענני כבוד ושני כתרים נותנים על ראשו אחד של אבנים טובות ומרגליות ואחד של זהב פרוים ונותנין שמנה הדסים בידו ומקלסין אותו ואומרים לו לך אכול בשמחה לחמך ומכניסין אותו למקום נחלי מים מזוקק ת"ח מיני וורדין והדסים וכל אחד ואחד יש לו חופה בפני עצמו לפי כבודו שנאמר כי על כל כבוד חופה ומושכין ממנה ד' נהרות אחד של חלב ואחד של יין ואחד של אפרסמון ואחד של דבש וכל חופה וחופה למעלה ממנה גפן של זהב ול' מרגליות קבועות בו וכל אחד מבהיק זיוו כזיו הנוגה וכל חופה וחופה יש בה שלחן של אבנים טובות ומרגליות וששים מלאכים עומדים לראש כל צדיק וצדיק ואומרים לו לך אכול בשמחה דבש בעסקת בתורה שנמשלה כדבש שנאמר ומתוקים מדבש ושתה יין המשומר בענביו מששת ימי בראשית שעסקת בתורה שנמשלה כיון שנאמר אשקך מיין הרקח והצעיר שבהן כדמותו של יוסף וכדמות ר' יוחנן ופרוטי רמון שש כסף מזוקק כנגד השמש ואין אצלם לילה שנאמר ואורח צדיקים כאור נוגה. ומתחדש עליהם לשלש משמרות. משמרה ראשונה נעשה קטן ונכנס למחיצת קטנים ושמה שמחת קטנים: משמרה שנייה נעשה בחור ונכנס למחיצת בחורים. ושמה שמחת בחורים: משמרה שלישית נעשה זקן ונכנס למחיצת זקנים ושמה שמחת זקנים. ויש בגן שמונים ריבוא מיני אילנות בכל זוויתו הקטן שבהן משוכה מכל מכל עצי בשמים בכל זווית יש בו ס' ריבוא של מלאכי השרת מזמרים בקול נעים ועץ החיים באמצע וגופו מכסה כל גן עדן ויש בו ת"ק אלף טעמים ואין דמותו של זה כדמות לזה ואין ריחו של זה דומה לשל זה וז' ענני כבוד למעלה ממנו ומארבע רוחות מכין אותו וריחו הולך מסוף העולם ועד סופו ותחתיו תלמידי חכמים שמבארין את התורה וכל אחד יש לו שתי חופות אחת של כוכבים ואחת של חמה ולבנה בין כל חופה וחופה פרגוד של ענני כבוד ולפנים המנה עדן שבה יש That is: Rabbi Jehóscha, the son of Levi, said: there are two gates of rubies in Paradise, and over them stand sixty times ten thousand (that is, six hundred thousand) ministering angels, and the face of each of them shines like the brightness of the firmament. When a righteous man comes to them, they strip from him the garments he wore in the grave and clothe him with eight garments of the clouds of glory, and they place two crowns upon his head, one of precious stones and pearls, and the other made of Parvaim gold (of which one may read in 2 Chr 3:6), and they give him eight myrtles in his hand and praise him and say to him: go, eat your bread with joy. They also lead him into a place in which there are streams of water, which is surrounded by eight hundred kinds of roses and myrtles, and each righteous man has a separate canopy (or covering or canopy of heaven) according to his honor (or glory), as it is said (Isa 4:5): for there shall be a canopy (or covering) over all glory. And four rivers flow out from it, one of wine, one of milk, one of balsam, and one of honey. Over each canopy there is also a golden vine, and thirty pearls are set into it, each of which shines like the planet Venus. Under each canopy there is a table of precious stones and pearls, and sixty angels stand over the head of each righteous man and say to him: go and eat honey with joy, since you have studied (and applied yourself to) the Law, which is compared to honey, as it is said (Ps 19:11): and they are sweeter than honey. And drink the wine that has been kept in its grapes since the six days of creation, since you have studied the Law, which is compared to wine, as it is said (Song 8:2): I will give you spiced wine to drink. The most comely among them, however, is equal in form to Joseph and to Rabbi Jochanan (both of whom were indeed very handsome, as may be read of Joseph in Gen 39:6, and of Rabbi Jochanan in the Talmudic tractate Bava mezia, fol. 84, col. 1); and pieces of silver pomegranates are hung around them facing the sun (or suspended all around), and there is no night among them, as it is said (Prov 4:18): the path of the righteous shines like a light. Each one is also renewed (and transformed) in all three night watches (or vigils). In the first watch he becomes a small child and enters the place where the small children are, and rejoices as small children rejoice. In the second watch he becomes a youth and enters the place where the youths dwell, and rejoices as youths rejoice. In the third watch he becomes old and enters the place where the old men dwell, and rejoices as old men rejoice. There are also in Paradise eighty times ten thousand (that is, eight hundred thousand) kinds of trees in all its corners, and the least among them is more worthy of praise than all the spice trees. In each corner there are also sixty times ten thousand (that is, six hundred thousand) ministering angels who sing with a lovely voice, and the Tree of Life is in the middle, whose branches cover the whole of Paradise. It also has five hundred thousand flavors, and none is like another, just as the fragrance of one is not like that of another. There are likewise seven clouds of glory above it, and it is struck from the four corners of the world so that its fragrance goes from one end of the world to the other. Beneath it are the disciples of the sages (that is, those who have studied the Law well), who expound the Law, and each one has two canopies (or heavens), one of stars and the other of the sun and moon, and between each canopy there is a curtain of the clouds of glory. And within it is the delight in which there are three hundred and ten worlds, as it is said (Prov 8:21): that I may cause those who love me to inherit יש jesch, that is, true good. For the word jesch amounts by Gematria to three hundred and ten.

In these cited words from the Jalkut Schimoni, one can see that when the deceased arrive in Paradise, the angels are supposed to remove their garments and put other ones on them. This, however, is entirely inconsistent with what stands in the Maase-Book, in the 213th chapter, where the following is read: מעשה גיטמך מן חיים ועטען לו ק"ק ורמש דא וור מיין זון גישטורבן הוט גיהייסן פוניק ומר מיין מוטר אמן מור גינג חזן מואב מיט איז אטיק מזל 'וויא רבי פוניק פֿור דיא שול טיר קומט שטייט איינר הוט פֿיין קרגן ווהיל זיין הויבט פֿאַרכט זיך רבי פוניק פֿור אין ער ווינט צו ווטר

Now when Rabbi Pónim came before the synagogue door, there stood a man who had a wreath upon his head; and Rabbi Pónim was frightened of this man. The man said: fear not, and go on your way; do you not know me? Rabbi Pónim said: are you not the one whom I buried yesterday? And the man answered: yes, it is I. Then Rabbi Pónim asked him: why do you come here, or how does it go with you in the other world? And he answered him: it goes well with me, and I am held in very high esteem in Paradise. Thereupon Rabbi Pónim said to him: yet in this world you were regarded as a poor sort of Jew; what good work did you do, that you are held in such honor? Then the dead man answered: that I will tell you, because every morning I rose early and said my prayer with devotion, and recited the blessing from my whole heart; for that reason I now recite the blessing in Paradise as well, and I am held in very high regard. If you will not believe it, I will give you a sign so that you must believe it, for yesterday, when you put my burial shroud on me, you tore one of my sleeves. Rabbi Pónim asked: what does the wreath signify? And the dead man answered: that the wind of the world does me no harm, for these are good herbs from Paradise. Then Rabbi Pónim mended and patched his sleeve for him, because the dead man said he would otherwise have to be ashamed that other dead persons had whole garments on, while he had a torn garment; and thereupon the dead man vanished. Therefore let every man perform his commandments with devotion, and then it will go very well with him in the other world; and he should take care that nothing which is open is forgotten in the case of any dead person. From this we see that one who is supposed to have come from Paradise still had his burial garment on; and so it would not be true that the angels remove the garments from the deceased in which they are buried, as is read in the Jalkut, for otherwise this man would not have appeared to Rabbi Pónim in his burial garment and requested that he mend his torn sleeve, so that he would have no cause to be ashamed of it in Paradise. But both accounts are a Jewish fable and a false fabrication.

That there is no night in Paradise, as is also mentioned in the cited words of the Jalkut, and what else is partly described there, is likewise read in the book Avodáh (or Avódas) hakkódesh, fol. 46, col. 1. in the 29th chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, in these words: כתבו החכמים כפי קבלתם כי המקום רחב ידים: מאד ובריקה של מים גדולה שם ונעשת מטל השמים העליונים סוד שמו של הק"ב"ה ושם אור גדול ואינו נחשך לעולם שהוא נאצל ונמשך מאורה של מעלה • ובו היה אדם צופה מסוף העולם ועד סופו והוא האור הנערב אשר בו הצדיקים והישרים מכתירים • וקרקעיתו רצוף באבנים טובות ומרגליות מהנצצות כמראה הלפירים • ואמרו כי סביב הבריקה ההיא גדלים 'וצומחים כל מיני אילנות ועשבים שיש בהם רפואה וריח טוב מאד וגו' That is: Our sages have written according to their oral tradition that the place (namely Paradise) is very wide and spacious, and that there is a great pool of water therein, which was made from the dew of the highest heaven, the mystery of the name of the holy blessed God; and that there is a great light in that place, which is never darkened, and which springs forth and proceeds from the uppermost light, by which the first man saw from one end of the world to the other; and this is the pleasant light with which the righteous and the upright are crowned. Its floor is paved with precious stones and pearls, which shine like the appearance of torches. They have also said that all manner of trees and herbs grow round about that pool, which are useful for medicine and have a very good fragrance, &c. Since mention is made of this good fragrance, I must also set down here what is written in the Talmudic tractate Bava mezia fol. 114, col. 2. concerning Rabba, whom Elijah led into Paradise, where the words read as follows: דבירה 'ועיילה לגן ערן א"ל פשוט גלימך ספי שקול מהני אטרפי ספא שקל כי הות נפיק שמע דקאמ מאן קא אכיל לעלמיה כרבא בר אבוה נפץ שדנהו אפילו הכי איתייה לגלמיה סחט גלימא : That is: He (Elijah) led him (Rabba) and brought him into Paradise, and said to him: pull off your cloak, and gather up some of these leaves, and take them with you. So he gathered them up and took them with him. When he then went out, he heard it said: who has eaten his portion in Paradise (that is, received it) like Rabba the son of Abúhi? Thereupon he scattered them and threw them away, yet he took his cloak with him, into which the fragrance from the leaves had been pressed, and sold it for twelve thousand denarios, that is, half quarter-thalers.

Regarding the three hundred and ten worlds, which are likewise mentioned in the words of the Jalkut, such a fable is taken from the Talmudic tractate

Sanbedrin fol. 101, col. 1., where it is written as follows: עתיד הק"ב ליתן לכל צדיק וצדיק ג' מאות ועשרה עולמות שנאמר להנחיל אוהבי יש ואוצרותיהם אמלא יש : that is, the Holy and Blessed God will give to each and every righteous person three hundred and ten worlds, as it is said (Prov 8:21): So that I cause those who love me to inherit a jesch, that is, a true good, and that I may fill their treasures to abundance; for jesch amounts in number by Gematria to three hundred and ten. And this can also be found in the Medrasch Mischle fol. 67, col. 3.

We also want to see how far, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, Paradise is supposed to be from Hell, concerning which the following is written in the book Zijóni, fol. 11, col. 2. within the Parascha Bereschith: גן ערן וגיהנם סמוכים : וכוהל אחד מפסיקתן : וגן עדן מצד צפונית מזרחית שנאמר וצפוניך תמלא בטנם . ולצד : : צפונית מערבית גיהנם ומעיין יוצא מגן עדן . והמעין היוצא מן הגיהנם הוא חם : that is, Paradise and Hell border on one another, and a single wall separates them; and Paradise is on the northeastern side, as it is said (Ps 17:14): "And with Thy north Thou fillest their belly" (as it is here wrongly understood, whereas it actually reads: "And with Thy hidden treasure Thou fillest their belly"). But on the northwestern side is Hell; and a spring flows out from Paradise; the spring, however, which comes out of Hell, is warm. In the book Toráth ádam, fol. 102, col. 3, under the title Scháár Scháár haggemúl, the following is also read: במדרש קהלת אמרו מפני מה ברא הק"ב גיהנם וגן עדן כדי שיהא זו מצלת מזו . וכמה : ריוח ביניהם רבי יוחנן אמר כותל ורבי אחא אמר טפח ורבנן אמרי שתי אצבעות : that is, in the Médrasch on Ecclesiastes it is said: why did the holy and blessed God create Hell and Paradise? So that the one might save from the other. How much space is between them? Rabbi Jochanan said there is a wall between them; and Rabbi Acha said there is a handsbreadth of space between them; but our Rabbis say two fingers' breadth of space is between them. This is also to be found in the book Nischmáth (or Nischmas) chájim, fol. 31, col. 1., in the 12th chapter of the first Máamar. But in the Médrasch on Ecclesiastes, fol. 127, col. 1., on the words of Eccl 7:14, "God hath also set the one against the other," the following is taught: זה גיהנם וגן עדן כמה ביניהם טפח רבי יוחנן אמר כותל ורבנן אמרי : שיהיו שתייהן מצות זו מזו : that is, this signifies Hell and Paradise. How great is the space between them? A handsbreadth. Rabbi Jochanan said there is a wall between them; but our Rabbis say they are both equal to one another, so that one may see from the one into the other. But in the book Zijóni, fol. 69, col. 3., it is read: אין בין גן עדן לגיהנם אלא מלוא נימא : that is, there is no greater difference between Paradise and Hell than the breadth of a single thread.

For every person, their place and portion in Paradise and in Hell is said to have been created; hence in the Talmudic tractate Chagiga fol. 15, col. 1., concerning the words cited just before from Eccl 7:15, "God also made one thing opposite the other," the following is taught: ברא צדיקים ברא רשעים ברא גן עדן ברא גיהנם כל אחד ואחד יש לו שני חלקים אחד בגן עדן ואחד בגיהנם זכה צדיק נטל חלקו וחלק חברו ברא רשע נטל חלקו וחלק חברו ברא גיהנם: that is, He created the righteous, and He created the wicked; and He created the Garden of Eden, and He created Gehenna; and every single one has two portions, one in the Garden of Eden and one in Gehenna. When the righteous man has merited it, he takes his portion and the portion of his companion in the Garden of Eden. But when the wicked man is condemned, he receives his portion and the portion of his companion in Gehenna. The very same teaching is also to be found in the book *Toráth (or Tóras) ádá*m fol. 101, col. 3., as well as in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 19, col. 1., in the 19th chapter under the title Chélek hajichud.

They also teach that children, before they are born into the world, are led into Paradise and into Hell, and that everything which takes place there is shown to them; and this is written in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 42, col. 2, in the 23rd chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, as follows: אמרו במדרש ילמדנו פרשת פקודי מניחין לו נר דלוק על ראשו וצופה בו מסוף העולם ועד סופו שנאמר בהלו נרו עלי ראשי וגו' בבקר נוטלו המלאך ומוליכו לגן עדן ומראה לו הצדיקים שהם יושבים ועטרותיהם בראשיהם והמלאך אומר לו תדע מי הללו שאתה רואה הללו נוצרו כמותך בתוך מעי אמן ויצאו בעולם ושמרו מצוותי של הק"ה ולכך זכו ונתזמנו לטובה זו ואתה סופך לצאת לעולם ואם תזכה ותשמור את התורה תזכה לישיבתם ואם לאו תשב במקום אחר: לערב מוליכו לגיהנם ומראה לו הרשעים שטורדין אותם מלאכי חבלה במקלות של אש וקורין וי וי והמלאך אומר לו תדע הללו שנשרפין כי הם נוצרו כמותך ויצאו לעולם ולא שמרו מצוותי של הק"ה ולכך נענשו ובאו להרפה זו ואתה סופך לצאת לעולם הוי צדיק ואל תהי רשע למען תחיה. ומנין שכן הוא שנאמר ויאמר לי יתמיד דברי לבך וגו'. 'כשהגיע זמנו לצאת לאויר העולם מיד המלאך מכה אותו ומכבה נרו ומוציאו בעל כרחו ושוכח כל מה שראה ומוציאו: that is, In the Médrasch Jelammedénu it is said in the Parascha Pekudé: a burning light is placed over its head (namely, the child in its mother's womb), by means of which it sees from one end of the world to the other, as it is said (Job 29:3): When His light shone over my head, etc. Early in the morning an angel takes the same (child) and leads it into Paradise, and shows it the righteous, who sit there with their crowns upon their heads; and the angel says to it: you must know who these are that you see. These were created in the bodies of their mothers just as you were, and they came forth into the world, and kept the commandments of the holy and blessed God; therefore they were found worthy of this happiness and were called to it. Now you too must at last go forth (from your mother's womb) into the world, and if you are righteous and keep the Law, you will be worthy to sit among them; but if not, you will have to sit in another place. In the evening he leads it into Hell, and shows it the wicked, whom the angels of destruction torment with fiery rods, and these cry out: woe, woe! And the angel says to it: you must know that these who are being burned were created just as you were and came forth into the world, and that they did not keep the commandments of the holy and blessed God; therefore they are punished and have come to this disgrace. Now you too must at last go forth into the world; so be righteous and not wicked, so that you may live. But from where is it proved that this is so? Because it is said (Prov 4:4): And he taught me and said to me, let your heart receive my words, etc. Now when the time draws near for it to come forth into the air of the world, the angel strikes it immediately and extinguishes its light and causes it to go forth against its will, and it forgets everything it has seen, and he brings it forth into the air of the world; and for this reason the child weeps as soon as it comes forth into the air of the world. Still more on this subject can be found in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 6, under the title Gehinnom, from the Médrasch néelam.*

When a soul newly enters Paradise, Rabbi Menasse ben Israel shows us how those who come into Paradise are received, in his book Nischmáth chájim, where he writes in fol. 28, col. 1, in the 10th chapter of the first Maamar, as follows: כאשר באה מחדש איזה נשמה לגן עדן ובפרט אם היא מהאהובים וקרובים מיד הולכים אצלה ומקבלים אותה בסבר פנים יפות. וכמו שהאנשים בעולם הזה נהעננים בשמיעות הרהקות והמאורעות המתרגשות לבא בעולם כך הצדיקים שבגן עדן העליון יורדים לקבל קרוביהם והמאורעות המתרגשות לבא בעולם כך הצדיקים ושואלים אותם מעניי העולם הזה That is: When a soul newly enters Paradise, especially if it is one of those who are beloved and related, people immediately go to it and receive it with a friendly countenance. And just as people in this world delight in news coming from afar and in events that are stirring in the world, so too the righteous who are in the upper Paradise come down to receive their relatives and the souls of the righteous, and ask them about the affairs of this world. Furthermore, nine people are said to have entered Paradise alive and not to have been allotted to death, a matter which was treated above in the 19th chapter of the first part, and which is therefore unnecessary to repeat here.

How the souls of the righteous are nourished and sustained in Paradise is taught to us by Rabbi Meir in his book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 46, col. 2, in the 29th chapter under the title Chélek haavóda, where he treats of the glory of Paradise, with these words: כל זה הכבוד והמעלה והעדון מעותר. לנפשות הצדיקים. בגן עדן של מטה ששני פעמים בכל יום יורד עליהם אצילות טל חיים מעל רישא דמלכא סוד ראש דברך אמת והוא הטל שעתיד הקב"ה להחיות בו את המתים ובו גיוזנין כמלאכי השרת שנהנין מזיו השכינה ובו משיגין ויודעין העבר וההווה והעתיד עד חייית המתים ואחר כל הכבוד והשבח הזה זוכות להתעלות ולהראות לפני המלך יי צבאות במקום קדשו בגן עדן של מעלה That is: All this glory, and excellence, and delight, is prepared for the souls of the righteous in the lower Paradise, for twice every day the flow of the dew of life descends upon them from the head of the King, which mystery is signified by the words (Ps 119:160): "The sum of Your word is truth." And this is the dew with which the Holy and Blessed God will in the future raise the dead. By this same dew they are nourished, just as the ministering angels, who are sustained by the radiance of the divine Majesty. Through it they also comprehend and know the past, the present, and likewise the future, and after all this glorious existence, they attain to be exalted and to appear before the King, the Lord of Hosts, in the place of His holiness, in the upper Paradise.

Since it is here stated that the souls of the righteous pass from the lower Paradise into the upper one, we must also know in what manner this takes place, and what path they use for this purpose. This is described in the Jalkut chádascb fol. 57, col. 2. numero 46. under the title Gan Eden as follows:

יש גן עדן עליון ויש גן עדן התחתון ויש ביניהם עמוד אחד המקשר אותם נקרא מכון הר ציון ונשמות הצדיקים עולות כל שבת ויום טוב מגן עדן התחתון דרך עמוד זה לגן עדן העליון ונהנים שם מזיו השכינה עד מוצאי שבת ויום טוב ואחר כך חוזרים ויורדים לגן עדן התחתון That is: There is an upper Paradise, and there is a lower Paradise, and between them is a single pillar that binds them together (or joins them), which is called the stronghold of Mount Zion; and the souls of the righteous ascend every Sabbath and holy day from the lower Paradise by way of this pillar into the upper Paradise, and there they enjoy the radiance of the divine Majesty until the end of the Sabbath and the holy day; after which they return and descend again into the lower Paradise. On this matter the book Nilchmáth chájim fol. 28, col. 1. in the 10th Chapter of the first Maamar may also be consulted.

The souls, however, that enter the lower Paradise are not to ascend immediately into the upper Paradise as well, concerning which the following is taught in the book Avódas hakkódesch fol. 44, col. 4. in the 27th chapter under the title Chélek haavóda:

The souls that are in the upper Paradise are also said to come back down into the lower Paradise from time to time, concerning which the aforementioned book Nischmāth chājim, fol. 28. col 1. contains the following passage: כמו שהנשמה בל"ב תרש עולים ויורדים כי לא יוכלו מכל וכל להתפרד מגופם ומשכן כבודם בך מפני התענוג העצום והערוך הנפלא אשר קו להם בגן עדן יורדין לפעמים ושוכנים בבירתם ומדורם אשר היו להם מקדם כמנהג המלכים הגדולים הבונים היכלות למו ובית ממלכה להם לא לבד במטרופולין שלהם ועיר מסלתם אלא במקומות אחרים להגדיל כבודם ולשכון בתוכם : that is, just as the souls (after they have been separated from their body) ascend and descend throughout all twelve months, since they cannot be entirely and completely separated from their body and the dwelling of their glory, so too they descend from time to time on account of the great delight and wonderful pleasure which they had in the (lower) Paradise, and they take up residence in their former palace and dwelling, just as great kings who build palaces and royal houses for themselves not only in their capital city and their royal city, but also in other places, in order thereby to magnify their glory and, when they travel, to dwell therein, etc. The souls of the righteous are also supposed to wander about in Paradise during a certain time of year, concerning which the following is read in the Jalkut chādāsch fol. 57, col. 1. numero 42. under the title Gan éden: בניסן ותשרי נשמות הצדיקים משוטטין בגן עדן : that is, in March and September the souls of the righteous wander about in Paradise and praise the holy and blessed God, and pray for the living, that they may remain alive, inasmuch as they are then diligent in keeping God's commandments; although they also wander about at other times, yet they wander to and fro more during those days (of the two aforementioned months), and show themselves like crying (or chirping) birds, and this is the mystery (of the words Ps 84:4): "The bird also has found a house," which is to be understood as referring to those same souls.

Beyond this, the souls in Paradise are also supposed to receive new strength when the Jews observe the year of release, concerning which the following is written in the aforementioned Jalkut chādāsch, fol. 55, col. 2. numero 17. under the mentioned title Gan éden: בשעה שישראל שומרים שנת השמיטה כראוי אף : that is, at the time when the Israelites observe the year of release as is fitting, the souls of the righteous take delight in Paradise and renew themselves and receive greater strength; for this reason it is said (Isa 40:31): "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

It is also said that God comes daily into Paradise and consults with the righteous concerning dew and rain, concerning which the following is read in the aforementioned Jalkut chadāsch fol. 57, col. 4. numero 57. under the title Gan eden: הק"ב נגלה על הצדיקים בגן עדן ונמלך בהם אם הוא זמן טל ומוריד גשם לעולם that is, the holy blessed God appears every day among the righteous in Paradise and consults with them. When it is the time of dew, He lets the dew come down into the world; but when it is the time of rain, He lets the rain come down into the world. But at fol. 60, col. 2. numero 15. under the title Geschamim it is written thus: הק"ב נכנס בכל יום לגן עדן ומודיע לצדיקים מתי זמן טל ומתי זמן הגשמים that is, the holy blessed God enters Paradise every day and makes known to the righteous when the time of dew is and when the time of rain is.

The first man Adam is said to sit at the gate of Paradise among those who have done penance, concerning which the oft-mentioned Jalkut chadâsch fol. 56, col. 1. 2. numero 28. under the title Gan éden contains these words: הראשון יושב בפתחו של גן עדן וסביבו יושבין כמה צדיקים שמנעו עצמם מדרכו של גיהנם . ונכנסו לגן עדן ועליהו כתיב יושבי חדל ולא כתיב חדל אלא חדל שחדלו מגיהנם לגן עדן ד"ה חדל אלו בעלי תשובה שמנעו עצמם מן העבירות וסאחר דאדם הראשון היה בעל תשובה That is: The first man sits at the gate of Paradise, and around him sit many righteous ones who have kept themselves from the path of hell and have entered into Paradise; and of these it is written (Isa 38:11): יושבי חדל ועל זה: That is: they dwell in the world, and it is not written cheled (which also means the world) but rather châdel (which derives from Chadâl, meaning to cease, to restrain, to abstain), because they have turned away from hell and directed themselves toward Paradise. In another manner this is expounded thus: that by Châdel are to be understood those who have repented and have kept themselves from transgressions. Since now the first man Adam did penance and converted, for this reason he sits among the penitent; and of these it is written (in the said 38th chapter, v. 11 of the prophet Isaiah): those who dwell in Châdel. For this reason David says (Ps 39:5) that he might know how Châdel, that is, transient or perishable, he is.

Concerning King Alexander the Great, it is recorded in the Talmudic tractate Tamid, at the end of the fourth chapter, fol. 66, col. 2 of the Amsterdam edition, that he once came before Paradise, and what befell him there. The words read as follows: כי שקיל ואתי יתיב אההוא מעיינא קא אכיל נהמא הוּו בידהי גולדנא דמלחא בהדי דמהורי להו נפל בהו ריחא אמר שמע מנה האי עינא מנן עדן אתי איכא דאמרי שקל מהנהנו מיא טרא באפיה איכא דאמרי אידלי כוליה ער דמטא לפתחא לגן עדן רמא קלא פתחו לי בבאמרו ליה זה השער לה 'צדיקים יבאו בו. אמר להו אנא נמי מלכא אנא מיהשב חשיבנא הבו לי מידי יחבו ליה גולגלתא חדא אתייה תקליה לכוליה דהבא וכספא דיליה בהדי 'לא הוה מתקליה אמר להון לרבנן. מאי האי אמרי גולגלתא דעינא דבישרא ודמא דלא קא שבע אמר להו מכאי דהכי הוא שקלי קליל עפרא וכסויהי לאלתר תקלא דכתיב שאול That is: When he came and sat down by a flowing spring, he was eating bread and had small salted fish in his hand. When these were washed (with that same water, so that the salt might come off them), they acquired a pleasant smell; whereupon he said: from this one can conclude that this spring water comes from Paradise. Some say he took some of that water and washed his face with it; others report that he followed the water so long until he came to the gate of Paradise, and there he called out: open the gate for me. But they spoke to him (from Ps 118:20): This is the gate of the Lord; the righteous must enter through it. Then he said: I too am a king, and I am held in high esteem; give me something. Thereupon they gave him a skull, and he took it with him and placed it on one side of a scale, and all his gold and silver that he had with him he placed on the other side, and yet the skull was heavier than the gold and silver. He then asked the Rabbis what this might mean, and they answered him that it was a skull, and that the eye of flesh and blood (that is, of a human being) cannot be satisfied. And when he asked them further how he could know that this was indeed so, they took a little dust and covered the skull with it, and immediately the gold and silver were heavier; for it is written (Prov 27:20): The grave and hell are never satisfied, and the eyes of man are not sated. Thus the gold and silver could not outweigh the skull until the eye of the skull was covered with dust so that it could no longer see. O what a foolish Talmudic fable!

Although the rabbis teach many absurd things about Paradise, no Jew is permitted to doubt its certainty; rather, he must firmly believe that all of it is plain truth. For this reason, Rabbi Meïr in the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 45, col. 4. at the beginning of the 29th chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, expresses himself in the following manner: כ"ז כי כל מה כבר כתבנו למעלה בפרק ש"בא במעשה בראשית כמשמעם אין בהם חידה חלילה. הגן בעדן ועץ החיים ועץ הדעת והארבע נהרות דברים כמשמעם אין בהם חידה חלילה. וגם חובה על כל מי שבשם ישראל יכונה להאמין כי כל דברי חז"ל בענין גן עדן אמונה אמת אין בהם משל או דברי הבאי אבל דברו בו בענין שיש לדעת ולהאמין באין ספק שגן עדן הוא בארץ ממש וגו' That is: We have already written above in the 27th chapter that everything which occurs in the history of the creation of the world, concerning Paradise, the Tree of Life, and the Tree of Knowledge, as well as the four rivers, is to be understood literally and contains no riddle, which be far from us. Likewise, every person who is called an Israelite is obligated to believe that everything our Sages (of blessed memory) have reported concerning Paradise is pure truth, and that no allegory or hyperbole, that is, excessive figure of speech, is contained therein; rather, they have spoken of it in such a way that one may know and believe without any doubt that there is truly a Paradise upon the earth, ע"כ. But let this suffice regarding Paradise.

Chapter VI.

In which is set forth what the Jews teach concerning Hell.

Since in the preceding fifth chapter it was shown what the Jews believe concerning Paradise, we now wish to consider in this chapter what opinions they hold regarding Hell. It is to be known that Hell is called גיהנום Gebinnom by the Rabbis, concerning which Rabbi Elias writes in his Tischbi fol. 14, col. 2., under the word Gebinnom, as follows: קראו רבותינו ז"ל: מקום עונש הרשעים אחר מיתתם גיהנום לפי שגי בן הנם הסמוך לירושלים היה מקום מטונף ששם שרפו את בניהם למולך ונקרא כן לפי שהבן היה שם נוהם וצועק That is: Our Rabbis (of blessed memory) have called the place in which the wicked are punished after their death Gebinnom, because the valley of the son of Hinnom, which lay near Jerusalem, was a filthy place in which children were burned to the idol Molech (as may be read in 2 Kgs 23:10). It was, however, named thus (from the word גי Ge, which means a valley, and נהם Nabám, which means to cry out) because the child (which was burned) cried out and wailed there. Concerning this place situated near Jerusalem, Rabbi David Kimchi, in his commentary on 2 Kgs 23:10, on the words "He (namely King Josias) also defiled the Topheth in the valley of the son of Hinnom," further writes the following: שם מקום שהיו מעבירין שם בניהם למולך היה שם המקום תופת ואמרו כי נקרא כן כי היו מרקדים ומכים בתופים בשעת העבודה כדי שלא ישמע האב צעקת בנו כשהיו מעבירין אותו באש וינהם לבו עליו ויקחהו מידם והמקום הזה היה גיא שהיה לאדם הנקרא הנם ונקרא גי הנם וגי בן הנם והכתוב בזה בני הנם והקרי בן הנם כי לבני הנם היה זה הגיא או לאחד מהם וטמא יאשיהו אותו המקום כלומר שם אותו מקום טומאה להשליך שם נבילות וכל טומאה וטמא, שלא יעלה עוד על לב איש להעביר עוד את בנו ואת בתו באש למולך That is: Topheth is the name of a place, and the place in which one was accustomed to make one's children pass through the fire to Molech was called Topheth; and it is said that it was called thus because people danced there and beat the drums (which are called typpím in Hebrew) when they served the idol, so that the father would not hear the cry of his son when he was made to pass through the fire, and so that his heart would not be moved on account of him and he might take him from their hands. This place, however, was a valley belonging to a man who was called Hinnom, and it was called גי הנם Ge Hinnom, that is, the valley of Hinnom, and גי בן הנם Ge ben Hinnom, that is, the valley of the son of Hinnom. Here, however (namely in the cited passage 2 Kgs 23:10), it is written (in the valley of) בני הנם bené Hinnom, that is, of the sons (or children) of Hinnom, and it is read בן הנם ben Hinnom, that is, of the son of Hinnom, because that valley belonged to the children of Hinnom or to one of them. Josias, however, defiled that place, that is, he made it into an unclean place, so that carcasses and all filth had to be thrown there, in order that it might no longer enter any man's mind to make his son or his daughter pass through the fire to Molech (or to burn them). The aforementioned Rabbi David Kimchi also expresses himself on this matter in his commentary on Ps 27:13 as follows: גיהנם הוא מקום בארץ סמוך לירושלים והוא מקום נמאס ומשליכים שם הטומאות והנבלות והיה שם אש תמיד לשרוף טומאות והעצמות לפיכך נקרא על דרך משל משפט הרשעים גי הנם, That is: Gebinnom is a place in the land (of Canaan) near Jerusalem, which was a despised place into which filth and carcasses were thrown. There was also a perpetual fire there to burn the impurities and bones; therefore the place in which the wicked are judged is called Gebinnom by way of analogy. We thus see from this that Hell came to be called Gebinnom on account of the terrible torment which the children of idolatrous people endured in the fire in the Ge Hinnom, that is, the valley of Hinnom, from which the Greek word γέεννα Geenna and the Latin Gebenna are derived, by which Hell is signified.

Regarding the names of Hell: it is said to have seven names, and in the Talmudic tractate Eruvin fol. 19, col. 1. the following is written about this: שבעה שמות יש לגיהנם ואלו הן שאול ואבדון ובאר שחת ובור שאון ומיט היין וצלמות וארץ התחתית. שאול דכתיב מבטן שאול שועתי שמעת קולי. אבדון דכתיב היסופר בקבר חסדך ואמונתך באבדון. באר שחת דכתיב כי לא תעזוב נפשי לשאול ולא תתן חסידך לראות שחת ובור שאון ומיט היין דכתיב ויעלני מבור שאון ומיט היין. וצלמות דכתיב יושבי חושך וארץ התחתית גמרא הוא: that is, Hell has seven names, namely Scheól, that is, Hell; Abhaddon, that is, destruction; and Bor schachath, that is, the pit of decay; and Bor scháon, that is, the pit of noise; and Tit hajáven, that is, the clay or mire of the mud; and Zalmáveth, that is, the shadow of death, or darkness; as well as Erez battáchtith, that is, the lowest earth. It is called Scheól, as it is written (Jonah 2:3): "I cried out from the belly of Scheól, that is, Hell, and You heard my voice." It is called Abhaddon, as it is written (Ps 88:12): "Will one recount Your goodness in the graves, and Your faithfulness in Abhaddon, that is, destruction?" It is called Bor scháchath, as it is written (Ps 16:10): "For You will not leave my soul in Hell, nor allow Your holy one to see Scháchath, that is, decay." It is called Bor scháon and Tit hajáven, as it is written (Ps 40:3): "And He drew me up out of Bor scháon, that is, the pit of noise, and out of Tit hajaven, that is, the clay (or mire) of the mud." It is called Zalmáveth, as it is written (Ps 107:10): "Those who sit in darkness and Zalmavéth, that is, the shadow of death." It is also called Erez táchtith, as we have learned (and know through tradition). This last name, however, is demonstrated in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 32, col. 2. from Ezek 31:18, where it is written: "Yet you shall be cast down with the trees of Eden into Erez táchtith, that is, the lowest earth." And the words of Ps 63:10, "They shall go down into the Tachtióth haárez, that is, the lowest places of the earth," are likewise cited there as proof. This is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 47, col. 3. numero 302, and may be seen at length in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 31, col. 2. and fol. 32, col. 1-2

Over and above this, it is also called תפתה Tóphteh, and עמק הבכא Emek habbácha, that is, the valley of weeping, or the valley of tears, as it is understood by many (though according to others it signifies a mulberry valley), and likewise עלוקה Alúka, that is, a leech. The name Tóphteh appears in the cited passage of the Tractate Erúvin, and is taken from Isa 30:33, where it is written: For Tóphteh, that is, Hell, has been prepared since yesterday. That Tóphteh signifies Hell is to be seen from the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 32, col. 2., in the 12th chapter of the first Máamar, where it is stated as follows: תפתה הוא גי הנם שכל : that is, Tóphteh signifies Hell, for everyone who allows himself to be led astray by his evil nature falls into it. And the Hebrew word Mithpátteh, that is, he who allows himself to be led astray, corresponds to some degree in its letters to the word Tóphteh.

The name Emek habbácha is to be found at Ps 84:7, where it is written as follows: Those who pass through Emek habbácha, that is, the valley of weeping. That Hell is to be understood thereby is to be seen from the Médrasch Tillim fol. 38, col. 2. on Ps 84, where it is taught: עמק הבכא זה גיהנם : that is, Emek habbácha signifies Hell. Concerning this, one may also consult the first part of the Prague Machsor, in the commentary on the prayer that begins Omez addíre col chéfez, under the title Múlaph ichel rosch haschaná jom ríschon, fol. 25, col. 1.

Regarding the name Alúka: it appears in Prov 30:15, where it is written: "The Alúka, that is, the leech, has two daughters: Give, give." That Hell is called by this name can be seen in the commentary on the prayer found in the Polish Siddúrim, fol. 145, col. 1, in the one that begins פסח אכלו פחזים Pésach áchelú pechúsím, under the title Máatíflé ríschon, schél pésach, where it is written: חיל : פרעה הצורר שנטבע בים ירדו לגיהנם שנקרא עלוקה שנאמר לעלוקה שתי בנות "The army of Pharaoh, the enemy, which was drowned in the sea, descended into Hell, which is called Alúka, that is, a leech." And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, it is stated at fol. 220, col. 4, in the Parascha Nizzabbím, concerning the cited words of Solomon: המשל גיהנם שהוא : לנפשות הרשעים לעלוקה שמוציאה הדם שהוא הנפש That is: "He compared Hell, which is the place where the souls of the wicked are judged and condemned, to a leech that draws out the blood, which is the soul."

Regarding the time of the creation of Hell, it was mentioned in the eighth chapter of the first part that, according to the teaching of the Talmud, Hell is one of those seven things that are said to have been created before the world, which can also be read in the Médrasch mischle fol. 67, col. 3. and in the Jalkut chádasch fol. 55, col. 1. numerô 5. under the title Gan éden vegebínnom, as well as in the third chapter of the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer. But in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 5, col. 4, the following is read: במדרש מפני מה לא נאמר כי טוב בשני לפי שבו נברא גיהנם שנאמר כי ערוך מאתמול תפתה That is: In the Medrasch (it is stated:) Why was it not said on the second day (of creation) that it had been good (as was done on the remaining days of creation), of which it is read: And God saw that it was good? This occurred because Hell was created on that same day, as it is said (Isa 30:33): For Tóphteh, that is, Hell, has been prepared since yesterday. Likewise, in the Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 5, col. 4. numerô 17., it reads as follows: בראשון ברא שמים וארץ ואורה בשני ברא גיהנם ורקיע ומלאכים That is: On the first day He (namely God) created Heaven and the Earth, and the light; on the second day He created Hell, and the firmament, as well as the angels. And in Bereschíth rábba, fol. 21, col. 1 in the twenty-first Parascha, as well as in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 32, col. 2. in the twelfth chapter of the first Máamar, the same is likewise to be found. In the book Toráth ádam, fol. 97, col. 1 under the title Scháar baggemúl, the following is also written concerning the fire of Hell: בפרקי רבי אלעזר אמרו ברא הק"ב הרקיע והמלאכים ואשו של בשר ודם ואשו של גיהנם That is: In the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer it is said that the holy blessed God created the firmament, and the angels, and the fire of man, as well as the fire of Hell, on the second day.

What is said, however, that hell was created before the world, is to be understood as referring to the hollow space, or the hollow structure of hell; but that it was created on the second day is to be understood as referring to its fire, as is taught in the book Asaráh maamaróth fol. 85, col. 1. with these words: אין גיהנם לעתיד לבא דכונה על אור דירה דאיברי בשני אבל חללה שנברא קודם העולם יתקדש That is: In the future there will be no hell; this, however, is to be understood as referring to its fire, which was created on the second day; but the hollow space thereof, which was created before the world, will be sanctified.

There are also said to be two hells, namely an upper and a lower one, just as there are also two paradises, as was indicated in the preceding chapter. Therefore it stands written in the aforementioned book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 47, col. 1., in the 30th chapter, under the mentioned title Chélek haavóda, as follows: כמו שיש גן עדן למעלה ויש גן עדן למטה כן יש גיהנם למעלה ויש גיהנם למטה That is: Just as there is an upper and a lower paradise, so too there is an upper and a lower hell. And in the book Megalléh amykkóth, it is read at fol. 78, col.

2, in the two hundred and twenty-third Ofan: כשם שיש גן עדן בשמים למעלה כך That is: Just as there is a paradise up above in heaven, so too there is a paradise down below on the earth; and likewise there is also a hell in heaven and one on the earth. And in the book Nischmāth chājīm, it is read at fol. 33, col. 2, in the 12th chapter of the first Maamar: וכתבו עוד שכשם שיש גיהנם למטה כך יש גיהנם למעלה, That is: They (namely our rabbis) have further written that, just as there is a hell down below, so too there is a hell up above. In the small Jalkut Rubéni, one finds at numero 4., under the title Gebinnom, drawn from the Sobar, the following as well: ברא הק"ב גיהנם למטה למי שלא קבל ברית מילה ולא האמינו בהק"ב ולא שמרו שבת וברא גיהנם למעלה לאותם פושעי ישראל שעברו על מצות התורה ולא חזרו בתשובה, That is: The Holy and Blessed God created a hell down below for those who did not accept the covenant of circumcision, and did not believe in the Holy and Blessed God, and did not observe the Sabbath. He also created a hell up above for those sinning Israelites who transgressed the commandments of the Law and did not repent.

Regarding the size of Hell: in the preceding sixth chapter, at the beginning, it was reported from the Talmudic tractate Taanith fol. 10, col. 1. how large Paradise is, and that Hell is sixty times larger than Paradise. Rabbi Gedálja also writes about this in his book Shalshelet hakkabála fol. 86, col. 1. of the Amsterdam printing, in the following manner: ראיתי במדרש שיר השירים האומר מצרים ת' פרסה על ת' פרסה והוא אחד מס' מכוש וכוש אחד מששים בעולם והעולם ארכו ת"ק שנה ורחבו מהלך ת"ק שנה והוא אחד מששים בגיהנם נמצא שהלכו של גיהנם ג' אלפים : that is, I have seen in the Médrasch of the Song of Songs of Solomon that it is said: the land of Egypt is four hundred miles long and wide, and the land of the Moors is sixty times as large as Egypt, but the world is sixty times as large as the land of the Moors, and the world is so long that one would need five hundred and twenty years to walk across it, and so wide that one must walk five hundred years to cross it; but Hell is sixty times as large as the entire world, so it turns out that one would need two thousand and one hundred years of walking to pass through Hell, and that the world is only like the lid of a pot in comparison to Hell. Something on this matter may also be read in the book Toráth ádam fol. 96, col. 4. under the title Scháar baggemúl.

Just as there are seven dwellings in Paradise, so too shall there be seven in Hell, which are called היכלות Hechalóth, that is, palaces, and מדורות medoróth, that is, dwellings, and these same shall be the degrees of hellish torment. Concerning this, it is written in the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 47, col. 1, at the beginning of the 31st chapter, under the title Chelek haavóda, as follows:

אין דין עונש הרשעים בגיהנם שוה אבל עונש כל אחד נבדל. ורבותינו משל חברו ושל זה חמור משל חברו ולזה יש בגיהנם מקום המשפט שבעה מדורות. ול"ל העלו להם שמות כמוזכר פרק עושין פסין. אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי שבעה שמות יש לו לגיהנם שאול ואבדון ובאר שחת ובור שאון וטיט היון וצלמות וארץ התחתית וכל אחד מהם מדור בפני עצמו וכלל that is, the punishment of the wicked in Hell is not equal, but each one's punishment is distinguished from another's punishment, and one person's punishment is heavier than another's; therefore there are in Hell, the place of judgment, seven medoróth, that is, dwellings; and our Rabbis, of blessed memory, gave names to these same, as is reported in the second chapter of the Talmudic tractate Erúvin (fol. 19, col. 1) (where the following is read): Rabbi Jehóshua, the son of Levi, said: Hell has seven names, namely Scheól, that is, Hell; Abhaddon, that is, Perdition; and Bor scháchath, that is, the pit of decay; and Bor scháon, that is, the pit of noise; and Tit hajáven, that is, the mire of mud; and Zalmaveth, that is, the shadow of death; as well as Erez tachtith, that is, the nethermost earth; and each one of these is a distinct dwelling; yet they are all together called Gebinnom, that is, Hell, and these correspond to the seven names which Jezer hara, that is, the evil nature, has, as is mentioned in the fifth chapter of the Talmudic tractate Súcca (fol. 52, col. 1). Now the words of the Talmud concerning these seven names of the Jezer hara in the cited passage read as follows: אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי שבעה שמות יש לו ליצר הרע הקב"ה קראו רע שנאמר כי 'יצר לב האדם רע מנעוריו. משה קראו ערל שנ' ומלתם את ערלת לבבכם. דוד קראו טמא שנ לב טהור ברא לי אלהים מכלל דאיכא טמא. שלמה קראו שונא שנאמר אם רעב שונאך. האכילו לחם וגו. 'ישעיה קראו מכשול שנאמר סולו סולו פנו דרך הרימו מכשול מדרכי עמי יחזקאל קראו אבן שנאמר והסירותי את לב האבן מבשרכם וגו. 'ויאל קראו צפוני שנאמר ואת that is, Rabbi Jehoshua, the son of Levi, said: the evil nature has seven names. The holy, blessed God called it Evil, as it is said (Gen 8:21): "For the inclination of the human heart is evil from its youth." Moses called it the Uncircumcised, as it is said (Deut 10:16): "Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart." David called it the Unclean, as it is said (Ps 51:12): "Create in me, O God, a pure heart," which implies that it is unclean. Solomon called it a Hater, as it is said (Prov 25:21): "If your hater is hungry, give him bread to eat," etc. Isaiah called it a Stumbling Block, as it is said (Isa 57:14): "Clear the way, make the road ready; remove the stumbling blocks from the ways of my people." Ezekiel called it a Stone, as it is said (Ezek 11:19): "And I will remove the heart of stone from your flesh," etc. Joel called it the Northerner, as it is said (Joel 2:20): "And I will drive the Northerner far from you," etc.

This also agrees with what is read in the aforementioned book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 46, col. 3., in the 30th chapter, under the said title Chélek haavōda, from the Sôhar, in these words: ז' שמהן לקבל ז' דאינון דיכלין אינון דיכלין שבע מדורות יש בגיהנם ובכל מדור ומדור, that is, there are seven palaces (in Hell), which exist in regard to the seven names by which the side of evil is called, in regard to the seven names that are given to Hell. Something similar is also to be found in the book Nischmāth chájim fol. 31, col. 1. 2. Concerning the seven dwellings, however, the book Jesód schirim, which is also called Tappúche schachath, may likewise be consulted at fol. 9, col. 2. of the Prague printing, and fol. 11, col. 1. of the Tübingen printing. In the book Reschith chochma it stands at fol. 47, col. 2., in the twelfth chapter, under the title Schaar hajirah, in the fourth chapter of the tractate on Hell, where it is written thus: שבע מדורות יש בגיהנם, ובכל בית ובית יש בו ששת אלפים חלונות, ובכל חלון וחלון יש בו ששת אלפים בתים. ובכל בית ובית יש בו ששת אלפים חלונות, ובכל חלון וחלון יש בו ששת אלפים בתים. ובכל בית ובית יש בו ששת אלפים חלונות, ובכל חלון וחלון יש בו ששת אלפים בתים. ובכל בית ובית יש בו ששת אלפים חלונות, ובכל חלון וחלון יש בו ששת אלפים בתים.

that is, in Hell there are seven dwellings, and in each dwelling there are six thousand houses, and in each house there are six thousand chests, and in each chest there are six thousand barrels of gall, etc. Concerning such seven dwellings, a great deal is to be found in that same work from fol. 48 to 54.

Regarding how deep each dwelling is, I found the following in the written book Rasiel: מדור השני אבדון עמקו. מדור השלישי ש' שנה. מדור הרביעי טיט היון עמקו מהלך ש' שנה, מדור השלישי באר שחת עמקו מהלך ש' שנה. מדור החמישי שערי מות עמקו מהלך ש' שנה. מדור הששי שערי צלמות מהלך ש' שנה. עמקו מהלך ש' שנה. מדור השביעי גיהנם עמקו מהלך ש' שנה. That is: The uppermost (and first) dwelling, which is called Scheol tachtith, that is, the lowest hell, is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. The second dwelling, which is called Avaddon, that is, destruction, is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. The third dwelling, which is called Bor schachath, that is, the pit of decay, is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. The fourth dwelling, which is called Tit hajaven, that is, the mire of the swamp, is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. The fifth dwelling, which is called Schaare maveth (or moves), that is, the gate of death, is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. The sixth dwelling, which is called Schaare Zalmaveth (or Zalmoves), is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. The seventh dwelling, which is called Gebinnom, is as deep as one can walk in three hundred years. But in the Jalkut Schimoni on Isaiah, it is reported at fol. 46, col. 1, numero 296: כל גיהנם וגיהנם ש' ארכו וש' רחבו ועוביו אלף פרסה ועמקו מאה פרסה. That is: Each hell is three hundred (miles) long, and three hundred (miles) wide, and one thousand miles thick, and one hundred miles deep.

So sharp-witted are the Jews that they even know the measurements of certain things that are otherwise known to no one; and therefore one reads in the Jalkut Schimoni on Malachiam, fol. 87, col. 2, numero 587: מן הארץ עד

לרקיע מהלך חמש מאות שנה וכן מרקיע ראשון לשני ומשני לשלישי ומשלישי לרביעי לרקיע מהלך חמש מאות שנה וכן מרקיע ראשון לשני ומשני לשלישי ומשלישי לרביעי, That is: From the earth to the firmament is as far as one can walk in five hundred years; and equally far is it from the first firmament to the second, and from the second to the third, and from the third to the fourth, and from the fourth to the fifth, and from the fifth to the sixth, and from the sixth to the seventh. The very same is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Chagiga, fol. 13, col. 1, as well as in the tractate Pesachim, fol. 94, col. 2. Likewise, the heavenly Sphæra, or spheres, are said to have precisely the same measurements, which is demonstrated in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 9, col. 2, as follows: במלת מאד : שהוסיף שחשבונה מ"ה הענין היה להודיע שיעור קומת התשעה גלגלים שכל מאד, That is: Through the little word מאד, meód, which (meaning "very") is appended in the words of Gen 1:31, "And behold, it was all very good," and whose numerical value מה, Mem He, that is 45, makes known to you the measurement of the height of the nine spheres (of heaven), each of which, according to the opinion of our rabbis of blessed memory, is as thick as one can walk in five hundred years. (For the said letter ה, He, signifies five, and the letter מ, Mem, signifies מאה, meáb, that is, one hundred, which together makes five hundred.) Oh, what a keen rabbinical intellect reveals itself here once again!

The fire in one dwelling is also said to be far more powerful than in another, as is written in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 47, col. 1, in the 31st chapter, under the title Chélek haavóda, as follows: אין כל החטאים בנפשותם נידונים במדור אחד ובאש אחת אבל לכל אחד נותנין לו מדור כפי כבודו בעונש ולוה היה אש מדור זה קשה : וחזקה משל חבירו עד שאמרו שאש מדור ראשון אחד מששים בשל חבירו וכן כולם : that is, those who sin against their own souls are not all punished in one dwelling and in one fire, but rather each one is assigned a dwelling according to what his punishment has merited; and for this reason the fire of one dwelling is more intense and more powerful than that of another, so that (our rabbis) have said that the fire of the first dwelling is only one sixtieth as strong as the fire of the second dwelling, and so it is with all the rest, such that the fire of each is sixty times more intense than that of the one preceding it.

Where, however, the fire that is in the lower hell comes from is shown by the book Emek hammelech fol. 144, col. 2, in the 35th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha dísar ánpin, in these words: אשא גיהנם מטי להא מגו אשא גיהנם : דלעילא ומטי להאי גיהנם דלתתא : that is, the fire of hell descends from the fire of the upper hell into the lower hell. As for how subtle and powerful the fire thereof is, that it is even capable of burning the souls of the wicked, which earthly fire is unable to do, one may consult the book Nischmath chájim, fol.

34, col. 1-2, in the 13th chapter of the first Mäamar, and the book Toráth ádam fol. 97, col. 4, as well as the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 47, col. 2, in the 31st chapter under the title Chélek haavóda.

In every dwelling there shall also be a certain angel, who is mentioned in the aforementioned 35th chapter in the following manner: אית מדורא ומדורא אית מלאך ממונה: ועל ההוא אתר תחזה ידא דדומה וכמה אלף ורבוה עמיה דדיינין לון לחייביא מלאך ממונה: that is, in every dwelling there is an angel who is set over that place and stands under the authority of Dúma, and he has many thousands and ten times ten thousand with him, who judge (or punish) the wicked, each according to what is fitting for him. In Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 54, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajéra, the following is also written concerning the overseers of Hell: שלישה שליטים מושלים בגיהנם מתחת יד דומה והם משחית אף וחמה. וכל האחרין ממונין תחתם ודנין נפשותיהן של רשעים וכל. אותן כתות של מלאכי חבלה כולן מרעישין גיהנם : ונשמע קולן לרקיע וקולות של רשעים ביניהם צוחין ואומריין ווי ווי ואין מרחם עליהן : that is, there are three who rule in Hell under the authority of Duma, namely Máschith, Af, and Chéma, and all the remaining overseers stand under them, and they judge (or punish) the souls of the wicked. Moreover, all those hosts of the destroying angels shake Hell, and their voice is heard as far as the firmament (of Heaven); and the voices of the wicked among them cry out and say: Woe! and there is no one who has mercy upon them.

Regarding the aforementioned Duma, the rabbis teach that he is the prince of hell, which is why one reads in the old Nizzáchon paginâ 129: שר של גיהנם שר של גיהנם, that is, the prince of hell is called Duma. When, however, he came to be such a prince, this is found in the Jalkut chádaseh fol. 118, col. 2. numero 66., under the title Malachím, in the following words: בשעה שאמר משה ובכל אלהי מצרים אעשה שפטים הלך דומה שר של מצרים ארבע מאות פרסי אמר לו הק"ב כבר נגזרה גזירה זו לפני דכתיב ופקדתי על צבא מרום במרום אותה שעה ניטלה שררה ממנו ונתמנה דומה שר של גיהנם ויש אומרים ממונה על המיתים, That is: At the time when Moses said (Exod 12:12), "And I will execute judgment against all the gods of Egypt," the Duma, the prince of Egypt, went four hundred miles away; and the holy blessed God spoke to him: this judgment has already been decreed before Me, as it is written (Isa 24:21), "And He will punish the host of the high ones on high." At that same time, dominion was taken from Duma, and he was appointed prince of hell; but others say he was set over the dead. In the book Emek hammelech, however, one reads at fol. 15, col. 4, in the first chapter, under the title Scháar tikkúne batteshuva, that the prince of hell is called Arfiel, and the words read as follows: אריאל שרו של גיהנם עומד לפני נשמת הצדיקים שלא ותפללו על הרשעים לפני הק"ב ושינתנם ברשותו להורידם לבאר שחת, That is: The Arfel, the prince of hell, stands before the souls of the righteous so that they do not intercede with the holy blessed God on behalf of the wicked, and so that he may deliver them into his power to cast them down into the pit of destruction.

There are also said to be two scribes in Hell, who record each person's place therein, concerning which the Sépher chasidim teaches as follows: שני סופרים יש בגיהנם כותבים זה מקום פלוני וזה מקום פלוני כי נכון לכל איש בין טוב ובין רע מקומו : that is, there are two scribes in Hell who write: this is the place of so-and-so, and this is the place of so-and-so; for a place in Paradise and in Hell is prepared for every person, whether he be good or evil.

How many gates hell has is a matter on which the rabbis do not agree with one another. In the Jalkut Shimoni on Isaiah, it is read at fol. 46, col. 1, numero 296 that it has eight thousand gates, and it is stated there that God will one day redeem the wicked Israelites and the righteous nations of the world from hell, and will say to the angels Michael and Gabriel: פתחו שערי גיהנם והעלו אותם : that is, Open the gates of hell and bring them out; whereupon they will immediately go with the keys and open the eight thousand gates of hell. But in the little book Othioth Rabbi Akiva, at fol. 15, col. 4 and fol. 16, col. 1, where this same fable is also read, it states that there are forty thousand gates, as will be seen from its own precise words, below in this chapter, where the redemption of the wicked from hell is to be treated. In the small Jalkut Ruveni, at numero 1, under the title Mesula, it is read from the book Metralch neelam, fol. 48, col. 1, 2, that it has fifty gates, in these words: יש חמשים שערים וכולהון נוקבין ורגליהם דרשעים באינן נוקבין בגיהנם : that is, In hell there are fifty gates, which are entirely full of holes, and the feet of the wicked are stuck in those same holes, and they cry out, O woe to our feet! In the book Emek hammelech, at fol. 144, col. 2, in the 35th chapter, under the title Shaar retcha of this anpin, it is stated: שבעה פתחין : that is, Hell has seven gates, and there are seven dwellings within it. And in the book Nishmath chayim, at fol. 39, col. 1, in the 14th chapter of the first Maamar, it is read from the Zohar: שבעה מדורין : that is, There are seven dwellings in hell, and it has seven gates, through which the souls of the wicked enter. Likewise, in the 43rd chapter of the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, it is written: שבעה פתחין לגיהנם : that is, Hell has seven gates. The Quran also agrees with this; in its 15th chapter, which is called Surat al-Hijr, it is read: وَإِنَّ جَهَنَّمَ : that is, Verily, hell is the place that is promised to all of them (namely, the unbelievers). It has seven gates, and each gate of it has its own separate portion. But in the Talmudic tractate Eruvin, at fol. 19, col. 1, it is written: אמר רבי ירמיה ברבי אלעזר שלשה פתחים יש לגיהנם אחד במדבר ואחד בים ואחד בירושלים במדבר דכתיב וירדו הם וכל אשר להם חיים שאולה. בים דכתיב מבטן שאול שוועתי שמעת קולי. בירושלים דכתיב נאם ה' אשר אור לו בציון ותנור לו בירושלים ותנא דבי רבי ישמעאל אשר אור לו בציון זו גיהנם ותנור לו בציון : that is, One is in the wilderness, and one is in the sea, and one is in Jerusalem. One is in the wilderness, as it is written (Num 16:33): And they went down alive into hell with everything that they had. One is in the sea, as it is written (Jonah 2:3): I cried out from the belly of hell, and You heard my voice. One is in Jerusalem, as it is written (Isa 31:9): says the LORD, who has His fire in Zion and His furnace in Jerusalem. But the school of Rabbi Ishmael teaches that the words "who has His fire in Zion" signify hell, and the words "and His furnace in Jerusalem" signify the gate of hell. Likewise, in the book Megalleh amukoth, fol. 78, col. 2, in the two hundred and twenty-third Ofan, as also in the book Reshith chochma, fol. 47, col. 1, in the first chapter, under the title Massecheth Gehinnom, it is read that there are only three gates.

How far hell is from paradise has been indicated above in the immediately preceding Chapter 5, paginâ 314. and 315., so that it is not necessary to say more about it here. From what was reported there, however, it is evident that they press right up against one another, and according to some opinions there is only a wall between them, according to others only two fingers' breadth of space, and according to still others only a fathom's breadth of room between them.

There is said to be in hell a certain place called פחד Páchad, that is, Fear or Terror, concerning which the following is written in the book Scháare órah fol. 67, col. 2. of the Mantuan printing: דע כי במקום הנקרא פחד יש לנשמה כמה מיני שוחות ובורות עמוקים עד מאוד ונקראים מדורי גיהנם ושם כמה מיני משחית ומיני פורעניות ומרוב עמקם הם כולם חושך ותמיד הם השוכים ואפלים ונקראים על טעם זה לילה לפי שאין מאיר שם לעולם אלא תמיד כולו לילה באותו מקום ולפיכך פוחדים עד מאוד ממנו עליונים ותחתונים וזהו מפחד בלילות ודרשו ז"ל מפחדה של גיהנם שהיא דומה ללילה. וכמה צדיקים : that is, Know that in the place called Páchad there are many kinds of pits and holes, which are very deep, and which are called the dwellings of hell. There also are many kinds of destruction and manners of punishment; and all of these are dark on account of their great depth, and all are gloomy. For this reason they are called לילה Lájelah, that is, Night, because nothing ever illuminates that place, but rather it is perpetually nothing but night therein. For this reason the upper and lower (creatures) fear that place very greatly, and this place is signified by the words (Song 3:8): On account of fear (or terror) in the Night.

There is also supposed to be a place in Hell called צואה רותחת Zóah rothácbath (or rosáchas), that is, the boiling filth, as can be read in the book Reschítb chócbma, fol. 48, col. 2. in the 13th chapter under the title Scháar hajirath, in the tractate on Hell in the 7th chapter, and in the Sóbar in the Parascha Terúma. In the book Emek hammélech there stands at fol. 15, col. 3 in the first chapter under the title Scháar tikkúne hatteschúva the following written about it: כל הזוהמא נופלת למדור התחתון הנקרא אבדון. ושם הם דרגין הנקראים צואה רותחת: שנאמר עליו צא תאמר לו ואין בו ניצוץ קדושה ובו כל הנפשות משומאות ארסו וזוהמתו של חיה: that is, all filthiness (of the wicked who are tormented in Hell) falls into the lowest dwelling, which is called Aváddon, that is, destruction; and there are the levels which are called Zóah rothácbath, concerning which (place, Isa 30:22) it is said: You shall call it filth; and there is no spark of holiness in it. There are also within it all unclean souls, the poison and the filthiness of the serpent which lay with Eve. And in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech one reads at fol. 135, col. 3 in the 19th chapter under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin: צואה רותחת הוא המדור התחתון של גיהנם שנופל שם כל הזוהמא מהנפשות היושבות בהמדורים שעליה והוא כמו בית הכסא ששם נופל כל המתות אשר אין בו ניצוץ קדושה ולכן נקרא צואה רותחת בסוד ק"א צואה: that is, the (place) Zóah rothácbath is the lowest dwelling of Hell, into which all the filthiness of the souls falls, those souls which reside in the dwellings that are above it. It is also like a (with all due reverence) privy, and all superfluity falls into it, in which there is no spark of holiness. Therefore it is called Zóah rothácbath, that is, the boiling filth, according to the mystery (of the words of Isa 28:8): Vomit and filth are such that there is no place left (that is clean); as it is said (Isa 30:22): You shall call it filth. Concerning this, still more can be found in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech fol. 35, col. 4. in the 63rd chapter under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu.

There is also said to be in Hell a certain canal, or a pipe, through which water flows; concerning which, in the Jalkut chádascb fol. 166, col. 2. numerô 14. under the title Schamájim, the following is read: הוצרך הק"ב להבדיל הרקיע בין המים למים: לפי שסילון אחד יוצא מן הגיהנם ונכנס בתהום ואלמלא הרקיע המבדיל היו המים הורגים לשותיהם והרקיע הזה כשנכנס ביניהם בן המים העליונים למים התחתונים מחזיר המים הרעים למקומן ולא נפיק לעלמא כאינן מיא אלא בימי אלישע עלו כמלוא לוגמא: that is, the holy and blessed God had need to make a distinction with the firmament between the waters, because a canal comes out of Hell and goes into the abyss; and if the firmament did not make a distinction, the water would kill those who drank it. But the firmament, which passes between the upper and lower water, causes the evil water to flow back to its place, and none of it flows out into the world. Yet in the time of Elise, approximately a mouthful rose up.

There is also said to be a great hole at the top of Hell, concerning which the book Kol bóchim fol. 20, col. 4. in the Galante contains the following written passage: במדורין יש נוקבא חדא הנקראה נוקבא דתהומא רבא דמתמן נפקין כמה גרדיני נימוסין וכד אסיאו זכאין בעלמא ההוא נוקבא סתים ולא נפקין מתמן אלא כד אסיאו חייבין בעלמא אתפתח ההוא נוקבא ומתמן נפקין כמה גרדיני נימוסין וכמה אבילי טריקין ומתפשטים כאותם המדורים וגומר: that is, in the dwellings there is a hole, which is called the hole of the abyss, from which many guardians of the Law come forth; and when the righteous multiply upon the earth, that hole is closed, and they do not go out from there. But when the wicked multiply upon the earth, that same hole is opened, and many guardians of the Law and crowds of the confined go forth and spread themselves over those same dwellings, &c. It is also read in the aforementioned fol. 20, col. 3. in Kináth setharím that the chief devil Sammaël, together with his subordinate devils, sometimes comes forth from this hole and there accuses the Jews before GOD.

Furthermore, there is said to be a place in Hell through which the wicked can go in and out, concerning which one reads in the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati on the five books of Moses, fol. 70, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajélschef, from the Medrasch Ruth, as follows: רבי נחוניא בן יוסי אומר מקום נתבצר לנפשותן של רשעים בינהם ומשם יוצאות ומשוטטות בעולם ואין להם מנוחה וחזרות לגיהנם ובאות אחר כך ודוחות אותן משערי חיים וחזרות בעולם. ומאן אינון אותם שהפימו בריתם וגוי That is: Rabbi Nechúnja, the son of Jose, says that there is in Hell a place set apart for the souls of the wicked, through which they go out and wander about in the world; and they have no rest, and afterward return again into Hell. Then they come and are driven away from the gates of life, and return again into the world. But who are these? Those who have broken their covenant and have not applied themselves to increase and multiplication (and have begotten no children), &c.

Now let us also examine which people go to Hell, how and when they are punished, how long the punishment lasts, and in what manner they are to be delivered from it again. As for the people who must go to Hell, both the righteous and the ungodly are said to go there, though the righteous remain there only for a very short time. Concerning this, the following is read in the book Nilchmáth chájim fol. 82, col. 2. in the 23rd Chapter of the second Maamar: וממה שצריך עוד שתדע בענין הגיהנם הוא כי כמו שהלוקח כלים ישנים מן הנכרי יש מהן שצריכים שטיפה בלבד ויש מהן שצריכין שטיפה והגעלה ויש מהן שצריכין לבון וכלי חרס שנשתמשו בו בחמץ אין לו תקנה וישבר. כך הענין עצמו בעונש הנפשות כי בהיות שהנשמה מתכלכת באוונות הרעות או בפעולות המגונות א"פ לא עשה תשובה והכבס בתר

In the Jalkut chádasc, at fol. 57, col. 1. numero 43., under the title Gan éden, the following is also found on this subject: כל העולם צריכין לירד לגיהנם אפילו מרשעים גמורים שלא הרהרו כלל בתשובה אינן עולין ואפילו צדיקים גמורים יורדים לגיהנם כדי להעלות משם אותן הרשעים שהרהרו בתשובה בעולם הזה ולא הספיקו לעשות תשובה That is: All people must descend into Hell, even if they are not wicked; they come back up again straightaway, except for those who are completely wicked and have not thought of repentance at all, who do not come back up. Indeed, even those who are completely righteous descend into Hell, so that they may bring up from there the wicked who in this world thought of repentance but did not have time to repent before their death. Those persons are brought up out of Hell and led back by the righteous. Rabbi Naphtali teaches on this subject in his book Emek hammelech fol. 23, col. 4., in the 43rd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu, as follows: אין לך צדיק מישראל שאינו עובר ונכנס בגיהנם אף על פי שאינו

ראוי אליו כי הגיהנם מקיף הקדושה והגן עדן ומכרת הוא הוא לילך דרך שם. ופעולתו שם שעובר דרך גיהנם ומוציא משם בכה מעשיו לאיזה רשע מישראל אשר שם שאין לו לבוש That is: There is no righteous man among the Israelites who does not enter into Hell and pass through it, even though he has not deserved it; for Hell surrounds holiness and Paradise on all sides, so that he must necessarily go that way. His action there, however, is that he passes through the way of Hell and, by the power of his works, brings out from there some wicked man among the Israelites who is there and has no garment, and takes him under his own garment or his cloak. In the lesser Jalkut Rubéni, on this subject at fol. 30, col. 4. numero 12., under the title Banim, drawn from the book Asara maamaróth fol. 53, col. 1., on the words of Jacob at Gen 37:35, "I will go down mourning into the grave to my son" (Joseph), the following is likewise written: פירוש בשביל בני שנאבד ומכה שהוא רשע איצטריך אני לירד שאולה לגיהנם ולהעלותו משם כי הכל יורדים לגיהנם אפילו צדיקים להעלות דרך עברם איזה רשע שירד לשם That is: The words "to my son" mean as much as "for the sake of my son, who is lost, and because he was wicked, I shall be compelled to descend into Hell in order to lead him out from there; for all people descend into Hell, yes, even the righteous, so that in passing through they may bring out some wicked man who has descended there."

But if it is true that all Jews must descend into hell, how does that accord with what is written in the Medrasch Tillim fol. 7, col. 2. on the sixth Psalm? Where the words read as follows: היה רבי מאיר אומר הביבה המילה שנשבע הק"ב: לאברהם שכל מי שהוא מהול אינו יורד לגיהנם שנאמר ביום ההוא כרת י' ברית את אברם ונ' ומי יורד לשם? מה כתיב אחריו את הקני ואת הקניזי ואת הקדמוני. וכן יחזקאל אומר רדה והשכבה את הערלים וגומר. אבל המינים והמשומדים ופושעי ישראל שכפרו בהק"ב: that is, Rabbi Meir said: circumcision is pleasing, for the Holy One, blessed be He, promised Abraham that no circumcised person should descend into hell, as it is said (Gen 15:18): "On that same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram," etc. Who then are those who descend? What is written after this (v. 19)? The Kenites, the Kenizzites, the Kadmonites. Thus also Ezekiel says (Ezek 32:19): "Go down and lay yourself with the uncircumcised," etc. But the heretics, and the apostates (who have adopted other religions), and the sinning Israelites who have denied the Holy One, blessed be He, a foreskin is drawn over them (so that they are as though they had never been circumcised), and they fall into hell, as it is said (Ps 55:21): "He has stretched out his hand against those who were at peace with him; he has violated his covenant." So also in the Jalkut Schimóni on the five books of Moses, fol. 23, col. 2. numero 18, as well as in Bereschith rábba, fol. 43, col. 2. in the 48th Parascha, the following is read: אמר רבי לוי לעתיד לבא אברהם יושב להם על פתח גיהנם ואין מניח אדם מהול מישראל לירד

בתוכה ואותן שחטאו יותר מדאי מהו עושה מעביר את הערלה מעל גבי תינוקות שמתו עד that is, Rabbi Levi said: in the time to come, Abraham will sit at the gates of hell and will not permit any circumcised person from among the Israelites to enter therein. But what does he do to those who have sinned too greatly? He takes the foreskins from the little boys who died before they were circumcised, and places them upon these sinners, and casts them into hell; and this is what is said (Ps 55:21): "He has stretched out his hand against those who were at peace with him; he has violated his covenant." Something similar is also to be found in Schemóth rábba fol. 111, col. 1. in the 19th Parascha, with these words: אמר רבי ברכיה כדי שלא יהו המינין ורשעי ישראל אומרינן הואיל ואנו מהולין אין אנו יורדים לגיהנם מה הק"ב עושה משלח מלאך ומושך ערלתן והם יורדים לגיהנם שנ' שלח ידו בשלומי חלל בריתו: that is, the circumcised do not come into hell. Rabbi Beráchja said: what does the Holy One, blessed be He, do, so that the heretics, and the apostates, and the wicked Israelites cannot say, "Since we are circumcised, we shall not descend into hell"? He sends an angel who draws their foreskin over them, and they descend into hell, as it is said: "He has stretched out his hand against those who were at peace with him; he has violated his covenant."

Concerning the manner in which the damned are punished in Hell, the same is described in the book Toráth ádam fol. 97, col. 1. 2. 3. under the title S. háar baggemúl as follows: אמר רבי יהושע בן לוי כד משתנא ביתא קמא דכמדוד גיהנם אשכחית: בה מאה מילין באורכא וחמשין מילין בפותיאי ותמן גובין גובין ואריון דנורא קיימן תמן וכד נפלין המן בני אשא אכלין יהון אריותא ובתר דתיכלינן אשאה קימין מרישא ורמו יתהון בנורא דכל ביתא דמדוד קמא. ומשחית ביתא דכמדוד תניינא ואשכחית ביה כקדמאה ושאיילית במן ביתא קמא ואמרון בביהא קפא אית ביה עשר אומין ועמהון אבשלום ואמרין לאומה אם אנתהא פרחנא דלא קבילנא אוריתא אתון מה חבון ואינן אמרין אנן כותכון סרחנא ואמרין לאבשלום את לא קבילת אבהתא קבילו למה לקית כדן אמר להון משום דזולזלית לאבא וקאים מלאכא חד וסחי לכל חד וחד בשוטי דנורא דהוא דמחי יתהון קושיאל שמיא ואמר רמו יהון ורמו יתהון ומהוקדין בנורא ומעילין חורגין דחי זיהו ורמן יהון לנורא וכן כל חד וחד עד דמסיימין כל חייביא. ובתר כן מעילין אבשלום לטמאה למחמא נפקא בת קלא ואמרת לא המחונה ולא תוקרונה בגין דהוא מבני דחוטאי דאמרון בסיני נעשה ונשמע. בתר דמסיימין רשיעיא לממחי ולמוקד נפקין מן נורא כאלו לא איתוקדו ועוד חזרין וממחיין יההון וכן עבדין להון שבע זמנין ביומא ותלת בלילה ואבשלום אשתיוז מכל אילין בגין דהוא בריה דדוד. ובביתא תניינא דבמדור תניינא אית ביה עשר אומין וכדין דנין יההון דווא עמהון וההוא דמחי יההון להטיאל שמיא דוואג אשתיוז מכל אילין דהוא מבני כניהון דאמרין בסיני נעשה ונשמע. ובביתא תליתא אית ביה עשר אומין וכדין דנין יההון וההוא דמחי יההון שפטיאל שמיא וקרח וכנישיהיה משתיוז מכל אילין בגין דאמרי נעשה ונשמע. וביתא רביעאה כדין דנין יההון ואית ביה עשר אומין וירבעם עמהון וההוא דמחי יההון מכתניאל שמיא וירבעם משתיוז מכל אילין דעל דעסק באורייתא והוא מבני ישראל דאמרי בסיני נעשה ונשמע. וביתא חמישיאה כדין דנין יההון ואחאב עמהון וההוא דמחי יההון חוטריאל שמיא ואחאב אשתיוז מכל אילין בגין דהוא

And I measured the second house, which is in the second dwelling, and found in it what I had found in the first; and I asked concerning the first house (how things proceed therein), and I was told: in the first house there are ten nations (of the seventy nations, mention of which was made above in the 19th chapter of the first part), and Absalom is among them. And one nation says to another: if we have sinned because we did not accept the Law, what then have you sinned? And they answer: we have sinned as you have. And they say to Absalom: although you did not accept the Law, yet your forefathers accepted it; why then are you beaten thus? And he gives them this answer: because I despised my father. And an angel arises and strikes each one with a fiery whip; the one who strikes them is named Kúlschiel. And he says: cast them; and they are cast, and they are burned in the fire. Thereupon others are brought in, and he strikes them, and they are cast into the fire; and thus one proceeds with each one until one is finished with all the wicked. After this, Absalom is brought in to be beaten; but a voice comes from Heaven and says: do not beat him, and do not burn him, because he is one of the sons of my beloved, who at Mount Sinai said (as is to be read in Exod 24:7): All that the LORD has said we will do and obey. After one has ceased beating and burning the wicked, they come forth out of the fire again as though they had not been burned. Thereupon they are beaten again; and thus it is done to them seven times during the day and three times during the night; but Absalom is exempted from all of this (namely from the punishments), because he is the son of David. In the second house, which is in the second dwelling, there are also ten nations, and they are likewise judged in this manner, and Doeg is among them; the one who strikes them is named Lahátíel; and Doeg is exempted from all of this, because he is of the descendants of those who at Mount Sinai said: We will do it and obey. In the third house there are also ten nations, and they are likewise judged in this manner (and Korah, and his assembly, of whom mention is made in Num 16:1 &c., are among them), and the one who strikes them is named Scháftíel. But Korah and his assembly are exempted from all of this, because they said: We will do it and obey. In the fourth house they are also judged in this manner, and in it there are ten nations, and*

*Jeroboam is among them, and the one who strikes them is named Maccáthiel; but Jeroboam is exempted from all of this, because he studied the Law and is of the children of Israel, who at Mount Sinai said: We will do it and obey. In the fifth house they are also judged in this manner, and Ahab is among them; and the one who strikes them is named Chútriel; but Ahab is exempted from all of this, because he is of the children of Israel, who at Mount Sinai said: We will do it and obey. In the sixth house they are also judged in this manner, and Micah is among them, and the one who strikes them is named Púliel; but Micah is exempted from all of this, because (at Mount Sinai) it was said: We will do it and obey. In the seventh house it also proceeds in this manner, and Elisha the son of Abuja is among them, and the one who strikes them is named Dalkiel; but Elisha is exempted (from all punishments), because he is one of the descendants of those who at Mount Sinai said: We will do it and obey. In all seven thousand (chambers) that are in each dwelling, the wicked are also judged in this manner, and none sees any other, on account of the darkness; for all the darkness that existed before the creation of the world is there. Something on this subject may also be read in the book Col bo fol. 137, col. 1. 2. numero 120. Since it is here stated that the Israelites in Hell are not punished in the same manner as other peoples, this accords with what is read in the Talmudic tractate Erúvin fol. 19, col. 1., as well as in the tractate Chagíga fol. 27, col. 1., where it is written: פושעי ישראל אין אור גיהנם שולט בהן : that is, Resch Lakisch said that the fire of Hell has no power over the sinners among the Israelites. And in the aforementioned passage of the tractate Chagíga it is also read: אמר רבי אלעזר הלמידי חכמים אין אור של גיהנם שולט בהן : that is, Rabbi Eliezer said that the fire of Hell has no power over the disciples of the wise (namely, over those who are learned in the Law). In the Jalkut chádasch, at fol. 55, col. 3. numero 19., under the title Gan éden, drawn from the third part of the book Asaráh maamaróth, cap. 15., the following is also found on this subject: אין אור של גיהנם שולט אפילו בפושעי ישראל לכלותם אלא יורדים לגירוי ולביעותא בעלמא וקצתם נכווים ברוע מעלליהם ואחר כך יורד אברהם שקיים כל המצוות וירד לאור כשדים על קידוש השם ובזכותו מעלה אותם משם לקיים מה שהובטח : 'בין הבתרים שהראה לו הקב"ה גלות וגיהנם ובירר גלות כדי שינצלו בניו מן הגיהנם וגו' : that is, the fire of Hell likewise has no power to destroy the sinning Israelites; rather, they descend so that they may be somewhat agitated and frightened, and some of them are burned on account of their evil deeds; thereafter Abraham descends, he who observed all the commandments and fell into the fire of the Chaldeans for the sanctification of the name of God, and by his merit he brings them up from there, in order to fulfill that which was promised to him between the pieces (of which Gen 15:10 is to be read); for the Holy and Blessed God had shown him exile and Hell, and he chose exile so that his children might be delivered from Hell. In the book Pesikta rábbetha, at fol. 17,* the first Maamar, as well as in the book Toledóth Yitzhak, fol. 90, col. 2, in the Parascha Kórach, and yet more in the book Reschíth chóchma, fol. 47, col. 2, in the twelfth chapter under the title Scháar hajírah, in the treatise on Hell.

Regarding the dwelling of Hell, which is called Scheól, of which half is said to be fire and the other half hail, this is confirmed in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 3, col. 2. in the Parascha Bereschíth, with these words: השאול חציו אש וחציו ברד וכמה נהרי אש יש בו ושבעה מדורי גיהנם שבעה מדורים גדולים וכל מדור ומדור שבעה נהרי אש ושבעה נהרות של ברד מדור עליון אחד משישים מן שני וכל מדור אחד משישים מחבירו ובכל מדור שבעה אלפים חורין ובכל חור שבעה אלפים סדק ובכל סדק שבעה אלפים עקרבים ובכל עקרב ז' חוליות ובכל חוליא אלף כדי מרה ובה ז' נהרות סם המות כשהאדם נוגע בו נבקע ומלאכי חבלה פחין אותו ודנין אותו בכל רגע וחצי שנה באש וחצי שנה בברד That is: The Scheól is half fire and half hail, and there are many rivers of fire within it. There are also the seven dwellings of Hell, which are great dwellings, and in each dwelling there are seven rivers of fire and seven rivers of hail. The uppermost dwelling is one sixtieth as large as the second (and thus the second is sixty times as large as the first), and each dwelling is sixty times as large as the one beside (and above) it; and in each dwelling there are seven thousand holes, and in each hole seven thousand cracks, and in each crack seven thousand scorpions, and on each scorpion seven joints, and on each joint a thousand vessels of gall. There are also within it seven rivers of deadly poison, and when a person touches them he bursts asunder, and the destroying angels strike him and judge him at every moment, namely half a year in fire and half a year in hail and snow; but the cold is more grievous to him than the fire.

There is also said to be a certain stream of fire that flows forth from beneath the throne of God and pours down into Hell upon the heads of the wicked. Concerning this, the following is written in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 107, col. 1. 2. in the Parascha Mischpatim: ראיתי רג"יון נהר של אש שיוצא מלפני הק"בה מתחת כסא הכבוד והוא עשוי מזיעת החיות שסובלים הכסא ומזיעים אש מאימתו של הק"בה עליהם ועליו מפרש ונהר דינור נגיד ונפיק קדמוהי אלף אלפין ישמשוניה ורבוה רבון קדמוהי יקומון דינא יתיב וספרין פתיחין שה"קבה יושב ודן מלאכי השרת וכשבאין לדין מתחדשין וטובלין אותם באותו נהר של אש. ואחר כך נמשך אותו נהר ומושך גזלים בוערים ומשליכים אותם על ראש רשעים בגיהנם שנאמר הנה סערת ה' חמה יצאה וסער מתחולל על ראש רשעים That is: I saw the Region, the stream of fire, which flows forth from before the Holy Blessed God, from beneath the Throne of Glory, and it is made from the sweat of the living creatures that bear the throne, who sweat fire out of their awe of the Holy Blessed God; and by it is explained that which is written (in Dan 7:10 with these words): A stream of fire (which in Aramaic is called Nehár dinúr) flowed and went forth from Him. A thousand thousands served Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him. The judgment sat, and the books were opened. For the Holy Blessed God sits and judges the ministering angels; and when they come to judgment, they are renewed and washed in that stream of fire. Thereafter that stream flows on and draws burning coals along with it, and it is cast upon the heads of the wicked in Hell, as it is said (Jer 23:19): Behold, a storm of the Lord, a fury, shall go forth; a grievous storm shall fall upon the head of the wicked. Concerning this, one may also consult the Talmudic Tractate Chagigá fol. 13, col. 2., and the book Toráth ádam fol. 98, col. 1., and the book Emek hammélech fol. 177, col. 1. in the 20th chapter under the title Scháär ólam habberíah, and fol. 179, col. 1-2 in the chapter called Scháär ólam baasíah, under the aforementioned title Scháär ólam habberíah, as well as the Sepher chasidim fol. 44, col. 4. numerô 530. That such a stream originates from the sweat of the aforementioned living creatures is also confirmed in the book Zijoní fol. 8, col. 2.

It is also taught that nearly all of the righteous must be purified in such a stream of fire, concerning which the Jalkut chádásch fol. 169, col. 4. numerô 4. teaches the following under the title Asaráb harúge malchúth: כל הצדיקים המתים צריכים להתמרק בנהר דינור חוץ מן הנהרגים על קדושת השם הואיל ושתו בשעתה כוס קדושת השם: התרעלה בעולם הזה על קדושת השם: that is, all the righteous who die must be cleansed in the river Dinur, that is, of fire, excepting those who are put to death on account of the sanctification of the name of God, inasmuch as they have drunk the cup of abomination in this world with joy on account of the sanctification of the divine name.

Regarding the time when the wicked descend into Hell, the Rabbis teach that they arrive there immediately after their death and are tormented within it. Therefore Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 82, col. 1, at the beginning of the 23rd chapter of the second Maamar, as follows: מונה וציב וקיים הוא בין חכמי ישראל שפטירתן של צדיקים מהעולם הזה לגן עדן, That is: It is held as certain and true among the wise of the Israelites that when the righteous die in this world, they come into Paradise, but the wicked, when they die, descend into Hell. And in the book Toráth ádam, fol. 99, col. 1, under the title Scháär baggemúl, one reads: העונש הזה של גיהנם מיד הוא בא לאדם אחר המיתה תכף שהרשע מת נפשו מהקשרת בגלגל האש משם נצמדת לנהר של אש היוצא מתחת כסא הכבוד שהוא מיסודי הגלגל וכה האישות כולן לשם גיהנם, That is: This punishment of Hell (which was mentioned previously) befalls a person immediately after death; as soon as the wicked man dies, his soul is bound to the globum, or the sphere of fire, from which it is then fastened to the river of fire that flows forth from beneath the throne of glory, which is of the elements of the sphere and possesses all the power of fire, and flows down into Hell, and with it the soul is driven along and descends thither. However, some, as was indicated above in the first chapter of this second part, on page 44, are said to wander about the world for a time immediately after their death, being greatly tormented therein, and only thereafter to come into Hell.

Regarding the punishment of the damned: they are not to be tormented without ceasing, but rather are to have rest every day at certain hours when the Jews perform their prayers, as well as throughout the entire Sabbath and the festival of the New Moon. This is written in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 167, col. 4. in the Parasch'a Vaëthchannán, from the Sóbar, from the Parasch'a Nóach, as follows: בכל יום בעידן צלותא יש לרשעים מנוחה בכל יום בכל צלותא שעתא ופלא: לפי זה בכל יום ג' תפלות יש מנוחה לרשעים בגיהנם בכל יום ד' שעות ומחצה הרי ו' ימים של השבוע ו' פעמים ד' ומחצה הרי כ"ז שעות יש מנוחה לרשעים בגיהנם בימות החול וכן That is: the wicked have rest every day at the time of prayer, one and a half hours at each individual prayer; therefore they rest daily in Hell during the three prayers (namely the morning, evening, and night prayer) four and a half hours, which over the six days of the week amounts to six times four and a half hours, that is, twenty-seven hours, during which the wicked are at rest in Hell on the weekdays. They also rest twenty-four hours on the Sabbath, which makes fifty-one hours in the week, etc.

In the Jalkut chadásch, fol. 56, col. 1, no. 26, under the heading Gan éden, the following is also read from the Sóbar, from the Parascha Bereschith, col. 194: בכל יום הרשעים בגיהנם ולא נפקו מתמן בר מריש ירחי ושבתא דכתיב: והיה מידי חודש בחודשו ומידי שבת בשבתו יבא כל בשר להשתחוות לפני אמר ה' ואחר שיצא ראש חודש או שבת כרוז מכריז ישובו רשעים לשאולה, אלא שבכל יום ויום מרחם עליהם הקב"ה ג' פעמים בכל פעם שעה ומחצה, והיינו שרמזו הקב"ה למלאך הממונה על שערי גיהנם ויש בידו שלשה מפתחות פותח להם ג' רהעין מצד המדבר ורואין משם קצת אור דהאי עלמא מיד בא העשן מן האש הבוער וסותם להם המראה. מיד ג' ממונין דתחות ידיה דהאי ממונה יש בידיהן ג' מגריפות ומנשבין בידיהם העשן שלא יעכב המראה ויש להם קצת רווחה שעה ומחצה וכן ג' That is: The wicked are every day in Hell, and do not come out from there, except on the new moons and the Sabbath, as it is written (Isa 66:23): "And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another new moon, and from one Sabbath to another Sabbath, all flesh shall come to worship before me, saith the LORD." And when the new moon or the Sabbath has ended, one calls out that the wicked shall return again into Hell. Yet the Holy and Blessed God also has mercy upon them daily three times, and indeed each time for an hour and a half, and this the Holy Blessed God signifies to that angel who is set over the gates of Hell and has three keys in his hand, so that he opens three gates for them on the side facing the wilderness, from which they can see something of the light of this world. But as soon as the smoke from the burning fire comes and stops up their sight (so that they can no longer see that light on account of the rising smoke), three overseers who stand under the authority of the aforementioned overseer are at hand, and they have three fire-shovels in their hands and fan away the smoke with their hands so that it does not obstruct the sight (that is, the beholding of the said light); and the damned have (during such a time) some refreshment (or rest) for an hour and a half, and this occurs three times a day, as also every time the Israelites say: Amen, may His great name be blessed unto eternity, etc.

In the Jalkut Shimoni on Job, the following is also found at fol. 149, col. 1, no. 906: כל ימות השנה יורדי גיהנם הם נידונים ובמוצאי שבת עד שהסדרים אינם נידונים וכשהסדרים נשלמים נשלמים מלאך אחד יש ושמו דומה הוא ממונה על הנשמות בא ונוטל נשמתן ומקלען לארץ הדא דכתיב צלמות ולא סדרים מהו צלמות צאו למות שלמו הסדרים: that is, those who have descended into hell are punished every day of the year, but before the end of the Sabbath, until the Sedarim (that is, the orders, meaning the prayers which the Jews customarily pray on the Sabbath during the evening prayer) are concluded, they are not punished. But when the Sedarim have been brought to an end, there is an angel by the name of Duma, who is appointed over the souls of the damned; he comes and takes their souls and hurls them upon the earth. This is what is written in Job 10:22: Zalmaveth velo Sedarim, that is, a shadow of death where there is no order. What does the word Zalmaveth mean? It means as much as Zeu lamuth schaschallemu basedarim, that is, go out to die, for the orders (of the prayers of the Jews) have ended.

Regarding the Sabbath, the following is written in the book Nischmath chajim fol. 39, col. 1., in the 14th chapter of the first Maamar, in this manner: וממה שצריך עוד שתדע הוא שאפילו הרשעים אשר עליהם נאמר יורדין ואינם עולים יש להם מנוחה . ביום השבת ולכן נקרא עונג כי היא תענוג העליונים והתחתונים כדאיתא במסכת גיהנם 'ובמדרש של רבי נחוניא בן הקנה מאי וינפש מלמד שיום השבת מקיים כל הנפשות וגו' that is, concerning that which you further need to know, it is this: that even the wicked, of whom it is said that they descend (into Hell) and do not rise again, have rest on the Sabbath day; for this reason it is called a delight, since both the upper and lower beings take delight in it, as is mentioned in the Tractate on Hell. So too is it read in the Medrasch of Rabbi Nechunja ben Hakkanah: What does the word (Vajinna fesch, that is, "And He was refreshed," Exod 31:17) mean? It teaches us that the Sabbath day sustains (and refreshes) all souls. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 91, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajischma Jethro, the following fable from the Medrasch is also read concerning this matter: מעשה בטורנוסרופוס הרשע שפגע את רבי עקיבא בשבת ואמר לו מה היום מימים אמר לו רבי עקיבא ומה גבר בגוברין אמר לו דמריה צבי אמר לו רבי עקיבא אנא נמי דמריה צבי כמו שרצה לכבדך כך רצה מלך המלכים שנכבד את השבת . אמר לו אם כן אלהיכם למה הוא עושה מלאכה בשבת אמר לו ומה מלאכה הוא

Thereupon Rabbi Akkiva asked him: what is the difference between one man and another? (and thus between you and another person, that you have been raised by your lord to high honors, while others are held in no regard?) To this Turnus Rufus replied that his lord had wished it so. Rabbi Akkiva said in response: I (honor the Sabbath) also, because my Lord wills it. Just as your lord wills that you should be honored, so too does the King of all Kings will that we should honor the Sabbath. Turnus Rufus then said to him: if that is so, why then does your God perform some work on the Sabbath? And when Rabbi Akkiva asked what work He performs, Turnus Rufus said: just as He does on the weekdays, so He does on the Sabbath: He makes the wind blow, and lets the rain fall, and causes the clouds to rise, the sun and moon to rise, and the fruits to ripen. To this Rabbi Akkiva said to him: I know well that you are versed in the law of the Hebrews. When two persons dwell in one courtyard, one gives the other the mixture (that is, they arrange it in a certain manner, through a mixing and sharing of the right that each has in his dwelling and his place, so that one may go to the other on the Sabbath; concerning which one may consult the 16th chapter of the enlarged Judenschul of the learned Buxtorff), and they are permitted to carry something from one place to another on the Sabbath. But a single person who dwells alone in one courtyard, even if it were as large as Antioch, may carry things back and forth within his courtyard, since there is no one else present who has any authority. Now the Heaven is the throne of the holy blessed God,* and the earth His footstool, and the whole earth is full of His glory, and no one has any power together with Him to move anything in His world. Beyond this, those who ate the Manna (in the wilderness, as may be read in Exod 16:4) also bear witness to this (namely to the Sabbath), since it came down on all the days of the week, but did not fall on the Sabbath. Nor is this all: the river Sabbation likewise proves it, which flows on the six days but does not flow on the Sabbath. When Turnus Rufus then said in reply: leave off speaking of the Manna, for it did not happen in our times (that it came down); and as for the river Sabbation, I do not believe you. Then Rabbi Akkiva said to him: go to the soothsayers and diviners (they will confirm it), for on all the days of the week it avails them (that they can accomplish something with their doings), but on the Sabbath it avails them nothing. Go and inquire at your father's grave, and you will see smoke rising from his grave on all six days, but on the Sabbath it does not rise. Since the dead know that it is the Sabbath, why then should the living not observe it? Thereupon Turnus Rufus went and inquired at his father's grave, and saw that on the Sabbath no smoke rose from it, and said (to Rabbi Akkiva): perhaps his punishment has come to an end. But he answered him: tomorrow you will see. When Turnus Rufus then saw on the first day of the week that the smoke was rising, he caused his father to come up out of his grave through sorcery, and said to him: during your lifetime you did not keep the Sabbath, and yet you keep it now in your death; from what time did you become a Jew? To this he answered him: my son, every person who does not keep the Sabbath among you as he ought comes here and keeps it against his will. Turnus Rufus then asked his father: what then is the occupation among you on the weekdays? And he answered him: we are punished on all the weekdays, but on the Sabbath we rest; and on the eve of the Sabbath a voice calls from Heaven and says: let the wicked go, so that they may rest. And there is an angel, by the name of Duma, set over us, who punishes us every day; but at the end of the Sabbath, when the Sedarim, that is, the orders (of the Jewish prayers) are concluded, that same angel cries out and says: you wicked ones, return to Hell, for the Israelites have concluded their orders (of prayers).

Not all of the damned, however, are to enjoy such rest on the Sabbath; for those who sit in the lowest place of Hell, which is called Zóah rotháchath (or rofáchas), are not to partake of it. Concerning this, it is written in the book Emek hammelech fol. 135, col. 4., in the 19th chapter under the title Scháár réscha díser ánpin, as follows: נחש הקדמוני רק זוהמת נחש קדושה אין לו ניצוץ קדושה רק זוהמת נחש הקדמוני : לפי שלא שמר אותם : That is: Whoever descends down there (namely into the place Zóah rotháchath, as can be seen from what precedes) has no spark of holiness, but rather the filthiness of the ancient serpent; therefore he does not ascend, and does not come out of Hell for all eternity, not even on the Sabbaths and feast days, because he did not observe and keep them. That those who have desecrated the Sabbath have no rest from hellish torment on the Sabbath is also to be found in the book Reschíth chóchma, fol. 49, col. 1., in the 13th chapter under the title Scháar hajirah, in the treatise on Hell in the 7th chapter.

Those who are freed from the torments of hell on the Sabbath are, however, to suffer and endure a double punishment on the sixth day, namely on Friday. Concerning this, the following is written in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 163, col. 4. numero 3. under the title Shabbat, drawn from the Sóbar chádasc, fol. 32, col. 1. 2.: שבת הוא יום מנוחה לרשעים בגיהנם ולא עוד אלא אפילו מכתירים אותן בכתר שבת ואפילו למי שחולל בפרהסיא בעולם הזה וכנגד זה דנין אותם ביום הששי כפל כדי שלא לדנו בשבת: that is, the Sabbath is a day of rest for the wicked in hell; indeed, they are even crowned with the crown of the Sabbath (and this happens even to one who has publicly desecrated the Sabbath in this world, so that he rests and is crowned). On the other hand, however, they are punished twofold on the sixth day, so that they are not punished on the Sabbath. But since it is stated here that one who has publicly desecrated the Sabbath also has rest on the Sabbath, whereas in the passage cited just before from fol. 135, col. 4 of the book Emek hammelech it was indicated that such a person has no rest during this time, the rabbis may see how they can reconcile these contradictory opinions with one another.

Regarding the length of time that the punishment of Hell lasts: according to some, it shall last only a very short time, in that they merely pass through it, or remain therein for only one or a few months; some are to endure the torment for up to twelve months and longer; but others must sit therein for eternity. And Rabbi Menasse ben Israel teaches on this matter in his book Nischmách chájim fol. 37, col. 2., at the beginning of the 14th chapter of the first Máamar, as follows: for twelve months, some for a longer or shorter time, and some who are punished for all eternity.

Regarding the punishment of a very short duration, mention of this was made above at pagina 338 in this chapter. Beyond that, the following is also read in the Jalkut chádasc, under the title Gan éden, at fol. 57, col. 4. numero 61: המלכין פני חבירו אפילו בנשיקה ענשו שידקה מ'יום ממחיצתו ונשעה ומחצה בגיהנם That is: the punishment of one who causes his neighbor to be ashamed, even if it happens in a high school, is that he is driven from his dwelling for forty days and must spend an hour and a half in Hell. On the other hand, it is written in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 107, col. 1: המלכין פני חבירם אין לו: That is: whoever publicly puts his companion or neighbor to shame has no share in eternal life. Therefore it is taught in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 43, col. 2: נוח לו לאדם שיפיל עצמו לתוך כבשן האש ואל ילכין: That is: it is better for a man to throw himself into a fiery furnace than to put his companion or neighbor to shame publicly. As for the duration of the short punishment, the following is also found on this matter in the Jalkut Schimóni on Malachiam, fol. 88, col. 3: יש נידונין שלשים יום ויש שלשה חדשים ויש ששה חדשים וגו' That is: some are punished for thirty days, others for three months, and others for six months.

Regarding the punishment of twelve months, the following is taught in the Sohar on the second book of Moses, in the Parascha Vajechi, col. 506 of the Sulzbach printing: דינא דחייביא בגיהנם תריסר ירחין פלגא מנייהו בחמה ופלגא מנייהו בתלגא: בשעתא דעאלין לנורא אינון אמרי דא הוא ודאי גיהנם עאלין לתלגא אמרי דא הריפא דסתא: that is, the punishment of the wicked in hell lasts twelve months; half of that time they are in fire, and half in snow. When they enter the fire, they say: this is certainly hell; but when they enter the snow, they say: this is the sharpness (or harshness) of winter. Regarding this punishment of six months in fire and six in snow, one may also consult Jalkut chádasc, fol. 56, col. 3, numero 35, under the heading Gan éden. In the book Ir gibbórim, fol. 70, col. 1, numero 210, it is likewise written: אמרו רז"ל משפט גוג ומגוג י"ב חודש ומשפט רשעים בגיהנם י"ב חודש כי האומות עובדי אלילים יהיו נידונים בעולם הזה י"ב חודש ובעולם הבא: that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the judgment over Gog and Magog lasts twelve months, just as the judgment of the wicked in hell lasts twelve months; for the idolatrous nations will be punished in this world for twelve months and in the world to come for twelve months, as is said of Amaleck (Exod 17:16): "From generation to generation"; and our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have interpreted this as referring to this world and the world to come.

In the book Nischmáth chájim, there is also written concerning this matter at fol. 83, col. 1, in the 23rd chapter of the second Máamar, as follows: משפט דור המבול י"ב חדש. משפט מצריים במצרים י"ב חדש. משפט איוב י"ב חדש. משפט רשעים בגיהנם י"ב חדש. משפט גוג ומגוג י"ב חדש ואחרי הימים האלה תשוב הנשמה ליסודה זכה ונקיה ועל אלו נאמר והבאתי את השלישית באש וצרפתה כצורף הכסף: that is, the punishment of the generation of the flood lasted twelve months; the punishment of the Egyptians in Egypt lasted twelve months; the punishment of Job lasted twelve months; the punishment of the wicked in hell lasts twelve months; and the punishment of Gog and Magog will last twelve months; but after those days the soul returns pure and clean to its element, and of these it is said (Zech 13:9): "And I will bring that third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined." In the Talmudic tractate Rosch haschana, at fol. 17, col. 1, and in the Jalkut Schimóni on Zechariah, at fol. 86, col. 4, numero 582, the following is also read concerning this: פושעי ישראל בגופן ופושעי אומות העולם בגופן יורדין לגיהנם ונידונין בה שנים עשר חדש לאחר שנים עשר חדש גופן כלה ונשמתן נשרפת ורוח מפוזרת תחת כפות רגלי צדיקים שנאמר ועסותם רשעים כי יהיה אפר תחת כפות רגליכם: that is, the Israelites who sin with their body, and the peoples of the world who sin with their body, descend into hell and are punished therein for twelve months; after the twelve months their body perishes, and their soul is burned, and the wind scatters them under the soles of the feet of the righteous, as it is said (Mal 4:3, or according to others chap. 3, v. 23): "And you shall tread down the wicked, for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet." This is likewise to be found in the Sepher chasidim, fol. 52, col. 2, numero 606, and in the book Toráth ádam, fol. 89, col. 4, under the title Scháár haggemúl, though with some variation.

That some are punished for longer than twelve months is illustrated by an example given in the Sepher Chasidim, fol. 11, col. 4, no. 45, at the end, where it is also noted that the punishment is then no longer so severe; something on this subject may also be read in the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 83, col. 1, in the aforementioned 23rd chapter of the second Máamar.

As for the manner in which such wicked persons, burned to ash and dust, are restored to life and thereafter made partakers of eternal blessedness, the following is taught in the Jalkut Schimóni, fol. 88, col. 3: משפט רשעים בגיהנם שנים עשר חדש ואחר כך באים הצדיקים ואומרים רבונו של עולם אותם בני אדם שהיו משכימין ומעריבין לבית הכנסת וקורין את שמע ומתפללים ועושים שאר מצוות מיד אומר הק"ב אם כן הוא לכו ורפאו אותם מיד הולכים הצדיקים ועומדין על אפן של רשעים ומבקשים עליהם רחמים והק"ב מעמידן על רגליהם מאפרן מתחת כפות רגליהם של צדיקים ומביאם: לחיי העולם הבא לכך נאמר ועסותם רשעים כי יהיו אפר תחת כפות רגליכם: that is, the wicked are punished in Hell for twelve months; thereafter the righteous come and say (to GOD): O Lord of the world, these are those people who went to the synagogue early and late, and read the words (Deut 6:4) "Hear, O Israel," etc., and performed their prayers, and also fulfilled the remaining commandments. Thereupon the holy blessed GOD speaks immediately: if that is so, then go and heal them. Then the righteous go straightway and stand upon the ashes of the wicked, and pray for mercy on their behalf, and the holy blessed GOD causes them to rise upon their feet from their ashes, which lie beneath the soles of the righteous, and leads them to eternal life, as it is said (Mal 3:21): "And you shall tread down the wicked, for they shall be dust beneath the soles of your feet."

Concerning the idolatrous peoples of the world, it is taught in the book Reschūb chōchma fol. 47, col. 2., in the 4th chapter of the tractate on Hell, that they must remain in each dwelling of Hell for seven years, which does not agree with what was stated previously, namely that they are tormented for only twelve months and thereafter burned to ashes.

Now we also wish to examine who those are that are tormented for eternity, concerning which it is written in the Talmudic tractate Rosch haschaná fol. 17, col. 1. as follows: המינין והמסורות והאפיקורוסין שכפרו בתורה ושכפרו בתחיית המתים ושפירשו מדרכי ציבור ושנתנו חיתתם בארץ חיים ושחטאו והחטיאו את הרבים כגון ירבעם בן נבט וחביריו יורדין לגיהנם ונידונין בה לדורי דורות שנאמר ויצאו וראו בפגרי האנשים That is: The heretics, and the traitors, and the Epicureans, who deny the law and do not acknowledge the resurrection of the dead, and who separate themselves from the ways of the community, and who have caused themselves to be feared upon the land of the living, and who have sinned and caused many to sin, as Jeroboam the son of Nebat and his companions did, these descend into Hell and are punished therein for all eternity, as it is said (Isa 66:24): "And they shall go forth and look upon the corpses of the men who have transgressed against Me; for their worm shall not die, and their fire shall not be quenched, and they shall be an abhorrence to all flesh." In the Sepher chasidim this is likewise to be found at fol. 52, col. 2. numero 606; however, in place of the word Minim, that is, heretics, one reads there המומרים לעבודת אלילים hammumarim laavodath elilim, that is, those who fall away into idolatry and abandon the Jewish faith, and among the traitors and Epicureans the Sadducees are also included. On this matter one may also consult the book Torath adam fol. 99, col. 4. under the title Scháar baggemúl, and the book Jad chasáka of Rabbi Moses bar Maimon in the first part fol. 46, col. 1. in the 3rd chapter on repentance, numero 5., as well as the book Nilchmáth chájim fol. 83, col. 1. in the 23rd chapter of the second Maamar, where precisely the same is taught.

We must now also consider in what manner the wicked are redeemed out of Hell, and how this occurs at the present time and will occur in the future. As regards the redemption of the present time, it was shown above in this chapter, on pages 338 and 339, that the pious and the righteous also come into Hell, but only pass through it, and take some of the wicked out with them and rescue them. Also, when someone dies and leaves behind a son who prays for his deceased father sitting in Hell, ברכו את ה' המבורך לעולם ועד, that is, "Blessed be the blessed Lord forever," then that father is rescued from Hell; and this is confirmed in the book Nischmāth chájim, fol. 89, col. 2, and fol. 90, col. 1, in the 27th chapter of the second Máamar, from the Médrasch of Rabbi Tanchúma, from the Parascha Toledóth Nóach, with a story, and the words read as follows: מעשה ברבי עקיבא שהיה מהלך בבית הקברות ופגע באחד שהיה טעון עצים על כתפיו והיה מרהיט בהם כסוס גזר עליו רבי עקיבא והעמידו אמר ליה בני מה לך בעבודה קשה כזאת אם עבד אתה ואדונך נותן עליך עול אני אפדך ממנו ואוציאך לחירות ואם אתה עני ואעשירך. אמר ליה הניחני אדוני שאיני יכול לעמוד אמר ליה מבני אדם אתה או מן המזיקין. אתה. אמר ליה מת אותו האיש ובכל יום ויום מוסרין אותו לחטוב עצים ונותנין אותו באש אמר ליה מה היתה מלאכתך בחיך אמר ליה גבאי המס הייתי והייתי נושא פנים לעשירים והורג את העניים ולא עוד אלא שבעלתי נערה מאורסה ביום הכפורים. אמר ליה בני שמעה , מאותם הממונים עליך שיש לך תקנה. אמר אל תעכבני שמא ירגזו עלי בעלי הפורענות ולאותו האיש אין לו תקנה ולא שמעתי כלום כעדין אלא שמעתי שהיו אומרים לו אלו היה לך בן שהיה עומד בצבור והיה אומר בצבור ברכו את ה' המבורך היו מתירין אותו מן הפורענות ולאותו איש אין לו בן אלא שהניח אשתו מעוברת ואין יודע אם ילדה זכר או נקבה ואם זכר ילדה מי ילמדנו תורה. אמר ליה מה שמך אמר ליה עקיבא ושם אשתו שושמירה. ושם עירך אלדוקא. באותה שעה נצטער עליו רבי עקיבא והיה הולך מעיר לעיר עד שהגיע לעירו ושאל היאך הוא וביתו, אמרו ישתחקו עצמותיו בגיהנם, שאל על אשתו אמרו ימחה שמה וזכרה מן העולם. שאל על בנו אמר הרי הוא ערל ואפילו במצות מילה לא עסקו. מיד תפשו רבי עקיבא לבנו והושיבו לפניו ללמדו תורה ולא היה לומד עד שישב עליו בתענית ארבעים יום יצאה בת קול ואמרה על זה מתענה אפרהן. וקרא באלף בית עד שהוליכו לביתו ולמדו ברכת המזון וקריאת שמע ותפלה והעמידו והתפלל ואמר ברכו את ה' המבורך לעולם ועד. באותה שעה התירוהו מן הפורענות ובא אותו האיש בחלום ואמר לרבי עקיבא תנוח דעתך בגן עדן שהצלתי מדינה של גיהנם. מיד פתח רבי עקיבא ואמר יידיך שמך לעולם ועד That is: It came to pass that Rabbi Akkiva was walking in a place of burial when he encountered a man who was carrying wood upon his shoulder and running with it like a horse; whereupon Rabbi Akkiva commanded him to stand still, and said to him: "My son, how is it that you are compelled to perform such heavy labor? If you are a servant and your master lays such a yoke upon you, I will redeem you from it and set you free; but if you are poor, I will make you rich." He, however, answered him: "My lord, let me go, for I cannot stand still." Thereupon Rabbi Akkiva asked him: "Are you one of the living, or one of the demons?" And he answered him: "I am dead, and every day I must chop wood, which is thrown into the fire." Rabbi Akkiva asked him further: "What was your occupation during your lifetime?" And he said to him: "I collected the tribute or the tax, and spared the rich, but put the poor to death; and this is not all, for I also lay with a maiden who was betrothed to a man, on the Day of Atonement." Then Rabbi Akkiva asked him: "My son, have you not heard from those who are set over you in Hell that you might be restored to a right state?" And he answered: "Do not detain me, otherwise those who punish me might be angered against me; I cannot be helped again. Nor have I heard anything of any redemption, but I heard that it was said to me: if you had a son who stood in the congregation and said therein the words 'Blessed be the blessed Lord,' you would be freed from the punishment. But I have no son; I left my wife with child, and I do not know whether she has borne a son or a daughter; and if she has borne a son, who will teach him the Law?" Then Rabbi Akkiva asked him: "What is your name, and your wife's name, and the name of your city in which you lived?" And he said: "My name is Akkiva, my wife's name is Susmira, and my city is called Alduka." At that very hour Rabbi Akkiva became very sorrowful on his account, and went from one city to another until he arrived at that man's city, where he asked where that man and his household were. And they answered him: "May his bones be ground to dust in Hell." He also asked after the man's wife, and they answered him: "May her name be blotted out from the world." But when he asked after his son, they told him that the boy was uncircumcised, and that his parents had not even troubled themselves to observe the commandment of circumcision. Then Rabbi Akkiva immediately took that man's son and had him sit before him so that he might teach him the Law, but the boy would not learn it until Rabbi Akkiva had fasted forty days on his account. Then a voice came from Heaven and said: "Are you fasting for this one's sake?" And he answered: "Yes." And the boy read the alphabet until Rabbi Akkiva brought him to his house and taught him the grace after meals, and the Schema (that is, the words of Deut 6:4, ברכו את ה' המבורך, "The Lord our God is one God"), and the prayer book; then he set him up, and he prayed and said: "Blessed be the blessed Lord forever." At that very hour the father in Hell was freed from the punishment, and that man came in a dream and said to Rabbi Akkiva: "May paradise be granted to you as a place of rest, for you have rescued me from the punishment of Hell." Then Rabbi Akkiva immediately began and spoke (from Ps 135:13): "Lord, Your name endures forever; Your memory endures from generation to generation." This fable is also set forth in detail in the Maase-book, in the 147th chapter.

There is also another prayer, which is called Káddisch, which is supposed to have the same power and effect; concerning which, immediately after the foregoing, in the cited place of the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 90, col. 1., the following is stated: וכך הוא כחו של הקדיש שכתב הר"י א בספר הכוונות דף י"א שטוב לאמרו אפילו בשבתות וי"ט ור"ה כי אין הטעם להנצל מגיהנם לבד כי הדי מועיל להעלותו מגן עדן של מטה ממדרגה למדרגה ואם כן אפילו בשבת מועיל וזה כאשר תראה ברבינו בחיי : that is, the Káddisch likewise has such power, for Rabbi Isaac Lúrrja wrote in his book Haccavvanóth (or Haccavvónos) fol. 11. that it is good to say it also on the Sabbaths, feast days, and new moons, for the reason (that one prays it) is not solely that a person be rescued from Hell, but it also serves to bring a person up from the lower Paradise, from one degree to another (that is, from one dwelling to another, so that he continually ascends higher). And if that is the case, then it is also beneficial on the Sabbath. Shortly after this, the following is further read in the same place: כשהבן מתפלל ומקדש ברבים פודה אביו ואמו מן הגיהנם. ונהגו לומר קדיש על האם אע"פ פי שהאב חי עדיין אינו בידו למחות : that is, when the son prays and says the Káddisch publicly, he redeems his father and his mother from Hell. It is also customary to say the Káddisch on account of one's mother, even though the father is still living; and the father may not forbid the son from saying the Káddisch on account of his mother. And in the book Pesikta sotárta it is read at fol. 3, col. 2.: הבן הטוב מציל את אביו מדינה של גיהנם וכן מצאנו באברהם אבינו שהציל את תרח : that is, a good son rescues his father from the punishment of Hell, and thus we also find concerning our father Abraham that he redeemed Tharab (Gen.

"And you shall go to your fathers in peace" (Gen 15:15). This teaches us that (God) announced to him that his father has a share in eternal life. The prayer Kaddish reads as follows: יתגזל ויתקדש שמה רבא בעלמא דכרא כרעותיה וימליך : מלכותיה בחייכון וביומיכון ובחיי דכל בית ישראל בעגלא ובזמן קריב ואמרו אמן. אמן יהא שמה רבא מבורך לעלם ולעלמי עלמאי : יתברך שמו ויתעלה זכרו לעד ולנצח נצחים : יתברך וישתבח ויתרומם ויתנשא ויתהדר ויתעלה ויתהלל שמה דקודשא בריך הוא לעילא מכל ברכתא ושירתא תושבחתא ונחמתא דאמירן בעלמא ואמרו אמן : תתקבל ברחמים וברצון את תפלתנו : תתקבל צלותהון ובעותהון דכל בית ישראל קדם אבוהון די בשמיא ואמרו אמן : יהי שם יי 'מבורך מעתה ועד עולם : יהא שלמא רבא מן שמיא וחיים עלינו ועל כל ישראל ואמרו אמן : עזרי מעם יי 'עושה שמים וארץ : עושה שלום במרומיו הוא יעשה שלום עלינו ועל כל אמן : That is: His (namely God's) great name be glorified and sanctified in the world, which He created according to His good pleasure. May He also cause His kingdom to reign during your lifetime, and in your days, and during the lifetime of the entire house of Israel, speedily and in the nearest time, and say Amen.

May the name of the holy blessed God be blessed and praised, and exalted, and lifted up, and extolled, and glorified, and lauded, above all benedictions, and songs, praise, and consolation, which are spoken in the world, and say Amen. May our prayer be accepted with mercy and good will.

May the prayer and the petition of the entire house of Israel be accepted by their Father who is in heaven, and say Amen. May the name of the LORD be blessed from now until eternity.

May there be given to us and to the whole house of Israel a great peace and life from Heaven, and say Amen. My help comes from the LORD, who made heaven and earth.

He who makes peace in His high places, may He bring peace to us and to all Israel, and say Amen. Up to this point are the words of the prayer Kaddisch.

The sons, however, are accustomed to saying this prayer for no longer than eleven months, and the reason for this is also indicated in the aforementioned place in the book Nischmath chajim, in these words: התקינו חז"ל לומר קדיש י"א חודש ולא יותר כדי שלא יהיה אביו נראה כרשע כאשר משפט רשעים בגיהנם י"ב חודש That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, have ordained that the Kaddisch be said for eleven months and no longer, so that his (namely the boy's) father not be regarded as a wicked man, since the wicked are punished for twelve months in Hell. Concerning this prayer Kaddisch, the book Shulchan-aruch may also be consulted in the section Jore-déa, fol. 326, col. 2, numero 376.

Furthermore, some of the damned are also to be redeemed from Hell by Abraham, as can be seen above on page 343 in this chapter, from what was cited from Jalkut chádasc fol. 55, col. 3. numero 19. under the title Gan-eden. And in the little book Schechecháth léket, it is read at numero 7. under the title Eliáhu ve-Elíscha: בכל מוצא 'שבת מעיינין בדין מי שנתכפרו לו עונותיו בגיהנם כדי שלא להחזירו שם. ומי שהכפרו עונותיו אליהו מביאו אצל מי שמוכן לו להיות אצלו. גם אם יש צדיקים שחטאו במקצת דברים. שצריכים במוצאי שבת להשיבו לרונו אליהו מקבל עליו דין כדי להגין עליהם: that is, at the end of every Sabbath it is examined in judgment whose sins have been atoned for in Hell, so that such a person may not be brought back there; and Elias leads the one whose sins have been atoned for to the one (in Paradise) beside whom he is to be. And if some righteous persons have sinned in certain matters such that they must be brought back to punishment at the end of the Sabbath, then Elias takes the punishment upon himself in order to protect them, so that they may not be brought back into Hell.

The manner in which the wicked are to be rescued from Hell in the future age is described in the booklet Othioth (or Otios) Rabbi Akkiva, fol. 15, col. 4, and fol. 16, col. 1, as follows: יש לו להק"ב מפתח של גיהנם שנאמר פתחו שערים ויבא גוי צדיק שומר אמונים אלא שומר אמנים שאומר אמן שבשביל אמן שעונין רשעים מתוך גיהנם ניצולים מגיהנם כיצד עתיד הק"ב להיות יושב בגן עדן ודורך וכל הצדיקים יושבים לפניו וכל פמליא של מעלה עומדים על רגליהם מימינו של הק"ב חמה עם המזלות ולבנה וכל הכוכבים משמאלו והק"ב דורש להם טעמי תורה חדשה שעתידי הק"ב ליתן להם על ידי משיח וכיון שמגיע לאגדה עומד זרובבל בן שאלתיאל על רגליו ואומר יתגדל ויתקדש וקולו הולך מסוף העולם עד סופו וכל באי עולם עונין אמן ואף רשעי ישראל וצדיקי אומות העולם שנתיירו בגיהנם עונין ואומרי אמן מתוך גיהנם עד שמתרעש כל העולם כולו וקולם נשמע בבו ש"ב והוא שואל עליהם ואומר מה קול רעש גדול ששמעתי משיבין מלאכי השרת ואומרי 'לפניו רבונו של עולם אלו רשעי ישראל וצדיקי אומות העולם שנשתיירו בגיהנם שעונין אמן מתוך גיהנם. מיד מתגלגלין רחמיו של הק"ב ביותר ואומר מה אעשה להם יותר על דין זה כבר יצר הרע גרם להם. באותה שעה נוטל הק"ב מפתחות של גיהנם ונותנן למיכאל וגבריאל ופותחים ארבעים אלפים שערי גיהנם שנאמר פתחו שערים ויבא גוי צדיק שומר אמונים. מיד הולכים מיכאל וגבריאל ופותחים ארבעים אלפים שערי גיהנם ומעלה אותם מתוך גיהנם. מלמד שכל גיהנם וגיהנם שלש מאות ארכו וג' מאות רחבו ועביו אלף פרסה ועומקו אלף פרסה וכל רשע שנופל לתוכו שוב אינו יכול לעלות מתוכו. מה עושין מיכאל וגבריאל באותה שעה תופשין ביד כל אחד ואחד מהן ומעלין אותן כארם שחוא מקים את חברו ומעלהו בחבל מתוך הבור שנאמר ויעלני מבור שאון מטיט היום. ועומדים עליהם גבריאל ומיכאל באותה שעה ורוחצין אותן וסוכין אותן וסופאין אותם מסכות גיהנם ומלבישין אותם בגדים נאים וטובים ותופשים בידם ומביאין אותם לפני הק"ב ולפני כל הצדיקים כשהן מגולחים ומכובדים שנאמר כהניך ילבשו תשועה וחסידך ישמחו בטוב כהניך אלו צדיקי אומות העולם שהם מכהנים להק"ב בעולם הזה כגון אנטונינוס בן אמירוס וחביריו וחסידך אלו רשעי ישראל שנקראו חסידים שנאמר אספו לי חסידי. וכשמגיעין לפתח גן עדן נכנסין גבריאל ומיכאל תחילה ונמלכים בהק"ב מה משיב הק"ב ואומר להם הניחו להם שיכנסו ויראו את כבודי וכיון שנכנסין נופלין על פניהם ומשתחוים לפניו ומברכין ומשבחין שמו של הק"ב כי צדיקים גמורים וישרים שיושבים לפני הק"ב נותנים הודאה ומרוממים להק"ב שנאמר אך that is to say: The holy blessed God has a key to Hell, as it is said (Isa 26:2): "Open the gates, that the righteous nation may enter, shomer emúnim," that is, "which preserves the faithful"; but (one must read) shomer aménim, she'omer amen, that is, which observes the Amen, which says Amen, for the wicked are rescued from Hell on account of the Amen which they speak. How will this come to pass? The holy blessed God will sit in Paradise and preach, and all the righteous will sit before Him, and all those who belong to the heavenly household (namely the holy angels) will stand upon their feet. To the right of the holy blessed God will be the sun with the planets, and to the left the moon and all the stars, and the holy blessed God will expound to them the meanings of the new Law, which He will give them through the Messiah. But when He comes to the Aggáda, that is, the entertaining narrative (of that same law), then Zerubbabel, the son of Shealtiel, will rise to his feet and recite (the aforementioned Kaddish): "May the name of God be magnified and sanctified, etc." And his voice will go from one end of the world to the other, and all who come into the world will say Amen; yes, even the wicked among the children of Israel and the righteous of the nations of the world who remain in Hell will answer from Hell and speak Amen, so that the entire world will be moved and their voice will be heard by the holy blessed God. Thereupon He will inquire on their behalf and say: what is this voice of a commotion that I have heard? Then the ministering angels will answer Him and speak to Him: O Lord of the world, these are the wicked Israelites and the righteous of the nations of the world who have remained in Hell, who are saying Amen from within Hell. Thereupon the holy blessed God will be moved to yet greater compassion over them and will say: what more shall I do for them beyond this punishment (which they have already endured)? The evil (corrupt) nature is the cause of it (that they sinned). In that same hour the holy blessed God will take the keys of Hell and give them to Michael and Gabriel, who are to open the forty thousand gates of Hell, as it is said (Isa 26:2): "Open the gates, that the righteous nation may enter, which preserves the faithful." Thereupon Michael and Gabriel will immediately go and open the forty thousand gates of Hell, and He (namely God) will cause them (the condemned) to be brought out of Hell. This teaches us that each Hell (that is, each dwelling-place of Hell, of which, as mentioned above, there are seven) is three hundred (miles) long and three hundred (miles) wide and a thousand miles thick and a thousand miles deep, and that every wicked person who falls into it cannot climb back out again. What then will Michael and Gabriel do at that time? They will take each one of them by the hand and bring them up, just as a man lifts up his companion and draws him up out of a pit with a rope, as it is said (Ps 40:3): "And He drew me up out of the pit of noise and out of the miry clay." These two, Gabriel and Michael, will also stand over them at that same time and wash them and anoint them and heal them of the wounds of Hell and clothe them in beautiful and clean garments, take them by the hands, and lead them before the holy blessed God and all the righteous, when they shall be clothed in white and honorably arrayed, as it is said (2 Chr 6:41): "Let your priests be clothed with salvation, and let your faithful ones rejoice in the good." By the words "your priests" are meant the righteous of the nations of the world, who serve the holy blessed God in this world as priests, just as Antonius the son of Afverus and his companions did. By "the faithful ones," however, are meant the wicked Israelites, who are called faithful, as it is said (Ps 50:5): "Gather my faithful ones to me." When they now arrive before the gate of Paradise, Gabriel and Michael will enter first and will take counsel with the holy blessed God; He will answer them and say: let them come in, so that they may see my glory. After they have entered, they will fall upon their faces and worship the holy blessed God and bless and praise His name; and the perfectly righteous and upright, who sit before the holy blessed God, will give thanks to Him and exalt Him, as it is said (Ps 140:14): "Surely the righteous shall give thanks to your name, and the upright shall dwell before your face." All of this is also to be found in the Jalkut Shimóni on Isaiah, fol. 46, col. 1, no. 26, though with some variation. But in the book Emek hammélecb, fol. 138, col. 4, in the 29th chapter under the title Scháar réscha disér ánpin, it is stated that the wicked will remain in Hell until after the resurrection of the dead, and the following passage comes after: ואז בן דוד הוא דור בעצמו יעבור שם להצילם, That is: Then the Son of David (namely the Messiah), who is David himself, will pass through that place to redeem them.

Regarding the redemption of the Israelites, the book Asaráb maamaróth (or Asóro maamóros) also teaches the following at fol. 83, col. 1: אפילו אחר דינה של גיהנם יש תקוה לפושעי ישראל שהם עתידים לשוב ולהתחדש כאלו לא חטאו מעולם והוא גיהנם כימות עניתנו. שמהנו כדקדק. that is, the sinning Israelites have a hope that they, even after having endured the punishment of Hell, will return again (and come out of Hell) and be renewed, as though they had never sinned at all; and this is what is said in Lam 5:21: "Renew our days as of old." (As also what is written in Pss 90:15:) "Gladden us again after the days in which You have afflicted us." And in the Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, at fol. 42, col. 3, number 269, the redemption of the Israelites is attributed to the merit of circumcision, in these words: לעולם הבא הק"ב מציל את ישראל מגיהנם בזכות המילה, that is, in the world to come, the holy and blessed God will deliver the Israelites from Hell on account of the merit of circumcision.

According to the preceding words of the booklet Othioth Rabbi Akiva, the righteous and pious among the nations of the world are also to be delivered in the future from Hell on account of their speaking of the Amen, which is likewise confirmed in the cited passage of the Jalkut Schimoni on Isaiah, fol. 46, col. 1, numero 26. Rabbi Salomon Jarchi, however, is of a different opinion, for in his commentary on the Psalms, on the words of Ps 22:30, "Before Him shall bow all who go down to the dust, but He will not keep alive the soul of the same" (namely, of the wicked, as is explained in the Chaldean translation), he writes as follows: צו יכרעו לפניו כל מתי האומות מתוך גיהנם ולא ירחם עליהם לחיות That is: Then shall all the deceased among the nations bow before Him out of Hell, but He will not have mercy upon them so as to restore their souls to life out of Hell.

The damned in Hell are also said no longer to know their own names, concerning which it is written in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 57, col. 4, numero 59, under the title Gan Eden, from the Sepher baccavvanoth, fol. 56, col. 2, as follows: הרשעים בגיהנם אינם יודעים שמותיהם ומכים אותם שם שיגידו שמם עד שנשבעים

ואומרים מעידים עלינו שמים וארץ בפני יוצר העולם שאין אנו יודעין שמותינו, That is: The wicked in Hell do not know their names, and they are beaten there so that they should declare their names, until they swear and say: we call heaven and earth to witness before the face of the Creator of the World concerning us, that we do not know our names.

Just as the filth of souls cannot be entirely removed in the lower Hell, but must be washed away in the upper Hell, so it is taught in the book Avodath hakkodesch, fol. 47, col. 3, in the 31st chapter, under the title Chelek haavoda, as follows: הוזהמה הניחה בגיהנם של מטה והדקה שלא היה יכולת בגיהנם של מטה לכלות: that is, the subtle impurity which has remained in the lowest Hell, and which could not be entirely removed therein, is completely cleansed in the uppermost Hell; thereupon he (namely, the one who had been damned) becomes worthy to enter the uppermost paradise. And in the book Nischmath chajim, the following is taught at fol. 33, col. 2, in the 12th chapter of the first Maamar: כמו שיש גיהנם למטה כך יש גיהנם למעלה והוא סוד נהר דינור הנזכר בדניאל שבו מתלבנים הנשמות מהוזהמה שלא יכלה הגיהנם של מטה לכלות בגיהנם של מעלה הנקה בהחלט: that is, just as there is a Hell above, so too there is a Hell below; and this is the mystery of the river of fire mentioned in the prophet Daniel (Dan 7:10), in which the souls are purified from the filth that the lower Hell was unable to remove, and which is completely cleansed away in the upper Hell.

God is also to be praised more in Hell than in Paradise, and concerning this it is written in the Jalkut Shimóni on the Psalms, fol. 116, col. 3, numero 833 as follows: רבי יוחנן אומר קילוסו של הק"ב מגיהנום עולה יותר מגן עדן שכל מי שהוא רבי יוחנן אומר ממעלה תחבירו מקלס לה"קבה ואומר אשרי שאני למעלה מזה שהוא נתון תחת: that is, Rabbi Jochanan says the praise of the holy blessed God comes more out of Hell than out of Paradise, for everyone who is above another praises the holy blessed God and says: I am fortunate that I am above this one who sits beneath me, and that I am not tormented so greatly; for the further down one sits, the more he is tormented.

In the future, according to the teaching of several ancient rabbis, there shall no longer be any hell; instead, the sun shall burn the wicked. Concerning this, the following is read in Médrasch Tillim fol. 18, col. 4. on the 19th Psalm: רבנן אמרי יש גיהנם לעתיד לבא שנאמר נאם יי' אשר אור לו בציון. רבי ינאי ורבי שמעון בן לקיש אמרי תרוייהו אין גיהנם לעתיד לבא אלא השמש הזו שהיא מלהטת את הרשעים שנאמר כי הנה היום בא בוער כתנור. אות מוצא שהוא נתון בנרתיק והוא נתון בגלגל ובריכה של מים שעל גבי הרקיע עוברת תחתיו והוא מתיש חמתו במים אשר מעל לרקיע ואף על פי כן אין נסתר מחמתו מה הק"ב עושה לעתיד לבא שולף אותו מנרתיקו ומביא לרקיע השני ודן בו: that is, our rabbis report that in the future there will be a hell, as it is said (Isa 31:9): "Thus saith the LORD, who has His fire in Zion." Rabbi Jannai and Rabbi Schimon ben Lakisch both say that in the future there will be no hell, but rather the sun will burn the wicked, as it is said (Mal 4:1, or according to others chap. 4, v. 1): "For behold, the day comes that shall burn like an oven." You find that it is in a sheath (or a case) and on the sphere or orb of the heavens, and also that a pool of water which is above the firmament passes beneath it, so that it weakens its heat in the water that is above the firmament; and yet, on account of its heat, it is not hidden. What then will the Holy and Blessed God do in the future: He will draw it out of its case and bring it to the second firmament, and judge the wicked with it and burn them, as it is said: "For behold, the day comes that shall burn like an oven." On this matter, one may also consult Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman's book Torath ádam fol. 101, col. 1. under the title Scháar baggemúl.

In the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 3, col. 2 and fol. 4, col. 1, the following is also found: אמר רבי שמעון בן לקיש אין גיהנם לעתיד לבא אלא הק"ה . מוציא חמה מנרתיקה ומקדיר רשעים ונקדיר רשעים ונידונים בה וצדיקים מתרפאים בה . רשעים נידונים בה דכתיב הנה היום בא בוער כתנור והיו כל זדים וכל עושה רשעה קש ולהט אותם היום הבא וגו' צדיקים מתרפאין בה דכתיב וזרחת לכם יראי שמי שמש צדקה ומרפא That is: Rabbi Schimon ben Lakisch said that in the future there will be no hell; rather, the Holy and Blessed God will take the sun out of its sheath and make an opening in it, and the wicked shall be punished by it, while the righteous shall be healed by it. The wicked shall be punished by it, as it is written (Mal 4:1, or 3:19): "For behold, the day is coming which will burn like an oven, and all the proud and all those who act wickedly shall be like stubble, and the coming day will set them ablaze," etc. The righteous, however, shall be healed by it, as it is written (in the following verse 2, or 20): "But unto you who fear My name shall the sun of righteousness arise, with healing under its wings."

The ancient rabbis, however, held differing opinions on this matter, for in Bereschith rábba fol. 6, col. 2, in the sixth Parascha, it is written on this subject in the following manner: וגלגל חמה יש לו נרתיק שנאמר לשמש שם אהל בהם ובריקה . אבל של מים לפניו בשעה שהוא יוצא הק"ה מתיש כחו במים שלא יצא וישרוף את העולם . אכל לעתיד לבא הק"ה מערטלו מנרתיקו ומלהט בו את הרשעים שנאמר וליהט אותם היום הבא רבי ינאי ורבי שמעון תריהון אמרין אין גיהנם אלא יום שהוא מלהט את הרשעים מה טעם . הנה יום בא בוער כתנור וגו' : 'רבנן אמרי יש גיהנם שנ' נאם ה' אשר אור לו בציון וגו' : 'רבי יהודה בר אלעאי אומר לא יום ולא גיהנם אלא אש שהיא יוצאה מגופו של רשעים ומלהט That is: The sphere or orb of the sun has a case, as it is said (Ps 19:5): He has made a tent for the sun within it, and there is a pool of water before it. At the time when it rises, the holy blessed God weakens its power in the water, so that it does not go forth and burn the world. But in the time to come, God will strip it of its case and with it set the wicked ablaze, as it is said: And the coming day will set them ablaze. Rabbi Jannai and Rabbi Schimon both say that (in the time to come) there will be no Hell, but rather there will be a day which will set the wicked ablaze. What is the reason (that they say this? Because it is written:) "Behold, the day comes which will burn like an oven," etc. Our rabbis, however, say there will be a Hell, as it is said (Isa 31:9): "This the Lord has spoken, who has His fire in Zion," etc. Rabbi Jehuda bar Elai says there will be neither a (burning) day nor a Hell, but rather the fire that goes forth from the body of the wicked will set them ablaze. What is the reason (that he says this?) Because it is written (Isa 33:11): "You shall conceive chaff and bring forth stubble; your breath is a fire that will consume you." This same passage is also to be found in Bereschith rabba fol. 24, col. 4, in the 26th Parascha.

The rabbis also teach that hell will in the future be purified and sanctified, and added to paradise. Therefore, in the small Jalkut Rubeni, numero 2, under the title Gebinnom, the following is read: לעתיד לבא יטהר יצר הרע ויעשה מלאך, That is: In the future, the Jezer hará, that is, the evil inclination (namely Satan), will be made into a holy angel, and hell will likewise be purified and added to the borders of paradise. And in the book Asarah maamaróth, fol. 85, col. 1, it is written: אין גיהנם לעתיד לבא הכוונה על אור דידה דאיברי 'בשני אבל הללה שנברא קודם העולם עתיד להתקדש בקדושת הגן, That is: In the future there will be no hell; however, this is to be understood as referring to the fire of hell, which was created on the second day; but the pit thereof, which was created before the world, will be sanctified as paradise is holy, and there the righteous will dance, and the holy, blessed God will be the head of the dance, as it is written (Isa 30:33): (For hell has been prepared from yesterday); yes, it is also prepared for the king. The very same thing is also to be found in the Jalkut chádasch, fol. 55, col. 4, numero 24, under the title Gan éden.

So it is also taught in the book Emek hammélech fol. 35, col. 3., in the 62nd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam hattóbu, as follows: לעתיד לבא ישלח לנו 'הק"ב פדות ויעשה כל האומות כלייה ויחריב ארצם ויבלע ארץ ישראל את גבולם וגו' . ונמשך עזה שמקום הגיהנם יהיה קודש ושם יהיה שעשוע ומחול הצדיקים והגן עין יכוליל את הגיהנם שנאמר ערוך מאתמול תפתה גם הוא למלך הוכן שהק"ב לעתיד ישעשע עצמו ויטייל עם הצדיקים במחולה המחניים תרין מחנות דהרין מתיבתא דרקינא ומתיבתא דק"ב ואז גם That is: המדבר יהיה מקום ארץ ישראל שנאמר ישושום מדבר וציה והרע יהיה בטל לגמרי

In the time to come, the Holy One, blessed be He, will send us redemption and will destroy all the nations and lay waste their lands, and the land of Israel will swallow up their borders (so that their territories shall be drawn into the land of Israel, and the entire earth will be called the Israelite land), &c. From which it follows that the place of Hell will be holy, and in it the righteous shall take delight and dance, and Paradise will encompass Hell within itself, as it is said (Isa 30:33): Hell has been prepared since yesterday; indeed, it has also been prepared for the king. For the Holy One, blessed be He, will take delight therein and will walk with the righteous in two dancing hosts; for there will be two hosts of the two academies: the academy of the firmament and the academy of the Holy One, blessed be He. Then the wilderness too will be a place of the land of Israel, as it is said (Isa 35:1): The wilderness and the dry land shall rejoice, and evil shall cease entirely. And in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, fol. 121, col. 3., in the 152nd chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, one reads further: אחר ימות המשיח יחדש הק"ב עולמו וגם מקום הגיהנם יטהר ויתקדש ויהיה נוסף על גבולי הגן ערן עם הרשעים פושעי ישראל שבזכות שענו אמן על קדיש יונתן בן עוזיאל אחר אכילת לויתן והשור הבר ויזכו ללכת מחיל לחיל ויראו אל אלהים בציון וימנו עם כתות הצדיקים וגם מן חסידי אומות העולם שהיו מצטערים בימות המשיח שלא היו עובדים השם יתברך מקודם ביאת משיח ויתחרטו על עונותיהם גם מהם יזכו המשיח וגו' That is: The Holy One, blessed be He, will, after the days of the Messiah, renew His world, and the place of Hell will also be cleansed and sanctified, and together with all the godless Israelite sinners who are therein, who respond Amen to the Kaddish of Jonathan the son of Uzziel, will be drawn to the borders of Paradise, after one will have eaten of the Leviathan and the wild ox; and these same shall be worthy to go from strength to strength, and shall see God in Zion, and be counted among the companies of the righteous. Likewise, some of the pious among the nations of the world who will grieve in the days of the Messiah that they did not serve the blessed God before the coming of the Messiah, and who will repent of their sins, shall also be worthy of this great grace, &c. On this matter, the cited book Emek hammélech may further be consulted at fol. 41, col. 1., in the 71st chapter under the title Scháar ólam hattóhu, and at fol. 144, col. 1., in the 35th chapter under the title Scháar récha díser-ánpin. But let this suffice on the subject of Hell.

Chapter VII.

This chapter shows what the Jews teach concerning the good angels.

Since in the preceding fifth chapter mention was made of Paradise, and in the sixth chapter following it mention was made of Hell, and since the good and holy angels dwell in Paradise while the evil and unclean angels and devils dwell in Hell, we also wish to examine what the rabbis write concerning them, and to show in this chapter what is found in their books regarding the good angels.

Concerning the German word Engel (angel), it derives from the Greek word ἄγγελος ángelos, which means a messenger or envoy, and an angel, and comes from the root word ἄγγελω angéllo, that is, "I proclaim" or "I bring tidings." In the Hebrew language, however, an angel is called מַלְאָךְ Málach, in the Chaldean and Syriac מַלְאָכָא Malácha, and in the Arabic مَلَك Malácon, which derives from the root word لَاحَ laách that has been lost in the Hebrew language but is still in use in the Ethiopic and Arabic languages; for in the Ethiopic language ለአክ : láaca, and in the Arabic, with transposed letters, أَلَحَ álaca means "to send" or "to dispatch," so that Málach signifies as much as "one who is sent," since the angels are God's emissaries and messengers.

Regarding the time of their creation, Rabbi Eliezer writes in his Chapters, at the beginning of the fourth chapter, as follows: בְּרֵאשִׁי בְּרָא ה' אֶת הָרָקִיעַ : that is, on the second day (of the creation of the world) the holy blessed God created the firmament, and the angels, and the fire of flesh and blood (that is, of men), as well as the fire of hell. This is also acknowledged by Rabbi Bechai in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 5, col. 4. in the Parasha Bereschith, that they were created on the second day. In Bereschith Rabba, fol. 4, col. 2. in the third Parasha, the following is also read on this subject: רַבִּי יוֹחָנָן אָמַר בְּשֵׁנִי נִבְרָאוּ הַמַּלְאָכִים הָהֵם : וּכְתִיב עוֹשֶׂה מַלְאָכָיו מֵאֵשׁ וּמֵרוּחַ רַבִּי חֲנִינָא אָמַר בְּחִמְשֵׁי נִבְרָאוּ מַלְאָכִים שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר וַעֲוֹף יַעֲרֹף עַל הָאָרֶץ וְכָתִיב וּבִשְׁתֵּי הַיָּמִים וְעָלִיתִי עִבִּים רַכִּיבֵי הַמְּהֻלָּךְ עַל כַּנְפֵי רוּחַ . that is, Rabbi Jochanan said that the angels were created on the second day; this is what is written (Ps 104:3): He lays the beams of his upper chambers in the waters, he makes the clouds his chariot, he walks upon the wings of the wind. And it is written (v. 4 of the same): He makes his angels winds. Rabbi Channina said that the angels were created on the fifth day, as it is said (Gen

1:20): And fowl that fly upon the earth. And it is written (Isa 6:2): And with two (wings) they flew. This is also found in the book Avodath hakkodesch fol. 115, col. 4. in the ninth chapter under the title Chélek sitbre battóra, as well as in the Jalkut Schimoni on the five books of Moses, fol. 3, col. 2. numero 5. Rabbi Channina was therefore of the opinion that the angels are also comprehended under the word "fowl," since the act of flying is attributed to them. In the Jalkut chádascb, numero 11. under the title Schamáim, the following is read from the Medrásch néelam: קודם בריאת העולם ברא השם יתברך that is, before the creation of the world, the blessed God created the forms of the holy angels, who are the beginning of all created things, which proceed from the radiance of the light of His glory.

Rabbi Bechai makes a distinction between the angels who are said to have been created on the second and fifth days, and states in his aforementioned commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 37, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajéze, as follows: יש מלאכים קיימים נצחיים לעד והם אותן שנבראו ביום שני ויש מהם בטלים וכמו שדרשו רבותינו זכרונם לברכה בכל יום ויום בורא הקדוש ברוך הוא כת של מלאכים ואומרים שירה והולכים להם והסאותם שנבראו ביום חמישי That is: There are some angels who remain for eternity, and these are those who were created on the second day. But some of them pass away, just as our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have explained, that the holy and blessed God creates a host of angels daily, who sing a song (in praise and honor of God) and thereafter pass away again; and these are those who were created on the fifth day.

Concerning the angels that are created daily and thereafter cease to exist, the following is written about them in the Talmudic tractate Chagíga fol. 14, col. 1.: כל יומא ויומא נבראין מלאכי השרת מנהר דינור ואמרי שירה ובטלי שנאמר חדשים 1.: That is: ministering angels are created daily from the river Dinur (that is, the stream of fire, which was mentioned in the preceding eighth chapter, and which is said to flow forth from beneath the throne of glory), and they sing a song, and thereafter they cease to exist, as it is said (Lam 3:23): They are new every morning; great is Your faithfulness. The very same thing is also to be read in the book Avodath hakkodesch fol. 114, col. 2. in the seventh chapter, under the title Chélek sitbre battóra, as well as in Echa-rábbathi fol. 106, col. 2. In Bereschith rábba, the following is also found at fol. 70, col. 3 in the 78th Parascha: אדריינוס שחיק תמיא שאל את רבי יהושע בן חנניה אמר ליה אתם אומרים אין כת של מעלה מקלסת ושונה אלא בכל יום ויום הק"ב בורא כת של מלאכים חדשים והן אומרין שירה לפניו והולכין להן אמר לו הן ולאן אינון אזלין אמר ליה מן הן דאתבריין אמר ליה ומן הן אתבריין אמר ליה מן נהר דינור אמר ליה ומה עסקיה דנהר דינור אמר ליה כהדין ירדנא דלא פסיק לא ביממא ולא בליליא אמר ליה ומן הן הוא אתי אמר ליה That is: Once (the Emperor)

Adrianus (whose bones must be ground to dust) asked Rabbi Joshua, the son of Chananja, and said to him: you say that no company of angels above in heaven praises God twice, but rather that the Holy Blessed God creates every day a company of new angels, who sing a song before Him, and then they depart. And Rabbi Joshua answered: yes, we say so. Then Adrianus asked further: where do they go? And the Rabbi answered: they go back to the place where they were created. Adrianus asked further: out of what then were they created? And the Rabbi answered: out of the river Dinur (that is, the stream of fire). Thereupon Adrianus asked again: what is the nature of the river Dinur? And the Rabbi answered: its nature is like that of this river Jordan, which does not cease to flow day or night. Adrianus asked further: where does it come from? And the Rabbi answered: from the sweat of the living creatures, who sweat because they bear the throne of the Holy Blessed God.

In the small Jalkut Rubéni, at numero 125, under the title Málach, taken from the Zijóni, the following is also written: בורא הק"ב. בכל יום ויום. אמר רבי הלבו. כת חדשה של. מלאכים. ואומרים שירה חוץ ממיכאל וגבריאל ושרי המרכבה ומטטרון וסנדלפון וכיוצא. בהם. שאינם. מתחדשים אלא עומדים בכבוד ששת ימי בראשית ואין שמותם. מתחלפים. שנאמר והאיש. גבריאל וגו'. ואחר הקילוס חוזרים המלאכים לנהר. That is: Rabbi Chélbo has said, the holy blessed God creates every day a new host of angels, and they sing a song, excepting Michael and Gabriel, and the princes of the chariot, and Metátron, and Sandálfon, and those like them, who are not newly created but remain in the glory that was given to them in the six days of the creation of the world, and their names are not changed, as it is said (Dan 9:21): "And the man Gabriel," etc. But after the praise, the angels return again to the river Dinur, which is the place of their creation and which proceeds from the sweat of the living creatures that are beneath the Throne of Glory.

In the aforementioned Talmudic tractate Chagiga, fol. 14, col. 1, yet another opinion concerning the creation of the angels is put forward, and it reads as follows: אמר רבי שמואל בר נחמני אמר יונתן כל דיבור ודיבור שיוצא מפי הק"ב נברא. That is: Rabbi Samuel, son of Nachmani, has said that Rabbi Jonathan made it known that from every single word that goes forth from the mouth of the holy blessed God, one angel is created, as it is said (Ps 33:6): "By the word of the LORD the heavens were made, and all their host by the breath of His mouth."

Some are said to have been created from water, others from fire, and others still from wind. For this reason, it is written in the book Berith menúcha fol. 26, col. 1. at the beginning of the third Dérech as follows: אם המלאך הוא מאש. That is: when an angel is of fire, his origin is from fire; but when an angel is of water, his origin is likewise from water. And at fol. 26, col. 4. one reads there: שרי המשמרות הם רבים מאוד כמו שזכרתים למעלה ואלו השרים הם המקיפים את המרכבה כדי לשמור משמרתם אלו ושל אש ואלו של מים והק"בה עושה שלום ביניהם That is: the princes of the watches are very numerous, just as I have made mention of them above; and these princes surround the chariot in order to fulfill their watch. Some of them are of fire, but others are of water, and the holy blessed God makes peace among them and joins them all together; and of these it is written (Job 25:2): He makes peace in His heights. In Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 1. in the Paraseha Bereschith, it is likewise taught from the Medrasch Ruth as follows: אית מלאכי דאינון מרוחא ואית מלאכי דאינון מאישא That is: there are angels who are of wind, and there are angels who are of fire; and this is demonstrated there from the fact that it is written (Ps 104:4): He who makes His angels into winds, and His servants into flames of fire.

In the Jalkut chádascb, fol. 115, col. 1. numero 5., under the title Malachim, the following is also written on this subject: נשלחים לשום שליחות נעשים רוחות: וכאשר הם משרתים לפני כסא כבודו נעשים אש שנאמר משרתיו אש לוהט That is: When the ministering angels are sent out on account of a message, they are made into winds, as it is said: He who makes His angels into winds. But when they serve before the throne of glory, they are made into fire, as it is said: He who makes His servants into flames of fire.

How many different hosts and kinds of holy angels there are is shown in the book Beríth menúcha with these words: כמו שהספירות הם עשרה כך כתות המלאכים הם עשרה אשר אלו הם אראלים אישים בני האלהים מלאכים חשמלים תרשישים שנאנים כרובים אופנים שרפים וי' מלאכים שנבראו התחלה ממונים על עשר מחנות הללו אשר אלה שמותם מיכאל על האראלים צפניה על האישים חפניאל על בני האלהים עזיאל על המלאכים חשמל על החשמלים תרשיש על התרשישים צדקיא על השנאנים כרוב על הכרובים רפאל : That is: Just as there are ten Sephiróth (or radiances), so too there are ten hosts (or kinds) of angels, and these are the following: the Erellím (that is, the Mighty Ones), the Ischím (that is, the Men), the Bené haëlohím (that is, the Children of God), the Malachim (that is, the Angels), the Chaschmalím (that is, the Glowing Coals), the Tarschischím, the Schinanim, the Cherubím, the Ofanním, and the Seraphím; and the ten angels who were created first are set over these ten hosts, and these ten angels bear the following names: Michael (is set) over the Erellím, Zephánja over the Ischím, Chófníel over the Bené haëlohím, Usiel over the Malachim, Cháschmal over the Chaschmalím, Tarschisch over the Tarschischím, Zádikiel over the Schinanim, Cherúbh over the Cherubím, Raphaël over the Ofanním, and Jebuel over the Seraphím. The very same is also to be found in the book Emek hammélech fol.

178. col 2., in the 18th chapter under the title Scháar habberiah; and on this subject one may also consult Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's book Jad chasáka, in the first part, in the second chapter, under the title Hilchóth jesóde Thora.

According to the teaching of the Rabbis, some of the holy angels are also said to have instructed various people in the sciences in ancient times. Concerning this, in Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 80, col. 2, 3, in the Parascha Schemóth, on the words of Exod 3:2, "And the angel of the LORD appeared to him in a flame of fire," the following is written: המלאך הזה הוא מלאך הגואל שאמר ליעקב אנכי האל ביתאל והו ומלאך פניו הושיעם ר"ל המלאך הנקרא פניו ועל כן נגלה לו בלבה אש בענין הראוי למדת הדין נהתימ"ך: והתימה מיונתן בן עוזיאל שהרגס ואתגלי זגנזגאל מלאכא דיי 'ויראה לי כי הביאו לזה שהוא שר של תורה והוא רבו של משה רבינו עליו השלום. וכן אמרו בעלי הקבלה ז"ל רבו של אדם רזי"אל. רבו של שם יופיא"ל. רבו של אברהם צדקיא"ל. רבו של יעקב רפא"ל. רבו של יוסף גבריא"ל. רבו של משה זגנזגאל. ויש אומרים כי רבו של משה מיטטרון That is: This angel is the angel of the Redeemer (who is mentioned in Gen 48:16), who said to Jacob (Gen 31:13): "I am the God of Beth-El." This is the one (of whom one reads in Isa 63:9:) "But the angel of His countenance," that is, the angel who (in Exod 33:14-15) is called His countenance, "redeemed them"; and for this reason he appeared to him (namely to Moses) in the flame of fire, in a matter befitting the attribute of judgment. One must, however, marvel at Jonathan, the son of Uziel, who translated the aforementioned words of Exod 3:2 as follows: "And Segánsagel, the angel of the LORD, appeared to him." It seems to me, however, that he placed him here because he is the prince of the Law and was the teacher of our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace. For thus say the Kabbalists, of blessed memory: the teacher of Adam was (the angel) Ráziel; the teacher of Shem was Jóphiel; the teacher of Abraham was Zidkiel; the teacher of Jacob was Ráphael; the teacher of Joseph was Gabriel; the teacher of Moses was Segánsagel; the teacher of Elijah was Málthiel. Some, however, say that the teacher of Moses was Metátron. These are the words from Rabbi Menáchem of Recanati's commentary. But in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Five Books of Moses, it is read at fol. 304, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajélech, that the angel Michael was the teacher of Moses, in that Michael, when he was commanded by God to take Moses's soul, is said to have answered God as follows: רבונו של עולם אני הייתי לו לרב והוא היה לי לתלמיד ואיך אני יכול לראות במוותי That is: O Lord of the world! I was his teacher and he was my disciple; how then could I bear to witness his death?

How many holy angels God has around Him at any given time, at the very least, is indicated in the book Megalléh amykkóth fol. 89, col. 4. at the beginning of the two hundred and fiftieth Ofán, drawn from the book Sode rasája, in a most subtle manner, as the supremely wise rabbis are accustomed to do, with these words: נקרא הקב"ה מלך שהוא בגימטריא צ' שאין הקב"ה שוכן בפחות מצ' אלפים 'רבבות מלאכים. ותני רבי חייא כסא שעשה שלמה היו בו צ' אלף קתדראות והיו יושבין בו ע סנהדרין כסא אחד מימין לגד החווה משמאל לנתן הנביא מלפניו כסא אחד שישבה עליו בת שבע אמו והנה נרמזו ענין זה והיה ה' למלך על כל הארץ שאין הקב"ה נקרא מלך בפחות מהמרכבה הנרמזת במלת אר"ץ ארץ ש' שהיא צ' אלפים רבבות ארני אדונינו מה אדיר שמך that is, the holy blessed God is called מלך Mélech, that is, a king; which (word Mélech) by Gematria yields ninety in number, since the holy blessed God dwells among no fewer than ninety thousand times ten thousand (that is, ninety thousand times one thousand) angels. Rabbi Chija teaches that the throne which King Solomon had made possessed ninety thousand chairs (or seats), and that the seventy persons of the Synedrij, or high council, sat upon it, and that there was one throne on the right side for the seer (or prophet) Gad, and on the left side one for the prophet Nathan, and before it a throne upon which his mother Bathseba sat. And this matter is signified by the words (Zech 14:9), "And the Lord shall be king over all the ארץ érez, that is, earth," for the holy blessed God is not called a king by fewer than those who are in the chariot, which chariot is signified by the word ארץ érez, and אלפים Zade alaphím rebafóth, that is, ninety thousand times ten thousand (for the letter Zade yields ninety in number, and the Aleph or A signifies Alaphím, that is, thousand, while the Resch or R signifies Rebafóth, that is, ten thousand; for which reason it is also written in Ps 8:1:) "Lord, our ruler, how glorious is Your name becól baárez, that is, in all lands."

Many angels are also said to be subject to death and to die when they depart from the place assigned and appointed to them. Concerning this, the following is written in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 119, col. 3. numero 95.: המלאכים שבעולם הציירה משתוקקים ומתאווים להסתכל ולהשיג במקום שלא הורשו להסתכל ויוצאים ממחיצתם ואינן יכולין לסבול היקף האור מיד גוועים ומתים זולת מטטרון יש לו כח לעלות בסוד ות"קנה that is, those angels who, in the world of formation, desire and long to behold and comprehend a place which they are not permitted to behold, and who depart from the place of their abode that belongs to them, and cannot endure the force of the fire, die immediately; excepted is Metátron, who has the power to ascend through the mystery of the nine hundred and fifty-five firmaments that are in the throne, and he is not harmed.

The rabbis also teach that over every single thing that exists in the world, an angel is appointed, and this is read in Jalkut chadásch, fol. 147, col. 4. numero 27. under the title Mizvóth as follows: אין לך דבר בעולם ואפילו עשב שלא יהיה לו מלאך ממונה עליו והכל מנהג על פי אותו הממונה לכך אסור לערב כלאים מין בשאינו מינו כי הוא מבלבל פמליא של מעלה כי לכל מין ממונה בפני עצמו והוא מבלבל אותם וזה טעם איסור כלאים; That is: there is no thing in the world, not even a single little herb, over which an angel is not appointed, and everything is governed according to the word (or command) of that appointed one. For this reason it is forbidden (Lev 19:19) to mix things that are not of the same kind, and a species with that which is not of its kind, for thereby one confuses the heavenly household (that is, the angels), since every species has its own particular appointed one; but one confuses them (when things are mixed together with one another), and this is the reason why it is forbidden to intermingle things of different species with one another. Concerning this, one may also read the commentary of Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 111, col. 2. 3. in the Parascha Ki téze. In the aforementioned Jalkut chádásch, fol. 89, col. 4. numero 75. under the title Chataím veonashám, drawn from the one hundred and eighty-sixth Ofan of the book Megalléh amykkóth, fol. 63, col. 1., the following is also written on this matter: חטא כלאים גורם לערוב כחות של: מעלה מין בשאינו מינו שכל עשב ועשב יש לו מלאך ברקיע; That is: the sin of mixing those things which are of different species causes one to intermingle the higher powers (understand: the angels) and one species with that which is not of its kind, for every herb has its angel in the firmament.

Regarding the angels appointed over herbs: there are said to be two thousand and one hundred of them, because that many herbs are said to be found in the world. Concerning this, the following is found in the book Megalléh amykkóth, fol. 32, col. 4, and fol. 33, col. 1, in the one hundred and seventh Ofan: ידוע בספר הפליאה שכ"א מאות מיני עשבים יש בעולם שממונים עליהם המלאכים בסוד הידעת חקות שמים שהם המלאכים הממונים על עשבים שאמר הקב"ה לאיוב אם ידעת כמה הם שאומרים להם גדל ומכים אותם כדאמרינן בפרק ראשון דחולין. חזור ואמר אם תשים משטרו בארץ ר"ל במלת אר"ץ הן נרסוון המזלות המלאכים הממונים על עשבים שהם כמנין אר"ץ כדאייתא בחולין ר"ל א' היא אלף ר' כפשוטה י' בא"י בג"י הת"ק הרי אלף ר' ותת"ק עולין ק דאיתא: that is, it is known from the book Peliah that two thousand and one hundred kinds of herbs exist in the world, over which angels are appointed, according to the mystery of the words (Job 38:33, which God spoke to Job): "Do you know the ordinances (or statutes) of the heavens?" That is, the angels who are appointed over the herbs. For the holy and blessed God said to Job: do you know how many of them (the angels) there are, who say to them (the herbs), "grow," and who strike them (that is, cause them to take root), as is mentioned in the first chapter of the (Talmudic) tractate Chollin. Again He said (namely, God to Job, as is to be read in the aforementioned v. 33): "Can you set His dominion over the ארץ Erez, that is, the earth?" which means as much as: that the number of the stars and of the angels appointed over the herbs is as many as the word ארץ Erez yields, as it stands in the tractate Chollin; and the letter Aleph, or A, means Eleph, that is, one thousand; the letter Resch, or R, (two hundred) according to its plain meaning; the letter Zade, or Zader, through Ajak אי"ק (which is a certain Kabbalistic permutation of the alphabet, which can be looked up and found in the book Schéfa tal, fol. 13, col. 3) yields nine hundred by Gematria. Thus there result one thousand, two hundred, and nine hundred, which yields the number of two thousand and one hundred.

The angel Jorkemo is said to be appointed over hail, and Gabriel over fire, concerning which the following is written in the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 118, col. 1. 2.: בשעה שהפיל נמרוד הרשע את אברהם אבינו לתוך כבשן האש אמר: לפני הק"ב אני יחיד בעולמי והוא יחיד בעולמו נאה ליחיד להציל את היחיד ולפי שהק"ב אינו מקפח שכר כל בריה אמר לו הק"ב אתה יחיד בעולמי ואני יחיד בעולמי נאה ליחיד להציל את היחיד ולפי שהק"ב אינו מקפח שכר כל בריה אמר לו הק"ב אתה יחיד בעולמי ואני יחיד בעולמי נאה ליחיד להציל את היחיד ולפי שהק"ב אינו מקפח שכר כל בריה אמר לו הק"ב תזכה ותציל שלשה מבני בניו. דרש רבי שמעון השלוני בשעה שהפיל נבוכד נצר הרשע חנניה מישאל ועזריה לתוך כבשן האש עמד יורקמו שר הברד לפני הק"ב אמר לפניו רבונו של עולם ארד ואצנן את הכבשן ואציל לצדיקים הללו מכבשן האש. אמר לו גבריאל אין גבורתו של הק"ב בכך שאתה שר ברד והכל יודעין שהמים מכבין את האש אלא אני שר של אש ארד ואקצר מבפנים ואקדיח מבחוץ ואעשה נס בתוך נס אמר לו הק"ב רד באותה שעה פתח גבריאל ואמר ואמת ה' לעולם that is, at the time when the wicked Nimrod had caused our father Abraham to be cast into the fiery furnace, Gabriel spoke before the holy blessed God: "O Lord of the World! I will descend and make the fiery furnace cold, and deliver the righteous man out of it." Then God said to him: "I am the only one in My world, and he is the only one in his world; it befits the one unique one to deliver the other unique one. But since the holy blessed God does not withhold the reward of any creature, He said to him: you will be found worthy to deliver three of his grandchildren." Rabbi Simeon the Silonite preached that at the time when the wicked Nebuchadnezzar cast Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah into the fiery furnace, Jorkemo, the Prince of hail, stood before the holy blessed God and said to Him: "O Lord of the World! I will descend and make the furnace cold and deliver these righteous men from the fiery furnace." Then Gabriel said to him: "The power of the holy blessed God does not consist in that, for you are the Prince of hail, and everyone knows that water extinguishes fire; but I, who am the Prince of fire, will descend and make it cold within and hot without, and perform a miracle within a miracle." Thereupon God said to him: "Descend." At that same hour Gabriel began and spoke (from Ps 117:2): "The truth of the Lord endures forever." In the book Ammudeha schibba it is likewise read at fol. 49, col. 3: גבריאל הוא יסודו מן האש ולכך הוא שר של אש ומיכאל הוא יסודו מים ולכך: that is, Gabriel is of the element of fire, and for that reason he is the Prince of fire; but Michael is of the element of water, and for that reason he is the Prince of water. In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, at fol. 95, col. 2, in the commentary of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, the following is also read concerning Gabriel, that he is appointed over the ripening of fruits, in these words: גבריאל ממונה על בישול הפירות: that is, Gabriel is appointed over the ripening of fruits.

In the book Berith menucha, fol. 37, col. 1, the following is read: הממונה על: האש שמו יהואל ותחתיו יש ממונים על האש ז' שאלה שמותם שרפיאל גבריאל נוריאל תמאל שמשפיאל הדדניאל סרניאל הממונה על המים שמו השר מיכאל ותחתיו יש ז' שרים ואלה שמותם רנאל) נ"א דניאל (אריאל מלכיאל חבריא) נ"א זכריאל (מיניאל דניאל) נ"א גריאל) ועל החיות ממונה יהואל ותחתיו ג' שרים והם פסיאל גסיאל חויאל) נ"א חניאל (ועל העופות ממונה השר ענפיאל) נ"א עפאל (ותחתיו שני שרים בעליאל עזיאל ועל הבהמות השר הדניאל) נ"א אדיאל (ותחתיו ג' שרים והם אלו לסיאל פרואל חסיאל. ועל השרצים ממונה סמניאל ועל הרמשים ממונה מפניאל) נ"א מעניאל (ועל הדגים ממונה דליאל ותחתיו ג' שרים אסיאל פקניאל בקפיאל) נ"א פקפיניאל (ועל הרוחות ממונה רוחיאל) נ"א מחיאל (ותחתיו ג' שרים חזקיה עזיאל עזיאל. ועל הרעמים גבריאל. ועל אבני אלגביש ממונה נוריאל. ועל הסלעים ממונה מקטוניאל) נ"א מקמניאל (ועל כל עץ עושה פרי ממונה עלפיאל. ועל כל עץ שאינו חיוני: עושה פרי ממונה השר שרואל) נ"א שנאל (ועל בני אדם ממונה סנדלפון וגומר that is, the one appointed over fire is called Jehuel, and under him stand seven who are set over fire, and they are called Seraphiel, Gabriel, Nuriel, Tammael, Schimschiel, Hadarniel, Sarniel. The one set over water is called the Prince Michael, and under him stand seven princes, whose names are Ranael (in another copy it reads Daniel), Ariel, Malkiel, Chabriel (in another copy it reads Sichriel), Minniel, Daniel (in another book it reads Geriel). Over the wild beasts Jechiel is appointed, and he has three princes under him, namely Pasiel, Gasiel, and Chaviel (in another copy he is called Chaniel). Over the birds the Prince Anpiel is appointed (or, according to other copies, Afael), under whom stand two princes, namely Baaliel and Asiel. Over the livestock the Prince Hariel is appointed (or, according to other copies, Ariel), and under him stand three princes, namely Lasiel, Parviel, and Hufiel. Over the creatures that move (in the water and upon the earth) Samniel is appointed, and over the creeping creatures Mefannahel (or, according to other copies, Maaniel). Over the fish Deliel is appointed, under whom stand three princes, namely Asiel, Pakniel, and Pakpuniel (or, according to other copies, Pakparniel). Over the winds Ruchiel is appointed (or, according to other copies, Machiel), and under him stand three princes, namely Chasakja, Usiel, and Asael. Over the thunder Gabriel is appointed, and over the hailstones Nuriel, and over the rocks Maktuniel (or, according to other copies, Mekanmanuel). Over all fruit-bearing trees Alpiel is appointed, and over all unfruitful trees the Prince Saroel (or, according to other copies, Sanael): and over mankind Sandalfon is appointed. In the last-mentioned book, in the sixth Derech fol. 32, col. 4, and fol. 33, col. 1, 2, much is also written concerning other things over which angels are said to be appointed, and it is taught there that the angel Kasriel, who is one of the Seraphim, is set over love of good and evil; Sandalfon, who is likewise one of the Seraphim, over protection; Rasdiel, who is one of the Schinanim, over grace or favor; Garsiel over fear and terror; Sansaniel, who is one of the Seraphim, over peace; Azmiel, who is one of the Chaschmalim, over the bestowal of powers; Sarniel over memory; Mischael, who is one of the Erellim, over the wild beasts; and Juniel together with Raphael, who are of the Ofannim, over medicine; and still more of the like can be found in that same place. In the book Rasiel the following is also found: על הרקיע ממונה חרדניאל אמרו עליו על חרדניאל שגבוה מחביריו י"ב אלפים ברקים של אש מהלך ששים רבוא פרסאות וכל דבור ודבור שממוציא מפיו יוצאין עמו י"ב אלפים ברקים של אש that is, Chardaniel is appointed over the firmament, and it is said of him that he is sixty times ten thousand (that is, six hundred thousand) miles higher than his companions, and that with every single word that he lets go forth from his mouth twelve bolts of white fire proceed; and Barkiel is the prince of his host.

Since now, as mentioned, a certain angel is supposed to be appointed over every thing, one reads in the Rabbinical writings that angels were formerly conjured for the performance of whatever was desired; books of conjurations of spirits are still found among the Jews, just as an old Jew here in Frankfurt in the Jewish lane once offered me a handwritten one, which, however, was not to my liking. And in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Lamentations of Jeremiah, fol. 167, col. 3, 4, numerô 1012, the following is read concerning the conjuring of angels: עד שלא באו השונאים היה ירמיהו אומר להם עשו תשובה שלא תלכו בגלות אמרו לו אם יבואו השונאים מה יכולים לעשות חד אמר אנא מקיף לה חומת מיא וחד אמר אנא מקיף לה חומת נורא וחד אמר אני מקיף לה חומת פרזלא אמר להם הק"ב בידי אתון משתמשין עמד הק"ב ושינה שמותם של מלאכים דעל מיא עבד על נורא דעל נורא עבד על פרזלא ומזכירים שמותם מלמטה ולא היו עונים להם הדא הוא דכתיב ואחלל שרי קדש וכיון שגרמו העונות ובאו השונאים התחילו מזכירים שר פלן אתא עביד לי מילא פלן אמר לית בחילי דאנא מרים מניה, That is: Before the enemies had come (before Jerusalem), Jeremiah said to them (namely, to the inhabitants of Jerusalem): repent, so that you need not go into exilium or misery. Then they said to him: when the enemies come, what can they do? One said (when they draw near) I will surround it (meaning the city of Jerusalem, through the conjuring of the angel appointed over water) with a wall of water; another let it be known that he would encircle it with a wall of fire; another said he would draw an iron wall around it. Thereupon God said: do you wish to make use of what is mine (that is, of my angels in such a manner)? And He arose and changed the names of the angels, and set the one who had been appointed over water over fire, and the one who had been appointed over fire He set over iron; and when they (namely, the citizens of Jerusalem at the arrival of the enemies) had called out the names of those angels from below (and conjured them), they did not answer them, and this is what is written (Isa 43:28): Therefore I have profaned the princes of the sanctuary. After sins had now caused the enemies to come, they began to call out the names of the angels (and to conjure them, saying): you, Prince N., come and do this and that for me; but he answered: it is not within my power to do so, since I have been removed from such office. This is also to be found in Echa rabbathi, fol. 303, col. 1, and in the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 76, col. 2, numerô 45, under the title Chórban.

Such a complaint is also written in the aforementioned Jalkut Schimóni on the Lamentations of Jeremiah, fol. 166, col. 3. 4., as follows: בשבא אוהו רשע עם המלכים לירושלים דמו ללכדה בזמן מועט והק"בה היה מחזק את אנשי ירושלים עד בשנה השלישית אולי יחזרו בתשובה והיו גבורים בירושלים עד אין חקר והיו נלחמים עם הכשרים ומפילים מהם חללים הרבה והיה שם גבור אחד ושמו אביקא בן גבתרי כשהיו אנשי החיל מקלעים באבנים גדולות להפיל החומה היה מקבלם בידו ומשליכן על בני החיל והורג מהם הרבה הנה עד שהתחיל לקבל האבנים ברגלו והיה מחזירן לחיל וגרם העון ובאה הרוח והפילו מן החומה ונבקע ומת באותה שעה נבקעה ירושלים ונכנסו הכשדים מה עשה חנמאל דוד ירמיהו השביעי מלאכי השרת בשם והורידן מזויינין בכלי זין על החומות כיון שראו הכשדים כן ברחו מפני אימתן עד ששינה להם הק"בה שמות והעלן לרקיע ובקש חנמאל להורידן ולא יכול לפי ששינה הקדוש ברוך הוא שמותם מה עשה השביע את שר העולם בשם והגביה את ירושלים והלוה באויר עד שבעט בו הק"בה מן השמים הדא הוא דכתיב השליך משמים ארץ וכו' : 'ובתיב גת דרך י"י לבתולת בת יהודה ונכנסו כולם לירושלים ונבלעו החומות הדא הוא דכתיב היה י"י כאויב בלע ישראל וכו' ונכנסו להיכל ובקשו לשורפו עד שקרא הק"בה That is: When that same wicked man (namely, King Nebuchadnezzar) came before the city of Jerusalem with the kings who lent him their aid, they supposed they would conquer it in a short time; but the holy and blessed God strengthened the men of Jerusalem until the third year, in the hope that they might perhaps repent and do penance. There were also heroes in Jerusalem beyond all reckoning, and they fought against the Chaldeans and slew many of their wounded. But there was among them a hero by the name of Abhika, son of Gasteri, and when the (Chaldean) soldiers hurled great stones to cast down the city wall, he caught them with his hand and threw them back at those same soldiers, killing many of them, until he began to catch the stones with his feet and hurl them back into the army. But sin brought it about that a wind came and cast him down from the wall, so that he burst apart and died. In that same hour Jerusalem was breached and the Chaldeans entered. What did Chanamel, the cousin of Jeremiah (who is mentioned in Jer 32:7), do? He adjured the ministering angels by a name and caused them to come armed with weapons upon the city walls. When the Chaldeans saw this, they fled away in fear, until the holy and blessed God had changed their names (namely, the names of the angels). What did Chanamel do further? He adjured the Prince of the World by a name and raised the city of Jerusalem on high, suspending it in the air, until the holy and blessed God trod it down with His feet; and this is what is written (Lam 2:1): He has cast down the glory of Israel from heaven to earth, etc. And it is written (Lam 1:15): The Lord has trodden the winepress of the virgin, the daughter of Judah. And they (the enemies) entered into Jerusalem, and the city walls were swallowed up, as is written (Lam 2:5): The Lord has become like an enemy; He has swallowed up Israel, etc. They also entered the Temple and sought to burn it, until the holy and blessed God called to Gabriel and Michael and said to them: Who is dear to you, etc.

What God then said to the two angels, Gabriel and Michael, and what He commanded them, can be seen shortly before in the cited passage of the Jalkut Schimóni in the third column, where, concerning the words of Lam 1:2, "All her friends have become treacherous to her and have become her enemies," the following is read: וזה גבריאל ומיכאל שהיו מלמדין עליה זכות אמר להם הק"ב מי חביב עליכם אמרו לפניו ישראל ואחר ישראל מי חביב עליכם אמרו לפניו בית המקדש אמר להם נשבע אני בשמי הגדול שאתם בעצמיכם מציתין בו האור מיד נטלו גבריאל ומיכאל שני לפידי אש והציתו אש בהיכל והיה היכל קורא על עצמו קינה שנאמר ממרום שלח אש בעצמותי וירדנה: that is, this signifies Gabriel and Michael, who had reported the merits (and good works) of the same (namely, of the city of Jerusalem). But the holy, blessed God asked them: who is dear to you? And they answered Him: the Israelites. (God further asked them:) Who, after them, is dear to you? And they gave Him the answer: the Temple. Then God said to them: I swear by my great name that you yourselves shall kindle the fire in it. Thereupon the two angels, Gabriel and Michael, immediately took two fire-torches and kindled the fire in the Temple; and the Temple cried out over itself a lamentation, as it is said (Lam 1:13): "He has sent fire from above down into my bones and has let it prevail." As for the conjuring of the angels to do this or that, and how this is to be carried out in practice, this can be seen in part from the book Berîth menúcha fol. 38 and 39, cited shortly before.

The holy angels are also said to move and govern the heavenly Sphæras or spheres and the planets, concerning which the book Schéfa tal fol. 41, col. 3. teaches as follows: צד הטומאה הם הקליפות שהם בעולם עשייה שיש להם אחיזה באופני קודש הפועלים בעולם עשייה ומניעים את הגלגלים ומה שבהם עד טבור הארץ וזה סוד הפסוק והנה אופן אחד בארץ ולזה נקראו אופנים כי פירוש אופנים כאלו אמר גלגלים כי הם מלאכים קדושים המניעים הגלגלים הפועלים בעולם עשייה מצד הקדושה: that is, the side of impurity consists in the Keliphóth (or Keliphos, namely the evil spirits), which are in the world of making, and which attach themselves to the holy Ofánnim, that is, wheels (by which certain angels are here understood), who perform their works in the world of making and move the Sphæras or spheres, and everything that is within them, down to the very center of the earth; and this is the mystery of the Scripture (Ezek 1:15): "Behold, there stood an Ofan, that is, a wheel, upon the earth." For this reason they are called Ofannim, for the word Ofannim signifies as much as Galgallim, that is, wheels or spheres, since they are holy angels who move the (heavenly) spheres, which perform their works in the world of making from the side of holiness. But since the world of making is here mentioned, I must note in connection with it that, according to the teaching of the Kabbalists, there are three kinds of world: עולם הבריאה olam habberiah, that is, the world of creation; עולם היצירה olam hajezirah, that is, the world of formation; and עולם העשייה olam haasiah, that is, the world of making, as may be seen in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 168, col. 3. numero 68. under the title Tórah. On this subject one may also consult the book Megalléh ámykkoth fol. 46, col. 2. at the beginning of the hundred and forty-second Ofan.

But to return to the angels who move and govern the Sphæras, or spheres: in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 206, col. 1, in the Parascha Schophetim, it is written thus: כבר הודענו כי יש למזלות שרים ינהיגו אותם והם נפשות לכדורי הגלגלים: that is, We have already made known that the planets have princes who govern them, and these same (princes) are the souls of the celestial spheres. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 9, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschith, the following is read: הרי כל המציאות ג' חלקים עולם המלאכים ועולם הגלגלים ועולם השפל. עולם: that is, Behold, all existing things are divided into three parts: the world of the angels, the world of the Sphærarum, or celestial spheres, and the lower world. As for the world of the angels, these same are the souls of the spheres, and the spheres exert their influence upon the lower things. Rabbi Moses bar Maimon teaches in his book Moreh nevochim, fol. 84, col. 2., at the beginning of the fifth chapter of the second part, that the aforementioned Galgallim, that is, the Sphære or spheres, are living and rational creatures, and his words read as follows: חיים משכילים רוצה לומר משיגים זה אמת נכון גם כן מצד התורה ושאינם גשמים מתים כאש וכארץ כמו שחשבו הסכלים אבל הם כמו שאמרו הפלוסופים בעלי חיים עובדים את אדוניהם 'ישבחוהו ויהללוהו שבח גדול ומהללים עצומים אמר השמים מספרים כבוד אל וגו': that is, That the spheres live and are endowed with understanding, that is, that they are capable of grasping (or comprehending) a thing, is a certain truth, even with regard to the Law; and that they are not dead bodies, like the celestial fire and the earth, as the foolish have supposed, but rather they are, as the Philosophi, or philosophers, report, living; they serve their Lord (namely, God), praise and glorify Him with great honor and mighty praise, as it is said (Ps 19:2): The heavens declare the glory of God.

Regarding the angel who is set over the sun and the one who is set over the moon, the following is taught in the Jalkut chädäsch fol. 168, col. 1. numero 59. under the title Schamáim, drawn from the fifty-first Ofan of the book Megalléh amykkóth: ומלאך הממונה על הלבנה : שמו אופניאל : that is, the angel who is set over the sun is called Galgáriel; and the angel who is set over the moon is called Ofániel. And at fol. 16, col. 1. in the sixty-second Ofan, the following is read in that same book Megalléh amykkóth: נשיא של החמה גלגליאל ושל לבנה אופניאל : that is, the prince of the sun is Galgáriel, and the one over the moon is Odaniel. As for what army of angels the prince Galgáriel has under his command, this is reported in the aforementioned Jalkut chädäsch fol. 168, col. 1. numero 62. under the title Schamáim in these words: צו חיילות כמנין ה'ארץ : that is, the angel Galgáriel, who governs the sun, had two hundred and ninety-six armies, according to the numerical value of the word הארץ baárez, which amounts to 296.

Other angels are also said to govern the sun by day, while others govern it by night. Concerning this, the following is read in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol. 96, col. 2, numero 674: המלאכים מנהיגים אותו אלו שמנהיגין אותו ביום : אין מנהיגין אותו בלילה : that is, the angels govern it; but those who govern it by day do not govern it by night. How many there are, however, who are to govern it by day and by night, is taught in the Jalkut chädäsch, fol. 168, col. 1, numero 61, under the title Schamáim, from the sixty-second Ofan of the aforementioned book Megalléh amykkóth, fol. 15, col. 4, in these words: החמה יש לה י"ג שמות על לבה ולכן י"ג פעמים אור במעשה בראשית ויש לה ח' מלאכים המנהיגים אותה לכן ח' פעמים אור ביום ד' וכן חמה נטריקון ח' מלאכים המנהיגים וכן נטריקון למפרע ח' מלאכים חשובים כי ח' מלאכים מנהיגים ביום וג' בלילה והמלאכים המנהיגים ביום הם : that is, the sun has thirteen names according to its nature, and therefore mention is made of light thirteen times in the work of creation. There are also eight angels who govern it, and therefore on the fourth day light is mentioned eight times. Likewise, the word חמה Chámma (sun) produces, through Notárikon (whereby each letter of a word forms a separate word in its own right), ח' מלאכים המנהיגים Cheth maláchim hammanbígm, that is, eight governing angels. It also produces, read backwards through Notárikon, ח' מלאכים חשובים He maláchim chaschúbim, that is, five distinguished angels; for five angels govern by day and three by night. Those who govern by day, however, are held in higher esteem; therefore, on the first day of creation, light is mentioned five times. In the Jalkut Schimóni on the Preacher of Solomon, fol. 182, col. 3, numero 967, the following is read concerning eight angels who are said to be before and behind the sun: רבי אלכסנדר אמר שמונה מלאכים יש לו ארבע מלפניו וארבע מלאחריו מלפניו כדי שלא ישרוף that is, Rabbi Alexander said: it has eight angels, four before it and four behind it; four before it, so that it does not burn the world, and four behind it, so that it does not make the world cold.

Since one reads in the Old Testament that angels appeared in a visible and human form, we also want to examine what the Rabbis write about this. Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat teaches in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 50, col. 1., in the Parascha Vajéra, as follows: כל הדברים הרוחניים המשמשים ועושים שליחותם בזה העולם השפל כולן מתלבשין בעת הצורך ואחר כך נשלחין ויוצאין ממלבושיהן That is: All spiritual beings that perform and carry out their mission in this lowest world clothe themselves in a body at the time of need. Afterward they lay their garment aside again and take it off. Exactly the same is also to be found in the aforementioned Rabbi Menáchem, fol. 49, col. 4. And in the Jalkut chádasc it is written at fol. 86, col. 1. numero 56., under the title Jacob: היה יכול יעקב להתאבק עם מלאך והוא רוח ממש אלא לפי שהמלאכים כשיוורדים למטה מתגשמים ומתלבשים בגופא כגננא דהאי עלמא לפי שראוי כך שלא לשנות מן המנהג כמו המלאכים גמי אברהם שלא שינו ואכלו וכן משה במרום לא אכל כן המלאך היוורד למטה That is: How could Jacob have wrestled with the angel, who was in fact a spirit? Because when angels descend below, they clothe themselves with a body after the manner of this world and take it upon themselves, for this is fitting, so that they do not alter the custom, just as the angels did with Abraham (of which one reads in Gen 18), who did not alter the custom of men but ate. Likewise Moses in the heights (when he was on Mount Sinai) did not eat (and thereby followed the custom of the angels, who do not ordinarily eat). In this manner, an angel who descends clothes himself with a body; for this reason he (namely Jacob) wrestled with the angel.

From where the angels take their body is taught in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 115, col. 1, numero 7, under the title Malachim, from the book Zijoni, in the Parascha Vajéra, fol. 18, col. 1, with these words: המלאכים הנראים לאדם בסביבת כי לוקחים חלק מן השלג שתחת כסא הכבוד שממנו נתהוו הארץ וזולת זה לא יושגו לחוש That is: that the angels are seen by corporeal man for this reason, namely that they take a portion of the snow which lies beneath the Throne of Glory, from which the earth was made (and prepare for themselves a body out of it); for without this they cannot be seen. So also in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 40, col. 3, in the aforementioned Parascha Vajéra, it reads thus: אותן המלאכים המושגים לעין וצריכין הן להתלבש צורה אנושית מאין זה להם. אמרו המקובלים כי לוקחים חלק מן השלג שתחת כסא הכבוד שממנו נתהוו הארץ That is: From where do those angels who are seen with the eyes and are to be clothed in human form take their body? The Kabbalists say that they take a portion of the snow which lies beneath the Throne of Glory, from which the earth was made. But in the aforementioned great Jalkut Rubéni, in the said fol. 40, col. 1, it stands thus:

That is: The word "angels" means messengers (or envoys) who clothe themselves with the air and come down into this world and are seen by men. Concerning such clothing with the air, one may also consult Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschith.

No angel who is sent down from heaven is permitted to remain here below for seven days in a row, because otherwise he cannot return back up. Concerning this, the following is read in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 117, col. 3. numero 53. under the title Malachím: המלאך ההולך מלמעלה למטה בשליחות אינו מהעכב שבעה ימים רצופים דאם היה מעכב כל כך לא היה יכול לחזור למעלה וכן היה בעזא That is: An angel who descends on a mission does not remain (here below) for seven consecutive days; for if he tarried so long, he would not be able to return back up. And so it happened with Asa and Asael, who became so thoroughly absorbed in the body, because they had lingered for seven days, that they were unable to return back up. Concerning this, the following is also taught in the commentary of the aforementioned Rabbi Menachem of Rekanat on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 1. 2. in the Parascha Bereschith, from the Medrasch Ruth: אית מלאכי דאינון מרוחא ואית מלאכי דאינון מאשא דא ויהיב :ליד דא ומשלים מן דא לדא ולהכי אינון בשלמא בניהון ועל דא אנון דנחתי מתרין יסודי אלין נחתי וכד נחתי מתלבשן תיר באוירא דעלמא ואתגלמו אינון דאתעכבו בהאי עלמא מתלבשן ביסודי דהאי עלמא ולא יכילו לפרחא ולא תבא לאתריהו ומתעכבי הכא כיון דשבע יומין אתעכבו הכא דא לא אהדרו תמן ועל דא That is: Some angels are made of wind, and some are made of fire, and one gives of his own to the other, since there is peace among them; for this reason, those who descend are also of two elements; and when they descend, they clothe themselves more with the air of the world and take it on. Those who remain in this world clothe themselves with the elements of this world and cannot fly and return to their place, but remain here; and when they have lingered here for seven consecutive days, they do not return to where they came from; for this reason it is written in Gen 6:2: "And the sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were fair."

No angel may also perform two tasks in a single mission; hence it is written in the small Jalkut-Rubeni, numero 125, under the title Malach, as follows: אין שליחיות שתי עושה אחר מלאך, That is: An angel does not carry out two commissions. Conversely, neither may two angels perform one task, for in the book Moreh nevachim, fol. 85, col. 2, in the sixth chapter of the second part, it is written thus: בבראשית רבה תני אין מלאך אחד עושה שתי שליחיות ולא שני מלאכים עושים שליחות אחת, That is: In Bereschith rabba it is taught: an angel does not carry out two commissions, and two angels do not perform one commission.

The angels are also said to cause people to fall asleep, concerning which the following is read in the Jalkut chadrasch, fol. 118, col. 4, numero 76: שלשה משטורות הוה הלילה וכנגדן שלש כתות מלאכים העומדין לשבח להק"ב ואינם יכולין לקרב אל הקודש מפני הסטרא אחרא שהולכת סביב מה הם עושים יורדים ששים רבוא מלאכים קדישין ומפילים שינה על הבריות מיד יורדים הסטרא אחרא ושולטין באלו ומטמאים אותם That is: The night has three watches, and corresponding to these there are three companies of angels who stand ready to praise the holy and blessed God; but on account of the Sitra achera, that is, the other side (by which the evil and unclean spirits and devils are understood), which goes about, they cannot approach the sanctuary. What do they do then? Sixty times ten thousand (that is, six hundred thousand) holy angels descend (to the earth) and cause people to fall asleep; whereupon the evil spirits of the other side immediately descend and have power over those same people and defile them; meanwhile (while the unclean spirits are upon the earth) the holy angels ascend and appear before the holy and blessed God to praise and glorify Him.

Every person is also said to have his own angel above in heaven, who intercedes for him and is his advocate. Concerning this, the following is written in the little book Or chadasch fol. 20, col. 2.: יש לכל אדם מלאך מליץ יושר מזלו : 2. את תפלתו של אדם שנאמר שומע תפלה וגומר שומע תפלה שממתפלל עליו שישמע הק"ב את תפלתו של אדם שנאמר שומע תפלה וגומר שומע תפלה לא נאמר אלא שומע תפלה זו תפלה של מלאך מזלו של אדם ואחר כך כל בשר עדיך יבאו ולכן אין רשאין למעלה לומר שירות עד שיאמרו ישראל שכל ענין שאדם עושה מלאך מזולו מראה באותו ענין למעלה כמו שכוונן למטה וזהו והיה טרם יקראו ואני אענה כלומר אני אענה למזולו קודם שיקרא האדם וכשיתפלל האדם על עצמו שומעין לו בעבור המזל שהתפלל עליו : that is, every person has an angel who speaks on his behalf and is his Massal (that is, his star or fortune) and intercedes for him, so that the holy and blessed God may hear the person's prayer, as it is said (Ps 65:3): "You hear prayer," etc. It does not say "You hear prayers," but rather "You hear prayer," by which is meant the prayer of the angel who is the person's Massal; and after this it follows (further in the aforementioned Ps 65:3): "To You all flesh shall come." For this reason it is not permitted above (in heaven, for the angels) to sing their songs until the Israelites (down here) have said theirs. For everything that a person does, the angel who is his Massal also causes to be seen above (and does it as well), just as it is undertaken down here; and this (is the meaning of the words Isa 65:24): "And it shall be that I will answer them before they call," as if God wished to say: I will hear his Massal before the person calls. And when the person offers his prayer for himself, he is heard on account of his Massal, which intercedes for him, and this (is indicated by the following words Isa 65:24): "While they are still speaking, I will hear them." The very same thing is also to be found in the Sepher chasidim fol. 78, col. 4. numero 1157 and 1158. And at numero 1161 one reads: ונפש מהללת את השכינה אף לאחר מיתה. מזל המלאך מהלל למעלה בקול שהצדיק רגיל בו כדי שיזכור הק"בה לדורו ולזרעו. ומזלו למעלה משה ימי בראשית כדי ליתת למקיימי מצוות that is, the soul has a Massal or star in the firmament, and it praises the divine Majesty even after death. The angel, however, who is the Massal, praises God above with that very voice to which the righteous man was accustomed, so that the holy and blessed God may remember his generation and his seed. Moreover, that person's Massal has existed above since the six days of the creation of the world, so that a reward may be given to those who keep the commandments, as though they had studied the Law and applied themselves to it from the six days of the creation of the world until the resurrection of the dead.

According to the teaching of some rabbis, the angels are also said not to understand the Syriac and Chaldean language, and to take no account of it; therefore, in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth, fol. 3, col. 1., in the Tosephóth, concerning the Chaldean prayer Káddisch, which was mentioned in the immediately preceding sixth chapter, it is written as follows: אומרים קדיש בלשון ארמית לפי שתפלה נאה ושבח גדול היא על כן נתקן בלשון תרגום שלא יבינו המלאכים ויהיו מתקנאין בנו : that is, the Kaddisch is said in the Syriac (or Chaldean) language, because it is a beautiful prayer and a great praise (of God); for this reason it was composed in the Chaldean language, so that the angels should not understand it and might not be able to contend against us. However, in what immediately follows, it is noted that it was composed in the Chaldean language rather because that language was at that time understood by everyone and had been the customary language of the Jews. In the Talmudic tractate Shabbat, the following is also read at fol. 12, col. 2: אמר רב יהודה לעולם אל ישאל אדם צרכיו בלשון ארמי ואמר רבי יוחנן כל השואל צרכיו בלשון ארמי אין מלאכי השרת נזקקין לו שאין : that is, Rabbi Jehúda said that a person should never make his petition (to God) in the Syriac (or Chaldean) language. Rabbi Jochanan likewise said that the ministering angels do not attend to the one who makes his petition in the Syriac language (in order to carry his prayer before God), because they do not understand the Syriac language. Concerning this, the Tosephóth in the same place writes as follows: אין מלאכי השרת מכירין בלשון ארמית לבד מגבריאל כדאמר בסוטה בריש אלו נאמרין דאמר מר בא גבריאל ולמדו שבעים לשונות ליוסף ותי' דאפילו מחשבה שבלב יודעין ולשון ארמי אין ידעין : that is, the ministering angels do not understand the Syriac language, with the exception of Gabriel, as is to be found in the (Talmudic tractate) Sota at the beginning of the seventh chapter (fol. 33, col. 1), for the Doctor said that Gabriel came and taught Joseph the seventy languages. But would you then say that they know even the thoughts in the heart, yet do not know the Syriac language?

Since the Tractate Sota is cited here, I also want to set down here what stands written therein on this matter, and the words read as follows: תפלה: בכל לשון: ופהאמר רב יהודה לעולם אל ישאל אדם צרכיו בלשון ארמית דאמר רבי יוחנן כל השואל צרכיו בלשון ארמי אין מלאכי השרת נזקקין לו לפי שאין מלאכי השרת מכירין בלשון ארמי לא קשיא הא ביחיד הא בצבור ואין מלאכי השרת מכירין בלשון ארמי והתניא יוחנן כהן גדול שמע קול מבית קדשי הקדשים שהוא אומר נצחו טליא דאזלו לאגחא קרבא לאנטוכיא. ושוב מעשה בשמעון הצדיק ששמע קול מבית קדשי הקדשים שהוא אומר בטילה עבדתא דאמר שגאה לאייתאה על היכלא ונהרג גסקלקס ובטלו גזירותיו וכתבואותה שעה וכיוונה ובלשון ארמי היה אומר אי בעית אימא בת קול שאני דלאשמועי עבידא ואי בעית אימא גבריאלי הוה ארמי? that is, should one pray in every language? For Raf Jehuda has said that a man should never make his petition in the Syriac language, since Rabbi Jochanan has said that the ministering angels do not attend to anyone who makes his petition in the Syriac language, because they do not know (or understand) that language. This objection is of no weight, for the one case (that a man should not make his petition and ask for something in the Syriac language) is to be understood of a single person praying alone (since the angels must present such a person's prayer before God), whereas the other case (that one may do so in any language) is to be understood of an entire congregation (for God Himself is present among them). But how so? We learn through tradition (in the Barajetha) that the high priest Jochanan heard a voice from the Holy of Holies of the Temple, which said (in the Chaldean or Syriac language): The young men have obtained the victory, who went forth to wage war against Antioch. Likewise it came to pass with Simeon the Righteous that he heard a voice from the Holy of Holies, which said (in Chaldean): The work is brought to nothing, of which the enemy said that he would have it brought against the Temple. Gaskalgas (the king of the Greeks) has been slain, and his counsels are annulled. Thereupon the very hour at which this was heard was written down, and careful note was taken of it, and it was spoken in the Syriac language. (It must therefore follow that the angels understand the Syriac and Chaldean language as well.) If it please you, I will answer you thus: the case of the heavenly voice is a different matter, since it is produced for the purpose of making an announcement (and proceeds from a spirit appointed for that purpose, who understands the seventy languages). Or, if you prefer, I will tell you that it was the angel Gabriel, who taught Joseph the seventy languages. These are the words of the Talmud.

On the other hand, in the Jalkut chadäsch fol. 117, col. 3. numero 56. under the title Malachim, the following is read: •שהמלאכים אמרינן • והקשה על זה היאך אמרינן • שהמלאכים אינם מכינים לשון תרגום אם כן היאך לימד גבריאלי ליוסף שבעים לשון ותרגום הוא חד משבעים לשון ומתרגם אין נזקקין אמרינן מירע ידעי אלא דלא משגיחין עליה דמאס הוא לגביהו וכי תימא הואיל דמאס הוא למה תרגם אונקלוס התורה בזה הלשון ויונתן המקרא ותרגם מאס לגבייהו קאמרינן באמת אינו מאס דהא מצינו הרבה פעמים שדברה התורה בלשון ארמי אלא דלגביהו דמלאכים מאים הוא ולכן תרגמו התורה בזה הלשון שלא יתקנאו המלאכים על: that is, an objection is raised (in the Sohar) against the claim that the angels do not understand the Chaldean tongue, (and it is stated:) if that were so, how could Gabriel have taught Joseph the seventy languages, given that the Chaldean tongue is one of the seventy languages? And this objection is resolved (and it is said that what is meant by this is only) that the angels do not betake themselves to one who prays in Chaldean, and that they do not present such a prayer before God; and we say that they do understand the Chaldean or Syriac tongue, but do not pay attention to it, because they have a distaste (or disgust) for it. But if one were to (object and) say: if it is distasteful (and contemptible), why then did Onkelos translate the Law, and Jonathan the entire Holy Scripture, into this language? this is resolved as follows (and the answer given) that only the angels have an aversion to it, whereas in truth it is not contemptible, for we find many times that the Law speaks in the Syriac (or Chaldean) tongue. It is therefore held in contempt only among the angels, and for this reason the Law was translated into the Chaldean tongue, so that the angels might not be zealous against the Law.

In the book Shalshelet hakkabbála it is written, fol. 20, col. 2, on this matter as follows: הסבה שהראשונים פתרו תורה נביאים וכתובים בלשון תרגום לפי שהמלאכים טקנאים בישראל שיש להם תורה כמו שנ' מה אנוש כי תזכרנו וכו' והם אינם יודעים לשון תרגום ולא ישגיחו בזה ויש אומרים שיודעים אבל מואסים זה הלשון ואינם משגיחים בו ועל זה נתגלה ה"בה לאברהם בהיותו ערל בלשון מחזה שהוא תרגום למען לא יקטרגו נגדו: that is, the reason why the first men translated the Law, and the Prophets, and the Hagiographa (that is, the remaining books of the Bible) into Chaldean is this: because the angels envy the Israelites for having the Law, as it is said (Ps 8:5), "What is man, that You are mindful of him?" etc. And because those same angels do not understand the Chaldean language and regard it as nothing. There are, however, some who say that they do indeed understand that language, but have an aversion to it and regard it as nothing; for this reason the holy and blessed God revealed Himself to Abraham, while he was still uncircumcised, through the Chaldean word máchase (which means a vision), so that they might not be moved to anger against him.

Since it has been reported that prayers offered in the Chaldean language are not carried before God by the angels, it is to be known that there are said to be three angels who present prayers to God, concerning which it is written in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 115, col. 1, numero 9, under the title Malachím, as follows: שלשה מקבלי התפלות אכתריאל מטטרון וסנדלפון: That is: There are three who receive the prayers, namely Achtáriel, Metátron, and Sandálfon. These three are said to weave crowns from the prayers of the Israelites and to place them upon God; hence it is read in the aforementioned Jalkut chádásch fol. 116, col.

2–3, numero 38, under the said title Malachím, as follows: שלשה קושרי כתרם 'הם מתפלתיקן של ישראל והם האחד אכתריאל וגו' והשני הוא מטטרון שר הפנים וגו' והשלישי הוא סנדלפון וגו', That is: There are three who weave (or bind together) crowns from the prayers of the Israelites, and the first is Achtáriel, etc., the second is Matátron, the Prince of the Countenance, etc., and the third is Sandálfon, etc. Furthermore, in the aforementioned Jalkut chádásch fol. 116, col. 3, numero 41, under the said title, the following is taught: הנה שלשה קושרי כתרם 'הם מתפלתיקן לקשור כתרם מהתפלות זולת בלשון הקודש ולא בלשונות אחרות אפילו לשון ארמי אף על פי שחלק לו הכתוב כבוד בתורה ונביאים וכתובים שמדבר הרבה פעמים בלשון ארמי כל שכן בשאר לשונות שלא זכו שיחלוק להם הכתוב כבוד בתורה וגו' הרי אם אין נזקקין ללשון ארמית כל שכן לשאר לשונות. רק מי שהוא עני בדעת שאינו מבין בלשון הקודש ואז לפני יי' ישפוך שיחו דוקא הבוחן כליות ולב ונחת רוח לפניו אפילו המתפלל בלשון לעז בלב נשבר ונדכא יותר מהמתפלל בלשון הקודש בלא כוונה וזהו תפלה לעני כי ישפוך שיחו, That is: Behold, the three who bind the crowns do not come forward to bind crowns from prayers except from those prayers that are offered in the Hebrew language, but not from those offered in other languages, even if it be the Syrian (or Chaldean) language, although the (holy) Scripture has accorded it honor in the Law, the Prophets, and also in the Hagiographa, in that something is mentioned therein in the Syrian (that is, Chaldean) language on many occasions. How much less, then, will they do so with prayers offered in the remaining languages, which have not been so worthy that Scripture should have accorded them such honor in the Law, etc. Behold, if they are unwilling to attend to the Syrian language, they will attend even less to the remaining languages. But if someone is poor in knowledge and does not understand the Hebrew language, and pours out his prayer before the LORD, who tries the reins and the heart and is gracious, even if he prays in a foreign language with a broken and contrite heart, he yet does more than one who prays in the Hebrew language without devotion; and this (is signified by the words of Ps 102:1): A prayer of the afflicted (or poor), when he is troubled and pours out his prayer before the LORD.

That the crown made from the prayers of the Jews is placed upon God's head can be seen from the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Recanati on the five books of Moses, fol. 54, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajéra, from the Medrasch Tillim, where the words read as follows: המלאך שהוא ממונה על התפלה הוא נמתין עד שיתפלל כנסייה אחרונה בבישראל ועושה אותן עטרה ונותן בראשו של הקב"ה שנאמר: ברכות לראש צדיק וזה צדיקו של עולם. ואמרו חכמי הקבלה כי המלאך הזה הוא סנדלפון That is: the angel who is appointed over the prayers waits until the last Israelite congregation has prayed, and thereafter he makes from the prayers a crown and places it upon the head of the holy blessed God, as it is said (Prov 10:6): Blessings are upon the head of the righteous, and this one is the Righteous

One of the world. Those who are versed in the Cabbala also say that this angel is Sandálfon. Concerning this, one may also consult the aforementioned commentary of Rabbi Menachem, fol. 148, col. 2, in the Parascha Kedofchim, and Schemóth rábba, fol. 113, col. 1, in the twenty-first Parascha, as well as the book Toledóth Yitzhak, fol. 17, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschíth, where similar material is to be found.

Since the preceding section mentioned the angels Metátron and Sandálfon, we now wish to consider what the Jews write and teach about them. Concerning the angel Metátron, he is said to be the foremost among all angels and their king, such that all the heavenly host stand under his authority and must obey him. For this reason, one reads in the Sóbar on the fifth book of Moses, fol. 137, col. 4: מטטרון מלאך מלכא דמלאכים, That is: the angel Metátron is the king of the angels. The same is also to be found in the little book Pithchejah, fol. 3, col. 2, at the beginning of the second chapter. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 98, col. 4, in the Paráscha Mischpatim, the following is written about him: נקרא בשם הזה לפי שבשם הזה נכללים שתי לשונות המורים על ענינו והוא אדון ושליח אדון מלשון חכמים שקורין אל הגבורה בעלה ממשלה מטרונה. שליח מלשון יון שקורים לשליח מניטור. ועוד יכול לומר ענין שלישי מלשון שמירה כי התרגום משמרת מטרת. ועל שהוא שומר העולם נקרא שומר ישראל. והנה מתוך הוראת שמו השגנו שהוא אדון לכל מה שתחתיו שכל צבא העליונים והתחתונים הלא הם ברשותו ותחת ידו והוא השליח למי שעליו ולמעלה ממנו שהשליטתו על הכל ושמו אדון קנינו; That is: he is called by this name (Metátron) because this name contains two meanings that describe his nature, namely that he is a lord and a messenger. He is a lord according to the word of the Sages, who call a woman who rules Matrona, that is, a matron. He is a messenger according to the Greek language, in which a messenger is called μηνύτωρ, Menitor. Indeed, he also contains a third meaning, that of a watchman (or guardian), for in the Chaldean language a watch (or guard) is called מטרה, Matteráth; and because he is the guardian of the world, he is called the guardian of Israel. See, we thus learn from the indication of his name that he is a lord over all that is beneath him, for all the upper and lower hosts stand under his dominion and power; and he is the messenger of the one who is above him and higher than he, who has given him dominion over all things and has set him as lord over his household and ruler over all that he possesses. The very same is also read in the book Schené luchóth habberíth, fol. 230, col. 3. Likewise, the following is taught about him in the book Beríth menúcha, fol. 37, col. 2: הוא מושל על כל המושלים ומלך על כל המלכים שליט מאוד ועל כן קראוהו המקובלים מטטרון מריה זיו כלומר המושלים ומלך על כל המלכים שליט וממקל בגבורה לממשלתו כי הוא ראשית דרכי אל rulers and a king over all kings, who governs with great power. For this reason the Kabbalists have called him Metátron, Mería sis, which means as much as one who exercises his dominion and rule with strength, for he is the beginning of the ways of God. And in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 118, col. 3, number 72, under the title Malachím, the following is reported of him: מטטרון שולט על כל המלאכים ולכך נלחם יהושע בעמלק לעורר האי נער שישלוט על סמאל; That is: Metátron rules over all angels; for this reason Joshua fought against Amalek, in order to rouse this youth (namely Metátron) so that he might rule over Sammael (who governed Amalek). Beyond this, the following is also found in the little book Othioth Rabbi Akkiva, fol. 11, col. 3, concerning him: מטטרון מלאך שר הפנים מלאך שר התורה מלאך שר החכמה מלאך שר ההיכלות מלאך שר הגבורה מלאך שר הכבוד מלאך שר ההיכל מלאך שר המלכים מלאך שר הרזונים מלאך שר השרים רמים וגבוהים רבים; That is: Metátron is the angel, the prince of the countenance (who stands before the face of God); he is the angel, the prince of the Law; the angel, the prince of wisdom; the angel, the prince of the palaces; the angel, the prince of strength; the angel, the prince of glory; the angel, the prince of the Temple; the angel, the prince of kings; the angel, the prince of rulers; the angel, the prince of the many high, exalted, and glorious princes who are in heaven and on earth.

This Metatron is also called, as is evident from the immediately preceding passage, שר הפנים Sar happánim, that is, the Prince of the Countenance, concerning which Rabbi Elias, in his Tishbi, fol. 53, col. 1., likewise writes: מטטרון שר הפנים אומרים שהוא המלאך הרואה תמיד פני המלך יתעלה ועליו נאמר כי שמי בקרבו ששמו כשם רבו מטטרון בגימטריא שדי; that is, Metatron is the Prince of the Countenance; and it is reported of him that he is that angel who always beholds the countenance of the praised King (namely, God); and of him it is said (Exod 23:21): "For my name is in him." Since he bears the name of his Lord, for Metatron amounts in numerical value to the same as שדי Scháddai, namely 314, which word Scháddai signifies the Almighty. This name is likewise given to him in the Jalkut chadash fol. 175, col. 3. numero 15. under the title Malachim, and in the great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 25, col. 4. and fol. 26, col. 1. 2. in the Parascha Bereschith.

Furthermore, he is also called by some rabbis שר העולם Sar baólam, that is, the Prince of the World, concerning which the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 27, col. 2., citing the book Emek hamélech fol. 198, col. 3. cap. 2., under the title Scháar ólam habberiah, reads as follows: מטטרון הוא שר העולם מפני שהוא מחלק מזון לכל שרי אומות העולם והוא חנוך נער והוא נשמת אדם הראשון שפרחה ממנו קודם שחטא וזכה בזה הנוך; that is, the Metatron is the Prince of the World, because he distributes sustenance among all the princes of the peoples of the world (of whom mention was made above in the 18th chapter of the first part), and he is the boy Enoch, and the soul of the first man (Adam), which flew away from him before he had sinned, and Enoch was deemed worthy of it. And in that very same place, in the fourth column, the book Chésed Abráham is cited as follows: כל השירות: שבעולם מקבץ אותם שר העולם מטטרון מפני שהוא מופקד על השירות ולהכניסם אל הפנימי: that is, the Metatron, the Prince of the World, gathers all the songs that are in the world, because he is appointed over the songs of the singers, to bring them into the innermost place. On the other hand, in the Talmudic tractate Jevamóth fol. 16, col. 2., in the Tosephóth, it is denied that Enoch is the aforementioned Sar haólam, or Prince of the World, and the words there read as follows: אי אפשר שיהיה חנוך שר העולם דבפ' אלו טרפות אמ' דבששת ימי בראשית: פתח שר העולם ואמר ישמח יי' במעשיו וחנוך לא היה במעשה בראשית ויש לומר דמטטרון: that is, Enoch cannot possibly be the Prince of the World, because in the third chapter of the Talmudic tractate Chóllin (fol. 60, col. 1.) it is stated that the Prince of the World began during the six days of creation and said: "The Lord rejoice in His works" (Ps 104:31); but Enoch was not present at the work of creation; therefore one must say that the Metatron is not the Sar haólam, or the Prince of the World.

He is also to be called זקן Séken, that is, the Old Man, and נער Náar, that is, the Youth or Boy, concerning which the following is found in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 28, col. 1. in the Parascha Bereschíth: מטטרון יש לו ג' שמות וקן דכתיב: זקן ביתו והיינו כשעולה לכסא הכבוד לתק רקיעים להעלות תפלת ישראל וכו' ואז יקרא זקן אבל כשחוזר לעולם היצירה נקרא נער וכו' That is: Metatron has three names; he is called the Old Man, as it is written (Gen 24:2): the eldest (servant) of his house; and this occurs when he ascends to the Throne of Glory over the nine hundred firmaments to bring up the prayer of the Israelites, etc. He is then called the Old Man; but when he returns again to the World of Formation, he is called the Youth, etc. And in the aforementioned great Jalkut Rubéni, at fol. 26, col. 3, one reads: מטטרון נקרא נער כי הוא משמש שימוש נער לפני השכינה. על: That is: Metatron is called Náar, that is, a Boy, because he performs before the divine Majesty the service of a boy (that is, a servant). Through him, sustenance is distributed among the hosts of the angels, etc. Because it was mentioned in the preceding section that Enoch is the Metatron, we now wish to examine what is found on this subject in the books of the Jews. In the Chaldean translation of Jonathan, the words of Gen 5:24 are read as follows: ופלה חנוך בקושטא קדם יי' והא ליתוהי עם דיירי ארעא ארום: That is: And Enoch served before the Lord in truth, and was no longer among the inhabitants of the earth, for he was taken away and brought up into the firmament (namely, heaven) by the word of the Lord, and He (the Lord) called his name Metatron, the great scribe. In the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Recanati on the five books of Moses, there stands at fol. 35, col. 1. 2., in the Parascha Bereschíth, on the words of Gen 5:24, "And Enoch walked with God, and he was no longer present, because God took him away," the following written: בספר היכלות אמר רבי ישמעאל אמרתי למטטרון מפני מה אתה נקרא בשם קונך בשבעים שמות ואתה גדול מכל השרים וגבוה מכל המלאכים וחביב מכל המשרתים ונכבד מכל הצבאים ורב מכל האדירים בגדולה ובמלוכה ובכבוד. השיב ואמר לי מפני שאני חנוך בן ירד כשחטאו דור המבול וסרחו במעשיהם ויאמרו לאל סור ממנו מה עשה הקב"ה נטלני מביניהם להיות עד עליהם בשמי מרום לכל באי העולם. וכיון שלקחני הקב"ה לשמש את כסא הכבוד ואת גלגלי המרכבה ואת כל צרכי השכינה מיד נהפך בשרי אלי לשלהבת וגידי לאש ועצמותי לגחלי רתמים ואור עפעפי לזוהר ברקים וגלגלי עיני ללפידים אש ושערות ראשי ללהט ולהבה וכל איברי לכנפי אש בוערות וגוף קומתי לאש יוקדת ומימיני חוצבי להבות אש ומשמאלי בוערי לפידי אש וסביבותי מפותות רוח סערה וסופה וקול רעש נרעש מלפני ומאחרי That is: Rabbi Ishmael reports in his Sepher hechaloth: I said to Metatron, why are you called by the name of your Creator with seventy names? And why are you greater than all princes, and higher than all angels, and more pleasing than all servants, and more honored than all hosts, and more excellent in greatness, in dominion, and in glory than all the mighty? He answered me and said: Because I am Enoch, the son of Jared. What did the holy blessed God do when the generations of the flood (that is, the people who lived at the time of the flood) had sinned, and had done wrong with their deeds, and had said to God, "Depart from us"? He took me away from among them, so that I might be a witness against them in the high heaven before all who come into the world. And after the holy blessed God had taken me away, so that I might serve before the throne of glory and the wheels of the chariot and perform all the necessities of the divine Majesty, my flesh was immediately transformed into a flame, and my sinews into fire, and my bones into juniper coals, and the light of my eyelids into the brightness of lightning, and my eyeballs into fiery torches, and the hair of my head into a flame, and all my limbs into fiery burning wings, and the body of my stature into a burning fire; and from my right hand fiery flames were hewn, and from my left burned fiery torches, but around me flew a wind and a storm wind and a tempestuous weather, and before and behind me was the sound of a shaking commotion. Something on this subject may also be read in the great Jalkut Rubeni, fol. 26, col. 2, in the Parascha Bereschith, and at fol. 25, 26, and 27 in that same great Jalkut Rubeni much is to be found concerning Metatron.

So it also stands in the aforementioned great Jalkut Rubeni fol. 26, col. 2. in the Parascha Bereschith from the book Pirke hechaloth, the following concerning this matter: אמר רבי ישמעאל אמר לי מטטרון שר הפנים כשביקש הקב"ה להעלות אותי למרום בתחלה שיגר לי המלאך ענפיאל ונטלני מביניהם לעיניהם והרכיבני על כרוב גדול ורכב אש וסוסי אש להעלותני עם השכינה בשמי מרום כיון שהגעתי שמה היו חיות הקודש שרפים ואופנים וכרובים וגלגלי המרכבה ומשרתי אש מריחים ריחי ה' אלפים ושל"פ פרסאות ואמרו מה ריח ילוד אשה בינינו ומה טעם טיפה לבן שיעלה בשמי מרום. השיב הקב"ה ואמר

:עבודה זרה וסילקתי השכינה מביניהם ושגלתהו שגדותי שכדי מכל עמלי תהיה כל השמים
That is: Rabbi Ismael has reported that Metátron, the Prince of the Presence, said to him: when the Holy and Blessed God wished to bring me up on high (that is, into Heaven), He first sent the angel Anpiel to me, who took me away from them (namely, the wicked people of that time) before their eyes, and had me ride upon a great Cherub and a fiery chariot with fiery horses, so that he might bring me up with the divine Majesty into the high Heaven. When I arrived there, the holy creatures, the Seraphim, Ofanním, Cherubím, and the wheels of the chariot, as well as the fiery servants, smelled my scent from five thousand three hundred and eighty-two miles away, and said: what sort of smell is there among us from one who was born of a woman? And what is the reason that one who was begotten from a few drops of white (seed) should ascend into the high Heaven? But the Holy Blessed God answered them and said: my servants, my host, my Cherubim, let this not vex you, for all my children have denied me and my royal dominion, and serve idols; therefore I have removed my Majesty from among them, and this one (the only one) is he whom I have received as my reward for all my labor under the whole Heaven.

Enoch was thus very fortunate, in that he was made by God a king and ruler over all the heavenly host, even though he is said to have been nothing but a cobbler, concerning which the following is read in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 28, col. 2. in the Paraḥa Bereschith: תופר מנעלים ועל כל תפירה : מכון ואמר ברוך שם כבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד

That is: Metátron was a cobbler, and paid attention to every seam (or every stitch), and said (of God): "Blessed be the name of the glory of His kingdom forever and ever." So too it is written in the Jalkut chádásch fol. 25, col. 2 numero 18. under the title Eliáhu as follows: מצוות בני נח והיה מתחסידי אומות העולם אלא שפירש מדרכיהם והלך בדרכי ישראל כמי שאינו מצווה ועושה. או כעין גר צדק שבכל דור ודור ונתקבל במעלה העליונה לאות ולמופת לבני שת מה מהומן להם אם יטיבו דרכיהם וכיון שעלה שוב לא ירד והנה סביב למחננו רשעים יתהלכון המבקשים להפרידו ח"ו והוא היה תופר מנעלים לקשר העולמות וכו' : 'ועל כל תפירה אמר המבקשים להפרידו ח"ו' : That is: Enoch had been commanded to keep only the seven commandments of the children of Noah, and he was at first one of the pious among the peoples of the world; but he had separated himself from their ways and walked in the ways of Israel, like one who does something that has not been commanded of him, or like one who has adopted the Israelite faith, of which sort there are people in every age; and he was received into the highest glory, as a sign and wonder to the children of Seth, showing what is prepared for them if they order their ways well and do good. But after he had ascended, he did not come back down; and behold, the wicked walked round about his camp, seeking to separate him from God and turn him away from Him, which God forbid; and he was a cobbler, joining the worlds together, etc., and over every seam he said (of God): "Blessed be the name of the glory of His kingdom forever and ever," etc.

It is also recorded of him that he was a schoolmaster. In the Jalkut chádascb fol. 120, col. 1. numero 106., under the title Malachím, the following is written concerning him: קודם ההרבן היה מטטרון מלמד התינוקות That is: Before the destruction (of the city of Jerusalem), Metátron was a teacher of children.

Regarding the height of this Metátron, it is indicated in the book Avodáth hakkódesh, fol. 124, col. 1., in the 19th Chapter, under the title Chélek Síthre Thóra, where, concerning the words of Ezek 1:15, "And behold, an Ofan or wheel was upon the earth," the following is written: אמרו ז"ל זה מטטרון והוא : That is: Our rabbis of blessed memory say that this signifies Metátron, who is five hundred years (that is, as far as one can travel in five hundred years) taller than his companions. And in the great Jalkut Rubéni, at fol. 27, col. 4, in the Parascha Bereschíth, one reads: סביב נהר דינור מקום מקום גבוה ונראה בו סולם יעקב בחלום והסולם ההוא סולם של הנער מטטרון שהוא גבוה : That is: All around the river Dinur (which was mentioned above in the sixth chapter of this second part) there is an elevated place, upon which a ladder is seen, which Jacob saw in his dream; and that same ladder is the ladder of the youth Metátron, who is taller than his companion by as far as one can travel in five hundred years. In the aforementioned Jalkut Rubéni, at fol. 107, col. 1, in the Parascha Mischpatim, it is also found, drawn from the Pirke hechalóth, that Rabbi Ismael said the following: סח לי מטטרון שר הפנים בשעה שעלה משה למרום צוה הק"ב אותי ונתן לי משיעור קומה שלו ע' אלף רבוא פרסאות : That is: Metátron, the Prince of the Countenance, told me (what had happened to him, and said:) when Moses ascended on high, God commanded me and gave me, from the measure of His greatness, seventy thousand times ten thousand (that is, seven hundred thousand times one thousand) miles in length and in breadth.

Notwithstanding that Metatron is the foremost angel, he is said to have once received fiery blows from another angel, namely Anpiel, as can be read in the Talmudic tractate Chagiga fol. 15, col. 1. and in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 25, col. 4. in the Parashah Bereshith.

Just as Enoch is said to have been transformed into an angel, so too do the rabbis teach concerning the prophet Elijah that he became an angel and is called Sandalfon, who, as mentioned above, is one of those three who make a crown from the prayers of the Israelites and are to place it upon God's head. That

Elijah is the angel Sandalfon is evident from the book Emek hamméleḥ, fol. 152, col. 4., from the 45th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha díser ánpin, where the following is taught: אליהו הנביא הוא סנדלפון המלאך הקושר כתרים לרבו, That is: The prophet Elijah is the angel Sandalfon, who binds crowns for his Lord (from the prayers of the Israelites). And at fol. 178, col. 3, at the beginning of the second chapter, under the title Scháar ólam habberíah, in the aforementioned book Emek hamméleḥ, one reads: דהנה גופם של אליהו וחנוך נעשה: מהם צורה כי מן חנוך נעשה מטטרון ומן גופו של אליהו נעשה סנדלפון ורוחם ונשמתם הם יושבים בגן עדן עם שאר הצדיקים וכשאין צדיקים בעולם בזכותם מתקיים העולם, That is: Behold, from the body of Elijah and Enoch an (angelic) form was made; for from Enoch was Metatron made, and from the body of Elijah was Sandalfon made; their spirits and souls, however, sit in Paradise among the remaining righteous; and when there are no righteous in the world, the world subsists through their merit. In the book called Ammudéba Schibba, however, one reads at fol. 43, col. 3. numero 21: אליהו היה מלאך שייך שמים לחיות יר בהתחונים: That is: Elijah was an angel who had come down from heaven so that he might dwell among those below (here on earth). He must therefore also have already been an angel beforehand.

This angel is said to be just as exalted as Metatron; for in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 107, col. 1. in the Parascha Mischpatím, the following is written concerning him: ראיתי סנדלפון הגבוה מהדרניאל מהלך חמש מאות שנה, That is: I have seen Sandálfon, who is taller than the angel Hadárniel by as much as one can walk in five hundred years. And in the Talmudic tractate Chagiga, at fol. 13, col. 2., over the words of Ezek 1:15, "And behold, an Ofan or wheel was upon the earth beside the living creatures," the following is read: אמר רבי אלעזר: מלאך אחד שהוא עומד בארץ וראשו מגיע אצל החיות במתניתא תנא סנדלפון שמו הגבוה מלאך אחד שהוא עומד בארץ וראשו מגיע אצל החיות במתניתא תנא סנדלפון שמו הגבוה, That is: Rabbi Eliezer said: there is an angel who stands upon the earth and reaches with his head up to the living creatures; and it is taught in the Mishna that he is called Sandálfon, and that he is taller than his companion by as much as one can walk in five hundred years, and that he stands behind the chariot and binds crowns for his Creator. Concerning this, as well as other great angels, the book Zijóni fol. 83, col. 3. may also be consulted.

Since Elijah is mentioned here, I must also point out that he, according to the rabbis' account, has appeared to one person and another on many occasions, and still appears from time to time. It is written of him in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 9, col. 2. in the Parascha Bereschíth as follows: אליהו הנביא עלה לכרום: מה שלא היה שום אדם דוגמתו. הדע לך כי בסתרי תורה ראיתי סוד מופלא עד מאוד. אליהו לא נמצא לו בתורה אב ואם ולא כתוב בן פליט אלא אליהו מתושבי גלעד. אמרו כי קודם לכן

ירד מן השמים ושמו ידוע בסתרי תורה. ועוד אחר כך נראה לחכמים בהרבה מקומות כדמות (that is, ascended into Heaven), in which no man was his equal. Know that I have seen, in the secrets of the Law, a most wondrous mystery. In the Law it is not found that Elijah had a father and a mother. Nor is it written that he was the son of a fugitive, but rather that Elijah was of the inhabitants of Gilead; and it is said that he had previously come down from Heaven, and his name is known in the secrets of the Law. After this, he also appeared to the wise men in many places in the form of an Arabian merchant or of a knight.

From such appearances, of which much is found in the Jewish books, I must adduce some proofs, in order to be able to see from them how Elijah wanders about. In the Talmudic tractate Berachóth, it is read at fol. 3, col. 1. that he appeared to Rabbi Jose in a ruin, and the words read as follows: אמר רבי יוסי פעם אחת הייתי מהלך בדרך ונכנסתי לחורבה אחת מחורבות ירושלם להתפלל בא אליהו זכור לטוב ושמר לי על הפתח והמתין לי עד שסיימתי תפילתי לאחר שסיימתי תפילתי אמר לי שלום That is: Rabbi Jose said, I went once along the road and entered a ruin, one of the ruins of Jerusalem, in order to pray; then came Elijah, of blessed memory, and kept watch over me at the entrance, and waited for me until I had finished my prayer. After I had now completed my prayer, he said to me, be greeted, my Rabbi, and I answered him, be thou also greeted, my Rabbi and my teacher, &c. In the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, at fol. 108, col. 2 and fol. 109, col. 1, the following is also read: נחום איש גם זו היה רגיל דכל דהוה סלקא ליה אמר גם זו לטובה יומא חד בעו לשדורי דורון לקיסר אמרו במאי נשדר בהדיה נחום איש גם זו דמלומד בניסין הוא כי מטא להווא דיירא למיבת אמרי ליה מאי איכא בהדך אמר להו קא מובילנא כרגא לקיסר קמו בליליא שרינהו לסיפטא ושקלו כל דהוה נביה ומלינהו עפרא כי מטא להתם אשתכח עפרא אמר אחוכי קא מחייכי בי יהודאי אפקוהו למקטליה אמר גם זו לטובה. אתא אליהו ואדמי להו כחד מינייהו אמר להו דלמא האי עפרא מעפרא דאברהם אבינו דהוה שדי עפרא הוו חרבי גלי הוו גירי בדוק ואשכוח הכי הוה מחוזא דלא הוו קא יכלי ליה למכבשיה שדו להווא עפרא עליה וכבשוהי עיילוה לבי גנזא אמרי שקול דניחא לך מלייה לספטך דהבא כי הדר אהא אמרו ליה הנך דיורי מאי אמטית לבי מלכא אמר להו מאי דשקלי מהכא אמטאי להתם שקלי אנהו אמטו להתם אמר, That is: Nachum, the man Gamzu, was accustomed to say of everything that befell him, gam su letófa, that is, this too must turn out for the good (which is also why he was called Gamzu). On one occasion, (the Jews) wished to send a gift to the Emperor, and they said among themselves: whom shall we send? Let us send Nachum, the man Gamzu, who is experienced in miracles. Now when he arrived at an inn to spend the night there, the people of the inn said to him: what do you have with you? And he answered them: I am bringing tribute to the Emperor. Then they rose in the night, opened his chest, and took away everything he had with him, and filled it with earth. After he had arrived there (at the imperial court) and had handed over the chest, earth was found inside it; whereupon (the Emperor) said: surely the Jews are mocking me; lead him out so that he may be put to death. And Nachum said: this too must turn out for the good. Thereupon Elijah came and made himself appear as one of them, and said to them: perhaps this is earth from the earth of our father Abraham; when he threw earth, it turned into swords; when he scattered it, it became arrows. And they tested it and found it to be so, for there was a city which they had not been able to conquer, and they threw some of that earth upon it and conquered it. Then they led Nachum into the treasury and said to him: take what pleases you, and he filled his chest with gold. When he returned again (to the previous inn), the same inhabitants said to him: what did you bring to the King's house? And he answered them: what I carried away from here, that I brought there. Then they too took (some of that same earth) and brought it there (in the hope of receiving much gold for it), but those inhabitants were put to death. According to this Talmudic fable, then, Elijah rescued Nachum from death. Likewise, it was also mentioned above at page 212 of this second part, in the third chapter, how he appeared before a court and gave testimony before Rabbi Schéla against a Babylonian man.

Furthermore, it is found in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat fol. 33, col. 2. that he came to Rabbi Schimeon ben Jochai at the cave in which the latter was staying, and the words there on this matter read as follows: יתיב רבי יהודה ורבי יוסי ורבי שמעון ויתב יהודה בן גרים גבייהו פתח רבי יהודה ואמר כמה נאים מעשיהן של אומה זו תקנו שווקים תקנו גשרים תקנו מרחצאות רבי יוסי שתק נענה רבי שמעון בן יוחאי ואמר כל מה שתקנו לא תקנו אלא לצורך עצמן תקנו שווקים להושיב בהן וזנות מרחצאות לעדן בהן עצמן גשרים ליטול מהן מכס. הלך יהודה בן גרים וסיפר דבריהם ונשמעו למלכות אמרו יהודה שעלה יתעלה יוסי ששתק יגלה לציפורי שמעון שגינה יהרג אול הוא ובריה טשו בי מדרשא כל יומא הוה מייתי להו דביתיהו ריפתא וכוזא דמא וכרכי כי תקיף גזירתא אמר ליה לבריה נשים דעתן קלה עליהן דילמא מצערי לה ומגליא לן אזלו טשו במערתא איתרחיש ניסא איברי להו חרובא ועינא דמא והוו משלחי מנייהו והוו יתבי עד צווארייהו בחלא כולי יומא גרסי בעידן צלויי לבשי מיכסו ומצלו והדר משלחי מנייהו כי היכי דלא ליבלו איתבו תרי סר שני במערתא אתא אליהו וקם אפיתחא דמערתא אמר מאן לודעיה לבר יוחאי דמית קיסר ובטיל גזירתיה נפקו חזו אינשי דקא כרבי וזרעי אמרי מניחין חיי עולם ועוסקין בחיי שעה כל מקום שנותנין עיניהן מיד נשרף יצתה בת קול ואמרה להם להחריב עולמי יצאתם חיזרו למערכתכם. הדור אזול איתבו תריסר ירחי שתא אמר משפט רשעים בגיהנם י"ב חודש יצתה בת קול ואמרה צאו ממערכתכם נפקו : that is, Rabbi Jehuda, and Rabbi Jose, and Rabbi Schimeon were sitting together, and Jehuda ben Gerim, that is, he who was born of parents who had converted to the Jewish faith, was also sitting with them, and Rabbi Jehuda began and said: how beautiful are the works of this people (namely the Romans): they have established markets, constructed bridges, and arranged baths. Rabbi Jose remained silent at this; Rabbi Schimeon ben Jochai, however, answered and said: everything they have arranged, they have done for their own necessity (and their own benefit). They have set up the markets so that they might place harlots in them, arranged the baths so that they might take their pleasure in them, and built the bridges so that they might collect tolls from them. Then Jehuda ben Gerim went away and recounted what they had said, and the Emperor received word of it, and it was thereupon declared (by a judgment that was handed down): Jehuda, who praised (their works), shall be elevated; Jose, who remained silent, shall be sent into exile in Cyprus; but Schimeon, who despised them, shall be put to death. Thereupon he (Rabbi Schimeon) and his son went away and hid themselves in the school, and his wife brought them every day a loaf of bread together with a cup of water, and they ate. But since the decree was severe, he said to his son: women have a light disposition; perhaps they (the Romans) will torment her (namely your mother) so that she will reveal and betray us; and they went away and hid themselves in a cave. A miracle then occurred, and a carob tree (in the cave for their sustenance) and a spring of water were created for them, and they took off their clothes and sat up to their necks in sand and studied the whole day. At the time of prayer they put on their clothes, covered themselves, performed their prayer, and thereafter took their clothes off again so that they would not wear out. But after they had sat in the cave for twelve years, Elijah came and stood before the entrance of the cave and said: who will make it known to the son of Jochai that the Emperor has died and his decree has come to nothing? Then they went out and saw the people plowing and sowing, and said: these people abandon eternal life and occupy themselves with matters that concern temporal life; and everywhere they turned their eyes, a thing was immediately burned. But when a voice came down from Heaven and said: have you gone out in order to destroy my world? Go back into your cave; then they went back in and sat there for twelve months, that is, a full year. Thereafter Rabbi Schimeon said: the wicked are punished for twelve months in Hell; and a voice came from Heaven and said: go out of your cave; and they went out. This may also be looked up in Bereschith rabba fol. 71, col. 4. in the 79th Parascha; and according to Jewish teaching, the book Sohar, which I have cited here and there, is said to have been written by Rabbi Schimeon in that very cave.

Furthermore, it is read in the Talmudic tractate Berachoth fol. 6, col. 2, that Elijah appeared to someone in the form of an Arab merchant, and because that person stood behind the synagogue and did not turn his face toward the synagogue, Elijah killed him with his sword, from which it can be seen that Elijah also sometimes carries a sword. And in the tractate Avoda sara, fol. 18, col. 2, it is written that he allowed himself to be seen in the form of a whore, with these words: אתא אליהו אידימי להו כזונה, That is: Elijah came and appeared to them in the form of a whore. Likewise, it was reported above in the eighth chapter of the first part, page 433, from fol. 18, col. 2 of the Talmudic tractate Joma, that he came to Raf Jehuda and said to him that on the Day of Atonement in the city of Nebardea he intended to touch many virgins. And when Raf Jebuda asked him what God had to say about that, he answered that God said the evil nature compelled him to sin against his will. Are the Jews not senseless fools, that they write such improper things about Elijah? With equally irrational absurdity, it is reported of him in the tractate Bava Mezia fol. 85, col. 2, that he revealed something secret to the world that he had heard in Heaven, for which he received as punishment sixty fiery blows, and that he thereupon appeared in the form of a fiery bear. From this it can be seen that he is able to assume all manner of forms, just as it is reported in the Maase-book, in the 43rd chapter, of an evil spirit which Adam is said to have fathered with Lilith, that it dwelt with Rabbi Channina in the form of a frog, and taught him the entire law of Moses, as well as the seventy languages of men and the languages of animals and birds, and finally told him who it was and that it could assume all kinds of forms at its pleasure.

In the Medrasch mischle, fol. 68, col. 1–2, it is read, in addition to the above, that he was also once a gravedigger, in that he carried out and buried Rabbi Akkiva, who had died in prison. And in the Judeo-German book called Brandspiegel, in the eighth chapter, fol. 25, col. 1–2, as well as in the Maase-book in the 156th chapter, one may see what befell him and three brothers. Similar fables can also be found in the aforementioned Maase-book in the 182nd as well as in the 216th chapter. Furthermore, Elias is said to appear every time a Jewish child is circumcised and to attend the ceremony, for which reason a special chair is always set out for him, as was indicated above in the 16th chapter of the first part.

How Elijah's body was made fit to appear everywhere is taught by Abarbanel in his commentary on 2 Kgs 2, fol. 270, col. 2, in these words: מפני שהיה עתיד לבא בין בני אדם ולהראות פעמים רבות נלקה בגוף ונפש ונשאר חי תמיד בהרכבתו לרמוז שעדיין היה צרכו לעולם הזה וכו' ולכן לוקח בסערה שהוא הרוח החזק ועם סוסי אש ורכב אש כדי להתיר וליבש לחיותיו ולהתירם כולם • ונעשה אם כן גופו בחסד השם יתברך על דרך פלא נצחי וקיים כאחד מן הגשמים השמימיים ולכן קל להראות בכל מקום ולא היה מנביל מקום ולא מצטרך למאכל ולמשקה ולשאר הדרכים הצריכים וההכרחיים לחי לפי (That is: Since he was destined to come among men and to appear many times, he was taken away in body and soul, and remained ever living in his composition (of body and soul), in order to indicate that he would still be needed in this world, ע"כ. For this reason he was taken away in a whirlwind, which is a strong wind, and with fiery horses and a fiery chariot, so that his moisture might be melted and dried out, and all of it dissolved; in which manner his body was made, through the grace of the blessed God, by a miracle, eternal and enduring (and thus immortal), like one of the heavenly bodies. For this reason he became light and swift to appear in all places, and he does not confine any place. He also has no need of food or drink or other things that a living being requires, since his body was made by a miracle out of a spiritual constitution (or arrangement) and has taken on a spiritual nature.) Let this suffice regarding the holy angels.

Chapter VIII.

In the preceding chapter, it was shown what opinions the Jews hold concerning the holy angels; so in this chapter we also wish to consider what they teach concerning the unclean spirits and devils. These are called by them שטנים Setaním, but a single one שטן Satan; and שדים Shedim, but a single one שד Sched; and שעירים Seírim, but a single one שעיר Säür; and מזיקים Massikím, but a single one Másik; and the word Setaním means as much as "haters" and "adversaries," Shedim means "devastators and destroyers," Seírim means "hairy ones," or "terrible ones," or "he-goats," and Massikím means "injurers." Concerning the meaning of the names Shedim and Seírim, the following is read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 4, in the Parascha Acharé moth: נקראו שעירים לפי שהם מזהמים כדמות שער בראיהם וכן נקראו שדים על שם שהם שוכנים במקום שעירים או על שם שהאדם משתער בראיהם ושדוד וחרב כגון המדברות וקצוי הצפון ובין ההרים That is: They are called Seírim because they take on the form of Seírim, that is, of he-goats, or because a person is terrified when he sees them. Likewise they are called Shedim because they dwell in a desolate and barren place, such as the wildernesses and the desolate ends of the north. In the book Nilchmáth chájim, fol. 114, col. 1, in the 12th chapter of the fourth Máamar, the following is also taught on this matter: נקראו שעירים מפני שנראים מדלגים כדמונת שעירים וגוי ונקראו שדים על שם ישוענו שעירם כי דירתם ומושבם לרוב הם על פני השדה ולכבד ישוענו Seírim because they are seen leaping in the form of he-goats, &c. And they are called Shedim from the word Sádeh (which means "field") because their dwelling and abode is for the most part in the field, and they dwell there in solitude. But in the great Jalkút Rubéní, fol. 130, col. 1, in the Parascha Acharé moth, the following is read: למה קורא אותם לשדים שעירים שלשדים זכרים יש להם שער בראשם ולנקבות אין להם שער בראשן לכן בועז הניה ידו על ראש רות כשראה שהיא שער בראשם שאל בת מי אתה, That is: Why are the devils called Seirim? Because the males among the devils have hair (which is called Sear) on their heads, while the females of the devils have no hair on their heads; for this reason Boaz laid his hand upon the head of Ruth (in order to determine whether she might perhaps be a she-devil with a bald head lying beside him), but when he felt that she had hair on her head, he said to her (as can be seen in Ruth 3:9):

"Whose daughter are you?" This, however, is taken from the Sepher chasidim, number 1155.

Concerning the origin and descent of the devils: according to the teaching of the Rabbis, some were created, while others are said to have been begotten by Adam and Eve; some are said to have been begotten by male devils with female devils, or also with the wives of men; others, however, are said to derive from seed that escapes during the night; some are said to be the souls of wicked men and to arise from the evil works of men, while others are said to be angels who were created holy but fell away from God.

Regarding the created devils, it stands in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 12, col. 4, in the Parascha Bereschith, on the words of Gen 2:21, ויסגר בשר תחתנה Vajisgar basar tachténab, that is, "And he closed the place with flesh," where it is written as follows: דרשו ר"ל כיון שנבראת אשה נברא שטן עמה 'מתחלת הספר ועד כאן לא תמצא אות סמ"ך', That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, teach that when the woman (namely Eve) was created, Satan was created along with her. From the beginning of the book (namely the first book of Moses) up to this point (to the 21st verse of the second chapter) you will not find the letter Samech (that is, S) except in the word Vajisgar, in order to teach you that when the woman was created, Satan was created along with her, since the word שטן Satan also contains a Samech, or S. And this is likewise to be found in Bereschith rabba, fol. 17, col. 1, in the 17th Parascha. In the Jalkut chadasch, it is read at fol. 107, col. 1, numero 27, under the title Keschafim, as follows: המזיקין נבראו בערב שבת בין השמשות ואתחשיך יומא ואשתארו רוחא בלא גופא: That is: The devils were created on the eve of the Sabbath (namely on Friday evening) at twilight (or dusk), and it grew dark, and they remained spirits without bodies. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, it is taught at fol. 8, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschith: דבי אמר נפש חיה אלו המזיאים ברא הקב"ה נשמתן וכשבא לברוא גופן קדש היום ולא בראן ללמדך דרך ארץ שאם יהא ביד אדם חפץ טוב או מרגלית טובה ערב שבת אומרים לו השלך מידך פן תלך ליבד להיות כרנו, That is: The Rabbi says that by the living creatures (mentioned in Gen 1:24) the Meriim (that is, devils) are to be understood, whose souls God created; and when He was about to create their bodies, He sanctified the day (of the Sabbath, which immediately commenced) and did not create them, in order to teach you the custom of the land: for when a man has a precious thing or a fine pearl in his hand on the eve of the Sabbath (when the Sabbath begins), one says to him, cast it away from your hand; it is enough for the servant that he be as his master. This same thing is also to be seen in Bereschith rabba, fol. 7, col. 1, at the end of the seventh Parascha.

So also in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 20, col. 4, in the Parascha Bereschith, the following is read from the Zohar: בשעתא כד בעו-למיעל שבתא הוה ברי רוחין ושדין ועד לא סיים לון עד דאתית: that is, at the time when the Sabbath was about to arrive, God created the spirits and devils, but before He had finished with them, the Matron (that is, the Sabbath) came with her preparations (or her adornments) and sat down before Him, whereupon He ceased from those creatures, and they were not made complete (in that no bodies were created for them). On this matter, the commentary of the aforementioned Rabbi Menachem may also be consulted at fol. 143, col. 3, in the Parascha Acharé moth. In the great Jalkut Rubéni there stands, at fol. 17, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschith, the following concerning this matter as well: לכל בריא עביד הק"ב לבושין ולמזיקין לא עבד לבושין בגין דאמר לסברא לאדם בערב שבת ובנייה לא ברא לון עד בין השמשות ואשתארו בלא לבוש ה"ה והנחש היה ערום ולחזיא דאינון מזיקים לא עביד לבוש ב"גד אעיל קנאה בלביה דחזיא על אדם על דאשתאר בגיניה בלא לבוש: that is, the holy and blessed God made garments (that is, bodies) for all creatures, but for the devils He made no garments (or bodies), because He intended to create man on the eve of the Sabbath; for that reason He did not create them until twilight, and they remained without a garment. This is what is written in Gen 3:1: "And the serpent was more cunning." And because He had made no garment (or body) for the serpent, that is, for the devils, He caused them to conceive in their hearts an envy toward man, since they had remained without a garment on his account.

We thus see from this that God is supposed to have created the devils in the evening, shortly before the Sabbath began, and that He was unable to create bodies for them because the Sabbath overtook Him. But in the Jalkut chádassch, at fol. 115, col. 4 and fol. 116, col. 1, numero 28, under the title Malachim, another reason is adduced as to why the devils were created without bodies, and it is stated that God, when He had intended to create Adam, caused all the upper and lower angels to assemble, so that each of them should contribute something of his own toward the creation of man; for this reason He said to them: "Let us make man"; and there follows: שכל המזיקין שלא הסכימו ואמרו מה: that is, but the devils were unwilling to consent (to such a creation), but said (from Ps 8:5): "What is man, that You are mindful of him," etc. For this reason they hate us, and the holy blessed God punished them and created no bodies for them.

Concerning the matter from which they were created, the book Nischmāth chájim fol. 117, col. 2, in the 13th chapter of the third Máamar, teaches the following: עיקר הוייתם משתי יסודות קלים והם האש והרוח ועל כן יטוּסוּ לרוב דקותם: וקלוּהֶם וגו' והשדים המורכבים משני יסודות אלה הם גוף דק איננו מורגש ולא מושג לחושי האדם אבל הם מתדמים ומתלבשים צורה לעיני הרואים אותה הם גוף רוחני כי כן היסודות האלה רוחניים, That is: The principal substance of them (namely, of the angels) consists of two light elements, namely fire and air; therefore they fly on account of their subtlety and lightness, etc. Likewise, the devils, who are composed of these same two elements, are a subtle body that cannot be comprehended or grasped by the senses of man; yet they assume a form and clothe themselves in a shape before the eyes of those who see them. Behold, they are a spiritual body, for those same elements are likewise spiritual. They are therefore said to have been created from fire and air. However, it is reported in the little book Tuf baáñez fol. 9, col. 2, that they were created from all four elements, and the words read as follows: תחת גלגל הלבנה אחרון שבכולם יש רקיע חלק שאינו משמש כלום ושם נשמות השדים ורוחין ולילין איש כפי מצבו וגופם נעשה בארץ בשבעה מדורות שתחת הארץ הנקרא תבל ויש להם מדרגות בד' יסודות אש רוח מים עפר. כי יש מהם מאש ויש מרוח ונקראו רוחין ויש מים ומעפר ונקראו שירים ומזיקים ועל כל כת יש עליהם ממונים וגו', ומלאכים המניעים אותם לעשות רצונם וגו', That is: Beneath the Sphaera or sphere of the moon, which is the last of all, there is a firmament, a part that serves no purpose, and there are the souls of the devils, the spirits, and the night-phantoms, each according to its station; their body, however, is made in the earth, in the seven dwellings that are beneath the earth, which is called Tebel, and there are gradus, or distinctions, among them according to the four elements: fire, air, water, and earth. For some of them are made of fire, others of air, and these are called Ruchin, that is, spirits; but some are made of water and earth, and are called Shedim and Massikim. Each company of them also has its appointed overseers and angels who compel them to do their will, etc.

In the book Emek hammelech, fol. 140, col. 2, in the 30th chapter under the title Scháár réscha díser ánpin, on a different subject concerning the matter from which they are said to have been created, it is written as follows: כל השדין ורוחין: 'ולילין שנבראו בערב שבת בין השמשות היו מן הטפין של אדם הראשון וגו' that is, all the devils, and spirits, and night-phantoms, which were created on the Sabbath eve at twilight, were from the drops (of the seed) of the first man. But in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 6, col. 2, no. 76, under the title Adam, yet another opinion is adduced from the Sohar in these words: כשנברא אדם הראשון ירד בדמות עלינים: וירדו עמו שני רוחות אחד מימינו ואחד משמאלו דימינא איקרי נשמה קדושה דכתיב ויפח באפיו נשמת חיים ודשמאל איקרי נפש חיה ואותו נפש חיה עלה וירד ולא היה יכול להתישב: that is, when the first man had been created, he descended in the form of the upper beings (namely, the angels), and two spirits descended with him, one at his right side and one at his left side. The one at the right side is called the holy Nescháma, that is, soul, as it is written (Gen 2:7): and He breathed a living Nescháma, that is, soul, into his nostrils. The one at the left side is called the living Néphesch, or soul; and this same living Néphesch went up and came back down again, and could not be still (or at rest), until Adam had sinned, and in an instant, when the Sabbath arrived, the devils were created from that same spirit.

Regarding the devils that are said to have descended from Adam and Eve, the Jews write many strange things about this. Concerning Adam, the following is written in the small Jalkut Rubéni, number 3, under the title Léda, from the Sobar: משעה שנגזר על אדם מיתא לכל עלמא אתפרש מאשתו ולא בעא לאזדוגיג לה אמר : that is, at the time when death was decreed upon Adam over the entire world by a judgment, he separated himself from his wife and did not wish to lie with her, and said: why should I beget children unto terror? And two female spirits came and mingled with him and bore children. But in Bereschith rabba, fol. 21, col. 2, at the end of the 21st Parascha, a different reason is given as to why he had abstained from begetting children, in these words: כיוון שראה אדם שבניו עתידים לירד לגיהנם מיעט עצמו מפריה ורביה : וכיון שראה שאחר כ"ו דורות עתידין ישראל לקבל : that is, when Adam had seen that his children would descend into hell, he had abstained from begetting children. But after he had seen that the Israelites would receive the Law after twenty-six generations, he lay with his wife in order to have children, as it is said (Gen 4:1): And Adam knew his wife Eve. And this is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimoni on the books of Moses, fol. 10, col. 3, number 34. In the Talmudic tractate Erúvin, fol. 18, col. 2, the following is read: אמר רבי ירמיה : בן אלעזר כל אותן השנים שהיה אדם הראשון בנידוי הוליד רוחין ושידין ולילין שנאמר ויחי אדם שלשים ומאת שנה ויולד בדמותו כצלמו מכלל דעד האידנא לאו בצלמו אוליד : that is, Rabbi Jeremias, the son of Eliezer, said: in all those years in which the first man Adam was under the ban, he begat spirits, devils, and night-phantoms, as it is said (Gen 5:3): And Adam was one hundred and thirty years old and begat (a son) in his likeness after his image; from which it follows that until that time he had not begotten in his image. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 15, col. 4, in the Parascha Bereshith, the following is also taught concerning this matter: רבותינו ז"ל האריכו במדרש בענין אדם הראשון : that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have treated at length in the Médrasch of the nature of the first man Adam, that during all those one hundred and thirty years in which he was deserving of punishment on account of his committed sin, he begat spirits, devils, night-phantoms, and harmful spirits. And this is also to be seen in the Jalkut Schimoni on the five books of Moses, fol. 11, col. 4,

It is reported, however, in the book Emek hammélech fol. 23, col. 3. 4., in the 42nd chapter, under the title Scháar ólam battóbu, that Lilith or Lilis forced him into sexual intercourse, and the words read as follows: לילית הרשעה כשראתה גדול קלקולו נתגברה בקליפותיה והיתה באה בעל כרחו של אדם ומתחממת ממנו ומולידת ממנו כמה שדין רוחין ולילין : that is, the wicked Lilith (or Lilis), when she had seen the great corrupted nature of Adam, grew stronger through her Keliphóth (namely her evil spirits), and came to Adam against his will, and was inflamed and carnally known by him, and bore from him many devils, spirits, and night-phantoms.

Just as devils are said to have been begotten from Adam through his lying with she-devils, so too are devils said to have been born from Eve, who mingled with devils. Therefore, in Bereschith rabba, fol. 20, col. 2, in the 20th Parascha, on the words of Gen 3:20, that she is the mother of all living, it is written thus: רבי סימון אמר : אם כל חי אימן של כל החיים דאמר ר' סימון כל מאה ושלושים שנה שפירשה חוה מאדם היו רוחות הזכרים מתחממין ממנה והיא יולדת מהם . ורוחות נקבות מתחממות מאדם ומולידות ממנו ה"ד אשר בהעוותו והוכחתי בשבט אנשים ובנגעי בני אדם : that is, Rabbi Simon said: the words "mother of all living" mean as much as "mother of all living beings"; for Rabbi Simon said that during all those one hundred and thirty years in which Eve separated herself from Adam, the spirits of the male sex were inflamed by her (that is, by Eve), so that they lay with Eve, and that she bore children from them (the devils); and likewise that the female spirits were inflamed by Adam (and lay with him) and bore children from him. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 16, col. 1-2, in the Parascha Bereschith, on the aforementioned words of Gen 5:3, "And Adam was one hundred and thirty years old and begat in his likeness, after his image," it is taught thus: הכתוב הזה לעד כי קין לא הולידו אדם ולא היה בדמותו בצלמו . ופרישתו מן האשה ק"ל שנה מיום שנברא היה לסבה כי הוצרך זמן כזה עד שיוולדו ממנו . וממנה הראויים להוולד ואלו הן רוחין ושדין ולילין וכמו שדרשו כל אותן ק"ל שנה שפירש אדם מן האשה רוחות נקבות היו מתחממות מאדם ויולדות זכרים ורוחות זכרים היו מתחממן מאדם : that is, this passage serves as testimony that Adam did not beget Cain, and that Cain was not in the likeness and image of Adam. That Adam, however, separated himself from his wife for one hundred and thirty years after he was created came about because so much time was necessary until those who were to be begotten and born from him and from her, namely the spirits, devils, and night-phantoms, were in fact begotten and born; just as our rabbis have expounded, that during all those one hundred and thirty years in which Adam kept himself apart from his wife, the female spirits were inflamed by him and lay with him, so that they bore males; and that the male spirits were inflamed by Eve, lay with her, and begat females. So too is it read in the book Nischmát chájim, fol. 114, col. 2, in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar, that the rabbis teach: מאדם זיילדות זכרים ורוחות זכרים היו מתחממים מן האשה ויולדים נקבות ואלו הן רוחין כל אותן ק"ל שנה שפירש אדם מאשתו רוחות נקבות היו מתחממות : that is, during all those one hundred and thirty years in which Adam separated himself from his wife, the spirits of the female sex were inflamed by Adam and lay with him, and bore males; and the spirits of the male sex were inflamed by the wife (Eve) and lay with her, and begat females; and these same (males and females) are the spirits, devils, and night-phantoms, as is mentioned in the Sohar Bereschith in the 176th column.

Concerning the demons that are begotten by male and female demons, the rabbis teach that such unclean spirits multiply just as humans do, and this is evident from the Talmudic tractate Chagiga, in which fol. 16, col. 1 the following is written: תנו רבנן ששה דברים נאמרו בשדים שלשה כמלאכי השרת ושלשה כבני אדם שלשה כמלאכי השרת יש להם כנפים כמלאכי השרת וטסין מסוף העולם ועד סופו כמלאכי השרת ויודעין מה שעתיד להיות כמלאכי השרת יודעין סלקא דעתך אלא שומעין מאחורי הפרגוד כמלאכי השרת. ושלשה כבני אדם אוכלין ושותין כבני אדם פרין ורבין כבני אדם : that is, Our rabbis teach that six things are said of the demons, and they agree with the ministering angels in three respects, but with humans in three others. The three respects in which they agree with the ministering angels are: that they have wings like the ministering angels, and fly from one end of the world to the other like the ministering angels, and know what is to come in the future like the ministering angels. What! Do you think they know it? (It is not so;) rather, they hear it from behind the curtain, like the ministering angels. The three respects in which they are like humans consist in this: that they eat and drink like humans, and are fruitful and multiply like humans, and die like humans. The very same is also to be found in the book Nischmát chájim fol. 117, col. 2. and fol. 118, col. 1. in the 13th chapter of the third Máamar, and in the Sijóni fol. 66, col. 3., as well as in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 4 in the Parascha Acharé moth. From this we see that they are supposed to multiply just as humans do and to beget offspring.

There are said to be four women who became she-devils and are the mothers of the devil; and in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 15, col. 4, in the Parascha Bereschith, the following is read concerning this: ארבע נשים הן אמות השדים לילית ונעמה ואגרת ומחלת ויש לכל אחת ואחת מהן מחנות וכתות של רוח הטומאה אין להם מספר. ואומרים כי כל אחת מושלת בתקופה אחת מארבע תקופות שבשנה ומתקבצות בהר נשפה קרוב להרי חושך. וכל אחת מושלת בתקופתה משעת שקיעת החמה עד חצות לילה הן וכל מחנותיהן ועל כולן משל שלמה וקרא אותם עבדים ושפחות שהיה משתמש בהם כרצונו וארבע נשים אלו נשיו של שר של עשו הן ודוגמתו נשא : that is, four women are the mothers of the devils, namely Lilith (or Lilis), and Naáma, and Igéreth, and Máchalath, and each of them has hosts and troops of unclean spirits without number. It is also said that each one rules over one of the four solstices that occur in the year, and that they gather at the mountain Nischpa, near the mountains of darkness, and that each one rules during her solstice from the time when the sun sets until midnight, together with all her hosts. Over all of these Solomon had power, and he called them male and female servants, because he used them in his service according to his pleasure. These four women, however, are the wives of the prince who rules over Esau (that is, of the chief devil Sammael, who was mentioned above in the 18th chapter of the first part), and Esau, following his example, also took four wives, as is clearly shown in the Law. The very same thing is also to be found in the book Toledóth Yitzbak, fol. 16, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschith, and in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 53, col. 3, in the Parascha Toledóth, as well as in the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 114, col. 2, in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar. But in the book Zijóni, fol. 14, col. 2, one reads: ואם אשמדאי שמשם נולדו השדים that is, Naáma was the wife of Schomron, the mother of Aschmedai (the king of the devils). And in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 33, col. 3, it is written: אחות תובל קין נעמה היא אשת שומרון אם אשמדאי שמשם נולדו השדים : that is, the sister of Tubalkain was Naáma, who was the wife of Schomron and the mother of Aschmedai, from whom the devils were born. Thus Naáma, the sister of Tubalkain, who is mentioned in Gen 4:22, as well as Máchalath, the daughter of Ismael, who is mentioned in Gen 28:9, are said to be the mothers of the devils, and they are said to be the wives of Sammael.

Who this Igéreth is, is indicated in the book Menoráh Sáhaf, fol. 399, col. 2, under the title Pérek dérech érez, with these words: לא יצא אדם יחידי בלילה לא בלילי רביעיות ולא בלילי שבתות מפני שאגרת בת מחלת יוצאת עם י"ח רבוא מלאכי חבלה That is: A person should not go out alone at night, neither on the nights of Thursdays nor on the nights of the Sabbaths, because Igereth, the daughter of Machalath, goes out with eighteen times ten thousand (that is, one hundred and eighty thousand) angels of destruction, who have the power to destroy (and to do harm). And this is taken from the Talmudic tractate Pesachim, fol. 112, col. 2, where these very same words are to be found. Likewise, in fol. 111, col. 1 of the aforementioned tractate Pesachim, in the commentary of Rabbi Schmuel ben Meir, one reads: אגרת היא אגרת בת מחלת That is: The Igereth is the daughter of Machalath, and this is the name of a she-devil. We thus see from this that she is supposed to be the daughter of Machalath, and so Sammael would have to have both mother and daughter as wives at the same time.

Who this aforementioned Lilith or Lilis is, can be seen from the Sepher ben Sira, printed in Amsterdam, fol. 9, col. 1, 2, where the words read as follows: כשברא הקב"ה אדם הראשון יחיד היה ואמר לא טוב להיות אדם לבדו ברא לו אשה מן האדמה כמוהו וקראה לילית מיד התחילו מתגרין זה בזה. היא אמרה איני שוכבת למטה והוא אמר איני שוכב למטה אלא למעלה שאת ראויה למטה ואני למעלה. אמרה לו שנינו שוין לפי ששנינו מהאדמה ולא היו שומעין זה לזה. כיון שראתה לילית כך אמרה שם המפורש ופרחה באויר העולם. עמד אדם בתפלה לפני קונו אמר רבונו של עולם אשה שנתת לי ברחה ממני מיד שגר הקב"ה שלושה המלאכים הללו אחריה להחזירה אמר הקב"ה אם תחזור מוטב ואם לאו תקבל על עצמה שימותו מבניה מאה בכל יום. הלכו אחריה והשיגוה בתוך הים במים עזים שעתידין המצרים למות שם וספרוה דבר ה' ולא רצתה לחזור. אמרו לה נטביעך בים אמרה להם הניחוני שלא נבראתי אלא להחליש התינוקות מיום שיוולד עד שמנה ימים אשלוט בו אם הוא זכר ואם נקבה מיום ילדותה עד עשרים יום. וכששמעו דבריה הפצירו לקחת אותה נשבעה להם בשם אל חי וקיים שכל זמן שאני רואה אתכם או שמכם או תבניתכם בקמיע לא אשלוט באותו התינוק. וקבלה על עצמה שימותו מבניה מאה בכל יום. לפיכך בכל יום מתים מאה מן השדים. ולכך אנו כותבים שמות אלו בקמיע של נערים קטנים ורואה אותם וזוכרת את השבועה that is, when the holy and blessed GOD had created the first man alone, He said: it is not good that man should be alone; and He created for him a wife from the earth, just as He had created him, and called her Lilith or Lilis. Thereupon they both immediately began to quarrel with one another: she said, I will not lie beneath (and be subject to you); but he said, I will not lie beneath but on top, for it is fitting that you be below and I above (and that you obey me). Then she said, we two are equal to one another, for we were both created from the earth, and neither would obey the other. When Lilis saw this, she spoke the Schem hammphorásch and flew up into the air of the world; but Adam stood in prayer before his Creator and said, O Lord of the world, the wife that You gave me has flown away from me. Then the holy and blessed GOD immediately sent these three angels (namely Senói, Sansenói, and Samman-gelóf, who are mentioned briefly beforehand in the little book Ben Sira) after her, to bring her back; and GOD said to them, if she returns, it is well; but if not, she shall take upon herself (as punishment) that one hundred of her children shall die every day. Thereupon they went after her and found her in the midst of the sea, in the mighty waters in which the Egyptians were destined to perish, and they told her God's command, but she would not return. And when they said to her, we will drown you in the sea (if you do not comply), she said to them, let me go, for I was created for no other purpose than to weaken (and destroy) young children, and I have power over a little boy from the day he is born until the eighth day; but if it is a little girl (or daughter), from the day of her birth until the twentieth day. When they had heard her words, they pressed to take her away; but she swore by the name of the living and eternal God (and said), whenever I see you, or your names, or your likeness on a Kaméa (that is, a slip of paper or parchment hung about a child's neck, called in Latin amuletum), I will do no harm (and no injury) to that child; and she accepted upon herself that one hundred of her children should die every day, which is why one hundred devils die every day. For this reason we write the names of the said three angels on a slip of paper for little boys, so that when she sees it, she may be reminded of her oath, and the boy may recover.

We thus see from this that this Lilith is supposed to have been Adam's first wife, who thereafter became a she-devil; and in the Jalkut chádascb fol. 3, col. 1. 2. numero 5. under the title Adam, drawn from the Sóhar chádascb, fol. 31, col. 1., the following is also written concerning this: מתחלה ברא הק"ה לאדם חוה ולא היתה בשר רק זוהמא וארעא ושמרים שלה והיתה רוח מזקת ולכך לקחה הק"ה מאדם ונתן אחרת תחתיה וזהו ויקח אחת מצלעותיו היינו חוה ראשונה שלקחה ממנה ויסגור That is: The holy blessed God created for Adam at the beginning an Eve (that is, Lilith), and she was not of flesh, but rather of filth and the dregs of the earth, and was a harmful spirit; for this reason God took her away from Adam and gave him another in her place; and this is the meaning of the words of Gen 2:21, "And he took one of his ribs"; this signifies the first Eve, which he had taken from that same rib; but the following words, "and closed up flesh in its place," signify the second Eve, who was of flesh, for the first was not of flesh. And this is likewise to be found in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 17, col. 2. in the Parascha Bereschith.

Regarding the young children over whom she is said to have the power to kill them: in the book Emek hammelech fol. 84, col. 2., in the 12th chapter, under the title Scháar kirjáth árba, the following is read: לילית רחמנא ליצולן יש לה שליטה בילדים. שיוצאים מהבועל לאור ינר. או עם אשתו ערומה או בזמן שהוא אסור לבעול כל אותם הילדים שיוצאים מאלו הנזכרים יכולת לילית להרגם בכל זמן שהיא רוצה. מפני שנמסרו בירה וזהו סוד. ששוחקים הילדים כשהם קטנים מלילית שהיא שוחקת עמיהם ושמעתי בי כששוחק הילד כשהוא קטן והוא ישן בליל שבת או בליל ראשי חדשים שאז שוחקת לילית עמיהם שטוב לאביו או לאמו או לכל מי שרואה אותו משחק יכה בחוטמו באצבע ויאמר כך לך מכאן ארורה שאין לך כאן חנייה זה יאמר ג' פעמים ובכל פעם שיאמר הלהש יכה בחוטם והוא טוב מאוד מפני שביד לילית להרגם כשתרצה ובהיותו שהרשות בירה להרגם 'לאילו הקטנים נקראו הנפשות הללו נפשות עשוקות וזהו סוד. פסוק עושה משפט לעשוקים פי שהק' בה יעשה לעתיד לבוא משפט לעשוקים פי 'לאילו הילדים העשוקים מלילית על שנהרגו That is: The Lilith, from whom may the merciful God preserve us, has power over those children who are begotten by one who lies with his wife by the light of a candle, or when she is naked, or when he is forbidden to lie with her. All such children who come from the aforementioned persons, Lilith has the power to kill at any time she wishes, since they have been given into her power; and this is the mystery of why children, when they are small, laugh on account of Lilith, because she laughs (or plays) with them. I have also heard that when a child laughs while it is still small and sleeps on the night of the Sabbath, or on the night of the first days of the months, Lilith laughs (or plays) with it at that time, and that it is good for the child's father, or mother, or anyone who sees it laughing, to strike it on the nose and speak thus: go away from here, you accursed one (Lilith), for you have no lodging here; this he shall say three times, and as often as he says this incantation he shall strike the nose; and this is very good, since it lies within Lilith's power to kill the children whenever it pleases her. And because she holds the power in her hand to kill these small children, those souls are called the souls of the oppressed; and this is the mystery of the words (Ps 146:7): He who renders justice to those who suffer oppression, that is, the holy blessed God will in time to come render justice to those who suffer oppression, namely to those children upon whom Lilith inflicted violence by killing them before their time, and this is the mystery of the words Eccl 4:1: Behold the tears of those who suffer oppression. This same passage is also to be found in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech fol. 130, col. 2., in the 11th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha disêr ánpin, as well as in the book Kol bóchim fol. 29, col. 1. 2. 3. 4. This Lilith is supposed to be in constant discord with Máchalath, concerning which the Jalkut chádasc fol. 108, col. 3. numero 56, citing Galante fol. 7, col. 1., states the following: שתי קליפות יש אחת נקראת מחלת ועמה תשע'ח כתות מלאכי חבלה כמנין שמה והיא תמיד מרקדת ומחוללת כשמה. השנית היא לילית ועמה ת'פ כתות מלאכי חבלה כמנין שמה והיא תמיד מיללת כשמה ומלחמה ערוכה ביניהם ואינן פוגעות זו בזו אלא ביום כיפור בהן שיהיו מתגרים וטרודים אלו באלו ובין כך That is: (There are two Keliphóth (or Keliphos, that is, she-devils); the first is called Máchalath (or Máchalas), and she has four hundred and seventy-eight hosts of angels of destruction with her, according to the numerical value of her name (for Machalath yields 478), and she leaps and dances continually, according to the meaning of her name (since Machól or Mecholá means a dance, and Chalál means to dance). The other is Lilis, and she has four hundred and eighty hosts of angels of destruction with her, according to the numerical value of her name (for Lilith yields 480), and she howls incessantly, according to the meaning of her name (for Helil means to howl, and Jelalá means a howling), and an ordained war exists between them. They do not, however, encounter one another except on the Day of Atonement, so that they may fight with one another and be occupied with each other, and in the meantime the prayer and fasting of the Israelites may ascend (into Heaven) without accusation

(from such evil spirits, who otherwise are accustomed to accuse the Israelites before God and to bring their sins before God).

Where the four aforementioned wives of Sammael reside is indicated in the little book Tuf haárez fol. 19, col. 3. with these words: כל שהשבעים שרים כל אומה ואומה נפל לחלקו שר אחד מהשבעים הם תחת רשות סמאל ורהב והנה לרהב ניתן לחלקו כל גבול מצרים שהיא ה' פרסה על ה' פרסה. ולסמאל נתנו לו בפני עצמו ד' מלכיות ובכל מלכות יש לו פילגש אחת שהם ד' פילגשים ושמותן הם א' לילית לילית שלקחה לכת זוגו והיא חוה ראשונה. ב' נעמה. ג' אבן משכית. ד' אגרת בת מחלת. ודהו' מלכיות הם אחת מלכות דמשק שיש בתוכה בית רימון. ב' מלכות צור שהיא נגדיית לארץ ישראל. והג' היא נקראת מלכות מלטא שמקודם היתה שמה רודש. והד' היא המלכות הנקראה גראנטא ויש אומרים שהיא מלכות ישמעאל. ובכל אחת מאלו ארבע מלכיות הנזכרות יושבת א' מד' That is: Know that there are seventy princes, and that every people has fallen to the share of one of these seventy princes; and likewise that all such seventy princes are under the power of Sammael and Rahab. Behold, to Rahab was given as his portion the entire land of Egypt, which is four hundred miles long and wide. To Sammael, however, were given four separate kingdoms, in each of which he has a concubine, so that he has four concubines; and the first is called Lilith (or Lilis), whom he has taken as his wife, and she is the first Eve. The second is called Naama; the third is called Even maskith, and the fourth is called Igereth, the daughter of Machalath. As for the four kingdoms: the first is the kingdom of Damascus, in which the house (or the temple of the idol) Rimmon is located. The second is the kingdom of Tyre, which lies opposite the land of Israel. The third is called the kingdom of Malta, which was formerly called Rhodes. And the fourth is the kingdom called Granada; though some say that it is the Ishmaelite (that is, the Turkish) realm. And in each one of the said four kingdoms dwells one of the same.

But if Sammael, who is also called Satan, is supposed to have been circumcised by GOD at the time of creation, so that he might not beget many devils with Lilis, as was reported above in the first chapter of this second part, page 7, from the contents of the book Ammudeha Schibba, then why should he have taken four wives, and how can he beget young devils? These things run directly contrary to one another. Yet among the senseless Jews everything is acceptable, among whom two entirely contradictory and mutually conflicting things can both be true, notwithstanding that they are opposed to all sound reason.

That devils mix with the wives of men, and that men also have dealings with female devils, and are supposed to beget devils, is taught in the Zijoni fol. 67, col. 1. in these words: רע שגם בן אדם ישכב עם שידא ותבעלת לו יהיה לו ממנו בן או בת. ועל זה אמר הנביא על כל גבעה גבוה שמה משכבך שהיו נבעלות לשדים ובעוטות הלילות

והשרין: That is: Know that when a man lies with a female devil and sleeps with her, she will receive from him a son or a daughter; for this reason the prophet said (Isa 57:7): "You have made your bed upon high and lofty mountains," because they were slept with by devils, and because they slept with the Liliós, that is, female night-spirits and she-devils. Likewise, a Jew is said to have married the daughter of Aschmedai, the king of the devils, and to have begotten a son with her, as may be read in a small tract printed in Venice, which is called מעשה ירושלמי Maáse Jeruschálmi; this fable is too lengthy to set down here, but it may perhaps be published by me on some occasion separately, together with a translation into German. Furthermore, it is reported in the Zijóni fol. 66, col. 4.: אשמדאי מלכא שכב עם נשי שלמה מחמת שהטריחו יותר מדאי כי אחרי שהראה לו: השמיר לא היה לו להטריחו יותר ועל הסוד כתב כי בנות האדם לשדים כיפת תואר לישראל. that is, Aschmedai, the king (of the devils), lay with Solomon's wives, because Solomon had burdened him too greatly; for once he had shown him the Schámir (of which mention was made above in the eighth chapter of the first part), he ought not to have burdened him further. The author of the book Sod also writes that the daughters of men are just as pleasing to the devils as a beautiful maiden is to an Israelite. The wife of a devil, however, commits no adultery with another devil. And in the Sohar printed at Sulzbach, in the 387th column, in the Parascha Vajischlach, the following is read: כל אינון שנין דלא קריב אדם עם אתתיה רוחי מסאבי הוו קאתיין ומתחממין מניה ואולידן מניה והני איקרון נגעי בני אדם. והא אתמר דכר ברנש בחלמיה ולא שליט בגופיה וגופא אשתכך רוח מסאבא אתיא ושריא עליה ואית זמנין דרוחין נוקבין מסאבין אתיין וקרבן בהדיה ומשכין ליה בהדיהו ומתחממין מניה ואולידו לבהד רוחין ומזיקין נגעי בני אדם ולומנין: that is, in all those years in which Adam did not touch his wife, the unclean spirits came to him, were inflamed by him (and slept with him), and bore children by him, which are called נגעי בני אדם Nighe bene ádam, that is, plagues of the children of men. And behold, it is said that when a man dreams and does not have mastery over his body, and the body is calm and still, an unclean spirit comes and takes up residence upon him. It also happens at times that unclean spirits of the female sex come and lie down beside him, and draw him to themselves, and are inflamed by him (and slept with him), and thereafter bear spirits and devils, which are Nighe bene ádam, that is, plagues of the children of men. Sometimes they appear in the form of human beings, except that they have no hair upon their heads.

On this topic, the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 122, col. 1. 2. may also be consulted, in the sixteenth chapter of the third Máamar, where this matter is treated at length.

Concerning those devils who are said to originate from nocturnal seminal emission, the following is written in the aforementioned Sohar, in the 170th column, in the Parascha Bereschith: אמר רבי יצחק מההיא שעתא דקטל קין להבל: אתפרש אדם מאנתיה ותרין רוחין נוקבין הוו אתיין ומזדווגין עמיה ואוליד רוחין ושדין דשאטן בעלמא ולא הקשה לך האי דהא ברנש כד איהו בחלמיה אתיין רוחין נוקבין וחייכן עמיה ומתחממן מניה ואולידן לבראי. אי הכי כל קרי דחמי הוא ברנש מגו רוחין נוקבין דאהיין ומזדווגין עמיה ומתחממן מניה. ואולידן דכרין ונוקבין ואלין איקרון נגעי בני אדם ולא מתהפכן אלא לדיוקני בני נשא ולית לון שערין ברישא ועל כתיב בשלמה והוכחתיו בשבט אנשים ובנגעי בני אדם ואפילו כהאי גוונא רוחין דכרין אתיין לנשי עלמא ומתעברן מנייהו ואולידן that is, Rabbi Isaac said: from that very hour in which Cain killed Abel, Adam separated himself from his wife, and two spirits of the female sex came to him and joined themselves to him, and he begat spirits and devils who roam about in the world. But let this not seem difficult (and strange) to you, for behold, when a man is in a dream (and in sleep), spirits of the female sex come and rub themselves against him and are heated by him, and thereafter give birth. Now if this is so, then every emission of seed that a man experiences originates from spirits of the female sex, who come and mingle with him and are heated by him, and give birth to males and females; and these are called Nighé bené ádam, that is, plagues of the children of men, and they are transformed into no other form than the likeness of human beings; yet they have no hair upon their heads, and for this reason it is written of Solomon (2 Sam 7:14): (when he commits a transgression) I will chastise him with the rod of men and with Nighé bené ádam, that is, with the plagues of the children of men.

Furthermore, the following is read there in the 171st column: האי נעמה אימן דשירין הות ומסטרהא אתיין כל אינון שדין דמתחממן מבני נשא ונטלי רוח התיאובתא מנייהו וחייכאן בהו דעבדי לון בעלי קריין ובנין דא בעל קרי דאתי מסטרא דרוח מסאבא בעי לאסחאה גרמיה לאתדכאה מניה : that is, Naama is the mother of the devils, and from her side come all those she-devils who inflame themselves with the children of men, and they receive the spirit of desire from them, and rub themselves against them, and cause a flux to befall them. Therefore, he upon whom a flux befalls, which comes from the side of the unclean spirit, must (according to the commandment in Lev 15:2, 5) wash himself, so that he may be cleansed of it. But in the book Emek hammelech, this is said of Lilis at fol. 102, col. 4, at the end, and fol. 103, col. 1, at the beginning, in the 92nd chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjath árba, in these words: היא עוזבת אלוף נעוריה ויורדת ומזנה עם : that is, She (namely Lilis, as is evident from what precedes) forsakes the guide (that is, the husband) of her youth, and descends, and fornicates with the children of men who sleep down below, through the uncleanness of the flux, and from those same men are begotten devils, spirits, and night-phantoms, who are called Nigbé bené ádam, that is, plagues of the children of men, as it is said (Ps 91:10): And the plague shall not come near your tent. As for these devils who are called Nigbé bené ádam, still more on this subject is to be found in the Jalkut chádascb, fol. 67, col. 1, number 112, under the title David; and in the book Nilschmáth chájim, fol. 139, col. 2, and fol. 140, col. 1, in the 27th chapter of the third Máamar; as also in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 5, col. 2, in the Parascha Bereschíth, and fol. 96, col. 4, in the Parascha Tasría.

It is also reported at fol. 97, col. 4, in the aforementioned book Zerór hammór, that all manner of plagues are said to originate from such devils, and the words there read as follows: וענין נגע כבר רמזתי לך שכל עניני הנגעים נמשכו מצד אדם : הראשון והם נקראים נגעי בני אדם והם שידה ושידין המוזכרים בקהלת that is, "Concerning the plague of garments (of which mention is made in Lev 13:47), I have already indicated to you that all plagues (and leprosy) derive from Adam, and these are called Nigbe bené ádam, that is, the plagues of men (or of the children of Adam), and these are the same Schidda and Schiddin (that is, she-devil and devils) of which mention is made in Ecclesiastes (Eccl 2:8)." These are the words of the book Zerór hammór. It is, however, a great error that Schidda and Schiddóth should be understood to mean devils, for such words in that passage signify all manner of musical instruments, and no devils at all. Concerning the plague of garments, the following is also written further on in the last-cited fourth column: לאנשים החוטאים בנפשותם הם ניגשים אליהם ומטילין בהם ארם ומטמאין בגדיהם במין נגעים וטומאה עד שנראים הנגעים בבגדיהם וזה טעם נגעי : that is, "They (the devils) draw near to those people who sin against their own souls, and cast a poison into them, and defile their garments through kinds of plagues and uncleanness, so that the plagues become visible upon their garments. And this is the true cause of the plague of garments and houses." More on this subject can also be found there, as well as at fol. 96, col. 4. Likewise, in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 85, col. 1, in the 16th chapter, under the title Scháär Kirjáth árba, mention is made of a devil called Kapkapúni, who is said to have two wives, of whom one is called Zaritha, that is, Leprous, and the other Sagrirta, which likewise means Leprous, and the following passage comes after: והתולדות היוצאים מהם הם צורות משונות זו מזו ובני צריחא מצורעים . ויש מחכמי קבלה אומרים שכל המצורעים נולדים מכח זה התולדה ובני סגרירתא אין הכרת פנים ומלחמה ערוכה בין אלו השני הכתות : that is, "Those who are born of them are of various forms, but the children of Zaritha are leprous. There are also some among the wise of the Cabbala who say that all lepers are descended from the stock of this shameful offspring (of Zaritha).

But the children of Sagirta have no recognition of faces, and these two hosts are at all times ready for war against one another."

All those demons who were begotten from the seed of a man are supposed to defile that man greatly upon his body after his death, as their father; concerning which it is written in the book Zerór hammór, fol. 5, col. 2. in the Parascha Bereschíth as follows: אלו המזיקין שנתהוו מזוב האדם מתחברים כולם כשנפטר האדם אצל אביהם ליגע בו לטמאו ולכן צוו חז"ל לעשות הקפות לאדם ולהזכיר שם דברים בענין שבאלו הקפות בורחים כולם ואין נוגעים בו וצוו שיעשו שבעה הקפות להבריה שבעה כתות של מלאכי חבלה שמתחברים שם וזה שהזכירו חז"ל שבע מעמדות וזהו בשש צרות יצילך ובשבע לא יגע בכ רע זהו איש רע בליעל שבאלו השבעה הקפות כולם בורחים ואין נוגעים בו ולכן צריך לעשות ההקפות אצל הקבר בענין שמיד כשישלימו ההקפות יכניסוהו אל רע : that is, those demons who were begotten from the flux of a man all gather together when the man dies, beside their (deceased) father, to touch him and to defile him; for this reason our Sages, of blessed memory, commanded that one should walk around the man seven times and speak certain words there, since through such circling they all take to flight and do not touch him. They also commanded that seven circuits should be performed, in order to drive away the seven bands of the angels of destruction who assemble there; and this is what our Sages, of blessed memory, have stated concerning the seven stations. This also (is the meaning of the words of Job 5:19): "Out of six tribulations He will deliver you, and in the seventh no evil shall touch you," by which evil or wickedness the evil man, the scoundrel (the unclean spirit) is to be understood; for through such seven circuits they all flee away and do not touch him. Therefore one must perform such circuits at the grave, so that as soon as the circuits are completed, the deceased may be placed in the grave and quickly laid in the pit, so that nothing evil may touch him. On this point the aforementioned book Zerór hammór fol. 96, col. 4. in the Parascha Tasríá may also be consulted.

Since the Jews are now caught up in such superstition, and imagine that such devils defile a person after his death upon his body, and walk with his corpse as with that of their father, they customarily forbid them by means of a ban from following after them at their funeral and from touching either their clothes or their body, as can be read at the end of a little book printed here in Frankfurt, which is called סדר הקברנים Seder hakafránim.

Concerning such demons and how they can be killed, the following is written in the little book recently printed here in Frankfurt, which is called הנהגת Hanbagáth bachasidím veánsche máaseh, fol. 16, col. 1-2 and fol. 17, col. 1: [the Judeo-German passage in Hebrew characters reads as follows:] The wise men of conduct write in their books that the demoness

Lilith, who is far from us, lies with men and takes on the form as if the man were having to do with a woman or a maiden. Likewise, male demons also come and lie with women, taking on the form of men and young fellows, and defile them, alas; so that, on account of the many sins, the children mostly die from the bitter sin, on account of their smallness. And from such seed are created destroyers, injurers, demons and spirits, as well as night-phantoms, who call themselves the children of the man, and after his death punish him with bitter torments that are not to be described. One must do great penance and good works until one kills such demons, etc. For this reason our wise men have established certain ordinances so that one does not come to such sin. Before one begins to read the words ("Hear, O Israel, the LORD our God is one God," Deut 6:4), one shall wash one's hands, and with devotion read the said words, "Hear, O Israel," etc., whether they be women or men; and thereafter shall make the confession of sins which is set out above (namely in the second, third, and fourth pages of the aforementioned little book), whether in Hebrew or in German; thereafter he shall recite the first four Psalms. In this manner one kills the demons that have been created from one's wasted seed. One should also endeavor to perform commandments, for example to make a coffin for a dead person, or to dig a grave for a dead person, or when one bakes unleavened bread one should work hard until one sweats. By this means one kills the demons, and one is further freed from sin.

Regarding those devils who are said to have been the souls of wicked people and to have become devils, the following is taught in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 123, col. 1, numero 18, under the title Mitha, from the Sóbar chádasc fol. 16, col. 1: נפשות הרשעים כשיצאים מן העולם הן הן המזיקים שבעולם That is: The souls of the wicked, when they depart from this world, are the devils that are in the world. And in the Sepher chasidim, numero 1170, the following is read: למה הרוחות מחבלין ערב שבת לפי שאין הרוחות בגיהנם פירוש רוחות של רשעים במיתתן הם מזיקין כמו כל תולדות קין שמהו נעשו נשמותיהן מזיקין that is, Why do the spirits cause harm on the eve of the Sabbath? Because the spirits are (at that time) not in hell, which is to be understood of the spirits of the wicked, who after their death are devils, just as the souls of all the deceased generations of Cain are devils. So too it is written on this subject in the book Nilchmáth cháyim, fol. 168, col. 1, in the 19th chapter of the fourth Máamar, from the Sóbar on the third book of Moses, from column 125, as follows: אמר רבי יהודה נפשא דערשעיא אילין אינון מזיקין דעלמא that is, Rabbi Jehuda has said: the souls of the wicked are the devils in the world. And still more on this subject can be found in that same place. In the book Emek hamélech, fol. 68, col. 1, in the 22nd chapter under the title Scháar dikna kaddíscha, the following is also read: עמלקים הם המשומדים והמינים והמסורות והאפיקורסים והמלשינים את ישראל להמלכות

בעלילות שקר ומזיקים את ישראל הן בממונם הן בגופם הם נפשות הרשעים הנעשים מזיקים וי' that is, The Amalekites, namely the Jews who have apostatized from their religion, and the heretics, and the traitors, and the Epicureans, and those who slander the Israelites before the authorities through false accusations, and who harm the Israelites both in their property and in their persons, are the souls of the wicked who after their death become devils, and they are the people whom GOD hates.

Concerning Cain, the aforementioned book Nischmáth chájim fol. 116, col. 1. in the 12th chapter also subsequently reports: אמרו עוד שמקין יצאו וילין: ושעל כן לא הוזכרה בתורה מיתה בזרעו כמו שזכרה בשאר תולדות האדם באשר מין בפני That is: They further say (namely the Kabbalists) that from Cain devils and night-phantoms came forth (and were begotten); and that for this reason the death of his seed is not mentioned in the Law (of Moses), as it is mentioned in the case of the other lineages of Adam, inasmuch as those descended from the seed of Cain were regarded as a separate and distinct race.

Likewise, the souls of those people who lived at the time of the Flood are said to have become devils, as can be seen in Jalkut chádascb fol. 106, col. 3. numero 18. under the title Keschafim, where the words read as follows: נשמות That is: The souls of the generation of the Flood have been made into spirits and devils, and the holy, blessed God will in the future destroy them from the world. And in the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the 34th chapter, as well as in Jalkut Schimóni on Isaiah, fol. 46, col. 2. numero 196. at the end, it is taught: דור המבול אף ביום הדין אין עומדין שני רפאים כל יקומו וכל נפשותם נעשים רוחות ומזיקין לאדם ולעתיד לבא That is: The generation of the Flood will not rise again even on the Day of Judgment, as it is said (Isa 26:14): The dead shall not rise; and all their souls have become spirits that cause harm to mankind. But in the time to come, the holy, blessed GOD will destroy them from the world, so that they may no longer do harm to the children of Israel.

Likewise, some of those who built the Tower of Babylon are said to have become devils, concerning which it is written in the book Nifschmáth chájim, fol. 160, col. 1., at the beginning of the 13th chapter of the fourth Máamar, as follows: דרשו ח"ל שבשלשה חלוקי דינין גידונו דור הפלגה. הטובים שבהם גדונו 'בבלבול לשון. והכת שנתכוונה לשם ע"ז נעשו מהן קופין ורחולין וכיצא בהם. והכת הג.. שאמרו נעלה לשמים ונכנו בקרדומות הושלכו למטה ונעשו מהן שדין ומזיקין ורוחין בישין רצונם שקצת מהם נתגלגלו בבהמות האלו וקצת נעשו נשמתן במזיקין ורוחות נעות ונדות בלי שום מנוחה כלל; That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, teach that the generation of the dispersion (meaning the generation of those who built the aforementioned tower) was punished with three kinds of punishments. The best among them were punished with the confusion of language. The company of those whose intention was directed toward idolatry were transformed into apes, and cats, and similar animals. The third company, however, those who said "we will ascend into heaven and strike Him (namely God) with axes," was cast down, and from them came devils and harmful evil spirits. By this, however, they mean to say that the souls of some of them passed into those animals, while the souls of others were made into devils and spirits who wander about without any rest whatsoever. Something of this has also been reported above in the 8th chapter of the first part, from the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin fol. 109, col. 1.

Regarding those devils that are supposed to be brought into existence by wicked people through their evil works and sins, which devils are thereafter to bear witness against those same people on the day of judgment and say that such-and-such a person created them: this matter has been treated above in the first chapter of this second part, paginâ 8, from the book Ammudéha fchifa, and it is therefore unnecessary to repeat it here.

As for those devils, finally, that are said to descend from the angels who fell away from God: in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 28, under the title Málach, from the Sobár, from the Parascha Acharé moth col. 137, the following is taught: שדין ורוחין פלגותא אית מבני נשא ופלגותא ממלאכין that is, the devils and spirits are in part from human beings, and in part from the angels. And in the aforementioned book Nifchmátch chájim, at fol. 116, col. 1, in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar, one reads: המקובלים אמרו עוד שעזא ועזאל קטרגו על בריאת אדם הראשון ואמרו למה למה בראת אותו עתיד היה להכעיס לפניך. אמר להם הקב"ה אילו ירדתם בעולם השפל הזה הייתם חוטאים כמוהו. וכיון דהורידם וחסאו והם בני אלהים דכתיב ויראו בני אלהים את בנות האדם כי טובות הנה ויקחו להם נשים מכל אשר בחרו. ואחרי שחטאו נתגלמו כי כיון שהמלאך הוא שבעת ימים בארץ נעשה עב ומיד שנתגלמו באופן ששלט בהם יצר הרע כשבקשו לחזור למקומם וזכרו שם המפורש לא יכלו לעלות כי נדחו ממחיצתם והפילו אותם לארץ בהרי חושך. ומהם יצאו הנפילים וענקים גדולי הקומה אשר היו בארץ That is: the Kabbalists have further said that Asa and Asael lodged a complaint against the creation of the first man and said (to God): why did you create him, seeing that he will provoke you to anger? But God answered them: if you had descended into the lower world, you would have sinned just as he did. And so He let them descend; and they sinned, and they are those sons of God of whom it is written (Gen 6:2): "And the sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were fair, and took to themselves wives whichever they chose." After they had sinned, they were clothed (with a body), for when an angel has been on the earth for seven days, he becomes dense. And as soon as they were clothed, so that the evil nature gained dominion over them, and they wished to return to their place and invoked the Schembampborách, they could not ascend, because they had been expelled from the place of their dwelling and were cast down to the earth into the dark mountains. From these came the great giants and the children of Anak who were upon the earth. These were the mighty men who from of old were men of renown; and from them and their seed the devils descend.

That the two spirits Asa and Asael were originally good and holy angels can be seen from Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 1., drawn from the Medrasch Ruth, where it is written as follows: עזא ועזאל הדין מלאכי חור קטרגו למאריהון ואפיל לון קודשא בריך הוא מאתר קדושתהון מעילא וכד נחתו אתגלימו באוירא ואתעבידו כבני נשא ולית לך בכל אינון מלאכין דאשלימו לאתערבא גו בני נשא כאינון דאיקרון אישים וכאינון דאיקרון בני אלהים כיון דאפיל לין קודשא בריך הוא איגלימו מכל אינון יסודי דבני נשא מתלבשין בהון. שאר מלאכין כד נחתו אינון זמנין לאהבא לדוכתייהו אגלימו באוירא ומתפשטו מיניה ואהדרן לדוכתייהו That is: Asa and Asael were two angels who had accused their Lord, and the holy blessed God cast them down from the place of their holiness on high; and when they descended, they were clothed with the air (in that they assumed bodies from it) and were made like unto the children of men. And there are among all the angels none who have been so completely mingled among men as those who are called אישים Ischim, that is, Men, and those who are called בני אלהים Bené Elohim, that is, Children of God. After the holy blessed God had cast them down, they assumed a body from all those elements with which the children of men are clothed (and from which they have their bodies). The remaining angels, however, when they descend, are ready to return to their place again (whenever they will); they assume a body from the air and lay it aside again, and (when they have accomplished their business) they return to their place. Concerning such fallen angels, something further may also be read in the last-cited column, as well as in the preceding fol. 35, col. 4. of the aforementioned book.

It is thus sufficiently evident from what has been presented up to this point, what strange and foolish opinions the hardened Jews hold concerning the origin and descent of devils. We will now proceed and further examine what they teach concerning these same beings.

How many different kinds of them there are supposed to be is shown to us by Rabbi Menasse ben Israel in his book Nishmáth chájim, fol. 114, col. 1, in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar, in these words: 'אָמְרוּ קְאָרִי מִתְּנִיתִין: דְּאִינוּן ג' מִיִּין דְּלֵהוֹן כְּמִלְאָכִי הַשְׁרֵת וְסָד כְּבָנֵי אָדָם וּמִיִּין תְּלִיתָאֵי כְּבָעִירוֹן מִיָּנִים מִיִּנְיָהּ, עַר מִיִּין דְּלֵהוֹן כְּמִלְאָכִי הַשְׁרֵת וְסָד כְּבָנֵי אָדָם וּמִיִּין תְּלִיתָאֵי כְּבָעִירוֹן: that is, the teachers of the Mishnah have said that there are three kinds of them. The first kind is those who are like the ministering angels; the second kind is like the children of men; but the third is like cattle. This is also to be found in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 85, col. 1, in the 16th chapter under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba. As regards the first kind, it is written in the Sóhar printed at Sulzbach, on the fourth book of Moses, in the 468th column, in the Parascha Ki téze, as well as in the last-mentioned place in the book Nischmáth chájim, concerning them as follows: וְאֵינֻן מְהִינִין דְּאִית מְהִינִין כְּמַלְאַכֵי הַשָּׁרָת, וְאֵינֻן אֻקְמוּהָ מְאִירֵי מְהִינִין דְּאִית מְהִינִין כְּמַלְאַכֵי הַשָּׁרָת, וְאֵינֻן אֻקְמוּהָ מְאִירֵי מְהִינִין דְּאִית מְהִינִין כְּמַלְאַכֵי הַשָּׁרָת: that is, the teachers of the Mishnah maintain that among them there are some who are like the ministering angels, and that these are wise teachers who know what has been and what is yet to come. Furthermore, in the last-cited place in the book Nischmáth chájim, the following is read from the book Tikkúnim, fol. 41: אִית שְׂרִין דְּאֵינֻן קְדִישִׁין כְּמַלְאַכֵי הַשָּׁרָת: that is, there are devils who are holy, like the ministering angels. And shortly thereafter it follows: אִית כְּהֹן בְּהֹן חֲכִמִין בְּאוֹרֵיתָא דְּבִכְתָּב וּדְּבִעַל פֶּה: that is, there are among them those who are wise in the written and the oral Law. Hence one reads in the Maase-buch, in the 143rd chapter, that a devil who had dwelt with Rabbi Channina in the form of a frog is supposed to have taught this Rabbi Channina the entire Law of Moses. Likewise it is stated in the little book Iggéret báale chájim, at the beginning of the 15th chapter under the title Scháar schelischí: דַּע כִּי בְּשָׂרִים טוֹבִים וְרַעִים כּוֹפְרִים וּמֵאִמִּינִים צְדִיקִים וּפּוֹשְׁעִים כֹּאֲשֶׁר: that is, know that among the devils there are good and evil, unbelieving and believing, righteous and sinners, just as are also found among the children of men.

These aforementioned so-called holy, good, and righteous devils, שְׂדֵין יְהוּדָאִין Schédin Jehuddáin, that is, Jewish devils, are so named because, just as the Jews do, they are said to study the Law of Moses, to go to the synagogue, and to perform their prayers. And in the book Emek hammélech, in the aforementioned 16th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, fol. 85, col. 1, the following is written concerning them: וְקֹרְאִים שְׂדֵין יְהוּדָאִין שְׁלֹמֵדִים תּוֹרָה וְשׁוֹמְעִים אַחֲרָי: that is, they are called Jewish devils because they study the Law and eavesdrop behind the curtain (on what is spoken and decided in Heaven). And shortly thereafter, in the same place, from the Sóhar, the Sulzbach printing, on the fourth book of Moses, from the Parascha Pinchas, col. 413, the following passage occurs: לֹא לְמַגְנָא אַתְקֵרִי יוֹסֵף שִׂידָא עַל שֵׁם דְּאוֹלִיף לִיה שֵׁד וְלֹא לְמַגְנָא אַמְרוּ מְאִירֵי מְהִינִין אִם הָרַב דּוֹמָה לְמַלְאַךְ יִי 'תּוֹרָה יִבְקֶשׁוּ מִפִּיהוּ וְאִשְׁמַדָּא מִלְכָּא הוּא וְכָל מִשְׁפַּחְתִּיהָ הָא אֻקְמַנָּא דְּאֵינֻן שְׂדֵין יְהוּדָאִין דְּאִתְכַּפִּיין בְּאוֹרֵיתָא וּבִשְׁמֵהּ דְּאוֹרֵיתָא ר"ל בְּהִשְׁבַּעַת שְׂרִי: that is, Joseph is not called Schéda without reason, for a Sched, that is, a devil, taught him. Likewise, the teachers of the Mishna did not say in vain: when a Raf, or teacher, is like the angel of the Lord, one should seek the Law from his mouth. I also maintain that King Aschmedai and his entire lineage are

Jewish devils, who are compelled by the Law and by the names of the Law, that is, by the conjuration of the princes of the vessel (who are consulted in vessels, just as others are, of whom mention was made above in the 8th chapter of the first part, pagina 350, in eggshells, glasses, or oil). Aschmedai is therefore the king of such Jewish devils, who, as was indicated in the first chapter of the first part, pagina 12, is said to travel each day to the heavenly academy on high and to study there. And concerning these devils, who are said to have inhabited an entire city, to have maintained a rabbi who was also a devil, to have gone to the synagogue, and to have prayed, more is to be found in the aforementioned tract, the little tractate called Maase Jeruschálmí. It was also noted above in the ninth chapter of the first part, pagina 462, that devils who dwell upon the earth, which is called Adama, perform their prayers. And in the small Jalkut Rubéni, under number 4, under the title Massikim, from the Sóhar, the following is taught concerning those devils whom Adam is said to have begotten with Lilis over the course of one hundred and thirty years, who dwell upon the aforementioned earth called Adamá: הם תמיד עצבים ביגון ואנחה ואין ביניהם שמחה כלל וכחות הללו יכולים לפרוה להבל והם נעשו מזיקים וחוזרים לשם גוי ומתפללים תפלות לאל בורא וגוי that is, they are always sorrowful and afflicted, and they sigh, and there is no joy among them whatsoever. These hosts can fly up to Tébbel (that is, the uppermost earth), and they have become devils, and they return again (to their earth, which is called Adamá) and pray prayers to God the Creator, etc.

According to the teaching of the Jews, there are supposed to be two kinds of devils, namely Jewish and heathen or idolatrous ones, as can be seen in the frequently cited book Emek hammélech, fol. 85, col. 1, cap. 16, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, where the following is written: אינן כמלאכים דמשמשין לון שדין ואינן יהודאי רשימין באות שדי ואית שרין ומזיקין מסטרא דמסאבו דאיתקריאו שדים עובדי עבודה זרה: that is, they (namely the Jewish devils) are like the angels whom the devils serve, since they are Jews and are marked with the sign Scháddai (meaning circumcision). There are, however, also devils from the unclean side, who are called idolatrous devils. Concerning the Jewish devils, one may also consult the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, fol. 152, col. 4, in the 45th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha disér ánpin, as well as the book Jesód schirim, fol. 8, col. 2. As for those devils who are said to resemble cattle, it is stated in the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 114, col. 1, in the 12th chapter of the third Maamar: אית שנהון כבהמה פריין ורביין כבהמה, that is, some of them are like cattle, and are fruitful and multiply like cattle.

What princes and rulers exist among the devils can be seen in part in the book Emek hammélech, fol. 84, col. 4, and fol. 85, col. 1, in the 15th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, as well as in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol.

128, col. 4, in the Parascha Acharé moth, where it is reported that the chief devil Sammaël has twelve princes under him, and that the eleventh of these twelve in turn has a thousand mighty princes beneath him.

The hosts standing under Sammaël are supposed to lead people astray on the road at night. Concerning this, in the aforementioned book Emek hammélech, fol. 130, in the 11th chapter, under the title Sebaar rélcha, this anpin writes the following over the words of Eccl 4:13, "A young boy who is poor and wise is better than an old king who is a fool and does not know how to protect himself": הם משרתיו של סמאל הרשע הנקראים כיתות הכסיל וזהם במדרגה התחתונה: ושפלה כיון שאין להם רשות להזיק רק להטעות בני אדם ולפתותם שילכו בדרך מעוקל ומובילים למים או לאשפות היער ואגמי מים ועושים להם אחיות עינים עד שהבן אדם רואה לפניו דרך ישר ויפה מאוד או כפר ואושפיזא והוא שקר וכזב וזהו פירוש הפסוק מה יתרון יש לו למלך הרשע הזה שעושה רשעתו בכל יום עם משרתיו ומהנותיו לבני אדם עד ששחוקם וקולם נשמע למרחוק וזהו עושה בכל יום ובכל לילה ואין לו יתרון ואדרבא יענש על זה לעתיד לבוא שישחט אותו קב"ה שנ' ביום ההוא יפקוד י"י בחרבו הקשה על לויטן נחש בריח שהוא לילית that is, These are the servants of the wicked Sammaël, who are called the hosts of the fool, and they are in the outermost and lowest degree, in that they have no power to cause harm, but only to lead people astray and to seduce them into going a crooked (and wrong) path, and they lead them into water, or into filth in the forest, and into stagnant waters (or puddles and marshy places), and they blind their eyes, so that the person sees before him a straight and very beautiful road, or a village, or an inn, which is nevertheless untrue and false; and this is the meaning of the saying (of Solomon): What benefit does this wicked king (that is, Sammaël) derive from the fact that he practices his wickedness every day with his servants and hosts against people, so much so that they laugh (when they lead someone astray) and their voice is heard from afar? And this he does every day and every night, and derives no benefit from it; on the contrary, he will for this reason be punished in the future, for the holy and blessed GOD will slaughter him, as it is said (Isa 27:1): "At that time the LORD will visit with His hard sword the Leviathan, who is a straight serpent," meaning Sammaël, "and the Leviathan who is a crooked serpent," by which Lilith or Lilis is understood. On this subject, the little book Schechébath léket, number 23, under the title Keschafim veschédim, may also be consulted.

There is said to be among the devils one who is called קטב מרירי Kétef meriri, that is, a bitter pestilence (both words being read at Deut 32:24), concerning whom the following is read in Bammidbar rabba fol. 201, col. 4, at the end, and fol. 202, col. 1, in the 12th Parascha, on the words of Ps 91:6, "From the Kétef, that is, the pestilence that destroys at midday":

דכנן אמרי שד הוא ולמה קרי ליה קטב ל' אבא בר כהנא אמר דהוא בזא סגייה דיומא מן

ומת: That is: Our rabbis say that the word Kétef signifies a devil. But why is he called Kétef? Rabbi Abba, the son of Cabana, said (that he is so named from the word קטב Katáf, which means to cut and to split) because he cuts through (and divides) the course of the day from the beginning of the fourth hour until the end of the ninth hour, inasmuch as he holds dominion from the fourth until the ninth hour of the day. Rabbi Levi said (that he is so named) because he robs (or cuts through, that is, divides) the course of midday from the end of the fourth hour until the beginning of the ninth hour (for in Echa rábbathi, where this same fable also appears at fol. 296, col. 2, גזל gásel, which means to cut through, is read in place of גזל básel, which means to rob). He holds dominion neither in the shade nor in the sun, but between the shade and the sun. In his head he resembles a calf, and a horn goes forth from the middle of his forehead, and he rolls about like a barrel. Rabbi Hóna said in the name of Rabbi Joseph that he is made full of rinds, hair, and eyes. Rabbi Schimeon, the son of Lakisch, said that an eye is set upon his heart, and whoever sees it can never remain alive, whether man or beast; and whoever looks upon him falls down and dies. The Meríri, however, holds dominion from the 17th day of the month of June until the ninth of July. Hiskias saw him, fell upon his face, and died. Concerning this devil, one may also consult the book Médrasch Tillim fol.
40, col. 3, on Ps 91:6, and the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 115, col. 1, in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar, and the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol.
118, col. 4, numerò 842, as well as Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 158, col. 1, in the Parascha Nasô. The following is also read in the aforementioned passage of the book Médrasch Tillim:

רבי שילא בר רב יצחק מפקיר לספריא דיהוון מפנין לטליא מארבע שעין ועד תשע. רבי
יוחנן הוה מפקיר לספריא דלא ליהוון מחן לטליא מן שבעה עשר בתמוז ועד תשעה באב: הוי מקטב ישרו צהרים: That is: Rabbi Schéla, the son of Raf Yitzhak, commanded the schoolmasters to let the boys leave (school) from the fourth until the ninth hour. Rabbi Jochanan commanded the schoolmasters not to strike the boys from the seventeenth of June until the ninth of July; and this was commanded on account of the (devil) Kétef, who destroys at midday.

In the small Jalkut Rubéni, at number 116, under the title Othioth schel Aleph Beth, drawn from the book Zephúne Zijóni, mention is made of a strangely formed devil who is said to be called Bedárgon, and he is described there as follows: מִזִּיק אֶחָד הוּא נִקְרָא בְּדִרְגוֹן וְהוּא רֶק גָּדוֹל טֶפַח. וַיֵּשׁ לוֹ נִ' רִאשִׁים וּנ"ו לִבֹּבוֹת וְאֵיתָ בֵּיהֶם נִרְשָׁם כָּל אוֹתוֹת שֶׁל א"ב חוּץ מִן מ"ם ת' וְאֵם הוּא מִכָּה הָאָדָם מֵת הוּא וְאֵם הָאָדָם חוֹזֵר וּמִכָּה אוֹתוֹ מֵת הָאָדָם וְכו' וְעַל זֶה שִׁמְעָתִי אוֹמְרִים מִשֶּׁם הַמְּקוֹבֵל הָאֱלֹהִי מוֹהֵר"ר אוֹסְטְרֹפֶל מֵהַ שְׁהוֹכִיחַ הַנְּבִיא יִשְׁעִיָּה לְיִשְׂרָאֵל עַל מָה תָּכו עוֹד תוֹסִיפוּ סָרָה ר"ל ס'ר'ה 'בְּגִימָטְרִיא מִזִּיק בְּדִר"גוֹן אֵם כֵּן אֲחֻזָּתָם מֵרֵתוֹ לִהְיוֹת לוֹ דְּנִיחָא לִיהֵ בִּכְך כְּדִי שִׁימוֹת הָאָדָם ג"כ אֵתָם נִיחָא בִּזְהָ לִהְיוֹת לָכֵם לִכֵּן אָמַר עַל מָה תָּכו עוֹד. וְאַחֲרֵי הַלֵּךְ וּסְסַפֵּר דּוּגְמַת הַמִּזִּיק כָּל רֹאשׁ לַחֲלִי ר"ל שִׁישׁ לוֹ נִ' רִאשִׁים כִּמְנַיִן כ"ל וְזֶהוּ כ"ל רֹאשׁ לַחֲלִי וַיֵּשׁ לוֹ נ"ו לִבֹּבוֹת וְזֶה שֹׁאֲמֵר וְכָל לִבֵּב דוּי ו"כ"ל בְּגִימָטְרִיא נ"ו. גַּם יֵשׁ בּוֹ כָּל אוֹתוֹת א"ב חוּץ ג' אוֹתוֹת וְזֶה שֹׁאֲמֵר מִכָּה רֶגֶל וְעַד רֹאשׁ אֵין בּוֹ מ"ם אֵילוֹ ג' אוֹתוֹת מ"ם ה' ת' עוֹלָה מֵתָם. פִּצְעָה חֲבוּרָה טְרִיהֵ ר"ל ד"ת טֶפַח כִּי הוּא that is, there is a devil who is called Bedárgon, and is only one handsbreadth in size, and has fifty heads and fifty-six hearts, and upon him are written all the letters of the alphabet, or A.B.C., except for the letter Mem, that is, M, and Thau, that is, T. Now when he strikes a man, he (namely the Bedárgon) dies; but when the man strikes him back, the man dies, &c. Concerning this (devil), I have heard some say that they were informed (about this devil) by a Kabbalistic theologian, the Rabbi Ostórpel (and that he said to them as follows:) that the Prophet Isaiah rebuked the Israelites (and said to them in chapter 1, v. 6:) "Why should you be struck yet more, seeing that you only increase your apostasy" (or deviation, which is called סָרָה Sára); so the word Sára signifies, by גִּימָטְרִיא Gemátria (that is, by its numerical value), the devil Bedárgon (for the words סָרָה Sára and בְּדִרְגוֹן Bedárgon agree with one another in their numerical value, since each yields 265; and the Prophet thereby intended to say:) if that is so, then you have adopted the practice of this (devil), of striking him, for this is easy for him to do, so that the man may die; therefore it is likewise easy for you to strike one another. For this reason the Prophet said: "Why should you be struck yet more?" After this the Prophet continues and describes the form of this devil (when he says) כָּל רֹאשׁ לַחֲלִי Col rosch lachóli, that is, the whole head is sick; this signifies that he has fifty heads, according to the numerical value of the word כ"ל col (which yields fifty in its numerical value); and this is the meaning of the words Col rosch lachóli, that is, the whole head is sick. He also has fifty-six hearts, and this is what he (the Prophet further) says: וְכָל לִבֵּב דוּי Vecól lebáf dávvai, that is, and the whole heart is faint, for Vecól yields fifty-six in its numerical value. That all the letters of the alphabet, except three, are written upon him, is indicated by what the Prophet (further, v. 6) says: from the sole of the foot up to the head there is no מֵתָם Methóm, that is, wholeness, for in the word מֵתָם Methóm there are those three letters, namely the open Mem or M, and the closed Mem or M, and the Thau or T, which make up the word Methóm. (The three following words, פצע חבורה Péza, chabbúra, teriáh, that is, wounds, welts, pus (which are contained in the words "but wounds, and welts, and festering sores") signify, by their initial letters, the word טפה téfach, which means a handsbreadth, since he is only one handsbreadth in size.) Is this not once again a frivolous, indeed a senseless, exposition and perversion of Holy Scripture? One truly could not conceive of anything more foolish. But because a highly learned Kabbalist has said such a thing, the Jews must accept such foolishness as the word of God, and receive it just as readily as the Law of Moses, for it is written in the Talmudic tractate Rosch haschaná fol. 19, col. 1.: דברי קבלה כדברי תורה דמו : that is, the words which one has through the Cábbala, or oral teaching, are equal to the Law.

In the Talmudic tractate Gittin, fol. 67, col. 2, at the beginning of the seventh chapter, mention is also made of a devil who is said to be called Kordiacos and to harm anyone who drinks too much must from his wine press; and superstitious, foolish remedies are indicated there for how a person who is attacked by him may be helped again. To say nothing of other Jewish fooleries of this kind, which could be cited here.

As for the place of residence of the devils, Rabbi Bechai writes in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 90, col. 1, in the Parascha Vajischma Jethro, on the subject in the following manner: מן הידוע כי השדים ג' חלקים יש מהם שוכנים באויר בגלגלי היסודות והם המחלימים את האדם בלילה. ויש מהם שוכנים בקרבנו והם המחטאים האדם ויש מהם שוכנים בתהומות ים ואלטלא נתנה להם : that is, it is known that the devils are divided into three parts: some of them dwell in the air, in the Sphaeris or spheres of the elements, and these cause a person to dream at night; some of them dwell within us, and these are the ones who cause a person to sin; but some reside in the depths of the sea, and if the power were given to them to ascend, they would destroy the world. That Rabbi Bechai has noted here that some devils dwell among the Jews and incite them to sin, he does well; and experience also attests to the truth of his statement, for the terrible blasphemies which they utter against the most holy Trinity, and the mockery of the New Testament and of the holy sacraments, as well as the horrible cursing of Christians and of all peoples of the world, which has been discussed in the first as well as in this second part, do not proceed from the Spirit of God, but from the sworn enemy of God and of His true Christian Church, the wretched devil, who has possessed their hearts and utterly blinded them.

The evil spirits are also said to dwell in the north, concerning which it is written in the Jalkut Schimóni on Jeremiam, fol. 60, col. 1, numero 263, on the words of Jer 1:14, "From the north the evil shall be opened," as follows: ארבעה רוחות נבראו בעולם רוח פנת המזרח משם יוצא אור לעולם. רוח פנת הדרום משם טללי ברכה יורדים לעולם. רוח פנת המערב משם אוצרות שלג ואוצרות ברד קור וחום וגשמים יוצאים לעולם. רוח פנת הצפון בראו ולא גמרו שאמר כל מי שיאמר אני אלוה יכא ויגמור הפנה הזאת שהנחתי ה' הר נוטה צפון על תוהו ושם הוא מדורין של מזיקין ורוחות ושדים ולילית וטס That is: Four sides were created in the world: the side of the corner of the east, from which the light rises into the world; the side of the corner of the south, from which the dews of blessing descend into the world; the side of the corner of the west, from which the treasures of snow, and the treasures of hail, and cold, and heat, and rain go forth into the world. The side of the corner of the north God created, but did not complete, for He said: whoever shall say "I am God," let him come and complete this corner which I have left (unfinished). This is what is written (Job 26:7): "He stretches out the north over the void"; and there is the dwelling of the devils and the spirits, and from there they descend into the world, as it is said (Jer 1:14): "From the north the evil shall be opened." The like is also to be found in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 23, col. 1, in the Parascha Bereschith. And in Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman's commentary on the said Five Books of Moses, fol. 92, col. 3, in the Parascha Acharé moth, the following is read: יקראו שדים בעבור שמשכנם במקום : That is: They (the devils) are called Shedim because their dwelling is in a place that is Schadiúd, that is, desolate, like a wilderness; but chiefly they are found in the outermost ends of the earth, as in the desolate corner of the north, on account of the cold that prevails there.

Regarding the aforementioned two evil spirits, Aza and Azael: because they, as already mentioned, had complained against God and had refused to consent to the creation of Adam, they were cast down from Heaven, banished to dark mountains, and bound there with iron chains. Concerning this, the following is read in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 36, col. 2, in the Parascha Bereschith: כיון דאולידו בנין נטיל לון ק"בה : ואעיל לון בטורא דחשוכא דאיקרון הררי קדם וכפת לון בשלשלאות דפרזלא ואינון משלשלאין משקעין עד גו הטהומא רבא ותמן אולפי חרשין לבני נשא . בלעם כחמן פגם נטיל : 'חרשו ואוליף מינייהו באינון טורין הה"ד מן ארם ינחני בלק מלך מואב מהררי קדם וגו : That is: After they (namely the sons of God, who are mentioned in Gen 6:2, together with the daughters of men) had begotten children, the holy blessed GOD took them and brought them into the dark mountains, which are called קדם Hárre Kédem, that is, mountains toward the East, and bound them with iron chains. These chains are sunk down into the midst of the great abyss, and there these two (devils) teach men the arts of sorcery. Balaam also obtained his sorceries from that place and learned them from those same (in those same mountains). This is what is written (Num 23:7): Balak, the king of Moab, had me brought out of Syria, from the Harre Kedem, that is, the mountains toward the East, etc. On this subject one may also consult the great Jalkút Rubéni, fol. 28, col. 3, in the Parascha Bereschith, and the book Jelód Schlúrim, fol. 13, col. 1, as well as the book Emek hammelech, fol. 68, col. 1, in the 22nd chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba. And in the 110th chapter of the said book Emek hammelech, it is read at fol. 107, col. 3-4, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba, that Balaam, Job, and Jethro were counselors of King Pharaoh and great sorcerers, and that through magical knots which they produced by binding, they caused it to be impossible for any servant to leave Egypt. But when GOD thereafter dissolved their magical knots and the Israelites departed from Egypt and their scheme came to nothing, they fled and went to their homelands; and Jethro, as well as Job, converted from their sorcerous way of life. Concerning Balaam, however, the following is further read in that same place: אבל בלעם הרשע עמד במרדו מתחלתו ועד סופו ואפילו אחרי ברחו ממצרים נלחם עם משה רבינו ע"ה בכוש ואחרי שנלכדה העיר הלך לארצו לארם וכשראה גדולת ישראל במדבר אחרי צאתם נתקנא בהם שלא היו מועילים כל הכשוף והקסמים שהיה עושה כנגד ישראל והתחיל למרוט שערות ראשו ולהתגודד ולעשות קרחה בראשו ובזקנו שלא הועילה עצמו מה עשה הלך ופרח 'בכישופיו להרי חשיך והגיע לאותם אותם שלשלאות של ברזל שהם על רגלי עזא ועזאל וגו' That is: But the wicked Balaam persisted in his rebelliousness from beginning to end, and even after he had fled from Egypt he fought against our teacher Moses, upon whom be peace, in the land of the Moors. After the city (was conquered by Moses in the land of the Moors), however, he went back to his own land in Syria. When he then saw the glory of the Israelites in the wilderness, after their departure from Egypt, he envied them because his sorceries and divinations, which he had employed against them, had not turned out well, and he began to tear the hair from his head and to cut himself (or to gash himself) and to make his head and his beard bald, because his scheme had miscarried. What did he do? He flew through his sorceries into the dark mountains and came to those iron chains which lay at the feet of Asa and Asael, etc. There follows in that same place the account of how he had himself further instructed in sorcery by those devils and stayed with them for fifty days, until the Law was given on Mount Sinai, and how he had intended to drive the Israelites back into Egypt through his sorcery, which, however, he was unable to accomplish. It is also noted there what befalls those who betake themselves to these two devils, and how they must conduct themselves in doing so; all of which I have not wished to set down here on account of its great length.

From these two demons, King Solomon as well, who is said to have had all evil spirits under his dominion, is supposed to have learned some wisdom. Concerning this, the following is read in the book Emek hammelech fol. 132, col. 3., in the 13th Chapter, under the title Schaar réscha disér ánpin, on the words of 1 Chr 27:23, "Thus Solomon sat upon the throne of the LORD": אמרו חז"ל שמלך על התחתונים ועל העליונים אפילו על השדים והרוחות והעופות וענין אשמדאי מלכא דשידי יוכיח וענין מלכת שבא יוכיח שלחה את הדוכיפת באגרת אחריה עם כל העופות והיה שט על כסא של אור למעלה בישיבה של מעלה וגם למקום עזא ועזאל ללמוד מהם חכמתין נוכראין כדאיתא בסבא פ' משפטים בזהר ומי שיש לו חכמה יראה גדולתו That is: Our sages, of blessed memory, have said that he ruled over the upper and lower (creatures), indeed also over the demons, and spirits, and birds, and the affair involving Aschmedai, the king of the demons, proves this (of which mention was made in the 8th Chapter of the first part). Likewise, that which occurred with the Queen of Sheba also demonstrates it, to whom he sent a hoopoe and all the birds with a letter. He also traveled upon a fiery throne up into the highest academy (into Heaven), as well as to the place of Asa and Asaël, in order to learn foreign wisdoms from them, as is to be found in the Sohar in the Parascha Mischpatim. Whoever is wise, let him behold his glory in the second Chaldean translation of the little book of Esther, in the letter which Solomon wrote to the Queen of Sheba. This journey of Solomon to these two demons has already been treated in the 8th Chapter of the first part, pagina 361 and 362.

Regarding the aforementioned letter, which King Solomon is said to have written to the Queen of Sheba, the following is found in the Targum scheni Esther, or in the second Chaldean translation of the little book of Esther, fol. 440, on the reverse side, after the three Chaldean translations of the five books of Moses, in the Amsterdam printing, as follows: בתר דוד קם שלמה בריה ואמליך ויתיה קודשא בריך הוא על חיות ברא ועל עופי שמיא ועל רחשא דארעא ועל שידין ועל רוחין ועל לילין והוה ידע ממלל כולהון ואינון ידעין בממלליה דהיכדין כתיב וידבר אל העצים. וכד שפר לביה דמלכא שלמה בחמר שדר וזמין לכל מלכיא מדינחא ומערבא דהו סמיכין ליה לארעא דישראל ואגני יתהון בגו טרכונא בבית מלכותיה. ותוב כד שפר לביה דמלכא שלמה בחמר אמר לאיתאה חיות ברא ועוף שמיא ורחשא דארעא ושידין ורוחין ולילין למרקרא קדמוי למחזי רבותיה לכל מלכיא דגנין קדמויה וספרין דמלכא קריין יהון בשמחתהון וכולן לותיה : that is, After David, his son Solomon arose, and the holy, blessed God gave him dominion over the wild beasts, and over the birds of the heavens, and the creeping things of the earth, as well as over the devils and night-spirits, and he understood the language of all of them, and they understood his language, just as it is written (1 Kgs 4:33): And he spoke with the trees (though it does not say "with the trees" but rather "of the trees," and the Scripture is here falsified by the translator). Now when the heart of King Solomon was made merry (on one occasion) by wine, he sent and had all the kings of the east and west invited, those who dwelt near the land of Israel, and had them lodge in the palace of his royal house. And when his spirit was made merry again by wine, he commanded that they bring in those lutes, and cymbals, and drums, and harps with which his father David had played. But when his heart was once more made glad by his wine, he commanded that all the wild beasts, and the birds of the heavens, and the creeping things of the earth, as well as the devils, spirits, and night- spirits should be summoned to come before him, so that they might dance before him and behold his glory together with all the kings who lay before him; and the king's scribes called them by name, and they all gathered together and came to him.

Following this, on the reverse side of fol. 401, it continues that all the birds had appeared except for the woodgrouse, at which King Solomon became very angry and had it summoned; the woodgrouse, however, upon its arrival excused itself and told the king that it had been in a distant land called Saba, and had seen a city called Kitor, in which a woman ruled, and offered that if the king wished to send a letter to her and summon her, it would deliver the letter. Thereupon the king immediately wrote a letter to the Queen of Saba and fastened it to the woodgrouse's wing, which then delivered it to the queen. The letter was of the following content: מני מלכא שלמה שלם לכי שלם לדרבנייכי די אתידעת דאמליך יהי קודשא בריך הוא על חיות ברא ועל עוף שמיא ועל שידין ועל רוחין ועל לילין וכל מלכיא דמדינחא ומערבא דרומא וציפונא אתיין ושאלין בשלומי כען אין תצביין ותיתין ותשאלין בשלמי יקר סגיא אנא עביד לך מן כל מלכיא דגנין קדמי. ואין לא תצביין ולא תיתין ולא תשאלין בשלמי אשדר עלייכי מלכין ולגיונין ופרשין ואין תימרון מה מלכין ולגיונין ופרשין אית ליה למלכא שלמה חיות ברא אינון מלכין ולגיונין ופרשין ואין היטרין מה פרשין עופי שמיא אינון פרשין חיילי אינון רוחין ושידין ולילין אינון לגיונין דחנקין יתכון על ערסתיכון בגו בתיכון. חיות ברא קטלין יתכון בחקלא. עופי שמיא אכלין ית בשריכון מנכון: That is: Greetings to you and to your nobles from me, King Solomon. Be it known to you that the Holy One, blessed be He, has made me king over the wild beasts and over the birds of the heavens, as well as over the devils and spirits and night-phantoms, and that all the kings of the east and west, south and north come and pay their respects to me. If you are willing to come and pay your respects to me, I will show you greater honor than all the kings who lie before me. But if you are not willing to come and pay your respects to me, I will send kings and legions and horsemen against you. And if you wish to say, what kings and legions and horsemen does King Solomon have, the wild beasts are the kings and legions and horsemen. And if you say, what horsemen does he have, the birds of the heavens are the horsemen. The armies are the spirits and devils and night-phantoms; these are the legions that will strangle you in your beds, within your houses. The wild beasts will slay you in the field, and the birds of the heavens will devour your flesh from you. These are the words of the letter, and it follows thereafter that the queen sent him ships laden with gifts and pearls and six thousand lambs, and that the city of Kitor was as far from the Jewish land as a man can walk in seven years, yet the queen came to King Solomon at the end of the third year. Are these not laughable and senseless ravings? And yet the Jews wish to be considered the cleverest people in the world and regard all other people as fools, when there is no nation under the sun that is as foolish as they are.

The very same foolish fable is also to be found in the Alcoran, though with great alteration, concerning King Solomon; for in the 27th chapter thereof, which is called Súrato namli, that is, the chapter of the ants, the following is written: وَوَرَّتْ سَلِيمَانُ دَاوُدَ وَقَالَ يَا أَيُّهَا النَّاسُ عَلَّمْنَا مَنْطِقَ الطَّيْرِ وَأَوْثَقْنَا مَنْ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ أَنْ هَذَا لَهُوَ الْفَضْلُ الْمُبِينُ وحشر لسليمان جنوده من الجن والانس والطير فهم يوزعون ﴿٦﴾ حتي اذا اتوا علي واد النمل قالت نملة يا ايها النمل ادخلوا مساكنكم لا يحطمنكم سليمان جنوده وهم لا يشعرون ﴿٧﴾ That is: Solomon had inherited from David, and said: O ye people! we have learned the language of the birds, and have been given of all things; this is a manifest beneficence (of God). Once the army of Solomon assembled, consisting of devils, and men, and birds, and they were kept in such order that those at the rear did not mingle with those at the front; until they came to a valley of ants, whereupon an ant said (to the others): O ye ants! go into your dwellings, so that Solomon and his army may not crush you and trample you underfoot without their knowing it. After this it follows that the hoopoe was found to be missing from the assembled army, and that Solomon was greatly angered at its absence; but the hoopoe soon came and excused itself, saying that it had been in the kingdom of Sheba, where it had found a mighty queen who worshipped the sun. Thereupon Solomon sent a letter to the queen by means of the hoopoe, and she subsequently had a gift brought to him, which he was unwilling to accept; instead he told the messenger that he should return to those who had sent him, with the threat that he would soon visit them with so great a power as they would not be able to resist. And when he had said to his army who would bring him the royal throne of Sheba, a devil offered himself for the task and promised to bring it before King Solomon would rise from his seat; but another said that he could procure it in an instant, and that throne was brought before the king.

In the 21st chapter of the aforementioned Alcoran, which is called Surat ol-anbiái, that is, the Chapter of the Prophets, the following is read: وَلِسُلَيْمَانَ الرِّيحَ عَاصِفَةً تَجْرِي بِأَمْرِهِ إِلَى الْأَرْضِ الَّتِي بَارَكْنَا فِيهَا وَكُنَّا بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ عَالِمِينَ ﴿٥٠﴾ ومن الشياطين من يغوصون له ويعملون عملاً دون ذلك وكنا لهم حافظين ﴿٥١﴾ That is: To Solomon also went the strong wind, at his command, upon the earth; and we know all things. There are also some among the devils who were permitted (to dive for pearls for him), and besides this have performed other work for him; whom we have kept watch over.

From this we see that the Turks as well, according to the false teaching of their Alcoran, which is their Bible, are caught up in the same error as the Jews, as though King Solomon had understood the language of birds and had had devils in his service. But there is no cause for wonder at this, for Muhammad, from whom the Alcoran derives, maintained very close association with a certain rabbi and had much to do with him, from whom he learned many Jewish fables, which he subsequently inserted into the Alcoran. In order to set this plainly before the reader's eyes, I will place here some examples thereof.

In the Jalkut chádäsch, fol. 3, col. 4, under the heading Adam, the following is read: כשנהרג הבל היו אדם וחוה מצטערים שלא היו למודים בקבורה דא עורב אחד שמת אחד מחבריו לקח אותו וקברו וטמנו למדו ועשו כן להבל . ונתן הק"ב שכו לעורבים וכשמולידים בניהם רואין אותם לבנים וסבורין נחש הוא ובורחין והק"ב נותן להם מזונם בלי חסרון ועוד שהם שואלין מטר מהק"ב והק"ב עונה אותם : That is: when Abel had been slain, Adam and Eve grieved greatly, because they had not learned how one ought to bury someone; but they saw a raven which had taken one of its companions that had died and buried it, and they learned from it and did likewise with Abel. The Holy Blessed God also gave the ravens their reward for this, for when they have hatched their young, they see that they are white and suppose it to be a serpent, and flee away; but God gives them their food without lack. Moreover, they also ask God for rain, and He hears them. In the same manner it is also written in the Quran, in the fifth chapter, which is called Súrat ol-majidati, that is, the chapter of the table, that a raven made a pit in the earth and showed how Abel ought to be buried. The rabbis likewise teach that Abraham, in his father's absence, smashed all of the latter's idols and placed a club in the hand of the largest of them, so that his father upon his return would suppose that the great idol had broken the others, as this has been mentioned above in the 9th chapter of the first part, pages 490 and 491. This very same thing is also read in the Quran in the aforementioned chapter, which is called Súrat ol-anbiái; and many more such Jewish fables of this kind, which are found in the Quran, could be pointed out.

Regarding Solomon's power over the devils, the following is also written in the book Emek hammélech fol. 112, col. 3., in the 119th chapter, under the title Scháar Kirjáth árba: חירם מלך צור היה גם כן חכם גדול כי שלמה המלך ע"ה שלח שד אחד והוריד לחירם לשבעה מדורין של גיהנם ואחר כך העלהו והיה שולח לו פתקין מה שראה שם וזהו צור ויהי שלום בין שלמה ובין חירם : that is, Hiram, the king of Tyre, was also a very wise man; for King Solomon, upon whom be peace, sent a devil and had Hiram led down into the seven dwellings of Hell, and afterward brought back out again; and Hiram sent Solomon letters (informing him therein) of what he had seen. And this is the mystery (of the words 1 Kgs 5:12): And there was peace between Hiram and Solomon. But enough of this, and we must return to our previous subject and look further into where the devils are said to prefer to dwell.

To explain this further, one must know that, according to Jewish teaching, these beings (the devils) like to dwell near the rabbis, on walnut trees, in filth, under the eaves or gutter of a roof, and indeed, with all due respect, even in privies or secret chambers. That they like to dwell near the rabbis is shown in the book Zerór hammór fol. 97, col. 4. in the Parascha Tasria, where the following is written concerning them: הני מאני דרבנן דבלו מחופיא דילהון לפי שהם הולכים אחר החכמים כמו שבארתי בפרשת וישלח יעקב ולכן אמרו שהבגדים של רבנן שבלו קודם זמנם הוא מהם לפי שמתדבקים אליהם ולפי שתורתם משמרתם אין יכולין להם That is: that the garments of the rabbi become worn out (and torn) comes from the fact that they (namely the devils) rub themselves against them; for they follow after the wise men, as I have explained in the Parascha Vajischlach Jaacob. Therefore it is said that when the garments of the rabbis wear out (and grow old) before their time, this comes from those beings, because they draw near to those same rabbis. But because the Law protects the rabbi, the devils cannot overpower them or do them any harm. It is no wonder, however, that the rabbis' garments are torn in this manner, for in the Talmudic tractate Berachóth fol. 6, col. 1. it is written that at all times a great multitude of devils stands around them, and the words read as follows: אבא בנימין אומר אלמלא נתנה רשות לעין לראות אין כל בריה יכולה לעמוד מפני המזיקין. אמר אביי אינהו נפיש מין וקימי עלן כי כסלא לאוגיא. אמר רב הונא כל חד וחד מינן אלפא בשמאליה ורבבתא מימיניה. אמר רבא האי דוחקא דהוי בכלה מינייהו הוי. הני ברכי דשלהי מינייהו. הני מאני דרבנן דבלו מחופיא האי דוחקא דהוי בכלה מינייהו. הני כרעי דמנקפא מינייהו That is: Abba Benjamin says, if the eye were given the power to see, no person would be able to endure the sight of the devils. Abaye says, there are more of them than there are of us, and they stand around us like the earth thrown up from a dug trench around a plot in a garden. Rav Huna has said, each one among us (rabbi) has a thousand at his left side and ten thousand at his right side. Rabba has said, the crowding and pressing that occurs on the Sabbath (in our synagogues, where, even when there is ample space, one sits packed tightly together) comes from them (as they come to hear the sermon, as Rabbi Solomon notes in his commentary on this passage). The weary knees come from them. The wearing out (and tearing) of the rabbis' garments comes from the fact that they rub themselves against them. The bruised shins come from them. So also in the commentary of Rabbi Menachem of Recanati on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 143, col. 3., in the Parascha Acharé moth, the following is taught concerning the devils: תשוקותם הוא להדבק אצל תלמידי חכמים כדאיתא בברכות כי הם תאבים להדבק בה"ח

That כאשה המשתוקקת לבעלה. וכשדה בית השלחין הצמאה למים כי יש בהם פרצוף חמור is: their desire is to be near the wise men (rabbis), as is mentioned in the tractate Berachóth; for they have a longing to cleave to them, as a woman bears a longing for her husband, and as a parched field thirsts for water, because they (namely the rabbis) have a pleasing form.

I readily believe that the devils gladly dwell among the rabbis; yet this happens not on account of their pleasant appearance, but because they otherwise agree with one another in their conduct, for just as one reads in Schéva tal, fol. 9, col. 1, in the preface called Hakdáma ben méah schána: כל טבע יש לו חשק ותאוה לקרב ולדבק בטבעו וכל עורב למינו ואז"ל לא לחנם הולך זרויר אצל העורב, That is: every nature has a desire and longing to draw near to that which is of its own nature, and to cleave to it, and every raven goes to its own kind; and our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: the starling does not go to the raven without cause, but it happens because the raven is of its own kind; on which point the Talmudic tractate Báva Kámma, fol. 92, col. 2, and the book Cad hakkémach, fol. 17, col. 2, may also be consulted. Thus we may likewise say that it does not happen without cause that the devils so gladly dwell among the rabbis and all Jews, but that it happens because they agree very closely with one another in their wicked kind and nature: for the devils are enemies and blasphemers of the Holy Trinity; and so too are the Jews. The devils hate the Holy Scripture of the New Testament and the holy sacraments; the Jews do likewise. The devils hate the Christians and the Christian religion and everything that is Christian; and so too do our worst and declared enemies, the Jews, as has been shown and demonstrated above in the first part; and much else besides could be adduced in which they resemble one another.

That devils like to dwell in walnut trees can be seen in the Jalkut chádasc, fol. 108, col. 2, no. 52, under the title Keschafim, where the following words are read: לפי שהשרים מתחברים יחד תשעה תשעה ולכך סכנה למי שישן תחת אילן של אגוז שהרי השרים שרוים עליו לפי שכל ענף וענף שבאגוז תלויים בו תשעה עליו That is: since the devils gather together in groups of nine, it is dangerous when someone sleeps under a walnut tree, for behold, the devils dwell upon it, since on every single branch of a walnut tree there hang nine leaves. The very same thing is also to be found at greater length in the Sepher chasidim, no. 1153.

That they also dwell in filth is read in the little book Schechébath léket, no. 4, under the title Berachá ukelalá, from the Sohar, in these words: לא בעי בר נש דישדי טנופא קמי פתחא בגין דהמן שריא חד שירא ואנפי לקבליה דפתחא ואסתכי כל מה דעבדין בביתא ובכל מה דאסתבל אתלטיא.

That is: a person must not throw any filth before his door, since a devil dwells there who turns his face toward the door and sees everything that is done in the house. Everything he looks upon is also cursed, and he has three hundred and sixty-five servants.

Concerning their dwelling beneath the drain or eaves of a roof: this is taught in the Talmudic tractate Chóllin fol. 105, col. 2., and the words there read as follows: אמר אביי מריש הוה אמינא האי דלא יתבי תותי מרזיבא משום שופכי אמר לי מר: משום דשכיחי מזיקין. הנחו שקולאי דהוו דרו חביתא דחמרא בעו לאתפוחי אותבוה תותי מרזיבא פקעה אתו לקמיה מר בר רב אשי אפיק שיפורי שמתיה אתא לקמיה אמר ליה אמאי תעביד הכי א"ל היכי אעביד כי אותביה באונאי א"ל אר' בדוכתא דשכיחי רבים מאי בעית את הוא דשנית זיל שלים א"ל השתא נמי ליקבע לי מר זימנא ואפרע קבע ליה זימנא כי מטא זימנא איעכב כי אתא א"ל אמאי לא אתית בזמנך א"ל כל מילי דצייר וחתים וکیل ומנו לית לן רשותא That is: Abaje says, I had initially stated that one should not sit beneath a drain (of a house) on account of the water that is poured out; but the Talmudic doctor told me that this is done because devils are found there. There were (once) some porters who were carrying a barrel of wine, and when they wished to rest, they set it down beneath a drain, and a devil broke it (so that the wine ran out). The porters then came before the doctor, the son of Raf Aschi (and lodged their complaint with him), and he had the trumpets blown and placed that same devil under the ban. Thereupon the devil came to him, and he asked the devil why he had done this (and broken the barrel). The devil answered: I did it because it had been placed upon my ears. The doctor then said to him: what business do you have in a place where many people are found? You are in the wrong; go and pay for the wine. The devil replied: appoint me a fixed time and I will pay it; and he set him a fixed time. But when the time arrived, the devil failed to appear; and when he (subsequently) presented himself (and brought the money), the doctor said to him: why did you not come at the appointed time? He answered: over everything that is bound together, sealed, measured, and counted, we have no power to take anything from it until we find something that is free (or common property); that is why I could not bring it sooner. Such a fable may also be read in the 43rd chapter of the Maase-book, where it is likewise reported that the devil had slept beneath the roof eaves.

That they also dwell in falváveniá, in privies or secret chambers, is read in the Sohar of the Sulzbach printing, col. 29, in the Parascha Bereschith, in these words: רוחא חדא אית בכל בית הכסא דעלמא דשריא תמן ואתהני מההוא לכלוכא וטנופא that is, In all the secret chambers in the world there is one (evil) spirit, which dwells therein and takes its pleasure in that same filth and refuse. Likewise it is written in Rabbi Menáchem of Rekanat's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 143, col. 3, in the Parascha Achare moth, concerning the same, as follows: הכסא וגם בבית הכסא that is, They dwell in the wastelands, as well as in the secret chambers.

In the Talmudic tractate Schábbath, mention is also made at fol. 67, col. 1 of the devils that are found in the privy. And in the tractate Berachóth, the following is written at fol. 62, col. 1: כל הצנוע בבית הכסא נצול משלשה דברים מן: ההוא בית כסא דהוה בטבריא כי הוּ עיילי ביה בי תרי הנחשים ומן העקרבים ומן המזיקין. רבי אמי ורבי אסי הוּ עיילי בי חד וחד לחודיה ולא מתזקי אמרי להו רבנן לא מסתפיתו. אמרי להו אנן קבלה גמירין קבלה דבית הכסא צניעותא ושתיקותא קבלה דיסורי שתיקותא ומבעי רחמי. אבבי מרביא ליה אמרא למיעל בהדיה לבית הכסא. ולרבי ליה גדיא שעד בשעור מיהלף. רבא מקמי דהוה רישא טרקישא ליה בת רב חסדא אמגוז בלקנא . That is: Whoever is modest in the privy will be saved from three things (found therein): from serpents, and from scorpions, and from devils. When two people went together to the privy that was in Tiberias, they were harmed (by the devils) even during the day. Rabbi Ammi and Rabbi Asi each went in alone and suffered no harm; whereupon the Rabbis said to them: are you not afraid? And they answered them: we have learned a tradition, or oral teaching, as to how we must conduct ourselves so that no evil befalls us. The oral teaching concerning the privy is that one must be modest and silent. The tradition concerning chastisements is silence, and thereby one obtains mercy. Abaye raised a lamb for himself, which went with him into the privy (so that he would not be alone and the devil might harm him). He ought rather to have raised a young goat, for then one goat would have been exchanged for the other (and come in the other's place, since the devil is also called Säir, that is, a goat). Before Rabba became the head of the academy, the daughter of Raf Chasda rattled a nut in a flask for him (when he was in the privy). After he had, however, governed (as head of the academy), she made a small window (at the privy), and (when he sat thereupon) she laid her hand (through it) upon his head, so that the devil might do him no harm.

In the Talmudic tractate Gittin, it is read at fol. 70, col. 1 that the devil, who dwells in the privy, accompanies people when they leave it, and it is written there concerning this as follows: תנו רבנן הבא מבית הכסא אל ישמש מיטתו עד שישהא: שיעור חצי מיל מפני ששד בית הכסא מלווה עמו ואם שימש הויין לו בנים נכפין that is, our Rabbis teach that when someone comes from the privy, he shall not lie with his wife, but shall wait as long as it would take to walk half a mile, because the devil of the privy accompanies him; but if he lies with his wife, he will beget children who have the falling sickness. Now, since, according to the foolish Jews' opinion, the devil is to be feared in the privy, the following instruction is given to one who goes there, according to the teaching of the Talmudic tractate Dérech érez fol. 20, col. 1 of the Amsterdam edition: הנכנס לבית הכסא אומר התכבדו מכובדים קדושים משרתי עליון תנו כבוד לאלהינו ועמדו במקומכם וזהוהרו עורוני שמרוני המתינו לי עד שאכנס ואצא שזה דרכן של בני אדם: that is, whoever goes to the privy shall say (to the holy angels): be honored, you honored holy ones, you servants of the Most High; give honor to our God, and remain standing in your place, and be watchful. Help me, guard me, wait for me until I go in and come back out again, for this is the custom of the children of men. The very same is also to be found in the book Col bo fol. 99, col. 2, numero 87, under the title Berachóth.

The devil is also said to dance upon an ox between its horns, concerning which the following is written in the little tractate Maase Thora, printed at Amsterdam behind the booklet Ben Sira, fol. 38, col. 2: אל תעמוד לפני השור: כשהוא עולה מן הנהר מפני שהשטן מרקד לו בין קרניו, That is: Do not stand before an ox when it comes out of a river, because Satan dances between its horns. This is also to be found in the Maase-Book in the 120th chapter, and this superstitious matter is taken from the Talmudic tractate Pesachim fol. 112, col. 2, where the following is read: לא תעמוד בפני השור בשעה שעולה מן האגם מפני: שהשטן מרקד בין קרניו, That is: Do not place yourself before an ox at the time when it comes out of a pond (or standing water), because Satan dances between its horns. He is also said to leap about and dance before women who are returning from a burial, as was indicated above in the second chapter of this second part. And when a wicked man dies, three companies of devils are said to go before him, concerning which the following is read in Bamidbar rabba fol. 201, col. 1, in the eleventh Parascha: בשעה שנפטר צדיק מן העולם ג' כחות של מלאכי השרת מקדימין אותו בשלום הראשונה אומרת יבא שלום שניה אומרת ינוחו על משכבותם והשלישית אומרת הולך נכחו וגו' ובשעה שהרשע נפטר מן העולם ג' כחות של מלאכי חבלה מקדימין אותו הראשונה אומרת אין שלום אומרה אמר י"י לרשעים השלישית אומרת למעצבה תשכבון, That is: When a righteous man departs from the world, three companies of ministering angels go before him in peace. The first company says (from Isa 57:2): Peace shall come. The second says: They shall rest in their chambers. And the third says: He who walks uprightly before Him, etc. But when a wicked man dies, three companies of angels of destruction (that is, devils) go before him. The first says (from Isa 48:22): No peace. The second says (the words following in the aforementioned verse 22): Have the wicked, says the LORD. The third says (from Isa 50:11): In pain shall you lie.

No one should go out alone, so that he not be harmed by the devils; and in the Sohar, Sulzbach printing, on the first book of Moses, in the 387th column, it is written thus: כל מאן דאזיל יחידי ידען אפילו במתא באתרין ידען משיך עליה רוחא מסאבא בגין כך בכל זמנא לא יהך ברנש יחידי בארחא במתא אלא באתר דבני נשא אזלין ויתביין ותשכחין תמן ועל דא לא יהך ברנש יחידי אפילו ביממא כל שכן בלילה הואיל ובני נשא לא משתכחי : that is, anyone who at certain times goes alone, even in a city, in certain places, draws an unclean spirit upon himself; therefore a person should never go alone on the road in a city, but should walk in a place where people walk to and fro and are to be found. For this reason a person should not go alone even by day, and much less by night, where no people are to be found. The very same thing is also to be read in the book Nischmâth chájim, fol. 140, col. 1, in the 27th chapter of the third Maamar. Likewise it has been shown above, in this chapter, that one should not go out at night, because the Igereth runs about with a hundred and eighty thousand devils and has the power to do harm. And in the aforementioned book Nischmâth chájim, it is read at fol. 140, col. 1, in the 27th chapter of the third Maamar: לא יפוק בר נש יחידי בליליא וכל שכן בזמנא דסיהרא אתבריאא והות חסרה ואוקמיה דהא כדן רוח : that is, a person should not go out alone at night, and much less when the waning moon begins to wax again, and this is maintained on the grounds that the unclean spirit rules at that time.

Since demons roam about so intensely at night, it is forbidden to greet anyone during that time. On this subject, the following is taught in the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 44, col. 1: לאדם שיתן שלום לחבירו בלילה : That is: It is forbidden for a person to greet anyone at night, because we fear it may be a demon. The very same teaching is also found in the tractate Megilla, fol. 3, col. 1, where it is to be understood as referring to places outside the city, such as fields or mountains. Furthermore, it is forbidden to sleep alone in a house. Concerning this, the following is written in Rabbi Eliezer's little book Orchóth chájim, which was printed in Amsterdam after the little book Ben Sira, fol. 46, col. 2: בני אל תהי ישן יחידי בלילה בשום בית כי לילית : That is: My son, do not sleep alone in any house at night, for Lilith (or Lilis) is ready to cause harm; and when she seizes a person or a child, she brings it about that the same must depart from the world (and die). Likewise, in the Talmudic tractate Shabbat, fol. 151, col. 2, one reads: אסור לישן בבית יחידי וכל הישן בבית יחידי אהזתו : לילית, That is: It is forbidden to sleep alone, and whoever sleeps alone in a house will be seized by Lilis. Furthermore, one should also not drink water at night, as may be seen from what was cited above in Chapter 8 of the first part, p. 426, from the Talmudic tractate Pesachím, fol. 112, col. 1, as well as from the tractate Avóda sára, fol. 12, col. 2, since it is said to be very dangerous on account of the demon called Schapiri. Along with this, however, a superstitious remedy is indicated, describing how one should proceed in order to be permitted to drink.

No one should go to his wife unless he has first spoken with her; and this is written in the Jalkut chádasc fol. 22, col. 2, numero 27, under the title Ischa, from the Sohar on the fifth book of Moses, as follows: יש לו לאדם לדבר עם אשתו קודם שמותיחד עמה דשמא שידה היא וראיה מאסתר שנודמנה לאחשורוש במקומה שירה that is, a man should speak with his wife before he goes to her, for she might perhaps be a she-devil, and this is proven from Esther, in whose place a she-devil came to Ahasuerus. Concerning this Esther, the following is also read in the aforementioned Jalkut chádasc fol. 71, col. 3, numero 5, under the title Debora, from the cited passage of the Sohar: אסתר נקראת על שם שסתרה הקב"ה that is, Esther is so named (from Sathár, which means to conceal) because the holy blessed GOD concealed her from Ahasuerus and appointed a she-devil in her place (who was with him); but Esther went away and sat in the lap of Mordecai.

One should also wash one's hands early in the morning, because an unclean spirit has settled upon them. Concerning this, it is written in the little book Kizzur réschith chókma, which is also called Sepher Tappúche sabaj, under the title Scháar hakedúscha jom Jod Gimel, as follows: דוישן בלילה רוח הטומאה שורה: על ידיו ובהקיצו אין ראוי שיגע בהם במלבושיו או בשום מקום עד שיטול ידיו that is, when a person sleeps at night, the unclean spirit rests upon his hands. When he awakens, it is not fitting that he touch his clothes or any place with those hands before he has washed them. And in the Sohar of the Sulzbach printing, on the first book of Moses, it is read in the 387th column, in the Parascha Vajischlach, as follows: לית לך מאן דנאים בליליא בערסיה דלא טעים טעמא דמותא ונפקת נשמתיה מניה. וכיון דאשתאר גופא בלא נשמתא קדישא רוח מסאבא זמינא ושריא עליה דגופא ואסתאב והא אוקימנא מלה דלית ליה לברנש לאעברא ידיו על עינוי בצפרא בגין דהא רוח מוטא שריא עלייהו: that is, there is no one who sleeps at night in his bed who does not taste the taste of death and whose soul does not depart from him. When the body thus remains without the holy soul, the unclean spirit is ready and takes up residence upon that body, and it is defiled. See, I also confirm this: that a person ought not in the morning to pass his hands over his eyes, because the unclean spirit dwells upon them. The very same thing is also to be found in the aforementioned Sohar in the 411th column at the end, and in the following column at the beginning, in the Parascha Vajéche. And in the 29th column, the following is also read in the said Sohar, in the Parascha Bereschith: בשעתא דבר נש נאים רוחיה פרחא מניה ובשעתא דרוחיה פרחא מניה רוחא מסאבא זמין ושריא על ידיו דמסאב לון ואסיר לברכא בהו בלא נטילה. ואי תימא אי הכי הא ביממא דלא נאים ולא פרח רוחיה מניה ולא שריא עליה רוחא מסאבא וכד עאל לבית הכסא לא יברך ולא יקרא בתורה אפילו מלה חדא עד דיסחי ידיו. ואי תימא בגין דמלוכלכין אינון לאו הכי הוא במאי יתלכלכו אלא ווי לבני עלמא דלא משגיחין ולא ידעין ביקרא דמאריהון ולא ידעי על מה קיימא עלמא. רוחא הדא אית בכל בית הכסא דעלמא דשריא תמן ואתהני בההוא לכלוכא

sleeps, his spirit flies out of him; and when his spirit flies out of him, the unclean spirit is ready and takes up residence upon his hands and defiles them, and it is forbidden to speak a blessing with them if they have not been washed.
But if you were to say: if that is so, how does it come about that a person during the day, when he does not sleep and his spirit does not depart from him, and the unclean spirit likewise does not take up residence upon him, is nonetheless not permitted, when he goes to the privy, either to speak a blessing or to read so much as a single word in the Law until he has washed his hands?
If you were to say that this happens because the hands are unclean, you would be mistaken, and it is not so: from what should they be unclean? But woe to the people of the world, who do not observe the honor of their Lord (namely God) and do not know why the world endures! There is a (wicked) spirit in all the privies of the world, which dwells therein and takes its pleasure in that filth and refuse, and it immediately settles upon the hands of a person when he goes there; therefore one must wash them. That a person should be defiled by evil spirits during sleep is also confirmed in the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 141, col. 1, in the 27th chapter of the third Maamar, with these words: מה שאמר
שבשעת השינה אז באים הרוחות האלו לאדם בחלום ומטמאין אותו כך הסכימו כל החכמים האלהיים: that is, what he (namely Rabbi Schimeon ben Jochai in the Sohar) has said, that when a person sleeps the spirits come to him in his dream and defile him, is something upon which all the theologians are in agreement with one another.

All illnesses that suddenly befall a person are likewise said to originate from demons, concerning which the aforementioned book Nischmátb chájim, fol. 141, col. 2, in the mentioned 27th chapter of the third Maamar, states the following: וכן . . . וכך That is: Know that it is true that all illnesses which suddenly befall a person come from them (namely, from the evil spirits). You can sometimes see that a person who is entirely healthy and vigorous is swiftly struck by a misfortune, and his mouth is pulled completely crooked up to his ear, etc. Likewise, it is read in the Sohar, in the Parascha Tasria, in the 52nd column (that Rabbi Schimeon ben Jochai said): My son went one day into a house to bring something there, when a spirit passed before him and harmed him, and twisted his mouth; his eyes and hands were also contorted, and he could not speak, etc. Thus it is with all hidden, sudden illnesses, which all originate from the spirits.

This, however, may stem from the fact that devils are said to be able to see the sins of men written on their foreheads, concerning which the following is read in the small Jalkut Rubéni, numero 7, under the Title Masiki m: עוונותיו של אדם רשומים על המצח ונש רשות למיזקים הרואים אותן עונות הפתובים על מצחו של אדם. לכן צנה המלאך ללוט ואשתו ובנותיו אל מביט אחריה. וכן אירע לאשתו של לוט שהביטה מאחוריה וראה העוונות על מצחה והעניש אותה. ולכן רשם הק"ה לקנו אות כו מוצאו; That is: The sins of a man are marked upon his forehead, and the devils, who see those sins written upon a man's forehead, have the power to do him harm. For this reason the angel commanded Lot and his wife and his daughters that they should not look back. And thus it came to pass with Lot's wife, that she looked behind her, and (the angel of destruction) saw the sins upon her forehead and punished her (so that she became a pillar of salt). For this reason also the holy and blessed God marked Cain, so that no one who found him should strike him dead, by which the devils are to be understood. Concerning this, the following is also found in the Jalkut chadasch fol. 14, col. 2, under the Title Abraham, from the Sohar: פיון דמסבל לא חזי אפיה דגברא לא מסבל ליה פיון דאתהדרה דלוט אהדרת אנפא לאסמפלא מיד דמסבל לא חזי אפיה דגברא לא מסבל ליה פיון דאתהדרה דלוט אהדרת אנפא לאסמפלא מיד דמסבל לא חזי אפיה דגברא לא מסבל ליה פיון דאתהדרה דלוט אהדרת אנפא לאסמפלא מיד; That is: When the destroyer (Satan) does not see a man's face, he does him no harm. After Lot's wife turned her face back to look, she was immediately turned into a pillar of salt. That Cain feared the devils, lest they might kill him, is likewise taught in the book Nischmáth chájim fol. 114, col. 2., in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar.

The devils are also said to know the past and the future, and concerning this it is written in the great Jalkut Rubéni fol. 36, col. 1., at the beginning of the Parascha Lech lechá, as follows: אֵית שְׂדִים כְּגֹנָא דְּמִלְאַכִּים קְדִישִׁין דִּידְעִין מַה דְּהוּי וְמַה; דְּעֵתִיד לְמַהוּי; That is: There are devils who are like the holy angels, who know what is past and what is to come. The very same thing is also to be found in the small Jalkut Rubéni numero 3., under the Titel Masikim. But from where they know the future is taught in the little book Tuf haárez fol. 9, col. 2., with these words: כְּשִׁינְאָה גְּזִירָה טוֹבָה אוֹ רָעָה ה' הִכְרִז מִכְרִיו בְּכָל רְקִיעַ וְרִקְעָה וְזֶה אוֹמֵר: לָזֶה עַד מָקוֹם הַד' יְסֻדוֹת וּמִשָּׁם יוֹדְעִים הַשְּׂדִים הָעֲתִידוֹת וְנֶאֱפִילוּ הַמְּמוֹנִים עַל הָעוֹפֹת מִכְרִיִּים לָזֶה עַד מָקוֹם הַד' יְסֻדוֹת וּמִשָּׁם עוֹף הַשָּׁמַיִם יוֹלִיד אֶת הַקּוֹל וְבַעַל כָּנָפַיִם יֵגִיד דְּבַר; That is: When a good, or (God forbid) an evil judgment goes forth in heaven, it is proclaimed by a crier in each and every firmament, and one tells it to another, all the way to the place of the four elements, and from there the devils know the things to come. Indeed, even those appointed over the birds proclaim it, and from there the birds of heaven carry the voice, and those that have wings make the matter known. In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, at fol. 139, col. 4. in the Parascha Acharé moth, the following is also stated concerning them: וְרַעוֹן כֹּה שַׁעֲתִיד לִהְיוֹת כְּמִלְאכֵי הַשָּׁרָת יוֹדְעִין קֹא סִלְקָא דַּעֲתָךְ אֵלֹא אִימַר שׁוֹמְעִין מַה שַּׁעֲתִיד לִהְיוֹת כְּמִלְאכֵי הַשָּׁרָת וּבִאֹר הָעֵנָן כִּי לִפִּי שְׁהֵם שׁוֹכְנִים בְּאֹיִר בְּגַלְגְּלֵי הַיְסוּדוֹת מִבְּנִיִּים הָעֲתִידוֹת מִשְׁרֵי הַמְּזוֹלוֹת זֶה קֹל וְחוֹמֵר מַעֲפוֹת. אִם הָעוֹפֹת יוֹדְעִים הָעֲתִידוֹת מֵהֶם וּמִגִּידִים אוֹתָם בצפצופם ומן העופות יודעים המנחשים המכירים והבקיאים באותה חכמה קל וחומר לשדים שאפשר להם לדעת זה משרי המזלות ומה שיודעים השדים גם העופות אינו אלא עתידה (That is: They know what is to come, just as the ministering angels do. What! Do you mean that they know it? I would rather say that they hear what is to come, just as the ministering angels do. The explanation of the matter consists in this: since they dwell in the air within the Sphaeris, or spheres of the elements, they perceive future things from the princes of the planets, and all the more so from the birds. If the birds know future things from them and make them known through their cries, and if those who pay attention to the cries of birds, and understand them, and are experienced in such knowledge, know those future things from the birds, how much more is it possible that the devils know them from the princes of the planets. But what the devils and the birds know is nothing other than what is to happen in a short time, and not what is to happen long afterward, after many days.) Concerning this, the book Nischmath chajim fol. 117, col. 2. at the end, and fol. 118, col. 1. at the beginning, in the 13th chapter of the third Maamar, may also be consulted.

It was mentioned above in this chapter, from the Talmudic tractate Chagiga fol. 16, col. 1, and from other books, that devils are supposed to eat and drink just as humans do; but what their food actually consists of is shown by Rabbi Menasse ben Israel in his book Nischmath chajim fol. 118, col. 1, in the 13th chapter of the third part, with these words: אין הכוונה בזה מזון האדם כהאדם: המורכב מארבע יסודות והוא גוף גם מורגש הנה מזונו כיוצא בו עב גם אבל השדים שהם גוף רוחני דק הנה מזונם גם כן כיוצא בהם דק ואכילתם ושתייתם היא ריח האש ולחות המים כי חלק האש שבהם הוא מיבש חלק הרוח שבהם וצריך להחזיר הלחות ההוא שאבד ממנו וזהו אוכלן ושותין כבני אדם כי מזונו של אדם הוא על הדרך הזה כי לחות גופו מתיבש בתוכו לשתי סבות. האחת מפני האויר המקיפו מבחוץ והשנית מפני החום הטבעי המיבש לחותו מבפנים. ועל כן יצטרך למזון להחליף הלחות הלחות שאמר ממנו. וכזה הוא מזון השדים כי הם לוחכים לחות המים כענין שכתוב והמים אשר בתעלה לחכה וזהו ענין הקטורת שמקטירין להם: that is, the intention here is not that they should eat as a human eats, who is composed of the four elements and has a dense and tangible body, and who therefore must also have dense and coarse food; rather, the devils, who are a spiritual and subtle body, likewise have subtle food corresponding to their nature, and their eating and drinking consists of the smell of fire and the moisture of water; for the fiery part that is in them dries out the part of wind that is in them, and it is therefore necessary that the lost moisture be restored. Hence it is said that they eat and drink just as humans do, for the nourishment of man (and his sustenance) comes about in this manner: the moisture of his body dries out for two reasons, first on account of the air that surrounds him on the outside, and second on account of the natural heat that dries out his moisture on the inside; he therefore has need of food in order to restore the lost moisture. It is the same with the nourishment of the devils, for they lick up the moisture of the water, as it is written (1 Kgs 18:38): "And it licked up the water in the trench." And this is the nature of the incense that is burned for them, for the smoke rises upward, and that same moisture is their food, and they partake of it. All of this is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 4, in the Parascha Acharé moth.

That devils drink water can also be seen from the Talmudic tractate Chóllin fol. 105, col. 2. at the end, and fol. 106, col. 1. at the beginning, where the following is read: אמר אביי מריש הוה אמינא האי דשדי מיא מפומא דחצבא משום ציבתא : that is, Abaje says: at first I said (and believed) that whoever pours out (a little) water from the mouth of a jug (which is full of water for drinking) does so because small pieces of wood (or other impurities) are floating on top of the water; but the Doctor told me that it happens on account of the evil water (which is on top, from which the devils may have drunk, as is noted in Rabbi Solomon's commentary). Once, the young devil (who was in Raf Papa's house and served therein) went to fetch water from a river and tarried long; when he came back, people asked him: why did you stay away so long? He answered: I had to wait until the evil water (from which the devils had drunk) had passed by. In the meantime he saw that they were pouring out (a little) water from the mouth of the jug, whereupon he said: had I known that you were accustomed to doing this, I would not have stayed away so long, since in this manner all the evil and impure water is poured away.

The devils are also said to eagerly eat blood, concerning which it is written in Rabbi Menachem of Recanati's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 144, col. 2, in the aforementioned Parascha Acharé moth, on the commandment of Lev 17:13, that one must pour out the blood of captured animals or birds and cover it with earth: שלא יתקבצו שם כוחות הטומאה והשרים שהדם הוא מזונם : that is, so that the forces of impurity and the devils do not gather there, since blood is their food.

Since it has also been mentioned above in this chapter that devils die just as humans do, we wish to examine further what the overly clever rabbis write about this matter. In the book Nischmâth chájim fol. 118, col. 1, in the 13th chapter of the third Máamar, the following is read on this subject: ענין המיתה : שבהם שאמרו מתים כבני אדם הוא כשם שמיתת האדם הוא פירוד חיבור ד' יסודותיו כן מיתת השדים פירוד חבור יסודותיהם : that is, concerning their death, about which (the sages) have said that they die just as humans do, one must know that just as the death of a human being is a dissolution of the union of his four elements, so too is the death of the devils a separation of the composition of their elements, out of which they were created. Rabbi Bechai likewise agrees with this, when in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 139, col. 4, in the Parascha Acharé moth, he breaks forth in the following words: כשם שהמרכבים מארבע יסודות הוייתם וקיומם הוא חבור היסודות ובריאותם מזג היסודות וחולים כאשר יגברו זה על זה ומיתתם פירודם זה מזה כן הויתם השדים קיומם הוא חבור שני היסודות ומיתתם בהפרדם זה מזה : that is, just as the essence and the preservation of those things which are composed of the four elements consists in the union of the elements, and their health consists in the temperament of the elements; and those in whom one element overpowers another are sick; and the separation of those elements is their death: so too does the essence and preservation of the devils consist in the union of the two elements (out of which they were created), while their death consists in the separation of those same elements.

Because, according to the erroneous teaching of the Jews, the devils are supposed to be mortal, Noah is also said to have taken some of them into the ark, so that they might not all drown. Therefore, in the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 18, col. 1, at the end, and col. 2, at the beginning, in the Parascha Nôach, on the words of Gen 6:19, "And of every living thing of all flesh, you shall bring a pair into the ark, a male and a female, that they may remain alive with you," it is written as follows: מכל חי דרשו ר"ז לרבות השדים וצוהו יתברך שיכניסם אל התיבה ויתכן לפרש כי אי אפשר להם שישארו במקומם שהוא האויר בגלגלי היסודות לפי שהגזרה היתה לשחת כל בשר אשר בו רוח חיים וזה כולל כל בעלי נפש התנועה שעל הארץ והוסיף לומר עוד מתחת השמים שגזרת המבול היתה אף על הבריות שהן מתחת גלגלי היסודות והם השדים על כן הוצרך להכניסם : That is: the words "of every living thing" have been interpreted by our Rabbis, of blessed memory, to include the devils as well; and that the blessed God commanded Noah to allow them into the ark. It is also right to interpret them in this way, for it would have been impossible for them to remain in their place, which is the air of the elemental Sphærarum, or spheres, since God had resolved to destroy all flesh in which there was a living breath (as is to be read in Gen 6:17), under which was comprehended everything that had a moving soul upon the earth. And God said further (in the aforementioned verse 17, the words) "under heaven," since it had been resolved that through the Flood the creatures that were beneath the elemental spheres, namely the devils, should also perish. For this reason it was necessary to take them into the ark, so that they would not be destroyed in the air that is beneath the heavens. On this matter, the book Nischmáth chájim, fol. 115, col. 2, in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar, may also be consulted.

In the Maase-Book, in chapter 209 of the Frankfurt printing, but in chapter 110 of the Basel printing, a fable is found, that two devils made a wager with one another in Paris, and the one said he would bring it about that a certain rabbi by the name of Jeziel, who lived in Paris and had much dealings with a cathedral provost there, should become a Christian; the other, however, said he would bring it about that the cathedral provost should become a Jew; and it was agreed upon in this matter that whichever one lost the wager and could not carry out his promise should be killed and slaughtered by the other. Thereupon the one devil persuaded the cathedral provost to have himself circumcised, and afterward wished to slaughter the other devil in the garden of the aforementioned Rabbi Jeziel, where they made a great commotion by night, and for this purpose spoke the blessing which the Jews customarily recite at their slaughtering; the rabbi, however, would not permit this, but ordered that it had to take place outside the city of Paris in the open field.

A similar story, or rather fable, is also found in the Médrasch Tillim, fol. 19, col. 2. on the 20th Psalm, in these words: מעשה היה באותו הרוח שהיה בימי רבי אבא בר דוסאי שהיה עובר על המעין ובא אליו הרוח ואמר לו ראה הנה אני כמה ימים כאן ולא היתה בריה נזוקת כאן בשבילי ועכשיו מריב עמי רוח אחר ורוצה לטרדני מזה המקום והוא רע מאוד ולא יניח חיים לכל בריה. ואם רצונך שלא ינזקו הבריות סיעני עמי שאמיתנו אמר לו והיאך אסיעך אמר לו כשיבא אודיעך ובא אתה עם תלמידך ואמרו אתם הנו לו והבו הו • וישמע אתכם ויהא סבור שעל סיועו אתם באים ויפחד ואוכל להרגו. ועשו כן וראו כמין That is: There was an occurrence involving a spirit that existed in the days of Rabbi Abba, the son of Dosai, in which he (namely the Rabbi) was walking past a spring, when a spirit came to him and said to him: "See, I have been staying here for a long time already, and no creature (or no person) has been harmed by me in this place; but now another spirit is quarreling with me and wants to drive me away from this place, and that spirit is very evil and will let no creature remain alive. If you wish that people should not be harmed, then help me so that I may kill him." Thereupon the Rabbi said to him: "How then am I to help you?" And he answered him: "When that one comes, I will let you know, and you shall then come with your disciples and say: 'Give him a blow and strike him dead,' and he will hear you and think that you are coming to help him, and he will be frightened, and I will be able to kill him." When they had done this, they saw something like a drop of blood upon the spring, and they knew that he had been killed. From this it is to be seen that spirits also stand in need of help. These are the words of the Médrasch Tillim. But are these not once again strange Jewish fantasies?

Although it has been stated that the devils are subject to death, this is not understood to apply to all of them; for in the aforementioned book Nischmath chajim fol. 114, col. 2. in the 12th chapter of the third Máamar, the following is written: עד דמיעבר ק"בה רוחא מסאבא מעלמא דכתיב ואת רוח הטומאה אעביר מן הארץ לילית ונעמה ואגרת ומחלת דנפקן מסטרא דלהון כולהון קיימות עד : that is, all those spirits which derive from the side of Lilis, and Naama, and Igereth, as well as Machalath, remain continually alive until the Holy Blessed God will extirpate the unclean spirit from the world, as it is written (Zech 13:2): "And the unclean spirit I will remove from the land." Likewise, in the little book Schechechat leket, number 8, under the title Keschafim Veschedim, the following is read from the Sohar: אף על פי דשדין מיתין כשאר בני נשא מכל מקום לילית ונעמה : that is, although the devils die just as humans do, nevertheless Lilis, and Naama, and Igereth, the daughter of Machalath, remain alive until the Holy Blessed God will extirpate the unclean spirit from the world. We thus see from this that only the wives of Sammael, the chief devil, and those who descend from them, are to remain alive.

There is also said to be an unspeakable multitude of devils in the world, wherefore Rabbi Samiga writes in his book Mikrae kodesch, fol. 107, col. 2, in the 20th chapter, as follows: כל העולם מלא מזיקין ושרין ורוחין בישין , That is: The whole world is full of devils and evil spirits. This is also found in the book Nischmath chajim, fol. 115, col. 1, in the 12th chapter of the third Maamar, with these words: כל העולם כולו מלא רוחות ומזיקין , That is: The whole world is full of spirits and devils. In the Sohar, Sulzbach edition, one also reads in column 171, in the Parascha Bereschith, where mention is made of evil spirits, the following: ואי לון לבני נשא דאינון דלא ידעין ולא משגיחין ולא מסתכלין וכולהון אטימין דלא ידעין כמה מליא עלמא מבריינ משנין דלא אתחזון ומלין סטימין דאלמלא איהיב רשו לעינא למחזי יתהון בני נשא היך יכלין לאתקיימא בעלמא , That is: Woe to those children of men who know nothing, and heed nothing, nor consider anything, and are all stopped up: who do not know how full the world is of various creatures that cannot be seen, and that fill the hidden places. For if the eye were given the power to see them, people would wonder how they could subsist in the world. All of this agrees with what was shown above in this chapter, where mention was made of the devils who like to linger near the rabbis, from the Talmudic tractate Berachoth, fol. 6, col. 1, namely that no person in the world would be able to subsist if the eye had the power to see the devils. On this subject the book Zeror hamonor, fol. 97, col. 4, at the end of the Parascha Tatzia, may also be consulted. Likewise it stands written in the Jalkut Schimoni on the Psalms, fol. 108, col. 2, numero 772, on the words of Ps 55:19, "He has redeemed my soul in peace, so that none can draw near to me," as follows: אמר רבי יודן בשם רבי לוי אין בית רובע בחללו של עולם שאין בו תשעה קבין של מזיקין וכל אחד יש לו פרסא בעניהם כשם שיש לחמורים של טוחנים למה שלא יזיקו את הבריות. ובשעה שעוונותיו של אדם גורמין אותה הפרסא ניטלת מעל פניו של מזיק והוא מביט לאדם ומזיקו לכך מכריזים לפני האדם שלא יזיקו אותו המזיקין פדה בשלום נפשי מקרב לי שלא יקרבו לי המזיקים, That is: Rabbi Jódén said in the name of Rabbi Levi: there is no square place in the hollow expanse of the world in which there are not nine Kab (or quarters) of devils; and each one has a mask (or covering) before its eyes, just as the miller's donkeys have, so that they (do not see, and) do no harm to people. But when a person's sins cause it, such a mask (or covering) is removed from the devil's face, and then it looks upon the person and harms him. Therefore it is proclaimed before the person, that the devils shall not harm him: "He has redeemed my soul in peace, so that none can draw near to me," (namely) that the devils cannot draw near to me. This is also to be found in the Jalkut chádásch, fol. 109, col. 1, numero 66, under the title Kelschafim. It is, however, a wonder that Rabbi Levi did not also say that the devils wear muzzles, like vicious horses and donkeys, so that they cannot bite people.

The rabbis also teach that devils can be captured by humans, and that some of them have been captured, bound, and even imprisoned. That they can be captured is evident from what was cited above in Chapter 8 of the first part, pag. 424, from the Talmudic tractate Berachóth, fol. 6, col. 1. That they have been captured and bound is reported in the aforementioned Chapter 8, pag. 358, where it is also shown how the king of the devils, Aschmedai, was captured, bound, and brought before Solomon by Benája the son of Jebojada, at the command of King Solomon. Likewise, in the Talmudic tractate Jóma, fol. 69, col. 2, it is written that the devil who is called של ע"ז Jézer hará schel avóda sára, that is, figmentum malum idololatriæ, or the evil inclination toward idolatry, which entices to all evil, was captured; and there, upon the words of Neh 8:6, "And Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God, and all the people answered Amen, lifting up their hands, and they bowed down and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground," the following is written: ויצעקו אל ה' אלהים בקול גדול מאי אמור אמר רב ואי תימא רבי יוחנן בייא בייא היינו האי דאחריביה למקדשא וקלייה להיכלא וקטלינהו וכולהו צדיקי ואגלינהו לישראל מארעהו ועדין מרקד בין כלום יתבתיה לן אלא לקבולי ביה אגרא לא לא איהו בעינן ולא אגריה בעינן נפל להו פיתקא מרקיעא דהוה כתיב בה אמת אמר רב חנינא שמע מינה חותמו של הקב"ה אמת אותיבו בתעניתא תלתא יומין ותלתא לילוותא מסרוה ניהליהו נפק אתא כי גוריא דנורא מבית קדשי הקדשים אמר להו נביא לישראל היינו יצרא דע"ז שנ ויאמר זאת הרשעה ואיכד בהו דתהפוס ליה אשתמיט בינתא ממזיא ורמא קלא ואזל קליה ארבע מאה פרסי אמרו היכי נעביד דילמא חס ושלום מרחמי עליה מן שמיא אמר להו נביא שדיוה בדודא דאברא וחפיה לפומיה באברא דאברא משאב שאיב קלא שנ ויאמר זאת הרשעה וישלך אותה אל תוך האיפה וישלך את אבן העופרת אל פיה אמרו הואיל ועת רצון הוא נבעי רחמי איצרא דעבירה בעו רחמי ואימסר

That is: "And they cried out to God the LORD with a great voice. What then did they say? The Rav said, or if you prefer, Rabbi Jochanan said, (they spoke:) Woe! This one (the devil, the Jezer hara) is the one who laid waste the sanctuary, burned the Temple, slew all the righteous, and drove the Israelites out of their land, and he still dances among us. Have You (O God!) delivered him into our hands? But we do not wish to receive any reward on his account (if we overcome him), and we do not desire his wages." (While they were saying this) a slip of paper fell from Heaven, on which אמת emeth (or emes), that is, "truth," was written. Then Rabbi Channina said: "Learn from this that emeth, that is, the truth, is the seal of the blessed God" (and that through this little slip He signifies to us that He is willing to grant our request and deliver the Jezer hara to us). Thereupon they fasted three days and three nights, and he was delivered into their hands, and he came forth from the Holy of Holies of the Temple like a fiery young lion. Then the prophet (Zechariah, the son of Iddo) said to the Israelites: "This is the Jezer (that is, the figmentum malum, or the evil nature) of idolatry" (and that evil spirit who incites and drives people to idolatry and evil lusts), "as it is written" (Zech 5:8): "This is wickedness." When they had captured him, a hair was pulled from his head, and he cried out so loudly that his voice carried four hundred miles. Then they said: "What shall we do? Perhaps (God forbid) they might take pity on him in Heaven" (because he cries out so pitifully). And the prophet said to them: "Cast him into a leaden pot and cover the mouth (or the opening) of that pot with lead, for lead draws the voice into itself" (so that it cannot be heard far away, so that even if he cries out loudly, he will not be heard in Heaven and they will not take pity on him), "as it is said" (Zech 5:8): "This is wickedness, and he cast her into the ephah" (which was a certain measure used for measuring grain) "and laid the lump of lead over the opening" (as a lid). Thereupon they said: "Since this is a favorable time (in which we can obtain our desire from God), let us pray to God for grace concerning the Jizra daavéra" (that is, the evil spirit who causes people to sin); and they prayed for grace, and he was delivered into their hands. Then he (the Jezer hará, the captive) said to them: "Take heed, for if I perish, the whole world will perish" (since through me the desire and drive for the propagation of the species is awakened in all creatures and proceeds from me; therefore, when I am dead, no such desire will exist any longer, and all creatures, for lack of reproduction, must perish). Then they bound him for three days (to test whether he had spoken the truth) and searched throughout the entire land of Israel for an egg that should have been laid on that very day, and found none (because the warmth in creatures had ceased through the imprisonment of the Jézer hará, as Rabbi Solomon writes concerning this). Thereupon they said: "What shall we do? If we kill him, the world will perish; if we pray to (God) for grace regarding the half (that He let the Jézer hará rule only half as much as before), one does not grant half (of a thing) in Heaven." And they smeared his eyes with antimony (so that he became blind, or they put out his eyes, as the Chaldaic words found here are explained in the commentary in the Talmudic tractate Berachoth fol. 55, col. 1) and let him go. This foolish fable is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin fol. 64, col. 1.

This wretched devil, with whom the Jews dealt so harshly, must therefore have been the chief devil Sammaël, who, as was mentioned above in the 18th chapter of the first part, is called Jézer hará. Likewise, concerning this same Sammaël, it stands written in the little book Tuf ba'árez fol. 32, col. 3. that he said to God: רבנו של עולם הבנות בנותי והבנים בני וכל אשר אתה רואה לי הוא כאחר שחאני גורם להם האות המיטגל לכן הם באים בעולם אמר לו הק"ב רשע ובעבור שאני הייתי יודע שעתיד אתה לומר כאלה הדברים לכן צויתי לאברהם אוהבי שימול כל יליד ביתו וגו' (That is: O Lord of the world! The daughters of mankind are my daughters, and the sons of the same are my sons, and everything you see is mine, since I cause in them the desire for cohabitation and for the propagation of their kind; therefore they come into the world. Then the Holy Blessed God said to him: You wicked one, since I knew that you would bring forward such words, I therefore commanded Abraham, who loves me, that he should circumcise all those born in his house, etc., and that your portion should be the foreskin, since you arouse the desire for the increase of the race.) We see from this, therefore, that according to the teaching of the Jews, all desire for the propagation of the race, even within marriage, is supposed to originate from the devil Sammaël, who arouses the lust; and likewise that all animals, according to the content of the cited words of the Talmud, multiply through his impulse. As for the claim that a hair was supposed to have been torn from his head, it can be seen from what was cited above in this chapter from the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 130, col. 1., as well as from Sepher chasidim numero 1155., that male devils are supposed to have hair on their heads, while the females are supposed to have bald heads. Likewise, concerning those devils who are called Lilin, that is, night-phantoms, it stands written in the book Emek hammelech fol. 140, col. 2., in the 30th chapter, under the title Scháar réscha diseránpin, as follows: הכתה הנקראת לילין הם מלאים שערות That is: The troops of devils who are called Lilin, that is, night-phantoms, are full of hair from their head down to their feet, but on their head they have no hair; and their entire body and their face is full of it.

In the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, in the 45th chapter, the following ridiculous fable is also read concerning an imprisoned devil: כל מי שהיה נושק את העגל בכל לבו היו שפתיו נעשות של זהב ושבת לוי היו הורגין אותו עד שנפלו מישראל כשלשה אלפי איש שלח הק"ב חמשה מלאכים להשחית את כל ישראל ואלו הן קצף אף חמה משחית חרון שמע משה ויצא לקראת אברהם יצחק ויעקב ואמר אם אתם שבני העולם הבא עמדו לפני בשעה הזאת שהרי בניכם ניתנו כצאן לטבחה ועמדו שם לפני שלשה האבות אמר משה לפני רבון כל העולמים לא כך נשבעת לאלו להרבות את זרעם ככוכבי השמים שנ' זכור לאברהם ליצחק לישראל וגו' ובזכות שלש האבות נעצרו ג' מלאכים מישראל קצף אף וחמה ונשתיירו ב' אמר לפניו רבוננו של עולם למען השבועה שנשבעת להם עצור משחית מישראל שנ' אשר נשבעת להם בך ונעצר המשחית שנ' והוא רחום יכפר עון ולא ישחית. ועוד אמר משה לפני למען השבועה שנשבעת לי עצור חרון מישראל שנ' שוב מחרון אפך ומה עשה משה חפר בארץ ככיה דירה גדולה בנחלת בני גד וטמן חרון אף בארץ כאדם שהוא חבוש בבית האסורים ובכל זמן שהיו ישראל חוטאין הוא עולה ופוער את פיו לנשוק ברוחו ולהשחית את ישראל לפיכך נקרא שמו פעור והיה משה מזכיר עליו את השם ומורידו למטה לארץ. כשמת משה מה עשה הק"ב נתן את קברו כנגדו כל זמן שישראל חוטאין והוא פוער את פיו לנשוק ברוחו להשמיד את ישראל הוא רואה קברו של משה כנגדו הוא מתפחד וחוזר לאחריי שפ' ויקבור That is: Every one who kissed the (golden) calf (of which mention is made in Exod 32) with his whole heart had his lips turned to gold, and the tribe of Levi slew such a one, until about three thousand men of Israel had fallen (and been killed). Then the holy blessed GOD sent five (evil) angels, namely Kézeſ, Aſ, Chéma, Máschchith, and Cháron, to destroy all of Israel. But when Moses heard this, he went to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and said to them: if you are children of eternal life, then stand before me here at this hour, for behold, your children have been given over like sheep to the slaughter. And the three patriarchs placed themselves before him, and Moses spoke to GOD: O Lord of all the world! Did you not swear to these (three) that you would multiply their seed like the stars in the heavens, as it is said (Exod 32:13): Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, etc. And thereupon, on account of the merit of the three patriarchs, three (evil) angels, namely Kézeſ, Aſ, and Chéma, were restrained from Israel, and two remained. Then he spoke further to GOD: O Lord of the world! Restrain Máschchith also from Israel, on account of the oath which you swore to them, as it is said (in the aforementioned place, Exod 32:13): To whom you swore by yourself; so that Máschchith (that is, the destroyer, or corrupter) might be restrained, as it is said (Ps 78:38): But He was merciful, and forgave the iniquity, and did not destroy them. Furthermore Moses said to GOD: Restrain Cháron (that is, the fury, or wrath) also from Israel, on account of the oath which you swore to me, as it is said (Exod 32:12): Turn from Cháron appécha, that is, the fury of your wrath. What did Moses do? He dug a pit in the earth in the inheritance of the children of Gad, like a great dwelling-house, and buried the Cháron of wrath in the earth (in that same pit), just like a man who is bound in a prison. Now as often as the Israelites sinned, Cháron climbed up out of his hole and opened his mouth wide to bite the Israelites in his spirit (that is, in his mind, or in his thoughts) and to destroy them; for which reason he is called Péor (from Paár, which means to open wide). But Moses invoked the name of GOD (namely the Schem hamphorásch) over him, and thereby caused him to have to descend back down into the earth (and to cease his gaping). But what did GOD do when Moses had died? He placed the grave of Moses directly opposite him. Now as often as the Israelites sin and he opens his mouth wide to bite and destroy them in his spirit, he sees the grave of Moses opposite him and is afraid, so that he retreats again, as it is said (Deut 34:6): And He buried him in the valley, opposite the house of Peor. This Jewish fantasy is also found in the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 114, col. 2, in the Parashah Kitifla. The evil spirit Charon must therefore remain sitting in his pit like a prisoner, and even if he were ever so greatly embittered against the Jews and opened his maw against them and bared his teeth at them, he can still do nothing to them; all his designs are in vain, and he must cower and lie down before the grave of Moses like a dog before his master. O Jewish foolishness!

To conclude this chapter, I must point out that just as the Jews believe that in the future the Hell will be purified and sanctified and drawn into Paradise, and that the damned will also be rescued from hellish torment and transferred into Paradise, so too they are of the unwavering opinion that the devils will likewise be cleansed of their evil nature and transformed into holy angels. Hence it is written in the book Les árjeh fol. 68, col. 2., from the book Asaráb maamaróth, as follows: לעתיד לבוא יטהר יצר הרע ונעשה מלאך קדוש ואף גיהנם יטהר : ויתוסף על גבול של גן ערן that is, in the future the Jézer hará, that is, the figmentum malum, or the evil inclination (by which Satan is understood), will be purified and made into a holy angel. So too will Hell be cleansed and added to the borders of Paradise. And this is also to be found in the small Jalkut Rubéni numero 2. under the title Gebinnom. In the Jalkut chadasch, fol. 66, col. 1. numero 89. under the title David, the following is also read: כוונת שלמה מה : שנשא בת פרעה לגיירה כי ידע שכל כוחות הטומאה עתידות לחזור לקדושה : that is, the intention of Solomon in taking Pharaoh's daughter as his wife was to bring her to the Jewish faith, for he knew that all the powers of impurity (that is, all unclean spirits) were destined to become holy again. And at fol. 184, col. 4. numero 79. under the title Likkútim, it is taught from the Galánte: כל כחות הטומאה לא יהיו בטלים לגמרי לעתיד אלא יתמתקו ויחזרו לקדושה וכן סמאל יבטלו אותיות ס"מ ואותיות אל ישארו ויחזרו לקדושה : that is, none of the powers of impurity will entirely perish in the future; rather, they will be sweetened and return again to holiness. Likewise, in the name of Sammaël, the letters סמ Sam (which mean poison) will cease, and the letters אל (which signify strong, as well as GOD) will remain and return again to holiness.

Furthermore, it also stands written in the book Nischmách ádam, fol. 18, col. 1, in the 5th chapter, the following: קדוש שהיה מלאך הרע שהיה מלאך קדוש מצד הגבורה נתחבר למרכבה טמאה על ידי שמשך עליו זוהמת הנחש ונתן כח ועוז ותעצומות להקליפות ונעשה היצר הרע חזק להתגבר על האדם ולא יטהר היצר הרע שהוא מלאך המות עד ביאת משיח צדקנו בסוד בלע המות לנצח ולא אמר בלע מלאך המות רק המות יבולע וישאר מלאך קדוש כמו שהיה קודם חטא אדם הראשון כי על ידי אדם נתקלקל ועל ידי בן דוד יתוקן בסוד אדם וודו משיח כי משיח יטהר זוהמת הנחש וסי' נחש בגימטריא משיח יבלע הנחש That is: the foolishness of Adam caused the Jézer hará, that is, the evil disposition and nature (namely Satan), who was a holy angel on the side of strength, to attach itself to the unclean chariot, inasmuch as it drew the impurity of the serpent upon itself and gave the Keliphóth (or Keliphos, that is, husks, by which the evil and unclean spirits are to be understood) power, strength, and force; and the Jézer hará, or the evil disposition, became so strong that it overpowered Adam. The Jézer hará, however, which is the angel of death, will not be purified until the coming of the Messiah, who is our righteousness, according to the mystery of the words of Isa 25:8: "He will swallow up death (or destroy it) forever"; and it does not say "He will destroy the angel of death," but rather "death will be swallowed up," and a holy angel will remain, just as he was before the sin of the first man; for through Adam he was corrupted, and through the son of David (that is, the Messiah) he will be restored, according to the mystery of the name אדם Adam, each letter of which forms a distinct word, namely: אדם: אדם Adam, דוד David, משיח Maschiach, or Messiah; for the Messiah will cleanse the impurity of the serpent, and this is indicated by the word נחש Náchach (which means "the serpent"), which yields the same numerical value as משיח Maschiach, that is, Messiah (namely 358), by which it is signified that the Messiah will destroy the serpent, just as Galante treats this matter at length. I have likewise made detailed mention of this mystery in my book called Schúbba Jisrael.

Chapter IX.

In which it is shown how greatly the Christian authorities are despised by the Jews, and in what manner it is forbidden to them to bring charges against one another before those same authorities; as well as what is to be made of an oath which a Jew swears before a Christian authority.

It is true that Rabbi Salman Zevi writes in his little book, the Jewish Theriac, fol. 1, col. 2, in the first chapter, numero 1, that Christians hold their government from God, and rightfully rule over the Jews, and that the Jews ought to render full obedience to emperors, kings, princes, and lords, and to honor them, and not to despise their rule. But just as that same author was not sincere in many other matters, as has been clearly demonstrated at various points in the first part, so too does this statement of his not come from the heart, as has been shown with the utmost clarity in the conclusion of the 16th chapter of the first part, from pagina 722 to 726, in what manner the high Christian potentates and authorities are reviled and defamed by the ungrateful Jews. Indeed, it has been demonstrated that they teach that the Christians, and all other peoples, derive their government from the devil. For this reason they also call the Christian realm, out of unspeakable and embittered hatred, by many shameful and contemptuous names: the godless realm, the swine, the dog, the serpent, the spider, and even Sammaël, which is the name of the chief devil. All of this has been treated at length in the 17th chapter of the first part. From all of which it is easy to gather, and to conclude by reason, what the disposition of such blasphemers is toward the high Christian authority, even though they know masterfully how to flatter it, to stroke the fox's tail, and to present themselves to its face as though they were the most pious and upright of people, while they carry nothing but gall and poison in their hearts.

This is also confirmed by the converted Dietrich Schwab, in his Jüdischer Deckmantel ("Jewish Cloak"), in the 8th chapter of the first part, paginâ 64 and 65, where he says: As far as the Christian authorities are concerned, it is not without truth that they (namely the Jews) know how to conduct themselves outwardly toward and before those authorities in such a manner, offering themselves in humility and servility, and presenting themselves so hypocritically in their old fashion, that one might well consider them more pious and better than Christians, and thus deceive many who entrust them with life and property, and often more than they trust Christians. Yet, as far as what is inwardly in the heart is concerned, there is nothing more than hatred and envy, even toward those whom they know so well how to flatter, so that the royal prophet David rightly says of them: "They speak peace with their neighbor, but evil is in their hearts" (Ps 28:3). When it happens that there is a Christian authority who, for legitimate reasons, cannot well tolerate them or is hostile to them, such an authority, whether princes or counts, stewards or officials, they call רשעים Reschóim, evildoers; they curse them and say to them כפרה Cappóro; like reschóim or פסול שורה pósul Seróro, that is, they shall bear the sin on my account, those who are evildoers, or, what a wicked lordship that is. They also pray in their synagogues that such an authority may die and be removed; and when such an authority dies, they make a Púrim (carnival) with feasting and drinking, and are exceedingly merry over it. But when they receive an authority who is favorable and well-disposed toward them, such a one must also receive something from them; then they say, what a well-bred authority that is, it gladly takes Schóchad (gifts), it is like Jehúdim, like Jews, להבדיל leháfídl, yet with a distinction: by which words they wish to indicate that they are still better than such an authority, however high its rank may be. Is that not a great arrogance, to elevate oneself above emperors, kings, princes, and lords? These are the words of Dietrich Schwab.

The convert Samuel Friedrich Brenz writes in his work Jüdischer abgestreiffter Schlangenbalg, paginâ 11, 12, at the beginning of the third chapter, on this matter as follows: Because the Jews, by the righteous judgment of God, have lost their dominion and scepter, and must live under the protection and shelter of Christian authority, this grieves them deeply at heart; yet outwardly they conduct themselves as obedient subjects, while secretly they curse and execrate their rulers. If a Jew appears before the authorities and is not admitted, the Jew says: מלכות זדון מהרה תעקר Umálchus sódon mébera teákker, that is, his government shall be uprooted from the root, and such authority they call a wanton authority. Furthermore, the same author writes at paginâ 21, in the 4th chapter, as follows: When they (namely the Jews) hear that a Christian authority, which previously had no Jews dwelling among them but has now admitted Jews, the Jews say against that same lordship that it has no אמונה emúna, that is, it has no true faith in Christ, and that the same lordship knows full well that the faith of the Jews is righteous, since it shows such רחמנות rachmónus, that is, mercy toward them. From this we see what the Jewish people are plotting against the great lords and high authorities, and how they defame and despise them; they do as they please.

That the Jews curse Christian authorities in the most extreme manner, and repeatedly call upon God for their complete destruction, has been sufficiently demonstrated above in the 2nd chapter of this second part. The truth of this may also be reasonably concluded from the book of Rabbi Mosche Bar Majemon, Jad chasaka, in the fourth part, fol. 269, col. 1, in the 26th chapter, numero 1, under the title Hilchoth Sanbédrin, where the following is taught: כל המקלל דיין מדייני ישראל עובר בלא תעשה שנאמר אלהים לא תקלל: וכן אם קלל הנשיא אחד ראש הסנהדרין הגדול או המלך הרי זה עובר בלא תעשה שנאמר ונשיא בעמך לא תאור. ולא דיין ונשיא בלבד אלא כל המקלל אחד מישראל לוקה שנאמר לא תקלל חרש שאפילו זה שאינו : That is: Whoever curses one of the Israelite judges transgresses a prohibitory commandment, as it is said (Exod 22:28): You shall not curse the judges. Likewise, whoever curses a prince who is the head of the great Synedrii or council, or a king (of Israel), also transgresses a prohibitory commandment, as it is said (in the aforementioned verse 28): And you shall not revile the ruler among your people. But it is not only forbidden to curse an (Israelite) judge and prince; rather, whoever curses any Israelite shall be flogged, as it is said (Lev 19:14): You shall not curse the deaf. For whoever curses one who does not hear it and is not troubled when he is cursed shall be flogged on account of the curse with which he curses him. The same is also to be found in the book Shulchan áruch, in the part called Chóschén hammischpath, numero 27. And since it is only forbidden to curse Jewish kings, princes, and judges, as well as all other Jews, while other peoples are entirely excluded, it follows from this that they are permitted to curse all Christians of high and low estate, which they also, as noted, actually and in fact do.

The counselors of great potentates and lords, who are called in Hebrew יועצים Joazim, that is, advisors or counselors, they call in a malicious manner יחזצים Jóchazim, which derives from חצה Chazá and means "to divide"; and by this they intend to convey that they wish such counselors to become divided and discordant in their deliberations, as may be seen on page 12 in the third chapter of the aforementioned stripped Jewish serpent-skin. A scribe is called in the Hebrew language סופר Sópher, but the Jews perversely and wantonly corrupt this word, and call a territorial, official, municipal, or chancery scribe כופר Cópher, that is, a denier of God, instead of Sopher, as is to be found in the aforementioned Jewish serpent-skin on page 8 in the second chapter; and I myself have found this word, used in this sense, in their letters, which were given to me to read two years ago. Likewise, a Christian king is called by them an outright dog, for in the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára fol. 46, col. 1, it is written: when one wishes to say פני המלך pené hammélech, that is, the face of a king, he should say פני הכלב pené hakkélef, that is, the face of a dog. This is also to be read in the book Pesikta sotárta fol. 69, col. 4, in the Parascha Ekef.

Since the Christian authorities are held in such contempt among the Jews, it is also forbidden for them to bring charges against one another before those authorities or to conduct legal proceedings against one another, unless one party has an opponent who refuses to appear before the Jewish judge, in which case he is permitted to bring that person before the Christian authorities. That it is forbidden for them to bring charges against one another before the Christian authorities is clearly evident from the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Chóschén hammischpath, number 26, where the words read as follows: אסור לדון בפני דיניי עכ"ם ובערכאות שלהם אפילו בדין שניהם כדיניי ישראל ואפילו נתרצו ב' בעלי-דינים לדון בפניהם אסור וכל הבא לידון בפניהם הרי זה רשע וכאילו חרף וגדף והרים יד בתורת משה רבינו ע"ה, That is: It is forbidden to conduct a legal matter before the idolatrous judges and their courts, even in a case where they would judge according to the laws of the Israelites; even if both contending parties consented to conduct the proceedings before them, it is nonetheless forbidden. And whoever goes before them to seek justice is a wicked person, and does as much as if he had blasphemed and cursed, and raised his hand against the Law of Moses, our teacher, upon whom be peace. After this there follows in the same place, in the annotation or remark thereon: ויש כיד בית דין לנדותו ולהחרימו עד שיסלק יד עכ"ם מעל חברו, That is: And it lies within the power of the (Jewish) court to place such a person under the ban until he brings it about that the idolatrous (court) withdraws its hand from his fellow or neighbor. With this also agrees what Rabbi Jerúcham teaches in his Sephér meschartsím, fol. 11, col. 1, under the title Nathíf ríschon chélek Jod beth, when he says: אחד מבעלי דיניי, שרוצה לדון בערכאות של גוים אין שומעין לו וכתב רב אלפס בתשובה שצריך לנדותו, That is: If one of the contending parties wishes to seek justice before the tribunals of the Gójim or heathens (that is, Christians), he is not heard. And *Raf Alphe*s has written in his responsum that such a person is to be placed under the ban.

In Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon's book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, fol. 248, col. 1, in the 26th chapter, numero 7, under the title Hilchóth Sanhédrin, the following is also written: כל הרן בדיניי הכותים ובערכאות שלהן : אף על פי שהיו דיניהם כדיני ישראל הרי זה רשע וכאלו חרף וגדף והרים יד בתורת משה רבינו שנאמר ואלה המשפטים אשר תשים לפניהם ולא לפני כותים לפניהם ולא לפני הדיוטות : That is: Whoever pleads his case before the judges of the Cutbeans and in their courts, even if their laws were like the laws of the Israelites, such a person is wicked, and does as much as if he had blasphemed and cursed, and raised his hand against the Law of Moses our teacher, as it is said (Exod 21:1): These are the legal statutes which you shall set before them; you shall not set them before the Cutbeans nor before the idiots (that is, base and ignorant people). By the Cutbeans and idolaters, however, Christians are to be understood, as was indicated above in the 16th chapter of the first part, pages 633 and 634. In the great Jalkut Rubéni, fol. 175, col. 2, in the Parascha Schóphetim, the following is also read from the Sobar: בערכאות וסור לך לסדרא בערכאות : That is: The idolatrous peoples have no court in righteousness, and it is forbidden to us to plead before their judgment seats, for they have no share in the side of faith, as it is written (Ps 147:20): And their ordinances they do not know. And in the Talmudic Tractate Gittin, fol. 88, col. 2, it is stated: מוצא שאתה מוצא : That is: Wherever you find a court of foreigners (that is, of those who are not Jews), you are not permitted to attach yourself to them (and to plead before them), even if their legal statutes are equal to the laws of the Israelites, as it is said (Exod 21:1): These are the legal statutes which you shall set before them. You shall not set them before foreigners, nor before idiots.

How grave a sin it is when a Jew conducts a legal dispute before the Christian authorities is shown by Rabbi Bechai in his book Cad hakkémach fol. 21, col. 4. and fol. 22, col. 1. under the title Oth Gimel, in these words: מי שהולך ודן בערכאות של גוים הרי זה מחלל את השם יתברך ומיקר שם עבודה זרה להחשיבה וכתוב כי לא כצורנו צורם ואויבינו פלילים ונראה לומר כי הכח של כצורנו נמשכת למלת אויבינו וענין הכתוב יתפרש כי דומה כי לא יהיה צור של כל האומות כשאוויבינו פלילים. ויתבאר מזה כי העון גדול ועצום כמתיש כחו של מעלה וצריך אתה לדעת כי העבירה הזאת היא חומר לכמה עבירות כי משרשה יפרו וירבו ענפי חטאים גדולים גם כבנופיה נמצאו נזקים ומכשולות הרבה לאין קץ ויותר התורה היא מרציחה ואבאר לך כיצד. ידוע כי הרציחה מן העבירות החמורות שבתורה והעונש גדול וחמור מאוד לפי שהוא שופך דם האדם ומאבד נפש אחת מן העולם ולא איבד את הנרצח לבדו כי אם זרעו היוצא ממנו לאין סוף שהרי אדם הראשון יחידי היה וכל הבריות של שבעים לשון שיש בעולם כולן היו תולדותיו ואם כן למדנו כל המאבד נפש אחת כאילו איבד עולם מלא וכן לענין ההצלה והטובה כל המקיים נפש אחת מישראל כאילו קיים עולם מלא. הא למדת כמה גדול עון הרציחה. אף על פי שעון הרציחה חמור עון הגזל וחילול השם חמור ממנו כי הרוצח נמחל לו בתשובה שכן מצינו בקין. ולא כן הגזל שאין התשובה מועלת לו עד שיהזירנו ואם אינו מחזירו אין נמחל לו לעולם. וכן חילול ה"ן אין התשובה מועלת לו כי הוא חמור מכריתות ומיתות בית דין שכן דרשו ז"ל במסכת יומא עבר על כריתות ומיתות בית דין ועשה תשובה תשובה ויום הכיפורים תולין וייסורין ממרקין שנאמר ופקדתי בשבט פשעם וגומר. אבל מי שיש בידו חלול השם אין כח בתשובה לתלות ולא ביום הכיפורים לכפר ולא בייסורין למרק אלא כולן תולין ומיתה ממרקת שנאמר ונגלה באזני יי' צבאות. ושתי עבירות אלו שהם גזל וחילול השם שהם חמורות יותר מן הרציחה שניהם נכללו בעון ערכאות של גוים. חילול השם שהרי הדין בערכאות של גוים מחלל את השם ונותן כבודו לאחר ותהלתו לפסילים ואוי למבוכה הזאת ולשכרות הגדול הזה במקום שידועין כן ועוברין וכענין שאמר הנביא שכרו ולא יין וכו' שהרי מניחין את העיקר ונותנין לעבודה זרה מותר וחשיבות והוא שאמר דוד עליו השלום ירבו עצבותם אחר מהרו כשהם נותנים מוהר לאל אחר לעבדו. גזל שכל המניח דיני ישראל ומוציא בערכאות של גוים מים הרי זה גזל גמור ואינו חושב לגזול ועל כן אינו מחזירו ולפיכך אין לו מחילה בעולם. כל מי

The meaning of this passage is as follows: whoever goes and litigates before the courts of the Gentiles thereby desecrates the Name of the Blessed One and honors the name of idolatry, giving it esteem; and it is written, "For their rock is not as our Rock, and our enemies are judges" (Deut 32:31), and it appears that the force of "our Rock" extends to the word "our enemies." The meaning of the verse may be interpreted thus: it is as though the Rock of all the nations would not exist, when our enemies are our judges. And from this it becomes clear that the transgression is great and mighty, as one who saps the strength of the One on High. And you must know that this transgression is the substance of many transgressions, for from its root the branches of great sins sprout and multiply, and likewise in its very branches there are found harms and stumbling-blocks without end; and it is graver than murder, and I will explain to you how. It is known that murder is among the gravest transgressions in the Torah, and the punishment is very great and severe, because the murderer sheds the blood of a human being and destroys one soul from the world, and he has not destroyed only the one who was murdered, but also his offspring issuing from him without end, for behold, Adam the first man was alone, and all the creatures of the seventy languages that exist in the world were all his descendants; and if so, we have learned: whoever destroys one soul, it is as though he had destroyed an entire world, and likewise with regard to rescue and benefit: whoever preserves one soul of Israel, it is as though he had preserved an entire world. Thus you have learned how great is the transgression of murder. Yet although the transgression of murder is grave, the transgression of robbery and desecration of the Name is graver than it, for the murderer may be forgiven through repentance, as we find in the case of Cain. But not so with robbery, for repentance avails him nothing until he restores what he took, and if he does not restore it, he is never forgiven. And likewise with desecration of the Name, repentance avails him nothing, for it is graver than the penalties of excision and death by the court, as the Sages of blessed memory expounded in tractate Yoma: if one transgressed penalties of excision and death by the court and repented, repentance and the Day of Atonement suspend the punishment and sufferings cleanse it, as it is said, "I will visit their transgression with the rod" (Ps 89:33), and so forth. But whoever has in his hand the desecration of the Name, repentance has no power to suspend it, nor does the Day of Atonement atone for it, nor do sufferings cleanse it; rather, all of them together suspend it and death cleanses it, as it is said, "And it was revealed in the ears of the Lord of Hosts" (Isa 22:14). And these two transgressions, namely robbery and desecration of the Name, which are graver than murder, are both included in the transgression of litigating before the courts of the Gentiles. Desecration of the Name, for behold, whoever litigates before the courts of the Gentiles desecrates the Name and gives His honor to another and His praise to idols; and woe to this confusion and this great intoxication, in a place where people know this and yet transgress, as the prophet said, "They are drunk, but not with wine" (Isa 29:9), and so forth, for they abandon the essential and give to idolatry superiority and esteem; and this is what David, peace be upon him, said: "Their sorrows shall be multiplied who hasten after another" (Ps 16:4), when they give a bride-price to another god to serve him. Robbery, for whoever abandons the laws of Israel and brings a case before the courts of the Gentiles, this is outright robbery, and he does not consider it robbery, and therefore he does not restore it, and consequently he has no forgiveness in the world. Whoever does not conduct himself according to the laws of Israel and judges according to the law of the nations, it is as though he had removed himself from the sovereignty of the Holy One, blessed be He, for the Torah said, "One law shall there be for you" (Num 15:16), and so forth, "for I am the Lord your God." And it seems to me that when the verse says "one law," it means the law of that place, that law which was given to you on Mount Sinai, not the law of the nations and their judgments.

A Jew who goes to the Christian authorities and lodges a complaint against another Jew before them is called a מוסר, Moser, that is, a traitor; and the convert Ferdinand Heß writes of this in his Juden Geissel, at the end of the third chapter of the second part, in the following manner: When a Jew accuses another before the authorities and thereby exposes his roguery, villainy, and extortion, he is called a Moser, that is, a traitor; they also regard him as a godless man, and no Jew will eat or drink with him unless he has performed sufficient penance. And this is likewise to be found in the convert Antonius Margarita's little book, which is called Der gantze Jüdische Glaub, at pagina 151, in the 18th chapter. As for who else is generally regarded as among the Moserim, that is, traitors, this is shown by Rabbi Mosche bar Majemon in his book Jad chasaka, in the first part, fol. 46, col. 2, in the third chapter, numero 12, under the title Hilchóth teschúva, in these words: שנים הם המוסרים המוסר חבירו ביד כותים או להכותו. והמוסר ממון חברו ביד כותים או ביד אנס שהוא ככותי ככותי: that is, There are two kinds of Mósérim, or traitors: one betrays (and delivers) his companion (or fellow man) into the hands of the Cutbeans (that is, the Christians or other peoples who are not Jews) so that he may be killed or beaten; the other betrays (and delivers) his companion's money and property into the hands of the Cutbeans, or into the hands of one who does violence, who is equal to a Cuthean; and both of these have no share in eternal life.

That it is, however, permitted for one Jew to bring another before the Christian authorities when he has to deal with a stubborn adversary who refuses to appear before the Jewish judge, this can be seen in Rabbi Jerúcham's Sépher mescharim, fol. 10, col. 2., in the fifth part under the title Nathif ríschon chélek scheném éser, where the following is taught: מי שהזמינוהו ומסרב לבוא לפני דייני ישראל יכול להביאו בערכאות של גוים: that is, when someone has been summoned and refuses (or resists) to come before the Israelite judges, one may have him brought before the judges of the Gójim. In the book Shulchan áruch, in the part Chóschen hammíschpat numero 25., the following is also read on this matter: היה יד עכ"ם תקיפה ובעל דינו אלם ואינו יכול להציל ממנו בדייני ישראל יתבענו לדייני ישראל תחלה אם לא רצה לבוא נוטל רשות מבית דין ומציל בדיני עכ"ם מיד בעל דינו: that is, when the idolaters have the upper hand, and the adversary is too powerful, and one cannot recover what is one's own from him through Israelite judges, then one shall first summon him before the Israelite judges; and if he will not come, one obtains permission from the (Israelite) court and recovers what is one's own from the hand of the adversary through the courts of the idolaters. The very same is also to be found in the fourth part of the book Jad chasaka, fol. 248, col. 1., in the 26th chapter, numero 7., under the title Hilchóth Sanbédrin. In the aforementioned book Chóschen hammíschpat, the annotation or remark immediately following thereupon states: ויש רשות לבית דין לילך לפני עכ"ם ולהעיד שזה חייב לזה וכל זה דווקא כשאנו רוצה להיות ציית דין אבל בלאו הכי אסור לבית דין להרשות לדון לפני עכ"ם: That is: It is also permitted for the (Jewish) court to go before the idolatrous (authority) and to give testimony that this one owes that one; but all of this is to be understood only in the case where he (namely the defendant) will not heed the (Jewish) court; if, however, that is not the case (that is, if he does not show himself to be obstinate), then it is forbidden to grant permission to litigate before the idolaters.

It is also forbidden for a Jew to testify against another Jew that the latter owes something to a Christian, and on this matter the following is written in the aforementioned book Shulchan aruch, in the section Chóschen hammíschpat, numeró 28, §. 3: אלם תובע לישראל ויש ישראל יודע עדות לעכ"ם נגד ישראל ואין עד אלא הוא והעכ"ם התובע טועיר לו במקום שדיני עכ"ם לחייב ממון על פי עד אחד אסור להעיד לו ואם העיד משמתין אותו: When an idolater (by which a Christian is understood) demands something from an Israelite, and another Israelite has knowledge of the matter such that he could testify on behalf of the idolater against the Israelite (who is the debtor) (that the Christian's claim is legitimate), and there is no other witness besides him, and the idolater requests of him, in a place where idolaters are accustomed to condemning a person on the testimony of a single witness, that he should give testimony on his behalf, then it is forbidden to testify for him. But if he does testify, he is placed under the highest ban, which is called Schammatha. And in the aforementioned book Shulchan áruch, in the section Jóre déa, numéro 334, §. 43, fol. 306, col. 1, the following is likewise read: המעיד על ישראל בערכאות של עכ"ם ומוציא ממנו ממון: בעדותו שלא כדין מנדין אותו עד שישלם: That is: When someone testifies before the court of the idolaters against an Israelite, and through his improper testimony brings it about that the latter must pay out his money (to the Christian), that person is placed under the ban called Niddui (which is the lesser ban) until he makes restitution. All of this, however, is taken from the Talmudic tractate Báva kámma, where the following is taught at fol. 113, col. 2: בר ישראל דידע: That is: When an Israelite knows testimony favorable to a Goi or Christian, and goes and gives testimony before the court of the Gójim or Christians on his behalf against the Israelite, we place him under the ban Schammatha. From all of this it is evident what godless and reckless dispositions the Jews harbor toward Christians, in that they refuse to permit a Jew to testify on behalf of a Christian in need against another Jew, but rather, under threat of the ban, insist that the Christian be deceived and wickedly deprived of what is his.

With the above it is still not enough that they despise the Christian authorities in the manner described; they also accuse them of gladly accepting gifts, of allowing themselves to be bribed, and of giving right to the unrighteous. That they are supposed to gladly accept gifts is read in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 35, col. 1, in the Parascha Toledoth, on the words of Gen 25:28, "And Isaac loved Esau, because he ate of his venison," with these words: דרשו היה צד ומאכיל לו שוחד כדי שיטול הברכה: ואנו רואים כי כשם וזהו שכתוב כי השוחד יעור וגומר וכתוב ביצחק ותכהינה עינו מראות. ואנו רואים כי כשם שהיה עשו איש השוחד כן אנו רואין את זרעו מקבלי שוחד אוהבי הלטעות כמו שאמר עשו הלעיטני נא. ועליהם אמר דוד ע"ה מתרפס ברצי כסף והם מושכים כח מן השר שלהם שהוא מקבל שוחד ביום הכיפורים וכן כל אומה ואומה מושכת כח משר שלה: That is: (Our Rabbis) have interpreted it that he (namely Esau) hunted and gave his father (the game) to eat, and presented him with gifts, so that he might receive the blessing; and this is what is written (Exod 23:8 and Deut 16:19): "For the gift maketh blind," etc. And of Isaac it is written (Gen 27:1): "And his eyes grew dim, so that he could not see." We also see that just as Esau was fond of dealing in gifts, so too his seed (and descendants, namely the Christians, as has been indicated in the 16th chapter of the first part, paginâ 635) accept gifts and are fond of dainty morsels. Of these also King David (upon whom be peace, Ps 68:31) said: "Those who trample down for the sake of money" (or, as it is translated in the Amsterdam German-Hebrew Bible: "Those who will not consent unless one gives them pieces of silver:") and they draw unto themselves the power (or nature) of their Prince (namely the chief devil Sammaël, who, as has been mentioned in the 18th chapter of the first part, is supposed to be the Prince and Regent of the Christians), who accepts gifts on the Day of Atonement. Thus also every people draws unto itself the power (and nature) of its Prince. But what kind of gift Sammaël receives on the Day of Atonement, and how, through the offering of the Jews, he is transformed from their accuser and enemy into their advocate and friend, has been indicated in the aforementioned 18th chapter of the first part.

That Christian authorities give justice to the unrighteous and the godless is also charged against them in the old Nizzáchon, pagina 83, where, concerning the words of Isa 5:21-22, "Woe to those who are heroes at drinking wine, etc., who acquit the guilty for bribes, but deny justice to the innocent," the following is written: כל הנזכר ועוד יותר יש בהן, That is: Everything that is mentioned here, and still more besides, is to be found among them (namely the Christians, as the preceding context clearly indicates).

The Jews also admit that they give gifts to Christians, concerning which the following is written in the book Schené luchóth habberith, Wilmersdorf edition, fol. 239, col. 3: אנחנו כן נוהגים כמי שנהג יעקב לדורון לתפלה ולמלחמה, That is: Just as Jacob was accustomed to hold himself ready with gifts, prayer, and also war (against Esau), so we too are accustomed, in our own time, to conduct ourselves in such a manner toward the children of Esau (namely, the Christians). In Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses, the following is also read at fol. 42, col. 4, in the Parascha Vajischlach: דע כי יש בפרשה הזאת באור למה שאירע ליעקב עם עשו אחיו ורמז ג"כ לדורות למה שעתידין שיאירע לנו תמיד עם בני עשו. וראוי לנו לאחוז דרכיו של יעקב שהתקין עצמו לשלשה דברים למלחמה לתפלה לדורון למלחמה הוא שכתוב ויחץ את העם אשר אתו וכתוב ויאמר אם יבא עשו וגו' לתפלה הוא שאמר אלהי אבי אברהם וגו' הצילני נא. לדורון שכתוב עזים מאתים. וממנו ראה חזקיהו המלך וכן עשה שהתקין עצמו לשלשה דברים אלו כלפי סנחריב מלך אשור דכתיב ויתן חזקיהו את כל הכסף וכתוב ויתן שי' מלחימת על העם. וכתוב ויתפלל חזקיהו לפני יי'. וכן אנחנו צריכים ללכת בדרכי האבות ולהתקין עצמינו להקביל פניהם במנחה ובלשון רכה ובתפלה לפני יי' תעלה אבל במלחמה אי אפשר שנאמר השבעתי אתכם בנות ירושלים וגו' השביעם שלא יתעלה אבל במלחמה, That is: Know that in this Parascha there is an explanation of what transpired between Jacob and his brother Esau, and that it is also a signification for the generations (of them and their descendants) concerning what will continually befall us with the children of Esau; and it is fitting that we adopt the methods of Jacob, who made himself ready for three things, namely war, prayer, and gifts. For war (he prepared himself) as it is written (Gen 32:7): And he divided the people that were with him. And (v. 8) it is written: And he said, if Esau comes, etc. For prayer (he made himself ready) in that he said (vv. 9, 11): O God of my father Abraham! etc. Dear one, deliver me. For gifts (he prepared himself) as it is written (v. 14): Two hundred she-goats. From this King Hezekiah took note and learned, and did likewise; he prepared himself for these three things against Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, as it is written (2 Kgs 18:15): So Hezekiah gave all the silver. And (2 Chr 32:6) it is written: And he set captains of war over the people. And (2 Kgs 19:15) it is written: And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD. Thus we too must walk in the ways of the fathers (and follow them herein) and hold ourselves ready to meet them (namely, the Christians) with gifts and gentle (flattering) words, as well as with a prayer before the praised God. But as for war, we cannot possibly wage it against them, as it is said (Song 2:7): I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, etc. He adjured them that they should wage no war against the nations.

In the book Zerór hammór, one also reads at fol. 129, col. 3, in the Parascha Elle haddevarím, that it is commanded to give gifts to the children of Esau, that is, to the Christians, and the words there read as follows: אנו בטוחים שאנו סובלים עול גלות אדום כמו שהוזהרנו בכאן ועלינו יזרח ה' וכבודו עלינו יראה וזה שאמר כי לא אתן לכם מארצם עד מדרך כף רגל עד שיבא אותו יום של דריסת הרגל דכתיב ועמדו רגליו ביום ההוא כי ירושה לעשו נתתי את הר שעיר לפי שהוא טמא וטמא יקרא כי הר שעיר הוא מקום הטומאה והשדים דכתיב ושעירים ירקדו שם ולפי שזה העולם והצלחתו של עשו הרשע צוה שישבעו בניו ברבוי דורון של כסף וזהב וזהו אוכל תשברו מאתם בכסף וגומר that is, We are assured that we bear the yoke of the Edomite captivity, just as we are warned here, and that the Lord will shine upon us and His glory will appear over us; and this is what He said (Deut 2:5): For I will not give you so much as a footbreadth of their land, until the day of the footstep shall come, as it is written (Zech 14:4): His feet shall stand at that time. (And it continues further, Deut 2:5:) For I have given Mount Seir to the children of Esau as a possession, because he (namely Esau) is unclean and is called unclean, for Mount Seir is the place of uncleanness and of devils, as it is written (Isa 13:21): And the field-devils shall dance there. And because this world together with its felicities belongs to the wicked Esau, He commanded that his sons (the Christians) should be satiated with many gifts of silver and gold, and this is signified by the words (Deut 2:6): You shall buy food from them for money, &c. These gifts, however, are not given out of a faithful and well-meaning spirit. The convert Samuel Friedrich Brenz writes about this in the following manner in his Jüdischer abgestreiffter Schlangenbals, paginâ 12, in the third chapter: If a Jew has business with an official and does not know his circumstances, he first inquires of other Jews whether he is a Baal schóchad, that is, whether he accepts gifts and presents. If he does, the Jew takes heart, gives him a gift according to the importance of the matter, and yet says along with it: "Take my bad מזל masal, that is, all my misfortune with it." But if the official does not accept the gift from the Jew, the Jew says, "May חולי הנופל Chóli hannófel strike you dead," that is, the severe sickness; or he wishes upon him that he be הרוג bórug, that is, murdered; or he also says רשע צורר יהודים roscho zórer Jehúdím, that is, a godless oppressor of the Jews, and wishes that he be hanged, just as Haman was, in the book of Esth 8; and the Jews have this word very much in common use, so that they call Christians Haman. And at paginâ 17 and 18, in the 4th chapter, the aforementioned Samuel Friedrich Brenz writes further as follows: When a Jew sends a Christian a New Year's greeting, they call it a שנה רע Schóna ra, that is, a bad and unlucky year, and the Jew commonly says along with it that he should take his bad mással with it, that is, all his misfortune; and this expression is in common use among the Jews, so that they say: I want to send him a Schóna ra, that is, a bad and unlucky year.

What they think of one who accepts gifts can be seen in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 206, col. 4, in the Parashah Schóphetim, where he writes the following concerning the words of Deut 16:19, "You shall not accept a gift": לא תקח שוחד אפילו לשפוט האמת לפי שאחר שקבל השוחד נעשה עור בדין. ואמרו ר"זל מאי שחד שהוא חד כלומר שהמקבל והנותן נעשו אחד ושוב אינו רואה לו חובה והמקבל שחד נקרא רשע דכתיב שחד מחיק רשע יקח וכתיב ושחד בחיק חמה עזרה; וכתיב אבן חן השחד בעיני בעליו ודרשו ר"זל למה נמשל לאבן שבכל מקום ; שנופלת שוברה ; That is: You shall not accept a gift, not even once in order to judge the truth (that is, to judge rightly), for when someone accepts a gift he becomes blind in his judgment. And our rabbis, of blessed memory, have said: what does the word Schóchad, that is, "gift," signify? (It signifies as much as) schæbú chad, that is, that he is one, namely that the one receiving and the one giving become one (in that their minds are bound together with one another), and thereafter the one receiving no longer sees what his duty (and obligation) is. Moreover, the one who accepts a gift יקח שחד פנים is called a roschcha, that is, a wicked man, as it is written (Prov 17:23): The wicked man accepts gifts out of the bosom (that is, secretly). And it is written (Prov 21:14): A gift in the bosom (stills) fierce anger. And it is written (Prov 17:8): The gift is a pleasing stone in the eyes of its masters; and our rabbis, of blessed memory, have expounded it thus (and said): why is the gift compared to a stone? Because wherever it falls, it shatters.

The Jews also boast that they can seduce and blind the Christian authorities with their gifts; and just as they call the one who accepts gifts a godless man, so too do they call those godless who accept none. In the booklet of the converted Antonius Margarita, which is called "The Whole Jewish Faith," at pagina 358, 359, and 360, the following is read concerning the Jews: Where a Jew's house stands in a village or small town, etc., the authority, the judge, the town clerk, and all the officials of that house enjoy more from it than twenty others do; and the same occurs where there are many of them. On account of such enjoyment they are at times held in high esteem. But those who take money from the Jews truly strengthen them greatly in their blindness; the reason being, there is a saying in Hos 8:10: "Though they sell themselves among the nations, I will now gather them, and they shall have a little hope because of the burden of the king of princes." From this the Jews falsely draw a consolation and say: the prophet had foretold, and thereby comforted them, that kings and lords would take money from them and thus leave them in peace until the coming of their invented Messiah. They boast of this very greatly among themselves and say: See, we settle and quiet all things with our money, according to the content of the aforementioned saying; for if God did not hold such powerful sway over us, and did not call to mind this saying and the promise He made to our fathers, it would be no wonder if the Christians brought us all to ruin within three days, for they know that we crucified their God, that we curse and mock Him together with all who believe in Him every single day, and yet God arranges it so that they take money from us and thus let us wander and trade idly among them. It is true that there is no estate that deals more before courts than the Jews; they carry everything through, whether it be crooked or straight; the reason is their great wealth of money, etc. For the first thing the Jew does when he has dealings before a court is to find out which judge, guardian, or councilman is a בעל שוחד, Baal schóchad, that is, a man who takes gifts and presents, and then he bribes him with gifts. But woe to those who receive such things from them! Even if they do not always take it, they still take it from them at New Year, Martinmas, Carnival, and at the church fair, etc. The Jew sometimes gives his wife, children, etc. a fine jewel or a pretty piece of jewelry, offering it to them for half the price, with these words: "Oh, your wisdom can surely win it back for me, poor Jew, etc." And so he has already overcome the good lord, so that he has swallowed a little morsel from hell. For this reason it is very difficult to go to law against the Jews; yet there are, God be praised, also many court lords who keep entirely clear of such things, and whom the Jews call רשעים, reschóim, and טפשים, tippelschim, that is, godless and wicked people. These are the words of Antonius Margarita. As for the aforementioned boasting of the Jews, the converted Ferdinand Hess writes in his "Jews' Scourge," in the fifth chapter of the third part, that they are accustomed to speak thus at their gatherings: We can ינעצים, Jóazim, שרים, Sorim, ומלכים, umelóchim with our שוחד, Schóchad, מרמה, merámme sein, that is, we can blind the clear eyes of kings, princes, and lords, together with their counselors, with our gifts, poisons, and presents; and we can also thereby bring it about that we are the נבילות, nefélôs, מכלה, mechálle, and מרמה, merámme sein, that is, that we ruin, drain dry, torment, and deceive the villainous Christians. Are these not presumptuous words from the Jews, if it is true that they are accustomed to doing such things, of which there is absolutely no doubt?

The Jews also teach that Christians will be cast into hellfire on account of the tribute, as well as the gifts and presents which they give to them, concerning which it is written in the book Zerór hammór fol. 44, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajischlach as follows: ארום המרשעת בגובה לבה עתידה ליפול באש שנאמר הנה על אדום תרד וכתוב ויהיב ליקידת אשא וזהו היא העולה על מוקרה על המזבח כל הלילה עד הבוקר וכן בכאן ועלהך ידשנה סלה כי השם עבור כל המנחות והמסים שלקחו מישראל בגאווה ובוז בענין שבזה ישרפם באש וזהו ידשנה סלה That is: the wicked Edom (that is, Christendom) will, on account of the pride of its heart, fall into the (hellish) fire, as it is said (Isa 34:5): Behold, that same (sword) shall come down upon Edom. And it is written in Dan 7:11: (until the beast was slain, and his body destroyed) and cast into the burning fire. And this is (that which is signified by the words of Lev 6:9:) The burnt offering shall burn upon the altar all night until the morning. So also here it is said (Ps 20:4): And make your burnt offering into ashes. Selah. For (God will repay the Christians for) all the tribute payments and taxes which they (that is, the Christians) have taken from the Israelites with pride and contempt, so that He will therefore burn them in fire, and this is signified by the words: And make your burnt offerings into ashes.

When Jews give gifts to Christians, this must, according to the teaching of the Rabbis, not happen without reason but rather on account of some specific cause. For this reason, in the book Col bo, fol. 109, col. 1, under the title Avóda sára, the following is written: אסור לתת לגויים מתנת חנם, That is: It is forbidden to give the Gojim (or Christians) a gift without reason. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 196, col. 4, and fol. 197, col. 1, in the Parascha Vaëthchannán, the following is read: דרשו בו לא תחנם לא תתן, That is: (Our Rabbis) have interpreted the words (Deut 7:2), "and you shall show them no favor," as follows: you shall give them no gift without reason. On this matter, one may also consult the book Jad chasáka, in the first part, in the 10th chapter, number 4, under the title Avóda sára; and in the fourth part, in the 3rd chapter, number 11, under the title Sechía umattána; as well as the book Shulchan aruch, in the part Jóre déa, number 151, §. 11.

Since the Jews accuse Christians of being so eager to accept gifts and to let themselves be bribed, as indeed a Jew once said in my presence to a Christian that it must be a thick hide through which the Jewish grease does not penetrate, these malicious people ought to look into their own hearts and consider what money-grubbing and unjust persons their rabbis are, those who administer the office of judge among them, and who shamefully allow themselves to be blinded by gifts, so that they make straight out of crooked and crooked out of straight, as the convert Dieterich Schwab demonstrates in his Jüdischer Deckmantel, page 226, etc., in the ninth chapter of the fourth part, when he writes as follows: Furthermore, it is the custom among the chief rabbi and among the aforementioned seven who are called בני ישיבה bené jeschiva, that they gladly accept gifts and presents; for when ordinary Jews have business before their chief authority on account of their legal matters or other committed offenses and misdeeds, they go to the rabbi with a clenched fist full of money, and whoever then has the good fortune to be first has certainly won his case; for they commonly make use of this proverb: he who greases well, fares well, which they also know masterfully how to put into practice. If then a Jew has a rotten and bad case, the rabbi can easily make it a good one for him. Is he not a useful and capable master who can make such good coin out of bad material?

The aforementioned Dieterich Schwab then continues to make himself heard as follows. I must recount what once happened to me in Frankfurt. It came to pass some years ago that I drank wine with a Christian, and when the rabbis became aware of this, they wanted to punish me very harshly for it and also impose a heavy penance upon me. I was in a very bad way, and would gladly have wished to get out of it secretly with money, if only they would spare me the shame, disgrace, and mockery. So it happened that two rabbis of the aforementioned bené jeschiva had me summoned before the Monkey Gate at Sachsenhausen, one by the name of Rabbi Seligmann, the other Rabbi Aaron Lorja, and they spoke to me thus: I would do well to remember that I had committed a great and grievous sin, namely that I had drunk נסך nésécb wine with a Christian, and that on account of this a great disgrace would befall me, and that I would furthermore be punished with a fine. And when they had frightened me so greatly with such threats that I was moved to tears, I asked them in my distress for advice as to how I might escape such misfortune. They then comforted me and addressed me further with these words: if I were willing to come to an agreement with them and give a sum of money, they would make my bad affair turn out well for me; but if not, I would have to endure a great punishment and disgrace. Thereupon I asked to know how much I should give them, and they demanded six ducats from me. I did not haggle much with them over it, nor did I go back on my word, but gave them the money and was still glad to have gotten off in such a manner. They made my affair turn out very well for me, and even though the ducats were very small and too light in weight, they nonetheless accepted them as full value and divided them among their associates and the chief rabbi. What do you think: did they not do this rightly and very cleverly, and in precisely the same manner as thieves and highway robbers are accustomed to behave, who do not care whether the coin is too light but take it gladly as full value all the same, and divide up the plunder, as long as it is good enough for the time being? They can easily make up for their losses another time. This is also how these rogues, the Jewish rabbis, behave among themselves; how much more, then, ought they not to do the same to Christians? But their fleecing has not always succeeded for them, as was once demonstrated by a fine trick that took place in Prague, in Bohemia, where a Jew paid the chief rabbi, who was also fond of receiving gifts, with light coin and sent him away empty-handed. There were in Prague two Jews who had a quarrel with one another over a sum of money and came together before the chief rabbi to settle the matter. One of the Jews, who had the weaker case, thought to himself: I have no money to give the rabbi as a gift, and therefore I will not gain much; I must devise a scheme by which I can deceive the rabbi. He went and made his hand thick, as though it were filled with money, and held it under his cloak, making a great bundle of it, and said to the rabbi at the outset of the proceedings: "Look at me, Rabbi, look at me." The rabbi looked at him and thought to himself: that man certainly has a large bundle under his cloak, which he surely intends to give me as a gift if I rule in his favor. So the rabbi made the case of the one who had thus addressed him turn out very well, expecting to receive the bundle that he was holding so secretly under his cloak and displaying. Now when the verdict had been pronounced and the rabbi wanted to collect from the Jew the bundle that had been shown to him, that same Jew pointed the rabbi to the birds in the trees and told him that he had promised him nothing and intended to give him nothing. The rabbi replied: how can you now speak thus? For you showed me a large bundle under your cloak and said to me that I should look at you, and that you would give me that bundle as a gift if I made your bad case turn out well; therefore I want to have it and will not be put off with your words. Thereupon the Jew answered that since he wanted to have the bundle that had been shown to him, he would indeed give it to him, but he wished first to inform him what kind of bundle it had been, and spoke thus: "Rabbi, I showed you a clenched fist under my cloak, and that is why I said: Rabbi, look at me. Had you not ruled in my favor and not made my bad case turn out well, I would also have given you the fist that I showed you. But since you have made my case turn out well, you shall not receive it either; and if you still want the bundle so badly, you can still have it." With that the rabbi left him and went away. He paid the rabbi rightly; but if the Jew had opened the knotted bundle still further and had boxed the rabbi's ears with his fists and smeared the court fees freely, hard and strong enough upon him, so that the coin would have swollen out from between his teeth, he would have been paid even better. These are the words of the aforementioned convert Dieterich Schwab.

From all of this it can be seen how greatly the hypocritical rabbis love gifts; and I have heard from Jews themselves how willingly and eagerly their rabbis allow themselves to be bribed. They thus give no thought to what is read in the Piské Tosephóth of the Talmudic tractate Sanhedrin fol. 130, col. 1. numero 9, in these words: מי שמקבל שוחד כאילו מחריב את העולם, That is: Whoever accepts a gift destroys the world, as it were. Nor do they give thought to what is written in the Talmudic tractate Báva báthra fol. 9, col. 2, where it is taught: כל דיין שנוטל שוחד מביא חמה עזה לעולם, That is: Every judge who accepts a gift brings a mighty wrath (of God) upon the world. They ought, however, to remember what is stated in their law book Shulchan áruch, in the section Chóschen hammischpat numero 9, §. 1, as well as in the book Jad chasáka, in the fourth part, in the 23rd chapter, numero 1 and 2, under the title Sanhedrin, where the acceptance of gifts is forbidden. Indeed, they ought to take to heart what is read in Deut 16:19: You shall not pervert justice, and you shall show no partiality, nor accept gifts; for gifts blind the eyes of the wise and twist the words of the righteous. But because they do not do this, and instead incline toward greed along with the sons of Samuel (1 Sam 8:3), and accept gifts and pervert justice, it can rightly be said of them from Isa 1:23: They all love gifts and pursue rewards; though a judge ought to shun greed, as can be seen in Exod 18:21 and 23:8. Therefore it will one day also be said of them from Isa 5:22-23: Woe to those who acquit the wicked for the sake of gifts, but deny the righteous man his just cause; and for this reason they will one day receive their well-deserved recompense.

Concerning an oath that a Jew swears to a Christian, either alone or before a Christian authority, the Jews are under suspicion of absolving and releasing, in a certain manner, those who swear a false oath to a Christian or before a Christian authority, on the eve of their Jom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, which is also called the long day and falls annually on the tenth day of the month of Tischri, or September, according to the Jewish calendar. Now, in order to report the true basis and the actual nature of this matter, it is to be known that the Jews, on the evening of the ninth day of the aforementioned month of Tischri, which is the eve of the Day of Atonement, have the following custom: two of their most distinguished rabbis place themselves beside the precentor, one to his right and the other to his left, so that there are three of them, and they call out with a loud voice these words, which are found in the first part of the Prague Machzor, fol. 63, col. 1, and in all Machzorim: על דעת המקום ועל דעת הקהל בשיבה של מעלה ובישיבה של מטה אנו מתירין להתפלל עם המעבירים: That is: According to the will of God and according to the will of the congregation, in the upper academy (which is in heaven) and in the lower academy (here on earth), we permit praying together with the transgressors (and sinners). Thereupon the precentor speaks an absolution or release from vows and oaths that have been made, which begins with Kol nidre, in the Chaldean tongue, three times in succession, raising his voice higher the second time than the first, and higher the third time than the second, with these words: כָּל נִדְרֵי נֶאֱסְרִי וְנֶחְרַמִּי וְכַנּוּיֵי וְקִנּוּסֵי וְשְׁבוּעוֹת דְּנִדְרָנָא וְדִאֲשְׁמַעְנָא וְדִאֲחֲרִיקְנָא וְדִאֲסַרְנָא עַל נַפְשֵׁתָנָא מִיּוֹם כְּפוּרִים זֶה עַד יוֹם כְּפוּרִים הַבָּא עָלֵינוּ לְטוֹבָה: בְּכֻלְהוֹן אֲחֲרָשְׁנָא בְּהוֹן בְּלֻחוֹן יְהוֹן שְׁרֹן שְׁבִיקִין שְׁבִיתִין בְּטֻלִין וּמְבוֹטְלִין לֹא שְׁרִירִין וְלֹא קְנֻמִּין: נִדְרָנָא לֹא נִדְרִי נֶאֱסְרָנָא לֹא אֶסְרִי וְשְׁבוּעָתָנָא לֹא שְׁבוּעוֹת: That is: All vows, and obligations, and bans, and sworn commitments, and alternative names (for vows), and penalties, and oaths which we shall vow and swear, and pledge, and bind ourselves to from this Day of Atonement until the coming Day of Atonement (may it come upon us for good): we repent of all of them, and they shall be dissolved, remitted, annulled, and voided, and cancelled, and without force and without validity. Our vows shall be no vows, and our oaths shall be no oaths. Immediately thereafter they further recite the words of Num 15:26: וְנָסְלָה לְכָל עֲדַת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְלִגְרָם הַגֵּר בְּתוֹכָם כִּי לְכָל הָעָם בְּשִׁגְגָה: That is: And it shall be forgiven unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and also unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for all the people acted in ignorance. This is the content of the said absolution; and the "obligations" refer to cases where one has obligated or bound oneself to something; the "bans" to cases where one says, this thing shall be as banned to me, so that I will have nothing to do with it; the "sworn commitments" to cases where one has sworn to do or to refrain from something; and the "alternative names" to cases where one has made a vow by means of a circumlocution and not with the otherwise customary words, as can be clearly found in the commentary thereon in the aforementioned Prague Machzor. This absolution is also directed toward future vows and oaths, although among the Jews in former times it was arranged with respect to the past and the preceding year, so that instead of the words מִיּוֹם הַבָּא מִיּוֹם הַכְּפוּרִים שְׁעֵבֶר עַד יוֹם הַכְּפוּרִים זֶה, that is, "from this Day of Atonement until the coming Day of Atonement," they formerly said יוֹם הַכְּפוּרִים זֶה עַד יוֹם הַכְּפוּרִים הַבָּא, that is, "from the past Day of Atonement until this Day of Atonement," as can be seen in section 619 of the book Orach Chayim, which is a part of the book Arba Turim.

Regarding such absolution and release from oaths, I say that the Jews are accused by many of being absolved from all false oaths that they swear. In response to this, Johannes Schmid answers in his book written against the Jews, which he calls "the venom of a fiery dragon and the gall of a raging viper," on pages 185 and 186, in the 3rd chapter of the sixth book, addressing the objection that such grave oath formulas are prescribed to the Jews everywhere that it is not to be believed that they swear falsely. He answers in the following manner and says: It is not rightly stated to say that they swear falsely; rather, one must necessarily say that they swear truly, and that the taking of oaths comes from their hearts and is a serious matter. However, all such oaths are forgiven them by their priests or elders, and through their absolution rendered as nothing, as though they had never taken them; and they swear all the more freely and brazenly, because all oaths are forgiven them in advance for the coming year, as many as they are able and willing to make. Therefore they also regard no formula, even if it were ten times more solemn and the Devil himself with the entire infernal host were bodily present at it; for the word of their teachers is, as they claim and believe, so mighty and powerful that they can absolve a person from an oath before God. And in what follows, he also answers several other objections raised against this.

The converted Jew Antonius Margarita, in his book which he calls "The Whole Jewish Faith," at paginâ 78, near the end of the fifth chapter, also expresses himself on this matter as follows: If a Jew had kept neither oath, vow, nor bond throughout the entire year, the Rabbi here forgives it for him, releases him from all of it, and no longer recognizes it as a sin. For such absolution they have a great and devout prayer called כל נדרִי, Col nidre, which in German means "all vows." All of this is done so that they may thereafter pray together with oath-breakers, for the Rabbi has prayed on their behalf and made them pious again. The converted Jew Samuel Friedrich Brenz writes in his book, "The Stripped Jewish Snakeskin," in the third chapter, paginâ 12, likewise as follows: "Item, concerning their oath, it is to be known that the Jews have a particular prayer in which they permit one another to swear falsely against the Gójim, that is, against the Christians, and they recite this prayer with great devotion, etc." He then notes that this prayer runs: Col nidre &c. The like is also to be found in Buxtorf's Jewish School, printed in High German, in the 21st chapter, though it is entirely omitted in the expanded edition printed in the Latin language. Most particularly, however, the converted Jew Hieronymus de Sancta Fide, in his little book written against the Jews, at pp. 163 and 164, accuses them very harshly that, on account of the release effected through Col nidre, they have no scruple whatsoever, nor any reluctance, about swearing a false oath to a Christian or to the Christian authorities. And in the book printed in the year 1688, which is called "The Damnable Jewish Spear," there stands at paginâ 195, taken from Ayrer's 2nd book, chap. 5, §, "Where Lucifer hears," etc., written as follows: "Likewise they (namely the Jews) have every year, on the long day, a feast, at which feast they recite a prayer called Calindro (it should be called Col nidre), which releases them from all vows and oaths that they have sworn, made, and promised to the Christians throughout an entire year."

Beyond the above, the Jews are further accused of not caring when they swear falsely, since they can be absolved and released from a vow, oath, or sworn statement by one distinguished Rabbi or three ordinary unlearned Jews, as can be seen in the aforementioned book called the damnable Judenspiess at page 195 and elsewhere. Regarding the absolution from a vow, the following is read in the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Joréh déa, no. 228, § I: מי שנדר ונתחרט ילך אצל חכם מומחה ואם אינו יחיד מומחה ילך יחד תקנה על ידי חרטא • כיצד יעשה ילך אצל ג' הדיוטות ויתירו לו That is: whoever has made a vow and repents of it can be helped again through repentance, even if he made his vow before the God of Israel. How then must he proceed? He must go to a distinguished wise man (a Rabbi); and if no distinguished wise man is available, he shall go to three idiots or common men, who shall release him. Regarding the absolution from a sworn oath, it is written in the Sépher mizvóth gadól of Rabbi Mosche Mikkózi, fol. 69, col. 4, under the title Hilchóth schevuóth (or Hilchos schevuos), as follows: מי שנשבע שבועת בטוי ונתחרט על שבועתו ונתהפכה דעתו לדעת אחרת או שנולד לו דבר שלא היה בדעתו בשעת השבועה ונתחרט על ידי כן הרי זה נשאל לחכם אחד או לג' הדיוטות במקום שאין שם חכם כדאיתא בבכורות פרק כל הפסולין ומתירין לו. ודבר זה אין לו עיקר בתורה שבכתב לפיכך אמרו רבותינו היתר נדרים פורחים באויר. אלא כך למדו רבותינו רב מפי רב משה רבינו שזה שאמר הכתוב לא יחל דברו כלומר הוא לא יחלל נדרו דרך קלות ראש כשאת הנפש כענין שנאמר וחללת את שם אלהיך אני ה'. אבל אחרים מוחלין לו כלומר That is: whoever rashly swears an oath and then repents of his oath, such that he changes his mind; or when something befalls him which was not in his mind at the time of the oath, and he therefore repents of it, that person consults one wise man, or three common men in a place where no wise man is present, as is to be seen in the (Talmudic tractate) Bechoróth, in the chapter Col happešúlin, and these release him. This matter, however, has no basis (or proof) in the written Law (the five books of Moses); for this reason our Rabbis have said (in the Talmudic tractate Chagiga, fol. 10, col. 1): the release from vows flies in the air. Our Rabbis have, however, learned it (through tradition or oral teaching), one Rabbi from the mouth of another, from the mouth of our teacher Moses, that this is what Scripture (Num 30:3) says: he shall not break his word, as if it meant to say: he shall not break his vow in a lighthearted manner and with contempt, as it is said (Lev 19:12): and you shall not profane the name of your God, for I am the LORD; but others shall forgive him, that is, they have the power to dissolve his oath, as is to be found in the Talmudic tractate Nedarím and Chagiga. In the said tractate Chagiga, fol. 10, col. 1, alongside the aforementioned passage Num 30:3, yet other passages are adduced as proof, though in an absurd manner. On this matter one may also consult the book Col bo, fol. 100, col. 2, under the title Hilchóth nedarím uschevuóth.

Rabbi Bechai also teaches in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 186, col. 2, in the Parascha Mattóth (or Mátos), on this matter in the following manner: אמרו רז"ל היתר נדרים פורחין באויר ואין להם על מה שיסמכו כלומר שדברי קבלה הן ואין להן עקר בתורה שבכתב וכך קבלו רז"ל שהנדר או השבועה אפשר שיהיה להם היתר על ידי חכם או על ידי שלשה הדיוטות ובלבד שיתחרט. ורצתה תורה לתקן עורה של אדם שלפעמים מתגבר עליו כעס ואין לו מעצור כלל וקופץ ונשבע בשם שיעשה כך או שלא יעשה כך ועוד מוסיף ומרבה בשבועתו כעסו בלא שום צד ההר וחרטה בעולם בעולם ולאחר שיתישב ונהפך והיה לאיש אחר יתחרט מעקרו ותשתנה דעתו לדעת אחרת ועם החרטה שיתחרט יש לו היתר על פי חכם וחוזר להתרבו הראשון וצריך הוא שיתחרט תחלה על מה שנשבע שלא יקח מזה שום היתר ויתירו שבועה זו תחלה ואחר כך יתחרט בעקר That is: Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that the release from vows flies through the air and has nothing upon which it can support and ground itself; by which they mean to indicate that it is a tradition or oral teaching which has no foundation in the written Law. Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have however taught orally that a vow or oath can be dissolved and annulled by a sage, or by three ordinary men, provided that the one who made the vow or oath bears repentance for it. And the Law sought to set right the perversity of man, for sometimes anger gains the upper hand over him, and he cannot restrain himself at all, but leaps up and swears by God that he will or will not do this or that; indeed, he adds much more to his oath when he is angry, without any consideration of release or repentance whatsoever. But after his anger has subsided and turned, and he has become a different man, he soon repents of it, and his mind is changed; and on account of the repentance he bears, he is released by the mouth of a sage and returns to his former freedom. He must, however, first bear repentance for having sworn that he would accept no release on that account, and he must first be freed from such an oath; after this he must bear repentance concerning the essential substance of his oath, and thereupon he is absolved.

How a rabbi has precedence over others in performing such an absolution is shown by the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai in the place cited, with these words: ואין אדם רשאי להתיר שבועה או נדר במקום שיש גדול ממנו בחכמה ולא במקום רבו אלא מדעת רבו That is: No person is permitted to dissolve an oath or a vow in a place where there is one wiser than he, nor in the place of his rabbi, except with his rabbi's knowledge.

In what manner, however, such absolution takes place is found in the aforementioned book of Rabbi Mosche Mikkozi, which is called Sepher mizvoth gadol, fol. 70, col. 1, under the title Hilchoth schevuoth, where he writes as follows: כיצד מתירין יבא הנשבע לחכם מומחה או לג' הדיוטות הדיוטות אם אין שם מומחה: וצריך לפרוש הנדר או השבועה ואומר אני נשבעתי על כך ונחמתי ואלו הייתי יודע שאני מצטער בדבר זה עד כה או שיארע לי כך וכך לא הייתי נשבע והחכם או גדול השלשה אומר וכבר נחמת והוא אומר הן. ואחר כך החכם אומר שרי לך או מותר לך או מחול לך וכל כיוצא בשון That is: How does one absolve? The one who has sworn goes to a distinguished wise man, or to three common men if no distinguished (wise man) is present, and must clearly state his vow or his oath, and thereafter says: I swore for such and such a reason, and I regret it; had I known that I would have been troubled on account of this matter from that point on, or that such and such would befall me, I would not have sworn. Thereupon the wise man, or the foremost among the three (common men), says to him: Do you then repent? And he answers: Yes. After this the wise man says to him: Your (vow or oath) is dissolved, or it is remitted to you, or it is forgiven you, and whatever is of similar import, in any language. This is that on account of which the Jews are accused of perjury.

Against this, however, it may be objected by them that the rabbis do indeed regard false and unlawful swearing, and perjury, as an exceedingly grave sin. For this reason, the two aforementioned methods of release from an oath must not be interpreted so unfavorably, since Rabbi Bechai in his book Cad hakkémach fol. 71, col. 2. under the title Oth Schin teaches: הנשבע לשקר מחלל את השם: that is, whoever swears falsely desecrates the name of God, and this accords with the words of Lev 19:12. He also writes in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses fol. 29, col. 4. in the Parascha Vajéra in the following manner: העובר על השבועה הוא כופר בעיקר ומוציא עצמו מכלל השבועה ואין לו חלק לעולם הבא: that is, whoever transgresses an oath denies the foundation (namely, God), and excludes himself from the sum of the oath, and has no share in eternal life. And fol. 90, col. 2. in the Parascha Vajischma Jéthro, as also in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 71, col. 1. under the title Oth Schin, the same author teaches: העובר על השבועה כאלו מכחיש וכופר בשם יתברך כי כוונת השבועה כאשר השם אמת כן יהיה דברו אמת ואם לא יקיים דברו הרי זה כמכחיש את השם יתברך: that is, whoever transgresses an oath does as much as if he denied and renounced the blessed God, for the purpose of an oath consists in this: that just as God is truthful, so too shall his (namely, the person's) word be truthful. But if he does not keep his word, behold, he thereby denies the blessed God. Furthermore, the same author teaches at fol. 185, col. 3. in the Parascha Mattóth: אין בכל העבירות כלין: עבירה חמורה כעובר על השבועה: that is, among all sins there is none so grave as when one transgresses an oath.

Further, the Jews can point out that Rabbi Isaac Abúhaf also makes himself heard on this matter in his book Menoráth hammáor, fol. 13, col. 4, in the first chapter, under the title Ner schéni, Kelál schéni, Chélek schéni: הנשבע לשקר דומה שהוא כמכחיש את אמתת השם. ואם אדם ישבע בראש מלך בשר ודם ולא יקים דברו הוא בן מות לפי שבזה כבוד המלך. ואם זה ראוי לעשות הנשבע במלך בשר ודם שבא מטפה סרוחה וסופו למות על אחת כמה וכמה שיש לו לאדם לשמור פיו ולשונו שלא יכשילהו לחטא את בשרו בהשבע לשקר בשם מלך מלכי המלכים הק"ה שהוא חי וקיים לערי עד. וכבר ידענו מה שצירע לבני ישראל לפי שנשבעו ברמים על דבר פלגש גבעה. וגם כן הרעב שהביא השם ית' לארץ בעד שאול וביתו שעברו על שבועה הנשיאים שנשבעו לגבעונים: that is, whoever swears falsely appears as though he denies the truth of God. And when a man swears by the head of a king who is flesh and blood, and does not keep his word, he is guilty of death, because he has despised the honor of the king. Now if it is right that this be done to one who swears by a king who is flesh and blood, who comes from a putrid drop and must ultimately die, how much more must a man guard his mouth and his tongue, lest they cause his flesh to be driven into sin by swearing falsely in the name of the King of Kings of all Kings, the holy and blessed God, who lives and endures for all eternity? We know well what befell the children of Israel because they swore publicly concerning the concubine at Gibeah (which is to be read in Judg 20 and 21). Likewise, that the blessed God caused a famine to come upon the land on account of Saul and his house (of which mention is made in 2 Sam 21:1 etc.), because they had transgressed the oath of the princes which they had sworn (as is found in Josh 9:15 etc.). Thereupon the same author writes further in the following fol. 14, col. 2, in the 4th chapter: גרסין במדרש תנחומא כל המועל בשבועות כופר בהק"ה: that is, we learn in the Medrasch Tanchúma that whoever sins with oaths (and transgresses them) denies the holy and blessed God, and has no forgiveness to expect for all eternity, because it is said (Exod 20:7): "For the Lord will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain." This is also to be found in the aforementioned commentary of Rabbi Bechai, fol. 186, col. 1, in the Parashah Mattóth. It is likewise taught in the Jalkut chádassch, fol. 35, col. 2, number 33, under the title Beriáth ólam, that when a false oath is sworn, a certain stone lying in the abyss shifts from its place, whereby the entire earth would be inundated with water, were it not that God provides help through the angel Jasariel.

But if one were to object against this that perhaps it should be understood only to mean that no Jew ought to swear falsely against another Jew, the Jews can reply that the aforementioned Rabbi Bechai in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 71, col. 4. under the title Oth Schin teaches the opposite, when he writes: נשבע לגוי ועבר על השבועה הרי זה מחלל את השם ולמדנו זה מצדקיה שנשבע לנבוכדנצר ועבר על שבועתו ונענש עליה והוא שאמר יחזקאל ויקח מזרע הארץ ויתנהו בשלה ודע וגו' ומכאן יש ללמוד חומר השבועה במי שנשבע לגוי מן האומות ועבר על שבועתו כמה ענשו גדול עד 'שחסס יגיע וזה מפני חילול השם ועל זה אמר הכתוב ולא תשבעו בשמי לשקר וגומר אני יי that is, whoever swears to a Goi, or heathen (that is, to one who is not a Jew) and breaks the oath, that person profanes the name of God; and we learn this (Ezek 17:13, etc.) from (King) Zidkia, who swore to Nebuchadnezzar and broke his oath and was punished for it (as may be read in 2 Kgs 25:7 and Jer 39:6); and this is what Ezekiel (in chapter 17, v. 5) said: He also took of the seed of the land and set it in a fruitful soil, etc. From this one can learn what a weighty matter it is when one swears an oath to a Goi of the nations and breaks that oath, how great his punishment is, that it reaches up to heaven, and this on account of the profanation of the name of God. For this reason the Scripture also says (Lev 19:12): You shall not swear falsely by my name, for I am the Lord who punishes you for it, if you swear falsely in any manner, even to a Goi, because you profane the name (of God). Beyond this, Rabbi Salman Zevi in his Judisch-Theriack, paginâ 19, col. 1, in the 3rd chapter, numérô 9, brings forward two examples from Holy Scripture by which he proves that one must keep an oath sworn to a Goi; one of these is from Rahab, who was kept alive on account of the oath sworn to her, as may be read in Josh 2:12, etc. and Josh 6:17, 23. The other, however, is from the Gibeonites, who, although they had given the Israelites false information and belonged to those peoples who according to the command of Deut 20:16-17 were all to be put to death, were nevertheless not killed on account of the oath sworn to them, as may be seen in Josh 9:3, etc.

Regarding also the two above-mentioned manners of release and absolution from an oath, they can say that the proof drawn therefrom, namely that Jews may swear a false oath to a Christian and before a Christian authority, since they are supposed thereby to be freed and absolved from it again, is entirely and utterly worthless, and that they are wronged therein; for in both of these two matters, no other kind of swearing and oath is treated than that which is a species of a vow, by which a person binds and pledges himself of his own accord and on his own initiative to do or not to do this or that: as when someone swears he will drink only water in the future and eat no meat. Many such examples stand in the book Shulchan Aruch, in the part called Yoreh De'ab, number 238, and the oath which a Jew swears to a Christian or to the Christian authority has nothing whatsoever to do with this. Therefore Rabbi Salman Zevi writes the plain truth in his book, the Jewish Theriac, which he published in response to Samuel Friedrich Brentzen's discarded Jewish Snakeskin, when he expresses himself as follows against the above-cited accusation of Brentzen, p. 18, col. 2, and p. 19, col. 1, in Chapter 3, number 9: דא שרייבט אונזר מיר מרוחקנו

'מנודה וואס צו שוורן גיגן דען קרישטן וגו' וויל היר מויך גנוגן בדינגן דש ער אונר ליגט. ווג דש כל נדרי ניט חיל מין שבועה געט דיא מיין יוד דעם אנדרן מודר מיין יוד גיגן חיינם גוי טוט. עס גיט היין נדרים דיא מיינר פֿויר זיך מאכט מיט מיינם נדר, מודר מיט מיינר שבועה. מוס דער פסוק זאגט איש כי ידור נדר לה' או השבע שבועה לאסור איסר על נפשו ווגן מיינר מיין נדר טוט משל פֿאָאשטן מודר אנדרש. דא הילפֿט כל נדרי דאצו דס ער צו מיא' קן זוטן אתיר זיין על פי יחיד מומחה דש מיז דורך מיין חכם גדול בתורה. מודר דורך ג' הדיוטות מודר מיט דרייא שלעכטן לייטן. זיך מיין מין פֿירוש המנורים מודר חין פון פוסקים דש כל נדרי מויך חין נדרים ניט הילפֿט ווען זיך מיינר דרויף ורלוסט מוג 'גידענקט פֿון כל נדרי מי ער דש גילבט. מוג 'טוט דש נדר דאך ומרט. זה איט פֿרש המזמן. חבר קיין בן אדם בעולם קען זאגן דש כל נדרי מתיר מיין מיין שבועה, וואס אעכט מיין יוד גיגן דעם אנדרן That is: here the apostate writes, "we permit one another to swear falsely against the Christian, etc." I will here also furnish sufficient proof that the apostate lies, and that Kol Nidre does not apply to an oath which a Jew takes toward another, or which a Jew takes toward a Gentile. It applies solely to vows which a person takes upon himself by means of a vow or by means of an oath, as Scripture says (Num 30:3): "When a man makes a vow to the Lord, or swears an oath to bind his soul" (that is, himself). When a person makes a vow, such as to fast or something else, then Kol Nidre serves to enable him to be released from it by an eminent man, that is, by one who is very well versed in the Law, or by three ordinary men. See the commentary (on Kol Nidre) in the Machzors, or in all the scholars who have written on it, that Kol Nidre likewise does not avail anything even with respect to vows, when a person relies upon it and thinks of Kol Nidre before he makes the vow, and yet makes the vow anyway; in that case he must keep it. But no person in the world can say that Kol Nidre dissolves an oath (which one takes toward another); otherwise a Jew might also swear falsely against another Jew. Indeed, no Christian nor Jew is excluded from this. These are the defenses which the Jews can put forward in their justification.*

To now state my opinion on this matter, I must confess that in the Rabbinic books, as mentioned above, false swearing is strictly forbidden, and that it is true that in the aforementioned two categories of releases from a vow or oath, nothing other than those oaths is dealt with which are of the kind of vows whereby someone binds himself freely and of his own impulse, without the request or imposition of anyone else, to do or to omit something. For this reason, Rabbi Salman Zevi, who otherwise deals with untruth in a frivolous and deceitful manner in many respects, writes the plain truth here. That his statement in this regard is true can be seen as clear as day from the book Arba turim, in the section called Orach chajim, number 619, fol. 287, col. 2, where it is written as follows: ומהו ביטול אינו מועיל אלא לנדרי עצמו ושבועת שישבע מעצמו אבל נדר שהנחילו או מריה או שבועה שהחילו או ביה דין משביעין אותו אין מועיל להם ביטול: that is, this annulment (of a vow and oath, and the release therefrom) is of no use for anything other than the vows which a person makes of his own accord, and the oath which a person swears of his own accord. As for the vow which a person's neighbor (or fellow man) causes him to make, or the oath which a person's neighbor or the court causes him to swear, the annulment (and absolution) is of no use to them. Precisely the same is also taught by Rabbi Mordechai Japhe in his book Lefusch malchuth, number 619, §. I, f. 206, col. 4, in the section called Lefusch bachor, in nearly the same words, but with an addition, when he writes: מיהו ביטול אינו מועיל אלא לנדרים שנודר מעצמו ושבועה שישבע בעצמו אבל נדר שהנחיל סדרו ושבועה שהנחילו או בית דין משביעין אותו אין מועיל בהן לא ביטול ולא תנאי שהרי הוא נודר ונשבע על דעת חבירו ועל דעת ביה דין that is, this annulment is of no use except for those vows which a person makes of his own accord, and the oath which a person swears of his own accord. As for the vow which a person's neighbor causes him to make, or the oath which a person's neighbor or the court imposes upon him to swear, neither the annulment nor any condition is of any use, for behold, he vows and swears according to the intention of his neighbor and according to the intention of the court. In the Machsor printed at Sulzbach in folio with a Commentario, in the second part, fol. 141, col. 1, in the commentary on Col nidre, the following is likewise read: אין ההיתר מועיל אלא לנדרי עצמו אבל לא מה שחבירו או בית דין מזירין אותו: that is, this release is of no use except for the vows which a person makes of his own accord, but not for that which a person's neighbor or the court causes him to vow and to swear. Likewise, in the old Prague Machsor, in the Commentario, or the commentary on the aforementioned Col nidre, the entire matter is explained as pertaining to nothing other than vows.

That the absolution which is performed by an eminent Rabbi, or by three ordinary men, is to be understood as applying only to vows, this is made clear from the commentary of Rabbi Bechai on the five books of Moses, fol. 185, col. 3, in the Parascha Mattóth, where he expresses himself as follows: מפני שאין בכל העבירות כלן עבירה חמורה כעובר על השבועה ויצר לב האדם רע מנעוריו והוא כעס תמיד ותוך כעסו קופץ ונשבע לכך הוצרכה תורה להקדים רפואה למכה ולצוות על התרת הנדרים על פי יחיד מומחה או שלשה הדיוטות: that is, Since among all transgressions there is none so grave as when a person breaks an oath (and violates it), and the inclination of the heart of man is evil from his youth, and he is constantly wrathful, and in his wrath he leaps up and swears; therefore the Law found it necessary to apply a remedy to the wound beforehand, and to command the dissolution of vows by means of an eminent (Rabbi) or by three ordinary men. Further proof of this kind could be adduced, were it necessary; but from what has been presented one can sufficiently see that the Jews, insofar as judgment can be made from the teaching of their Rabbis, are wronged in this matter. Yet in the commentary of Rabbi Solomon Jarchi on Jer 39:6, it is recorded that the Synedrion, or the High Council at Jerusalem, released King Zidkiam from the oath which he had sworn to King Nebucad-Nezar, on account of which they were also put to death; for concerning the words, "And the King of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah," he writes as follows: את אלו הסנהדרין שהתירו לו את שבועתו, that is, These are the Synedrion, or the High Councillors, who released him from his oath. Whether the Jews, contrary to the above-cited teaching of the Rabbis, also follow this example, because the entire Great Council at Jerusalem absolved King Zidkiam from his oath, and release one another from an oath that has been sworn to a Christian or to the Christian authorities, I cannot know, since I have as yet found nothing on this matter in their books.

Although the Jews, as has been reported, can be absolved neither through the annulment of vows and oaths customary at the Day of Atonement by means of Kol nidre, nor otherwise by a distinguished rabbi or three ordinary men, from an oath which they have sworn to a Christian or to the Christian authorities, according to the doctrine they themselves cite, there are nevertheless other reasons why an oath which a Jew swears to Christians ought not to be regarded as worth much, and why one can have little assurance that he has sworn it sincerely and not falsely.

The first reason consists in this: that they, by the admission of their own rabbis, are accustomed to swearing falsely and lightly; concerning which, in the book Menoráth hammáor fol. 13, col. 4., in the 1st chapter, under the title Nerschéni, kelál schéni, chélek schéni, it is written as follows: הנשבע בשקר דומה שהו: הוא כמכחיש את אמתת השם וגו' וכל כך הם מורגלים בני אדם בדבר זה שעוברים עליו קצתם מאה פעמים ביום או יותר בלי שום הנאה שמקלים ומחליין בו את השם בפרהסיא. ושמא עון זה: that is, Whoever swears falsely is like one who denies the truth of God, etc. But people are so accustomed to this matter that some of them sin therein a hundred times a day and more, without receiving any benefit thereby, and through it publicly desecrate the name of God. Perhaps also this sin, so common in the mouths of the Israelites, keeps us in the exilio, or misery, of this army (that is, of the Christians). This is also confirmed in the little book Schévet Jehúda fol. 64, col. 2., where seven things are set forth on account of which much misfortune and tribulation has come upon the Jews, and the fifth reads as follows: ה' מה שהורגלו העם לישבע על: שקר וכתב ר' עזרא כי זה לבד יספיק להאריך קצנו: that is, The fifth is that which the people have made a habit of, namely false swearing; and Aben Esra writes that this alone is sufficient to prolong our end (of the exilium, or misery). With this Rabbi Bechai also agrees in his book Cad bakkémach, fol. 71, col. 2., under the title Oth Schin, when he expresses himself thus: ואלו לא היה בישראל רק: עבירה זו תספיק להאריך הגלות והגלויה ולהוסיף מכה על מכותנו: that is, If among the Israelites there were no other sin than this one, it would be sufficient to prolong the exilium, or misery, and to multiply our plagues. Beyond this, the aforementioned Rabbi Béchai writes in his frequently cited commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 90, col. 2, in the Parascha Vajischma Jethro, as follows: רבים חושבים כי הנושא השם יתברך לשוא לא עבר עברה גדולה : that is, Many hold the opinion that he who takes the name of the blessed God in vain (and misuses it through false swearing) commits no great sin. Since they do not regard it as a grave sin, they also swear a false oath for a trivial reason.

To such false, godless oath-swearing, that which is written in the Sepher chasidim (in which otherwise many good things are to be found) at numero 613, fol. 53, col. 3, can give them even further occasion, in these words: יש מן העונות שאין מתכפרים אלא לאחר נקמה ופרעון בעולם הזה והסד 'הראשונה שבועת שקר ונה נאמר כי לא ינקה ה' את אשר ישא את שמו לשוא. השני שופך דם נקי כמו שכתוב ונקיתי דמם לא נקיתי. השלישי הנואף עם אשת איש כמו שכתוב הבא אל אשת רעהו לא ינקה כל הנוגע בה הרביעי המעיד עדות שקר ככתוב גד שקרים לא ינקה. אלו עונות אם יעשה אדם אותם ויעשה מהם תשובה ופרע ממנו היוצר בעולם הזה בפרעון קל בשביל שנאמר בהן לא ינקה ואחר כך That is: There are certain sins which are not atoned for (and forgiven) except after vengeance and punishment in this world, and there are four kinds of them. The first is the false oath, and of it it is said (Exod 20:7): For the Lord will not leave unpunished him who takes His name in vain. The second is when someone sheds innocent blood, as it is written (Joel 3:21): For should I leave their blood unpunished? I will not leave it unpunished. The third is when someone commits adultery with another man's wife, as it is written (Prov 6:29): So it is with him who goes to his neighbor's wife: none who touches her will go unpunished. The fourth is when someone gives false testimony, as it is written (Prov 19:5, 9): A false witness will not go unpunished. When a person commits these sins and repents of them, the Creator therefore punishes him with a light punishment in this world, because of all four of them it is said: he will not go unpunished; after that, however, he will be freed from the judgment of hell. This, I say, can give occasion for false swearing, because since every Jew imagines that he performs genuine repentance for all his committed sins on the Day of Atonement, and the punishment for perjury in this world after repentance is supposed to be only slight, and the punishment of hell is therefore not at all to be feared on that account, a person may easily thereby be induced to swear a false oath.

The second reason why little weight should be placed on a Jew's oath is that the rabbis teach that on the Day of Atonement all their sins, even the most grievous, are forgiven by God, so that they are then as pure as the holy angels in heaven, and that even the chief devil Sammaël himself was compelled to acknowledge this. Concerning the forgiveness and atonement of all their sins, the following is taught in Médrasch Tillim fol. 13, col. 2. on the 15th Psalm: כל מה שישראל מתלכלכן בעבירות כל ימות השנה בא יום הכפורים ומכפר להם שנאמר כי ביום הזה יכפר עליכם: That is, the Day of Atonement atones for all the sins with which the Israelites are defiled on every day of the year, as it is said (Lev 16:30): For on this day shall he (namely, the High Priest) make atonement for you. The very same thing is also to be found in the Jalkut Schimóni on the Psalms, fol. 94, col. 4. numerô 665, and in Pesikta rábbetha fol. 15, col. 1, though with a change of wording. And in the Jalkut chádascb it is read at fol. 121, col. 1. 3. numerô 1 and 11, under the title Mila, from the 29th chapter of the chapters of Rabbi Eliezer: של"בה רואה דם הברית של אברהם אבינו ומכפר על כל עונותינו שנאמר כי ביום הזה יכפר עליכם לטהר אתכם מכל חטאותיכם: That is, on the Day of Atonement Abraham was circumcised, and the holy, blessed God looks every year upon the blood of the covenant of the circumcision of our father Abraham and atones for (or forgives) all our transgressions, as it is said (Lev 16:30): For on this day shall he make atonement for you, to cleanse you from all your sins. Concerning this forgiveness of all sins on the Day of Atonement on account of the blood of Abraham's circumcision, one may also consult the book Toledóth Yitzbak, fol. 23, col. 2. in the Parascha Lech lechá, as well as the book Cad hakkémach, fol. 43, col. 4. under the title Osh Mem.

Further, in the book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 62, col. 4. in the 7th chapter, under the title Chélek hattáehlith, it is written thus: ביום הכפורים יום ביעור חמץ: שהוא יצר הרע אין חטא ואין אשם: that is, On the Day of Atonement, which is a day of the removal of leaven, that is, of the evil disposition and nature, no sin nor guilt is found. In the book Pesikta rábbetha it is also written, fol. 72, col. 1.: ביום הכפורים הק"ה מטהר את ישראל ומכפר על עונותיהם: that is, On the Day of Atonement the holy and blessed God purifies the Israelites and forgives their avonóth (or avónos), that is, misdeeds. By the avónos, however, the Jews understand those sins which are otherwise also committed willfully, against one's better knowledge, which are also otherwise called by them זדונות Sedonóth (or Sedónos), from זדון Sádon, which signifies pride, and are set in opposition to the sins that are committed through error and ignorance, which are called שגגות Schegagóth (or Schegógos), that is, errors, from שגג Schagág, to err. Hence it is read in the book Cad hakkémach fol. 40, col. 1. at the end of the title Oth Caph: זדונות שעת אלו הזדונות: that is, Our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have said that by the Avónos the Sedónos are to be understood; and this is taken from the Talmudic tractate Jóma fol. 36, col. 2. Now if sins committed willfully are thereby forgiven, then a false oath, which is taken with deliberate intent, must also be pardoned.

That according to Jewish teaching, not only minor but also the most grievous sins are forgiven on that day is clearly evident from chapter 46 of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer, where the words read as follows: הָיָה יוֹם הַכַּפּוּרִים לֹא הָיָה הָעוֹלָם עוֹמֵד שְׁיוֹם הַכַּפּוּרִים מְכַפֵּר בְּעוֹלָם הַנָּה וּבְעוֹלָם הַבָּא שְׁנֵאמַר שֶׁבַת שְׁבָתוֹן הוּא לָכֶם שֶׁבַת בְּעוֹלָם הַנָּה שְׁבָתוֹן בְּעוֹלָם הַבָּא : וְנֶאֱפִילוּ כָּל הַמּוֹעֲדִים עוֹבְרִים יוֹם הַכַּפּוּרִים אֵינוֹ עוֹבֵר שְׁיוֹם הַכַּפּוּרִים מְכַפֵּר עַל הַקְּלוֹת וְעַל הַחֲמוּרוֹת שְׁנֵאמַר בִּי בְיוֹם הַזֶּה יִכָּפֵר עֲלֵיכֶם מִכָּל חַטֹּאתֵיכֶם : That is: Were the Day of Atonement not to exist, the world could not endure; for the Day of Atonement makes atonement in this world and in the world to come, as it is said (Lev 16:31 and 23:32): It shall be for you Shabbáth Shabbathón, that is, a Sabbath of Sabbaths, a Sabbath in this world and a Shabbathón in the world to come. And even if all the feast days were to pass away (that is, to be abolished), the Day of Atonement would not pass away, for it makes atonement for all minor and grievous sins, as it is said (Lev 16:30): For on this day shall he make atonement for you (so that you are cleansed) from all your sins. It does not say "from your sins," but rather "from all your sins."

In the book called Sépher Chasidím, there is written at fol. 8, col. 4, numero 20, the following on this matter: שְׁעִיר הַמִּשְׁתַּלַּח מְכַפֵּר עַל כָּל עֲבִירוֹת שֶׁבַתוֹרָה קְלוֹת וְחֲמוּמוֹת בֵּין עֵבֶר בְּזוּדוֹן בֵּין עֵבֶר בְּשִׁגְגָה הַכֹּל מִתְכַּפֵּר בְּשְׁעִיר הַמִּשְׁתַּלַּח וְהוּא שִׁיעֲשֶׂה תְּשׁוּבָה אֲבָל אִם לֹא עָשָׂה תְּשׁוּבָה אֵין הַשְׁעִיר מְכַפֵּר אֲלֵא עַל הַקְּלוֹת. וְזֶה הֵן הַקְּלוֹת וְזֶה הֵן הַחֲמוּמוֹת הַחֲמוּמוֹת הֵן שְׁחִיבִין עֲלֵיהֶן מִיתַת בֵּית דִּין אוֹ כֶּרֶת. וְשׁוֹבְעֵת שׁוֹא וְשִׁקָּר אֶע"פ שֶׁאֵין בָּהֶן כֶּרֶת. הֲרִי הֵן מִן הַחֲמוּמוֹת וְשֹׂאֵר מִצְוֹת עֲשֵׂה וּמִצְוֹת לֹא תַעֲשֶׂה שֶׁאֵין בָּהֶן כֶּרֶת הֲרִי הֵן מִן הַקְּלוֹת וּבְזִמָּן זֶה שֶׁאֵין בֵּית הַמִּקְדָּשׁ קַיִם וְאֵין לָנוּ כִּפְרָה עַל הַמִּזְבֵּחַ אֵין שֵׁם אֵל תְּשׁוּבָה. הַתְּשׁוּבָה מְכַפֶּרֶת עַל כָּל הָעֲבִירוֹת אֲפִילוּ הִיא רִשְׁעָה גְּמוּרָה כָּל יְמֵיו וְעָשָׂה תְּשׁוּבָה בְּאַחֲרוֹנָה אֵין מְזַכְרִין לוֹ אֶת רִשְׁעוֹ שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר וְרִשְׁעָתוֹ הָרִשְׁעָה לֹא יִכָּשֵׁל בָּהּ בְּיוֹם שׁוֹבוֹ מִרְשָׁעוֹ וְעֲצָמוֹ שֶׁל יוֹם הַכַּפּוּרִים מְכַפֵּר : that is, the goat which is sent away (into the wilderness, as is to be read in Lev 16:22) atones for all grave and light or minor sins mentioned in the Law, whether one has sinned willfully or through error; all is atoned for through the goat that is sent away, provided only that one repents; for if one does not repent, the goat atones only for the minor sins. Which, then, are the minor and the grave sins? The grave ones are those by which one becomes guilty of punishment by death, carried out by the house of judgment, or of extirpation. As for oaths that are sworn in vain and falsely, these too belong among the grave sins, even though they do not merit extirpation. The remaining affirmative commandments, however, as well as the prohibitive commandments in which there is no extirpation, belong among the light or minor sins. But in this present time, when the Temple does not stand and we have no atonement at the altar, there is nothing but repentance to avail. Repentance atones for all transgressions; even if one has been entirely godless all the days of his life and repents at the last, his godlessness shall no longer be remembered, as it is said (Ezek 33:12): "And as for the godlessness of the godless, he shall not fall thereby on the day that he turns from his godlessness." The Day of Atonement itself also atones for those who repent, as it is said (Lev 16:30): "For on this day shall he make atonement for you, עֲרָךְ."

That on that day they shall be as pure from sin and as holy as the angels in heaven: this is taught by Rabbi Meir in his book Avodáth hakkódesh fol. 62, col. 3. in the 7th chapter under the title Chélek hattáchlich, with these words: ביום כפורים הם נקיים כמלאכי השרת, that is, on the Day of Atonement they (namely the Jews) are as pure as the ministering angels. And in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the five books of Moses it is taught fol. 195, col. 4. in the Parascha Vaëthbannán: אין שותין ולא אוכלין לבנים לא אכלין ולא שותין, that is, they are (on the Day of Atonement) like the ministering angels. They put on white garments and eat and drink nothing, and there is no sin or transgression in them, for the holy and blessed God forgives all their avónos, or transgressions.

That the Devil himself was compelled to confess that they are holy and pure from all sins: this is read in Rabbi Menáchem of Recanat's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 141, col. 1. in the Parascha Acharémeth, and the words there read as follows: אמר סמאל לפני הק"ב רבוננו של עולם על כל אומות העולם נתת לי רשות ועל ישראל אי אתה נותן לי רשות. אמר לו הרי יש לך רשות עליהם ביום הכפורים אם יש להם חטא ואם אין אין לך רשות עליהם לפיכך נורגין לו שוחד ביום הכפורים שלא לבטל קרבן ישראל שנאמר גורל אחד לה' וגורל ראה סמאל שאין להם חטא ביום הכפורים אמר לפני הק"ב רבוננו של עולם יש לך עם אחד בארץ כמלאכי השרת בשמים מה מלאכי השרת אין להם אכילה ושתייה כך ישראל ביום הכפורים: מה מלאכי השרת יחפי רגל כך ישראל יחפי רגל. מה מלאכי השרת אין להם קפיצה כך ישראל עומדין על רגליהם ביום הכפורים. מה מלאכי השרת נקיים מכל חטא אף ישראל נקיים מכל חטא ביום הכפורים — מה מלאכי השרת שלום מתוך ביניהם כך ישראל שלום מתוך ביניהם ביום הכפורים וגו' that is, Sammaël (who is the chief Devil, as was reported above in the 18th chapter of the first part) spoke to the holy blessed God: "O Lord of the world! You have given me power over all the nations of the world, but over the Israelites You give me no power." He answered him: "See, you shall have power over them on the Day of Atonement, provided they have a sin upon them; but if not, you shall have no power over them. For this reason, one gives him a gift on the Day of Atonement, so that he does not annul the sacrifice of the Israelites, as it is said (Lev 16:8): 'One lot for the Lord, and one lot for Asasel,' etc." Now after Sammaël had seen that on the Day of Atonement there was no sin upon them, he spoke to the holy blessed God: "O Lord of the world! You have a people upon the earth who are like the ministering angels in heaven. Just as the ministering angels neither eat nor drink, so too do the Israelites on the Day of Atonement. Just as the ministering angels go barefoot, so too do the Israelites go barefoot. Just as the ministering angels do not leap, so too do the Israelites stand upon their feet on the Day of Atonement. Just as the angels are pure from all sin, so too are the Israelites on the Day of Atonement pure from all sin. Just as there is peace among the ministering angels, so too is there peace among the Israelites on the Day of Atonement." This is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 138, col. 4 in the Parascha Acharé moth, and it is taken from the 46th chapter of the Chapters of Rabbi Eliezer.

Concerning such purity of the Jews from all sins, there is also a ridiculous fable in the Jalkut Shimóni on the Psalms, fol. 101, col. 1, 2, numerô 32, with these words: ביום הכפורים בא שטן לקטרג את ישראל והוא פורט עונותיהם ואומר רבון העולמים גנבים הם ישראל והק"ב פורט זכויותיהן של ישראל מה עושה נוטל קנה של מאזנים והוא מעיין את העונות כנגד הזכויות והן שוקלין אלו כנגד אלו ושתי כפות של מאזנים שוות והשטן הולך להביא עונות וליתן בכף עונות ולהכריעה מה הק"ב עושה נוטל את העונות מתוך הכף ומטמינם תחת פורפורה שלו והשטן בא ואיננו מוצא שם עון שנאמר יבוקש את עון ישראל ואיננו. כיון שהשטן רואה כן אמר לפניו רבון העולמים נשאת עון עמך כסית כל חטאתם חטא דוד משבח לישראל שנאמר אשרי נשוי פשע כסוי חטאה that is, the Satan came (one time) on the Day of Atonement (to God) to accuse the Israelites, and he itemized their sins (and recounted them all one after another) and said to Him: O Lord of the worlds! the Israelites are thieves. Then the holy blessed God itemized the merits (and good works) of the Israelites. What did He do? He took a balance beam (that is, a scale) and weighed the sins against the merits, and they were weighed against one another, and the two pans of the scale were equal to each other. Then Satan went off to fetch more sins and to place them on the pan of sins, so that it might tip the scale. What did the holy blessed God do? He took the sins out of the pan and hid them under His purple robe; and Satan came back and found no sin there, as it is said (Jer 50:20): The iniquity of Israel shall be sought, but there shall be none. When Satan saw this, he said to Him: O Lord of the worlds! You have forgiven the iniquity of Your people and covered all their sins. For this reason David praises the Israelites, as it is said (Ps 32:1): Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered.

When the Jews on the Day of Atonement are cleansed, in the manner described, of all the sins they have committed, and these sins are forgiven by God in such a way that even the Devil can no longer find any among them and cannot accuse them at all, it necessarily follows that the perjury committed by them against Christians and Christian authorities is likewise forgiven at that time, not through the release effected by Kol Nidre, but nonetheless through the general forgiveness of all sins, even if they swore such an oath out of deliberate willfulness. They also call upon God on the aforementioned Day of Atonement, as can be seen in the Machzor printed here in Frankfurt in the year 450, that is, in the year 1690 A.D., in quarto, fol. 47, col. 2, under the title Tephilláth jom Kippur, in a prayer which begins באַנס וברצון על חטא שחטאנו לפניך, Al chet schechatánu lefanécha beónes verázon, which appears in all Machzorim, as follows: (Forgive us all our misdeeds and transgressions:) על חטא שחטאנו לפניך, that is, the sin which we have committed before You out of sadon, that is, pride (namely, willfully and deliberately), as well as out of error (and ignorance). Shortly after this follows: וְעַל חַטָּא שְׁחַטְאָנוּ לְפָנֶיךָ בְּחִלּוּל הַשֵּׁם, that is, and the sin which we have committed before You through the desecration of Your name. After this follows, at fol. 48, col. 1: וְעַל חַטָּא שְׁחַטְאָנוּ לְפָנֶיךָ בְּשִׁבּוּעַת שָׁוְא, that is, and the sin which we have committed before You through a vain (false) oath. Now if they did not believe that the sins which they commit wantonly and deliberately for the sake of temporal gain, among which is also included the desecration of the name of God that occurs through a false oath, would be forgiven them, it would be strange of them to call upon God for that very purpose.

Furthermore, as was indicated above in the 4th chapter of this second part, at pagina 285, all Israelites or Jews are sureties for one another, since they are all said to be one soul. Concerning this matter, the book Nischmáth ádam, in the first chapter, fol. 7, col. 1, contains the following passage: כולם כגוף אחד ונפש אחת יחשבו וזהו סוד כל ישראל ערבים זה לזה כי כולם נקשרים יחד בקשר חזק ואמין : that is, they are all like one body, and are all counted as one soul, and this is the mystery of the words: all Israelites are sureties for one another, because they are all bound together with a strong and firm bond. In the book Reschith chóchma fol. 55, col. 2, in the 14th chapter, under the title Scháar bajirah, on the words (Deut 32:9) "For Jacob is the Chével," that is, the portion of His inheritance, the following is taught: פירוש היות ששים רבוא נשמות של ישראל אחוזות זה בזה כחבל הזה השזורה מיוחדת כאחת בלי פירוד. וכן החבל המתוח אם תנענע ראשו כולם זו בזו כחבל הזה השזורה מיוחדת כאחת בלי פירוד. וכן החבל המתוח אם תנענע ראשו תנענע כולו. ולכך אם יחטא איש ועל כל העדה יקצוף כענין מעשה עכן והטעם שכל ישראל : That is, the word Chével (which also means a rope and a cord) signifies that all six hundred thousand souls of the Israelites cling to one another, just as a rope (twisted from many threads or hemp fibers) is spun together and, when moved at one end without being severed, moves in its entirety; therefore, when a man sins, He (namely God) is angered at the entire congregation, just as the story of Achan demonstrates. The reason, however, is that all Israelites are sureties for one another. Rabbi Bechai likewise expresses himself in his commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 151, col. 2, in the

Parascha Bechukothai, on the words of Lev 26:37, "And one shall fall upon another," as follows: דרשו ר"זל בעון אחיו מלמד שכל ישראל ערבים זה לזה וכן אמר: משה כל איש ישראל, כל ישראל נתפשים בעון איש אחד, וכן אתה מוצא בענן שהוא החוטא וכל ישראל נתפשים בחטאו שנאמר חטא ישראל וגם גנבו וגם כחשו וגם שמו בכליהם, חטא היחיד תלאו על כל ישראל. ומה אמרו בשיר השירים רבה אל גנת אגוז ירדתי למה נמשלו ישראל לאגוז מה אגוז אתה נוטל אחד מן הכרי כולן מרדדין ומתגלגלין זה אחר זה כך לקה ישראל: אחד מהם כולם מרגישינן שנאמר האיש אחד יחטא ועל כל העדה תקצוף: that is, our Rabbis, of blessed memory, have interpreted this passage as referring to the sin of another (so that the meaning is: one shall fall on account of another's sin), which teaches us that all Israelites are sureties for one another. Moses likewise said (Deut 29:10): the whole of Israel, (for) all Israelites are held accountable for the sin of one man; and thus you find it in the case of Achan, who (as can be seen in Josh 7:1) had sinned, and yet the whole of Israel was held accountable for his sin, as it is said (Josh 7:11): Israel has sinned; they have also stolen (from the devoted things), and denied it, and placed it among their belongings. The sin of one was laid upon all of Israel. Concerning this, it is said in Schir haschirim rabba (on the words): I went down into the garden of nuts: why are the Israelites compared to a nut? Just as, when one nut is taken from a pile, all the others roll down and tumble after one another, so too when one of the Israelites is struck, they all feel it, as it is said (Num 16:22): shall one man sin, and will You be angry with the entire congregation? These are the words of Rabbi Bechai. Now if not all sins were forgiven to the Jews on the Day of Atonement, perjury being included among them, then all unforgiven sins would be imputed to all Jews, since they are all regarded as one body and one soul and are sureties for one another; and it would follow from this that everything their Rabbis write and teach so repeatedly about their holiness and purity from all sins at the feast of atonement is pure fiction and foolish delusion. But since they will not admit that it is a vain delusion, it must then follow that perjury too is forgiven at that time.

In addition to this, there are indeed many other means by which the Jews believe they can obtain the forgiveness of their sins, of which detailed mention has been made above in the aforementioned 4th chapter of this second part, from page 274 to the end of the chapter, among which exile or misery, and death, are also included. Now if sins are also atoned for through these two things, as the Jews firmly believe, then they need not doubt the pardon of perjury either, since they are all in exilio, or misery, and must all die at some point.

The third reason why little weight should be placed on a Jew's oath, and why one cannot be assured that he has not sworn falsely, is that the rabbis teach that an oath taken under compulsion is no oath at all; and they further permit that one who swears to a Christian or to the high authorities may annul the oath in his heart and mind, so that he may say one thing with his mouth while thinking another in his heart. That they teach that an oath taken under compulsion is no oath is found in their law book, the Shulchan áruch, in the section called Joréh déa, numéro 232, §. 12, in the annotation, fol. 199, col. 1, in these words: כל שהוא אנוס בשבועה אף על פי שאמר על דעת רבים או על דעת המקום : That is: Whoever is compelled to take an oath, his oath is to be regarded as nothing (and as no oath at all), even if he says that he does so according to the opinion of many (that is, according to the intention and purpose of those who have him swear the oath) and according to the opinion of God. Now if this is believed by the Jews, then anyone who is required by the Christian authorities to take an oath, for the preservation or confirmation of that for the sake of which the oath is imposed upon him, may boldly swear and think that it is nonetheless invalid, because he was compelled to do so and could not have attained his purpose in any other way.

That it is also permitted for them, when taking an oath that has been imposed upon them, to say one thing with the mouth and to think another in the heart, and in this manner to annul the words of the mouth inwardly, I prove from the cited passage of the book Joréh déa, numéro 232, §. 14, where it is written as follows: הנודר או הנשבע לאנס. לא הוי נדר ולא שבועה לפיכך נודרים להרגים ולמוכסים אם הוא מוכס העומד בלא צווי המלך או שבא ליטול ממנו יותר מקצבתו יכול לידור או לישבע כדי ליפטר ממנו ואומר יאסרו עלי כל פירות שבעולם אם איני מבית המלך ליפטר מן ההרג. או אם אין מה שאני מביא מבית חמלך ליפטר מן המכס וחושב בלבו יאסרו עלי רק היום אף על פי שמוציא מפיו סתם וקיימא לן דברים שבלב אינם דברים גבי 'אנס שרי ואפילו לא בקש ממנו שידור והוא נודר מעצמו או הוסיף לידור יותר ממה שבקש וג או שבקש ממנו שידור והוא נשבע אינו כלום שכל מה שעושה אינו עושה אלא מחמת האונס : That is: when someone makes a vow to a violent person (or one who uses compulsion), or swears an oath, it is no vow and no oath. For this reason, one makes vows to murderers and toll-collectors; when it is a toll-collector who stands without the king's command, or when he wishes to take more (toll) from someone than has been set (and ordained for him to take), one may make him a vow or swear him an oath in order to get free of him, and say: all fruits in the world shall be forbidden to me (to eat) if I am not of the king's household, so as to be rid of the murderer; or, if what I am bringing is not from the king's household, so as to be free of the toll. But he thinks in his heart: let them be forbidden to me only for today, even though he speaks it plainly from his mouth. For it is firmly established and certain among us (and demonstrable) that words which are in the heart are not considered words, and that it is permitted to do this in the case of one who uses compulsion, even if that person has not demanded that he make a vow and he makes a vow of his own accord, or he has pledged more than that person required, etc. Or if that person has demanded that he make a vow and he swears it, this is to be regarded as nothing, since everything he does he does only on account of the compulsion and in order to confirm his words against the violent person, yet all of this according to the necessity of the matter. From this one sees clearly that it is permitted for a Jew, when a toll-collector wishes to take more toll from him than has been determined for him to take, to swear falsely to that person with his mouth while annulling the oath inwardly in his mind, so as merely to be freed from the toll.

מלך או שלטון שציוו לישבע להגיד על א' אם בא על הגויה כדי להענישו מיהה מיקרי שבועת אונס ויש לבטלה בלבם. וכן אם ראובן הפקיד ממון ביד שמעון וצוה המלך או השר להחרים על מי שיודע ממון של ראובן אם העכ"ם רוצה ליקח ממון של ראובן באונס שלא כדין אין החרם כלום וכן יוכל הנפקד לישבע שאין לו משל ראובן ובלבד שיבטלו בלבם ובלבד That is: When a king or prince commands (a Jew) to swear and to testify against (another Jew) whether that person has carnally mingled with a Goja or Christian woman, in order to punish him with death, such an oath is called a compelled oath and must be annulled in the mind (when it is sworn). Likewise, when Reuben has deposited money with Simeon, and a king or prince commands that whoever has knowledge of Reuben's money be placed under the ban, such a ban is of no account when the idolater (namely the king or prince) wishes to take Reuben's money by force and without right. And thus the one with whom the money has been deposited may also swear that he has nothing belonging to Reuben, provided only that such persons annul the oath in their hearts and that the name of God is not profaned in the matter. So too writes Rabbi Jacob Weil in his book Scheelóth utheschuvóth fol. 25, col. 2. numero 53.: כשהשר משביע יהודי שלא יצא מארצו יחשוב: בלבם. היום, ואף אם יפרש לו לעולם יחשוב בלבם על הנאי דבר זה That is: When a prince causes a Jew to swear an oath that he will not leave his land, he (namely the Jew) shall think in his heart: today (I will not leave it, but I may well do so at another time). If, however, he (the prince) expressly states to him that he shall never leave it at all, then he shall think in his heart: under such and such a condition (will I not depart). From this one can judge what deceitful tricks and stratagems the Jews are permitted to employ when swearing their oaths, provided they can arrange the matter so secretly that the Christians do not become aware of their false maneuvers. For this reason, in the aforementioned place in the book Shulchan áruch, in the section Jóre déa, fol. 199, col. 1., in the annotation, it is taught:

וכל זה לא מיירי אלא כשאפשר לעבור על שבועתו ונדרו שלא יודע לעכ"ם אבל אם יודע לעכ"ם אסור מפני חלול השם ולכן נענש צדקיהו שעבר על שבועתו לנבוכדנצר אף על פי שהיה בדרך אונס: That is: All of this, however, is only said when it is possible to transgress the oath in such a way that the idolater (the Christian, or otherwise a pagan) does not find out; but if the idolater should find out, it is forbidden on account of the profanation of the name of God. For this reason Zedekiah was also punished, because he transgressed and broke the oath he had sworn to Nebucad-Nezar, even though that oath had been made under compulsion. Who, then, would trust a Jew upon his oath, given that he may regard every oath imposed upon him as a compelled one?

It is true that Rabbi Isaac Abúhaf, in his book Menoráth hammáor, fol. 13, col. 4., in the 2nd chapter, under the title Ner schéni, kelál schéni, chélek schéni, wishes to teach that when an oath concerns a debt that a Jew owes to any person, including a Goi or Christian, the oath ought not to be annulled in the mind; for he writes: או בשגגה או דברים שהם בשגגה או באונס שא"עפ שנשבע עליו ואינו כן אינו עובר עליהם אם אין פיו ולבו שוין לפי שמוציא בשפתיו בענין אחד וכוונת לבו הוא בענין אחר ובלבד שאינו מכחיש לשום אדם ואפילו לגוי שום חיוב אמיתי שיש לו עליו אבל צריך לזיזר שלא יחשדו עליו מפני חלול השם: that is, although the circumstances of oaths are weighty, there are nevertheless certain cases where they occur through error or compulsion, such that, even if someone swears on account of them and it is not so, he does not transgress against them if his mouth and heart are not in agreement with one another, since he utters one thing with his lips while his heart is directed toward another thing, provided only that he denies no person, not even a Goi (that is, a Christian or heathen), any true debt that such a person has against him; he must, however, take care that no suspicion of profaning the name of God (that is, of perjury) falls upon him. I, however, would certainly not trust a Jew's oath on this basis, for when matters have reached the point where a man believes he commits no sin by swearing an oath concerning all other things that do not involve a debt, and may then annul that oath again in his heart, there is very great reason to fear that he will also commit the same wickedness in this particular case as well.

Such an improper manner of deceiving people through a false oath, and of having one thing in the mouth while swearing and another in the heart, and of mentally annulling what one speaks with the tongue, they have learned from their Talmud, from their ancient Rabbis; for in the tractate Cállá it is read at fol. 18, col. 2, that Rabbi Akkiva asked a woman what the circumstances were concerning her son, and that he promised her that, if she would reveal it to him, he would promise her eternal life. Thereupon the woman demanded an oath from him, which he also swore with his mouth, but mentally annulled in his heart, a matter which has already been treated above in the 2nd chapter of the first part, pages 108 and 109, where the words of the Talmud were also cited.

So also in the book Menorách hammáor, fol. 14, col. 1, in the 2nd chapter under the title Ner schéni, kelál schéni, chélek ríschon, from the Talmudic tractate Avóda sára, fol. 28, col. 1, and the tractate Jóma, fol. 84, col. 1, one reads how Rabbi Jochanan led a distinguished woman astray with a deceitful oath; which woman, as Rabbi Solomon Jarchi reports in his commentary on the passage, was a Gója, that is, a heathen, or perhaps a Christian. The words there read as follows: רבי יוחנן חש בציפדינא אזל גבה דההיא מטרוניתא עבדא ליה מילתא חמשא ומעלי שבתא אמר לה בשבת מאי אמרה ליה לא צריכת אי מצטריכנא מאי אמרה ליה אישטבע לי דלא מגלית אישטבע לאלהא דישראל לא מגלינא הא לעמו ישראל לא מגלינא לאחור נפק דלא מגלית אישטבע לאלהא דישראל לא מגלינא הא לעמו ישראל לא מגלינא לאחור נפק ודרשה בפרקא: That is: Rabbi Jochanan had a toothache and went to a distinguished woman, who prepared something for it for him on the fifth day (namely on Friday) as well as on the Sabbath eve (that is, on Saturday evening), making him a remedy for it. He then said to her: what shall I do (tomorrow) on the Sabbath (since I cannot come to you on account of my disciples)? She answered him: you have no need of it. But he said again: but if I should have need of it, what am I to do? She then said to him: swear to me then that you will not reveal it (and I will tell you what kind of remedy it is, so that you can prepare it yourself). Thereupon he swore: to the God of Israel I will not reveal it (and said secretly in his heart: but to His people Israel I will disclose it). She, however, understood it to mean that he had sworn by the God of Israel that he would tell no one. The next day he went out and said it publicly, and taught everyone the remedy. Now if the Talmudic doctors and teachers employed such frivolous deceptions, they who, in the opinion of the present-day Jews, are supposed to have been such holy and excellent men, what then will the Jews of today do, and indeed among Christians, whom they hate in the very worst manner, to whom they wish all evil, and whom they do not even regard as human beings?

When a Jew swears an oath before the rabbi at the rabbi's command to another Jew, he is sternly admonished not to swear falsely. How this is done is shown by the book Shulchan aruch, in the section Chóschén hammischpat, fol. 119, col. 1. numero 87. §. 20. in these words: משיבעין אותו בכל לשון שהוא מבין ויאיימו עליו קודם שישביעוהו ואומרים לו הוי יודע שכל העולם נודעו בשעה שאמר הק"ה לא תשא ובכל העבירות שבתורה נפרעים ממנו וכאן ממנו וממשפחתו ולא עוד אלא שגורם ליפרע משונאיהם של ישראל שכל ישראל ערבים זה לזה. כל עבירות שבתורה תולים לו שנים ושלשה דורות אם יש לו זכות וכאן נפרעים מיד. דברים שאין אש ומים מכלים אותם שבועת שקר מכלה אותם. אמר איני נשבע פוטרם אותו ומתן מר שמענו חבירו אם אמר הריני נשבע וחבירו תובע השמרם שם אומרים זה לזה סורו נא מעל אהלי הרשעים האלה ואומרים לא על דעתך: דעתך אנו משביעים אותך אלא על דעתנו ועל דעת בית דין That is: One lets him swear in whatever language he understands, and one must instill fear in him before one lets him swear, and say to him: Know that the entire world trembled and shook at the time when the holy and blessed God said, "You shall not take the name of the Lord your God in vain" (that is, misuse it). When a person commits all the sins mentioned in the Law, vengeance is exercised upon him alone; but here it is exercised upon him and upon his lineage. Nor is this all, for he also causes vengeance to be exercised upon all Israel, since all Israelites are sureties for one another. All transgressions that stand in the Law are held against a person for two and three generations, if he has merit (so that no punishment proceeds on that account); but here vengeance, or punishment, is exercised immediately. The false oath also consumes those things which fire and water cannot consume. Now if he says, "I will not swear," one releases him from it, and he gives that on account of which his fellow, or neighbor, has brought a claim against him. But if he says, "I will swear," and his neighbor who has brought the claim against him desires it, then those standing by say to one another: "Depart from the tents of these wicked men," and they say, "We do not let you swear according to your own intention, but according to our intention and the intention of the house of judgment." These are the words of the book Chótschen hammischpat.

The rabbis, or Jewish judges, therefore do not trust those who are to swear oaths either, but are concerned that they may swear falsely, speaking one thing while meaning another in their minds. For this reason they say to the one who is to swear: we do not permit you to swear according to your own intention, which you may secretly harbor in your mind, but according to our intention. And there follows in the same place, in the annotation: ואם יש צד דמאות יש לדיין לומר לו לפרש בשבועתו כל צד דמאות שיש לחשוב בלם That is: and when a deception can occur therein, the judge must tell him that he shall clearly specify every manner of deception that he can conceive in his heart. Now if the Jewish judges do not trust the Jews who are to swear, even after they have so strictly administered the oath to them, how much less reason do those on the Christian side have to place credence in a Jew's oath, given that one must reckon that the Jew will swear falsely, either because he is compelled to take the oath by the authorities, which the Jew may regard as coercion since he would otherwise lose his legal case, or because he will nullify it in his heart? In the aforementioned book Shulchan aruch, in the section Jóre déa, fol. 92, col. 2, numero 119, §. 8, it is taught: החשוד על הדבר אינו נאמן עליו אפילו בשבועה

That is: whoever is suspect in a matter is not believed in it, even if he takes an oath. Now it will be powerfully demonstrated below in the 11th chapter of this second part that the Jews are suspect not only on account of seeking to deceive Christians in all manner of ways, but also that they actually do so in practice, following the guidance of their own rabbinical teaching. It therefore follows that they are not to be trusted in this regard, even when they affirm something with an oath. But let this suffice for the matter of oath-swearing among the Jews.

Chapter X.

In which is reported what the Jews, according to the vain claims of the Rabbis, possess for lands in the world, in which they are said to have their own government and to be ruled by their own princes and kings.

Since in the preceding chapter mention was made of Christian authorities, I have resolved in this chapter to give the gracious reader a more detailed account of the manner in which the foolish Jews claim that they also, in certain places of the world, still to this day have their own high authorities, princes, and kings, under whose government the Jews found among them live in a heartfelt and happy condition. Hence it also comes about that, when one points out to them that the Messiah must have come a very long time ago, since the scepter and the royal government have long since been taken from Judah, they are sometimes accustomed to answer that they still have their royal dominions in certain places of the world, and that therefore this saying is not contrary to them; just as the highly learned Mr. Difenchbach, duly appointed Evangelical-Lutheran preacher here in Frankfurt, also notes in his Judeo convertendo, pages 129 and 130, that a Jew, shortly before he was hanged for crimes he had committed, gave him the same answer.

Regarding the places in which a great multitude of Jews are said to dwell and to be governed by their own authorities, princes, and kings: these are said to be found in three parts of the world, namely Asia, Africa, and America. As for the places in Asia where Jews are said to live in such a fortunate condition, there are, according to their own account, several of them. In Rabbi Benjamin's travel account, which in Hebrew is called Massaoth (or Mafffoos) schel Rabbi Benjamin, one reads the following at fol. 17, col. 1. 2., concerning a region in which the children of Rechab (who are mentioned in the 35th chapter of Jer) are said to dwell: ומשם דרך מדבר ארץ שבא הנקראת ארץ אלימן לצד שנער כנגד צד הצפון מהלך כ"א יום במדברות עד מדינת היהודים הנקראים בני רכב וגם היו נקראים מקדם אנוש תימא. והעיר תימא היא ראש הממשלה שלהם ושם רבי חנן הנשיא מושל עליהם והיא עיר גדולה. ומהלך ארצם ט"ז יום בין ההרים הרי צפון ויש להם ערים גדולות ובצורות ואין להם עול גוים עליהם והולכים לשלול שלל ולבזו בז לארץ מרחק עד בני ערב שכניהם בעלי בריתם. ובני ערב ההם חונים באהלים דרך ארצם ואין להם בתים והולכים לשלול שלל ולבזו בז בארץ אלימן וכל שכניהם. ולכן היהודים היושבים מצד האחר מפחדים מהם. והיהודים בני רכב יש בהם עוברי אדמה ובעלי מקנה וארצם רחבת ידים ונותנים עישור מכל אשר להם לתלמידי חכמים שבהם היושבים תמיד בבית המדרש ולעניי ישראל ולפרושיהם אבולי ציון

the Jews who dwell in Téma and Tilimas number approximately one hundred thousand persons. Prince Salmon also comes to that place together with his brother Chanan, the Prince (who are of the lineage of King David, upon whom be peace, as can be seen from their genealogical register), with torn garments, and they fast forty days in the year and pray for all Jews who are in exile or distress. There are approximately forty cities (for medina in Chaldean means a city), two hundred villages, and one hundred fortresses; the capital of the land, however, is the place Thenái, and in all those lands together there are approximately three hundred thousand Jews. The city of Thenai is very strongly fortified, for one sows and harvests within it, since it is fifteen miles long and wide, and the palace of Prince Salmon is situated therein. It is also very beautiful, and there are gardens and orchards within it. Tilimas likewise is a great city in which approximately one hundred thousand Jews dwell, and it is very strongly fortified and lies between two high mountains. There are wise and prudent men there, and many wealthy persons among them. From Tilimas it is three days' journey to Kibar, and the people say that they are the tribe of Reuben, Gad, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, whom Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria, carried away captive, and that they went there and built those great and fortified cities. They also wage war with all kingdoms, and no person can reach them, since one must travel eighteen days through wildernesses in which no one dwells before one can reach them; for this reason one cannot enter among them. The city of Kibar is also very great, and approximately fifty thousand Israelites dwell therein, among whom are scholars and valiant men who wage war with the inhabitants of Sinear and of the land of the north, as well as of the land of Aliman, which lies nearest to them. The land of Aliman, however, is the beginning of India, that is, East India, etc. These are the words of the aforementioned Rabbi Benjamin, in whose time, namely in the year 4933 after the creation of the world, that is, in the year 1173 A.D., as is reported by another person at the beginning of the said travel booklet printed in Amsterdam in duodecimo, so many Jews are said to have dwelt in the aforementioned place.

Further, the aforementioned Rabbi Benjamin writes in his mentioned travel account, fol. 20, col. 1-2, concerning another place in Asia in which four of the tribes of Israel are said to dwell, in the following manner: ומשם מהלך כ"ח יום להרי ניסבון אשר על נהר גוזן ויש אנשים מישראל בארץ פרס שהם משם ואומרים כי בהרי ניסבון ד' שבטים מישראל והם שבט דן ושבט זבולון ושבט אשר ושבט נפתלי היא הגדולה. הראשונה שהגלה שלמנאסר מלך אשור כמו שכתוב ויגלה לחלה וחבור הרי גוזן וערי מדי ומהלך ארצם כ' יום ויש להם מדינות וכרכים בהרים. מצד אחד מקיף אותם נהר גוזן ואין עליהם עול גוים כי אם נשיא אחד עליהם ושמו ר' יוסף אמרכלא הלוי וביניהם תלמידי חכמים עליהם. That is: (From there, namely from the land of Toboth) one has twenty-eight days' journey to the mountains of Nisbon, which lie along the river Gosan, and there are Israelite people dwelling in Persia who are from that region, and these same people say that four Israelite tribes dwell upon the mountains of Nisbon, namely the tribe of Dan, and the tribe of Zebulun, and the tribe of Asber, as well as the tribe of Naphtali. These were the first captive company whom Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria, led away into captivity, as it is written (2 Kgs 17:3, 6): "And he carried them captive to Chalach and Chabor, to the mountains of Gosan, and to the cities of Media." Their territory, however, extends as far as one can travel in twenty days, and they have cities and fortresses in the mountains. On one side the river Gosan surrounds them, and they are subject to no yoke of the nations; rather, a prince has been set over them who is called Rabbi Joseph Immarkela the Levite. There are also learned men among them. They sow and harvest, and they go to war into the land of Cush through the deserts, etc. These are once again the words of the aforementioned Rabbi Benjamin; and Rabbi Menasse ben Israel cites them in his little book Mikveh Jisraël, fol. 39, col. 2., in the 10th chapter, number 40, likewise, in order to prove thereby that the Jews to this day possess their own land and their own government therein. Concerning these four tribes who are said to dwell behind the mountains of Nisbon, something is also to be found in the little book Gelilóth érez Jisraël.

Concerning those Jews who are said to dwell even at the present time beyond the river Euphrates, the aforementioned Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in the cited little book Mikveh Jisraël, fol. 35, col. 2., at the beginning of the ninth chapter, numero 31, likewise as follows: גם זהו בלי ספק שעוד היום הם יושבים במדי מעבר לנהר עפראטס מקום שגלו לשם ראשונה ככתוב בספר מלכים ב' יז פסוק ו' ויגלו את ישראל אשורה ויושב אותם בחלח ובחבור נהר גוזן וערי מדי. וגם בספר טוביה נאמר כן. לפי שיש באותן המדינות מקומות מדבריות מאין ישב ושם נתישבו השבטים, That is: It is also not at all to be doubted that they (namely the ten tribes) still dwell to this day in Media, beyond the river Euphrates, in that place to which they were first led captive, as is written in 2 Kgs 17:6: "And he carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Chalach, and in Chabor, by the river Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes." This is likewise reported in the book of Tobias: since in those same lands there were desolate places in which no one had dwelt, these were settled by the tribes.

There was also once a Jew named Rabbi David who came to Rome, claiming that he had been sent by those Jews living beyond the Euphrates. Concerning this, the book Shalshelet hakkabbala fol. 34, col. 2. and fol. 35, col. 1. contains the following passage: בשנת חמשת אלפים רצ"ד לבריאה שהיה שנת אלף תש"ו לחורבן הבית שני בא מארץ מרחקים איש יהודי ושמו ג' דוד הראובני והגיע לרומי ודבר עם אפיפיור

preached publicly in all parts of Italy, in a wondrous manner, on the written and oral Law, both in a mystical sense and according to the literal meaning, beautifully and marvelously, so that no one like him had ever been heard; and no one knows how he attained such great wisdom. He had said, however, that an angel had imparted it to him. He also wrote books and said that he was one of the Messiah's messengers; and he was very handsome in appearance, pious, and generous. Rabbi David, however, fasted for six days and nights in succession; and I have heard from a trustworthy man called Rabbi Jehuda de Balneis, who testified under oath that, when he was in Rome, he was one of those who kept watch over this man to ensure that he ate nothing during all that time, in order to witness the miracle. Rabbi Salomon, however, went to Mantua to speak with (the Emperor) Carolo (the Fifth), but it is not known what the substance of his words was, except that the Emperor became greatly enraged at him and commanded that he be burned, which was also carried out; and a halter was placed in his mouth, because they feared he might use some incantation and escape. There are also to this day many Jews who hold erroneous opinions about him, saying that he is alive and that every Sabbath he betroths himself to his beloved who is in Zephath (that is, that he celebrates every Sabbath in Jerusalem, for the Jews call the Sabbath a bride and beloved), and they put forward yet other vanities. Some also say that he prophesied his own death and spoke the words (from Gen 42:21): Avál aschéimim anáchnu al achínu aschéi raínu zaráth naschó, that is, "Truly we have sinned against our brother, for we saw the anguish of his soul," in which words there are five words beginning with the letter Aleph or A, by which 5,000 years are signified (for the letter Aleph signifies as much as Eleph, that is, a thousand); and the words anáchnu al achínu, that is, "we (have sinned) against our brother," amount to 290 in number, and he had said that in the year 290 (that is, in the year 1530 A.D.) his sentence had been passed upon him, to die a sudden death. He also sanctified God (through his death) and would not apostatize (from his faith), even though his life was promised to him. The Emperor, however, had Rabbi David taken to Spain, where he died. Thus far are the words from the book Shalshelet hakkabbala.

The reason why these two came to lose their lives is indicated in the booklet Mikvéh Jifrael, fol. 33, col. 1. 2., in the 7th chapter, number 27, with these words: וּשְׁמוֹ הָיָה דוֹד רַאבוּנִי מִשְׁבֵּט רַאבוּנִי וְנִסֵּעַ דֶּרֶךְ אֵינְדִּיא וְבֵא לְאַרְץ פּוֹרטוּגַל וְגִייר אֶת סוֹפֵר הַמֶּלֶךְ וּמַל אוֹתוֹ וְקִרָא שְׁמוֹ בִּישְׂרָאֵל שְׁלֵמָה מֶלֶכּוּ וּלְמַד הַתּוֹרָה וְהַקְבִּלָה בְּזֶמֶן מוֹעֵד וַיִּתְמַהוּ כָּל חֻכְמֵי אִיטָלְיָא עַל לְמוֹדוֹ וְחֻכְמָתוֹ. וְאֵלּוּ שְׁנֵי הָאֲנָשִׁים דּוֹר רַאבוּנִי וּשְׁלֵמָה מֶלֶכּוּ רָצוּ לְגִייר אֶת הַמֶּלֶךְ פְּרַנְצִי'שְׁקָא וְאֵת הַפִּיפִיּוֹר רֹמָא וְאֵת הַקִּיסֵר קָאֵרֶל הַחֲמִשִּׁי וְעַל דְּבַר זֶה נִתְפַּס שְׁלֵמָה מֶלֶכּוּ וְנִשְׂרַף בְּחַיִּים בְּעִיר מְנוֹטָבָא שְׁנַת ש"א לְאַלְף הַשְּׁשִׁי וְאַלְף תַּק"ם לְמִנְיַן הַנוֹצְרִים בְּמִצְוֹת הַמֶּלֶךְ קָאֵרְלוֹס וְאַף כִּי רָצָה לְמַחֹל לוֹ אִם יִמִּיר אֶת דָּתוֹ. וְאֵת דוֹד הַרַאבוּנִי לָקַח הַקִּיסֵר אֹתוֹ that is, he (namely the Jewish envoy) was called David the Rubenite, and was from the tribe of Reuben. He took his journey through India and came into the land of Portugal, and converted the King's Secretarius to Judaism, and circumcised him, and gave him the name among the Israelites of Solomon Malco. This same Solomon learned the Law and the Kabbalah in a short time, and all the sages in Italy marveled at his learning and understanding. These two men, David the Rubenite and Solomon Malco, wished to bring King Franciscus, and the Pope in Rome, as well as Emperor Carolus the Fifth, to the Jewish religion; for this reason Solomon Malco was taken prisoner, and in the year 301 of the sixth thousand years' reckoning, and in the year 1540 according to the Christian reckoning, was burned alive in the city of Mantua by order of Emperor Carolus, although he was willing to pardon him if he would change his religion. David the Rubenite, however, was taken prisoner by the Emperor into Spain, where he died within a few days.

Rabbi Abraham Perizol expresses himself in his little book, which is called אגרת אורחות עולם (Iggéreth orchóth ólam, or Iggéres órchos ólam), in the 14th chapter, fol. 15, col. 1-2, concerning the aforementioned Rabbi David, whom he calls David the son of Solomon, as well as concerning the Jews found, in his opinion, in the wilderness of Chabor and other regions of that area, in the following manner: היהודי הזה מכח שני השבטים הוא לפי הנשמע מדבריו שאמר שהוא מן העומדים מיושבים במדברות ההם כבני הרכבים באהלים ומצאו במדבר חבור אשר באשי"ה מאיורי ולמטה מהם ולהלאה השלום הי' שבטים והם סמוך למדברות ללכב"ה לאמקי"א וגוד"א אשר על ים סוף. ולהם ולכלם יש מלכים ושרים ועמים רבים כחול אשר על שפת הים ומוצא הבושמים והפלפלי והסמים הפשוטים וכל טוב הנמצאות בידם כאשר נכתוב עוד במקומו. האמנם בין שהי' הכתרות מהיהודים האלה יש ביניהם מן הישמעאלים אומרי 'חזקה והקיפה ועם מלכים רבים להם ויזקו לכת מהיהודים האלה ולא יניחום לעבור ולהתקרב זה אצל זה. לפי שכבר ודי' ימים רבים ושנים שהיו מתרבהים ובאים להתקרב זה אל זה ולא עלתה לידם. וכאשר נתגלה שמה בגלילות ההם זה ימים רבים ושנים ביאת הפיגורארי נוצריות החזקות והתקיפו והרגישו ושמעו וראו את כלי הקרב אשר בידי הנוצרים מהמתכנת התלולות לזרוק אבנים בכח האש ולהשחית כל ישוב ומצודה בחרו היהודים אשר במדבר חבור לפי דבריו לשלוח היהודי הזה למלך כל הנוצרים הגדול עם סימנים כ"ה להאמין בדבריו אשר נתאמתו ונתקיימו ממלך פורטוגאל הרוכב על הגלילות חמ"ה היהודיים היינו אינדיאני דרך אוני"ו בלב ים. ויודע מציאות מלכות יהודים שמה. וכתב אל האפיפיור יר"ה שהיהודי הזה הנזכר נאמן הוא ודבריו נאמנים. ומכל מקום ויהי מה שיהיו דבריו נאמנים או לא. די לנו היום בגלותנו זה ובגלילותינו אשר נתאמר למלכים ושרים ורבים בחזות רומיא 'אשר עדין יש מציאות לשבטי ישראל הרבים מאד ומלכים רבים להם והיהודי אשר בא יהי מה שיהיה. ובהיות אמת מציאות היהודים ומלכיהם יתכן לומר שבנא היהודי הזה בדרך הזה ובאופן הזה ממדבר חבור דרך מעבר הקאראבאני כי כן המנהג וכן נכתב ונשמע עליו מפיו ועבר בקוטב אדאבאי"ה פיליצי לעבור באיטאליאה ויבא עד רומיא וישב שם ברומא כשמונה

They also all have their kings and princes, and their peoples are as numerous as the sand on the shore of the sea; and one finds among them spices and pepper and pharmaca simplicia, that is, simple medicines, as well as all manner of good things, as we shall write further in its proper place. Between the two companies of those Jews, however, there dwell Ishmaelites, who are a mighty and powerful people and have many kings, who inflict harm upon those Jews and do not permit them to cross over to one another and come together; for they have already been separated from one another for a long time and many years, and have wished to go to one another, but it has not come to pass for them. Now, after the arrival of the strong and mighty Christian ships had become known there, in those regions, many times and years ago, and they had learned of and heard about and seen the hollow metallic instruments of war which the Christians possess (namely the cannon and fire-mortars), with which one can, by the force of fire, hurl stones and utterly destroy an entire inhabited land and a fortress, the Jews who dwell in the wilderness of Chabor resolved, according to his account, to send this Jew to the greatest king of the Christians with certain tokens, in order to lend credibility to his words, which were also confirmed and corroborated by the king of Portugal, who causes ships to sail through the sea into those Indian lands, and who made known that a kingdom of Jews is to be found there; and he wrote to the Pope (may his glory be exalted) that this aforementioned Jew is trustworthy and his words are trustworthy. Yet, however his account may stand, whether true or untrue, it is sufficient for us today in this our exile and in our regions that it has been confirmed by kings and princes, and publicly in the streets of Rome, that the tribes of Israel still exist and are a very great multitude of people who have many kings; and however matters may stand with the Jew (that is, Rabbi David, whether he was sent as an emissary from them or not), since it is true that Jews with their kings are to be found there, one must say that this Jew came from the wilderness of Chabor with a company of traveling people and took that route, for such is the custom; and thus it has also been written about him and heard from his own mouth. Thereafter he passed through Arabia Felix and came to the Red Sea, and made his way to Egypt, from where he traveled to the Holy Land, where he waited for Venetian ships to sail to Italy. When he arrived in Rome, he stayed there for about eight months, until the reply from the king of Portugal arrived, confirming the truth of his account and his affairs. Those who gave information about him, as well as many distinguished Jews who spoke with him, also testified that this Jew had indeed requested assistance from the Pope, the king of the Gojim or heathens, that he might be given metallic instruments of war (that is, cannon and fire-mortars) for hurling stones, as well as skilled craftsmen, to take with him to Arabia Felix in order to destroy their aforementioned enemies; and that in return he would procure for the Pope (may his glory be exalted) other benefits and a means of exercising dominion in certain places there, and this to the end that those Jews might gather and unite together, to cross over and take possession of and subdue the Holy Land, since it is the ancient inheritance of Israel, etc. We have also heard people say, on this very day, in the month of October of the year 285 (that is, in the year 1525 A.D.), in what manner Pope Clement, the king of the Gojim or heathens, consented to let him go and to send him with great honor in a large ship laden with weapons of war as well as Jewish and Christian craftsmen toward Portugal, and furthermore to make arrangements with the king to fill it further according to his wishes, and to command all Christian peoples to honor him as he passed through, to render him assistance, and to fulfill his desire, etc. Thus far are the words of Abraham Perizol, of blessed memory.

Who could believe that the aforementioned Rabbi David, as an envoy, was sent to Rome and to the King of Portugal? An envoy is not accustomed to arriving at a place entirely alone and without servants; why then should the Jewish tribes, which are alleged to be so powerful, have sent Rabbi David entirely alone, and indeed in such a poor and undistinguished condition? Even if he had been a genuine envoy, he would have applied himself to the matter more seriously and earnestly in order to achieve his purpose, and would not have meddled in other affairs, on account of which the Emperor Carolus Quintus became greatly enraged at him, so that he had him sent as a prisoner to Spain, where he soon died. It is therefore to be concluded from this that he must have been a frivolous deceiver, and that everything he reported concerning the dominion of the Jews was untrue.

The aforementioned Abraham Perizol also writes further in his cited book, in the 24th chapter, fol. 27, col. 1, concerning the great multitude of Jews in the East Indies and their kings, in the following manner: אענם לבאר פרטות המקומות: הראשונה, אשר על שפת ים הודו ואוקיינוס הוה ואשר למעלה מהם ביבשה היא האינדיאה העליונה, נצטרך לחזור בראשונה בסדר הזה. ונאמר כי אחר מעבר הגולפו ברבאריקו הנזכר וולכו ויגיע ליבשת מחוז גילי לאמיקא אשר קרוב לים הודו, ואם ירצו לעלות בגליל הזה העליון, אשר ביבשה הזאת שם ימצאו מדברות גדולות וגם יישובים מיהודים היושבים על נהרי גאנגיס כאשר כבר כתבתי על זה, וכנון שנתבאר לנוצרים וכן כתוב בספרים החדשים כי בגלילות האלה אשר למעלה מגבולות לאמיק וכן למעלה ממדברות קאליקוט נמצאו שם יהודים רבים לאין מספר ומלכות מלכים רבים להם ונבדלים ורחוקים אלו מאלו היינו בין היהודים אשר למעלה על קאליקוט כי יש מהלך רב ביניהם. אולם בין האיים אשר בתוך ים הודו אין קצה למספרם ולהם בים וביבשה עושר זהב ובשמים וגו' That is: But in order to give a clear and particular account of the principal places situated on the shore of the Indian Sea and of the Oceanus, or the great Sea, and of those which lie still beyond them on dry land, namely in upper India, we must first observe the following order and say that after one has crossed the aforementioned Barbaric Gulf or bay, one proceeds onward and arrives at the dry land of the borders of Lameck, which lies near the Indian Sea. If one then wishes to proceed further into this upper region, which lies in this dry land, one finds there great wildernesses, as well as lands inhabited by Jews who dwell along the rivers of the Ganges, as I have already written concerning this, and as is known to the Christians. It is likewise written in new books that in those lands which lie beyond the borders of Lameck, as well as beyond the deserts of Calicut, there are found very many innumerable Jews, who have many kings, who are distinct from and distant from one another, which is to be understood of the Jews who are above Calicut, for there is a great distance between them. Those likewise on the islands situated in the Indian Sea are without number, and are rich on sea and on land in gold and spices, etc.

It was reported above on pp. 519 and 520, from Rabbi Benjamin's travel account, fol. 20, col. 1, 2, that four Israelite tribes, namely the tribe of Dan, Zebulun, Asher, and Naphtali, are said to dwell in the mountains of Nisbon. In the little book, however, which is called Sépher Eldad Haddáni and consists of only half a sheet, or four octavo leaves, the tribe of Zebulun is omitted and the tribe of Gad is placed in its stead, and it is stated that the tribe of Dan, because it was not satisfied with King Jeroboam, migrated to the land of Cush, that is, the land of the Moors, and there multiplied greatly. Thereafter the tribe of Naphtali, Gad, and Asher also made their way thither, killing many Moors and taking possession of a land four days' journey in length and breadth. Upon this, the following continues there: והללו ד' שבטים דן נפתלי גד ואשר הם: חונים בחוילה הקדומה אשר שם הזהב וגו' וישמו שבטים אלו ידיהם בעורף אויביהם. ובכל שנה ושנה עושין מלחמה עם שבע מלכויות ושבע לשונות וגו' והם מעבר לנהרי כוש לקיים נבואת חוזיו מעבר לנהרי כוש. והללו השבטים יש להם זהב וכסף ואבנים וצאן ובקר וגמלים וחמורים הרבה מאד וזורעים וקוצרים ויושבים באהלים וחונים ונוסעים מגבול לגבול מהלך ד' ימים על ד' ימים ואין חונים אותם כי אם במקום שיש שם פירות שדות וכרמים. ושם מלכם עוזיאל בן מלכיאל ושם הנשיא הגדול ניקולי מבני אהליאב. ושם השופט שלהם עבדן בן מישאל משבט אשר. וארבע מיתות בית דין עומדות על אפניהם ובעת אשר יבקשו לצאת למלחמה יצעק הצועק בקול השופר ויצא עם שר הצבא החיילות מאה ועשרים אלף פרשים ומאה אלף רגלים. והנה ארבעה שבטים אלו כל חדש וחדש יוצא שבט אחר מהם למלחמה והשבט עומד לשם ג' חדשים ולסוף שלשה חדשים כל מה שיביאו משלל אויביהם יחלקו עם שבט שלהם. ושבט בנידן מבני שמשון כחול הים מהלך ד' ימים והנה הם גבורי חיל וגו' : 'וכן בשלשה חדשים יוצא אחרים יוצא שבט נפתלי ועושה מלחמה. ובשלשה חדשים יוצא אחרים יוצא שבט : That is: Those same four tribes, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher, dwell in the ancient Chavila, where the gold is, etc., and those same tribes have laid their hands upon the necks of their enemies. They also wage war every year against seven kingdoms and peoples of seven languages, etc., and dwell on the far side of the rivers of the land of the Moors, in order to fulfill the prophecy of the prophet (Joel 3:10): "From beyond the rivers of the land of the Moors." These tribes have gold and silver, precious stones and gems, sheep and cattle, camels and donkeys in great abundance. They sow and reap, and dwell in tents, and travel and encamp from one place to another, four days' journey in length and breadth. They encamp nowhere except in a place where there are fruits, fields, and vineyards. Their king is called Ufiel, the son of Malkiel, and their great prince, who is of the children of Abaliab, is called Nikoli. Their judge, however, who is of the tribe of Asher, is called Abdan, the son of Michael. The four kinds of death (and corporal and capital punishments, namely burning, stoning, strangling, and beheading) are also administered by the court in their proper manner. And when they wish to go to war, one blows a trumpet, whereupon one hundred and twenty thousand horsemen and one hundred thousand foot soldiers march out with their general. Behold, of these four tribes, one goes out to war every month and remains in it for three months. After three months have elapsed, they divide all the plunder they bring from their enemies with their tribe. The tribe of the children of Dan, from the descendants of Simson, is as numerous as the sand of the sea, four days' journey in extent, and they are mighty heroes, &c. Thus in three other months the tribe of Naphtali marches out and wages war; and in three other months the tribe of Gad goes out; and in the three remaining months the tribe of Asher takes the field, until the twelve months of the year have come to an end, after which they do the same again, rotating among themselves and taking turns with one another. These are the words from the little book of Eldad the Danite.

When one compares these same words with the above-mentioned words of Rabbi Benjamin, one finds that they do not agree with one another. For:

1. First, Rabbi Benjamin places, as has already been noted, the tribe of Zebulun among these four tribes; Eldad, however, puts the tribe of Gad in its place.

2. Second, Rabbi Benjamin reports that they dwell in the mountains of Nisbon; Eldad, however, states that they reside in the ancient Chavila.

3. Third, Rabbi Benjamin teaches that these are the tribes which the Assyrian king Shalmaneser first carried away into captivity; Eldad, however, claims at the beginning of his little book that they went there of their own accord. For he reports that Jeroboam had desired that the ten tribes, and in particular the tribe of Dan, should wage war against Rehoboam; but they preferred to fight against Jeroboam instead, though God restrained them from doing so, and they thereupon moved into the land of the Moors, whither the remaining three tribes also subsequently betook themselves. Concerning this, the book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 28, col. 1. also contains the following written passage: בני דן לא היו יודעים מחורבן הבית הראשון אבל נפתלי גד ואשר שהיו יושבים עם יששכר ומהקטים וקוראים אותם בני השפחות ויראו שלא יפול קטטה ביניהם הלכו לשבט דן ונתיישבו יחד That is: the children of Dan knew nothing of the destruction of the First Temple; but the tribes of Naphtali, Gad, and Asher, who had dwelt with the tribe of Issachar, feared, because those of the tribe of Issachar had quarreled with them and called them children of the handmaids, that further quarreling might arise among them, and therefore they went to the tribe of Dan (into the land of the Moors), where they dwelt together. Shortly thereafter it continues: אמרו חכמים י' גליות גלו ישראל ולא נזכר שבט דן לפי שמעצמו הלך למוש קודם החרבן קל"ה שנים That is: the sages say that the Israelites were carried away into captivity ten times, and the tribe of Dan is not mentioned among these, because it went of its own accord into the land of the Moors one hundred and thirty-five years before the destruction (of the First Temple).

Fourthly, Rabbi Benjamin indicates that they are governed by a prince who, in his time, was called Rabbi Joseph Immárkela; but Eldad reports that they are governed by a king who, in his time, was called Usiel the son of Malkiel.

Fifthly, Rabbi Benjamin reports that they dwell in cities and castles; but Eldad claims that they live only in tents and wander here and there. Finally, sixthly, Rabbi Benjamin reports that they move into the land of Cuth when they wish to wage war, and mentions no further land; but Eldad claims that they are constantly at war, fighting in turn against seven kingdoms and peoples of seven different languages, to say nothing of various other matters. From this disagreement it may reasonably be judged that all such Jewish pretensions consist of nothing but untruth and deception. If such a land existed in Asia whose inhabitants waged war every year against seven kingdoms with a hundred and twenty thousand men on horseback and a hundred thousand on foot, it would surely have to be known throughout the entire world; but since no one knows or hears anything of it, it is a false and wanton fabrication, and rightly to be dismissed. How could a land that is supposed to be twenty days' journey in length, as Rabbi Benjamin claims, be so unknown that no one should know anything of it? Nothing of it is to be found in the maps, in which, however, all the lands lying in Media, Persia, Mughal, and China, where the Jews are supposed to dwell and rule in such great numbers, are precisely recorded.

wealth along the road, they will not stretch out their hands to take it. There are also some among them who venerate fire, and who take their mothers and sisters as wives, and they perform no service of men. They do not harvest, and they do not cultivate vineyards, but buy everything with money. They have a judge and a prince, who is called Nachshon, and they punish evildoers with the four capital punishments of the court, and they speak Hebrew, Persian, and Arabic. The children of Zebulun dwell in the mountains of Paran, and they border upon that neighborhood, and they pitch tents made of hair that comes from the land of Ageiamia, as far as the river Euphrates. The tribe of Reuben is situated opposite them, behind the mountains of Paran, and there is peace and love among them. They also go to war together, and they build roads, and they divide all their plunder; and they travel the road through Persia and Babylon. One can also obtain from them as much food as a camel can carry for two silver coins. They speak Arabic, and they have the Bible, the Mishnah and Gemara (that is, the Talmud), and the Aggadah. They also preach every Sabbath in the Hebrew tongue. The tribe of Ephraim and the half-tribe of Manasseh are there in the mountains to the south of the land of the madman (namely, of Mohammed). They are hot-tempered and keep horses. They cut down roads and spare no man, and they have no other means of sustenance than plunder. They are brave warriors, and one of them overcomes a hundred others. The tribe of Simeon and the half-tribe of Judah dwell in the land of the Khazars, and they are innumerable. They also receive tribute from twenty-five kingdoms, and on the side of the Ishmaelites, they pay tribute to them. These are once again the words of Eldad the Danite, which consist of nothing but falsehood, since otherwise no one would have heard or written anything of this. But how could it be possible that one should learn absolutely nothing of them, particularly with regard to the tribe of Simeon and the half-tribe of Judah, to whom so many kingdoms are supposed to pay tribute? Such a matter could not be kept secret, but would have to resound throughout the world. And if they are such great heroes that one of them can defeat a hundred other men, why then do they not drive the Turks out of the Promised Land and retake possession of it? The aforementioned tribes would surely not have needed to send the above-mentioned Rabbi David to Pope Clement and the King of Portugal to seek help against their enemies, if among the tribes there were such mighty heroes.

Regarding the tribe of Judah, half of which, according to Eldad's account, is said to dwell in the land of the Cosareans: Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes about this in several places in his little book Mikvéh Jisraël, concerning where that tribe is supposed to reside. For at fol. 40, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, numero 41, he expresses himself as follows: הוּם שֶׁהַכּוֹפֵר יֵאָדָה בִּיאָא רֵאָס וְגַם שֶׁאֵר כּוֹפְרִים

 that is, Although the writer Jan de Bejaras and other writers testify that a great multitude of Jews dwells in India, the matter is indeed true, but they are from the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, which are known to all.
 And at fol. 45, col. 1, in the 13th chapter, numero 48, he writes: אין אחד
 מהשבטים יושב בחלק ערא"פא זולת השני שבטים יהודה ובנימין המה נפוצים בארבע רוחות העולם ועליהם נאמר יקבץ מארבע כנפות הארץ כמו שאנו רואים היום שיש מהם קהלות that is, There is none among the tribes that dwells in the part of Europe, excepting the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin. These are scattered into the four parts of the world, and of them it is said (Isa 11:12): He will gather them from the four ends of the earth, just as we see today that there are congregations of them in America. And at fol. 37, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, numero 34, he states: שבט יהודה ובנימין מפוזרים בכל הארצות: that is, The tribes of Judah and Benjamin are scattered into all lands. It is also read in the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin fol. 110, col. 2, in the commentary of Rabbi
Solomon: וישליכם משמע שיהו כלם גולין במקום אחד אלא ארץ אחרת והיינו עשרת
 השבטים שהגלם סנחריב והושיבם במקום אחד כדאמרין שהוליקם למדינת אפריקי אבל שמי השבטים לא גלו במקום אחד אלא נתפזרו בכל הארצות ועליהם הוא אומר אשרקה להם that is, the words (Deut 29:28), "And cast them into another land," teach that they were all to be carried away to one place, yet into another land, which is to be understood of the ten tribes whom Sennacherib carried away and settled in one place, as it is said that he led them into the land of Africa; but the two tribes (namely, Judah and Benjamin) were not brought to one place, but were scattered into all lands, and of them it is said (Zech 10:8): I will whistle for them and gather them. It is to be noted here that Rabbi Solomon erroneously states that the ten tribes were led into Africa, whereas they were in fact carried further from the land of Canaan into Asia. As for the tribe of Judah in particular, the following is read concerning it in the little book Séder ólam sóta fol. 35, col. 2: שנת ג' אלפים זה מאות וחמשים ושמונה שנים לבריאת עולם בא: אספסיאנו והחריב הבית והגלה את ישראל ובתים הרבה מבית דוד ויהודה לאספמיא היא that is, In the year 358 after the creation of the world, Vespasian came and destroyed the Temple, and led Israel, together with many families from the house of David and Judah, into Spain.

Concerning the aforementioned lands which are said to be inhabited by Jews in Asia, there is said to be yet another land there in which an innumerable multitude of Jews is found, which, according to the Jews' account, is surrounded on all sides by a certain river called Sabbatjon, or Sambatjon, or also Sanbatjon. The reason, however, why the river is so named is indicated by Rabbi Elias in his little book Tischbi, fol. 62, col. 2, in the entry on Sambatjon, where he states: חכמים קראו לו סבטיון מפני שביתתו בשבת כי יום השבת בלשון ההוא סבט וכן

נקרא בלשון ערבי שיחליפו התיו לטית וכן מוסיפין מלת יון בסוף שמות התוארים בלשונם: that is, the sages named it Sabbatjon on account of its rest on the Sabbath; for the Sabbath day is called in that language (namely, that of the Ten Tribes) סבט Sabbat (in place of the Hebrew word שבת Shabbat), and it is likewise named in the language of the Arabs, who change the Tau into a Teth. They also append the syllable jon to the end of common words in their language. The same is also to be found in the little book Mikvéh Jisraél, fol. 38, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, numero 38, from Rabbi Mordechai Japheh's book Jephéh toär, and in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 225, col. 1-2, in the Parascha Haasinu, as well as in Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman's commentary on the said Five Books of Moses, fol. 152, col. 3-4, in the aforementioned Parascha. It is therefore called Sabbatjon, or the Sabbatical river, because during the six days of the week it is said to be exceedingly turbulent, so that no person can cross it, but on the Sabbath it is said to be entirely still and at rest. Hence one reads in Bereschith rabba, fol. 10, col. 3, in the eleventh Parascha, that Turnus Rufus asked Rabbi Akkiva how he could prove that God had commanded rest on the Sabbath and the honoring of the same; to which he replied: הרי נהר סמבטיון יוכיח שמושך אבנים כל ימות השבת ובשבת הוא נח: that is, Behold, the river Sambatjon proves this, for it draws stones along with it on all the days of the week, but rests on the Sabbath. The very same is also to be found in the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin, fol. 65, col. 2, as well as in the little book Mikvéh Jisraél, fol. 37, col. 1, in the 10th chapter, numero 34. The aforementioned Rabbi Elias also writes of this in his said Tischbi, in the passage cited, as follows: אומרים שכל ימי השבוע חוץ בשבת הוא רץ ומניע אבנים גדולות: that is, it is said that it runs all days, except on the Sabbath, and moves great stones. And in that letter which is said to have been written by King Prester John to a Pope in Rome, and which was printed in Hebrew at Constantinople, the following is stated concerning it: הנהר הולך כל ימי השבוע ובשבת אינו י מקומו עד: (that is, this river flows the entire week, but on the Sabbath it does not move from its place until the first day of the week, namely Sunday, when it returns to its strength).

Where this river is located, however, the rabbis do not agree among themselves. Rabbi Abraham Perizol teaches in his little book Iggereth Orchoth Olam, in the 24th chapter, fol. 27, col. 1-2, that it is in Asia, in upper East India, with these words: וכן נקרא מוצא נהר סבטיון בגליות בין נהרי גאנים אשר בלשוננו גוזן קצמרו ונגלה קירה וגו' בתחלת האינדיאה הזאת העליונה בין נהרי גאנים האלה הם למעלה פיפשה על לאמיק ועל קאליקוט. ונהר חבור נהר גוזן וערי מדי והמקומות המוצאו ומפסיק בין האינדיאני ההם לקצת מלכות היהודים ושם תמצאוהו בנדאי. ומי שיקפר בזה ויספל ענגי ויחדל בדברי אשר נאמר עליו כמי שיקפר בדברי הש"ס סדרים לר"ז (That is: Thus we wish to explain the origin of the river Sabbatjon, and to say that it is within the borders of upper India, between the rivers of the Ganges, which in our language is called Gozan, as it is said (2 Kgs 16:9): "And he carried them away to Kir," etc. And (2 Kgs 17:6) it is read: "And he placed them in Chalach and Chabor, by the river Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes." These places, however, are above the dry land of Lameck and Calicut, and the source of the river Sabbatjon is above Calicut, and it separates those Indians from a part of the kingdom of the Jews, and there you can certainly find it. Whoever mocks my words, which I say concerning this matter, does just as much as if he were to deny the words of our rabbis, of blessed memory, which stand in the Talmud.) For, as was mentioned just shortly before, mention of this river is made in the Talmudic tractate Sanhédrin. This same thing also stands in the book Juchafin fol. 151, col. 2. in identical words.

Further, the aforementioned Rabbi Abraham Perizol writes shortly after the preceding passage that in the city of Calicut there are many Jewish merchants who trade in spices, and he reports thereupon: והם מן השבטים אשר למעלה מקאליקוט בין הרי גוזן ונהריו ושם למעלה מהם נהר סבטיון המבדיל בין האנדיאני ועל יבשה גליל הרי גוזן ונהריו ושם למעלה מהם לאמיק שמדבר חבור מן הצד האחר היותר קרוב לנו (That is: these are from those tribes who dwell above Calicut, between the mountains of Gozan and its rivers; and above them is the aforementioned river Sabbatjon, which makes a distinction between the Indians. Over the dry land, however, of the region (of the place) Lameck, the wilderness of Chabor lies on the other side, which is nearest to us. On this matter one may also consult the booklet Mikvéh Jifraél, fol. 40, col. 1, in the 10th chapter, number 41, where the opinion of the aforementioned Rabbi Abraham Perizol is likewise mentioned, and it is noted therein: המהר סאבאטייטא מקורו במדינת קאליקוט, That is: the source of the river Sabbatjon is in the land of Calicut. Now the city of Calicut lies in the land of Malabar, toward the southern end of the great Kingdom of Mogul, and therefore, according to this opinion, the river Sabbatjon must be located in the said Kingdom of Mogul. Indeed, there are some Jews who hold the opinion that the river Ganges, which flows through the Kingdom of Mogul, is the said river Sabbatjon, as will be shown in greater detail below.

Rabbi Gedaliah teaches in his book Shalshelet hakkabbála, fol. 28, col. 1, that it is located in the land of Havilah, whose words on this matter are to be cited below, where it is reported how the Jews were enclosed by the river Sabbatyon. Rabbi Manasseh ben Israel states in his little book Mikvéh Jifraél, fol. 40, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, number 41, that it lies at the Caspian Sea, when he writes: הנהר סמבטיון הוא אצל הים קאשפייא וגם רבים מסופרים הקדמונים מעידים זה, That is: the river Sabbatyon is near the Caspian Sea, and there are many of the ancient writers who attest to this. He also indicates the same further in the cited little book, fol. 43, col. 3, in the 13th chapter, number 47, with these words: פתרוס אינה מדינת פלוסיא ולא מדינת פטריא כמו שכתבו קצת מהסופרים אבל היא מדינת פרטייא היושבת אצל הים קאספיא ואני ום רבים מהסופרים כתבו ששם הוא סמבטיון That is: Pathros is not the land of Pelusium, nor the land of Petra, as some writers have written, but rather it is the land of Parthia, which lies at the Caspian Sea; and I, together with many writers, have written that the river Sabbatyon is located there, although there is also a Pathros in the kingdom of Egypt. Now if it is supposed to lie at the Caspian Sea, then it is more than 400 German miles from the place where the aforementioned Rabbi Abraham Perizol would have it.

The Jews also do not agree with one another in their descriptions of this river, since some report that it is a river of water, while others maintain that there is no water in it, but that it consists only of stone and sand. Regarding the first opinion, some rabbis teach that the river Sambatyon is to be understood as the river Gozan, for Rabbi Menasseh ben Israel writes in his oft-cited booklet Mikveh Jisraél, fol. 40, col. 2, in the 10th chapter, numero 40, as follows: הרמ"בן כתב בפרשת האזינו שנהר סמבטיון הוא נהר גוזן הנזכר במלכים ב' י"ז: That is: Rabbi Moshe bar Nachman has written (in his commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 152, col. 3) that it is a river of water, in the Parashah Haasinu, that the river Sambátjon is the river Gosan, which is mentioned in 2 Kgs 17:6. The same is also to be found in Rabbi Bechai's commentary on the Five Books of Moses, fol. 225, col. 1, in the aforementioned Parashah, as well as in Rabbi Elijah Tishbi, fol. 62, col. 2, under the word Sambátjon. And in the book Shalshelet hakkabbála, fol. 80, col. 2, Rabbi Gedaliah writes: וראיתי כתוב כי המלך הנקרא פריטיאן העיר על האפיפיור ברומה בשנת כמו ר"כ כי נהר פרת מעמיד היהודים סגורים שאינם יכולים לבוא עליו ואני That is: I have seen it written that the king called Prester John testified to the Pope in Rome, around the year 220 (that is, in the year 1460 A.D.), that the river Euphrates held the Jews enclosed, so that they could not come against him; but I say that he perhaps meant to refer to the river Gosan, which is the Sabbátjon. By the river Gosan, however, the great, water-rich river Ganges, situated in the kingdom of Mogul, is understood by Rabbi Abraham Perizol, as is evident from the words cited from him shortly before, on page 534, from the 24th chapter of his booklet Iggéreth orchóth ólam, over which the booklet Mikveh Jisraél, in the 10th chapter, fol. 40, col. 1, numero 41, may also be consulted. Rabbi Gershon likewise expresses himself in his booklet called Sepher gelilóth érez Jisraél, fol. 16, col. 2, as follows: פון דורטן בין איך געזוגן צו דער שטאט דבר : בען בייתה דייח בחק גניחט דז : נהר גוזן : ערבייא הי : נהר גוזן That is: From there (namely from Kibar) I traveled to the city of Debarseban, by the river Ganges, which is the river Gosan. Now if the river Sabbátjon is the river Gosan, and the Gosan is the Ganges, then the Sabbátjon must necessarily be a great river of water. It is also recorded in the aforementioned booklet Geliloth érez Jisraél, fol. 17, col. 2, as well as in the booklet called Maasióth veseppúrim min málke Jisraél, that is, "Stories and Accounts of the Israelite Kings," that those Goyim or heathens who dwell along it drink no water from it, nor give any of it to their livestock to drink, because they hold it to be sacred, and that whoever is scabby or has a rash is healed when he bathes in it, as will be seen in greater detail below, where the words themselves are to be cited. Therefore, according to all of this, there must be water in it.

Regarding the other opinion, that no water at all is found therein, but that it is merely a river of sand and stone, this is read in the aforementioned little book of Eldad the Danite, in these words: ורוחב הנהר סבטיון ק"ק אמה כמטחוי קשת והנהר מלא חול ואבנים בלי מים והאבנים קולם ורעשם קול גרול או כגלי הים וכפי רוח סערה ובלילה ישמע קולו עד מהלך חצי יום וגו' והנהר והנהר הוא מאבנים ומחול ירעיש כל שישת ימי המעשה ובשבת ישבות וינוח ומיד תעלה אש סביבות הנחל מערב שבת עד למוצאי שבת ואש הלהט להטה ולא יוכל אדם לנגוע אל הנחל ומשני עברי הנחל כמו חצי מיל למוצאי שבת ואש הלהט כל מה שישריש סביבות הנחל, That is: The width of the river consists of 200 cubits, the distance of a bowshot, and the river is full of sand and stone, without water. The sound of the stones also rushes like the noise of a great roar, or like the waves of the sea, and like a storm wind; and one can hear its sound at night for half a day's journey, etc. This same river of stone and sand rushes on all six working days of the week, but on the Sabbath it rests and is still, and immediately from the eve of the Sabbath (namely, Friday evening) a fire rises up all around the river until the end of the Sabbath, and that same fire burns so that no person can approach the river, and it extends on both sides of the river for approximately half a mile. This fire also consumes everything that grows around the river. These are the words of Eldad. The same is also taught in the book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 28, col. 1: זערין גולל: אבנים וחול בלי מים ברעש וקולות, That is: It rolls stones and sand, without water, with a rushing and a roar, even to this day. For this reason it is also called by Rabbi Salomon Jarchi in his Commentary on the Talmudic tractate Sanbédrin fol. 65, col. 2: נהר אבנים, nehár avaním, that is, a river of stone, because instead of water it is said to throw up and drive along stones and sand.

Regarding the sand of that same river, it is said that when it is carried elsewhere, it moves about very vigorously on the weekdays and rests on the Sabbath, concerning which Rabbi Menasse ben Israel writes in his little book Mikvéh Jisraél fol. 38, col. 2. and fol. 39, col. 1. in the 10th chapter, numéro 39, as follows: וגם מצוק את דבריו שאדם אחד היה לו כלי זכוכית מלא מחול שבנהר סמבטיון ומכל ששת ימי המעשה היה החול ההוא סוער והולך בהזכוכית ובשבת היה נח. ואני כמו כן

מעיד על זה כפי השמועה ששמעתי מאבי ז"ל ובוראי אמת הוא כי הוא מן הדברים הנמנעים שאב יספר דבר שקר לפני בניו. וספר כמה פעמים שבעיר ליישוב"נה בארץ פורטוגאל היה כושי אחד שהיה לו כלי זכוכית מלא מהחול הנ"ל והלך בכל ערב שבת לעת הכנסת שבת לרחוב שהיה נקרא רנ"א גא"ווא שהוא בלשון הקדש רחוב החדש כי שם היו דרים יהודים שהיו אנוסים לאומות נוצרים והכושי ההוא היה מכנה אותם בשם יהודים והיה קורא להם והראה להם ארת הזכוכית שבידו ואמר סגרו את החנויות כי באה העת לקבל השבת. וגם שמעתי מזה הדבר מאיש נאמן והשר ובי מאיר רופא שראה כושי עם כלי זכוכית עם חול הנ"ל עומד לפני בית הפלה של הישמעאלים בעיר הל"פא והנה השופט עבר וישאל על הדבר ההוא ויקח את הכלי ההוא וידבר את הכושי וינער בו ויאמר עשוה שלא כהוגן כי זהו חזק ליום השבת של היהודים. ואלמלא לא היה מעיד על הזכוכית וחול הנ"ל גדול ומופת הדור

That is: He (namely Rabbi Mordechai Japheh) also corroborates his account with the claim that a man had a glass vessel full of sand from the river Sabbatjon, and that on all the weekdays that same sand moved about turbulently within the glass, but rested on the Sabbath. I likewise bear witness to this, according to the account I heard from my father, of blessed memory, which is also certainly true, for it is impossible that a father should tell his children a lie. He told me many times that in the city of Lisbon, in the land of Portugal, there was a Moor who had a glass vessel full of the aforementioned sand, and who went every Sabbath eve (that is, Friday evening), at the time when the Sabbath began, into the street that is called the New Street, since in that street there lived those Jews who had been compelled to convert to the Christian faith, whom that Moor called Jews, and he called out to them and showed them the glass in his hand and said: close your shops, for the time has come to receive the Sabbath. I also heard of this matter from a trustworthy man, the distinguished Rabbi Meir, the doctor of medicine, that he had seen a Moor who stood with a glass vessel containing some of the aforementioned sand before the mosque of the Ishmaelites (or Turks) in the city of Aleppo, and that the judge passed by and questioned the Moor about the matter and rebuked him and said: you have done wrong (in showing this glass with the sand), for this is a confirmation of the Jews' Sabbath. These are the words of Rabbi Menasse. But just as it is not true that such a Sabbatical river exists, so too it is not true that any such sand has ever been seen. And I am greatly astonished that Rabbi Menasse, who was otherwise a learned man, remained stuck in the erroneous opinion that it is impossible for a father to tell his children untrue things, since this in fact happens very often, arising from the fact that parents have themselves been incorrectly informed by others and have accepted the untruth as truth. Moreover, outright lying is nothing new at all among the Jews, for which the Talmud provides ample instruction, as I have demonstrated at length in the 8th chapter of the first part and

Regarding the width of this river, the Jews also hold differing opinions on this matter. In the words of the Danite Eldad cited shortly before, it was stated that, according to his account, it is two hundred cubits wide. Rabbi Gedálja writes in his book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 28, col. 1.: אמה פ' רחב שהוא הנהר: It is, there are places along that same river where it is sixty cubits wide. But in the little book Gelilóth érez Jisraél one reads at fol. 17, col. 2: דער באך איז י"ז פרסאות ברייט: that is, the stream is seventeen parsáoth, that is, miles wide, each of which contains 4,000 great paces; and this is also to be found in the little book Maasióth vesippúrim min málke Jisraél fol. 6, col. 2. There is therefore an exceedingly great difference between seventeen miles and sixty or two hundred cubits.

Now let us also examine what Jews are said to dwell above this river, and those who write about it likewise do not agree with one another on the matter. In the aforementioned little book of Eldad the Danite, after the above-cited account of where the ten tribes dwell, it is reported that the tribe of Moses resides there, and his words read as follows: 'ועוד שבט משה רבינו הצדיק עבד ה' ונהגל ביראת ה' והנחל סובב עליהם מהלך ג' חדשים על שלשה חדשים והם שוכנים בבתי מפוראים ובנינים הדורים ובמגדלים והם יבנו לעצמם ואין עמהם דבר טמא ואינה חיה טמאה או בהמה לא חיה רעה ולא זבוב ולא שועלים ולא פרעושים ולא כנים ולא נחשים ולא עקרבם ולא כלבים ולא טוב מזיק זולתי צאן ובקר וצאנם וילידו שני פעמים בשנה וזורעים וקוצרים ולהם גנות ופרדסים וכל מיני פירות וכל מיני קטנית ואבטיחים וקישואים ובצלים ושומים וחטים ושעורים ומאחד יצמח ק' והם בעלי אמונה בעלי תורה בעלי משנה בעלי תלמוד ואגדה והלמוד שלהם בלשון הקדש וכן הם שונים כמה לפרסו אבותינו ולמדנו חכמינו מפי יהושע בן נון מפי משה מפי הגבורה ואינם יודעים תנאים ואמוראים שהיו בבית שני מפני שלא השיגום ולא ידעום ואינם יודעים לדבר כי אם בלשון הקדש. ומחמירים ביין נסך. וממה שהחמירו רבנן בהלכות שחיטה וטריפות כדברי סופרים החמיר משה רבינו יותר מדברי סופרים. ואינם נשבעים בשם עד שתצא נשמתם ועל פיהם יחרד. אפם על מי שנשבע בפניהם ויוכיחו אותם ויאמרו להם אי עניים למה אתם נושאים הזכרת השם על פיכם הכל על פיכם אם פת הוא תאכלהו או מים תשתהו. הלא הרע שבטין שבועה בניכם מתים 'כשהם קטנים וכשהיו הכל יעבוד את ה' באימה וביראה ובהוס לבב שבני משה עבדי יי מאריכין ימים ויחיו מאה שנה. או מאה ועשרים שנה. לא בת ולא בן ימות בחיי אביו וישנו לג' או לארבעה דורות ויראו לנכדים בנים ונכדים וצאצאים. והם חורשים וקוצרים לפי שאין להם עבדים ושפחות והם בעלי חניות ויש בתיהם מסגרת ואינם סוגרים אותם בלילה כי אין ביניהם לא גנב ולא אדם רע ולא שום נזק. וגם כן נער קטון הולך עם המקנה מהלך כמה ימים ואינו מתיירא כלום לא מן הליסטים ולא מן השדים ולא מן חיה רעה ולא מן כלום נזק בעולם מפני שהם קדושים וטהורים. ואלה הלויים הם עמלים בתורה ובמצוות ועדין הם בקדושתו של משה רבינו לפיכך נתן להם הקב"ה כל זאת ועוד אינם רואים בני אדם ואין בני אדם רואים אותם אלא ארבע שבטים הללו שהם יושבים מעבר לנהרי כוש ורואין אותם.

That is: there is also still the staff of Moses, our teacher, the righteous one and servant of the Lord, which is called a fugitive from idolatry and an adherent of the fear of God. That same (river Sabbation) surrounds those (Jews) as far as one can walk in three months, square in length and breadth; and they dwell in excellent houses, and splendid buildings, and towers which they build for themselves. There is also among them no unclean thing, nor unclean bird, nor any unclean wild beast or tame cattle, nor any harmful creature; also no gnat, nor fox, nor fleas, nor lice, nor snakes, nor scorpions, nor dog, nor anything whatsoever that causes harm; but only sheep, and goats, and cattle, and their sheep and goats bring forth young twice a year. They also sow and harvest, and have gardens and orchards, and all manner of kinds of fruit, and all sorts of legumes, as well as melons, and cucumbers, and onions, and garlic, and wheat, and barley, and from one (grain) a hundred grow. They are faithful people, and are learned in the Law (namely the five books of Moses), in the Mishnah and the Gemara (that is, in the Talmud), and in the Aggadah, that is, in the entertaining narratives, and their Talmud is written in the Hebrew tongue. They also teach in this manner (and say:) thus our fathers taught us, and our sages instructed us from the mouth of Joshua the son of Nun, from the mouth of Moses, from the mouth of God. They also know nothing of the Talmudic teachers of the Mishnah and Gemara who lived at the time of the Second Temple, since they did not reach them, nor did they know them. Likewise they can speak nothing but Hebrew, and make the prohibition strict (that is, they enforce it rigorously) that no one shall drink jen nésech, that is, libation wine (which has been offered to idols). Whatever our rabbis taught and made strict (and earnestly forbidden) in the ordinances concerning slaughtering or butchering, and the flesh that has a defect (and has therefore been forbidden to eat) according to the words of Scripture, that same thing Moses has made yet stricter (and more sharply forbidden) than the scribes. They also do not swear by the name of God until their soul departs, and they let their anger against the one who swears in their presence pass through their mouth. They also punish such people, and say to them: woe to you, wretched ones! why do you take the name of God into your mouth? Everything passes through your mouth; if it were a piece of bread, you could eat it, or if it were water, you could drink it. Do you not know that on account of the sin of swearing your children die while they are still young? So they also warn everyone to serve the Lord with awe and fear, and with an upright heart. The children of Moses also lengthen their days, and live a hundred to a hundred and twenty years. No daughter nor any son dies during the lifetime of their father, and they reach (or live to see) the third or fourth generation, and see their children, and grandchildren, and descendants. They also plow and harvest, since they have no male or female servants; they also keep shops (in which they carry on their trade), and their houses are lockable; they do not, however, lock them at night, since there is neither thief, nor wicked person, nor anything harmful among them. A small boy also goes many days' journeys with the livestock, and fears neither murderers, nor devils, nor any harmful beast, nor any danger in the world, because they are holy and pure. Those same Levites labor in the Law and in the commandments, and remain still in the holiness of our teacher Moses; therefore the holy and blessed God has given them all of this. Beyond that, they also see no other people, and no other people see them, except for those same four tribes who dwell beyond the rivers of the land of the Moors. They see one another, and speak with one another, and the river Sabbatjon is between them. Of them it is written (Isa 49:9): that you should say to the prisoners, go forth. Furthermore, they have very much silver and gold, and they sow flax, and raise scarlet, and make beautiful garments and cloaks. And they are twice, yes twice as many as those (Israelites) who went out of Egypt, so that they have no end (nor number), &c. And those four tribes also, namely Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher, stand (at times) with their livestock on the bank of the river (Sabbatjon) to shear their sheep, whereupon those (who dwell on the other side of the river) cry out and say: you brothers, you tribes of Jeschuron (that is, of Israel), let us see the camels, and dogs, and donkeys; and they say, how long is this camel! and how long is its neck! and how short is its tail! and they greet one another. Up to this point are the words of the Danite Eldad, according to whom no other Jews are said to dwell beyond the river Sabbatjon except the tribe of Moses, and the remaining tribes are said, according to what has been cited above from the aforementioned Eldad, to reside elsewhere and here and there.

How this tribe of Moses came to be within the river Sabbatjon is explained by Rabbi Gedálja in his book Shalshelet hakkabbála fol. 28, col. 1., where he provides the following account and writes: ספר לנו אלדד הנזכר שכשחרב המקדש בראשונה עלו ישראל לבבל ועמרו הכשרים על בני משה ואמרו להם שירו לנו משיר ציון עמרו בני משה וגעו בבכיה לפני הק"ב וכתמו אצבעותיהם שהיו מנגני בהם במקדש ולא רצו לנגן ובא הענן ונשאם עם אהליהם ובהמתם והוליכם לחווילה בלילה ובאותה הלילה היה רעש גדול ובבוקר ראו חיל גדול והשיב ה' סביבם נהר שגולל אבנים וחול במקום שלא היה שם נהר מעולם ועריין גולל אבנים וחול בלי מים ברעש וקולות שאילו היה שם אפילו הר של נחול היה מנפצו וזה בכל ימי חול ובשבת נח ולזה נקרא נהר סבטיון ויש מקומות באותן הנהר that is, The aforementioned Eldad told us that when the Temple was destroyed for the first time, the Israelites were taken to Babylon, whereupon the Chaldeans rose up against the children of Moses and said to them: play us a song of Zion. Thereupon the children of Moses arose and wailed with weeping before the holy and blessed God, and smashed their fingers, with which they had made music in the Temple, and refused to play. And a cloud came and carried them away with their tents and their cattle, and brought them by night to Chavila. And in that same night there was a great earthquake, but in the morning they saw a great host, and the Lord caused a river to arise all around them, which rolls stones and sand, in a place where there had never before been a river; and it still rolls stones and sand to this day without water, with shaking and noise, such that even if there were an iron mountain there, it would shatter it. And this happens on all working days, but on the Sabbath it rests; for this reason it is called the Sabbath River. There are also places along that river where it is sixty cubits wide, and therefore they cannot come to us, nor we to them. In the booklet Divre málke bájith schéni, it is read at fol. 103, col. 1-2 how Nebular-Adan, who is mentioned in 2 Kgs 25, conquered King Zedekiah, burned the Temple, and led the Jews away as captives; and thereafter follows: והגלה בגלות זו לויים מורש של משה ס 'רבוא : שנאמר ובני משה גרשם ואליעזר ובני אליעזר רחביה הראש ובני רחביה רבו למעלה למעלה מס 'רבוא שכשעשו ישראל את העגל כעס עליהם הק"ה ובקש לאבדם ואמר למשה שני פעמים ואעשך לגוי גדול ונתקיים הדבר. כיון שהגיעו לנהרות בבל אמרו להם שירו לנו משיר ציון שנאמר כי שם שאלונו שובינו וגו' מיד חתכו ראשי אצבעותיהן בשיניהם ואמרו איך נשיר את שיר ה' על אדמת נכר. וראה הק"ה שלא רצו לצאת; לומר שירה וגנון ונתנו לאחר סמבטיון That is: He also led away in this captivity the Levites who were of the seed of Moses, namely sixty times ten thousand (or six hundred thousand), as it is said (1 Chr 23:15, 17): The children of Moses were Gershom and Eliezer. The children of Eliezer, the first was Rehabiah. But the children of Rehabiah multiplied greatly, so that there were more than six hundred thousand of them; for when the Israelites had made the calf, the holy and blessed God was angry with them and wished to destroy them, and spoke to Moses twice (as may be seen in Exod 32:10 and Num 14:12): I will make of you a great people, which declaration was also fulfilled. Now after they had arrived at the rivers of Babylon, the Babylonians said to them: sing us a song of Zion, as it is said (Ps 137:3): For there those who held us captive required of us songs, etc. Thereupon they bit off the tips of their fingers with their teeth and said (as is read in v. 4): How should we sing the Lord's song in a foreign land? And the holy and blessed God saw that they did not wish to sing, and hid them away, and placed them beyond the Sambátjon. Let this be sufficient concerning the tribe, or the children and descendants of Moses.

Others, however, teach that the ten tribes dwell in the land surrounded by the river Sabbátjon, and it is written about this in Bereschith rábba fol. 66, col. 4., in the seventy-third Parascha, as follows: לא למקום שגלו עשרת השבטים גלה שבט יהודה ובנימין מפוזרים שבט יהודה ובנימין עשרת השבטים גלו לפנים מן נהר סמבטיון שבט יהודה ובנימין מפוזרים: that is, the tribe of Judah and Benjamin were not led to the place to which the ten tribes were led. The ten tribes were brought within the river Sambátjon, but the tribe of Judah and Benjamin are scattered throughout the entire world. The very same is also to be found in the little book Mikvéh Jisraél, fol. 37, col. 2., in chapter 10, numero 34, as well as in Rabbi Bochai's commentary on the five books of Moses, fol. 225, col. 2., in the Parascha Haafinu, and the following passage comes after it in Bachai: ובמדרש שיר השירים: אף ערשנו רעננה אלו עשרת השבטים שגלו לפנים מנהר סבטיון that is, in the Medrasch of the Song of Songs of Solomon, (over the words Song 1:16,) "Yea, also our bed is green," (it is read:) this signifies the ten tribes, who were led within the river Sambátjon. Rabbi Mosche bar Nachman likewise teaches in his commentary on the 5 books of Moses, fol. 152, col. 3., in the aforementioned Parascha Haafinu, on the words of Deut 32:26, "I will scatter them into corners," as follows: הנה רמון לגלות עשרת השבטים שגלו להר גוזן הוא שהחכמים קורין סמבטיון כי נקרא: סמבטיון וגו' מלשון ויגו שליום כי העומדים אחריו מוכחים מבני אדם וקורין אותו סמבטיון מפני שביתחו בשבת that is, behold, this bore a signification for the exile or misery of the ten tribes, who were led across the river Gosan, which our sages call Sambátjon; for it is called Gosan (from the word גו Gus, which means to take away and to tear away, as is read in Num 11:31:) Vajágos Sálvim, that is, "And he brought quails away" (and brought them); for those who remain behind it are taken away, or torn away, from mankind. It is, however, called Sambátjon because it rests on the Sabbath. Rabbi Elias also expresses himself on this matter in his Tischbi, fol. 62, col. 2., as follows: סמבטיון שם נהר ואומרים שכל ימי השבוע חוץ בשבת הוא רץ ומונע אבנים גדולות ואי אפשר לעבור וזו היא סבה שעשרת השבטים שהם נלכדים שם לא יצאו משם שלא לחלל יום השבת that is, Sambátjon is the name of a river, and it is said that on all the days of the week, except on the Sabbath, it runs and moves great stones, so that it is impossible to cross it; and this is the reason why the ten tribes, who are held captive (and enclosed) there, do not go out from there, so as not to desecrate the Sabbath. Beyond this, it is also read in Bammidbar rábba, fol. 219, col. 2., in the 16th Parascha: הם נחונים לפנים מן סמבטיון שלפנים מן הרי חשך that is, the tribes are within the Sabbátjon, which is within the dark mountains.

Since the mention of the dark mountains has been made here, behind which the tribes are said to be located, I must also report how a part of the tribe of Judah and the entire tribe of Simeon came to be brought there. This is described in the book Shalshelet hakkabbála, fol. 80, col. 2, in the following manner: בשנת י"ב למלכו שב סנחריב והביא כותיים לשבת שומרון ושני יהודים ללמד אליהם תורת ישראל ושם היו ר' יונאי ורבי סביא כנראה בנתחומה פרשת וישב. ואחר כך הלך על מלכיות רבות ותפס קרן מדינות והעבירם למקום למקום למרינה [פלימו] [למדינה] ואו בלבד כל העולם והלך גם כן על מלכות יהודה ולכר קצת שבט יהודה וכל שבט שמעון ויבקש להוליכם אל ארץ לחלת וחבור כמו שעשה לגלות שומרון ולא יכול כי בא גרומלך That is: In the twelfth year of his reign (namely that of King Hezekiah), Sennacherib came again and brought the Cutheans to dwell in Samaria, together with two Jews who were to teach them the law (and the religion) of Israel, one of whom was called Rabbi Dosethai, son of Jannai, and the other Rabbi Sabja, as can be seen in the book Tanchúma, in the Parascha Vajesechef. After this he marched against many kingdoms, and took the foremost people of the lands, and led them from one place to another and from one province to another, and at that time he threw the entire world into confusion (so that all peoples were mingled together). He also marched again against the kingdom of Judah and took a part of the tribe of Judah and the entire tribe of Simeon, and intended to lead them into the land of Chalach and Chabor, as he had done to those whom he had carried away from Samaria; but he could not, for the king of the Moors came against him and made war upon him, whereupon he let the Jews go, and the holy and blessed God hid them in the dark mountains. This is enough concerning such dark mountains; we must return to the inhabitants of the land that lies between the river Sabbátjon.

In other places it is written that only a portion of the Ten Tribes dwells within the aforementioned river, concerning which the booklet Mikveh Jisrael fol. 36, col. 1. 2. at the beginning of the 10th Chapter states as follows: וראיה אחרונה שהלק מי 'השבטים גלו מעבר לנהר סמבטיון ושם הם יושבים ועל זה מעידים סופרים רבים קדמונים ז"ל. הראשון הוא רבי יוחנן בעל מחבר תלמוד ירושלמי אשר הי' ק' ג' 'שנים אחר חרבן בית שני אמר במסכת סנהדרין פרק י' 'ששערת השבטים גלו לג' 'מקומות לנהר סמבטיון ולדופני של אנטיוכיא ולמקום אשר כסה שם הק"ב בענן ולעתיד יקבצם ויגאלם משם. וכנביא ראויה לדבריו מישעיה מ"ט פסוק ט' 'לאמור לאסורים צאו. אלו הן שגלו מעבר לנהר סמבטיון. לאשר בחשך הגלו אלו הן שבכס הענן. על דרכים ירעו אלו הן שברופני That is: the final proof that a portion of the Ten Tribes was carried into exile or misery beyond the river Sambatjon, and dwells there, consists in the fact that many ancient writers, of blessed memory, attest to this. The first is Rabbi Jochanan, who wrote the Jerusalem Talmud and lived 150 years after the destruction of the Second Temple; he states in the 17th chapter of the tractate Sanhedrin that the Ten Tribes were led into exile or misery to three places: beyond the river Sambatjon, and to Daphne of Antiochia, as well as to a place where the Holy and blessed God covered them with a cloud; but in the future He will gather them and redeem them from there. He also adduces a proof for his words from Isa 49:9 (and states that the words) "That you may say to the prisoners, Go forth," signify those who are in exile or misery beyond the river Sambatjon. (And that through the words) "And to those who are in darkness, Come into the light," those are to be understood whom the cloud has covered. (Through the words, however,) "They shall feed along the roads," those are signified who are in Daphne of Antiochia. Of which Antiochia he speaks, however, is unknown to us. This may also be looked up in the Jalkut Schimoni on Esaiam fol. 52. col. 2. numero 331, where the matter is presented in a considerably altered form.

Rabbi Gerson describes in his German-Hebrew booklet, which is called Sépher Gelilóth érez Jisraél, the land that is supposed to lie between the river Sabbátjon, and he speaks at length about its inhabitants; he makes no mention whatsoever of the tribe of Moses therein, but speaks in general of the ten tribes, and because many strange things appear in it, I have deemed it necessary to set down his entire account of the matter here. His very poorly arranged and un-German words read as follows:

das ist / Nun will ich gedencken von der Grossen und Kleinen / daß sie von den zehen Stämmen geredet haben / wie men / wo sie wohnen. That is: Now I wish to speak of the great and the small, that they have spoken of the ten tribes, and where they dwell. How there is supposed to be a place where the tribes reside; how they have kings over them and are mighty, and that nothing further is lacking to them except that they do not have the Temple and the prophecy; and where they dwell, they dwell in complete rest and security. There are many peoples who must pay tribute to the Jews; but with those who rebel against them, they wage war and make them subject again. As for the place where they dwell, some said it is not far from the Sambatjon, others said it is across the Sambatjon; some reported it is behind the mountains of Golan, but others said it is behind the dark mountains; some said how they still have kings over them. All of these accounts were not easy for me to believe, because on account of our many sins we suffer a great exilium, or misery; but I swear by the blessed God that I do not wish to report the least untruth. In the year 390 according to the small reckoning (that is, in the year 1630 A.D.), I was in the aforementioned Alexandria in Egypt, where the people spoke of nothing else but the ten tribes; one said this, another said something different, as is the way of the world, so I could not learn anything reliable. Then I went to the holy congregation of the Jews in Egypt, and the people there told me how letters had arrived from the holy congregation of Salneck, with a Caravan, that is, a traveling company of merchants who had come from there, in which it was stated that many thousands of Jews had crossed over the Sambatjon, had laid waste the entire land of Prete Jan, as well as the land of the white Moors, who are called Frankish Moors and are a kind of Turk whose language is Spanish, and the Jews had waged war against them because they had refused to pay their tribute. When I heard this, I gave thanks to the blessed God and praised Him that He had made me worthy to hear good tidings of Israel, that He is fulfilling in us the words of Gen 49:10: "The scepter shall not depart from Judah," etc. And in the year 391 according to the small reckoning (that is, in the year 1631 A.D.), I came upon a ship from the holy congregation of Alexandria that was sailing to the holy congregation of Salneck, and I too sailed to the holy congregation of Salneck, and there it was said that a Caravan had arrived and was buying up much iron, whereupon I asked from where it had come, and one of the men told me that they had come from the land of Chobach and were transporting iron across the Sambatjon. Then I went to the Bassa of the Caravan, the chief over the merchants, and asked him everything: how far it was to that place, how expensive things were there, and what costs one would have to bear. He told me the distance is known to the blessed God, for we travel sometimes eight months, sometimes six months, sometimes five months, depending on the season, and he showed me all the roads from one city to the next. Then I thought I would travel there, since I know the languages and know the roads, so that I need not desecrate the Sabbath, and I asked people for advice as to whether I should transport iron with the Caravan. Everyone advised me to travel with it. Thereupon I went back to the Bassa of the Caravan and made his acquaintance, and he swore to me at once that if I would travel with him, no harm would come to me. And I found favor with him, so that he spoke with me every day, urging me to cross over with him. Upon this I went with him to the Turkish judge and had it written in a book that I would travel with him, and that he should deliver me back to Salneck or bring a letter from me stating where he had left me. I did this so that I might see what more there was near the Sambatjon, and many Jews also went with me to the judge, along with the chief merchant, and were present as well. I will not be lengthy; there would be much to write about the road, the lands, the cities, the seas, and the deserts in the fortunate Arabia, until I came to Mecca and Guda, not far from the Red Sea. There lies Mahomet, the false prophet of the Ishmaelites. From there I traveled into the land of Sikitne Istre and into the desert of Chabor, and there I saw a kind of animal that has five feet and three eyes and is six ells tall; and there are many Jews in that land. It is a land called Bascha Maora, and the children of Rechab dwell in the fortunate Arabia, in all the cities and villages, and the Indian Sea is not far from there, and in the sea there are great mountains without number. On the islands the cities are filled with Jews, and they have much spice, and silver, and gold in abundance. I did not travel by sea, but journeyed overland through wildernesses into the region of India, as far as the mountains called the mountains of Chippalon, until I came to the holy congregation of Kibar; and from there I traveled to the city of Debarseban, by the river Ganges, which is the river Gosan. From there I traveled as far as the city of the holy congregation of Gina, which also lies by the river Gosan. These are entirely distinguished cities, with all manner of wares and kinds of food; and there the land of Calicut begins, and there they eat no meat from living animals or from birds, but only all manner of fruit, and cheese, and milk, and butter, and kinds of peas, as well as fruit with sugar. They go about in nothing but silken garments and believe in the false prophet Ali. From there come the fine pearls and spices; and across the deserts of Calicut is the river Sambátjon, which divides the great India; and therein are many lands of Jews, and there are Jews, God protect them, like the sand of the sea; and they are widely separated from one another, namely, the Jews who are beyond Mecca and Guda, and those Jews who dwell beyond the deserts of Calicut, that is, beyond the Sambátjon; they are a mighty distance from one another, and between them dwells a strong people of Ishmaelites, and they wage war with one another. Truly, the islands with cities that are in the Indian Sea are without number; and I did not pass through Calicut on account of the danger on the road, but rather sailed on the aforementioned sea, which is nearer; and the ships are built together with great strength and without any iron. And we, who are called Frankish Moors, traveled as far as the city of Sevilia, which is the border city of the white Moors, from which there are only two days' journey to the Sambátjon; and along the way I saw great fires, and in some places great smoke in the sea; and they told me it was the fire of hell, just as in Italy, where there is a mountain called the Sicilian mountain: from there a great fire comes out of the mountain behind the city, very high, and one can see it from fifteen miles away. And forty miles from there in the sea there is a forest of olive trees, from which a great smoke was rising, and they said this too was from hell; and on the sea one found pieces of sulfur. But before I reached the city, I heard a great noise, as though it were about to thunder, and the nearer I came, the more I heard it, and I asked what it was, and they answered me that it was the noise of the Sambátjon. When we had now come into the city, it was said that on account of the guards who are on the side of the Sabbátjon, there was great fear in going as far as the Sabbátjon. These guards belonged to King Preste Jan, who is an Ishmaelite (and is called by others Prester John). They feared the Jews, and therefore posted guards on the side of the Sambatjon; for this reason we could not proceed, and we unloaded the wares there in the city and stayed there for three weeks. In the meantime I inquired about everything, including what purpose the guards served, since no person can cross over the Sambatjon in any case. They answered me that these guards spend the entire week plundering and are not together with one another, but on Friday, two hours before the Sabbath, they become afraid, and then they come together and keep watch to see whether the people of the Jews are coming across. And when they come, the guards do not fight with them, but only quickly spread the news throughout all the cities and lands; then people become very afraid of them and lock all the cities; on the Sabbath, however, no watch is kept either, for they know well that no Jew will come across. When there were only two hours left until the Sabbath, the noise of the Sabbatjon had ceased, and they answered me that the whole week it throws up stones as high as a house, but on the Sabbath it rests. They had also told me and shown me how the Jews had come into the city and destroyed it, and taken away all their treasures, and also demolished a part of the city walls and devastated a part of the houses; they showed me the ruins, and the people of the city had quickly rebuilt the walls and thrown up great earthworks in front of them. In the meantime I asked how things stood further with those Jews, wherein their power consisted, and what land they had, and inquired about everything; and they told me everything in detail, so that I had to weep for joy, but I dared not let it show. Why? They were in great fear and were very afraid of the Jews. Finally I asked what iron was worth over there, and they told me that for one hundredweight of iron one receives one hundredweight of gold. Why? They have mountains of gold, of pure fine gold; and they have no coinage, but weigh out large and small pieces of gold by weight. When I asked what kind of land it was, they told me it was a wide, great land, with all manner of good food, of meat, and of fish, and of all manner of birds in abundance; and all manner of beautiful garments, woolen and silken, of all manner of beautiful colors, of silver and gold; and those Jews do not dress in black, and in that land grows pepper, and ginger, and cinnamon bark, as well as all manner of spice. They also told me that from the land of Preste Jan there are still two kingdoms as far as the river Sabbátjon, and that there one punishes whoever kills an animal; the river also is seventeen miles wide and throws up stones the whole week as high as a house. One can also hear that river roaring two days' journey away, and on Friday two hours before the night of the Sabbath it rests and dries up completely, so that not even a small stone remains in it, but only a fine white sand like snow; but when the Sabbath has ended, it begins again as before; and this I heard myself, that after the Sabbath it begins to roar again. The Gojim, or heathens, who also dwell near the Sabbátjon, drink nothing from it and give their livestock nothing from it to drink either. Why?

They say the river is holy, that it is God's messenger and always does His bidding and rests on the Sabbath, and therefore no person may drink from it. But whoever is scabby, the water heals him when he bathes in it. Whoever has a rash and washes himself with it will be healed; for this reason the peoples hold it to be holy. I also asked about the Jews, and they answered me that beyond the Sabbátjon there are nothing but Jews, who have twenty-four kings over them, all of whom are Jews, and each king has his own particular land with mighty cities and villages; the supreme king, however, who is over them all, is a powerful, great hero; and when he rides out, a hundred and fifty thousand men ride with him, well armed with coats of mail and armor, and each one carries a lance in his hand, the wood of which is painted red; and the men are also powerful, great, strong people, and the horses are also very strong, they bite and kick from front and behind when anyone comes near them; and one gives them mutton to eat, cuts it very small, cooks it, and gives it to them to eat, and afterward gives them wine to drink, whereupon they immediately become strong and leap and kick and storm; whoever sees or hears it, his ears ring with fear, and no one dares come near them except those who are accustomed to them. Then those same people go and mount the horses, but they first bind their feet and cover their eyes before mounting them, and tie their mouths shut with iron chains to pillars driven deep into the ground. Then the king's horse is brought to him, and a golden ladder with seven steps, and the king of Israel mounts it and seats himself upon his horse; and that same king is called Eliezer, who was king in the year 391 according to the small reckoning (that is, in the year 1631 A.D.). It is also the custom, when he rides to war, that a hundred and eighty thousand men ride with him, and the foot soldiers are beyond counting, and they cross over the Sambatjon two hours before the Sabbath, riding very swiftly, after which they rest and observe the Sabbath. On the side near their land is the land of Preste Jan. There are many regions and Jewish congregations in the land, and it borders on the great India; and across the Sambatjon the Jews guard on the Sabbath so that the enemies cannot cross over, and they let no one cross except Ishmaelite merchants. When a Cuthean (or Christian) crosses over, they kill him. The horses are also so strong that they can stand for three days with the men and everything upon them without being harmed; and the Jews have saddlebags on their horses filled with pepper and other spices, and they eat this and remain always seated on their horses; the feet of the riders, moreover, are locked with a lock to the horse, so that they do not fall off when riding hard. King Eliezer is also a strong hero in battle and is six ells tall, each ell there being six spans, and he alone drives off eight hundred men; the hilt of his sword is ten thumbs long, the width of the sword is three thumbs, its thickness is one finger thick, and it is
